The most plausible argument urged in support of the bill for delegating to a commission the election of a President is, that some measure of the sort is required by the business interests of the country. The assumption is that the uncertainties of the present political outlook are the main, if not the only, obstacle to the recuperation of industry and trade; and, therefore, that any drawback incident to the proposed plan will be atoned for by immediate and substantial gain to all the elements of material prosperity. As a plea for the enactment of a bill, which, on its merits, is open to grave objections, this reference to business interests is entitled to very little consideration. As an expression of the wants of business, and of the conditions essential to its improvement, the statement is a delusion.

That anything which contributes to uncertainty in the administration of public affairs operates adversely to business, no man denies. The question worth considering at this moment is, whether the causes of the prevailing depression and the hindrances to its removal are, to any large extent, traceable to the doubts which overhang the Presidential contest. If they are, the feeling which is alleged to exist in mercantile circles in favor of a settlement by any peaceful means, and at any cost, is intelligible and right. If not, the feeling is not entitled to the weight that is claimed for it in the discussions at Washington. The best criterion for determining the question is the condition of the public credit. Of all tests this most clearly reveals the faith or the fears of capitalists and investors at home and abroad. Taking the public credit, then, as the indicator of public confidence, the conclusion it suggests is fatal to the idea that the political situation either intensifies or prolongs business stagnation and embarrassment. The credit of the United States never stood so high as now in the London market. The demand for Government Bonds was never before so great, there or here. The process of funding at four and a half per cent. goes on with a steadiness which forbids the supposition that speculative influences are at work, and which affords the best possible proof of the faith universally felt in the smooth working of our Government. This, too, in spite of circumstances that would ordinarily foster excessive distrust. The revolutionary threats of the Democrats, for example, have been sufficiently violent, and have been reiterated with sufficient frequency, to excite apprehensions prejudicial to the immediate future of the country. But the national credit has, nevertheless, remained unimpaired. It has got better under conditions which might be regarded as hostile to all improvement. From which fact we infer that neither among our own people nor in Europe are the possibilities of a constitutional settlement of the Presidential question viewed in the light to which the alarmists appeal as a reason for bringing into play irregular and dangerous agencies.

Take the gold market as another test. A very slight fear as to the stability and smooth working of the Government would exhibit itself in a demand for coin. Thrifty merchants would make provision for maturing foreign obligations; timid people would desire to convert a currency which the mere prospect of strife would greatly depreciate, into a coin that would outlast revolution. There has not been the first sign of either. The fluctuations in gold values have been trifling, and, generally speaking, in the direction of a decline. We are nearer specie payments than at any time since paper was made a legal tender, and we are so, not because of any legislative pressure, but as a consequence of the operation of natural causes, in conjunction with the confidence felt by capitalists and business men in the maintenance of order and the sufficiency of the law as it stands. The downward tendency of the gold premium is not favorable to the alarmists.

It is admitted that the severe trial which has lasted since 1873, was in the beginning an inevitable result of rash financiering, unduly expanded credit, and the expenditure of enormous amounts upon unfinished and unproductive enterprises. Painful as the experience has been, the prevailing opinion is that it afforded no excuse for despondency. On the contrary, the conviction has been cherished that the final effect would be to purge business of its unwholesome qualities, and to bring back values to the true standard. From this point of view politics have had very little to do with the business troubles of the last three years. How, then, can the application of the lottery principle to the election of a President produce any marked change in business affairs? Will it impart solvency to insolvent firms? Will it summarily stop the failure of houses already too weak to stand, or the frauds which the bankrupt law enables knavish debtors to perpetrate with impunity? Will it remedy the mischief done to industrial interests by a tariff clumsily constructed for the benefit of monopolists, or give to consumers the fiscal relief which a tariff framed solely with a view to revenue would surely yield? Will it lighten the load of municipal taxation or drive economy and integrity into the heads of municipal rulers? Will it open the eyes of landlords to the necessities of tenants or adapt rents to the altered circumstances of the period? Will it, in short, by some magical method, correct evils whose origin is far removed from politics, and whose duration depends upon contingencies in no manner connected with the Presidency? When these inquiries are answered, there will be little difficulty in judging of the reasonableness of the attempt to make political capital out of business disasters.

COMMERCIAL FAILURES.

Since 1873 it has been reluctantly admitted that the crisis of that year was not a transient mishap, but the beginning of a commercial decline which, like physical sickness, was the penalty imposed for violations of laws, and must run its course before the restoration to health could begin. Hence the statistics of trade and of failures are studied, not so much with the view of discovering proofs of actual recuperation as of noting the slackening of the downward movement, for, paradoxical though it sounds to say so, as we get worse we get better, because we draw nearer to the time of recovery and nearer the "hard-pan," wherever that is. The report for 1876 of Messrs. DUN, BARLOW & CO. has been already reproduced in great part in the news column of THE TIMES; it does not call for very extended comment, yet there are a few comparisons worthy of a passing notice.

The general fact which first appears is a considerable increase in the number of failures, combined with a large decrease in aggregate amount. Thus for ten years past the figures are:

Year.	No. Failures.	Amount Involved.	Average Amounts.
1867	2,386	$86,218,000	$36,134
1868	2,608	63,774,000	24,452
1869	2,799	75,054,000	26,874
1870	3,551	88,242,000	24,849
1871	2,915	85,252,000	29,245
1872	4,069	121,056,000	29,750
1873	5,183	228,499,000	44,085
1874	5,830	155,239,000	26,627
1875	7,740	201,060,353	25,978
1876	9,092	191,117,786	21,020

The year 1857 had the largest aggregate, $291,750,000, and the largest average, $59,154, of any year recorded; in 1876 there was the largest number of failures ever recorded, with the smallest average indebtedness since 1860. The following compares the average liabilities, by geographical sections, for several years past, adding Canada:

	1876.	1875.	1874.	1873.
New-England States	$28,628	$29,974	$20,000	$49,335
Middle States	24,800	34,456	40,334	73,639
Western States	16,843	17,329	18,964	22,261
Southern States	16,960	27,215	18,468	21,466
Pacific States	14,251	6,700	....	....
Canada	14,767	14,658	8,122	13,066

The average in 1872 for New-England was $49,470; for the Middle States, $29,127, and for the Western States, $24,208. This table thus again exhibits the general fact that a commercial crisis begins with the large concerns and then expends its diminishing force among the small ones. At the same time, it is to be remembered that all such records are necessarily more or less imperfect, although they become less so every year; hence the increase in the reported failures during five years past must be partly ascribed to the broadening field which the reports cover.

If we look at the proportion of failures to the number in business we find—subject to the modifying consideration just stated—that the failures were 1 in 127 in 1870, 1 in 165 in 1871, 1 in 143 in 1872, 1 in 112 in 1873, 1 in 110 in 1874, 1 in 94 in 1875, and 1 in 69 in 1876; or, comparing the geographical sections for 1876:

	Number in Business.	Number of Failures.	Proportion—one in Every
New-England States	77,559	1,314	59
Middle States	165,184	2,909	57
Western States	225,309	3,139	72
Southern States	87,140	1,361	64
Pacific States	23,313	369	60
Canada	54,000	1,728	32

The figures are not sufficiently separated and detailed to permit some comparisons we desired to make, particularly as to the movement in the large cities. The following table gives the proportion of failures to the number of firms for 1876, and the average indebtedness:

	One in	Average Liability.
Rhode Island	36	$44,051
Michigan	39	16,904
Colorado	40	11,146
Texas	42	11,380
Iowa	45	8,165
North Carolina	48	7,896
Georgia	48	21,139
Massachusetts	50	32,646
South Carolina	51	16,855
Tennessee	52	14,111
New-York	57	27,881
Minnesota	60	11,103
California	62	15,636
Connecticut	63	21,252
Kentucky	63	27,632
Indiana	69	13 225
Mississippi	70	9,114
Illinois	72	24,120
Maine	79	13,888
Virginia	79	19,484
Maryland	83	14,514
Ohio	93	18,429
Louisiana	93	17,975
Wisconsin	95	20,609
Vermont	95	19,323
Alabama	97	15,134
Arkansas	102	7,664
Florida	103	8,636
Pennsylvania	109	21,983
New-Jersey	112	14,296
Missouri	143	23,301
Kansas	147	9,060
Delaware	154	11,032
New-Hampshire	155	11,659

The smallest State, as respects area, thus shows, not only the largest number of failures in proportion to the number in business, but the largest average liability, larger than that of this City, and equaled by no other city except Chicago. A qualifying consideration, as regards the increasing ratio of failures to firms in business, may probably be found in the fact that while the absolute number of failures has been increasing, the number of firms in business has been diminishing. And so far as human nature takes comfort in finding that others are equally miserable with ourselves, we may dwell complacently on the fact that from Canada the extraordinary high rate of 1 in 32 is reported, and that the returns from England, such as they are, indicate 1 failure in 36, in 1875, with the heavy average liability of $87,870, against 1 in 63 for the United States, and an average liability of $21,000.

SOCIETY AVENGING ITSELF.

In the prevailing low state of public morals, let us remember, with credit, the sensitive condition of opinion which characterizes the inhabitants of Rock Mills, near Sourland Mountain, New-Jersey. It is notorious that in this wicked City, men compromise every day with thieves and robbers. Dishonest cashiers are received with open arms, and restored to former confidence and respect, if they will only give up a share of the cash which they have "borrowed" from their employers. Embassies are continually passing between New-York and Canada, freighted with messages of forgiveness to fugitive speculators who have fled "between two days" with the property of other people. The country press has commented upon these doings with much bitterness. The severe moralists of Squan and Middle Mountain have warned their bucolic readers against the vices of the great City. It has been made notorious that crime is rarely punished, or, if punished at all, the criminal has been dealt with according to due process of law, which, to say the least, is slow and tedious. They manage these things better in Rock Mills village, New-Jersey.

In that Arcadian region dwells, or lately dwelt, a married couple. We hear little or nothing of the husband, who, as a mere man, is not entitled to detailed mention. The wife, however, was notoriously and seductively pretty. She was admired by other men, a fact which is not exceptional we regret to say, in the present inflammable condition of the masculine man. Severe censors of public morals in Rock Mills village, altogether of the feminine variety, commented on the popularity of this dangerously-pretty woman with unmerited severity. There is no knowing to what bounds of inflammability a virtuous woman's tongue may extend under great provocation. A high authority has said that it may set the world on fire. In this case it roused a conflagration in Rock Mills, New-Jersey, which burned like a veritable vestal flame. Eight men, fired by a sense of the wrong which the community suffered by the continued existence of the dangerously-pretty woman before mentioned, took solemn oath to avenge outraged society. The men of Rock Mills had succumbed to the blandishments of this siren, as it was said. These men were spared because they were irresponsible victims; besides they might resist punishment; and there were only eight grown men who were capable of revenging Society. So, in the dead of night, the virtuous eight, knowing that the laws were inadequate to the high occasion, stole upon the home of the female miscreant, who, in the hardihood of conscious guilt, was sleeping with her irresponsible husband, and drove her out into the snow. Clad only in night attire, and overcome with a sense of moral turpitude—not to say January cold—the miserable woman sank upon the icy drift, where the avengers of wronged society overtook her, and, after much other contumelious treatment, gave her a coat of tar and feathers. She was rescued from this plight, in defiance of public sentiment, by her pusillanimous spouse. At last accounts, the siren was not expected to recover. Let us believe that the public morality of Rock Mills, New-Jersey, breathes more freely.

It should not be too hastily assumed that all the public virtue resides in New-Jersey. A somewhat similar demonstration of popular indignation lately occurred in the western part of Iowa. A man who had settled on the banks of the Platte with his wife, child, and sister-in-law, was suspected of beating his wife cruelly and of loving the wife's sister too well. This suspicion ripened into certainty when the accused man was seen, accompanied by his paramour, in the act of concealing the dead body of his wife, whom he had slain, under the ice of the Platte. Ordinarily, this fiend in human shape would have been arrested, tried, and, in due process of law, hanged by the neck. But in the free and boundless West, where men reason rapidly and carry out their purposes with dispatch, this was thought too slow. The unnatural husband and the unnatural sister were first fired at by the superiorly-virtuous neighbors, then killed, and, lest there might be a possibility of their resuscitation, their bodies were burned. The local chronicle puts the case thus: "A number of logs were rolled together, brush was piled upon them, and the bodies of the two inhuman beings were placed in their midst. A match was applied to the pile, and all that now remains to mark the spot and the tragedy is a bed of ashes." The severe moralists of Western Iowa had appeased their outraged sense of justice and decency.

It is quite possible that some sickly sentimentalist will say that in both these cases the remedy was worse than the disease; that the community in which such things are possible is not yet reclaimed from barbarism. Some moralists, even more eccentric than those of Rock Mills, New-Jersey, or Western Iowa, will be very likely to object that this is only mob law, and that mob law is contrary in spirit and execution to the fundamental principles of organized society. We should not be surprised, indeed, if there were those who would even urge that the eight men who punished a weak woman with tar and feathers, and exposure to the snow, were themselves guilty of a more heinous crime than the object of their righteous indignation. Or that the guardians of public morals who killed a murderer and his paramour, and then burned their bodies, were themselves murderers. In other words, it would be weakly assumed that this double killing was not committed in personal self-defense, nor according to statute, and was therefore wanton and savage. Such is the demoralized tone of society in regions where mere written law has taken the place of the summary and inexpensive forms of popular indignation. The student of criminal jurisprudence cannot fail to notice the efficacy and thoroughness of the Lynch method. There is none of the trouble and bother of pursuit, arrest, trial, and execution. In the New-Jersey case there was no evidence to guide the defenders of public morals. Their judgments were convinced, and the woman was convicted. The evidence in the Iowa case was circumstantial, but conclusive, and all technical formalities were avoided. When this simple method of arresting crime shall become general, we may shut up the court-houses and disband the Police. Society will avenge its own wrongs, unless the criminals should happen to be stronger than society.

ANOTHER DISTRESSING CASE.

The British mariner is seeing altogether too many sea-serpents, and those, too, of unnecessarily large size. A few weeks ago, we had the story of a British Captain and one of his mates who saw an immense sea-serpent of a unique pattern, both as to shape and color, somewhere near the Straits of Sunda, and who were so terribly frightened that as soon as they reached port they went before a magistrate and solemnly swore never to touch—that is to say, swore to the truth of their story. A little later, a returned sea Captain in the Coast Guard service was walking along the shore near Plymouth, England, when he saw a large ship at a distance of about three miles from shore suddenly vanish as though it had made itself air, like a Shakespearean witch. While he was yet wondering at this phenomenon, he saw in the place lately occupied by the vanished ship what he took to be a large steamer with two funnels, but what a little observation proved to be an enormous serpent with two upright dorsal fins, painted with alternate black and white stripes. Had it been night, the snake would doubtless have carried the usual red and green lights, and would have burned a private Coston signal. As nearly as the Coast Guard man could judge, this sea-serpent was six hundred feet long, and there is but little doubt that he had just gorged the vanished ship, and was on the lookout for a tender long-boat or an appetizing life-raft.

Neither of these unhappy British mariners, however, saw sea-serpents to the terrible extent to which the Captain of a British bark has recently seen them. On the 8th of July, 1875, while the bark was off Cape St. Roque, the weather being fine and clear, and the steward opening one of the last half dozen, the Captain noticed an unusual commotion in the water at a distance of about two miles on the lee bow. Ordering the man at the wheel to "keep her off four pints,—— —— your eyes," and requesting the watch to "take a small pull of them weather braces, you lazy —— ——; slack the lee ones handsomely, —— —— ——you," the warm-hearted Christian sailor steered for the scene of disturbance, thinking that he might, perhaps, find a fragment of wreck bearing the body of some unhappy fellow-being with a bottle in his pocket. He soon, however, discovered the true state of the case. A tremendous battle was in progress between a sperm whale and a sea-serpent, while two other sperm whales, who had formed a ring, were watching the conflict with faces expressive of grief and alarm. The snake, which was from 160 to 170 feet in length and 7 or 8 feet in circumference, had taken two turns with his tail around the whale, bringing the tail around the standing part of him and passing it through the bight, thus making an imperfect but still sufficiently trustworthy "stunsail-halyard-bend." Having thus a firm hold of the whale, the serpent was tossing him up in the air and bringing him down again on the surface of the water with a violence that must have proved excessively trying to the whale. The battle did not last long, for the whale soon became totally exhausted, and the serpent sank with him in order to swallow him without the presence of spectators. The two other whales then swam away, too much depressed in spirits to think of spouting, and the Captain felt a "cold shiver" run through his frame. Fortunately, he had taken the precaution to lean against the lee-rail, and to keep a firm grasp of the mizzen-rigging. He thus escaped making a spectacle of himself by sinking fainting to the deck, and successfully concealed his emotions.

In spite of the care which he naturally took of himself after having received this terrible warning, the Captain saw another serpent eight days after, when about eighty miles from Cape St. Roque. This serpent stood on his tail, with some sixty feet of his body out of the water, and grimly scrutinized the bark as if in search of the unhappy Captain. That fearless mariner instantly shouted, "Gimmenaxe," and the carpenter having brought him the best axe on board the vessel, he carefully emptied his boots overboard, to avoid any attack in the rear, and announced that, if the sea-serpent wanted to attack an honest and sober sailor, he would show him who was the master of that vessel. The monster, however, thought better of it, and slowly disappeared, when the Captain was escorted to his cabin by the steward, where he subsequently wrote out a full account of the affair for the benefit of the London medical journals and temperance societies.

Why this account was not published until a year and a half after the affair took place we are not informed; neither is it known whether the Captain has changed his habits, or is still in danger of another attack. There is no doubt, however, that his case is rather the worst on record. Other mariners have seen sea-serpents of great size and ferocity, some of which have shown a persistence in coiling themselves around the spectator's neck and stowing themselves away in his pockets, which must have been very trying; but a sea-serpent engaged in beating the breath out of a whale is quite unprecedented. The Captain makes a feeble attempt to excuse himself by referring to the prolonged heat of the weather in the neighborhood of Cape St. Roque. This is not an excuse which can be accepted. If the weather was hot the Captain should have tried cold baths and light diet, and should have avoided heating beverages with the utmost care. It is certainly to be hoped that he is a thoroughly reformed man, but the public would have more confidence in him if he had honestly confessed his fault without attempting to apologize for it.

It is plain that something must be done to improve the condition of the British mercantile marine. Where one Captain confesses that he has seen a sea-serpent, there are probably a dozen others who keep their own counsel. It is a terrible thought that at this moment there may be a hundred vessels at sea, under the command of men who are seeing sea-serpents day and night. Where is Mr. PLIMSOLL, that he does not expose this frightful source of danger to life and property, and insist that no vessel shall be permitted to go to sea except in charge of a Captain who is a member of the Good Templars or the Infant Band of Hope?

STATE DEBT OF NORTH CAROLINA.

THE STATE BONDS—A PROPOSED SETTLEMENT OF PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST — THE PROPOSITION REFUSED BY THE LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE — VIEWS OF GOV. VANCE.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

RALEIGH, Jan. 22.—A committee, headed by W. J. Best, representing persons who hold bonds of North Carolina, excepting the special tax bonds, have made an argument before the joint Committee on the State, proposing a settlement at 50 per cent. of principal and accrued interest. The amount represented by Mr. Best, principal and interest, is $21,409,383. The argument covers seven columns, and is replete with facts and figures to show that the State is able to stand a tax of 75 cents on the $100 valuation of property to pay interest and raise a sinking fund. The State and county tax since 1870 has not exceeded 60 cents on the $100 valuation of property. The joint Legislative Committee were unanimous in refusing to accept the proposition of compromise. It may be set down without doubt that the Legislature will take no steps toward settling the State debt which involves an increase of taxation. The Raleigh News, organ of the Democratic Party, speaking of the argument of the bondholders, says that the people are not able or willing to submit to so large an increase of taxation. In his recent message on this subject, Gov. Vance says: "The most I can say to you on this weighty matter is to recommend the appointment of a commission to negotiate with our creditors, and see what terms can be obtained." The bondholders committee are still here and have employed Hon. D. G. Fowle, the ablest Democrat in the State, to represent them before the Legislative Committee. The Legislature is progressing very slowly. Only one law has been enacted under the amended Constitution, and that is to rotate the Superior Court Judges. It is intended to put into operation a new county Government and a new Judiciary system, but there are so many opinions upon both subjects that no bill upon either subject has been introduced into either house. It is thought by many that the present Legislature is the best assembled since reconstruction. Under the Constitution as amended the Legislature cannot sit longer than 60 days from the first Wednesday of this month, consequently great efforts will be made to get through with all the business by that time.

THE GRAND DUKE ALEXIS.

A VISIT TO THE NORFOLK NAVY-YARD BY HIS IMPERIAL HIGHNESS—A GRAND DISPLAY.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

NORFOLK, Jan. 22.—Grand Duke Alexis and Staff made a visit of state to the Navy-yard to-day at 1 o'clock. He was received by Admiral Creighton, the officers of the yard, and the Marine battalion under Capt. Collier. Despite the unpropitious weather the affair was conducted with all the pomp and circumstance of such a grand occasion. Salutes were exchanged between the Russian frigate Svetlana and the Receiving ship Worcester. The Grand Duke and Staff visited the Opera-house at night.

A CASE FOR INVESTIGATION.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

There is something wrong at Albany. Here we have already reached nearly the end of January and yet none of the Tammany statesmen have so far resurrected that elective Controller bill, which they for some years back regularly introduced at the beginning of every session. What is the matter? Have they forgotten all those "Democratic principles" they used to tell us about when they introduced this bill, or now that John Kelly is Controller, have they sold them out for him? Please propose this conundrum to these gentlemen, so that an anxious Democrat who is overflowing with these principles may learn where his representatives stand.

At the same time institute an inquiry after Ben Wood. About this time every year Ben employed a reporter to do nothing else but pledge members of the Legislature to vote for that truly Democratic measure, the elective Controller bill. Ben seems to have lost his principles also.

A DEMORALIZED DEMOCRAT.

NEW-YORK, Monday, Jan. 22, 1877.

THE ASHTABULA INQUEST.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 22.—A special dispatch to the Leader from Ashtabula says that the Coroner's Jury to-day examined Edward Trueworthy, Franklin Osborn, and Joseph A. Thompson, passengers by the wrecked train. Their testimony was a repetition of that of others heretofore examined.

THE IOWA NATIONAL GUARD.

DAVENPORT, Jan. 22.—Gov. Kirkwood has issued an order for the organization of the Iowa State Militia under the name of the National Guard of the State of Iowa. All military companies are ordered to meet on Jan. 31 at their respective armories, to elect officers.

WASHINGTON.

FERNANDO WOOD DISCOMFITED.

HIS ATTEMPT TO REFER THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE TO A SELECT COMMITTEE—A DEMOCRATIC TRICK WHICH THE SPEAKER SUPPORTED—BUT THE REPUBLICANS WERE EQUAL TO THE EMERGENCY—HOW THE MOVER OF THE RESOLUTION WAS CHECKMATED.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—A message from the President was read in the House to-day, in reply to Fernando Wood's resolution calling for information with reference to the movements of troops in the Southern States prior to the recent election. The message was read pending a motion to adjourn. Upon the conclusion of the reading the motion to adjourn was withdrawn, and Mr. Wood was recognized to offer a resolution, and demand the previous question on its passage, providing that the message should be referred to a select committee of 11, with power to send for persons and papers, and to report to the House at any time. Objection was made to the resolution from the Republican side, on the ground that a resolution of this kind could not be passed on Monday, except under a suspension of the rules. The Speaker promptly overruled this objection, as the message had been laid before the House by unanimous consent, which he claimed also extended to the receipt of any pertinent resolution concerning it. This was taking an unfair advantage of the minority, because objection is never made to the reading of a Message from the President, which is usually referred to a regular committee or laid on the table for future action of the House. The Speaker knew well that unanimous consent could not have been obtained to lay the Message before the House had it been known that an arrangement had been privately made by which Mr. Wood was to be recognized to offer an unusual resolution in regard to it. The first objection having been overruled, Mr. Banks raised the point of order that unusual powers could not be conferred on the proposed committee except by a suspension of the rules. The Speaker was forced to sustain this objection, and Mr. Wood struck the clause objected to from the resolution. Mr. Kasson then claimed that, under the uniform rulings of the Chair, a resolution offered on a Monday, requiring a suspension of the rules took precedence of a resolution requiring only a majority vote to pass, and accordingly offered a resolution, and moved to suspend the rules and pass it. The Speaker said Mr. Kasson could not take Mr. Wood thus summarily off the floor, but after listening to Mr. Kasson's argument, and consulting the rules, found he was cornered, and reluctantly sustained Mr. Kasson's point of order The Republicans having thus found a way out of the parliamentary ambuscade planned by Wood and his colleagues, the Democrats entered a motion to adjourn, which was carried. Mr. Wood's resolution will come up to-morrow as unfinished business. The purpose of the resolution is to summon officers of the War Department, in the hope that something may be discovered to help the cause of Mr. Tilden. Mr. Wood has had no opportunity for war talk for some weeks, and this Message of the President offered an opportunity to make a display of his mock dignity.

MANAGEMENT OF THE CAMPAIGN.

TESTIMONY TAKEN BY A HOUSE SUB-COMMITTEE—AN ATTEMPT TO BRIBE A REPUBLICAN ELECTOR—STATEMENT OF A STATE SENATOR WHO WAS OFFERED TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS TO VOTE FOR TILDEN—TERRORISM IN SOUTH CAROLINA.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—A sub-committee of the House committee which was sent to South Carolina, consisting of Milton Sayler, of Ohio, Judge Abbott, of Massachusetts, and Judge Lawrence, of Ohio, began at the Capitol to-day to take additional testimony in relation to political affairs in that State. The first witness placed upon the stand was Beverly Nash, a colored man, and a State Senator and Presidential Elector on the Hayes ticket at the late election. He testified that before he had cast his ballot on the day of the meeting of the Electoral College at Columbia, one Z. D. Childs, a banker in Columbia, sent for him, and, in the private apartments of his bank, proposed for him to vote for Tilden in the Electoral College, for which service Mr. Childs proposed to pay him $10,000 in cash then and there, and when Mr. Tilden should be inaugurated to pay him $40,000 additional. Mr. Nash gave the conversation between himself and Mr. Childs quite minutely, Mr. Childs' attempted negotiations going even further than an attempt to buy Mr. Nash's vote for Mr. Tilden. Mr. Childs' friends were anxious to capture the State Government, and Mr. Nash said that Mr. Childs proposed to give him $10,000 apiece for each of three Senators he could get to vote to admit the Democratic Senators from Edgefield and Laurens. It was stated after Mr. Nash had completed his testimony that Mr. Childs had written a letter to the committee denying this alleged attempt to purchase votes, and that he would be here on or about the 27th to appear before the committee personally. Mr. Nash's testimony before the committee to-day was clear and explicit as to every incident surrounding the conversation between himself and Mr. Childs, and his manner perfectly free from embarrassment, and it bore the impress of a careful and truthful statement of actual occurrences. Prof. Greener, of the South Carolina University, also a negro, followed Nash, and gave a detailed account of the violence and terrorism which prevailed in that State during the late election, and of an electioneering tour which himself and several other Republicans of the State made, during which he was followed about by the White Liners, the meetings being disturbed and their lives threatened.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—The Committee on the Powers, Priveleges, and Duties of the House in counting the Electoral vote, examined to-day Gen. Judson Kilpatrick, who testified that he had a conference on the 8th of November last with William E. Chandler, and suggested that somebody had better go to North Carolina, Louisiana, and Florida; he accordingly went to North Carolina, and there conferred with the Governor of the State and Mr. Keogh, Chairman of the Republican State Committee; he bore a letter signed by Z. Chandler, to the effect that he [Kilpatrick] had the full confidence of the National Republican Committee, and was entitled to consideration; he had not this letter; it was destroyed, having been burned; he took only $100 with him to pay actual personal expenses, and had no instructions to use money or to resort to other improper means to influence the result of the election in North Carolina; while there he had a conversation with the gentleman above named and others, in substance that there should be an investigation as to the manner in which North Carolina was carried for the Democrats.

George S. Fisher, a resident of Georgia, but now temporarily residing in Washington, testified that during the months of August, September, and October he made collections of money in the Post Office, Treasury, and War Departments and in the Government Printing Office for political purposes, at the instance of the Republican Congressional Committee, through Senator Cragin; the usual assessment was about 2 per cent.; some paid more and some paid less; the collections were not forcible but voluntary; about $25,000 was thus collected and delivered to Jacob Tome, the Treasurer of the Congressional Republican Committee. The witness had no list of the names of those who did or did not contribute; they were destroyed at the instance of Allan Rutherford; probably from 10 to 12 clerks only declined to contribute; out of from 1,000 to 1,900 applied to for money; he paid himself for his services 5 per cent. on the amount collected; he presumed that the chiefs of departments were willing such collections should be made, otherwise he should not have made them; other parties also made collections in the departments, among them Major Dalton; he collected money wherever he could, and, as facetiously suggested by the members of the committee, there was no bull-dozing or distinction made on account of race, color, or previous condition.

Q.—Do you know whether any of the employes were discharged for not contributing? A.—I do not. On being examined by Republican members of the committee, the witness said he did not personally ask permission of the heads of departments make such collections, but acted on the general knowledge that consent was given. In further answer to questions, the witness said he saw on the files in some of two heads of departments who had contributed to the fund of the Congressional Republican Committee.

United States Marshal Pitkin was examined today by the Morrison committee, who wished to know whether money was paid out of United States funds to witnesses, the witnesses in the case of the State Senate,

FINANCIAL AFFAIRS.

SALES AT THE STOCK EXCHANGE—JAN. 22.

SALES BEFORE THE GAVE—10 A. M.

4000 West. Union.... 76⅞
1400 do.... 76⅝
2250 do.... 77
100 do.... b3. 77
2400 do.... 76⅞
2000 do.... 76⅝
2000 do.... 76¾
2600 do.... 76⅝
200 do.... s5. 76⅝
600 do.... 76⅝
700 do.... s3. 76⅝
1700 do.... 76⅝
100 do.... 76⅝
500 do.... s3. 76⅝
500 N. Y. C. & H.... 104¼
100 do.... 104
100 do.... 104½
200 do.... 104
100 do.... b.c. 103⅞
400 Erie Railway.... 25⅛
1500 Lake Shore.... 56⅛
4500 do.... 56⅜
500 do.... s3. 56⅜
500 do.... 56⅜
2600 do.... b3. 56⅜
600 do.... s3. 56⅛
100 do.... 56⅛
200 do.... 56⅜
100 do.... 56⅜
100 do.... 56⅜
100 do.... 56⅜
100 do.... s3. 56⅜
100 do.... 56⅜
100 do.... 56⅜
100 do.... 56⅜
100 do....

SHIPPING.

WHITE STAR LINE.
FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL. CARRYING UNITED STATES MAIL.

The steamers of this line take the Lane Route recommended by Lieut. Maury, U. S. N., going south of the Banks on the passage to Queenstown at the year round.

CELTIC.....SATURDAY, Feb. 3, 8:30 A. M.
ADRIATIC.....SATURDAY, Feb. 10, at 3 P. M.
BRITANNIC.....SATURDAY, Feb. 24, 2 P. M.
CELTIC.....SATURDAY, March 10, at 2 P. M.

From White Star Dock, Pier No. 52 North River.

These steamers are uniform in size and unsurpassed in appointments. The saloon, staterooms, smoking and bath rooms are amidships, where the motion and motion are least felt, affording a degree of comfort hitherto unattainable at sea.

Rates—Saloon $80 and $100 gold; return tickets on favorable terms; steerage, $23.

For inspection of plans and other information apply at the Company's offices, No. 37 Broadway, New-York.
T. J. IORTIS, Agent.

CUNARD LINE B. & N. A. R. M. S. P. CO.
NOTICE.

With the view of diminishing the chances of collision the steamers of this line take a specified course for all seasons of the year.

On the outward passage from Queenstown to New-York or Boston, crossing meridian of 50 at 43 latitude, or nothing to the north of 43.

On the homeward passage, crossing the meridian of 41at 42, or nothing to the south of 42.

FROM NEW-YORK FOR LIVERPOOL AND QUEENSTOWN.
BATAVIA....WED., Jan. 24 | ALGERIA....WED., Feb. 7
ABYSSINIA.WED., Jan. 31 | PARTHIA....WED., Feb. 14

Steamers marked * on non-carry saloon passengers. Cabin passage, $80, $100, and $130, gold, according to accommodation. Return tickets on favorable terms.

Steerage tickets to and from all parts of Europe at very low rates. Freight and passage apply to No. 4 Bowling green. CHAS. G. FRANCKLYN, Agent.

PASSENGERS PER STEAM-SHIP BATAVIA will embark from the Cunard wharf, foot of Grand st., Jersey City, at noon on WEDNESDAY, 24th January, 1877. CHARLES G. FRANCKLYN, No. 4 Bowling Green, New-York.

STATE LINE.

NEW-YORK TO GLASGOW, LIVERPOOL, DUBLIN, BELFAST, AND LONDONDERRY.

These first-class full-powered steamers will sail from Pier No. 42 North River, foot of Canal st.

STATE OF GEORGIA.....Thursday, Jan. 25
STATE OF INDIANA.....Thursday, Feb. 1
STATE OF PENNSYLVANIA.....Thursday, Feb. 8
STATE OF VIRGINIA.....Thursday, Feb. 23

First cabin, $60, $65, and $70, according to accommodations; return tickets, $110, $125. Second cabin, $45; return tickets, $80. Steerage at lowest rates. Apply to

AUSTIN BALDWIN & CO., Agents,
No. 72 Broadway, New-York.

STEERAGE tickets at No. 45 Broadway, and at the Company's pier, foot of Canal st., North River.

LIVERPOOL AND GREAT WESTERN STEAM COMPANY. (LIMITED.)
LIVERPOOL, (Via Queenstown),
CARRYING THE UNITED STATES MAIL.

TUESDAY.

Leaving Pier No. 46 North River as follows:

MONTANA.....Jan. 23, at 11 A. M.
WISCONSIN.....Jan. 30, at 3 P. M.
WYOMING.....Feb. 6, at noon
DAKOTA.....Feb. 13, at 3 P. M.
NEVADA.....Feb. 20, at 10 A. M.
IDAHO.....Feb. 27, at 3 P. M.

RATES OF PASSENGERS REDUCED.

Steerage, $26; intermediate, $40; cabin, $65 to $80, according to state-room. Offices, No. 29 Broadway.
WILLIAMS & GUION.

ATLAS MAIL LINE.

BI-MONTHLY SERVICE TO JAMAICA, HAYTI, COLOMBIA, and ASPINWALL, and to PANAMA and SOUTH PACIFIC PORTS (via Aspinwall). First-class full-powered iron screw steamers, from Pier No. 51 North River:

For HAYTI, COLOMBIA, ISTHMUS OF PANAMA, and SOUTH PACIFIC PORTS (via Aspinwall.)

ALPS.....Jan. 13
ETNA.....Jan. 27

For KINGSTON (Jam.) and HAYTI.

ATLAS.....Feb. 8

Superior first-class passenger accommodations.
PIM, FORWOOD & CO., Agents,
No. 56 Wall st.

GREAT SOUTHERN
FREIGHT AND PASSENGER LINE.
SAILING FROM PIER NO. 29 NORTH RIVER.

WEDNESDAYS and SATURDAYS at 3 P. M.

FOR CHARLESTON, S. C., FLORIDA, THE SOUTH, AND SOUTH-WEST.

GULF STREAM.....WEDNESDAY.....Jan. 24
CITY OF ATLANTA.....SATURDAY.....Jan. 27

SUPERIOR PASSENGER ACCOMMODATIONS.

Insurance to destination one-half of one per cent. Goods forwarded free of commission. Passenger tickets and bills of lading issued in connection with Central R. R. of Georgia.

JAMES W. QUINTARD & CO., Agents,
No. 177 West st., corner Warren.
Or W. P. CLYDE & CO., No. 5 Bowling Green.
Or BENTLEY D. HASELL, General Agent Great Southern Freight Line, 317 Broadway.

NORTH GERMAN LLOYD.
STEAM-SHIP LINE BETWEEN NEW-YORK SOUTHAMPTON, AND BREMEN.

Company's Pier, foot of 2d st., Hoboken.

AMERICA.....Sat., Jan. 27 | RHEIN.....Sat., Feb. 10
WESER.....Sat., Feb. 3 | ODER.....Sat., Feb. 17

RATES OF PASSAGE FROM NEW-YORK TO SOUTHAMPTON, HAVRE, OR BREMEN.

First cabin.....$100 gold
Second cabin.....60 gold
Steerage.....30 currency

Return tickets at reduced rates. Prepaid steerage certificates, $30 currency. For freight or passage apply to OELRICHS & CO., No. 2 Bowling Green.

ANCHOR LINE U. S. MAIL STEAMERS.
NEW-YORK AND GLASGOW

Ethiopia...Jan. 27, 2 P. M. | Bolivia....Feb. 10, 2 P. M.
Victoria....Feb. 3, 9 A. M. | Alsatia....Feb. 17, 8 A. M.

TO GLASGOW, LIVERPOOL, OR DERRY.

Cabins $65 to $80, according to accommodations; Intermediate, $35; Steerage $28.

NEW-YORK AND LONDON.

Elysia....Jan. 27, 2 P. M. | Italia....Feb. 10, 2 P. M.

Cabins, $55 to $70. Steerage, $28. Cabin excursion tickets at reduced rates. Drafts issued for any amount at current rates. Company's Pier Nos. 20 and 21, North River, N. Y. HENDERSON BROTHERS, Agents, No. 7 Bowling Green.

ONLY DIRECT LINE TO FRANCE.
THE GENERAL TRANSATLANTIC COMPANY'S MAIL STEAMERS BETWEEN NEW-YORK AND HAVRE, Calling at PLYMOUTH (G. B.) for the landing of Passengers.

Will sail from Pier No. 42 North River, foot of Morton st., every alternate Saturday, beginning with:
LABRADOR, Thursday.....Saturday, Jan. 27, at 3 P. M.

For particulars address
LOUIS DE BEBIAN, Agent, No. 55 Broadway.

NATIONAL LINE—Piers 44 and 51 North River.
FOR LONDON.
HOLLAND.....SATURDAY, Jan. 27, 2:30 P. M.
FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.
Spain....Jan. 27, 2:30 P. M. | Egypt....Feb. 3, at 9 A. M.

Cabin and steerage passage, and drafts from £1 upward, issued at very low rates. Company's offices No. 19 Broadway. F. W. J. HURST, Manager.

FOR SAVANNAH GA.,
THE FLORIDA PORTS,
AND THE SOUTH AND SOUTH-WEST.

GREAT SOUTHERN FREIGHT AND PASSENGER LINE.
CENTRAL RAILROAD OF GEORGIA, AND ATLANTIC AND GULF RAILROAD.

WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY.

GENERAL BARNES, Capt. CRESSMAN, WEDNESDAY, Jan. 24, Pier 16 East River, 3 P. M. MURRAY, FERRIS & CO., Agts., 62 South st.

SAN JACINTO, Capt. HAZARD, SATURDAY, Jan. 27, Pier 43 North River, 3 P. M. GEO. YONGE, Agt., 409 Broadway.

Insurance ONE-HALF PER CENT. Superior accommodations for passengers. Through rates and bills of lading in connection with Central R. R. of Georgia. Atlantic and Gulf Railroad, and Florida steamers City Point and Dictator; also, with the steamer J. B. SCUYLER, which has been placed on the inside route from Savannah to Florida, and offers unsurpassed accommodations.

C. D. OWENS, Agent A. & G. R. R. No. 315 Broadway.
GEORGE YONGE, Agent C. R. R. of Ga., No. 409 Broadway.

PACIFIC MAIL AND PANAMA TRANSIT
STEAM-SHIP LINES.

FOR CALIFORNIA, JAPAN, CHINA, AUSTRALIA, NEW-ZEALAND, BRITISH COLUMBIA, OREGON, &c.

Sailing from Pier No. 42 North River.

For SAN FRANCISCO, via ISTHMUS OF PANAMA.
Steam-ship ACAPULCO.....Wednesday, Jan. 31
connecting for Central America and South Pacific ports.

From SAN FRANCISCO to JAPAN and CHINA.
Steam-ship ALASKA.....Thursday, Feb. 1
From San Francisco to Sandwich Islands, Australia, and New-Zealand.
Steam-ship ZEALANDIA.....Wednesday, Jan. 31

For freight or passage apply to
WM. P. CLYDE & CO., or H. J. BULLAY, Superintendent, No. 6 Bowling Green, Pier No. 42 N. R., foot Canal st.

NEW-YORK, HAVANA, AND MEXICAN MAIL S. S. LINE.
Steamers leave Pier No. 3 North River at 2 P. M.

FOR HAVANA DIRECT.

CITY OF MERIDA.....Saturday, Jan. 27
CITY OF VERA CRUZ.....Wednesday, Jan. 31
CITY OF NEW-YORK.....Wednesday, Feb. 7

FOR VERA CRUZ AND NEW-ORLEANS, Via Havana, Progreso, Campeachy, Tuxpan, and Tampico.

CITY OF MERIDA.....Saturday, Jan. 27

Steamers will leave New-Orleans Feb. 2 and Feb. 23, for Vera Cruz and all the above ports.

For freight or passage apply to
P. ALEXANDER & SONS, Nos. 41 and 43 Broadway.

INMAN LINE.—MAIL STEAMERS.
FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.
CITY OF BERLIN, Saturday, Jan. 27, 12 P. M.
CITY OF RICHMOND, Saturday, Feb. 17, at 7:30 A. M.
CITY OF CHESTER, Saturday, March 3, at 8 A. M.

From Pier 45 North River.

CABIN, $80 and $100, Gold. Return tickets on favorable terms. STEERAGE, $23, Currency. Drafts at lowest rates.

Saloons, State-rooms, Smoking, and Bath-rooms amidships.
JOHN G. DALE, Agent, Nos. 15 and 33 Broadway, N. Y.

NEW-YORK AND HAVANA
DIRECT MAIL LINE.

These first-class steamships sail regularly at 3 P. M., from Pier No. 13 North River as follows:

COLUMBUS.....WEDNESDAY, Jan. 24
CLYDE.....SATURDAY, Feb. 3

Accommodations unsurpassed. For freight or passage, apply to WM. P. CLYDE & CO., No. 5 Bowling Green. McKELLER, LULING & CO., Agents in Havana.

HAMBURG American Packet Company's Line, for PLYMOUTH, CHERBOURG AND HAMBURG.
HERDER.....Jan. 25 | FRISIA.....Feb. 8
WIRLAND.....Feb. 1 | GELLERT.....Feb. 15

Rates of passage to Plymouth, London, Cherbourg, Hamburg, and all points in England, First Cabin, $100 gold; Second Cabin, $60 gold; Steerage, $30, currency.
KUNHARDT & CO., C. B. RICHARD & BOAS,
General Agents, 61 Broadway, N. Y. General Passenger Agents, 61 Broadway, N. Y.

SHIPPING.

AMERICAN STEAM-SHIP LINE
Between Philadelphia & Liverpool, calling at Queenstown. Thursdays from Philad'a, Wednesdays from Liverpool.
Steamers to sail from Philadelphia as follows:

*Lord Clive.....Jan. 18 | City of New-York.....Feb. 8
Ohio.....Jan. 25 | Indiana.....Feb. 15
Pennsylvania.....Feb. 1 | Illinois.....Feb. 22

Rates of passage in currency:
Cabin, $75 to $100. Intermediate, $40. Steerage, $28.
PETER WRIGHT & SONS, Gen. Agents, Philad'a. No. 52 Broadway, New-York.
JOHN McDONALD No. 3 Battery place, New-York.

RAILROADS.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.
GREAT TRUNK LINE
AND UNITED STATES MAIL ROUTE.

Trains leave New-York, via Desbrosses and Cortlandt Streets Ferries, as follows:

Express for Harrisburg, Pittsburg, the West and South, with Pullman Palace Cars attached, 8:30 A. M., 6 and 8:30 P. M., daily.

For Williamsport, Lock Haven, Corry, and Erie, at 8:30 P. M., connecting at Corry for Titusville, Petroleum Centre, and Oil Regions. For Williamsport and Lock Haven, 8:30 A. M.

For Baltimore, Washington, and the South, "Limited Washington Express" of Pullman Parlor Cars daily at 3:30 P. M., arrive Washington 4:10 P. M. Regular at 8:40 A. M., 1, 6, and 9 P. M. Sunday, 6 and 9 P. M.

Express for Philadelphia, 7:30, 8:30, 8:40, (9:30 Limited,) 10:30 A. M., 1, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8:30, 9 P. M., and 12 night. Sunday, 8:30 A. M., 5, 6, 7, 8:30, and 9 P. M. Emigrant and second-class, 7 P. M.

Accommodation for Trenton, 7 A. M., 2 and 4:10 P. M.

For trains to Newark, Elizabeth, Rahway, Princeton, Trenton, Perth Amboy, Flemington, Belvidere, and other points, see local schedules at all Ticket Offices.

Trains arrive: From Pittsburg, 6:20 and 10:30 A. M., and 10:20 P. M. daily; 10:10 A. M. and 6:50 P. M. daily, except Monday. From Washington and Baltimore, 6:30, 9:50 A. M., 4:10, 5:10, and 10:20 P. M. Sunday, 6:30, 9:50 A. M. From Philadelphia, 5:05, 6:20, 6:30, 9:50, 10:10, 11:50 A. M., 2:10, 4:10, 5:10, 6:50 8:40, 10:10, and 10:20 P. M. Sunday 5:05, 6:20, 6:30, 9:50, 11:50, A. M., 6:50, 10:10, and 10:20 P. M.

Ticket Offices, Nos. 526 and 944 Broadway, No. 1 Astor House, and foot of Desbrosses and Cortlandt streets; No. 4 Court street, Brooklyn; Nos. 114, 116, and 118 Hudson st., Hoboken. Depot, Jersey City. Emigrant Ticket Office, No. 8 Battery place.

FRANK THOMSON, General Manager. D. M. BOYD, Jr., General Passenger Agent.

TO PHILADELPHIA
via
PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.
THE OLD-ESTABLISHED ROUTE AND SHORT LINE between NEW-YORK AND PHILADELPHIA.

14 Through Trains each way daily; 3 Depots in Philadelphia, 2 in New-York.

4 Tracks, the most Improved Equipment, and the Fastest Time consistent with absolute safety.

Express Trains leave New-York, via Desbrosses and Cortlandt streets Ferries, as follows:

7:30, 8:30, 9:40, (9:30 Limited,) 10:30 A. M., 1, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8:30, 9 P. M., and 12 Midnight. Sunday, 8:30 A. M., 5, 6, 7, 8:30, and 9 P. M.

Returning, Express trains leave Philadelphia 3:20, 3:30, 7, 7:30, 8:30, and 11 A. M., (Limited Express, 1:35 P. M.,) 1:40, 4, 5:30, 7, and 7:35 P. M., and 12 Midnight. On Sunday, 3:20, 3:30, 7, 8:30 A. M., 4, 7, 7:35 P. M., and 12 Midnight.

Ticket Offices, Nos. 526 and 944 Broadway, No. 1 Astor House, and foot of Desbrosses and Cortlandt sts.; No. 4 Court st., Brooklyn; Nos. 114, 116, and 118 Hudson st., Hoboken. Depot, Jersey City. Emigrant Ticket Office, No. 8 Battery place.

FRANK THOMSON, General Manager. D. M. BOYD, Jr., General Passenger Agent.

NEW-YORK CENTRAL AND HUDSON RIVER RAILROAD.—Commencing Dec. 26, 1876, through trains will leave Grand Central Depot:

7:15 A. M., Western and Northern Express, with drawing-room cars to Canandaigua.

8:30 A. M., special Chicago and St. Louis Express, with drawing-room cars to Rochester and Buffalo. Also, through car to St. Louis.

11:00 A. M., North-rn and Western Express.

3:30 P. M., special Albany, Troy and Western Express arrives at Buffalo 7:10 A. M.

5:00 P. M., Express, with sleeping cars, for Watertown and Canandaigua. Also for Montreal via Plattsburg.

8:30 P. M., Pacific Express, daily, with sleeping cars, for Rochester, Niagara Falls, Buffalo, Cleveland, Indianapolis, and Louisville. Also for Chicago, via both L. S. and M. C. Railroads, and to Montreal via St. Albans.

11:00 P. M., Express, with sleeping cars, for Albany and Troy. Way trains as per local Time Tables.

Through tickets for sale at No. 252, 261, and 418 Broadway, and at Westcott Express Company's offices, Nos. 7 Park place, 785 and 942 Broadway New-York, and 333 Washington st., Brooklyn.

C. B. MERSEREAU, General Passenger Agent.

ERIE RAILWAY.

Winter Arrangement of through trains, From Chambers street Depot, (23d st. see note below.)

9:00 A. M., daily, except Sundays, Cincinnati and Chicago Day Express. Drawing-room coaches to Buffalo.

10:45 A. M., daily, except Sundays, Express Mail for Buffalo and the West. Sleeping coach to Buffalo.

7:00 P. M., daily, Pacific Express to the West. Sleeping coaches through to Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Cincinnati, and Chicago without change. Hotel dining-coaches to Chicago.

7:00 P. M., except Sundays, Western Emigrant train. Above trains leave Twenty-third Street Ferry at 8:45 and 10:15 A. M., and 6:45 P. M.

For local trains see time-tables and cards in hotels and depots.

JNO. N. ABBOTT, General Passenger Agent.

NEW-YORK, NEW-HAVEN, AND HARTFORD RAILROAD.

After Dec. 10, 1876, trains leave Grand Central Depot (42d st.) for New-Canaan Railroad at 8:05 A. M., 1, 4:40 P. M.; Danbury and Norwalk Railroad at 8:05 A. M., 1, and 4:40 P. M.; Naugatuck Railroad at 8:05 A. M., and 3 P. M.; Housatonic Railroad at 8:05 A. M., and 3 P. M.; New-Haven and Northampton Railroad at 8:05 A. M., and 3 P. M.; for Newport at 8:05 A. M. and 1 P. M.; Boston and Albany Railroad at 8:05 and 11 A. M., 3 and 9 P. M. (9 P. M. on Sunday); Boston, (via Shore Line,) at 1 and 10 P. M., (10 P. M. on Sundays.) Boston and New-York Air Line, 8 A. M., 1, and 11:35 P. M.

Way trains as per local time-tables.

LEHIGH VALLEY RAILROAD.
ARRANGEMENT. PASSENGER TRAINS. JAN. 1, 1877.

Leave depots foot of Cortlandt and Debrosses sts., at 6:30 P. M.—Night Express, daily, for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Wilkesbarre, Pittston, Sayre, Elmira, Ithaca, Auburn, Rochester, Buffalo, Niagara Falls, and the West. Pullman's sleeping coaches attached.

General Eastern office corner Church and Cortlandt sts., CHARLES B. CUMMINGS, Agent.
ROBERT H. SAYRE, Superintendent and Engineer.

WICKFORD RAILROAD ROUTE TO NEWPORT, R. I.—Passengers for this line take 8:05 A. M. and 1 P. M. express trains from Grand Central Depot, arriving at 4:18 and 8 P. M. at Newport.
THEODORE WARREN, Superintendent.

SITUATIONS WANTED.
FEMALES.
THE UP-TOWN OFFICE OF THE TIMES.

The up-town office of THE TIMES is located at
No. 1,257 Broadway, bet. 31st and 32d sts.
Open daily, Sundays included, from 4 A. M. to 9 P. M.
Subscriptions received, and copies of THE TIMES for sale.
ADVERTISEMENTS RECEIVED UNTIL 9 P. M.

CHAMBER-MAID AND WAITRESS.—By a Welsh Protestant girl to do chamber-work and waiting; or nursing; good City references. Call at No. 221 East 21st st.

CHAMBER-MAID.—BY A GOOD GIRL AS CHAMber-maid and waitress, or for general house-work; willing and competent; excellent references. Call at No. 127 East 30th st., present employer's.

CHAMBER-MAID.—BY A YOUNG WOMAN, TO do chamber-work and fine washing; willing to assist at waiting, or with children. Very good City references. Call at No. 202 East 41st st.

CHAMBER-MAID.—BY A YOUNG GIRL AS chamber-maid in a small family, or to do light house-work; reference. Call at No. 323 East 39th st., ring fifth bell.

CHAMBER-MAID AND WAITRESS.—BY A young woman; has three years' City reference; City or country. Address M. C., Box No. 308 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

CHAMBER-MAID AND WAITRESS.—BY A young girl competent in both duties; good City references. Call at No. 578 6th av., between 49th and 50th sts., third floor, front.

CHAMBER-MAID.—BY A RESPECTABLE COLored woman as first-class chamber-maid and nurse; can give good reference. Call at No. 145 West 50th st.

CHAMBER-MAID AND WAITRESS.—BY A respectable girl as chamber-maid and waitress; City reference. Call at No. 345 East 34th st.

CHAMBER-MAID AND NURSE.—BY A RESpectable girl; is willing and obliging; City reference. Apply at No. 134 West 35th st.

CHAMBER-MAID AND WAITRESS.—BY A Protestant girl in a small private family; good City references. Call at No. 116 West 35th st.

CHAMBER-MAID.—BY A YOUNG WOMAN AS chamber-maid and plain sewing; understands machine. Call at No. 523 West 46th st., third floor front.

CHAMBER-MAID.—BY A RESPECTABLE GIRL as chamber-maid, and would assist with the washing and ironing; no cards. Call at 248 West 41st st.

CHAMBER-MAID AND WAITRESS, OR TO do general house-work in a small family. Address present employer, J. C. J., No. 419 East 61st st.

CHAMBER-MAID AND WAITRESS.—Three years' City references. Call at No. 221 East 21st st.

COOK—CHAMBER-MAID.—TWO SCOTTISH Presbyterians, a good cook and washer, and the other a chamber-maid and waitress; will only go together; one years' reference. Call for two days at No. 329 West 25th st.; ask for Annie Taylor; no cards.

COOK.—BY A NORTH OF IRELAND YOUNG WOMan as first-class cook; is willing to assist with washing; the best of City reference. Call at No. 250 West 47th st.

COOK.—IN A PRIVATE FAMILY; WHO THOROUGHly understands her business; would assist with the washing; City reference. Call at No. 244 West 39d st.

COOK.—BY A RESPECTABLE YOUNG WOMAN, as good cook, washer, and ironer; is a good baker; City or country; good reference. Call at No. 1,060 3d av., near 63d st., two flights up.

COOK.—BY A FIRST-CLASS COOK IN A PRIVATE family; understands all kinds of meats and soups; excellent baker; best City reference. Can be seen for two days at No. 478 7th av.

COOK.—BY A YOUNG WOMAN AS GOOD COOK, washer, and ironer, or would assist with housework; City or country; good reference. Call at No. 220 East 29th st., first floor, front.

COOK, WASHER, AND IRONER.—BY A girl, to cook, wash, and iron; best City reference. Apply at No. 238 East 30th st.

SITUATIONS WANTED.
FEMALES.

COOK.—BY AN EXPERIENCED COOK; UNDERstands meats, soups, jellies, pastry, &c.; an excellent baker; very best reference. Call at No. 326 Broadway, in florist's store.

COOK.—BY A FIRST-CLASS, STEADY WOMAN; knows her work thoroughly; good baker of bread; best City reference. Call or address two days No. 246 East 27th st. Room No. 16.

COOK.—BY A SCOTCH WOMAN; UNDERSTANDS French and English cooking, boning, larding, baking, and pastry; all kinds of sweets; best references. Call at No. 156 West 42d st.

COOK.—BY A RESPECTABLE PROTESTANT woman; excellent plain cook; would do coarse washing; best City reference. Call at No. 224 West 31st st., first floor.

COOK.—BY A FIRST-CLASS COMPETENT COOK; understands all kinds of family cooking; will assist with washing; City reference. Call at No. 53 West 18th st., top floor, rear.

COOK.—BY A GOOD COOK; UNDERSTANDS ALL kinds of cooking and baking; first-class City reference. Address No. A50 6th av., between 27th and 28th sts., first floor.

COOK.—BY A RESPECTABLE WOMAN, TO COOK, wash, and iron, or general housework; no objection to the country; excellent City reference. Call at No. 122 East 4th st.

COOK.—BY A RESPECTABLE YOUNG WOMAN as cook, washer, and ironer in a small private family; five years' City reference. Call for two days at No. 24 West 43d st.

COOK.—COACHMAN.—BY A FRENCH WOMAN as first-class cook, and her husband as coachman; have best City reference. Call from 11 till 5 at No. 150 East 42d st.

COOK.—BY A RESPECTABLE GIRL AS GOOD Cook, and to assist with washing and ironing; best City reference. Call for two days at 210 West 16th st.

COOK.—BY AN EXPERIENCED WOMAN AS FIRSTclass cook; very best City references. Call at No. 284 East 41st st.

COOK.—BY A GOOD COOK; BEST RECOMMENdations. Apply at No. 241 East 42d st., on Tuesday, 23d inst.

DRESS-MAKER.—BY AN ENGLISH WOMAN; perfect cutter of family clothing; works all machines; per day, 1½ years' reference. Address K., Box No. 274 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

DRESS-MAKER.—BY AN AMERICAN PERSON, who thoroughly understands cutting, fitting, trimming, and making over dresses; by day or week; moderate terms; highest references. Call at No. 715 6th av., near 41st st.

DRESS-MAKER.—TO GO OUT BY THE DAY Elridge st. for family sewing. Address Dress-maker, No. 77

GOVERNESS.—BY AN AMERICAN YOUNG LADY, who speaks German, as nursery governess; best of reference. Address GOVERNESS, for three day, No. 715 5th av.

HOUSEKEEPER.—BY AN AMERICAN PROTestant woman as assistant housekeeper, or would do the entire work of a small family, except washing; City or country; first-class references. Address Economy, Box No. 318 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

HOUSE-MAID.—BY A LADY FOR A GOOD, faithful, intelligent Protestant girl as house-maid; has lived over three years in her family; country preferred. Apply at No. 421 5th av.

HOUSE-WORK.—BY A YOUNG WOMAN TO DO House-work, in a private family; is an excellent cook and baker; good washer and ironer; City reference. Call at No. 305 7th av., in store.

HOUSE-WORK.—BY A YOUNG GIRL, FOR light house-work in a small private family, or would do up-stairs work and waiting; best reference. Call at No. 200 East 41st st.

HOUSE-WORK.—BY A RESPECTABLE PROtestant girl to do general house-work; City or country; good reference. Call at No. 407 1st av., near 24th st., grocery store.

HOUSE-WORK.—BY A YOUNG WOMAN, IN A small family; or cook, washer, and ironer; City or country; best City reference. Call at No. 125 West 30th st.

HOUSE-WORK.—BY A YOUNG WOMAN LATELY landed to do general house-work; or chamber-maid and waitress; City or country. Call at No. 457 6th av.

HOUSE-WORK.—BY A RESPECTABLE WIDOW woman and child 6 years old, for general housework; City or country; best City reference. Call for two days at No. 335 3d av.

HOUSE-WORK.—BY A RESPECTABLE YOUNG girl to do general house-work; is a very active family; willing and obliging; City reference. Call for two days at No. 200 East 46th st., second floor.

HOUSE-WORK.—BY A YOUNG GIRL TO DO light house-work in a small family; willing and obliging. Call for two days at No. 509 East 15th st.

HOUSE-WORK.—BY A RESPECTABLE YOUNG girl to do general house-work; best City reference. Call at No. 215 East 29th st., Room No. 14.

HOUSE-WORK.—BY A YOUNG GIRL TO DO general house-work in a small family. Call at No. 332 West 25th st.

HOUSE-WORK.—BY A COMPETENT WOMAN to do general house-work; is a first-class laundress. Call at No. 140 West 28th st., in store.

INFANTS' NURSE.—IS WILLING AND OBLIGing; four years' best City reference. Call at No. 19 East 61st st.

LADY'S MAID.—BY A RESPECTABLE GIRL AS Lmaid and seamstress; can cut and fit; willing and obliging; would assist with chamber-work; no objection to the country; five years' excellent City reference. Address M. F., Box No. 275 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

LADY'S MAID.—FRENCH; UNDERSTANDS Lhair-dressing; machine-sewing; is a good dressmaker; excellent City references. Address C. D., Box No. 311 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, 1,257 BROADWAY.

LADY'S-MAID.—BY A FIRST-CLASS FAMILY Lseamstress; good dress-maker and operator; will assist with children; would prefer traveling or go to the country; City reference. Call at 1,405 Broadway.

LADIES' MAID.—BY A GERMAN PROTESTANT; Lgood seamstress and hair-dresser; best City reference. Address C. Stubbe, No. 2 Duane st., corner of Rose st.

LAUNDRESS.—BY A FIRST-CLASS LAUNDRESS Lin private family; does French fluting, plaiting, and puffing; understands her business; best City reference. Address B. S., Box No. 328 TIMES UPTOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

LAUNDRESS.—BY A YOUNG WOMAN AS LAUNdress and chamber-maid; is willing to do anything that is required; very good City reference. Call at No. 202 East 41st st.

LAUNDRESS.—BY A RESPECTABLE YOUNG Lwoman as first-class laundress in a private family. Can be seen for two days at No. 258 West 19th st., first floor.

LAUNDRESS.—BY A YOUNG WOMAN AS FIRSTLclass laundress, or would do house-work in a small family; good City reference. Call at No. 168 West 28th st.

LAUNDRESS.—BY A FIRST-CLASS LAUNDRESS; Lalso a good cook; north of Ireland; no objection to the country. Call at No. 229 East 40th st.

LAUNDRESS.—BY A FIRST-CLASS LAUNDRESS Lin a private family; good City reference. Address Z., Advertisement Office, No. 554 3d av.

LAUNDRESS.—BY A RESPECTABLE WOMAN; Lgood City reference. Call at No. 210 East 56th st., top floor.

LAUNDRESS.—BY A GOOD LAUNDRESS, IN A private family; the best of City reference. Call at No. 127 West 42d st.

NURSE, &c.—BY A RESPECTABLE PROTESTANT woman as child's nurse, or to wait upon an invalid lady; is competent to assist in housekeeping or sewing; best of City reference. Call at No. 233 West 39th st., ring third bell.

NURSE AND SEAMSTRESS.—BY A RESPECTable young girl, Protestant; best City references. Address J. W., Box No. 255 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

NURSE.—BY A RESPECTABLE YOUNG GIRL AS nurse, and to do plain sewing; can operate on Wheeler & Wilson's machine; best City references; no objection to the country. Call at 207 East 39th st.

NURSE.—BY AN EXPERIENCED ENGLISH PROTestant nurse; can operate on Wheeler & Wilson machine; best City references. Apply at No. 691 6th av., second floor.

NURSE.—BY AN EXPERIENCED PROTESTANT person; capable of bringing an infant up on the bottle. Can be seen at former employer's, No. 459 West 21st st.

NURSE.—BY A YOUNG AMERICAN GIRL TO TAKE care of child—or do light house-work in a small family. Call or address No. 206 East 26th st., three flights up, front.

NURSE.—BY A YOUNG GIRL AS NURSE AND chamber-maid in a small private family; willing and obliging; good reference. Call at No. 40 East 44st st.

NURSE, &c.—BY A YOUNG PROTESTANT GIRL as child's nurse, chamber-maid, and seamstress; four years in her last place. Call at No. 11 West 55th st.

NURSE.—COMPETENT TO TAKE ENTIRE CHARGE of child; best City reference. Call at No. 205 East 20th st.

NURSE.—BY AN AMERICAN GIRL, 17 YEARS OLD, as nurse. Call at No. 514 3d av., third floor, front.

SEAMSTRESS.—BY A RESPECTABLE YOUNG Sgirl as seamstress; understands dress-making; is willing to do light chamber-work or make herself generally useful; understands operating on Grover & Baker's machine. Can be seen for two days at No. 321 West 42d st.

SEAMSTRESS.—BY AN AMERICAN PERSON AS first-class seamstress; can cut and fit; good operator; no objection to taking charge of house-keeping or assist with grown up children. Address for two days American, Box No. 268 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

SEAMSTRESS.—BY A YOUNG WOMAN AS SEAMStress; understands dress-making, trimming, and all kinds of family sewing; would assist with chamber-work; is a good operator; good reference. Can be seen at No. 321 East 37th st.

SEAMSTRESS.—BY A YOUNG WOMAN TO GO Sout by the day to do plain sewing, or would take it at her own house; has a good idea of dress-making. Call at No. 416 1st av., between 24th and 25th sts., Room No. 9.

SEAMSTRESS.—BY A LIGHT-COLORED NORTHSern girl as seamstress or maid; understands dress-making; good references. Address Seamstress, Box No. 251 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

WAITRESS.—BY A COMPETENT YOUNG W woman; understands salads and the care of silver; excellent City reference from last place. Can be seen at No. 646 2d av., near 35th st.

WAITRESS.—BY A FIRST-CLASS WAITRESS; understands all kinds of salads, care of silver, and waiting in all branches; best City reference. Call at No. 149 7th av. No cards answered.

SITUATIONS WANTED.
FEMALES.

WAITRESS.—BY A PROTESTANT AS FIRST-class waitress in a private family; accustomed to take full charge of silver, and makes all kinds of salads; best City reference. Call at No. 40 East 41 st.

WASHING.—BY A COMPETENT LAUNDRESS, washing, or would go out by the day washing and ironing or house-cleaning; will work for $1 per dozen, and will do family washing at 75 cents per dozen; best City references. Call or address No. 206 West 27th st., between 7th and 8th avs., Room No. 5, one flight up.

WASHING.—BY A RESPECTABLE WOMAN, family and gentlemen's washing at 50 cents a dozen; pulling, fluting, and polishing. Call or address Mrs. Sullivan, No. 420 East 15th st., third floor, back room.

WASHING.—BY A FIRST-CLASS LAUNDRESS for the first of the week, or would take a family's washing home; can do all kinds of fine work; has the best of reference from last employer. Call at No. 326 East 36th st., first floor.

WASHING.—BY A RESPECTABLE SWEDISH woman; gentlemen's and families' fine washing, or to go out by the day; clothes carefully attended to. Call at No. 129 East 52d st., third floor, back.

WASHING.—BY A RESPECTABLE WOMAN, FAMily or gentlemen's washing; 75 cents a dozen; flatting and polishing done. Call or address Mme. Leons, No. 28 West 4th st., basement.

WASHING.—BY A RESPECTABLE WOMAN AT her own residence, or will go out by the day; understands fluting; good reference. Call at No. 156 West 16th st., rear, Room No. 8.

WASHING.—BY A RESPECTABLE YOUNG W woman at her residence; understands fluting; has the best reference. Call for two days at No. 581 3d av.

WASHING.—BY A RESPECTABLE COLORED gentlemen's or families' washing from 50 cents to $1 a dozen, or by the week or month. Call at No. 118 West 26th st.

WASHING.—BY A FIRST-CLASS COLORED laundress, gents' and families' washing, by the dozen, week, or month; fine puffing and fluting. Address Mary Gordon, No. 128 West 30th st.

WASHING.—BY A YOUNG GIRL; GOOD LAUNdress; to take in washing at her home, or would go out by the day. Call at No. 133 West 126th st., rear, room No. 6.

WASHING.—BY A RESPECTABLE WOMAN, washing and ironing at home, or would go out by the day; is a good laundress. Call at No. 236 East 37th st.

WASHING.—BY A FIRST-CLASS LAUNDRESS, to go out by the day; can do all kinds of flating and fine work; can do lace curtains like new; best of references. Call at No. 326 East 36th st., first floor.

WAS

LOCAL MISCELLANY.

TILDEN'S UNPAID INCOME TAX.

SUIT COMMENCED FOR ITS RECOVERY BY UNITED STATES DISTRICT ATTORNEY GEORGE BLISS.

United States District Attorney Bliss yesterday commenced a suit in the United States District Court, for $150,000, against Samuel J. Tilden, for non-payment of income tax. A capias, returnable on the 6th of February, was issued and served last evening. The following letter from Mr. Bliss to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue will explain his action fully:

JANUARY 22, 1877.

Hon. Greene B. Raum, Commissioner of Internal Revenue:

SIR: After the receipt of your instructions of Sept. 26, 1876, to commence suit against persons who had failed to pay the proper income tax, I delayed commencing suit against Samuel J. Tilden, because I thought it better to wait until the Presidential election was over. Since the election I have further delayed in consequence of the anomalous condition of the public matters. But my term of office is about to close, and, in endeavoring to dispose of all matters that have remained unattended to, I have been brought to consider whether I ought to delay longer. After careful consideration it has seemed to me that it was my duty to commence suit.

I am thoroughly satisfied that Mr. Tilden has not paid the income tax which the law required, and he should, therefore, be compelled to pay. Moreover, I am aware that the commencement of a suit against the leader of a great political party will be followed by some criticism upon the officer who brings such a suit, and it seems to me that it would be cowardly to shirk the responsibility and leave the matter to my successor. I have, therefore, commenced a suit to-day. Very respectfully,

GEORGE BLISS, United States Attorney.

LOOKING FOR A FORGER.

THE PERPETRATOR OF THE $64,000 FORGERY NOT YET DISCOVERED—THE DETECTIVES SILENT—ANOTHER ARREST.

The search for the perpetrator of the recent forgery upon the Union Trust Company is still continued by the detectives, both of the Union Trust Company and of the District Attorney's office. The officers have adopted a less communicative air in connection with the business, and although four men are now in custody, there appears as yet to be but little light upon the matter. The officers of the company most deeply interested, although extremely courteous in their treatment of all inquirers for information, are still very reticent in their replies, and seem determined to afford all the assistance to their detectives that silence can possibly give. Mr. G. L. Maxwell, who was arrested on Thursday last, was bailed by Justice Duffy, Mr. John D. Maxwell, and Commissioner George J. Forest becoming his bondsmen to the extent of $10,000. He will have a hearing on Saturday next, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. He is still confined to his bed, his leg being bound up in a plaster of Paris cast. In Broad street Maxwell is spoken of as a man who was not particularly wide-awake or enterprising, but as a man who had been considered "square" in all his dealings for a number of years. Brown still remained under lock and key last night, having failed to secure the necessary amount of bail demanded. He does not appear to be at all alarmed about his prospects, and was confident that his brother in Boston would come to his relief. Mr. Hewitt, Brown's counsel, yesterday said he could give no additional information in the case, but he believed he would be able fully to establish the innocence of his client.

Julius Kelter, the man who endeavored to open an account at the Exchange National Bank with the $9,500 gold check bought of W. T. Hatch & Co., and who was sent on Sunday to the House of Detention by Justice Duffy, in default of $3,000 bail, was yesterday served with an order, issued by Judge McAdam, requiring him to appear in the Marine Court, Chambers, at 10:30 o'clock on Wednesday morning, to give testimony as to his property in supplementary proceedings. The plaintiff is Charles Simpson, who some time ago obtained a judgment against Kelter, and was before the firm examined on supplementary proceedings. It is charged by the plaintiff that the records of the examination are missing, and that they were last seen in the hands of Mr. M. L. Marks, Kelter's counsel.

George W. Chadwick was arrested yesterday by Detectives Fields and O'Connor, of the District Attorney's office, on suspicion of being concerned with Horace E. Brown and G. L. Maxwell in the recent forgery. The prisoner was taken before Justice Kilbreth, at the Tombs Police Court, and remanded for examination to-day. When questioned yesterday in relation to the arrest, District Attorney Phelps declined to disclose anything as the matter was not yet in a condition to have its details made public.

THE THIRD DISTRICT COURT-HOUSE.

INVESTIGATION BEFORE THE COMMITTEE OF THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN—THE CHARGES AGAINST THE COMMISSIONERS AND ARCHITECTS.

The Special Committee of the Board of Aldermen, consisting of Messrs. Purroy, Howland, and Keenan, who were appointed to investigate the charges preferred by Mr. Robert Cushing against the Third District Court-house Commission, held another session yesterday in the City Library. The examination attracted a large audience. Among those present were Commissioner Porter, Mr. Calvert Vaux, one of the architects of the building, and others who were employed in erecting it. Mr. Wheeler H. Peckham appeared for the architects. It will be remembered that Mr. Cushing accused the latter with having an interest in a paper, signed by contractors for work on the building they had in charge, agreeing that they should pay three-quarters of 1 per cent. of the amount of their contracts. The defense claimed that neither the architects nor the commission had any interest in the matter.

Patrick K. Horgan was the first witness. He deposed, in answer to Mr. Purroy, that he put in an estimate for the mason work of the Third District Court-house; was furnished with specifications and plans for the work; believes he obtained them either at the office of the architect, Mr. Vaux, or at the office of the Commissioners; a paper was handed to him at the time for his signature; it was to the effect that he should pay three-quarters of 1 per cent. of the amount of his contract if it was awarded to him, and also $10 for a bill of quantities or materials required to complete the work for which he was to bid; was informed other contractors had signed the agreement to pay the commission of three-quarters of 1 per cent.; he refused to sign the paper because he thought it might prevent him from getting the work; the amount of the contract was $170,000, and it was awarded to him; he did not purchase the bill of quantities, but made up his own estimate of the materials required; the paper binding him to pay the commission of three-quarters of 1 per cent was handed to him by Mr. Oswell when he first called about the work.

Mr. Peckham here presented the written agreement which the witness was asked to sign. It reads as follows:

NEW-YORK, July, 1874.

Third Judicial District, Police Courts, Prison and Bell Tower contracts for masonry, drainage, &c.

We, the undersigned, agree to base our bids for the above work upon the bill of quantities furnished by Messrs. Farnsworth & Oswell, and each to pay them the sum of $10 for the same, it being agreed that the successful bidders shall pay them three-quarters of one per cent. on the contracts.

The witness, resuming, said that he would rather rely on his own estimate of materials required for the work than on the bill of quantities which he could have purchased at $10; he could get a knowledge of the quantities necessary from the plans for the building, but it would take some time to obtain such knowledge; Oswell seemed to be acting as Superintendent of the work; had seen him around the Court-house.

Mr. Peckham here cross-examined the witness at some length. In reply to his questions Horgan stated that he refused to sign the paper because he thought it would be better not; if he had signed it, the commission on three-quarters of 1 per cent. would be paid according as he was paid for the work; he thought the money was for the architects, because he subsequently heard that English architects were paid such commissions; there was some trouble between him and the architects; they caused him to remove quantities of stone at various times from the building; he put in a claim for extra work amounting to $40,000, but it has not been paid.

John A. Horgan, a brother and partner of the last witness, corroborated his testimony, and added that the Commissioners of the Third District Court-house had never received any money from his hands; they were all honorable gentlemen; he never gave money to the architects, nor did he know of any one giving them any money.

John Hogan was next called. He deposed that Mr. Oswell asked him to sign the agreement [which was put in evidence] to give three-quarters of one per cent. on the amount of a contract for granite work if the contract should be awarded to him, and also to pay $10 for a bill of quantities; he paid the $10, and also signed the agreement, but he did not get the contract; he believed that Oswell was Superintendent of the work; he subsequently obtained a sub-contract for work on the court-house; he got it from one of the contractors; the amount of the work was to be $30,000; the architects were very particular with him, and they made him do what he considered extra work; he put in a bill of $6,000 for what he considered extra work, but it was not paid; he never had heard anything about the extra bill since he put it in.

Mr. Page, the Secretary of the commission, here stated that he was absent in Europe for a very brief period, but he employed a gentleman who performed his duties while he was away, and paid him for his services.

The committee then adjourned until to-morrow.

TRIAL OF THE MASKED BURGLARS.

THE LEADER OF THE GANG SENTENCED TO 35 YEARS IMPRISONMENT—TWO OTHERS RECEIVE SENTENCES OF 20 AND 18 YEARS RESPECTIVELY.

Three of the masked burglars, who were engaged in the robberies at Astoria, Long Island, last December, were indicted by the Grand Jury of Queens County, at the Court-house in the town of Hempstead, yesterday, and were promptly placed on trial in the afternoon. The names of the prisoners are John James, Jeremiah McCarthy, and John Riley. Judge C. E. Pratt presided, and was assisted by County Judge John J. Armstrong. John James was first arraigned. He was considered the leader of the gang, and is one of the party arrested by Capt. Murray and Detective Carr, of the Fourth Precinct, in this City. The prisoner was arraigned upon three indictments, the first for burglariously entering and robbing the premises occupied by William H. Green, the second for entering with felonious intent the residence of Mrs. M. L. Hiller, on the same night, and the third for the highway robbery of William Woods, a butler employed by Mr. Edward Woolsey, of Astoria. The prisoner elected, through his counsel, Mr. George A. Mott, to be tried on each indictment separately. To the first charge, that of entering the house of Mr. Green, the prisoner pleaded not guilty, and the trial proceeded. The first witness was Mrs. Martha Green, wife of William H. Green, whose testimony was in substance as follows: The house in which she resided at the time of the burglary belonged to Messrs. G. L. Green and her husband; on the morning of Dec. 23 last, shortly after 1 o'clock, she heard a noise in the sitting-room, adjoining the sleeping apartment occupied by herself and husband; opening the door, she saw four masked men immediately in front of her, and a fifth a short distance away; she identified the prisoner, John James, as having been one of the party; he was dressed on that occasion in dark clothes, and wore a dark slouched hat with a broad brim; the burglars had remained in the house about three-quarters of an hour, and when they left they took with them a miscellaneous lot of property, including clothing, some portable articles of furniture, a gold pencil, and a small sum of money. The witness was submitted to a searching cross-examination by the counsel for the prisoner, but he utterly failed in an attempt to weaken her testimony, which was precisely similar to that which had been given by the witness at the preliminary examination at Astoria.

Miss Anna Hiller, daughter of Mrs. M. L. Hiller, was next sworn. Her testimony was chiefly confined to the identification of the prisoner in order to permit the District Attorney to show that James was the same party who had entered the house of Mr. Green. Nothing new was elicited at the cross-examination. Miss Gertrude Hiller, sister of the previous witness, and Mr. Gustave Frank gave similar testimony to that given by the previous witness.

John Smith, one of the burglars, now under arrest for complicity in the same robbery, was placed on the stand. He testified that he had occupied a cell with the prisoner up to last Sunday, when he had been assigned to another apartment. James had told him that he had hidden part of the goods secured at the burglary, under a pile of lumber at Astoria, and another portion in a box which he had hidden near Blackwell's Island, and he said that he had also sold some of the property. Cross-examination, the witness testified that he had been twice previously arrested, but each time on false charges.

John Riley, another of the same party of burglars, testified that the gold pencil-case, belonging to Mrs. Green, had been given to him as his share of the proceeds of the burglary. It had been given to him on the Saturday night before Christmas, and he had, after retaining it a week, voluntarily handed it to Capt. Murray.

Officer John Lang, of the Astoria Police Department, testified to having heard the prisoner's statement and examination at Astoria.

Counsel for the prisoner then said that he had no witnesses to produce, and should content himself with asking that Judge James be discharged from custody, on the ground that he had not been proved to be one of the burglars. His motion was denied, and Judge Pratt delivered the charge to the jury, after which the latter proceeded to the jury-room. They remained out less than five minutes, and returned with a verdict of "guilty in the first degree." The prisoner pleaded guilty to the second indictment—that of burglariously entering the house of Mrs. Hiller—and was directed by Judge Armstrong to stand up and receive his sentence. In response to the usual questions of the Clerk, James said he was 44 years of age, and a native of England; was unmarried, and was a stone cutter by trade; had been in prison before, but refused to say where, or on what charge. He was then sentenced to imprisonment at Sing Sing Prison for 20 years, and at the expiration of that time to a further term of imprisonment of 15 years for the second offense.

Jeremiah McCarthy and John Riley were arraigned immediately afterward and pleaded guilty to similar charges. McCarthy was sentenced to imprisonment with hard labor for 10 years on each indictment, making 20 years, and Riley was sentenced to imprisonment with hard labor for 10 years on the first and eight years on the second indictment, making 18 years in all. In response to questions by the Clerk, McCarthy, said he was 20 years of age; unmarried; had no trade, and had served a term in Sing Sing Prison. Riley stated that he was 18 years old; unmarried, and had no trade; he had never been imprisoned before. The remaining prisoners will stand trial to-morrow before the same tribunal.

ALLEGED CUSTOM-HOUSE FRAUDS.

Henry M. Williams, formerly Deputy Collector of Customs at this port, was arrested on Sunday afternoon by Officer Crowley, of the United States District Attorney's office, at his residence in Madison avenue, between Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth streets, charged with complicity in the Lawrence frauds. It was stated in the District Attorney's office yesterday that Williams, who has not held office for several years, used to examine one case of goods in an invoice, and on such examination pass the entire invoice, knowing the remaining goods were not such as that document called for. On his retirement from office it is alleged that he entered into a conspiracy with one Gaylord, a Deputy Collecter who recently died, the result of which was that the fraudulent practice was carried on very extensively, but to what extent is not yet known. In consequence of the statute of limitations Williams cannot be prosecuted for the fraudulent acts alleged to have been committed by him while in office, and it is therefore on the ground of his recent alleged complicity with Gaylord & Lawrence that he is being proceeded against. He was arraigned before Commissioner Davenport yesterday, and held to bail in the sum of $5,000, Mr. James Everhard becoming his bondsman. Williams claims that he is innocent.

WARMING THE CARS.

The Aldermanic Committee met again yesterday for the purpose of considering Alderman Cole's proposition to heat the City railroad cars. Mr. Sherry, of Brooklyn, advocated the heating of the cars by steam, and said that it would not be injurious if proper ventilation was had. He recollected when it was proposed to put stoves in churches that the project met with great opposition for some time, but finally churches were warmed. The lines of cars in Brooklyn which were heated carried more passengers than those which were not. After hearing some further remarks, Mr. Cowing, one of the members of the committee, said that he and his colleagues would probably present their report on the subject to the Aldermen on Thursday, and he believed the report would be satisfactory to the public. In reply to Mr. Cole, Mr. Cowing also stated that the committee had obtained the views of members of the Board of Health on the matter, and they would be embodied in their report. The committee then adjourned.

THE MURDER OF MAGGIE BAUER.

The case of Frank McConnochie, the alleged murderer of Maggie Bauer, came up before Judge Pratt, at the Queens County Court of Over and Terminer, yesterday, in the old Court-house at North Hempstead, Long Island. The prisoner was arraigned at the bar and pleaded not guilty to the charge. Ex-Judge Elliott Benedict appeared on behalf of the prisoner and made a motion to have the trial postponed, as he said that Mr. Theodore J. Armstrong, with whom he was associated in the case, had been ill for several days, and as he had personally only met the prisoner, his client, for the first time yesterday morning, he would under no circumstances be ready to go on with the case this week. District Attorney Downing, although anxious, as he said, to have the case go on at once, consented to an agreement to have the case tried at a special session of the court to be held during next month.

THE BROOKLYN ALDERMEN.

The dead-lock in the Brooklyn Board of Aldermen was not broken at yesterday's meeting. Seven times the Aldermen voted, and each time Alderman Donovan, the Independent Democrat from the Twelfth Ward, either voted for himself or for some member of the board other than the regular Republican and Democratic candidates. Very little business of importance was transacted, but much time was consumed in squabbling about the appointment of special committees by Alderman French, Chairman pro tem., pending the permanent organization of the board. The whole matter was finally laid on the table. Alderman Donovan remarked during the discussion that if no committees were appointed for six months it would save the city $1,000,000. A communication was received from Mayor Schroeder nominating James S. T. Stranahan as President of the Park Commission, and A. B. Baylis and William Marshal as Commissioners. The nominations were laid over for one week. A resolution appropriating $50,000 for the construction of storm sewers was passed, as was also a resolution instructing the Corporation Counsel to draft a law regulating and reducing the salaries now paid to city officials. After the transaction of some routine business the board adjourned until next Monday at 2 P. M.

THE CONTINENTAL LIFE COMPANY.

WILLIAM ALLEN BUTLER APPOINTED REFEREE —THE RECEIVER'S ACCOUNT TO BE EXAMINED—THE DOINGS OF THE OFFICERS TO BE SCRUTINIZED.

On the application of Stephen English, one of the policy-holders in the insolvent Continental Life Insurance Company of this City, Judge Pratt, of Brooklyn, yesterday granted an order appointing Mr. William Allen Butler Referee to examine and pass the accounts of the Receiver, John J. Anderson, after they shall have been filed, and to examine into the condition of the assets of the concern and to make such recommendations in regard thereto as shall seem to him expedient for the welfare of the creditors. "And to the end that the court may from time to time make specific directions for the benefit of all interested in said funds, the said Referee will receive such proof as may be produced before him touching the liability of any of the officers or Directors of said company, the extent and nature thereof, and what steps, if any, have been or ought to be taken to enforce payment thereof." The Receiver is directed to lay before the Referee all books, papers, documents, and information in his possession, and the order further provides that the Referee may postpone his examination until the 30th inst., in order that the Receiver may have time in which to file his report. The order concludes as follows: "Such postponement is in no way to interrupt, delay, or affect any other examination provided for in this order, it being the true intent of this order to confer full power upon the Referee, and afford opportunity to any and all parties having an interest in the funds of said company, to make a searching examination not only as to all the assets now on hand available, but to inquire whether the funds and assets of said company have been heretofore abstracted, misapplied, mismanaged, or lost in any manner through the negligence or other wrongful act of any officer of said company, or any person whatever. And it is further ordered that the other matters of relief prayed for be postponed until after said report is filed as herein provided."

SALE OF RARE BOOKS.

THE LIBRARY COLLECTED BY PETER HASTIE AND EDWARD H. TRACY UNDER THE HAMMER.

Messrs. Leavitt commenced yesterday the sale by auction, at Clinton Hall, of the magnificent library collected by the late Messrs. Peter Hastie and Edward H. Tracy. A description of this great collection of books has already been given in THE TIMES. It embraces no less than 20,000 volumes, and the catalogue foots up 8,145 separate titles. Unlike the great Menzies library, recently sold at the same place, the books are almost all in their original binding. A few works have been decked out in gorgeous style, but among the thousands of dingy, venerable-looking folios, and plainly bound and unbound treasures, these look strangely out of place. The attendance at the sale yesterday was good, many well-known booksellers, agents, and collectors being present. The sale began about 1:30 on "Biography," the catalogue being divided into "subjects." Under this heading, 452 lots were disposed of very rapidly at extremely small prices. Although there was no work of very extraordinary value in this department, there was a vast amount of high-class standard literature, and in almost every instance the editions sold were the best which the collector could procure. Some of the books did not bring much more than their value as old paper, while in no instance was there keen competition. The following prices are culled from a very numbers too insignificant for mention: "Martial Achievements of the Scots Nation," by P. Abercrombie, Edinburgh, 1711, in two volumes, $2 25 per volume; "Life and Public Services of John Quincy Adams," by W. H. Seward, Auburn, 1849, $1 60; "Baxter's Life and Times," by Rev. W. Orme, two volumes, London, 1830, $1 10; Peter Bayle's, "Historical and Critical Dictionary," five volumes, London, 1734 8, $5 per volume; B. Brooks' "Lives of the Puritans," three volumes, London, 1813, $3 25 per volume; "Memoirs of the Life of Oliver Cromwell," London 1740, (the work usually attributed to John Milton,) $5 50; "Evelyn's Memoirs," in two volumes, the 1819 (second) edition, which Bray edited, $5 per volume; the 1819 (London) edition of "Grammont's Memoirs," illustrated superbly by Harding, $32 50; Scriven's illustrated edition of the same, $11, and a few others of less value sold for a few cents. The memoirs of the duels and reputations champion of the duello, Lord Herbert of Caerbourg, sold for $3 50, and Hollis' "Memoirs," in three volumes, (the edition of 1780-88,) only brought $5 per volume. Houbraken's "Lives of the Painters," printed in Amsterdam in 1718, three volumes, 8vo, finely bound, and enriched with remarkably good impressions of the plates, $4 25 per volume. The Scotch biographies brought very low prices, and the historical works, in many cases, were almost given away, the cost of printing their titles in the catalogue being barely realized. The famous "Ludlow Memoirs," which contain a great deal of curious information relating to the history of Charles I., and which were published in 1771, brought only $5. A "Life of Thomas Paine," (American edition, printed in this City, 1809,) with a number of manuscript notes, written by Alexander Lord, who appears to have been a soldier of the Revolution, was purchased for $5. A very fine copy of the old 1579 edition of North's "Plutarch's Lives," which was published in London in 1657, brought $7 50; another published in 1676, $5 50; one of the 50 large paper copies of "The Somerville Memories," printed in Edinburgh in 1815, in two volumes, $5 25 per volume; Major's (London, 1825,) edition of "Walton's Lives," $3. The sale will commence to-day at 1 P. M., when the gems of the collection, the rare editions of Shakespeare, Milton, Burns, and other great poets and dramatists will be disposed of.

A LITTLE MORE SNOW.

SOMETHING FOR THE STREET-CLEANING BUREAU TO DO—DETENTION OF MAILS —THE STORM ELSEWHERE.

At daylight yesterday morning a snow-storm began, which continued with steadiness until nearly night-fall. The flakes descended softly and without drifting, reaching a depth of a little more than two inches, and adding very little to the great difficulty which the drivers of stages, trucks, and carriages experienced in driving through the obstructed streets. Where the work of excavation among the ice-fields in the down-town streets had been prosecuted over Sunday, the new snow-fall covered the piles of boulders with a mantle that hid the dirt, if it did not remove the annoyance of their disgraceful presence. At times the storm was so thick on the rivers as to make it almost as difficult to navigate ferry-boats as it would have been in an ordinary fog. Where the sidewalks had been cleared of ice and snow with great labor and expense the occupants of the premises made haste early in the day to remove the snow as fast as it fell, and the mildness of the weather permitted this to be done without much effort. The sleighing about the City was much improved by the slight snow-fall, as it had become somewhat impaired where the rain had washed away the old snow, or where it had been exposed to the direct rays of the sun. The indications at the Signal Service Bureau in this City were that the storm would not be followed by dangerous weather for shipping, as the wind was traveling only four miles an hour. In other cities the weather was reported as stormy. Snow was falling at Philadelphia, Perry Sound, and New-London. In Baltimore and Washington there was a heavy sleet storm, and in Knoxville, Norfolk, and New-Orleans it was raining heavily, the fall in New-Orleans having been 1.47 inches during 24 hours. The mild weather in the neighborhood of Baltimore would, it was expected, break up the ice in the Chesapeake Bay and release the fleet of imprisoned oystermen who have been fastened up for two weeks, very much to their pecuniary loss, and to the inconvenience of the consumers of oysters, who have heard of the scarcity and increased cost of oysters. The thermometer yesterday morning stood as follows in the places mentioned: Breckinridge, Minn., 21° below; Chatham, 6° below; Cheyenne, W. T., 15° below; Duluth, Wis., 6° below; Fort Sully, D. T., 4° below; Fort Garry, Manitoba, 24° below; Pembina, W. T., 18° below; St. Paul, Minn., 7° below; Yankton, D. T., 2° below; Albany, 10° above; Boston, 24° above; La Crosse, Wis., 5° above; North Platte, Neb., 2° above; Oswego, N. Y., 15° above; Philadelphia, 23° above; Washington, 26° above. The storm delayed the morning mails from the South and West about two hours. A railroad messenger reported at the Post Office yesterday that never before in his experience of many years on the Erie Railway, had he seen such an accumulation of snow along that road as now. Only those who travel over the road can appreciate the severity of the frequent storms that have prevailed. The local railroads were not at all affected by yesterday's storm.

THE DROWNING OF LOUIS NEEF.

Coroner Flanagan on Sunday gave permission for the removal to Chicago of the body of Louis Neef, the 3-year-old boy who was drowned in the water-tank of the William Fletcher. The inquest will be held some day during the present week. It is now said that Mrs. Neef was in no immediate want of funds, and that she will only be delayed in her departure for Chicago with the body of her child until the arrival of her husband, who has been telegraphed, and has signified his intention of coming to this City to accompany his wife and son Otto to their home. It is supposed by the Captain of the steamer that the man-hole plate had been removed by one of the emigrant passengers, and that the child in playing about it fell in. Mrs. Neef found some acquaintances in this City with whom she spent Sunday, and with whom she will remain until she can leave for Chicago.

DOWN-TOWN REVIVALISTS.

A PRAYER-MEETING IN UNDERWRITERS' HALL—THE MINING EXCHANGE NOT OPENED FOR THE PURPOSE.

Notice was given nearly two weeks ago that a meeting would be held somewhere in the neighborhood of Wall street for the purpose of bringing the rich and the poor together, and making known the necessities of the poorer class to those who could assist them. On Dec. 8 the Mining Exchange considered and filed a request of Mr. Henry Kimball that a meeting should be held in the rooms of the association for charitable purposes, and passed the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Secretary notify Mr. Henry Kimball that the board cheerfully accedes to his request to grant the use of the rooms for a meeting for the purpose of conferring together and devising means to meet the wants of the poor in these lower wards, and to improve their condition, and that the rooms of the Exchange are hereby tendered on any day they may select, at 3 o'clock P. M.

A meeting was called to assemble in the Exchange at 3:30 o'clock yesterday, but at that hour the attendants at the Exchange declined to allow a prayer-meeting to be held there, saying they had not been notified of the purpose of the friends of Mr. Kimball, and that they had understood that the meeting was to be a charitable rather than an evangelistic one. Mr. Tuttle, the President, even showed his willingness to allow a prayer-meeting to be held there once, but that he had not understood that to be the main purpose in asking for the use of the hall. The leaders in the prayer-meeting plan then adjourned to Underwriters' Hall, No. 156 Broadway. Nearly 100 persons assembled there. Rev. Mr. Huntington, an Episcopal clergyman, was called to the chair, and devotional exercises were maintained with great earnestness for more than an hour. In the course of an exhortation by Mr. Kimball, that gentleman declared that the foundation-stone of things in Wall street was wrong; that the speculation carried on there was wicked, and he was glad they had not obtained the Exchange, because they could not have said that there. He was ready to make a confession—that while he was an employe in the house of a prominent banking firm, he was advised to popularize certain bonds that had become unpopular and worthless, and he had done it, and they were sold. Mr. B. B. Dyer, in the business meeting that followed the devotional exercises, reported from the Committee on Post Office that he had addressed Postmaster James about the old Dutch Church, and had been informed that there would probably be no difficulty about securing the church for the purposes desired. A letter of inquiry had been sent to the Supervising Architect at Washington, in whose care the building remains at present, and he was awaiting a reply. Mr. Kimball read the letter of Mr. Foster, of the Mining Exchange Executive Committee, tendering the use of the room for a "public meeting," and Mr. Peck Smith, of the Board of Brokers, was chosen Chairman for the meeting to be held to-morrow at the same time and in the same place. No illusion was made to plans for the alleviation of the poor of the lower wards.

ARMORY RENTS.

THE AMOUNTS CLAIMED AND THE SUMS ALLOWED BY THE COMMISSION.

The following is a statement of the claims made for rents of armories and drill-rooms in this City, and the amounts allowed by the Armory Commissioners:

Claimants.	Claims, with Interest to Dec. 1, 1876.	Amounts Allowed, without interest.
W. D. T. and E. A. Manice	$69,322 74	$32,500 00
Gen. T. Dill	71,122 62	32,500 00
William Lalor	6,709 76	3,150 00
William C. Dickel	23,773 32	10,000 00
B. K. Thurber	15,563 57	4,500 00
Henry Mason	7,001 51	6,333 00
D. D. Kirby	58,596 46	11,000 00
N. G. Hall	56,231 00	55,000 00
E. P. Stevens	127,174 21	47,500 00
T. B. Allen, Executor	39,203 61	13,500 00
Otto Meyer	37,720 30	15,000 00
William J. Syerson and G. W. Syerson	34,676 38	22,500 00
Totals	$539,145 38	$233,483 00

There are yet claims amounting to about $100,000 to be adjudicated.

WRECKED AND DISABLED VESSELS.

The steam-ship Perit, which last week went ashore on Chatham Beach, Mass., with a cargo of fish and potatoes, and which it was expected would be safely got off, will now prove a total loss. At the office of Gerhard & Brewer, the agents of the vessel in this City, it was believed that the vessel was insured, but it could not yesterday be stated positively. The ship Simla, which went ashore on Barnegat Beach, New-Jersey, and which went to pieces with the action of the sea, is to be sold at auction on the beach. The steam-ship Amérique had not, last evening, been floated off Seabright Beach, but the Coast Wrecking Company were confident that they would be able to get her off before the end of this week. A new pilot will be sent to the vessel to-day. The trial of Pilot Wern, which had been appointed to take place before the Pilot Commissioners to-day, has been postponed, no complaint having yet been made against him. It will be deferred until the report of Capt. Pouzoiz is made.

DISCORDANT DEMOCRATS.

A telegram from Concord, N. H., to the Boston Journal of Monday, says: "The bad feeling between the Bourbon Democrats and the Young Democracy, which came to the surface at their recent State Convention, has not softened down any, and it looks as if there may be a squally time in the party over the Gubernatorial nomination. Quite a number of the leaders of the Young Democracy are determined that they will not support Daniel Marcy under any circumstances, and the Bourbons are considerably alarmed in view of the situation. There is reason to believe that there was in Concord yesterday a secret consultation between a few men representing both wings of the party. It is understood that the McKean men took ground that under the circumstances there was but one judicious way open to Mr. Marcy, which is to decline the nomination. The Bourbons have promised to inform Mr. Marcy of the situation and to express to him their belief that if he accepts the nomination his support would in all probability fall considerably below the party vote. The idea was entertained that Mr. Marcy would have too much pride to run unless he could have the united support of his party. It is reported that if Marcy accepts the nomination tickets will be printed by the young Democrats and distributed through the State, bearing the name of McKean for Governor, the remainder having the names of the regular Democratic nominees. The Bourbons say that if any game of that kind is attempted they will retaliate on the young Democracy by cutting the names of Sullowav, of Franklin, and Kent, of Lancaster, in the Second and Third Congressional Districts, and voting for Hon. E. C. Bailey, of Contoocook, and Hon. John T. Sinclair, of Bethlehem. It is well known that many of the older men of the party were dissatisfied with the nominations of Sulloway and Kent. A rumor was circulated yesterday that the McKean men are to hold a secret convention within a few days, but we could not trace the rumor to any reliable source. It is certain that the Democrats will be obliged to make some satisfactory arrangement with the McKean men on the Governor question before they can open the campaign on their part with any respectable show of strength. It is said that Congressman Jones, of the First District, who will be a candidate for re-election, was at the bottom of the renomination of Marcy, but that Jones himself is alarmed at the shape the matter has taken. The Democrats admit privately that unless the Gubernatorial question is satisfactorily adjusted, they have no hope of carrying any one of the Congressional districts."

ESCAPED ONE DEATH TO MEET ANOTHER.

The Fredonia (Chautauqua County) Advertiser of the 19th inst. says: "On Wednesday last, about 7 o'clock, Mr. H. P. Barnhard, of Albion, this State, started from Busti for Jamestown, and when only a short distance on his journey he was run into by a team attached to a hayrack on sleds, and mismanaged by a drunken driver named John Swartz, a resident of Busti, who, when under the influence of liquor, is a reckless man. Mr. Barnhard, horse, and cutter were hurled in a confused mass upon one side of the road, and the cause of the injury, crazy with drink, continued on without attempting to assist him. Mr. Barnhard was thrown beneath the horse, which must have crushed and killed him almost instantly, as the corpse was found with the animal lying across his breast and completely hiding him from sight. Half an hour elapsed before the accident was discovered. The body was taken back to the Busti Houses and a physician summoned, who pronounced the man as having been dead some time. Coroner Bly, of Jamestown, was sent for and held an inquest. Mr. Barnhard was about 40 years of age, and leaves a wife and two children. It is rather a singular circumstance that Mr. Barnhard escaped being on the fatal train which plunged into the gulf at Ashtabula though a miscalculation of time, which delayed him over a few hours. His wife mourned him as dead several days, when she heard from him at Jamestown."

A NERVINE ASYLUM.

The Boston Journal says that John N. Barbour, Esq., Executor of the estate of Seth Adams, has applied to the Legislature of Massachusetts for a charter to establish the institution for the benefit of nervous persons, provided for in the will of Mr. Adams, and that a draft of a charter has been prepared and is now in the hands of the Judiciary Committee, introducing the names of said Barbour, James C. Davis, Aquila Adams, William C. all, Emory Washburn, George C. Richardson, John M. S. Williams, J. Warren Merrill, Edward S. Tobey, D. W. Gooch, Alpheus Hardy, Otis Cloon and others as incorporators.

CITY AND SUBURBAN NEWS.

NEW-YORK.

Custom-house Inspectors yesterday seized 700 boxes of cigars on board the Havana steam-ship City of Merida, and 400 bundles of cigarettes on board the steam-ship France, of the General Transatlantic Company's line.

Henry Yesebt, the Belgian forger—particulars of whose transactions have been published in THE TIMES—was yesterday turned over to the Belgian Consul and sent to Philadelphia, from which port he will be taken to Europe on one of the steam-ships of the American Line.

Rev. George W. Samson, D. D., will lecture this evening, at the chapel of the First Baptist Church, on "Africa, its Settlement, its People, its Commercial and Religious History." The proceeds of the lecture will be appropriated for the benefit of the Consolidated American Baptist Missionary Convention.

A correspondent writes complaining that the ordinary barrel of potatoes, which contains two and three-fourth bushels, has been reduced by dishonest dealers so that it now holds but two and one-half bushels, and that similar sharp practices are carried on at all the City markets, especially in the sale of fruit and vegetables.

The William Herring Class Union, one of the best of the public school associations, gave a very enjoyable reunion and dinner at Ittner's restaurant, corner of Grand and Mercer streets, last evening. Old stories of school days were told, and toasts to missing and dead comrades, no less than to the living, were given and responded to.

Christain Morgan, who was committed by United States Commissioner Shields last Saturday for passing counterfeit 50-cent pieces, stated that he procured the spurious coins from Lewis Welker, who was arrested yesterday and taken before the Commissioner. He denied that he was implicated, but was nevertheless held in $1,000 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

A team of horses attached to a carriage belonging to Mrs. Leverick, of No. 36 West Forty-seventh street, became frightened yesterday and ran away. The carriage was upset at Sixth avenue and Thirty-fifth street, and Mrs. Leverick and a lady who was with her were thrown out. The driver received a severe scalp wound, and one of the horses was badly injured, but the ladies escaped unhurt.

The funeral of the late Assemblyman James Healey took place yesterday morning. The remains were taken to St. Peter's Church, where a solemn high requiem mass was chanted by Rev. Fathers Cooley, Kelly, and Corkey. The pall-bearers were Judge Duffy, ex-Judge Quinn, Patrick Kerrin, Edward Burke, William B. Kirk, James J. Devlin, P. B. Spinola, and Col. M. C. Murphy. The remains were interred in Calvary Cemetery.

The ladies' reception of the Union League Club will take place on next Thursday. Among the representatives of foreign Governments who have signified their intention to be present are Baron Blanc, Italian Minister; M. Aristarchi Bey, Turkish Minister; Mr. De Vaurgias, Secretary of the French Legation, and Cheavalier Bainotti, Vice Consul of Italy. Several distinguished representatives of our own Government have expressed their intention to be present.

The Grand Army of the Republic, State of New-York, will hold their annual encampment, at Irving Hall, on Wednesday and Thursday next. Commander James Tanner will call the meeting to order, and Mayor Ely will deliver an address of welcome to the comrades. The election of officers will take place on Thursday afternoon, which will be followed by the regular annual meeting of the Board of Trustee, and the election of six Trustees for the ensuing year. Thursday night a grand banquet will be given at Irving Hall.

Rev. Dr. Scudder delivered a discourse yesterday before the meeting of the Methodist ministers, his subject being, "Ought we to Encourage Evangelism?" In the course of his remarks he referred to the work performed by Moody and Sankey, and expressed the opinion that their labors would not result in any permanent good. Rev. Dr. Taylor also spoke on the subject of evangelical labor, and dwelt at some length on the work being done in foreign countries, and ended his remarks by deprecating the cutting down of the appropriations for foreign missions for 1877.

BROOKLYN.

During the past week the Ladies' Benevolent Association have relieved 24 destitute families.

On Sunday afternoon the Sunday-school room of Dr. Budington's church, corner of Clinton and Lafayette avenues, was entered by means of false keys and $20 stolen.

The proposals for cleaning the streets of the city during the present year will be opened by the Commissioners of City Works to-day. The bids are expected to be lower than those of last year.

Controller Burrill has informed Mr. Theodore Rich, Bond Clerk in the Controller's office, that his services will not be required after Feb. 1. Mr. Rich was formerly Deputy Controller, has many years' experience, and is one of the most efficient, if not the most efficient, men in the department. Controller Burrill will appoint in Mr. Rich's place Mr. Robert Courtney, one of his personal friends.

James L. Manker, the young man who was caught in the act of passing counterfeit $10 bills, on Saturday last, was committed by United States Commissioner Winslow yesterday for examination. Manker objected to have his photograph taken in order that it might be placed in the rogue's gallery, on the ground that it might injure him hereafter. The objection was overruled by Detective Charles Frost.

The heirs of the Cowenhoven estate, which has been so long in litigation, advertise to sell by public auction that portion of the estate forming a part of Atlantic avenue. The advertisement announces that "the Belgian pavement, curb, gutter and flag-stones, lamp posts, and gas mains, will be sold as a separate parcel." It will be remembered that the city claimed the property and that the Court of Appeals decided against the claim.

Anthony Simmons, (colored,) of No. 573 Baltic street, was committed by Justice Walsh yesterday on a charge

The New-York Times.

VOL. XXVI.....NO. 7914. NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 24, 1877. PRICE FOUR CENTS.

THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR

DEBATE ON THE ELECTORAL BILL.

SENATOR SHERMAN'S ARGUMENT AGAINST THE MEASURE—THE BILL UNCONSTITUTIONAL AND LOOSELY CONSTRUCTED—SPEECH FROM MR. CONKLING WITHOUT COMPLETING HIS ARGUMENT—LABORED EFFORTS TO EXPLAIN HIS CHANGE OF VIEWS SINCE 1872.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—The debate on the Compromise bill which provides for the counting of the Electoral vote, was continued in the Senate to-day. Again the galleries were filled to overflowing and every seat on the floor was occupied. Among those present were Gen. Sherman, ex-Gov. Foote, of Mississippi, Gen. Patterson, of Philadelphia, Messrs. Payne, Adams, Kasson, MacDougall, and 25 or 30 other members of the House. Senator Sherman was the first speaker. He made a strong argument against the bill. Regarding the statement which had been made that the Justices of the Supreme Court who were to sit on the joint commission had been selected according to geographical division, he spoke at considerable length. He was even stronger and plainer than Senator Morton in denying that such was the case. He said that there could be no doubt that they were selected because of their political opinions, and for no other reason. They were not allowed to exercise much power, however, for by the provision of the bill one man, a Justice, to be selected by the other four, would have the decision of the case all in his own hands. He would virtually make a President of the United States. This was bad enough, but the manner in which this one great final Judge was to be selected was worse. For his election there was no provision; nor his appointment there was also none. He was to be chosen by his four associates in any way which might suit their fancy. They might play a game of cards for him; they might pull straws, throw dice, or toss a penny to decide who should be the President-maker, for the man whom they selected would certainly deserve to be called by that name. This was not only unconstitutional; it was in direct opposition to the spirit and letter of American institutions. Senator Sherman continued in this strain at considerable length, and then in a very strong legal argument, and by quotations from numerous authorities, he proved the absurdity and unconstitutionality of the bill.

Senator Morton was too weak to continue his speech, and at the conclusion of Mr. Sherman's address Senator Conkling obtained the floor. He delivered a carefully-studied and well-considered speech, which said everything in favor of the bill which it was possible to say, but which fell far short of proving either its constitutionality or its necessity at this time. The point of his argument was that the power to count the votes rested with the two houses of Congress; that up to this time they had delegated that power to the President of the Senate, subject, however, to their control and supervision, and that now, as they had every right to do, they were simply asked by the bill under discussion to delegate the power to settle the vexed Presidential question in a way that would give satisfaction to all classes of the people. Referring briefly and incidentally to the Colorado case, he expressed undoubted confidence that the commonwealth named was as much a State in the Union as was New-York. Mr. Conkling has kept pretty clear of complications and contradictions of his former record, but in claiming for the two houses the right to act judicially he ran against an amendment which he offered to the resolution for the rejection of the votes from Georgia cast for Greeley in 1872. He endeavored, as any bright-witted man under like circumstances would, to extricate himself from that inconsistency, and he did it by claiming or seeming to claim that his amendment, at the time, referred only to the Greeley votes, and was intended to prevent the Senate from affirming that a dead man might be made President. The resolution referred to had gotten into the following form, and a vote was about to be taken:

Resolved, That the Electoral votes of Georgia cast for Horace Greely be counted.

Mr. Conkling offered an amendment, in these words, to be added to the resolution:

"The functions of the joint convention being ministerial merely, and this question being independent of the question of the effect of the votes or of the count."

This having been decided out of order, he changed the form of it and tried a second time to have it adopted, this time his amendment beginning, "That the function of the two houses in respect of the count of votes being ministerial," &c. And after such a record Mr. Conkling argues that the houses may exercise judicial functions. Clearly that was not his opinion in 1872, though instead of admitting that he has changed his mind, he reasons out perfect consistency. In continuation the Senator quoted largely from legal authorities in support of his position, and he had only finished half his speech when, owing to the lateness of the hour, the Senate went into executive session and then adjourned.

Mr. Edmunds moved a recess till evening, intending to urge a vote to-night; but Mr. Conkling was unwilling to go on after a recess, though willing to continue and conclude without a recess. Mr. Edmunds then moved the executive session, and gave notice he would ask for a vote to-morrow. His treatment of Conkling was quite in contrast with his treatment of Mr. Sherman, an opponent of the bill, yesterday, when the latter asked for the extension of a very usual courtesy from the Senate. There was, perhaps, another reason for the adjournment, for it would have been strikingly indecent for the committee to force Mr. Morton to make reply late at night to a speech lasting several hours by one of its own members. There is considerable feeling on this point, as it is felt that the committee, if it intended to force a vote in two days, should give Senators not on the committee a chance to express their views.

THE PRESSURE TO PASS THE BILL.

PROBABILITY OF A VOTE IN THE SENATE TO-DAY AND A MAJORITY FOR THE MEASURE—THE OPPOSITION IN THE HOUSE—A VIGOROUS DEBATE EXPECTED—A PANIC IN THE SENATE AND A RACE FOR SUPPOSED POPULARITY.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—The change of programme in the management of the Compromise bill contemplates its passage in the Senate to-morrow night, and in the House within 48 hours thereafter, if not indeed on the next day. The debate in the Senate is difficult to control, but there is not likely to be any factious, nor, indeed, any other opposition to action to-morrow. The session was last night very late, but the end will probably come before midnight. The bill will almost certainly pass, as no more than 17 or 18 votes against it can now be certainly counted upon, while the number necessary for a majority is confidently counted. The sanguine advocates of the bill claim that the affirmative vote will reach two-thirds in both houses. The strongest and most interesting debate will be in the House, where a fixed number of hours will be devoted to it, and everybody will speak under pressure, and without repetition. All that Mr. Conkling said to-day could have been much better put in the space of half an hour, if he had been speaking under the House rules. There will be few speeches an hour long, and then will follow the intense pithy, 10 or 15 minute speeches. Gen. Garfield will probably be well enough to make vigorous opposition, and the bill will not get through without some sharp assaults. A few days ago there seemed the best hope of defeating the bill in the Senate, but now that hope centres almost entirely in the House. When the minds of Senators have been made up, they are not changed by speeches. There is now a panic in that body, and some of those that have been called leaders are beginning to rival each other in the race for what they suppose is popularity. That feeling has not yet much pervaded the House, but it may, as Prof. Seelye made a very powerful sentimental appeal for the bill to-day, while talking on another subject. His speech was worth a dozen constitutional arguments, for the whole compromise rests upon sentimental foundations, and its friends would not care if it were proved to a demonstration to be in violation of all constitutional provisions and principles of law; neither do many of them care to have it proved constitutional.

THE NEW-YORK REPUBLICANS.

DEBATE ON SENATOR WOODIN'S RESOLUTIONS IN THE STATE SENATE—THE DEMOCRATS SOLIDLY IN FAVOR OF THE CONGRESSIONAL PLAN—THEY FILIBUSTER TO PREVENT THE RESOLUTIONS FROM BEING PASSED.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 23.—The Woodin resolutions on the subject of counting the Electoral vote came up as the special order in the Senate this morning, and were discussed until 2 o'clock, when the Senate took a recess until evening. Mr. Jacobs indicated at the outset the tactics to be adopted by the Democrats, by moving to postpone the consideration of the resolutions for a week. On this motion the merits of the whole question were discussed for an hour or two, when the Senate, by a strict party vote, refused to postpone. Jacobs then offered a substitute for Woodin's resolutions, setting forth that the Legislature of New-York indorsed the plan of the Congressional committee now pending in Washington, and called upon the Senators and Representatives in Congress from this State to vote for it. More discussion ensued, when this was also voted down by a party vote. The discussion of the merits of the resolutions was then resumed, and continued till the recess. No new light was thrown on the question by the discussion, which was in a great measure of a personal character. The significant fact, however, was brought out by the vote on Jacobs' substitute, that the Democrats in the upper house of the Legislature are unanimous in support of the plan now pending before Congress. So far as is known the Democrats of the lower house are equally unanimous in its favor, while, with a few exceptions, the Republicans of both houses are equally unanimous in opposition to it. The inference at first blush would be that the Democrats think the plan will result in giving them the Presidency, and probably there are some who feel quite confident that this will be the result. But the fact that they are united in favoring the plan is conclusive evidence that they have no confidence in the position hitherto so stoutly maintained by the leading men of their party. It, as they have claimed with so much bluster, Tilden was legally and constitutionally elected, and had got to be inaugurated at all hazards, why should they be so eager to snatch an opportunity to put his rights in jeopardy? The truth is, that Democrats who were sufficiently well informed to have any opinions on the subject were gradually settling down to the conviction that the law and the Constitution were on the side of the Republicans, and that their enforcement would result in making Hayes the next President. And the reason why they are so elated at the plan of the Congressional committee is because it gives them one more chance to smuggle in their candidate where they supposed there was no chance left. The Republicans, on the other hand, are united in their opposition, because they look upon it as a surrender of a clear constitutional right to Democratic threats and bluster, and as giving up a sure thing for an uncertainty. They do not consider it as a "compromise" in any sense, but as a concession. The remarkable spectacle was presented during the discussion of Senator Jacobs playing the rôle of champion and eulogist of Roscoe Conkling. From the flattering terms in which he is spoken of by the Democrats around the Capitol one would infer that he was their prospective candidate for the Presidency. At all events they would not hesitate to promise him the succession provided he would make Tilden President, but, like other men before him, he would have to take his chances on the fulfillment of the promise.

At the evening session the debate was resumed and continued for two hours, the Democrats still persisting in their tricks to stave off a vote on the resolutions by motions to adjourn and by offering substituted. Mr. Prince made a telling speech in which he ridiculed with biting sarcasm the remarks of Starbuck this morning about the sublime attitude of forbearance exhibited by the Democratic Party in the present emergency. Senators Sprague and Vedder, while approving of the plan of settlement now pending before Congress, for the reasons stated in this morning's TIMES, yet supported the Woodin resolutions as not being in conflict therewith. It is thought a vote will be reached to-morrow, as by that time, it is believed, the more sensible Democrats in the Senate will begin to appreciate the disgraceful attitude they have assumed in trying to prevent the majority of the Legislature from expressing their opinions upon a subject which was forced upon their attention by the Governor in his annual Message. They profess, in their speeches on the subject, to be eminently candid, fair, and dispassionate; and yet, as Mr. McCarthy told them this morning, after having got the benefit of Tilden's partisan, one-sided, and false treatment of the question in Gov. Robinson's Message, they now seek by contemptible parliamentary tricks to prevent the Republicans, who control both branches of the Legislature, from giving their views to the public.

THE PROCEEDINGS IN DETAIL.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

When the special order taking up Mr. Woodin's resolutions was reached, Mr. Jacobs moved to lay them on the table until Thursday next.

Mr. Woodin said the resolutions were not introduced with a view of affecting the action of Congress, or anybody, but were intended as the expression of the Legislature of this State. They were introduced simply as pertinent to the Message of the Governor. This is the time for legislative bodies to speak their views on this overshadowing question.

Mr. Jacobs said it was remarkable that the subject alluded to should just have reached the attention of the Senator whom the Congress of the United States had it before them. He would like to take a distinguished Republican Senator by the hand for his manliness in rising above party spirit. He concluded by withdrawing his motion.

Mr. Kennedy moved to postpone the resolutions until Tuesday next. He thought it would be deplorable to force this question upon this Senate while such important events were transpiring at Washington.

Mr. Cole said were was a necessity for the representatives of the people speaking out and expressing their views on this all-important question. He hoped a vote would be had to-day.

Mr. Starbuck remarked that thoughtful minds were impressed with the feeling that this Government is seriously threatened by the present state of affairs. A distinguished and careful United States Senator warned the supporters of radicalism against this threatening question. There is wisdom in the motion to postpone. A President reaching that high office in any other way than by the legitimate voice of the people will not be respected by the people.

Mr. Sprague answered that he did not know but in politics information and intimidation mean the same thing. He felt that the Representatives at Washington would be glad to hear from this Senate on this Presidential question. The Legislature has a right to dissent from the opinion of the Governor and express that dissent in respectful language.

Mr. Woodin remarked that the resolutions were in perfect harmony with any constitutional plan which Congress might adopt to settle the question. He gave notice to all the world that the resolutions were not intended to embarrass the distinguished Senator from this State. He regarded Roscoe Conkling as peerless in the United States Senate, and no man in the State had a more earnest respect from him [Mr. Woodin,] than the Senator he had named. The Democrats ask us to keep quiet, and yet on the 8th of January last the Democrats were invited to meet in Washington. What were they to meet for—to drink the favorite Democratic beverage in Washington? Ah, no. The resolutions before us contain simple constitutional provisions, and he would like to hear the Democrats discuss them—not seek to postpone action on them.

Mr. Starbuck said he had never seen the ordinarily judicial and calm Senator from the Twenty-fifth [Mr. Woodin] so impassioned as to-day when speaking of these resolutions. Is not his excitement one of the best arguments in favor of postponing the vote on the question before us until another time? It is wise to postpone the question until we have further information of what our representatives in Washington have done. There never has been a time when the Democratic Party has so challenged the admiration of the world as it does to-day. History does not furnish another example of such patriotism as is shown by this party now so quietly waiting a decision on this question. That party gave a majority of 240,000 on the popular vote for its candidates and are waiting quietly for the result, not proposing to cast the country into a shoreless sea by any action on its part.

The question of postponing was then lost—yeas, 13; nays, 18.

The question then recurring on the passage of the resolutions, Mr. JACOBS argued that, in questions of such magnitude as these, it was but right that they should go to a committee, and he therefore moved to refer the resolutions to the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. Gerard supported Mr. Jacobs' motion, saying he had studied the question of the constitutionality of the resolutions very carefully, and he confessed that he wanted more light on them, and he expected to get more information from his brother Senators. He quoted at length from a speech of Senator Edmunds in support of the opinion that the President of the Senate has not the right to count the vote of the Electoral College. He also quoted from a speech made by Senator Conkling in February, 1875, in support of the position that the two houses should count the ballots.

Mr. Lamont said that he was at a loss to determine the meaning of the resolutions. He desired to have the opinion of the Judiciary Committee on the fourth resolution relative to counting the vote. He wanted the Senate to agree on resolutions which would indicate that the Senators love their country more than they do party.

Mr. CARPENTER regretted that there was any necessity for resolutions of this character. It was proper, however, that the Senate should express itself in reply to the paragraph in the Governor's Message on this subject. He [Mr. Carpenter] quoted the paragraph from the Governor's Message bearing on the counting of the Presidential vote. He quoted from the United States Constitution the passages bearing on the opening and counting of the Electoral vote. He thought the true construction of the section he read was that the Vice President of the United States (the President of the Senate) should open and count the votes. No one can seriously claim that Congress has the right to pass upon the votes from each State. Congress could just as well elect a President as to make itself a Returning Board to pass upon the votes of any State. The business men of the country wish quiet and prosperity, but they do not want to tear the Constitution in shreds for any temporary peace. They desire peace secured in a constitutional way.

Mr. Jacobs withdrew his motion to refer, and offered the following:

Resolved, If the Assembly concur, that we approve the bill now before Congress providing for a determination of all questions relating to the Electoral vote as a wise, statesman-like, and patriotic measure, and we hereby request the Senators and Representatives from New-York to support the said bill.

Mr. Jacobs moved to substitute his resolution for Mr. Woodin's, and that it be referred to the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. McCarthy said that two years ago was the first time that any Governor had used the Message for personal political purposes. Not satisfied with leaving this question of the Presidential count to Congress, Mr. Tilden has inserted in the present Governor's Message this firebrand with reference to the Presidential question, and now the Democratic Senators object to the majority of the Legislature putting themselves on record as opposed to the Governor's opinion as expressed in the last paragraph of his Message.

Mr. Jacobs' proposed substitute was lost—yeas, 13; nays, 18.

Mr. Bradley remarked that he recognized the right of the Senate to express its views on any public question over which there was a dispute or controversy, and he hoped the great Presidential question now before the country would receive careful, calm, and cool consideration. When the election closed the people were prepared to receive the result, and they were equally ready to-day to receive the decision, if such result is reached in a constitutional manner. The President of the Senate has no powers except such as he derives from parliamentary rules and the Constitution, and the latter instrument does not give him the right to count the Electoral ballot. The framers of the Constitution did not mean to give the Vice President the right to count the vote. Mr. Bradley quoted at great length from the official record of last March in support of this statement. Resuming, he said: Is there any great emergency which should now require the President of the Senate to exercise a power he never exercised before? Federal office-holders and those desirous of place under the new Administration are clamorous for vesting such power in the President of the Senate.

At this point Mr. Jacobs moved to adjourn. Lost—yeas, 13; nays, 16.

Mr. Woodin moved to take a recess until 7:30 o'clock this evening. Lost—yeas, 14; nays, 14; the President voting in the negative.

Mr. Woodin again moved to take a recess until 7:30 o'clock this evening. Carried—yeas, 16; nays 10.

EVENING SESSION.

Mr. Bradley continued his remarks, saying: The Legislature of Louisiana had no right to submit to any body of men the power which the Constitution guaranteed to it as a legislative body. The power of review and revision result practically in the power of appointment. He believed in the preservation and the integrity of the States as the only true way of preserving this Republic. No distinguished citizen of this State received a large majority of the popular vote at the late election. Now, why is it that the power sought to be exercised by the President of the Senate was never done before? It is a product of a desire that party advantage may be secured. The resolutions now under consideration indicate that it is the duty of this officer (the President of the Senate) to count the vote. Partisan zeal should yield to wise statesmanship at this time. Is it surprising that the great business interests of the State should be disturbed, and appeals be sent in from all quarters for a quiet and peaceable constitutional settlement of the question? The tribunal sought to be appointed at Washington is made up of men of the highest character, and it seemed to be the wise settlement of this disturbing question. The question who shall be President is of little importance as compared with deciding who is elected by an honest canvass of the vote cast. He should regret to think that any Senator would support a measure because it would give any party advantage. The vote of the State of New-York, which contains one-tenth of the population and wealth of the nation, should be heard on this question.

Mr. Schoonmaker offered a preamble with the following resolution:

Resolved, That the plan proposed by the joint committees of the two houses of Congress for the peaceful and prompt settlement of the controverted questions relating to the last Presidential election, is approved by the Legislature of the state of New-York, and is commended to the people as a measure honorable to all parties and designed to secure, by equal tribunal and lawful methods, a just and unbiased determination to preserve the peace of the country and to restore confidence and prosperity in business pursuits, and that the Senators and Representatives in Congress from the State of New-York are respectfully requested to give said measure their earnest support.

Mr. Prince said he did not intend to make any general remarks, but intended to make one legal point; to state one legal proposition. He had changed his purpose of intended silence to present this point. After reading Senator Woodin's resolutions, he referred to the substitute of the Senator from the Fourteenth District, referring to the unsettled condition of the country. This uncertainty comes from the doubt whether the law is to be observed or not; whether 100,000 men are to assemble in Washington. There was every reason why this question should not be left to Congress. Congress in a certain contingency may elect a President, and shall have no part in counting the vote. While I am up I want to say a word or so in relation to the remarks of a Senator upon the 18th inst. about "the sublime spectacle of the Democratic Party and its attitude of patriotic forbearance." In the surroundings and purposes of the framers of the Constitution, and the language of the proposed amendments then offered, we have a sure guide. He then read from the proceedings of the convention. The committee of revision on the subject of the language reported back this provision changed from the original, that the President of the Senate should open the votes in the presence of Congress in Washington, to give force to their wishes and purpose. He proposed to go back to the intentions and expressions of those who framed the Constitution. If you can get at the meaning and purpose of those who placed the words in the Constitution, then you have a safe guide. They appointed a President of the Senate for the sole purpose of opening and counting the vote.

Mr. Vedder said the question before the people is not who shall decide what votes shall be counted. In 1821 a case arose as to one of the Electoral votes of Missouri, but the President was elected without the vote, and the manner of setting disputed Electoral votes was never adjudicated. He believed that the measure now before Congress was simply a joint resolution. Either house can rescind it at will. Whenever the Democratic Party rears its front, war and trouble follow in its wake. Congress is to be congratulated for following in the wake of a Republican Senator around this circle.

At 8:45 Mr. Wagstaff moved to adjourn. Lost—Yeas, 10; nays, 13.

Mr. Sprague said: It seems to be conceded that the Constitution of the United States does not furnish a guide as to what votes shall be counted. The Governor says in his Message that it has been the custom of both houses of Congress to exercise the right to count the vote. He therefore thought it eminently proper for the Senate to express its dissent from the expressed opinion of the Governor. The question of disputed succession has caused more bloodshed and internecine war than any other. It was never expected that any conflict would occur in counting the Electoral vote. Until the Vice President opens the votes it is not known who is claimed to be elected. The Constitution provides simply for the performance of a ministerial duty and there is no means for its deciding what votes may be counted. The "Slough of Despond" is based upon and filled with the broken personal wishes of the framers of the Constitution. It is easy for the Senate to pass resolutions; for newspaper men to publish column after column of argument on this question, but after all the grave responsibility rests with Congress. Such patriotic men as Conkling, Bayard, and others, will decide this question in accordance with the Constitution, and he was willing to yield his opinion in a great measure to their superior judgment and experience.

The Senate then adjourned.

UNANIMOUSLY OPPOSED TO IT.

A RESOLUTION AGAINST THE COMPROMISE ADOPTED IN THE NEW-JERSEY REPUBLICAN CAUCUS WITHOUT A DISSENTING VOTE.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

TRENTON, Jan. 23.—In the caucus of the Republican Legislature to-day, Gen. Sewell offered a resolution declaring against the compromise measure now pending in the houses of Congress providing a method for the counting of the Electoral votes of the States. There was no mention in the resolution of Senator Frelinghuysen's name, but the disapproval of his course in Congress on the point in question is none the less emphatic or direct on that account. There was no discussion over the bill; but the run of individual sentiment among the members, without exception, was decidedly in favor of the resolution, and it was adopted without a dissenting vote.

SENSIBLE OHIO REPUBLICANS.

LARGE MEETING IN CLEVELAND—UNANIMOUS OPPOSITION TO THE PROPOSED COMPROMISE.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 23.—A meeting of the representative Republicans of this city was held to-night to discuss the proposed compromise scheme for counting the Electoral vote. The feeling against the measure was strong and unanimous. Speeches were made by a number of prominent business men, all in opposition to the bill. The following resolution was unanimously adopted, and telegraphed to the Ohio Senators and Representatives at Washington:

Resolved, That the scheme for counting the Electoral vote, as reported by the joint committee of Congress, appears to us plainly without authority under the Constitution, injudicious, in whatever aspect it is considered, and fraught with the greatest danger to the Republic. We are firmly and unalterably opposed to it.

Cleveland Republicans have not been so earnest and unanimous upon any national question since the war.

NEW-HAMPSHIRE REPUBLICANS.

MEETING OF THE STATE COMMITTEE AT CONCORD—REPORTS FROM VARIOUS SECTIONS OF THE STATE—THE COMMITTEE DIVIDED ON THE ELECTORAL COMPROMISE BILL.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

CONCORD, Jan. 23.—A meeting of the Republican State Committee was held here this evening, and was very fully attended. Col. C. Roberts occupied the chair. The following officers for the permanent organization were elected; Chairman, E. M. Topliff, of Manchester; Secretary, G. E. Jenks, of Concord; Advisory Committee, Daniel Hall, of Dover, William E. Chandler, of Concord, A. W. Quint, of Manchester, C. H. Roberts, of Concord, A. A. Woolson, of Lisbon. The meeting was very harmonious, and the best of feeling prevailed. Reports from various sections of the State show the party to be thoroughly united and determined to achieve a substantial victory in the approaching election. They recognize the importance of a full Republican delegation in the next Congress, and are determined to return one. On the Electoral compromise now before Congress there was a diversity of opinion. Most of the committee are evidently opposed to the scheme, while others approve of the bill, and say that it is just, legal, and offers a practical solution to the Presidential controversy.

HOW A MAJORITY WAS SECURED.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED IN INDIANAPOLIS WHICH WERE PREPARED IN LOUISVILLE—A SHARP TRICK, AND ONLY TWO MAJORITY SECURED.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 23.—The resolutions passed to-day by the Indianapolis Board of Trade in favor of the Congressional Compromise bill were adopted by a majority of only two votes, after a very earnest opposition. It has transpired that the resolutions were prepared in Louisville and sent up here to the Democrats, and the whole thing had the appearance of a set-up trick, as a number of Democratic members of the board were present who are not in the habit of attending, and the Republican members were caught unawares. The more the compromise measure is discussed here the less it is liked; but the belief is that it will pass, and the people have generally made up their minds to make the best of it.

OPINION IN MINNESOTA.

ADOPTION OF A RESOLUTION FAVORING THE BILL BY THE SENATE.

ST. PAUL, Jan. 23.—The Senate, which was in session this evening, passed a resolution urging Congress to adopt the plan of the Congressional Joint Committee for settling the Presidential question.

THE KANSAS LEGISLATURE.

A VOTE ON THE ELECTORAL BILL RECOMMENDATION POSTPONED.

TOPEKA, Jan. 23.—A resolution offered in the Senate yesterday to instruct the Kansas Congressional delegation to vote for the Compromise bill was postponed until Friday. The indications are that the resolution will not pass.

DEMOCRATS IN FAVOR OF THE BILL.

A MEETING AT HARRISBURG, PENN.—RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED—REPUBLICANS WHO FEAR TO STAND UP FOR THEIR RIGHTS.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

HARRISBURG, Jan. 23.—A meeting of citizens to express their views on the compromise bill now pending before Congress was held in this city this evening. The call for the meeting was signed by 33 persons, 18 of whom were Democrats, 12 Republicans, and three Liberals. The Court-house was well filled, but the audience was largely Democratic. In fact, the affair was gotten up by Democrats and managed by Democrats, in the interest of Democrats, the work being done by the few Republicans who encouraged the assemblage by their presence. The meeting was organized by the election of Hon. Francis M. Jordan as President. A committee was appointed to draft resolutions expressive of the sense of the meeting on the subject of the Electoral complications and the compromise measures proposed for their settlement. While the committee was engaged in this work the audience was addressed by Hon. L. W. Hall, who denied the right of the President of the Senate to count the Electoral votes. The Committee on Resolutions then reported the following, which were adopted, and the meeting hurriedly adjourned:

Whereas, The preservation of the National Union and the perpetuation of civil liberty should be a paramount consideration in the minds of all patriotic citizens; and, whereas Congress is now engaged in the consideration of a certain proposition for the settlement of the unfortunate dispute in regard to the Presidential election, the adoption of which, in our opinion, will restore tranquility to the country, and thus tend to perpetuate republican institutions; therefore,

Resolved, That in a question which belongs to a broad and conservative statesmanship—permanent and peaceful government—we deem it good to ignore party feeling and direct our efforts to the preservation of the Republic.

Resolved, That the Constitution of the United States and the several States contain clauses which require legislation to explain or carry them into effect, and at present, under the provisions of the Federal Constitution, in the absence of an explanatory statute, combined difficulties have arisen in the pending Presidential contest which demonstrate that legislation is necessary to carry out the peaceful intent of the Federal Constitution.

Resolved, That the plan reported by the joint committee of both houses of Congress, relative to counting the Electoral vote, and of deciding disputes that may arise in a question of such momentous consequence to the permanence of this Union and the cause of republican institutions throughout the world, meets our heartiest approval, and we recommend its immediate passage.

In this affair the "peace at any price" Republicans were made the cat's-paws to draw the chestnuts out of the fire. Only those Republicans who fear to stand up for their rights in the face of Democratic bluster gave their countenance to the meeting. The sentiment of the large majority of the Republicans of this city is hostile to surrender, or anything that looks like it. Believing Hayes and Wheeler to have been fairly elected, they insist on the declaration of their election in the manner in which former contests have been decided, and that to be followed by their inauguration. The compromise they regard as a surrender after a dearly won battle, and they do not wish the impression to go abroad that the Republicans of Harrisburg consider themselves responsible for this craven conduct of a few of their weak-kneed brethren.

ACTION IN CONNECTICUT.

THE SENATE RESOLUTION RECALLED FROM THE HOUSE AND LAID ON THE TABLE.

HARTFORD, Jan. 23.—In the Senate to-day the resolution passed last week indorsing the Congressional plan to count the vote for President was recalled from the House, reconsidered, and tabled. The plan is regarded less favorably by many members of the Legislature than when first announced.

THE MEETING IN BOSTON.

THE CONFERENCE BILL INDORSED—SUBSTANCE OF THE RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED.

BOSTON, Jan. 23.—In answer to the call for a meeting in Faneuil Hall to consider the Conference bill for the settlement of the Presidential question, about 4,000 people met in that building at noon to-day. Mayor Prince presiding. Resolutions read by Hon. William Gray were passed unanimously, and in substance are as follows:

That the thanks of this people be tendered to the committee of the two houses of Congress for their able, impartial, and successful efforts to present for the consideration of Congress a plan which should commend itself to the intelligence and judgment of the people of the country. That plan presented by the Committee in its spirit and in its provisions has our cordial approval, and we earnestly request and advise our Senators and Representatives to give to it their earnest support. That provision inviting five Judges of the Supreme Court of the United States to sit upon the commission, especially commends itself to our judgment. It seems wise to invoke the opinion of the members of this distinguished branch of the Government as to the law which should govern upon the facts to be inquired into, to the end that our Government may be a Government of laws, and not a Government of men. That we regard the plan proposed as entitled to the cordial approval of the whole people, as eminently wise, as tending to allay excitement and to restore confidence and to put into active employment the industry and enterprise of the land now waiting to be assured of an amicable adjustment of the question, and beyond all, as a new illustration of the strength of our Government, of the people, by the people, and for the people." That the officers of this meeting be directed to send a copy of its proceedings to the Senators and Representatives of Massachusetts, and to the Chairmen of the committees of the two houses of Congress.

Speeches were made by Hon. E. R. Mudge, P. A. Collins, Hon. J. C. Maddigan, and Gen. George H. Gordon.

THE OPINION OF GEN. CARL SCHURZ.

AN INTERVIEW WITH THE EX-SENATOR—HE EXPRESSES HIMSELF AS IN FAVOR OF THE BILL—HIS REASONS THEREFORE.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 23.—Ex-Senator Schurz, in an interview with the Agent of the Associated Press this afternoon, gave the following as his opinion on the Electoral bill now before the United States Senate: The bill reported by the Conference committees serves the end which ex-Senator Henderson and myself had in view when, several weeks ago, we addressed a petition to the Senate. It furnishes for the decision of the Presidential question a tribunal that has the character of impartiality, and whose verdict will command universal respect. I supported Gov. Hayes in the campaign in good faith, and for good reasons of public interest. If I had not strongly desired his success I should not have worked for him. In the same manner others have supported Gov. Tilden. But what the patriotic men of both parties want, and what the Republic needs, is a President whose legitimacy cannot be seriously disputed. To that end he must not be, and he must not appear to have been, lifted into the Presidency by the mere use of party power, the legality of which is doubtful. I do not mean to speak here of the troubles that might ensue. Perhaps the country would in any event generally acquiesce, for the sake of peace, but a President whose title can be seriously questioned would be miserably at the mercy of the opposition, which, of course, would grow immensely in consequence of that very fact. The moral authority of the National Government would be terribly weakened, and that is always a most dangerous condition of things in a republic. Moreover, the successful resort to the exercise of doubtful powers by a party, for the purpose of lifting its candidate into the Presidency, would be a precedent fraught with the most pernicious consequences for the future, for such precedents are always not only taken advantage of but improved upon by unscrupulous politicians. For those reasons I deem it of such extreme importance that the decision of the Presidential contest should be removed from the theatre of party strife, and referred to a tribunal not controlled by party interest. The trouble is that so many of our politicians see only the object immediately before them, and not what is to follow. I see it is argued in Congress by some Republicans that in the absence of legislation on that subject the President of the Senate has the constitutional power to count and declare the Electoral vote; and on the Democratic side that in the absence of legislation that principle of the twenty-second rule must be maintained which would put the decision into the hands of the Democratic majority of the House. The one theory, it is assumed, would elect Hayes, and the other Tilden. It is not improbable that in the absence of legislation both parties would assert their advantage, in consequence of which we might be cursed with a contest between a President and a counter-President. I will not argue now which of these two theories, if either, is right, but I do say that the absence of legislation is full of mischief and ought to be remedied without delay. To make an end of that mischievous absence of legislation in this case the Conference Committee has offered its bill. That measure may not be perfect; undoubtedly it is not, although, in my opinion, the objection that it is offensive to the spirit of the Constitution cannot be maintained; but the bill has that great virtue which in view of the alarms and perplexities of the present situation, is just the one needed. Put the question to anybody, "Do you expect or see any reason to fear that in deciding the Presidential contest the tribunal provided for by the conference bill will render an unjust verdict?" Every candid man will have to answer "No." But a tribunal of which no candid man has any reason to expect an unjust verdict is just the thing the country stands at present in extreme need of. This being so, party leaders should consider well whether they can afford to put their respective parties in a position in which they may appear to be afraid of a just verdict. I have no doubt that the opposition offered by some of the gentlemen in Congress to the bill proceeds from conscientious motives, but it is also a fact, which leading men should not overlook, that a political party opposing this bill will lay itself open to the suspicion of reposing more confidence in the power they wield than in the justice of their cause. In this respect the opponents of the measure render in my opinion, a very bad service to the respective candidate whose interests they seem to have at heart. If the Conference bill should be defeated, I am sure the party responsible for the defeat would sink under the distrust of the people. It is useless for them to argue how under the Constitution the vote should be counted in the absence of legislation, for here is legislation proposed to them, and upon their responsibility they have to vote for or against it. Here is a method offered to them by which they can give the country what it above all needs—a President, whose title is above dispute, and who will be clothed with that moral authority which the highest executive office in a republic can never lose without danger to the whole body politic. That method they have to accept or reject. As to the popular sentiment with regard to the Conference bill, I can only judge from my surroundings. In this community there seems to be scarcely any difference of opinion among the Republicans as well as Democrats. The feeling in favor of the bill is overwhelming. There are probably a few exceptions, but I have not seen them. From my correspondence I conclude that the feeling is similarly strong in other Western cities, although efforts seem to be made, here and there, mainly by active politicians, to make a show of an opposition movement.

BURLINGTON, IOWA, FAVORS THE BILL.

BURLINGTON, Jan. 23.—The Board of Trade to-day unanimously adopted resolutions heartily approving the compromise Electoral plan, and Iowa's Congressmen were requested to vote for it.

CONVICTION SACRIFICED TO EXPEDIENCY

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

So much has been said and written concerning the present condition of our political affairs, that I hesitate about addressing you. My anxiety for a discreet and permanent solution of pending difficulties, for all times, must be my excuse for intruding upon your attention.

The bill, the creation of the joint committee, seems to be the offspring of expediency rather than the work of men actuated by convictions of a solemn sense of duty, improved by well defined constitutional obligations. The motives of the gentlemen who have prepared and presented it cannot, I believe, be questioned. We have only to consider the measure as it now stands before the people—a compromise between two contending parties, wherein they have assumed powers which, under the Constitution, are placed in other hands. There is no provision in that instrument which gives the right to Congress to create a power which shall have the right of deciding and declaring who shall or shall not be President. This power by direct and plain words is given to the President of the Senate, who alone can act in presence of both houses. Does it not seem to be perfectly clear that this bill is a wholesale usurpation of a power which Congress even does not possess? The Constitution says: "The President of the Senate shall, in the presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, open all the certificates, and the votes shall then be counted." As soon as they are opened by the President of the Senate, then they shall be counted. It follows, as a matter of course, that the votes in the packages received and opened by that officer shall by him immediately be counted. He has to do two things, receive and count the Electoral votes, and in order to enable him to count correctly, he must have the power to decide, in the event of his receiving two packages from one State, which votes are legal and which are void. The provision cited must mean this or nothing. Nowhere does it give the legislative branch of our Government the right to interpret or pass upon the Electoral vote. If we had a Democratic President of the Senate, instead of a Republican, the Democratic House of Representatives would be as anxious to sustain a constitutional obligation as it is now willing to violate it. It is to be feared that the blusterings and threats of the Democratic Party have had their effect upon the Republican Senators who have joined in this unconstitutional scheme.

Should this measure become a law, and in the end accomplish its present object, what has the nation gained? One party of the two will have gained a President for four years—simply this and nothing more; the cause of our troubles will still remain, and at the end of four years we shall again pass through the same agitations arising from similar causes. There can be no reasonable doubt about the well-defined, deliberate, and positive intention on the part of the whites, in all of the States lately in rebellion, to prevent the negroes from voting unless they shall vote for candidates of the Democratic Party. To the existence of this general determination in the South, may be attributed all of our present perplexities. If at the last election the negroes had been allowed to vote without fear of violence or intimidation, Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi, Louisiana, Florida, Georgia, and the two Carolinas, would have given the Republican candidates a majority of at least 200,000 votes.

The Constitution provides that "the United States shall guarantee to every State in this Union a republican form of government," and inferentially to every citizen that he shall enjoy all the rights which are incident to a republican form of government. Can it be said of a citizen who is not allowed to vote as his conscience dictates, freely and openly, that he is protected in those rights which he is entitled to under the Constitution? It would be better that the negro should have been left in a condition of slavery, rather than to have given him his freedom, and not with it that protection which his intellectual and political infancy demands.

Humanity and a dignified respect for sacred political rights demand a legislative interpretation of this constitutional guarantee. If a citizen cannot be protected in his personal and political rights under such a form of government, how long will it be before he desires a change? And who can blame him, it in the end he should demand

GENERAL MISCELLANY.

THE STREET-CLEANING QUESTION.

PRESIDENT SMITH, OF THE POLICE DEPARTMENT, STILL DISSATISFIED—GRUMBLING AT THE ACTION OF THE BOARD OF APPORTIONMENT.

Gen. Smith, President of the Board of Police, who, since Jan. 1, has exhausted several quires of legal cap paper in a vain endeavor to convince the Board of Apportionment that the present appropriation for street-cleaning is inadequate for that purpose, yesterday addressed the following communication to Controller Kelly relative to the same subject:

Hon. John Kelly, Controller of New-York:

SIR: By order of the board I have the honor to transmit inclosed herewith, a requisition for the sum of $59,791 66, being one-twelfth of the sum appropriated by the Board or Apportionment for the Bureau of Street-cleaning for the year 1877, with a respectful request that it may be allowed presently, so that the sum may be available to defray the extraordinary expenses involved in the attempt to remove snow and ice from the streets of the City. In submitting this request it seems proper to state the circumstances which are supposed to justify the board in making the requisition and the Controller in furnishing the amount required.

On the 9th day of January inst. the board caused a requisition to be made upon the Controller, in pursuance of chapter 755 of the Laws of 1873, for a sum of money equal to one-twelfth of the whole sum appropriated to defray the expenses of the Bureau of Street-cleaning for the year 1877, with a statement of the sum appropriated by the Board or Apportionment for the Bureau of Street-cleaning for the year 1877, with a respectful request that it may be allowed presently, so that the sum may be available to defray the extraordinary expenses involved in the attempt to remove snow and ice from the streets of the City. In submitting this request it seems proper to state the circumstances which are supposed to justify the board in making the requisition and the Controller in furnishing the amount required.

On the 9th day of January inst. the board caused a requisition to be made upon the Controller, in pursuance of chapter 755 of the Laws of 1873, for a sum of money equal to one-twelfth of the whole sum appropriated to defray the expenses of the Bureau of Street-cleaning for the year 1877, to which the Controller responded by his warrant, No. 6,416, dated January 9, 1877, for the sum of $59,791 66. Of that sum $625 is applicable to the expenses of certain scows furnished by the Board of Police, in pursuance of the statute, to receive the ashes, garbage, or rubbish collected by steam vessels navigating the waters of the harbor, (see section 13, chapter 148, of the Laws of 1873.) The balance, $59,791 66, is applicable to the expenses of street-cleaning in the month imposed upon the board by chapter 677 of the Laws of 1872. The sum last above mentioned has not yet been received by the board, but is expected in the ordinary course of business before the close of the month of January inst. Prior to the close of the year 1876, the sum appropriated for street-cleaning for that year had been so far expended as to require a reduction of force by the Street-cleaning Bureau, and the omission of needed street-cleaning work in numerous streets of the City. It appears by a careful estimate of the unpaid obligations of the bureau for 1876, consisting of bills not yet rendered, that when the bills are all liquidated, the unexpended balance for that year will be less than $1,000. The charter is supposed to prohibit, under the menace of misdemeanor, heads of departments from expending moneys appropriated for one year to defray the obligations of any other year, and from expending moneys appropriated for one purpose to defray the expenses incurred for any other purpose. At the opening of the year 1877 the board were and still are without any moneys to their credit applicable to the liquidation of expenses of street-cleaning for the current month. The Board of Police, in their departmental estimate, furnished to the Board of Apportionment and to the Common Council, asked for the appropriation of the sum of $50,000 to defray the expenses of removing snow and ice. This item was stricken out of the departmental estimate, and on the 30th of December last, the Board of Apportionment allowed the sum of $725,000 for street-cleaning, accompanied by an elaborate enumeration of the purposes to which the money is to be applied, from which enumeration the removal of snow and ice was omitted.

The board were in great doubt as to the legality of using any portion of the money so appropriated for removing snow and ice, and were advised that no money had been specifically appropriated for that purpose. On the day after the Board of Apportionment made the appropriation in question there commenced the great snow storm by which the entire blockade of all the streets of New-York, and induced a vigorous demand for expenditure of money for its removal. Sympathizing with the public in the desire for relief from the embarrassment, and feeling assured that the sum of $725,000, the smallest appropriation ever made to the board for street-cleaning purposes, and being confident that the sum would prove insufficient to meet the unavoidable expenses attending street-cleaning, (omitting the removal of snow and ice,) the board, on the 4th of January, made an application to the Board of Apportionment for a transfer to the account of 1877, to be used in the removal of snow and ice, from the unexpended balances of 1874-5, of a sum of money sufficient to enable them to meet the demands of the public for the removal of snow and ice. In that application they set forth some of the reasons why, in their view, the appropriation ought to be granted. The application was, notwithstanding, denied. These circumstances seem to the board to be a practical construction by the Board of Apportionment, which is clothed with absolute power of limiting expenditures) of the statute under which the board exercises the power of street-cleaning adverse to the exercise of that power by the Legislature, and as a protection against the policy of its exercise. To settle the legal question as far as possible without a judicial decision, the board on the 9th day of January instant, supplied to the Counsel to the Corporation, who is by statute its legal adviser, for his opinion and advice upon the question of their power. On the 12th of January, instant, the elaborate opinion of the Counsel to the Corporation, which has been received, he states that section 1, chapter 677 of the Laws of 1872 (the Street-cleaning act) "does not expressly authorize the removal of snow and ice, but as above stated, I think it is to be construed as including such removal." Assuming this to be the expression of an opinion that the board is authorized to expend portions of the money appropriated for street cleaning for the year 1877 to defray the expenses of removing snow and ice, immediately ordered the formidable work to be entered upon, and pushed with all the vigor consistent with economical methods of proceeding.

The work was commenced on the 14th of January inst., and has been pursued day and night with the following results: The snow and ice have been removed from Broadway to Fourteenth street, and partially from Fourteenth street to Thirty-fourth street, portions of Fulton, Nassau, Chatham, Canal, Spring, Wall, Worth, Chambers, Fourth avenue, from Fourteenth to Seventeenth streets, and Twenty-third street from Broadway to Ninth avenue—less than eight miles of streets. Total expenditure to date:

For laborers and carts	$45,296 46
For salary account	5,400 00
Total expenses	$50,696 46

This includes expenses of regular work of collecting ashes and garbage, and also the removal of snow and ice.

The unexpended balance of the appropriation for the month is $9,095 20 to defray the expenses of the vacant for the remaining 10 days of the month. Of the above expenditure the sum of $19 982 73 has been on account of snow and ice. Collections and removal of ashes and garbage costs, under the most favorable circumstances, not less than $1,250 per day. If this work is done effectually and for the balance of the month, it will cost $12,500. This would be in excess of the appropriation, $3,404 80, for the month. The above figures do not include the cost of steamers repairs, hire of scows, steam-tugs, and other items of constant expenditure. The quantity of snow and ice removed has been 38,892 loads. The length of streets cleaned will not exceed eight miles. There are in the City 275 miles of paved streets; of this extent fully 75 miles need to be cleaned of snow and ice as much as the streets that have been cleaned. At the rate of expenditure established above, the cleaning of the 275 miles would cost $879,000. The cleaning of the 75 miles would cost $187,000.

It is apparent that with the funds the board expect to receive from the Controller, the work of removing snow and ice cannot be continued through the month of January, and unless the above requisition is granted no expenditure for removing snow and ice can be expected during the month of February.

The board is disposed to do all in its power to meet the demands of the exigency, but the deficiency of means will defeat any very extended effort, unless the restraints placed upon it by the limitations of appropriations can be relieved by granting requisitions in advance of the usual time. Respectfully submitted.

WILLIAM F. SMITH, President Board of Police.

THE HASTIE-TRACY BOOK SALE.

MORE RARE BOOKS DISPOSED OF AT LOW PRICES.

The portion of the Hastie-Tracy library disposed of by auction at Clinton Hall yesterday was exclusively poetry and dramatic works, but the prospect of securing rare and valuable editions of the writings of the great poets and dramatists of all ages, and almost of all countries, at very moderate prices, failed to attract a large attendance. If the purchases made for Mr. Jefferies, of Bristol, England; Mr. Duncan, of Edinburgh, Scotland; Mr. J. W. Drexel, of this City; Mr. Frederickson, also of New-York; Mr. Agnew, of Philadelphia; the Congressional Library, and a few other gentlemen and public institutions be excepted, the great bargains were mainly secured by book dealers. Some of the most valuable editions of works, which will ever command good prices, realized only a few cents per volume, while books which are only to be obtained at the sale of some noted collector's private library, and then at a great price, sold for a few dollars. The most notable bargain in this category was the purchase of a magnificent copy of the original edition of "Paradise Lost" (London, 1669,) for $35. Mr. J. W. Drexel was the fortunate bidder. Fowler's magnificent edition of the same great poem, in royal folio, bound in green morocco, with gilt edges, and containing, in good condition, all the fine illustrations by Burney, brought $23, Mr. Duncan being the purchaser. Many of the other valuable editions brought paltry prices. The various editions of Burns' works, of which there were 56, were also sold cheap. The famous "Caledonian Hunt" (Edinburgh, 1787,) brought only £2 75; a copy in no way more valuable was sold at the Menzies' library auction for £37. The other editions brought an average about 50 cents per volume, and among them were included some of the best ever printed. John Adamson's "Muses Welcome to King James VI., at his return to Scotland in 1617," printed at Edenburgh in 1618, was knocked down for $10. A very quaint book, "A Manuscript from a Manuscript of the Reign of James VI., edited by W. Donney," who wrote a history of the music of Scotland, brought $10 25, Mr. J. W. Drexel being the purchaser. Sir John Harrington's English translation of Ariosto's "Orlando Furioso" (London, 1591,) sold for $7, only half its market value. The famous Baskerville (1773) edition of the same work, in four volumes, very profusely illustrated, realized only $3 per volume. Father Kelley bought for $22 per volume the rare "Collection of Old Ballads," adorned with many curious, and at least one peculiarly suggestive engraving, published in 1723-5 in three volumes. The 1758 (Edinburgh) edition of Barbour's "Bruce" realized $5, and the valuable edition, edited by J. Pinkerton, the dogmatic Scotch historian, brought only $2 75 per volume. The various editions of Beattie's poems sold cheap, and the same may be said of the various volumes of poems and plays by Joanna Baillie, whose works are more talked about than read in these days. A splendidly illustrated royal quarto edition of Blair's "Grave" (the designs by Blake) brought $8 50. The 1602 Black Letter edition of Chaucer, printed in London, realized $10. Some of the editions of the scarce but ever fresh lyrics of Robert Fergusson sold remarkably cheap. The charming "Ainwick" (1814) edition, in two volumes, containing many droll and pretty illustrations and quaint tail-pieces, by Bewick, sold for the small sum of $1 75 per volume. A very fine edition of the plays of John Ford, published in two octavo volumes by John Murray, of London, in 1826, brought $8 25 per volume, and several good editions of the works of Ben Jonson and Beaumont and Fletcher, all edited by Gifford, sold equally cheap. The various editions of Gray's poems realized paltry prices, even the beautifully illustrated Bulwer's edition realizing only $8 for the two volumes. Maitland's edition of Herrick's poems, published in two volumes at Edinburgh in 1823, $7; Langhaine's "Account of the English Dramatic Poets," octavo, bound in calf and in good condition, (Oxford, 1691,) $3; Sir David Lindsay's works, (Glasgow, 1696,) very chastily bound, $12 50; Middleton's dramatic and other works, edited by Rev. A. Dyce, in five octavo volumes, brought $7 25 per volume; a fair price for a book which can be obtained in a more modern shape for about $10. Mr. J. W. Drexel secured the valuable Black Letter edition of "Puree Plowman," (London, 1550,) for $20. The fine edition of Peele's plays, printed by Pickering in 1829, and of which Rev. Alexander Dyce was editor, brought $9 per volume. The sale commences to-day at 1 P. M. with the valuable editions of Shakespeare's works.

THE STATE SURVEY.

FIRST REPORT OF THE BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS—FORTY MILLIONS OF DOLLARS LOST THROUGH IGNORANCE OF THE TOPOGRAPHY OF THE STATE—THE MAPS OF NEW-YORK WORSE THAN THOSE OF ANY OTHER CIVILIZED COUNTRY.

The first official report of the Board of Commissioners of the State Survey, composed of Hon. J. V. L. Pruyn, President, and Hon. William A. Wheeler, Hon. Horatio Seymour, Hon. Robert S. Hale, Hon. William Dorsheimer, and Mr. Francis A. Stout, has just been published. They found at the outset that there were evils growing out of the prevailing ignorance with regard to the topography of the State, which exceeded anything before suspected. Large numbers of citizens, many of whom were women, and persons dependent upon small estates, had been induced to invest their property in railroad stocks or bonds which proved to be of little or no value, and these investments had been made upon solicitations and statements which would not have been listened to if the maps and surveys of New-York had given any idea of the character of its surface. The Commissioners are confident that not less than $40,000,000 have been lost by these investments. Hardly a dozen of the 200 or more railroads of the State are now owned under their original stocks, all the others having been sold out or reorganized.

Foreigners trafficking in this country express surprise at the meagre condition of the maps, so accustomed are they to seek information from this source for settling questions concerning boundaries, for administering the laws, and for guidance in private investments, instead of depending upon representations of interested parties, as in this country. New-York, it is safe to say, cannot advance in wealth in future as she has done in the past, unless thorough and accurate knowledge of her territory is readily accessible to all citizens. There has been no survey of the State since the pioneer surveyors ran their compass lines through the woods. The uncertain and conflicting results of this early work have been patched together into a complicated network of errors which forms the basis of all existing maps of the State. As illustrating the grossness of these errors, they find that on the best map Buffalo is placed about three miles from its true position, Elmira about three miles, Ogdensburg half a mile, Syracuse a mile and a half, Plattsburg three miles, and other misplacements wherever tests have been applied. Lake Champlain is laid down from a survey made before the Revolution. Recent measurements show that with respect to distances of 20 miles on the lake, the maps are in error as much as three miles. The maps of New-York are worse than those of any other civilized country of equal wealth. Even Japan had a rough triangulation of her territory 100 years ago, and has now a more accurate work of similar character in progress under American officers. Every European Government has executed a careful survey of its territory based upon triangulation, but they are richer than are the United States—for Switzerland and Sweden are poorer—but because they are wiser. A triangulation of Massachusetts was made nearly 40 years ago; a similar work is in progress in New-Jersey; Pennsylvania has a topographical survey under way, and like surveys are advancing in California, Nevada, Utah, Colorado, New-Mexico, and Wyoming. Old landmarks are gone, or rapidly passing away, over much of the State; search has been made along the boundaries of 11 counties, and although there are over 60 corners, only two were found marked with authentic monuments; public and private boundaries are in constant dispute for want of a system of fixed points to which they may be referred; $20,000,000 were wasted upon one railroad that would not have been built if those who invested in it had had the means of comparing its topography with that of other more practicable lines with which it would come into competition; the death-rates increase rapidly in regions where, without topographical knowledge, neither the cause nor the remedy can be understood; the towns of the State are represented on the best maps two and three miles from their true position, and citizens are expending annually not less than $40,000 for State and county maps utterly unreliable for accurate purposes.

For these evils they propose a trigonometrical survey. By this means points about 10 to 15 miles apart should be exactly determined in position throughout the State, the work being verified by reference to the surveys of the General Government. This system of points to form the principal triangulation of the State survey, and every effort will be made to have both the courses and distances between stations known with utmost precision, and to have them marked with monuments which will remain for many generations. These principal stations will be used for upon, numbers will hill-over looking the neighboring country. All property lines or public boundaries measured, and referred to the State Survey points, will be permanently fixed. The use of the magnetic needle will no longer be necessary, since the course of every line will be astronomically determined, and the accuracy of surveys can be tested by connecting with two or more of the State monuments. As the triangulation proceeds each season, it will establish and mark many points in the counties visited, and these permanent points will be of immediate use to the people of these localities without any reference to the future continuation of the survey. The beneficial results are, therefore, felt as the work progresses, and it can be suspended at the pleasure of the Legislature without losing what has been accomplished. There is every reason to expect that the present appropriation will nearly complete the triangulation over 10 counties where it is already laid out. An annual appropriation of $20,000 for 10 years will complete a State trigonometrical survey in such a manner as to furnish accurate basis for local surveys in every town where they are needed, and secure the corners of the counties.

Annexed to the report are a detailed report of the expenses incurred to Jan. 1, 1877; a copy of the statutatory provision organizing the board; the report of the committee of the board appointed to consider the best methods to be adopted to carry out the requirements of the Legislature; plans submitted by the Director of the Survey, Aug. 24, 1876; report of the Director, Jan. 15, 1877, and sketch of the preliminary triangulation of the survey.

AFFAIRS IN MEXICO.

THE PRESIDENCY OF GEN. DIAZ—BANKERS HEAVILY FINED—BANISHMENT OF CORTINA.

HAVANA, Jan. 23.—The French steamer arrived here from Vera Cruz to-day, and brings the following intelligence from the City of Mexico, Jan. 16: President Diaz is now in possession of the entire Republic, excepting Sinaloa and Chihuahua. Diaz's administration is conducted with prudence and wisdom; the people complain only of excessive taxation. Ex-President Lerdo has embarked for San Francisco. Iglesias and Cabinet are at Mazatlan awaiting events. There is much anxiety to know what course the United States will take in regard to Mexico. The passport system is rigorously enforced contrary to the Constitution. Matias Romero is ill at the capital. The money for the payment of $300,000 to the United States, under the awards of the Mixed Commission, has arrived at Vera Cruz. The Government has fined Messrs. Barron & Escandon, a banking firm, $150,000 for failure to comply with the railroad concession, they alleging that the state of the country made compliance impossible. The Government seized Barron's estates. Barron is an Englishman. England has no representative at this Government. Minister Foster demanes that his mails were robbed. The German Minister has been attacked by thieves, who stole his watch, and then drew knives on the bystanders who tried to interfere. They effected their escape. President Diaz has banished Cortina from the Republic.

FATAL BOILER EXPLOSION.

BUFFALO, Jan. 23.—A terrible boiler explosion occurred in the lager beer brewery of David Haas, about noon to-day, killing Gustavus Haas, and it is feared fatally scalding Herman Haas, both sons of the brewer. The cause of the explosion is unknown. The building was damaged about $1,000.

SENTENCED TO THE PENITENTIARY.

MONTREAL, Jan. 23.—Magliore Blanchette, the St. Hyacinthe incendiary, has been sentenced to seven years in the Penitentiary. Blanchette was convicted of having caused the disastrous conflagration at St. Hyacinthe.

REPORTED INDIAN MASSACRE.

CHICAGO, Jan. 23.—A Sioux City dispatch says a report is current at Fort Randall that a train of 15 wagons and 20 men was captured on Thursday morning, about 100 miles west of the Missouri River, while on its way out of the Black Hills. Nine men escaped the scalping knife. The Indian who brought the news says Crazy Horse's band committed the outrage, and that the train belonged to Volin & Popinan, of Yankton.

PARKE GODWIN ON POLITICS.

A DEMOCRATIC ADDRESS BEFORE A SYMPATHIZING AUDIENCE—HIS VIEWS ON THE PRESENT SITUATION.

A number of Democrats met in the great hall of the Cooper Union last evening, to listen to an address by Parke Godwin on the political state of the country. Mr. William Van Wyck presided, and introduced Godwin as "a gentleman whose whole life had been spent in thinking out these great problems which were now perplexing us." Cheered by this oratorical pat on the back, Mr. Godwin ascended the rostrum, and delivered a two hours' address which the Chairman at the close, justly referred to as "exhausting." He said that the position of the country was critical, and while civil war could not be said to be probable, it was possible. The question of the hour was, Could the Republic survive this terrible strain which was being put upon it, or was it destined to vanish?

"A school-boy's dream,
The wonder of an hour."

This familiar schoolboy quotation roused the admiration of the unwashed in the rear of the hall and was greeted with emphatic applause. It had been the practice, he went on to say, for nearly 100 years for the defeated party in national politics to submit, the only exception being in 1861 and 1865, when the "impatient men of the South" took up the bayonet, [Applause,] and were defeated mainly through the organized efforts of the Republicans. [A chilling silence.] The giving of the ballot to the uncultivated negro was a tremendous mistake, and the force and fraud which had characterized Republican rule in the South had kept alive the resentments of the Southern people. Tilden had been elected by a popular majority of 263,000, and a fair majority of the Electoral College. On the morning after the election all the newspapers except THE TIMES conceded Tilden's election. Ever since 1870 the drift of popular opinion had been against the Administration. There were three classes that went over to the Democracy in the recent canvass. They were, first, what President Lincoln called "the plain people," the working people, who felt the hard times and the evils of Republican misrule; second, the capitalists, the men of business who had become weary of the fast and loose policy of the Republicans on the currency question, and were attracted by Mr. Tilden's straightforward utterances on this subject, and, third, the intellectual men, such as David A. Wells, Prof. William G. Sumner, of Yale College, and others. The lecturer forebore to mention himself, but his unmistakable emphasis on the personal pronoun whenever he encountered it showed that he could easily have named a third "intellect" which had succumbed to the charms of "Tilden and reform." A voluminous array of statistics arranged on the well-known plan of the World arithmetic man in figuring out gains was then presented. In Massachusetts and the other New-England States the percentage of Democratic gains greatly exceeded those of the Republican. The same was true of the Middle and Southern States, especially the latter. In the extreme West the Republicans had gained more on the popular vote than the Democrats, but the percentage of the latter's gain, if it continued at the same ratio, would in a period of years give seven States to the Democrats to the Democrat. The reading of these statistical tables, which occupied three quarters of an hour, afforded the thirsty ones in the audience and on the platform opportunity to retire for refreshment, which was not neglected. The lecturer then proceeded to denounce the acts of the Republicans in South Carolina, Louisiana, and other Southern States, which he termed "abominable atrocities of nameless villains." Very little was said about the murder and outrage of the "Shot-gun Democracy," the speaker holding that the so-called "outrages" were usually nothing but the mere frolics of wild young men. The moral and mental slavery in which the terrible Republicans kept their black vassals was illustrated by a somewhat flat anecdote, in which the orator attempted to imitate the negro minstrel dialect, and failed lamentably. There was no disguising the fact, the lecturer said, that the Republican Party in the late election "had been beaten out of its boots," and was now trying to escape the consequences of defeat through the machinations of the Southern Returning Boards. In conclusion, Mr. Godwin paid a warm tribute to the integrity and statesmanship of "his old and tried friend, Samuel J. Tilden." The touching reference to their favorite elicited howls of approval from the unwashed, amid which the band struck up "Hail to the Chief." Mr. Godwin concluded by advocating the passage of the "Compromise" bill now before Congress.

THE FLORIDA STORY.

MR. JAMES GORDON BENNETT AND PARTY REPORTED IN JACKSONVILLE.

From the Jacksonville (Fla.) Union, Jan. 18.

James Gordon Bennett and servant, Mr. Blisinger, of New-York, and Mr. O'Kelley, an attaché of the New-York Herald, arrived in this City yesterday by way of Macon and Augusta. On arriving here they went to the St. James Hotel, where the party were registered, and, as it subsequently appeared, against the wish of Mr. Bennett. The names of the party were then erased from the hotel registry, and they all left the St. James, and procured a suite of four rooms at the Windsor, where they did not book their names.

The best rooms of the Windsor were asked for, and the party very quietly occupied the same until late in the afternoon, a very bountiful lunch, with champagne and other luxuries, being provided by Mr. Gould. It was ascertained that Mr. Bennett and party had arrived at the St. James, and quite a number of persons called, more out of curiosity than otherwise, to get a look at the Herald proprietor, and one of the actors in the famous duel. It was then reported that Mr. Bennett's arrival was a canard, and on that account the names, which were put upon the registry-book by some idle joker, were erased.

Subsequent inquiry, however, proved that there was not so much of a canard after all in the report, but that a party had arrived, and among them Mr. Lorillard, of New-York, who was recognized by several Northern gentlemen, and that the party had mysteriously disappeared. Late last evening the party went aboard Mr. Astor's yacht, the Atalanta, and an abundant supply of good cheer was sent on board, including sundry baskets and boxes from Messrs. Child & Milnor's. After 11 o'clock a boat with the five persons named pulled down the river accompanied with luxury traveling baggage and baskets, but whither they were bound was not to be found out.

The whole affair was very strangely conducted, and from all the information gathered, there seems to be little doubt that Mr. Bennett was one of the party, and that it was not considered desirable to have the movements of the party published.

LOSSES BY FIRE.

A fire was discovered about midnight on Monday at Smillie & Edge's jewelry factory on Maple place, Newark, and before the flames were extinguished the stock and machinery were damaged to the extent of $1,500. The fire is supposed to have originated from the forge in the chain-room. The building is owned by the Pierson estate, and is damaged about $3,500. The damage is fully covered by insurance.

The building on Hawkins street, Boston, Mass., known as the Old Mayhew School-house, the upper stories of which were occupied by the Massachusetts College of Pharmacy, was burned yesterday morning. The loss on the building is $10,000, and on the material inside, $5,000. The building was insured.

A store in Hallowell, Me., owned and occupied by Leigh & Wingate, grain and coal dealers, was partially destroyed by fire yesterday morning. A large stock of grain was consumed. The loss is $5,000; insured for $4,000.

A box shop, dry-house, and several cars, at Whitefield, N. H., owned by Brown's Lumber Company, were burned yesterday morning. Loss, from $15,000 to $20,000; no insurance.

The residence of Patrick Coughlin, in East Greenwich, R. I., was destroyed by fire yesterday morning. Insured for $600 with the Pawtucket Mutual.

P. Culhane's house on Hunter street, Hamilton, Ontario, was burned last night. Two children were suffocated, and a third fatally burned.

THE CLERGY IN ITALY.

ROME, Jan. 23.—In the Chamber of Deputies to-day, during debate on a bill against the abuses of power by the clergy, the Minister of Worship and Justice made an important statement. He declared that the law concerning the Papal guarantees was a solemn and unassailable pledge given to the Catholic world of the Pope's complete independence in the exercise of his spiritual power. Italy ought to regard the maintenance of this law as a question of honor and of loyalty toward Europe. He was determined to respect the law, and would not allow the political friends of the Ministry to entertain any illusions in this respect. The Chamber then decided to pass to the consideration of the clauses of the Clerical Abuses bill.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—A dispatch to the Daily News from Rome reports that the Pope will submit the question to the Cardinals whether, considering the relations of the Papacy to the Italian Government and the revolutionary party, it is necessary to take measures to secure the liberty of the Conclave which elects the next Pope.

THE WORKING MEN'S ASSEMBLY.

ALBANY, Jan. 23.—The thirteenth annual session of the Working Men's Assembly is in session at the Iron Molder Hall. In his address the President, George Blair, of New-York, stated that measures of great importance to the workingclasses would be before the Legislature, viz.: First, the management of prisons, and how best to prevent them from degrading honest industry in the markets of the world; second, the management of the canals, and how best to secure cheap transportion to the seaboard; and, third, the government of municipalities in the State, in which it is proposed to deprive working men and others not holding real estate from the right of franchise upon all matters concerning finance.

The latter is the most important and reform, of which we hear so much, has thus far resulted in stopping almost all public work; reducing the wages of labor and consequent misery among thousands of the working men's families of the State, while useless officers and extravagant salaries continue as of old without interruption, and which must continue so long as most of our public servants secure their places, not through merit or patriotism, but the amount of money they can spend upon election, which is afterward repaid from the people's treasury in the shape of large salaries, fees, &c.

THE CONDITION OF THE RIVERS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—The Chief Signal Officer reports that during the past 24 hours the Missouri River has remained unchanged. The Mississippi has fallen one inch at St. Louis, risen 15 inches at Cairo, 20 inches at Memphis, 49 inches at Vicksburg, and fallen slightly at New-Orleans. The Ohio has fallen three feet at Pittsburg, three feet at Cincinnati, and three feet and six inches at Louisville. The Red River has risen six inches at Shreveport. No change of importance is reported on the Tennessee, the Arkansas, Allegheny, or Monongahela Rivers. The Savannah River has risen 11 inches at Augusta. The Potomac has fallen at Harper's Ferry and at the Great Falls, and is falling at Washington. In the watershed of the Mississippi, .13 of an inch of rain has fallen at Memphis, the same amount at Vicksburg and .59 at New-Orleans. In that of the Tennessee, .13 of rain has fallen at Knoxville. In those of the Ohio principal rivers rain has not fallen in sufficient quantities to affect their condition.

MARINE DISASTERS.

VINEYARD HAVEN, Jan. 22.—The British brig Tycoon, from Demerara for Boston, arrived here Dec. 31, and sailed Jan. 1, since which time nothing has been heard from her. A heavy northern gale and thick snow-storm came on the same night, and it is feared she met with serious damage.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—The American ship Fawn, Capt. Cleaveland, from New-York, Dec. 20, for Liverpool, is ashore in Bonde Bay. The American ship George F. Manson, Capt. Humphrey, from Bombay, Dec. —, for Calcutta, put into Bombay leaking and much damaged from collision. The British bark Alpheus Marshall, Capt. Parker, from New-York, Dec. 22, for Bremen, arrived at that port Jan. 22. She had four hands in saving the crew of the British bark Ascendent, Capt. Sheehan, from St. John, N. B., Dec. 8, for Queenstown, which was abandoned at sea.

SEVERELY REPRIMANDED IN COURT.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 23.—The Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph Company in December last were enjoined from building a line along the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad, upon the complaint of the Western Union Telegraph Company. Subsequently the Atlantic and Pacific Company arranged with the Receivers of the railroad to build the line for them, transferring their material and men to the Receivers for that purpose. To-day Judges Drummond and Gorham, of the United States Court, decided such action to be in violation of the spirit of the injunction, and declared the parties in contempt, administering a severe reprimand, and discharging them upon payment of costs.

MAIL CARRIER ATTACKED BY INDIANS.

HAT CREEK, W. T., Jan. 23, via CHEYENNE, Jan. 23.—The mail carrier between this post and Red Cloud was attacked by four Indians on his last trip, but escaped. On the return trip he met 50 friendly Sioux, who were on route to treat with Crazy Horse for his surrender. They reported that a party of 100 Cheyennes met them, and, on learning their mission, dismounted them, necessitating their return to the agency. Small bands of Indians have been seen between here and Indian Creek.

WHISKY OUTLAWS IN SOUTH CAROLINA.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—The Commissioner of Internal Revenue is informed by the Collector of Internal Revenue for South Carolina that the illicit distiller, Redmond, who recently wounded Deputy Collector Barton and killed Hendricks, accompanied by an armed force of 20 roughs, on the morning of the 20th inst., surrounded the house of Mr. Barton, near Easley, S. C., and under penalty of instant death compelled Mr. Barton to pay him $100. The party then took away one of Mr. Barton's horses and rode off.

SEAMEN AS WITNESSES.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 23.—Charles Wright and nine others, seamen on the American bark C. A. Whitmore, arrived here by the steamer Alaska from Hong Kong. They were sent here by the United States Consul at Hong Kong as witnesses against the Captain and officers of the bark for killing a seaman named J. N. Elwood. The accused left the bark in Hong Kong and secreted themselves as previously reported.

TWO MEN KILLED.

MEMPHIS, Jan. 23.—This afternoon, while attempting to arrest a colored burglar named Williams, Detective Pryde was shot by the burglar and mortally wounded. Williams escaped. Ben O'Neal shot and instantly killed Henry Cox, last night, on Madison street, in a dispute about a woman. O'Neal escaped. The parties are all colored.

BUSINESS FAILURE.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 23.—Linforth, Kellogg & Co., importers of hardware and agricultural implements, have suspended. Their liabilities are about $250,000. At a meeting of their creditors it was ascertained that their assets were $300,000. A committee was appointed to examine the affairs of the firm.

RAILROAD ACCIDENT IN KENTUCKY.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 23.—A misplaced switch at Mill Creek Station, on the Louisville Short Line Railroad, threw the through passenger train going south off the track at an early hour this morning. The railroad officials state that no person was injured.

NINETEEN ICE YACHTS.

POUGHKEEPSIE, Jan. 23.—A fleet of 19 ice yachts rendezvoused at Milton Dock to-day. To-morrow the regatta committees of the Poughkeepsie and New-Hamburg Ice Yacht Associations will meet and arrange for the annual races.

DANGEROUSLY WOUNDED.

BOSTON, Jan. 23.—In the course of an altercation in a pagnio at No. 103 Pleasant street, this evening, George W. Farnham shot and dangerously wounded Frank Gillespie. The former was arrested.

ARREST OF A DEFAULTER.

LAWRENCE, Jan. 23.—Aaron N. Joy, overseer in the Pacific Mills, has been arrested for falsifying his pay-rolls. It is alleged that the defalcation will amount to a considerable sum.

GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC.

GARDINER, Jan. 23.—At a meeting of the Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Maine, George F. Shepley, of Portland, was elected Department Commander.

FATAL RAILWAY ACCIDENT.

MONTPELIER, Jan. 23.—Michael Dingley, of Bethel, a fireman on a freight train on the Central Vermont Railway, was killed this morning at Montpelier Junction.

THE LOUISIANA RETURNING BOARD.

NEW-ORLEANS, Jan. 23.—The House Sergeant at Arms left here this evening for Washington via Mobile, with Messrs. Casanave and Kenner, members of the Returning Board.

LOST OVERBOARD.

PORTLAND, Me., Jan. 23.—The schooner Nellie May, while coming out of Halifax, lost overboard Peter Chester, seaman, a native of Liverpool, N. S.

THE LAWYER'S EXPLANATION.

The Portsmouth (N. H.) Times tells this story: "A few evenings since, while our oldest lawyer was celebrating his golden wedding, our wealthiest physician said to Mr. and Mrs. Haskett: 'You are a young-looking couple to be celebrating your golden wedding.' Now can you explain this? 'In the same way,' said Mr. Haskett, 'that I can explain how you came to be rich before you became old—you have kept about as clear of the lawyers as we have of the doctors.'"

FORTY-FOURTH CONGRESS.

SECOND SESSION.....Jan. 23.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

In the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury was received recommending the appropriation of $500,000 for James B. Eads, on account of the Mississippi jetties, instead of issuing bonds for the amount and increasing the interest-bearing debt, while there is money in the Treasury to pay the amount. The debate on the bill relating to the counting of the Electoral votes was resumed, Mr. Sherman speaking against the measure, arguing the constitutionality of the measure on several grounds and contending for the carrying out of the law as it existed since 1789. Mr. Conkling next spoke in support of the bill, arguing that the President of the Senate had power only to open the certificates, and that Congress could verify and declare the result. At 4:30 P. M., Mr. Conkling said he would not be able to conclude his remarks to-day, and the Senate, after an executive session, adjourned till 11 A. M. to-morrow.

In the House the Speaker corrected his ruling of yesterday, that the resolution referring the President's Message regarding the use of troops in the South to a select committee would come up as unfinished business, and said that the resolutions declaring that Congress has the right to count the Electoral votes come up as unfinished business. The resolutions were discussed at length, Mr. Seelye speaking against the assumption which, stripped of disguises, the resolutions made, that one branch, which in a certain contingency was to elect the President, could, without the concurrence of the other branch, make that contingency. Mr. Williams, of Wisconsin, argued in favor of the right of the President of the Senate to count the votes, and, incidently, made a withering reply to Mr. Willis' attack on the President and Gen. Ruger. Mr. Tucker spoke in favor of the resolutions, when the subject went over till to-morrow. Mr. Cox made a report on Mr. Hewitt's aspersions of the Post Office authorities of New-York, declaring that Mr. Hewitt's letters had not been tampered with.

SENATE.

THE MISSISSIPPI JETTIES.

The CHAIR laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, calling the attention of Congress to the act of March 3, 1875, which directs that officer to issue bonds bearing 5 per cent. interest to the amount of $500,000 to James B. Eads on account of the construction of jetties at the South Pass of the Mississippi River. The Secretary says he has received from the Secretary of War a requisition for the money, and he respectfully recommends the appropriation of $500,000 immediately to pay said Eads, it not being wise, in the opinion of the Secretary, to increase the interest-bearing debt of the United States for the payment of current expenses when there is money in the Treasury which can be appropriated for that purpose. Referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

THE PRESIDENTIAL VOTE.

Mr. WALLACE, of Pennsylvania, presented the petition of A. E. Borie, John Welsh, and other leading citizens of Philadelphia, without distinction of party, in favor of the passage of the bill recently reported by the Select Committee in regard to counting the Electoral vote. He also presented a similar petition from leading citizens of Pittsburg, Penn., both of which were laid on the table, the bill now being before the Senate. He also presented a petition of citizens of Wyoming County, Penn., in favor of an amicable settlement of the difficulties growing out of the Presidential contest. Similar petitions were presented by Mr. Randolph, of New-Jersey, from citizens of that State, all of which were laid on the table.

Mr. COCKRELL, of Missouri, presented the resolution of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, adopted yesterday, in favor of the passage of the pending bill in regard to counting the Electoral vote, laid on the table. In presenting the resolution he said it was adopted with but one dissenting voice. The Merchants' Exchange of that city had 2,000 members, among them men of patriotism, men who controlled the commercial interests of the great Mississippi Valley, and without distinction of party they favored the passage of this bill.

SUFFERERS BY THE FORT HAMILTON FIRE.

Mr. COCKRELL, of Missouri, called up the House bill for the relief of certain officers of the Third United States Artillery who suffered by a fire at Fort Hamilton, New-York Harbor, on the 3d of March, 1875. Passed.

THE COUNTING BILL.

The Senate then resumed consideration of the unfinished business, being the bill reported by the Select Committee in regard to counting the Electoral vote.

Mr. SHERMAN, of Ohio, said when the committee was appointed by both houses of Congress to take into consideration the count of the Electoral vote, he expected, as a matter of course, that in case the committee agreed he would be able to vote for

LAW REPORTS.

A FRENZIED LOVER.

THE SHOOTING OF MARY KELLY BY EUGENE CHRIST—THE PRISONER CONVICTED BY HIS OWN TESTIMONY.

Eugene Christ, the young Frenchman who shot his former sweetheart, Mary Kelly, on Dec. 14, was placed on trial by Assistant District Attorney Rollins yesterday, in Part I. of the Court of General Sessions. The story of the crime is as follows: Christ boarded with the family of Mrs. Kelly, at No. 455 West Sixteenth street, and became considerably intimate with the daughter Mary, who gave birth to a child before she had attained her fifteenth year. He was driven from the house by the mother and brother of the girl, and she was forbidden to hold any communication with him. He still, however, it appears, followed the girl wherever she went, and became frantically jealous when she received any attention from other admirers. On Dec. 12 he visited her at her home, and, it is stated, asked her to marry him. She declined the offer, whereupon he fired two shots at her, none of which, fortunately, took effect. Christ appears to have become almost frenzied at the attentions of a man named James Clifford, and, on Dec. 14, he followed her after she had left her house to look for employment. He met her on Twenty-third street, between Ninth and Tenth avenues, and again asked her to marry him. She replied that she did not know whether she would or not, whereupon Christ drew a pistol and fired four shots at her. The girl received four bullets in her body, one on each side, one in the breast and one in the back. At the third shot she fell, and begged her assailant to spare her life. He replied, "No, you have got to die. I tried to make a wife of you, but couldn't." After firing the four chambers of his revolver, Christ bent over his bleeding victim, and called her by the most endearing names. He was subsequently arrested, and the girl was removed to Bellevue Hospital, where her recovery was looked upon as almost miraculous. Two of the bullets were extracted, but she still carries two in her body.

Mr. William F. Kintzing, who defended the prisoner, endeavored to show that the shooting was accidental; but the testimony of the accused, who insisted on going upon the stand, entirely upset that theory. Christ said that he had purchased the pistol for the purpose of committing suicide; and being frenzied on being rejected by the girl, had shot without intending to kill her.

Assistant District-Attorney Rollins—Oh! You intended to committ suicide? A.—Yes.

Q.—And you fired off the four chambers of your pistol? A.—Yes.

Q.—Well, how did you intend to commit suicide, then. Would it not have been much better to fire two shots at the girl, and two into yourself? A.—Well, in the excitement I forgot to keep a ball for myself. [Laughter in court.]

This testimony convicted the prisoner, and the jury, without leaving their seats, found him guilty. Judge Gildersleeve said that the prisoner had reason to be thankful that he had not been tried for murder, and sentenced him to the full penalty—10 years in the State Prison, at hard labor.

HOW A MARRIAGE WAS BROKEN OFF.

HANS PFEIFFER ESTABLISHES HIS GOOD CHARACTER AND GETS JUDGMENT FOR $2,000—A CURIOUS SLANDER SUIT.

A motion was made before Judge J. F. Daly, in Common Pleas, Chambers, yesterday, to vacate a judgment obtained by one Hans Pfeiffer against Philip Hossenlopp and Magdalena, his wife, for $2,000 damages before a Sheriff's Jury, by default, on the 15th inst. The action was brought by the plaintiff for $5,000 damages for slander, and the defendants failed to appear or to interpose an answer. It appeared on the argument of the motion that the plaintiff was engaged for a long time past to Miss Emma Betzger. He boarded for a number of years with the defendants, but having moved away, and ceased visiting a lager-beer saloon kept by them the defendant Magdalena, as is alleged, said she would get "square" with him, and to do so informed the mother of Miss Betzger that he was an impure and improper young man, visiting disreputable resorts, and unfit or unable to raise a family. The result of this was, that the young lady, on hearing the story from her mother, broke off the engagement and refused to marry him. The defendant also used other language unfit for publication, concerning the plaintiff, which was also conveyed to Miss Betzger. Ex-Judge W. H. Van Cott appeared on behalf of the defendants, and argued that the defendants, being Germans and ignorant of the law, should be excused from not answering in time, and that as the affidavit on the part of the defendants showed that what defendant Magdalena said was with good intent and without malice, the judgment ought not to stand. Judge Flanagan, on behalf of the plaintiff and in opposition to the motion, urged that ignorance of the law excuses no man, and that the young lady's mother made affidavit (which was read in the court) that she was not intimate with either of the defendants, and that the remarks were made in a spirit of hatred and not with good intent. He also produced plaintiff's affidavit as well as that of his physician, denying all the allegations of the defendant, and claimed that the judgment ought to stand as security at least, if the court should come to the conclusion that the default should be opened. It was stated that the defendants were entitled to no favors at the hands of the court, inasmuch as they had sought to mortgage their property since the commencement of the action for the purpose of preventing the plaintiff from collecting any judgment he might recover in the action. Counsel stated that the defendant Philip was present in court, and that if he denied under oath that he had endeavored to mortgage his property, as he, the counsel, alleged, he would consent to the granting of the order at once, but neither defendant nor his counsel acceded to the proposition. The court took the papers and reserved its decision. Ex-Judge Van Cott appeared for the motion, which was opposed by Gustavus Levy and Judge Flanagan.

THE CUSTODY OF A LUNATIC.

Some rather remarkable proceedings sent from the Supreme Court to a Sheriff's jury in order to ascertain the mental capacity of one Amelia Hirsch were concluded yesterday. Miss Hirsch came recently into the possession of about $1,500 worth of property. Her relatives instituted the proceedings to have her declared a lunatic. One session of the Sheriff's jury was held a few days ago, Miss Hirsch being present. Her sister, Mrs. Decker, went on the stand and testified to certain conduct on the part of Miss Hirsch, and as she left the witness stand the latter sprang upon her and began beating her, telling her she had lied. Mrs. Decker then caught hold of Miss Hirsch by the neck and threw her off. Further testimony was given yesterday by Mrs. Marcus and by Mrs. Decker, both of whom are sisters of Miss Hirsch. The latter was, however, represented by William H. Gibson, the counsel, and by E. Fellowes Jenkins, the Superintendent of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. These gentlemen had been appealed to to appear in the case. Besides Mrs. Marcus and Mrs. Decker, Messrs. Marcus, Hirsch, Decker, and Simon Hirsch, and one Dr. Conway, gave testimony yesterday in regard to Miss Hirsch's conduct. The examination showed that the girl is rather silly, but is not insane, and that her relatives had beaten her at different times. The Sheriff's jury returned as a verdict that a committee should be appointed for the care and custody of Miss Hirsch and her property, but that such committee should consist of others than her relatives. The Commissioners of Lunacy, who presided over the proceedings in the case, passed a vote of thanks to Mr. Gibson for his services, which were gratuitously rendered, and Mr. Gibson responded to the compliment in a few appropriate words. The Sheriff's jury donated their fees, $25, to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

THE LAW AGAINST DUELING.

The Grand Jury yesterday handed up to Judge Gildersleeve the following presentment, containing an amendment to the law against dueling and prize-fighting, drawn up by District Attorney Phelps:

GRAND JURY ROOM, Jan. 22, 1877.

The Grand Jurors of the people of the State of New-York, in and for the body of the City and County of New-York, do respectfully present to the honorable Court of General Sessions of the Peace, and request that a copy of the following presentment be forwarded to the Legislature of the State of New-York for its action thereon:

That section 3, title 5, article 1, of the sixth edition of the Revised Statutes of the State of New-York, entitled "Of crimes against the public peace and public morals, and other miscellaneous offenses, punishable by imprisonment in a State Prison," and "of dueling and challenges to fight, (and prize-fighting,)" be so amended as to read, "Every person offending against any of the provisions in this article shall be a competent witness against any other person offending in the same transaction, and may be compelled to appear and give evidence before any Grand Jury or in any court, in the same manner as other persons; but the testimony so given shall not be used in any prosecution or proceeding, civil or criminal, against the person so testifying."

COLES F. FIELD, Foreman.
F. A. CONKLING, Secretary.

THE NEW DISTRICT ATTORNEY.

Gen. Stewart L. Woodford will go before Judge Blatchford at 12 o'clock to-day and be sworn in as United States District Attorney for the Southern District of New-York. Mr. Woodford was at the District Attorney's office yesterday afternoon, and was by Mr. Bliss shown through the various departments and introduced to the different officers and clerks.

SENTENCED FOR ASSAULT.

In Part II. of the Court of General Sessions yesterday Judge Sutherland and Assistant District Attorney Bell disposed of the following cases of dangerous assault: Peter Enivo, an Italian fresco painter, who stabbed Thomas Farley in a fight at No. 41 Spring street on Christmas Day; Michael O'Conner, of No. 438 West Forty-first street, who stabbed Patrick Hallick in the head with a case-knife in a tenement-house quarrel, and Edward Farrell, of No. 215 East Thirty-eighth street, who broke Henry Jell's cheek-bone with a match-safe. Judge Sutherland sentenced Enivo to three years and six months in the State Prison; O'Connor to three years, and Barrett to two years in the same institution.

THE NILES ESTATE LITIGATION.

THE EXECUTOR'S ANSWER TO THE CHARGES AGAINST HIM—HE RETALIATES ON THE PLAINTIFFS' HUSBANDS—WHAT HE SAYS REGARDING THE VALUE OF THE PROPERTY.

The suit brought by Mrs. Badeau and Mrs. Wilbaux, to remove Nathaniel Niles from his position as Executor of their father's estate, after compelling him to account, was argued at great length before Judge Donohue, in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday, on the motion for the appointment of a Receiver of the estate. Richard Busteed & Son appeared for Mrs. Badeau; Crosby & Hoffman appeared for Mrs. Wilbaux, and Niles & Bagley appeared for Nathaniel Niles. Mr. Busteed gave the history of the case, published heretofore in THE TIMES, and read a number of affidavits, charging Mr. Niles with gross mismanagement. The plaintiffs, though entitled to all the rents and profits of the estate, he said, were really in want. It was also necessary, in order to avoid irreparable injury, that a Receiver should be appointed.

In opposition to the motion for a Receiver, W. H. Niles read an affidavit made by Nathaniel Niles. This stated that the plaintiffs are not entitled to all the rents, profits, &c., of the estate, but only to the net income remaining after the payment of interest, taxes, assessments, &c. The property left by the plaintiffs' father consisted of five houses in Thirty-first street, on which there was a $50,000 mortgage; the house at No. 15 East Sixteenth street, which was mortgaged for $25,000; mortgages; about 70 lots on Seventy-third, Seventy-fourth, and Seventy-fifth streets, on which there was a mortgage for $57,000, besides some property in Westchester County, the rent of which would not pay for the fencing of the land. The accounts of the Executor, Nathaniel Niles, were settled at the accounting had in March, 1875. Since the latter date Mr. Niles says he has received $74,443 53, and has expended $74,643 15, or $199 62 more than his receipts. This is without allowing for his commissions. Adding this latter amount, there is now due to the Executor $1,629. He says the plaintiffs, his cousins, have received but $125 a month, as they claim, but over $15,000 from the estate in his hands. Besides this they have received from the five houses owned by them in Forty-fourth street, the further sum of $3 000 per year. In regard to the charge of allowing some property to be sold for non-payment of an assessment, Mr. Niles says the existence of such assessment was not disclosed to him on a search, but that, on finding out the facts, he redeemed the property sold. He has no portion of the $59,000 which, the plaintiffs say, is in his hands, and he produces vouchers to show where the money went to. As soon as he learned that the plaintiffs desired an accounting, he says, he offered to allow them to examine his books and accounts. His relations with the plaintiffs had been very friendly until the "advent of the husband of one of them." Mr. Niles averred further, that his cousins are modest and unassuming ladies, and had stated since these proceedings were begun that the action had been brought at the instigation of M. Wilbaux, the husband of one of them, and that it is being prosecuted against their wish, though they dare not discontinue them, because, in the event of their doing so, Wilbaux threatens to circulate injurious reports concerning them. Mr. Niles also says he has endeavored to provide for all their necessary wants, but that they have burdened themselves in providing for the expenses attending the marriage of each of them, and have distressed themselves for no other reason than to enable their husbands to make an appearance. Mr. Niles says the present litigation has not been begun and is going on but between him and their husbands, especially Wilbaux, who is without means of any kind, and has stated repeatedly that he came to this country to take charge of the estate of his wife and her sister. The proceeding has been begun with a view to make him Trustee of the estate. Mr. Niles then goes on to say that he did not pay the taxes for 1873 because he was appealed to by his cousins for the money, which was applied to redeeming their diamonds from pawn. The diamonds were worth about $50,000 and were given to their mother by the Empress Josephine, their mother's first husband having been the family physician of the Empress. Mr. Niles says that the income of the estate is about $19,000, but that the expenses exceed $16,000, and that the net income of each of the plaintiffs from the estate and from their own property is about $3,000 per year.

In conclusion, Mr. H. Niles referred at length to the extravagant habits of the plaintiffs and made a great many hits at the expense of Mr. Busteed, which the latter was not slow in answering, to the great amusement of the auditors. Judge Donohue finally took the papers, reserving his decision.

COURT OF APPEALS.

ALBANY, Jan. 23.—In the Court of Appeals to-day the following decisions were handed down: Bridenbecker vs. Farrell.—Motion granted, with costs of appeal up to time of motion, and $10 costs of motion. Kalbfleisch vs. Kalbfleisch.—Remittitur amended by making it to appear that the guardian ad litem appeared in this court by consent, and giving costs to all parties, appellants and respondents, payable out of the estate. Judgment affirmed with costs.—Embury vs. Sheldon; Wells vs. Holbrook; Barber vs. Sterling. Order of Supreme Court modified by releasing the appellant, Cassett, from the purchase of lots 6, 7, 8, and 9, and compelling him to complete the purchase of lots 4, 5, 10, 11, 12, and 13, and releasing the appellant Higgins from his purchase of lots 19, 20, 21, 22, 35, 36, 37, 38, and 39, and compelling him to complete the purchase of lots 48 and 49, and, as modified affirmed without costs to either party as against the other in this court—Mott vs. Mott, two cases. So much of the order as gives costs against Potter reversed, and the residue of order affirmed, with costs against Burroughs only—The People ex rel. Burroughs vs. Brinckerhoff. Order affirmed and judgment absolute for defendant on stipulation, with costs—Miller vs. Burke.

People ex rel. McCann vs. Kilbourne—On motion of Samuel Hand ordered on the preferred calendar; Sternfels vs. Clark—Motion to settle costs; verbal direction given by the court; S. Hand for the motion. Appeals from Orders: No. 418.—Childs vs. Kasson; argued by C. D. Adams for appellant, E. J. Richardson for the respondent; No. 419.—Sartwell vs. Field; argued by C. D. Adams for appellant, D. C. Stoddard for the respondent; No. 422.—Ex rel. Attorney General vs. The Continental Life Insurance Company; argued by John L. Hill and George W. Miller for appellant, Henry Smith for respondent; No. 424.—The German American Bank vs. The Williams Mower Company; argued by Frank Hiscock for appellant, George Wadsworth for respondent; No. 417.—Franklin vs. Richardson; argued by S. Hand for appellant, Marcus T. Hun for respondent; No. 159.—The Baltimore Steampacket Company vs. Garrison; argued by George F. Comstock and Erastus Cook for appellant, E. R. Robinson for respondent.

The day calendar for Wednesday, Jan. 24, is as follows: Nos. 63, 161, 163, 166, 167, 135, 71, and 118.

SUIT AGAINST NEWSPAPER TRUSTEES.

The jury in Part 1. of the Supreme Court brought in a sealed verdict yesterday morning in the case of David W. Bruce and others against Edward B. Wesley, T. C. Platt, and Caleb C. Norvell. This action was against the defendants as Trustees of the New-York Republican Newspaper Association. Messrs. Wesley and Platt only defended the action, Mr. Norvell not making any answer nor seeking to shirk by defense whatever responsibility he might have in the matter. On the summing up, his counsel insisted that Messrs. Wesley and Platt were endeavoring to make him alone responsible for what was really a corporation indebtedness. The jury found a verdict in favor of the plaintiffs for $5,930 18, which Judge Van Vorst refused to set aside.

SUING UNDER THE LOTTERY LAW.

Henry B. Wilkinson brought suit some time ago in the Supreme Court against Joseph Gill. The latter, it appears, kept an office at the corner of Pearl and Chatham streets, where he acted as a policy dealer and dealt in lottery tickets. The plaintiff was wont to visit Gill's establishment in 1872, and purchased $3.601 08 of lottery tickets and policy slips. He gained no prizes, it would appear, since he brought suit under the statute to recover double penalties from the defendant. The jury awarded him a verdict for $1,422 76 instead of for the $7,202 16 which he claimed. The verdict, small as it was, was not agreeable to the defendant, who has appealed to the Supreme Court, General Term, where the case was argued yesterday. Decision was reserved.

A CHILD AS A WITNESS.

The suit of Helen Cunningham against John Cunningham was brought to trial before Judge Speir, in the Superior Court, Special Term, yesterday. The action is brought for a limited divorce on the ground of the defendant's cruelty toward the plaintiff. The parties are in quite comfortable circumstances and have two children, the eldest being about 6 years old. At the trial yesterday it appeared that the suit was instituted in June last, but that the plaintiff suspended the proceedings and went back again to live with her husband. She alleged that after returning to him he again ill-treated her, and she therefore presses the proceedings. When put on the stand as a witness she testified to her marriage to the defendant on June 13, 1869. Objection was made to her testifying to any acts of cruelty other than the one alleged in the complaint, in which her husband struck her with his clinched fist. The objection was sustained.

A physician was called, and testified to the injury which the plaintiff had received. After this one of the children of the parties—a bright-looking little girl with flaxen hair—was called as a witness. Objection was made that she was not competent, not understanding the nature of an oath. She was then questioned as follows:

Q.—Do you know what will happen to you if you swear falsely—tell a lie? A.—Yes, I will be locked up.

Q.—Will you be punished in any other way? A.—Yes.

Q.—By whom? A.—By the "Old Boy." [Laughter.]

The evidence was excluded. The defendant went on the stand, and testified that he had only beaten his wife lightly, having merely slapped her face with his open hand. After the testimony had been all taken Judge Speir admonished the husband, and told the parties to go home and live in peace until the decision of the case.

THE HEMPSTEAD RESERVOIR.

OPENING OF THE CORPORATION COUNSEL FOR THE CITY—THE WHOLE SCHEME DENOUNCED AS A MONSTER FRAUD.

The hearing in the suit of contractors Kingsley & Keeney against the City of Brooklyn to recover $178,000 for extra work alleged to have been done on the Hempstead Reservoir was continued yesterday before the three Referees appointed by the Supreme Court. The Referees—Messrs. Lott, Redman, and Fisher—held court in the Common Council Chamber. The session yesterday was devoted to Corporation Counsel De Witt's opening for the defense. Mr. De Witt quoted several decisions made by the Court of Appeals, which he said made manifest the fact that the plaintiffs could not possibly recover against the city. The speaker gave a history of the Hempstead Reservoir, and said that the whole scheme of construction, from its inception in 1869, till it was stopped in 1876 by an order of the Supreme Court, was a monster fraud. The evidence to prove this fact, the speaker said, would be necessarily circumstantial. After referring to the water scare which was gotten up by means of false documents, the next fact worthy of mention, the speaker said, was the acquisition of the water land. While the majority of the Common Council included only 316 acres, yet Mr. Fowler instructed Col. Adams to take in 100 feet all around, increasing the area about 250 acres. It was claimed that this acquisition was to provide spoil banks, and to avoid extra expense for long hauls. When the specifications were given out, it was not stated that this extra land was for spoil bank purposes, and here the fraud came in. One gentleman who bid added $40,000 to his estimate, because he supposed he would have to buy land for dumping purposes. After referring at length to the fraudulent manner in which the contract had been awarded, Mr. De Witt dealt with the Board of City Works. He said: "This work was done under the administration of a board composed of Mr. Lorin Palmer, William A. Fowler, and Mr. Whiting. Mr. Whiting, it will be seen by the records, offered some opposition to the manner in which the contract was being carried out. Mr. Lorin Palmer, however, who came into public life with some pretensions to morality and religion, joined with Mr. Fowler to overcome any such objection. Now that Mr. Palmer had left public life and had become the proprietor of a newspaper, he seemed also to be devoid of moral and religious sentiment, and preferred to fill the columns of his paper with abuse of public officers who were standing up in the discharge of their duties to watch the interests of the people and demand that fraud and corruption shall cease. There must rest on the heads of Fowler and Palmer, recreant officers, the stigma of public infamy, or the accusation that they are designing knaves."

Mr. De Witt will conclude his opening to-day.

COURT NOTES.

In consequence of the illness of Mr. E. P. Hill, one of the defendants, the Boyd whisky case was again adjourned yesterday until the 19th of February.

Judge Donohue, in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday denied without costs the motion for a reference made by George W. Roome, the former keeper of the City Hall, in his suit against the Mayor, &c.

Lewis Welker, the party of whom Christian Morgan claimed to have procured the counterfeit coin pieces he was endeavoring to dispose of at the time of his arrest, was discharged by Commissioner Shields yesterday, there being no evidence against him.

Judge Van Brunt, in the Court of Common Pleas, Special Term, yesterday appointed ex-Judge William H. Leonard as Referee in the case of Charles Devlin against the City. This suit is brought to recover nearly $200,000 on the old Hackley street-cleaning contract.

Mark Finnagan, of No. 408 First avenue, who, on Dec. 19, stole a watch and other property from William Roseman, of No. 175 Avenue B, pleaded guilty yesterday, in Part I. of the Court of General Sessions. Judge Gildersleeve sentenced him to four years and six months in the State Prison.

On Monday evening Officer Beech, of the Twenty-second Precinct, discovered two burglars, named James Reed and James Ryan, breaking into the residence of Henry Werner, of No. 320 West Fifty-fifth street, through the front basement window. He arrested them, and Justice Smith, in the Fifty-seventh Street Police Court, yesterday committed them for trial.

Pasquale Jakoti was convicted recently of keeping a disorderly-house. A certiorari was obtained in the case to have the proceedings reviewed by the Supreme Court, General Term. He was also ordered to be released on $300 bail, and application was made to Judge Donohue, in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday, for a writ of habeas corpus to bring Jakoti into court so that he could give the necessary bail. The application was granted.

James Abbott, aged 28 years, was arraigned at the Harlem Police Court yesterday on complaint of his two wives, Mary Abbott and Hannah Abbott, who charged him with bigamy. The women made a joint affidavit, which alleges that Mary was married by Rev. John J. Brouner to the prisoner on the 22d of January, 1873, and that Sept. 3, 1876, Hannah was also united to him by Rev. Luther G. Barrett. He was held to answer in default of $2,000 bail.

A SINGULAR DIVORCE SUIT.

Evidence in a very singular divorce case is at present being taken by Mr. Robert A. Davidson, of No. 38 Court street, Brooklyn, who has been appointed Referee. The parties to the suit are Robert Dunham and Amelia, his wife. The suit for divorce was brought by the lady, who is the daughter, by his first wife, of a wealthy Frenchman named Desraimes. Mr. Desraimes died several years ago, leaving $1,000,000 worth of property. Dunham, who is a son of Desraimes' deceased second wife by a former husband, was made Executor. An intimacy which ripened into love sprang up between Dunham and his step-sister Amelia. They were married and lived happily, until Mrs. Dunham, as alleged, discovered that her husband was criminally intimate with a New-York woman named Thiltman. Testimony is taken by the Referee, with closed doors.

DECISIONS.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS.

By Judge Donohue.

Granted.—Petri vs. McEvoy; Ryder vs. Fairbanks; White vs. Devlin; Nosser vs. Perreund; The Wakefield Rattan Company vs. Young; McCahill vs. McCahill; The Citizens' Savings Bank vs. Schmale et al.

Piercy vs. Chase.—Motion denied. By the papers submitted it appears the place of trial was in Erie County. There is no order changing that place of trial, and this motion cannot be made in this case. (Code, section 401, section 4.)

Matter of Jakoti.—Bail fixed on certiorari to General Term at $300.

Motions Denied Without Costs.—Landsdorf vs. Loughlin; Broome vs. The Mayor, &c.

Motions Denied.—Micholls vs. Rosen; Ballessa vs. Stanford; Pratt vs. Adams.

Butterfield vs. Sigmon.—Order for injunction granted.

Memorandums.—Mallory vs. Franch; Beaux vs. Carraher.

By Judge Lawrence.

Approved.—Matter of the Ladies' Association of the Evangelical Lutheran St. Marcus' Church.

Brunsted vs. Hoadley.—I do not think the plaintiff is entitled to charge $10 for each witness examined. Memorandum.

By Judge Barrett.

Matter of Gilming.—Order granted, but I would suggest that the division be arranged if possible so that only the purchase money mortgages shall go to the infant.

Van Volkenburgh vs. Doolittle.—It must be referred back to the Referee to report, (upon the evidence already taken,) as required by the order of Jan. 29, 1876. Memorandum.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

By Judge Van Vorst.

O'Brien vs. Browning et al.—Findings signed.

COMMON PLEAS—SPECIAL TERM.

By Judge J. F. Daly.

New-York Life Insurance Company vs. Meagher.—The only findings necessary must follow the allegations of the complaint.

Devlin vs. Mayor.—Order signed.

MARINE COURT—CHAMBERS.

By Judge Maddox.

Motions Denied Without Costs.—Farmers' Milk Company vs. Raab; Collins vs. Anthony. Opinions, Brookes vs. Jones.

Irwin vs. Zychlinski.—Motion to vacate stay denied, without costs.

Dittenberg vs. Miner.—Complaint dismissed conditionally.

Boyle vs. Conover.—The error of interest, $170 12, must be deducted from the judgment herein by crediting the amount thereof upon any execution of the judgment, or upon any settlement thereof.

Robinson vs. Pullock.—Notice of the application must be given.

Gara vs. Heimer.—Security for costs required.

Proceedings Dismissed.—Mycett vs. Mangett; Crocker vs. Payken.

Abrahams vs. Bruening.—Default opened on terms.

Lotti vs. Krachener.—Motion for security denied.

Boots vs. Sullivan.—E. Jacobus appointed receiver.

Hand vs. Blumberg.—James McNulty, Receiver.

Motions Granted.—Hein vs. Stone; Steele vs. Pelham.

Westerfield vs. Locker.—Motion to mark judgment Thornton vs. McLean.—A. Kunis appointed Receiver.

Delgado.—King vs. Levy; Cohen vs. Solomon; Nash vs. Gedeville vs. Blatchford.

FINANCIAL AFFAIRS.

SALES AT THE STOCK EXCHANGE—JAN. 23.

SALES BEFORE THE CALL—10 A. M.

$25,000 Conn. 6s,'84	111¼	1100	Mich. Cen	do	50⅜
30 Del. & Hudson	70	400	do	do	50¼
100 do	70¼	100	do	do	50⅜
150 do	70	300	do	do	50⅝
10 do	69⅝	100	do	do	49⅞
15 do	69½	400	do	do	50
300 Erie Railway	10⅞	200	do	do	50⅜
600 do	10⅜	400	do	do	50¼
100 do	10⅜	100	do	do	50⅜
400 West. Union	77¾	700	do	do	50⅝
600 do	77⅝	100	do	do	50⅜
600 do	77¾	200	do	do	50¼
200 do	77⅝	600	do	do	50⅜
1000 do	77⅜	1000	do	do	50¼
800 do	77⅜	1500	Lake Shore	do	57
1000 do	77⅜	2400	do	do	56⅞
1900 do	77⅜	400	do	do	57
500 do	77⅜	1000	do	do	56⅞
1200 do	77¼	300	do	do	56⅞
500 do	77⅜	500	do	do	57
200 do	77¾	100	do	do	57⅛
400 do	77¾	100	do	do	57⅛
600 do	77¼	1600	do	do	57⅜
400 do	77	300	do	do	57¼
2500 do	76⅞	1500	do	do	57⅜
100 North-western	86¾	600	do	do	57⅜
100 do	86⅞	600	do	do	57⅜
600 do	87	400	do	do	57⅜
800 North-west. Pref.	57½	500	do	do	57¼
100 do	57⅝	400	N. Y. C. & Hud.		104⅛
100 Un. Pac	64⅝	100	Ill. Cen		58½
615 do	65	1800	D., L. & W		74½
100 Rock Island	102⅛	100	do	do	74⅜
200 do	102	600	do	do	74¼
700 do	102⅛	200	do	do	74⅜
400 Cen. of N. J	84	710	do	do	74¼
200 do	83⅞	5	N. Y., N. H. & H.		152½
100 St. Paul	18¾	40	Mor. & Essex		92¼
100 Pacific Mail	24⅞	200	H. & St. J. Pf		26
100 do	24⅞
100 West. Un	77⅝
200 do	77⅝
100 do	77⅝
100 do	77⅝
700 do	77⅜
100 do	77⅜
100 do	77⅜
100 Amer. Ex	53½
100 Adams Ex	101½
100 N. Y. C. & Hud	104¼
400 Erie Railway	10⅜
200 do	10⅞
100 Un. Pacific	64⅞
100 do	64⅞

GOVERNMENT SALES—10:15 AND 11:30 A. M.

$2,000 U. S. 6s, '81, C	114⅜	$1,000 U. S. 5-20 C., '67	117½
10,000 U. S. 6s, '81, R	114½	1,000 U. S. 5-20 R.,	117½
10,000 U. S. 5-20 R., '65	109⅜	20,000 U. S. 5s, 10-40 R	113⅞
20,000 U. S. 5-20 C., '65	110⅛	2,450 U. S. 5s, '81, R	111¼
1,500 do	110⅞
1,000 do	110¾

FIRST BOARD—10:30 A. M.

$5,000 Tenn. 6s, n. s.	42	200	C. & N. W. Pf. b. c.		57½
1,000 Tenn. 6s, old	42¾	200	do	do	57⅝
4,000 Tenn. 6s, New	42¼	125	do	do	57¾
500 L. & W. B. con	62	100	do	b3.	57⅝
2,000 M. & St. P. 1st Le. C. Div	98½	200	Erie Rail	b. c. b3.	10¾
3,000 do	98¼	500	do	do	10⅝
12,000 M. & St. P. 2d	82½	500	Mich. Cen	b. c.	50¾
10,000 M. & St. P., C. & M. D	97	200	do	do	50⅝
3,000 N. W. U. C. G.	82⅞	1300	do	do	50½
5,000 Ohio & M. 2d	54⅝	1700	do	do	50⅜
3,000 Un. Pac. 1st	104	300	do	b3.	50⅝
10,000 do	104	500	do	do	50⅜
1,000 M. & R. 7s	102	400	do	do	50⅝
5,000 C. C. & Ind. 1st	109	400	do	do	50¾
1,000 No. Mo. 1st	96½	200	do	do	50¾
8,000 O. & M. 2d	84⅜	1200	do	do	50½
3,000 Ohio & M. 2d	54⅝	100	do	b3.	50¾
2,000 M. No. 2d	102¾	900	do	do	50⅝
4,000 P. of M. 2d	88¼	100	C., M. & St. P.	Pf. b. c.	49
2,000 do	88⅛	100	do	do	48⅞
3,000 W. U. C.	100⅜	300	do	do	48¾
1,000 Gt. West. 1st, '88	b. c. 103	2200	L. S. & M. S.	b. c.	57¼
15,000 C. & P. 4th	105	100	do	do	57⅜
1,000 Tol. & Wab. 2d	b. c. 74	1000	do	do	57⅛
5,000 Cen. Pac. 1st, G. bds	92⅜	500	do	b3.	57⅜
2,000 R. T. V. & G. 1st	92	600	do	do	57⅛
20 B'k of N. A	90	600	do	do	51½
800 West. Un	b. c. 77	1200	do	do	57⅝
670 do	77⅛	300	do	b3.	57⅝
500 do	77⅜	800	do	do	57½
500 do	77¼	400	do	do	57⅜
1200 do	77¾	400	do	do	57⅝
500 do	77¾	1000	do	do	57⅜
200 do	77½	300	do	b3.	57⅜
1000 do	b3. 77⅝	100	D., L. & W.	b. c.	74⅜
1815 do	77⅜	300	do	do	74½
200 do	77⅜	700	do	do	74⅜
100 do	77⅝	1200	do	do	74½
600 do	b3. 77⅝	125	Chi. & R. I.	b. c.	102¼
100 Pac. Mail	b. c. 24⅜	500	do	do	102⅜
200 Harlem	b. c. 140	100	do	do	102½
10 Del. & Hudson	70	100	Un. Pac	b. c.	65
100 do	b. c. 69½	100	do	do	65¼
35 U. S. Ex	55	900	do	do	65
5 do	b. c. 54	100	G. of N. J	b. c.	84
7 Amer. Ex	b. c. 57¼	200	do	do	34⅜
80 do	57⅝	100	do	c.	34¼
63 Adams Ex	b. c. 103⅜	100	do	do	34⅜
10 do	103	1600	do	do	34¼
10 N. Y. C. & H. b. c.	104	100	Mor. & Es.	b. c.	93
103 do	104⅛	100	Alt. & T. H. Pf.	b. c.	15
100 Chi. & N. W	b. c. 36⅞	200	H. & St. Jo	b. c.	13
200 do	36⅝	100	H. & St. J. Pr.	b. c.	26
100 C., C., C. & I	103	100	Ohio & M.		7

SALES BEFORE THE CALL—12:30 P. M.

$10,000 Cen. P. gold	107⅛	100	Mich. Cen		50⅝
9,000 Cen. Pac. 1st, S. J. Br	92⅜	100	do		50⅝
11,000 do	92⅛	100	Lake Shore		57⅜
10,000 N. J. C. 1st, con	81	1000	do		57⅜
10,000 Mich. S. & N. I. 1st	91	1000	do		57⅜
100 Del. & Hud	83	1100	do	b3.	57⅝
45 do	89	500	do		57⅜
63 Atl. & Pac. Tel	10½	500	Cen. of N. J		34¼
100 Pacific Mail	24⅞	25	Fort Wayne		101
100 do	24⅞	100	St. Paul		18¾
100 West. Un	77⅝	100	do		19
200 do	77⅝	100	St. Paul Pref		48⅞
100 do	77⅝	49	do		49
100 do	77⅝	400	do		49⅛
200 do	77⅝	100	do		49½
700 do	77⅜	100	do		49¾
100 do	77⅜	100	do		49¾
100 do	77⅜	100	do	b3.	49¾
100 Amer. Ex	53½	500	Mich. S. & N. I.		91¾
100 Adams Ex	101½	400	Rock Island		102⅛
100 N. Y. C. & Hud	104¼	100	do		102⅜
400 Erie Railway	10⅜	500	St. Paul		49
200 do	10⅞	200	St. Paul Pref		49
100 Un. Pacific	64⅞	1000	Ohio & M		7
100 do	64⅞

GOVERNMENT STOCKS—2 P. M.

$10,000 U. S. 5s, '81, R	114⅛	$1,500 U. S. 5-20

The New York Times.

NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, JAN. 24, 1877.

AMUSEMENTS THIS EVENING.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—Fast. (Italian Opera)—Miss Clara Louise Kellogg, Mrs. Seguin, Miss Lancaster, Mr. Carleton, Mr. Peakes.

FIFTH AVENUE THEATRE.—Lemons; or, Wedlock for Seven—Mr. C. F. Coghlan, Miss F. Davenport.

UNION SQUARE THEATRE.—Miss Milton—Miss Clara Morris, Mr. James O'Neil, Mr. J. H. Stoddart.

WALLACK'S THEATRE.—All for Her—Mr. Lester Wallack, Mr. S. Mackaye, Miss Ada Dyas.

BOOTH'S THEATRE.—Dan'l Druce—Mr. Lawrence Barrett.

BIBLO'S GARDEN.—Around the World in Eighty Days (Spectacular)—Kiralfy Brothers.

PARK THEATRE.—Led Astray—Mr. Charles Thorne, Stuart Robson, Miss Fanny Morant.

BROADWAY THEATRE.—Uncle Tom's Cabin—Mrs. G. C. Howard and Georgia Jubilee Singers.

PARK THEATRE.—The Geneva Cross—Mr. C. R. Thorne, Jr., Mr. Stuart Robson, Miss Kate Rogers.

EAGLE THEATRE.—Across the Continent—Mr. Oliver D. Byron.

NEW-YORK AQUARIUM.—Rare and Curious Fish and Mammalia, Statuary, &c.—Day and evening.

HELLER'S WONDER THEATRE.—Prestidigitation, Music, and Humor—Mr. Robert Heller, Miss Heller.

GILMORE'S GARDEN.—Equestrian Games and Field Sports.

SAN FRANCISCO MINSTRELS.—Minstrelsy, Farces and Negro Comicalities.

NATIONAL ACADEMY OF DESIGN.—Exhibition of Water Colors. Day and evening.

THE NEW-YORK TIMES.

The New-York Times is the best family paper published; it contains the latest news and correspondence. It is free from all objectionable advertisements and reports, and may be safely admitted in every domestic circle. The disgraceful announcements of quacks and medical pretenders, which pollute so many newspapers of the day, are not admitted into the columns of The Times on any terms.

Terms, cash in advance.

TERMS TO MAIL SUBSCRIBERS.

Postage will be prepaid by the Publishers on all Editions of The Times sent to Subscribers in the United States.

The Daily Times, per annum, including the Sunday Edition.....$12 00
The Daily Times, per annum, exclusive of the Sunday Edition..... 10 00
The Sunday Edition, per annum..... 2 00
The Semi-Weekly Times, per annum..... 3 00
The Weekly Times, per annum..... 1 20

These prices are invariable. We have no traveling agents. Remit in drafts on New-York or Post Office Money Orders, if possible, and where neither of these can be procured send the money in a registered letter.

Address THE NEW-YORK TIMES,
New-York City

NOTICE.

We cannot notice anonymous communications. In all cases we require the writer's name and address, not for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

We cannot, under any circumstances, return rejected communications, nor can we undertake to preserve manuscripts.

One of the points which tells with all who give the compromise measure any candid attention is the fact that it throws the election of President into the hands of one Judge of the Supreme Court, and to those who were opposed to the recognition of the power of the President of the Senate, this arrangement does not seem an improvement. If one man is to decide the dispute, why should it not be the officer designated by the Constitution to perform important duties in connection with it rather than a Judge picked from the Supreme Court Bench? Mr. Sherman brought out this feature of the case very clearly yesterday—dwelt also on the fact that the arbiter provided in the bill is not to be appointed by the President, or elected by Congress, or clothed with power by any method recognized by the Constitution or heretofore used in practice. He is, on the contrary, to be chosen, in some way not determined, by four other Judges who are themselves designated because they are equally divided in politics. Such a contrivance is without authority in the fundamental law, and is in effect revolutionary.

Mr. Conkling was the innocent cause yesterday of the failure of the plan for forcing a vote on the compromise bill. His speech in favor of the bill was so long that it left Mr. Morton no time in which to make a fair reply to it, and the measure finally went over until to-day. It is now thought that the vote will be taken before adjournment to-night, and that, if the bill is sent to the House, a vote will be called in that body by Friday. Meantime, public opinion is becoming informed, and the more the people study the measure, the less it is liked. The Connecticut Senate has reconsidered the approval which it hastily gave, following in this the example of the Illinois House. The caucus of Republicans in the New-Jersey Legislature has passed a resolution condemning the scheme. In the Senate at Albany, Mr. Woodin's resolutions were called up, and the Democrats, with characteristic indirectness, sought to prevent a vote, and succeeded in postponing the matter until to-day. There is no doubt, however, that the resolutions will be sustained by all the Republican Senators.

The House Committee on Privileges and Elections, of which the talented D. D. Field is actual Chairman and prosecuting attorney, has "struck it rich" at last. A Democratic witness, one Dr. Light, of Lebanon, Penn., has testified that on the day after the late Presidential election he met several persons, of whom Col. Mackey, Republican, was one, in a drinking saloon in Philadelphia. While the cup that cheers and also inebriates was passing over the counter, the witness heard Col. Mackey say that the Louisiana Returning Board would decide that the vote of that State on an honest count belonged to Hayes. This remark the witness felt could only spring from a corrupt heart. He "inferred," as he solemnly declares, that improper means would be used to accomplish the desired result in Louisiana, though Col. Mackey did not intimate as much. It is a great pity that Mr. David Dudley Field should stop at the Philadelphia beer saloons. If his drag-net could only be thrown over the Pewter Mug, the Dew-drop Inn, the Brown Jug, and other bibulous resorts in this City, it is quite possible that the Committee on Privileges and Elections would secure evidence quite as horrifying, suggestive, and sulphurous as that extracted from the convivial Light, of Lebanon, Penn.

The Grand Jury ask of the Legislature, very properly, to amend the law regarding dueling, prize-fighting, and like vulgar and brutal offenses, so that "every person offending against any of the provisions" of the statute "shall be a competent witness against any other person offending in the same transaction, and may be compelled to appear and give evidence before any Grand Jury or in any court, in the same manner as other persons; but the testimony so given shall not be used in any prosecution or proceeding, civil or criminal, against the person so testifying." This recommendation springs, of course, from the obstacles which the Grand Jury has found in the way of bringing to justice the participants in the Marydel affair. That these offenders are severely punished by the general ridicule which their silly conduct has secured them is no reason why they should not incur legal penalties as well, and it is quite proper to remove any technical barriers to the enforcement of the law in similar cases.

Two investigations into the cause of the Ashtabula disaster are now going on—one conducted by the local Coroner and one by a committee of the Ohio Legislature; neither of them, however, promises any satisfactory result. It is quite evident, from the testimony so far taken, that there was loose management of the affairs of the Lake Shore Road a dozen years since, when the bridge was built, and that confusion, jealousy, and want of system prevailed among the officers of the company. But, while it will be very easy to make unpleasant impressions on the public mind by the reproduction of the quarrels of that time, the questions involved in the cause of the disaster are not solved by such evidence. What is highly to be desired is a careful examination of the case by competent engineers, unconnected with the Lake Shore Road, or with roads allied with or rivals to the Lake Shore. If the Ohio Legislature would appoint such a commission, and give it the power necessary for a complete and scientific investigation as to the facts, it would confer a great benefit on the whole country. There are many iron bridges on our railways, and the public ought to know as nearly as possible what reliance is to be placed on them, and whether their weaknesses can be guarded against by inspection.

Diaz is practically supreme in Mexico. The only States in which a shadow of opposition yet remains are Chihuahua and Sinaloa. Iglesias is at Mazatlan, the principal seaport of the last-named State, ready to jump off into the Pacific, we may suppose, whenever his rival revolutionist comes uncomfortably near him. It is blandly remarked of the new administration that it is satisfactory, except in respect of taxation, which is severe. When we consider that a revolutionary government in Mexico has no end or aim in life but to wring money out of the population, this remark appears simplicity itself. As a good instance of this, we notice the treatment of the great banking firm of Barron & Escandon. This house has a railroad contract which the present disorders make impossible of fulfillment. A fine of $150,000 is imposed by those creating the disorders, and thus the military chest is neatly replenished by a military decree.

WHERE THE PLAN WILL FAIL.

There can be no doubt that a large number of Republicans support the Electoral bill under a belief that its enactment will obviate difficulties which, in their opinion, may arise from an acknowledgment of the power of the President of the Senate to count the votes and declare the result. They are anxious, above all things, for a settlement, and they think that the plan surrendering a strong position for the sake of conciliating the Democrats will produce the desired effect. The value of support from this source turns upon the question, whether so favorable an estimate of the measure proceeds from the exaggerated statements of its advocates, or from an intelligent appreciation of its provisions and their probable operation.

What is the purpose to be kept in sight? There are certain States whose votes the Democrats have made a matter of dispute. It is not denied that the returns supplied by the Returning Boards assure the election of Gov. Hayes. As regards three of the States, the Democrats insist that these returns shall be discarded, and returns favorable to Mr. Tilden, derived through channels tainted with fraud and usurpation, accepted in their place. As regards the fourth State, the choice lies between the action of the Returning Board, in strict conformity with local law, and the action of the Governor, in contravention of law. By whom shall the points be determined? If no controversy of this nature existed—or if the election were decided satisfactorily, irrespective of the contested States—there would probably be no objection, in the absence of a joint rule providing otherwise, to the exercise by the President of the Senate of all the authority that has been claimed in his behalf. A difference of judgment might exist as to his right under a strict interpretation of the Constitution, but there could be no partisan motive to active opposition. The Democrats object now, because they assume that the course pursued by the President of the Senate in the count would be inimical to the pretensions of their candidate; and they have uttered various threats designed to convey the impression that they will employ revolutionary means to avert the contingency thus deemed probable, and to secure for their party the control of the Government. Whatever uneasiness is felt is a consequence of these threats. No man not violently partisan sees any cause for anger or alarm in a count by the President of the Senate. He is as likely to be upright, as well informed, and as fearless as a Judge of the Supreme Court. But the Democrats having given to their opposition the form of menaces pointing to anarchy, timid people listened to overtures for compromise. The Electoral bill is the result. And, apart from constitutional considerations, its value must be measured by its efficacy as an agency for the settlement of the points in dispute in a manner more satisfactory than would be attainable by the other method.

Judged by this standard, the Electoral bill is worse than a failure. It is an experiment which cannot possibly work agreeably to both parties, and which will certainly leave a legacy of discontent as great as that which the Democrats profess to apprehend from the concentration of authority in the hands of the President of the Senate. The composition of the proposed tribunal will not inspire implicit confidence. Assuming that the five Senators and the five Representatives are so chosen that in the whole number parties shall seem to be evenly balanced, we may expect that grave differences of opinion will spring up among members nominally belonging to the same party. There may be members who, under cover of a lofty sense of duty, hide unworthy jealousies—who use principle as a pretence for gratifying personal spite. A close analysis of the Conference Committee, from whom the pending bill emanates, might reveal more or less of these peculiarities, and among men who were supposed to be there as exponents of Republican convictions. One reason for looking upon the scheme with distrust is found in the fact that Republicans most closely connected with its authorship, and most pronounced in its support, never at any stage of the canvass subsequent to the nomination of Mr. Hayes evinced cordial interest in his success. Suppose, then, that Senators of this stamp are put upon the commission, and are reckoned among the Republican five, will not the absence of Republican faith in their party loyalty and disinterestedness impair the moral weight of any adverse decision which may be carried by their votes? If it be urged that in the commission, as in the Conference Committee, men are presumed to act as patriots rather than as partisans, we answer that in both cases the understood purpose is to secure to the Republican and Democratic Parties an equal representation. That the Democrats pull together no sane person denies. The trouble with the committee has been that the Presidential interests of the Republican Party were at the mercy of voices and votes which had no sympathy with the movement that found expression in the candidacy of Mr. Hayes.

It is not unreasonable to assume that the same defect will reappear in the construction of the Congressional part of the proposed commission. This alone would justify distrust. The position of things is not mended when we reach the judicial part of the commission. The four Judges named have been selected on partisan ground. The Democrats claim two, and two are accorded to the Republicans. The expectation is that they will severally sustain the purposes of the parties. Of the manner in which the fifth Judge will be chosen, we know nothing. It may be by a bona fide raffle; it may be by dexterously managed artifice. On either supposition, any judgment rendered will commend itself only to the adherents of the party it serves. If it be decided that the Grover trick in Oregon is worthless, and that the three votes of the State belong to Hayes; that the returns of the South Carolina, Louisiana, and Florida Boards, giving these States to the Republicans, are valid and must be accepted, and, therefore, that Hayes is entitled to the Presidency, does any one imagine that the Democratic braggarts and blusterers who have done all the threatening, will acquiesce with a good grace in the defeat of Tilden? Will they be more reconciled to the adverse verdict when delivered by a commission than if it were delivered by the President of the Senate? Reverse the result, and what will be the prevalent feeling among Republicans? They will indulge in no talk about revolution and anarchy. They will submit to the operation of law, whether good or bad. But they will assuredly impute to the commission an exercise of unconstitutional powers, made possible by the treachery of supposed friends. On either hypothesis, it is evident that the verdict of the commission will leave, on one side or the other, as much dissatisfaction and bad feeling as though the machinery provided by the Constitution were allowed to work freely. There will be more, indeed, for the conviction will be cherished that the commission, being a contrivance outside of the Constitution, has a slender claim to respect. The title it may confer upon the occupant of the Presidency will be a defective title; good enough to hold by, perhaps, but lacking the elements of Constitutional strength, and failing to command the confidence of a very large proportion of the people. A compromise which yields nothing better than this may do for lawyers to wrangle over, but it is a sorry substitute for the prescribed mode of ascertaining the popular will.

THE MUNICIPAL CONFERENCE.

At occasional intervals a certain proportion of the business community of this City waken up to a perception of the fact that the burdens of local taxation and the abuses of local administration have as direct and important a bearing upon the commercial prosperity of New-York as any of the problems of national politics or finance. These brief spells of interest in Municipal affairs are sometimes abused by demagogues and sometimes frittered away by well-meaning but impracticable visionaries. It would be unfair to say that they do no good, but it is as well to remember that they do a great deal of harm when they are allowed to pass away without achieving any practical benefits. It must always be a standing discouragement to any work of reform to find its advocates putting words in the place of deeds and giving fresh encouragement to the forces against which they are arrayed by showing that their assault means a mere explosion of powder.

It would be ungenerous to criticise in detail the somewhat disjointed talk which occupied most of the time devoted to yesterday's conference between the Mayor and several members of the Municipal Reform Society. The speakers did not come prepared to make set addresses, and with one or two exceptions they had only the most vague and general ideas of what they wanted. But it cannot be too strongly impressed on the gentlemen who participated in the conference that their duty does not end with making a few slipshod remarks in the Mayor's office about the necessity of increased economy and a higher standard of official responsibility. They have voluntarily assumed the position of representative Reformers, and their fellow-citizens will expect of them something more tangible than the eliciting of an empty series of promises from men whose party necessities as well as their personal affiliations render their professions of very dubious value.

The first practical result of the conference is to be a committee of five, charged with the duty of seeing carried into effect the resolutions adopted yesterday. It is to be presumed that the Mayor and Controller assented to the resolutions, and if so, both these officials have experienced a most gratifying change of heart. It is quite probable that neither Mr. Ely nor Mr. Kelly would have occupied his present position had City administration been treated "rather as a mass of business, to be done upon honest business principles, than as a matter of politics, to be managed in the interest of any party or of any party leaders." But if they assent to that theory now, they are doubtless prepared to bring forth fruits meet for repentance. We are the more hopeful about Mr. Kelly's reformation, inasmuch as in his statement of yesterday he boldly appropriated several ideas which were persistently urged upon public attention by his predecessor. Mr. Kelly's programme is somewhat marred by sundry delusions regarding the uses of the sinking fund, which have certainly no foundation in law, but it is gratifying to observe that, in words at least, his policy is simply that which Mr. Green carried out in spite of the bitter opposition of Tammany Hall.

As Controller, Mr. Kelly thinks that the increase of the City debt is solely due to Albany legislation. As Tammany "Boss," Mr. Kelly exerted all his influence to defeat the repeal of these obnoxious laws. It is, perhaps, not too much to expect that his policy will change with his sentiments, and it is to be hoped that the Advisory Committee of Reformers will remind him that as the virtual dictator in the Board of Apportionment he has the power to see that any laws creating unnecessary debt shall remain a dead letter. Nobody suggested to Mr. Kelly that the arrears of assessments would have been several millions less had his friends in the Legislature not stubbornly resisted all amendments of the laws affecting their validity; had his creatures on street-opening commissions been less extravagant in their fees, his appointees in the Park Board and Department of Public Works more honest in their supervision of work, and his tools in the Board of Aldermen less reckless in their imposition of new jobs on a tax-burdened community. If he honestly desires to increase City revenue he must keep Tammany bummers out of the public markets, and if he desires to see church and other corporate property equitably assessed, he must warn his allies on the Board of Aldermen against devoting any more public money to the making of sewer connections for Roman Catholic churches.

We refer to the actual or possible inconsistencies between Mr. Kelly's professions and his performance mainly as a hint to the committee that they need not be too sanguine about the active co-operation of the Controller,—which is equivalent to saying the Mayor also—in the work of reform legislation. We trust the committee will understand, further, the necessity of giving their support to measures which accomplish something definite in preference to those which adjourn practical relief to another year. There is no reason why they should not urge the creation of a board charged with the grading and classification of minor official salaries, but they must also support, if they mean to retain public respect, specific reductions of extravagant salaries paid to heads of departments as well as a thinning out of the cumbrous and costly array of these commissioners themselves. It will be all the better if the committee can carry to Albany the indorsement of the Mayor and Controller, or even if they can neutralize any opposition which reform legislation might elicit from that quarter. But in any case, they must remember that it would be better not to undertake the business committed to them, if they cannot give to it enough of their time and energy to gain a thorough understanding of what is needful, and to see that the public demands are not defeated by cabals at Albany or intrigues in New-York.

THE PROPOSED COMMISSION.

Leaving out of view the unconstitutionality of the Counting plan, let us see of what the commission consists. It consists of five Democrats, chosen because of the earnestness of their convictions in favor of the election of Tilden, and five Republicans whose belief is firm in the election of Hayes. The House and Senate quintets will, of course, neutralize each other, so that the joint product of their deliberations will be zero. The remainder of the commission consists of five lawyers, not acting in their judicial capacity, but chosen because they happen at this time to occupy seats on the Supreme Bench. Two of these lawyers are faithful Democrats, and were zealous supporters of Tilden. Judge Clifford, chiefly distinguished for the length of his opinions, will hardly venture in his old age to invite and incur the painful hostility of his political associates by opposing the party that elevated him to the Bench, and with which he has for a lifetime voted. Judge Field is a California politician, who has been a Democratic aspirant for the Presidency, and is a younger brother of David Dudley Field, the special attorney of Tilden and Tweed. To what extent Judge Field shares the opinions of his brother with respect to counting the Electoral vote we do not know, but it has been credibly reported that he has expressed the opinion that the candidate whom he supported has been elected President. Judge Miller, of Iowa, and Judge Strong, of Pennsylvania, the two ablest lawyers on the Supreme Bench, have been identified with the Republican Party since its origin. Although Judge Miller has a more combative and aggressive nature than Judge Strong, and is more positive in his opinions, it is not probable that either would reach conclusions other than those reached by all the leading Republican lawyers in the United States, or enunciate doctrines at variance with those of Chancellor Kent. The conclusions, then, of Justices Strong and Miller on the one side, would doubtless neutralize those of Justices Clifford and Field on the other side. Hence, the decision of the contest for the Presidency of the United States would be made at last by one man, that is, the fifth Justice, whom the four named shall select. Instead, then, of permitting the high officer designated by the framers of the Constitution to perform his solemn functions, it is proposed to substitute for him a judicial officer of another department of the Government, a department that has no constitutional connection or relation with the act or process of electing a President, either direct or remote. The person who will count the vote and decide the Presidential question will most probably be Judge David Davis.

Judge Davis is a nominal independent or no-party man. Judges Clifford and Field will insist, with an impressive show of plausibility, that fair play and fair dealing require that Davis should be placed on the commission rather than a confirmed Republican like Justice Bradley or Justice Swayne. If Justice Strong yields to such persuasive plausibility, Judge Davis becomes the President-maker and master of the situation. Does any well-informed person doubt on which side of the pending controversy the sympathies of Judge Davis are enlisted? Since his decision in the Milligan case, the position of this ambitious gentleman has not been misunderstood by his immediate friends. He has been in much favor as a Democratic candidate for the Presidency, and confidently expected the nomination of the St. Louis Convention. His prospects are good for being chosen by Democratic votes United States Senator from Illinois. He was open in his support of the cause of the Democracy in the Presidential campaign. David Davis will be regarded by the Democracy as a safe man for Mr. Tilden.

"BUTLER BURIED."

The suggestion that the final result of the Senatorial contest in Massachusetts may be taken as conclusive of Butlerism in that State, is too good to be true. But a dispatch from one of the friends of the successful candidate to Congressman Pierce, presented the case thus: "Butler buried." To Senator Boutwell's credit it should be said that the relations which subsisted between him and Butler were not necessarily of the choosing of the former. Butler and his followers were glad to spread the impression that they were the allies of Boutwell. When the Senatorial struggle was being organized, there was apparently no other choice than this for Butler. He had met Hoar too often as an adversary to be other than his enemy now. And if an outside observer, at all familiar with Massachusetts politics, had been asked to name two leading men who were exponents of the best and worst elements in the Republican Party in the Bay State, he would have unhesitatingly answered, "Hoar and Butler." It was the misfortune of Mr. Boutwell that he could not stand as the representative of the first-named of these Republican sub-divisions. It would not have been fair to have classed him in that manner. And, on the other hand, it would have been unjust to put him in the same category with Butler himself. Senator Boutwell has conscience, sensitiveness, and an honest record. Even the most infatuated of partisans will not claim either of these moral advantages for Butler. Nevertheless, an unhappy fate seems to have linked the two men together in the defeat of one of them for the Senatorship.

Without going into the inquiry as to how far it is true that Butlerism was arrayed in championship for Boutwell, the main result is gratifying. It is something at least that even the suspicion of being afflicted with Butler's friendship is ruinous in Massachusetts. Mr. Boutwell's allies may have been as free from any relations with Butler as with Wade Hampton. Nevertheless, the impression to the contrary did obtain, and it undeniably hurt Boutwell very much. Let those who remember Butler's several audacious and successful canvasses in his own district, with all their scandals, answer if this is not a gain in the interest of honest Republicanism, There was a time when Butler could once and again throw the State into a tremor of agitation over the possibilities of his being the Republican candidate for Governor. Over and over again, he has come so near the nomination that the party which he used as a personal property was breathless for two days. Now it is broadly admitted that his friendship is fatal. The times have certainly improved.

While we may condole with Mr. Boutwell on the misfortune which pursued him with Butler's obtrusive sympathy, we may very properly congratulate the Republican Party in Massachusetts upon its advance. It certainly is an advance to choose for Senator a man who is conspicuous as the foe of that style of politics which we call Butlerism. It is an advance that the party has practically expressed a desire to have done with Butler, and to have itself fumigated, as it were, after he has been treated with marked avoidance. But Mr. Hoar is not only a man of eminent ability and high character, but an uncompromising Republican. His election does not happen to be a victory in the slightest degree for the political dilettanti who fancy that public affairs can be conducted without parties. Was there in the late canvass a candidate who was an original Republican, who had been an exemplar of the best principles of the party, and a faithful defender of its policy? None the less so was George F. Hoar. And it is to his credit and to the honor of the uneasy and usually pragmatic Independents of Massachusetts that he received so much of their support. It was Mr. F. W. Bird, whom the Democratic World delights to quote as saying that the Republican Party must be destroyed, who telegraphed to Washington the first jubilant news of Hoar's election. And though at first there was the usual loose talk of uniting bolters from both political organizations on a no-party man, it is undoubtedly true that these Independents are amply satisfied with the result. They know that though Mr. Hoar will never surrender party in any field where party advantages may be legitimately claimed, he will, to use the language of his Virginian eulogists, "with noble patriotism, subdue passion and prejudice to his love of justice." It is, we believe, the election of a Republican so just and so devoted which signalizes the correction of the weakness which has endured, and the political dishonesty which has encouraged, Butlerism in Massachusetts.

FALSE PHILOLOGY.

A writer in one of our recent magazines, who is evidently addicted to philology, has been striving to discover the origin and true meaning of the favorite New-England asseveration "I swan," and has arrived at the conclusion that it is an abbreviation of the expression, "I swear by any of the gods of antiquity." He advances the theory that the original New-Englander may have made habitual use of this long and comprehensive oath, but that his descendants, having learned the value of time, and become convinced that no truly conscientious man has a right to waste the time required to repeat an oath of nine distinct words, condensed it into the neat and handy shape of "I swan." This theory is ingenious, and it tends to show that the original Puritans who settled New-England were more or less familiar with the Greek and Roman classics, but it is untenable, and if not promptly demonstrated to be such, may seriously mislead the public in regard to a very important matter.

A little philology is a dangerous thing, and had the magazine writer above referred to been acquainted with the latest and most valuable authorities upon philology he would never have suggested the false derivation of "swan." There is undoubtedly no philologist who deserves to rank higher than Mr. Lewis Carroll, the author of those profound works, Alice in Wonderland and Behind the Looking-Glass, together with that wonderfully subtle and acute essay on the Hunting of the Snark. Mr. Carroll is the discoverer of the great principle of philology which teaches the dual origin of words. He shows that many of the best and most satisfactory words have been formed by the combination of two other and seemingly dissimilar words. Thus, "frumious" is compounded of "furious" and "fuming," and contains the meanings of the latter two, done up in one package. In like manner, the "Snark," an animal regarded by naturalists as the connecting link between the shark and the snake, owes its name to the union of the names of the latter. The magazine philologist seems to have had a vague idea that words are sometimes welded together, but he knows nothing of the principle which Mr. Carroll has been the first to formulate, and to test by actual experiment and research.

Let us apply this principle to the investigation of what may be called the moral profanity of the native New-Englander, and we shall easily trace the origin of the expression which has puzzled the magazine philologist. When the New-Englander desires to express himself strongly, but wishes at the same time to avoid the commission of actual profanity, he either "swans" or "swows." It is easy to grasp the origin of "swow," which is manifestly compounded of "swear" and "vow." By uniting the two the New-Englander preserves the respective strength of each, while their profanity is neutralized. The Deacon who would die, or lose three dollars, or undergo any other acute suffering sooner than exclaim "I swear" or "I vow," finds that his mind is fully relieved and his conscience unhurt by calmly "swowing." Thus we perceive that by the aid of the Carrollian principle the origin of "swow." is made perfectly clear, although without such a principle pretenders to philology would doubtless have assigned to the word a fantastic and wholly erroneous origin.

In former days, when a New-Englander was told anything which surprised or interested him, he was accustomed to remark, "Well! I want to know!" This remark by no means implied a thirst for further information, but it was usually so construed by people of other than New-England origin, and thus it frequently happened that a New-Englander who had been told an interesting anecdote by a New-York man, and had exclaimed that he wanted to know, was interpreted literally and compelled to listen to three or four consecutive rehearsals of the anecdote. This naturally exasperated him, and after the fourth recital he usually felt a strong desire to swear. He curbed this desire, by connecting the word "swear" and the sentence "I want to know," in the alternate shape of "I swant!" Gradually the latter expression assumed an independent existence, and in time the final "t" was dropped for the sake of euphony. At the same time the formula "I want to know" fell into disuse, because of the unpleasant complications to which it sometimes led, and was wholly superseded by "I swan," which is now popularly, though incorrectly, regarded as exactly synonymous with "I swow." The unwarrantable and unscientific nature of the derivation given to this expression by the magazine philologist can now be clearly apprehended, and his ignorance of Mr. Carroll's labors in the philological field is as evident as it is inexcusable.

A strict regard for accuracy requires the admission that there are certain New-England expressions the origin of which cannot be explained by Mr. Carroll's principle. These, however, are obviously foreign words which have been incorporated with the New-England language, and in most cases their origin must be sought outside of the great family of Aryan languages. The "gosh" of New-England, who is constantly appealed to as though he were a local deity, is obviously identical with the Chinese "Josh." The word "golly" also bears evident marks of Chinese origin. It is a peculiarity of the Chinaman that in speaking a foreign language he substitutes the soft liquid "l" for many of the harsher Aryan sounds. Thus he transfers "American" into "Melican," and "right" into "light." He also has an invincible tendency to add the sound of "e" to words which do not require it, as "peecee" and "walkee." Now, "golly," or its abbreviated form "gol"—sometimes inaccurately written "gaul"—exhibits both these Chinese peculiarities, and this fact, taken in connection with the use of the term "gosh," irresistibly leads us to believe that the Chinese has had a modifying influence upon the New-England tongue. How and where this influence was exercised is a question of vast interest and importance, but time and space forbid its discussion at present.

FATAL ACCIDENT.

Claremont, Jan. 23.—At the Monadnock Mills to-day Daniel Ewing, overseer, was caught in the shafting while adjusting a belt, and killed.

ALBANY.

BUSINESS IN THE ASSEMBLY.

A PROTRACTED DISCUSSION ON A BILL AUTHORIZING THE CONSTRUCTION OF NARROW-GAUGE RAILROADS — PROPOSED ABOLITION OF THE NEW-YORK CITY PARK DEPARTMENT—BILLS REGARDING THE COURTS.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ALBANY, Tuesday, Jan. 23, 1877.

Tuesday being general order day, the Assembly went into Committee of the Whole immediately on assembling this morning, and a protracted discussion took place on the bill of Mr. Ruggles, authorizing the construction of narrow-gauge railroads, and empowering railroad companies which change their gauge to the requirements of the act, to charge five cents a mile fare. The point of the whole debate was the proposition to cut down the fare to three cents, or failing this, to limit the operation of the bill to future roads. On this dispute the House worked itself into a state of great heat, but the bill was finally ordered to a third reading without amendment. In the House, Mr. Ecclesine announced the death of Representative James Healy, of New-York. Short speeches were made by Mr. Alvord, Mr. Husted, Mr. Holahan, and Mr. Lang bein, and the House adjourned.

Several bills would have been introduced this morning had the opportunity offered. Mr. Flecke, for instance, had ready for introduction a bill abolishing the Park Department. It is the first of a series which he will introduce, having for their object the merging of the Dock Department in the Department of Public Works and the merging of the Department of Buildings in the Fire Department, which department is reduced to a single head. The Health Department is also threatened; but how, Mr. Flicke does not at present say. He declines also to say who are the men who support these bills beyond the assertion that they have the approval of Mayor Ely, Mr. Ottendorfer and, he thinks, of Controller Kelly.

The Park Department bill, which will be introduced to-morrow, is very thoroughgoing. It abolishes the Park Commission and repeals all the laws creating it. It vests all the powers now possessed by the Commissioners over all parks and places in the City in the Commissioner of Public Works, the same to remain in force as they now are unless modified or abrogated by him. The Commissioner is authorized to appoint a Superintendent of Parks at a salary of $3,000, to oversee and keep them in order. No Police shall be appointed for any of the parks except by the Board of Police, who may detail the regular Police to take care of them. The control of the streets of the City, exercised heretofore by the Park Department, shall be invested in the Department of the City Government as now provided by law in reference to the other streets of the City. The surveying and laying out of the new streets in the annexed district shall be done by the Department of Public Works; but no new street is to be opened without the authorization of the Mayor and Aldermen, upon application by property holders representing a majority in interest of property adjoining such proposed street. Where work has been contracted for and begun by the Park Department it may be continued by the Commissioner of Public Works, but he may decide to discontinue it. No new work shall be undertaken under any law authorizing the Park Department to do the same, except that a rustic fence may be built across the northern side of Central Park, the stone parapet or fence along the easterly side of the Park may be completed to its northern corner, and then the Park shall be considered to be completed, and no further expenditures shall be made except for maintenance of the Observatory, Museum gallery, and buildings. Whenever it shall be necessary, in the opinion of the Mayor and Controller, to issue bonds under any law relating to the Park Department, the Controller may issue such bonds in the form and manner he may think proper. Within ten days after the passage of this act the books and papers of the Park Department shall be delivered to the Department of Public Works, at which time the salaries of all employes in the Park Department shall cease. Any person whose engagement cannot be legally terminated at this time will continue in the employ of the Public Works Department, but only until his engagement can be legally terminated. All moneys in the hands or under the control of the Park Department, if drawn from the City Treasury, shall be immediately repaid thereto, and all moneys appropriated for such department shall be considered available by the Department of Public Works, but only to the extent necessary to carry this law into effect, and to be applied only to such purposes.

Mr. Cozzans will introduce two bills of interest to the legal profession, both relating to the Surrogate's Court. One is intended to dispense with the printing of the evidence taken in contested will cases, as is now required to be done, by providing that the stenographer shall make a plain copy of the evidence taken, and this shall be bound in book form and be made a record of the court. The other bill authorizes the Clerk of the court to sign certain writs, papers and orders, the same as clerks of other courts.

The Committee on Cities will give a hearing to the Police Commissioners on Tuesday next, on the street-cleaning bill introduced by Mr. Cowdin in the Assembly. One of its provisions is the requirement that the work of cleaning the streets shall be let on district contracts. The same committee will also give a hearing on the bill introduced by the same gentleman requiring the Mayor to summon an advisory council on the method of reducing the cost of the City Government. Mayor Ely, who is expected to appear, it is understood, is already consulting with leading citizens on the subject referred to in the bill.

A proposed constitutional amendment in the form of a bill will be introduced in the Assembly to-morrow by Mr. Laugoem, and in the Senate by Mr. Gerard, abolishing the Superior and Common Pleas Courts, and merging their powers in the Supreme Court. This proposition was before the last Legislature. Senator Bixby's bill in relation to the Marine Court will not be ready for a day or two.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR.

THE ELEVATED RAILROAD AND SIXTH AVENUE PROPERTY OWNERS.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

A report appeared in your paper on Sunday of a meeting held by the North Side Association, wherein it is stated that all opposition by private persons to the construction of the Gilbert Elevated Railroad has ceased, and that the only objection to the completion of the road is made by the Sixth Avenue Railroad Company. Now, it is not our purpose to enter into any long discussion of the matter through the newspapers, but we wish to inform the said association through your columns, that they are laboring under a great mistake, as fully nine-tenths of the occupants on Sixth avenue are opposed to it as well as the Sixth Avenue Railroad Company. The owners of property are bitterly opposed to it, and will use all lawful means to protect themselves from what they consider an outrage upon their rights, as well as the rights of the public to the free and unobstructed use of the streets in the City of New-York.

We have in our possession as proof of our assertions, remonstrances signed by nearly all the owners as well as occupants on the avenue.

E. A. MORRISON, WARREN FERRIS,
WILLIAM MOIR, JAMES R. THOMAS,
Executive Committee Sixth Avenue Association.

New-York, Tuesday, Jan. 23, 1877.

OBITUARY.

EBENEZER WHITE ARMS.

The death of Ebenezer White Arms, at Aurora, has left a void in the village where he has long resided not soon to be filled. Mr. Arms was born March 29, 1805, in Greenfield, Mass., and died Jan 15, 1877. He entered Yale College in 1824; after graduating read law, and entered into partnership with Hon. Christopher Morgan, at Aurora, Cayuga Lake, N. Y., in 1833. He continued to reside there until his death. During these 45 years he was intrusted with the management and settlement of very numerous estates, many of them large. They were always administered with great fidelity. He has left many to mourn his loss.

SENATORIAL CONTESTS.

A NEW MOVE MADE IN ILLINOIS.

SIX MORE BALLOTS TAKEN, AND NO CHOICE MADE—GEN. LOGAN WITHDRAWS FROM THE CONTEST—EX-JUDGE LAWRENCE NOMINATED BY THE REPUBLICANS.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

SPRINGFIELD, Jan. 23.—Six ballots taken to-day resulted in no choice for Senator. Gen. Logan lost ground from the start, and Mr. Washburne gained, getting enough Democrats to have elected him had all the Republicans voted for him. The Logan men, finding the drift toward Washburne, started Milton Hay, of this city, who got a few Republican votes which would have gone to Washburne, and might have drawn others after them. The Republicans scattered a good deal during the balloting, but on the last ballot they rallied to Logan again to permit him and the party to retire in good order. On the last ballot he had 92 votes, 9 short of a majority. Gen. Anderson did better than ever; but it was demonstrated that unless driven to it by the continued candidacy of Logan the Democrats would never vote solid for Anderson, and without the solid vote he cannot be elected. The Democrats who refused to vote for Anderson scattered, their object being to prevent his election until the Republicans put up some one besides Logan, against whom they are bitterly hostile. They prefer to see a Republican rather than Anderson elected, provided that Republican is not Logan. It is expected that some Republican will yet be elected by the aid of Democratic votes.

At the Republican caucus to-night Gov. Logan withdrew, and Charles B. Lawrence ex-Chief Justice of the State, was nominated. He is one of the ablest jurists in Illinois; was Circuit Judge for one term, and afterward on the Supreme bench for nine years. He was a candidate for re-election on the Republican ticket four years ago, but was defeated by the Granger movement. Since then he has been practicing law in Chicago, where he resides. He has never mixed in partisan politics, but has always been, and is, a Republican. He is a man of exalted personal character, and it elected will be an ornament to the Senate. He wrote a letter last week declining to be a candidate, saying he could not serve; but it is believed that if elected he will do so. A few days ago several Democrats gave him complimentary votes, and he will probably get enough Democrats to-morrow to elect him if all the Republicans stick. This is not at all certain, though the chances are rather in favor of his election. The Democratic caucus to-night again indorsed Anderson. They would not change from him until certain that Logan was out of the field. One thing is pretty certain—Anderson cannot beat Lawrence.

THE NEW-JERSEY SENATORSHIP.

THE HOUSES VOTING SEPARATELY FOR UNITED STATES SENATOR—THE FEELING OVER M'PHERSON'S NOMINATION—A SPECIMEN OF DEMOCRATIC DISREGARD OF LAW.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

TRENTON, Jan. 23.—The nomination of John R. McPherson by the Democrats on the first ballot last evening was a surprise to them and to everybody else. No one believed that the successful candidate had more than 15 or 16 assured votes. For a time after the nomination had been made, loud threats of bolting had been made by the friends of Judge Green, and one member from Newark declared emphatically that he would under no circumstances vote for McPherson. Green's visit of congratulation to the winning man was the signal to his friends to yield their preferences, and to-day the nomination slipped easily through the party machinery. Both houses took the first step to-day toward the carrying of the caucus edict into effect. The United States statute provides that on the second Tuesday succeeding the organization of the Legislature, the houses shall ballot separately for Senator, and that on the following day they shall meet in joint caucus and consummate the election. The first part of the programme was enacted to-day.

With a remarkable facility for self-stultification, the Republican caucus this morning first passed a resolution denouncing the patent Electoral College of 15, then telegraphed their legislative displeasure and implied censure to Senator Frelinghuysen, as one who helped to beget the scheme and who has since been nursing it; then promptly named him as their choice for re-election, and finally took pains to declare that the action was intended as a compliment to somebody—possibly Mr. Frelinghuysen—and that they shouldn't think of voting for him in earnest, unless it was demonstrated that nobody else had a chance of being elected. They stood manfully up to the programme in both houses when the formal vote was called, and delivered to Mr. Frelinghuysen a solid compliment according to the contract.

Soon after the opening of the morning session the Assembly entered upon the election. Mr. Drake nominated Senator Frelinghuysen on behalf of the Republicans. Mr. Bergen, on behalf of the Democrats, nominated McPherson. The roll-call showed 30 votes for each. All the disaffected Democrats wheeled into line, and when their names were called answered McPherson's name. The four who bolted the caucus and gave the organization of the House to the Democrats voted with the Republicans. On the part of the House there was no election, and it was so recorded on the minutes.

In the Senate, Senator Dayton, who had been one of the foremost of Green's friends, nominated McPherson, and Senator Kirk, of Essex, placed Mr. Frelinghuysen before the members, and, after the roll had been called, it was announced that Mr. McPherson had received 11 votes and Mr. Frelinghuysen 10, and that on the part of the Senate Mr. McPherson had been elected United States Senator.

It cannot be said that Mr. McPherson's nomination is greeted with great enthusiasm among the Democrats of the State. Mr. Green represented what little of culture and respectability the party possesses.

The anxiety over the Senatorial question has bred rumors of all descriptions this evening. The greatest excitement and activity is observable among the clans who have gathered beneath the banner of the Scottish chief, and all their efforts but poorly hide the anxiety they feel concerning the certainty of their majority to-morrow in the joint convention. They are nervous and despondent as they never have been before, and every impossible story whispered in their ears finds easy credence among them. They are telling tales of fabulous sums offered in the interest of one or the other of the Republican aspirants for the one vote which will defeat McPherson and elect a Republican to the seat which he almost grasps. Every Democratic member whose course has given rise to the slightest suspicion in the minds of his fellow-Democrats is closely watched and guarded. One of them, a wealthy Newark brewer, was emphatic last night in his declaration that he would not vote for McPherson. But he was taken in hand by a fellow-member, who now keeps in his sight constantly, and intends to do so till noon to-morrow. Stories are current that other members have shaken off their party allegiance, but the rumors do not name the men. The Green elements are growing hotter in their antagonism to Mr. McPherson, and to-night the feeling among them is more bitter and pronounced than it was last night. Other rumors connect this party with a possible break from the caucus. It will not be, however, to a Republican, but to some other Democrat, though in the party demoralization which would follow the Republicans would find their opportunity. In direct contrast with the excitement prevailing among the Democrats is the feeling of quiet ease observable among the Republicans. So far from having done or said anything to give rise to uneasiness among their political opponents, the Republicans seem to be unconscious of the dismay which has seized the other camp. It is as likely as not that the Democratic troubles are born of their fears, and that their imaginations have conjured up the spooks which terrify them. It, however, there be any advantage for the Republicans in the current of affairs between this and morning, the Republicans are prepared to profit by it. They will caucus in the morning to review the field before going into joint caucus.

It is hardly proper to divulge the secrets which have been imparted to your correspondent in strictest confidence. But it can do little harm at this hour to state that Mr. Halsey has Kruger's vote and one other, which will certainly elect him; that Mr. Phelps has secured two Democratic Senators, which assures his election; that Mr. Bettle posted up a bulletin which sets forth in staring capitals the vindication of Secretary Robeson by the Judiciary Committee, and that every Republican is now consumed with zeal to emphasize this vindication by making him Senator, and that Mr. Rabe, in return for the four Republican votes which made him Speaker, has taken an affidavit that he will be Mr. Robeson's forty-first man; that Mr. McCarter has been here all the afternoon and has matured a plot to poison Leon Abbett; that Mr. Green has a pair of Abdiels, faithful found among the faithless, who will hold out for Green and culture until reinforced by the entire Republican vote. It ought to be added that Mr. McPherson manifests no mortal terror of the morrow. He looks more cheerful than the chief magistrate of this Commonwealth, whose hair has been turning gray very rapidly during the past 24 hours.

The Democrats of the House made a very large display of lawless partisanship this afternoon over a very trifling matter. The incident is worth the telling, only because it shows to what extreme lengths they will go to accomplish the smallest conceivable meanness. As soon as it was discovered that Mr. Taylor, one of the Republican members, was absent, and that the Democrats were in the majority, Mr. Bergen offered a resolution giving the current printing of the House to a Democratic concern down the street, known by the firm name of Naar, Day & Naar. Last year a law was passed, with the concurrence of both houses, making John L. Murphy the State printer. That law is still in force, and Messrs. Seovel and Griggs, calling attention to it, pointed out the absurdity of endeavoring to override a law, made such by the vote of two houses and the signature of the Governor, by a mere resolution of the House of Assembly. The Democrats were proof against all appeals, and almost as soon as the resolution had been offered to-day the "previous question" was ordered. Griggs filibustered against its adoption till he had exhausted all the methods of delay sanctioned by parliamentary usage; but the fight was necessarily a short one, and the resolution was adopted. Of course it is ineffective. The act of last year operates till it shall have been regularly and properly repealed, and the Democrats have succeeded in doing nothing more than display the petty meanness of their partisanship and their utter contempt for the law which governs them.

Among the bills introduced are one designed to abolish the Newark Excise Board, and placing the issuing of liquor licenses in the hands of the City Clerk. One by Mr. Howell, repealing the act for the publication of the laws in the newspapers, which last year cost the State $50,000; a local option law by Mr. Voorhies, and a general law for the government and creation of horse railroad companies, by Senator Silvertnorn.

THE KANSAS SENATORSHIP.

TOPEKA, Jan. 23.—In the Senate to-day, on a vote for United States Senator, P. B. Plumb received 7 votes; T. A. Osborn, 6; J. M. Harvey, 6; W. T. Simons, 6; T. C. Sears, 4; J. P. St. John, 3; E. Stillings, 2; John Martin, Democrat, 2; P. H. Elser, 1; W. A. Phillips, 1; B. F. Simpson, 1; D. F. Lowe, 2. In the House Plumb received 17 votes; Simpson, 9; Simons, 17; Sears, 12; E. Tucker, 1; Harvey, 20; Osborn, 17; St. John, 3; Stillings, 5; Phillips, 4; Martin, 13; J. P. Root, 3; Isaac Eaton, 1. There were two absentees.

THE GEORGIA SENATORSHIP.

ATLANTA, Jan. 23.—In the ballot for United States Senator to-day the total vote cast in both branches was 217, being 2 less than the whole number of votes in the General Assembly. The vote was as follows: Norwood, 104; Hill, 86; Smith, 22; Walker, 4; Jenkins, 1. Necessary to a choice, 109. The vote in each house was as follows: In the Senate—Norwood, 21; Hill, 14; Smith, 9. In the House—Norwood, 83; Hill, 72; Smith, 13; Walker, 4; Jenkins, 1. The indications are that Norwood will be elected on the first ballot to-morrow.

THE WEST VIRGINIA SENATORSHIP.

WHEELING, Jan. 23.—After the failure of the caucus to make nominations last night, the Legislature being required by law to commence balloting to-day, cast one ballot with the following result: For the short term—Hereford, 21; Price, 22; Carlisle, 19; Walker, 15; scattering, 9. For the long term—Faulkner, 25; J. J. Davis, 12; H. G. Davis, 27; J. N. Camden, 3; scattering, 19.

In the Democratic caucus to-night two ballots for United States Senators were taken, with no choice. For the long term Faulkner received 23 votes, and Davis 22. For the short term, Hereford 23 votes and Price 19; necessary to a choice, 33.

AMUSEMENTS.

ENGLISH OPERA.

A brief season of English opera was begun at the Academy of Music, last evening, by Miss Kellogg and the efficient company which has surrounded her since Autumn. The Academy has not presented a similar scene in months, not to say in years. It was crowded in every part, even the aisles being crammed, and the audience was quite as brilliant as it was numerous. The occasion could almost be dismissed with this record, for neither the opera nor its representatives suggest aught that is new in respect of comment. The work chosen for performance was "The Bohemian Girl," and its principal interpreters were Miss Kellogg, Mrs. Seguin, Mr. Maas, Mr. Conly and Mr. Seguin. In spite of the age of "The Bohemian Girl," Balfe's best-known achievement never fails to attract and delight. Its story is thread-bare, its airs are done to death, but still the charm of both is potent. The perennial youth of "Il Trovatore" is the only parallel case we can recall, and, as regards the Italian drama, it must be observed that its material is far inferior in intelligibility and interest to the English libretto. "The Bohemian Girl" derives, however, the largest share of its vitality from the score. The thoughtful and educated listener may indeed seek something else besides fluent tunes in opera, as understood by Gluck, Meyerbeer, and Wagner, but many ages will go by before the majority of mortals lose their taste for suave progressions, well-rounded phrases, and harmonies of appreciable limpidity and sweetness. To the taste of the majority, then, "The Bohemian Girl" may be counted upon to appeal for some time longer, and even the music-lover of refinement will now and then be glad to lend an attent ear to its facile melodies. "I Dreamed that I Dwelt," "The Heart Bowed Down," "When other lips" and all the remembered songs were heard with gratification last night, and the applause was hearty and bounteous. Of the artists it is not necessary to write at length. Miss Kellogg's welcome was most cordial, and the gratification of the public at seeing in their midst a songstress who has striven hard to secure the highest place in American art—and one from which it will be no slight task to dislodge her—assumed the old but ever-pleasant aspect of plaudits and flowers. Miss Kellogg is as brilliant as ever, and as correct and conscientious into the bargain. Her Arline is as good as her Marguerite—the possibilities of the former rôle, naturally, being much smaller—and more need scarcely be conceded. Mr. Maas sang Thaddeus exceedingly well, his voice constantly gaining power while its quality remains unimpaired. The remaining characters were all in competent hands, as set forth above. We have only to add that the co-operation of a strong chorus and of an excellent orchestra, under Mr. Behrens, rendered the representation one of absolute symmetry, and augured auspiciously for the success of the more serious business which is in store for Miss Kellogg and her associates, as the season advances. To-night, Miss Kellogg appears in "Faust."

BRIEF MENTION.

"The Geneva Cross" will be acted this evening at the Park Theatre.

The sale of seats for Mlle. Aimée's representations at the Eagle Theatre opens to-morrow morning.

Dr. Herman Linde will recite "Julius Cæsar" at Steinway Hall, to-morrow afternoon. Dr. Linde, we believe, has performed the marvelous feat of acquiring in a few weeks the English language to a sufficient extent to recite the tragedy as written, and "Julius Cæsar" will, accordingly, be interpreted in the vernacular.

Mr. Reinhard Schmelz gave his third and last symphony concert at Steinway Hall, last evening. Mr. Schmelz had the co-operation of Mr. Thomas' orchestra, and was thus enabled to supply a tasteful and correct, if not a positively powerful rendering of Rubinstein's magnificent "Ocean" symphony. This work constituted the second part of the programme; the first included a new overture by Gernsheim, and a "serenade," in three movements, by Jadassohn, all agreeable specimens of light and graceful writing. Mme. Pappenheim sang an aria from Wagner's "Rienzi" during the progress of the concert.

WASHINGTON.

DAVID DUDLEY FIELD'S MISSION.

RAKING UP BAR-ROOM TWADDLE AS TESTIMONY FOR CONGRESS TO ACT ON.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—David Dudley Field seems to have exhausted his investigation down in the very dregs. To-day, he had witnesses to prove a bar-room conversation over drinks in Philadelphia, the day after the November election. His efforts were crowned with the presentation of a story that "Bob" Mackey claimed Louisiana, and that Col. Reeder could not see how Mackey could make that claim when the reports were that Tilden carried the State by 10,000 majority, and Mackey replied the Returning Board would give the State to Hayes. Mackey does not remember anything about the conversation, but one Dr. Light remembers it, and the impression made upon his mind was that improper means would be used to secure the result in Louisiana, and that the Returning Board would fix it. The great lawyer who is much talked of privately among Democrats here as "a bigger man" than his brother on the Supreme Bench, has thus got upon record under oath the impressions of a private Democratic citizen caused by a bantering remark of a Republican on the morning after election, when each was claiming the victory for his own side.

MANAGEMENT OF THE CAMPAIGN.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—The Committee on the Powers, Privileges, and Duties of the House in Counting the Electoral Vote, this morning had before them Gen. Eckert, the President of the Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph Company, who testified that he had in his custody the telegrams mentioned in the subpœna, and sent or received by certain parties pending the canvass, and would produce them to the committee within a day or two. None of them had, to his knowledge, been destroyed.

Robert W. Mackey, of Philadelphia, was questioned as to conversations with Col. Reeder and Dr. Light in that city, but had no distinct recollection of their substance; he left for Jacksonville on the Thursday following the election, but ascertaining that prominent representatives of the two parties were at Tallaassee, he returned home; he went to Florida to look into the condition of affairs, and told Mr. Kemble, Don Cameron, and Col. Hoyt, the Chairman of the Pennsylvania Republican Committee, that he was going to Florida for that purpose; he received from them no suggestion or hint as to what he should do to secure the vote for Hayes; he told gentlemen of Florida that if they would make a canvass of the vote, and obtain proofs of the actual count in disputed counties, he would help to pay expenses; there was no offer of money to interfere with an honest counting of the vote; he did give money from his own pocket for the purposes mentioned, but did not know of any other money being paid.

Dr. Light, of Lebanon, Penn., testified that he met Col. Mackey in Philadelphia at a saloon on the 8th of November. Col. Reeder, Dr. Longacre, and Mr. Woolever being present. The subject of conversation being politics. Col. Reeder remarked to Col. Mackey, "Bob, I can only say I will pay for you," to which Mackey replied that it was too early or too soon; the witness said that after Col. Mackey had made a calculation about the aggregate vote, he asked Mackey, "How can you claim that Louisiana went for Hayes when the election returns showed that Tilden carried the State by 10,000 votes?" Col. Mackey replied that the Returning Board would not meet until the 17th of November, when they would give the vote for Hayes; the witness said the impression made on his mind was that improper means would be used to secure the result and that the Returning Board would fix it; the witness said this was an inference of his own and not an explicit statement from Col. Mackey. The witness was asked whether Col. Mackey did not say that an honest count would show that Hayes had carried Louisiana, and replied that he did not recollect the words, but something was said about an honest count; the witness stated that he was a Democrat and Col. Reeder a Republican. He was asked if he had a conversation with Col. Reeder after Mackey had left the company, and replied that he and Col. Reeder had a conversation after they left the saloon, when Reeder remarked, referring to what Mackey had said about Louisiana, "My God that would never do; the American people never would allow Tilden to be counted out or Hayes counted in by the vote of Louisiana in that manner;" the witness would not be certain as to the order in which the names of Tilden and Hayes were mentioned.

Mr. Lawrence asked the committee to exclude from the record the above questions and answers, but this was refused by a party vote, Messrs. Lawrence, Burchard, and McDill voting in the affirmative, and Messrs. Sparks, Maisly, Field, and Tucker in the negative. The committee then adjourned until to-morrow morning.

J. W. Lozwell, one of the Oregon Democratic candidates for Presidential Elector at the late election, testified before the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections this morning that he was present at the meeting of the Oregon Electoral College in December last; he went to the meeting of the college because he understood that the Republican Electors were going to take the Electoral certificates from Mr. Cronin by force; the witness understood the Secretary of State [Chadwick] to say as he handed the envelope containing the certificates of the Electors to Mr. Cronin, "Gentlemen, here are your certificates;" he heard the Republican Electors ask Cronin for their certificates, and Cronin replied, "I will see h—— freeze over before I will give them up."

At this point the witness was dismissed for the day, and the committee resumed the Mississippi investigation. J. S. Burton, of Marshall County, Miss., testified that he is a Northern man by birth; was in the Confederate Army, and is a Republican in politics; he never held a public office, and never wants to; he thinks the Democrats carried the elections of 1875 and 1876 in Mississippi by intimidation—that is, they threatened not to employ colored men who should vote the Republican ticket; the colored men are naturally Republicans, and the only way to get the Republicans out of them is to shoot it out; where the Democrats have the control they seek to break down the leading Republicans by having them unjustly indicted; the Southern white men, as a class, are honorable and gentlemanly, but they are Democrats, and when they go out about election time they leave their consciences at home.

The sub-committees of the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections and of the House Committee on the Rights, Privileges, and Duties of the House in Counting the Electoral Vote held a meeting this morning, and agreed that, as the former could not be called on the Western Union Telegraph Company for certain telegrams, it should first have the use of them, except such as were recently mentioned in the statement of Mr. Orton in reply to the subpœna of the House.

THE SECRETARY OF THE NAVY.

REPORT OF THE HOUSE SUB-COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY EXONERATING MR. ROBESON—THE ALLEGED VIOLATIONS OF LAW MERE MATTERS OF DETAIL.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—The Sub-committee of the House Judiciary Committee, to which the evidence and the report of the investigation of the Navy Department was referred last session, reported this morning that no fraud or corruption had been shown against the Secretary; that the violation of law alleged to exist in his department were principally in matters of detail, and under previsions of law which were merely directory, with no penalties attached, or upon which the Secretary has a right of judgment; that the case of Jay Cooke, McCulloch & Co. was a question of construction of law, upon which there might fairly by a difference of opinion, and that the Government had suffered no loss therefrom, and say that no articles of impeachment against the Secretary should be presented or could be sustained.

Upon the making of such report, the Judiciary Committee unanimously passed the following resolution:

Resolved, That articles of impeachment ought not to be preferred against George M. Robeson, Secretary of the Navy, for violations of the law which have occurred in his department, because there is no criminal intent or corrupt motive on his part which would constitute such violations—"high crimes or misdemeanors"—under the meaning of the Constitution; and that the Judiciary Committee be discharged from any further consideration of the subject.

MEXICAN CLAIMS.

THE BILL TO PROVIDE FOR THE PAYMENT OF AWARDS AGAINST THE UNITED STATES.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—The draft of the bill prepared at the Department of State, and which recently was introduced in the Senate by Mr. Cameron and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, proposes to make an appropriation of $150,400 to be turned into the Treasury, this being the amount of awards by the late United States and Mexican Commission, in favor of citizens of Mexico for damages by the United States, and which amount, by treaty, the Mexican Government has agreed to pay them. the amount to be deducted from the aggregate of $4,125,000 awarded against Mexico in favor of American citizens. In other words, Mexico is to be credited for the former amount. It has heretofore been contended by interested parties that the United States should appropriate for distribution the aggregate amount of the awards in favor of American citizens for their immediate benefit and await the slow method of the Mexican Government for reimbursement. But the bill provides for paying the expenses of the commission out of the sum credited to Mexico, and as installments are from time to time received from Mexico for their distribution pro rata among American claimants. According to the terms of the convention for settling the claims, Mexico was required to pay $300,000 twelve months after the close of the convention, and $300,000 annually thereafter, until the entire awards shall have been liquidated. In addition to Senator Cameron having received the draft of a bill from the Secretary of State, Mr. Swann, the Chairman of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, has received one from the same source, but no formal action has yet been taken by the House.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

PEACE WITH SERVIA AND MONTENEGRO INTENDED BY TURKEY—RUSSIA'S PREPARATIONS—ROUMANIAN RESERVES ON THEIR WAY HOME.

VIENNA, Jan. 23.—The journals here report that the Turkish Ambassador, at a long consultation at Pesth to-day on Turkey's future course, informed Count Andrassy that the Porte intended to make peace with Servia and Montenegro, and requested Andrassy's mediation.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—A Berlin dispatch says 52 different railway administrations have been notified that after the 27th inst. their lines will in all probability be required for military purposes. A Vienna dispatch says reports from military agents state that the roads in Moldavia are impracticable, and the railway between Kishenoff and Jassy is interrupted by floods.

A dispatch from Constantinople says it is absolutely certain that Russia, since the failure of the conference, has again endeavored to negotiate a special treaty with Turkey. Midhat Pasha as yet opposes such a course.

A telegram from Bucharest reports that the Roumanian reserves are being sent home until March. This is in harmony with the belief that Russia does not intend to begin hostilities before Spring. It is reported in Vienna that the Turkish ambassador, at his interview with Andrassy in Pesth yesterday, assured him that Turkey would take no step which was likely to provoke war, and would vigorously push internal reforms.

The Berlin correspondent of a morning paper notices various sensational reports which are interesting because they appeared in some German papers. These reports are to the effect that Count Chaudercy inspired the telegrams from Constantinople concerning the attitude of Baron von Werther at the Conference, with the view of provoking complications and thereby furthering a plot for an Orleanist restoration.

MISCELLANEOUS FOREIGN NOTES.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—A fire broke out in the Stonehill Colliery, near Bolton, to-day, while the men were at work, and is still burning. Fifteen miners are known to have perished. It is impossible to recover the bodies.

The Registrar General's returns show that the small-pox in this city is decreasing. There were 79 deaths from the disease last week against 100 the week previous.

A dispatch from Berlin says: "Several supplementary elections for the Reichstag have been held. The Clerical candidate has been returned from Aix-la-Chapelle, and the Progressist candidate from Alten-Alserlohn."

A special dispatch from Berlin says: "Commercial intercourse between Russia and China has come to a complete stand-still, owing to a prohibitory decree issued by the Chinese Government. The decree is prompted by suspicions aroused by Col. Prhevalsky's exploring expedition, and other Russian movements along the Chinese frontier, which are taken by China to indicate hostile designs."

Silver was quoted at 58¾d. per ounce.

PARIS, Jan. 23.—Official returns show that the revenue from indirect taxation for the year 1876, which was estimated at 1,952,483,030 francs, amounted to 2,105,759,000 francs, or 37,386,000 francs more than in 1875.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—The Paris correspondent of the Daily News says the retirement of the Duke Decazes, Minister of Foreign Affairs, is probable in consequence of disagreement with Minister Simon.

Mme. Albani, the opera singer, has married Capt. Ziegler, of the Garde Republique.

MADRID, Jan. 23.—The Governor of Bilbao was unable to organize the municipality on Monday.

THE ASHTABULA DISASTER.

THE OHIO LEGISLATIVE INVESTIGATION—EXAMINATION OF THE EX-MASTER MECHANIC—THE CORONER'S INQUEST.

COLUMBUS, Jan. 23.—The Legislative Committee to investigate the Ashtabula disaster met here to-day and examined Albert Congdon, who testified that he had formerly served the Lake Shore Road as master mechanic and had charge of the shops at which the iron of the Ashtabula bridge was put together; also that the bridge had been intended for a single track; if an additional track was placed on it an additional truss should have been added, in order to give it additional strength, and very careful attention should have been given it, even with this additional truss; he did not think proper attention had been given to the bridge.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 23.—An Ashtabula special to the Leader says: "John D. Burton, telegraph operator at the depot, was examined to-day by the Coroner's jury, and corroborated the testimony of Manning and Leed, the other operators on duty at the time of the accident, that during that night no message or instructions were received by any official at Ashtabula from any officer of the railroad at Cleveland, not to throw water on the burning wreck."

THE WEATHER.

INDICATIONS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24—1 A. M.—In the Middle and Eastern States, falling barometer, rising temperature, south to west winds, increasing cloudiness, and possibly light snow in the northern portion, succeeded by rising barometer and winds veering to colder northwesterly.

FOREIGN MAILS FOR FEBRUARY.

The arrangement for the dispatch of mails from the United Kingdom to New-York during the month of February, proximo, will be as follows:

Date.	Port.	Line.
Saturday, (evening,) Feb. 3	Queenstown.	Cunard.
Tuesday, (morning,) Feb. 6	Southampton	N.G.Ll'd.
Wednesday, (evening,) Feb. 7	Queenstown.	Guion.
Saturday, (evening,) Feb. 10	Queenstown.	Cunard.
Tuesday, (morning,) Feb. 13	Southampton	N.G.Ll'd.
Wednesday, (evening,) Feb. 14	Queenstown.	Guion.
Saturday, (evening,) Feb. 17	Queenstown.	Cunard.
Tuesday, (morning,) Feb. 20	Southampton	N.G.Ll'd.
Wednesday, (evening,) Feb. 21	Queenstown.	Guion.
Saturday, (evening,) Feb. 24	Queenstown.	Cunard.
Tuesday, (morning,) Feb. 27	Southampton	N.G.Ll'd.
Wednesday, (evening,) Feb. 28	Queenstown.	Guion.

The following steamers have been designated to convey mails from this port to Europe during February:

Date.	Time.	Name of Steamer.	Destination.	Name of Line.
1	11:30 A. M.	Herder	Plymouth	Ham. Am.P.
1	.....	P. Caland	Rotterdam	Nether. Co.
3	5:30 A. M.	Celtic	Queenstown	White Star.
3	6:00 A. M.	Victoria	Glasgow	Anchor.
3	7:00 A. M.	Kenilworth	Antwerp	Red Star.
3	11:30 A. M.	Weser	Southampton	N. Ger. Ll'd.
5	9:00 A. M.	Wyoming	Queenstown	W. & Guion.
7	9:00 A. M.	Algeria	Queenstown	Cunard.
8	11:30 A. M.	Frisia	Plymouth	Ham. Am.P.
10	11:00 A. M.	Bolivia	Glasgow	Anchor.
10	11:30 A. M.	Rhein	Southampton	N. Ger. Ll'd.
11	12 M.	Adriatic	Queenstown	White Star.
11	2 M.	Labrador	Havre	Gen. Trans.
13	12 M.	Dakota	Queenstown	W. & Guion.
14	11:00 A.M.	Parthia	Queenstown	Cunard.
15	11:30 A.M.	Gellert	Plymouth	Hamb. Am.
17	4:30 A.M.	C. of Rich'd.	Queenstown	Inman.
17	5:00 A.M.	Alsatia	Glasgow	Anchor.
17	11:30 A.m.	Oder	Southampton	N. Ger. Ll'd.
19	7:00 A.M.	Idaho	Queenstown	W. & Guion.
21	7:30 A.M.	China	Queenstown	Cunard.
22	11:30 A.M.	Pommerania	Plymouth	Hamb. Am.
24	11:00 A.M.	Britannic	Queenstown	White Star.
24	11:00 A.M.	Anchoria	Glasgow	Anchor.
24	11:00 A.M.	Canada	Havre	Gen. Trans.
24	11:30 A.M.	Hermann	Southampton	N. Ger. Ll'd.
27	12:00 M.	Nevada	Queenstown	W. & Guion.
27	3:00 P.M.	Switzerland	Antwerp	Red Star.
28	11:00 A.M.	Batavia	Queenstown	Cunard.

NEW-YORK STATE GRANGE.

ROCHESTER, Jan. 23.—The New-York State Grange met in annual session to-day. Mr. George D. Hinckley, of Chautauqua, delivered the annual address in the morning, and Col. A. B. Smedley, of Iowa, made an address in the evening. There was a very large attendance, nearly every county in the State being represented. The constitutional amendments offered by the National Association were adopted except one.

KILLED BY A MILK TRAIN.

A RESIDENT OF NEWARK COMMITS SUICIDE—THE SAD FATE OF A YOUNG MAN OUT OF EMPLOYMENT.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

HUDSON, Jan. 23.—A man named Charles Deiterle, a resident of Newark, N. J., was struck by the Milk train in front of the Hudson River Railroad passenger depot in this city, at 6:25 o'clock this evening, and instantly killed. A letter found on his body gives the residence of his father, No. 15 Kossuth street, Newark, N. J. The following was found in the possession of the stranger, which proves beyond a doubt that he committed suicide, as he was walking upon the track when struck by the locomotive:

"My name is Charles Deiterle. I am away from home now. If anything should befall me in the line of accident or death, I wish the person that finds this to inform my parents. They live in Newark, N. J., No. 15 Kossuth street. I left my home because I could not find any employment. If anything of this kind should befall me, I would be very much obliged to the persons that find me to inform my parents of my state. I remain, respectfully, CHARLES DEITERLE.

Residence of my father, Mr. Anton Deiterle, No. 15 Kossuth street, Newark, N. J."

THE GALLOWS IN NORTH-CAROLINA.

EXECUTION OF A NEGRO IN EDGECOMB COUNTY—CONFESSION OF THE CULPRIT.

WILMINGTON, Jan. 23.—On Friday last Simon Ragland, (colored,) convicted of the crime of rape upon the person of Miss Carolina Bidgood, (white,) at Whitaker, in Edgecomb County, was conveyed from the jail at Tarboro to Williamston, to be in readiness for his execution at the latter place. Ragland was visited by all the clergymen of Williamston who left nothing undone to bring him to realize a sense of his awful condition. Yesterday at 10:30 A. M., Rev. T. B. Houghton, Rector of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Williamston, in company with Mr. Literson and a correspondent, called at the prisoner's cell. They found him in a morose and cynical mood of mind. He manifested much bitterness, and endeavored to shew that his conviction was procured upon insufficient evidence. He alleged furthermore that he received an injury in childhood which had been the cause of occasional fits of insanity, during which his acts were unconscious and irresponsible. He was at length led to a better state of mind, and finally confessed his crime to Rev. Mr. Houghton and Mr. Literson, when he was baptized by the former. As the time approached for the execution, he seemed to grow more calm, expressing the belief that his soul would be at rest. Before leaving Tarboro Jail, he bid all his fellow-prisoners farewell, saying, as soon as his soul left his body he would fly right to heaven. At 3 P. M. he was conveyed by the Sheriff to the place of execution. The rope was adjusted on his neck it would not remain in place, and when the drop was made the noose slipped out of place, leaving the body dangling in horrible contortions and suffering. Eleven minutes elapsed before life was extinct.

SAN DOMINGO AND HAYTI.

CONCILIATORY POLICY OF PRESIDENT BAEZ—DIFFICULTY BETWEEN HAYTI AND THE FRENCH MINISTRY.

HAVANA, Jan. 23.—Advices from San Domingo to the 11th state that President Baez has adopted conciliatory measures, neither executing, imprisoning, or banishing political antagonists, which is altogether contrary to the usual Spanish-American custom. The people, however, fear that once he consolidates the Government firmly he will reinaugurate his former despotic rule. The recent insurgent outbreaks on the north-west—in front—apparently favor Luperon. Money has been scarce and business dull.

A difficulty has arisen between the Government of Hayti and the French Minister. The Government repudiates the loan made by Frenchmen to President Demirque.

NATIONAL INDEPENDENT PARTY.

SPRINGFIELD, Jan. 23.—The Executive Committee of the National Independent Party met here this afternoon to decide upon the best method to strengthen the organization and to accomplish the financial reforms which the party demand. Representatives were present from New-York, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Iowa, Illinois, and other States.

THE SO-CALLED STEINWAY-KNABE PIANO SUIT.

CARD FROM MESSRS. STEINWAY & SONS.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

SIR: Ever since the close of the Centennial Exhibition, where we received the highest award for our pianos by the unanimous verdict of all the judges, subsequently confirmed by the Centennial Commission, certain of our competitors have sought to push themselves into notoriety, either by publishing so-called awards, which they never obtained from the judges, or by distorting those they did obtain in so specious a manner as to mislead the public.

The last of these efforts is the card published over the signature of Messrs. William Knabe & Co. in your issue of yesterday.

Though averse to controversy, as we believe we can maintain our position in the estimation of the public rather by the intrinsic merits of our instruments than by any attempts to obtain gratuitous advertising, we are forced to refute the erroneous statements which have been made of our conduct in the so-called Steinway-Knabe suit by the Messrs. Knabe, who now seek to obtain notoriety for themselves by importing into the New-York press their local quarrels with Mr. Otto Sutro, the able and enterprising holder of the Steinway agency for the State of Maryland, who has heretofore successfully overcome local prejudices existing in favor of inferior instruments, and built up for "The Steinway Piano" an immense sale in that State. The facts of the case are briefly these:

From the time that the Centennial awards were announced last September the Messrs. Knabe have launched through the press all over the country the following statement, the[i] gross exaggerations of which are fully exposed by placing it by the side of the only official award they ever obtained from the judges at the Centennial Exhibition:

PUBLISHED STATEMENT OF MESSRS. KNABE & CO. ON ALL THE JUDGES.

KNABE.—Highest award at the Centennial.

The United States Centennial Commission and the judges of awards have unanimously decreed to Messrs. Wm. Knabe & Co. the Diploma of Honor and Medal of Merit for Concert Grand, Parlor Grand, Square and Upright Pianos. By the system of awards adopted pianos of all grades received medals of precisely the same character, but the true test of merit appears only in the reports of the judges accompanying the medals. The judges pronounce the Knabe Pianos to be the best exponents of the art of piano-making, and fully entitled to the leading position, combining all the requisites of a perfect instrument in the highest degree. Power, richness and singing quality of tone; ease and elasticity of touch, effectiveness of action, solidity and originality of construction, and excellence of workmanship.

The Knabe award is not confined to any single style of instrument, as is the case with other exhibitors in this department, but comprises all four styles, and stands unqualified by phrases indicative of mediocrity.

(Signed,)
WILLIAM KNABE & Co.

SOLE AND OFFICIAL STATEMENT OF ALL THE JUDGES ON MESSRS. KNABE & CO.

"For general excellence in the requirements of a first-class instrument, in power of tone, touch, and solidity of construction, all three kinds of pianos show intelligent arrangements, a very effective action, and excellent workmanship."

Verbatim Official Report.

(It should here be mentioned that in September last, several months after the jury of awards had dispersed, Messrs. Knabe petitioned the Centennial Commission to add the words, "Richness and singing quality of tone" to the report of the judges. This the Commission generously granted.)

The glaring difference between these two statements is at once apparent. The very fact that the Messrs. Knabe & Co. found it necessary to appeal to the Centennial Commission to get their report bolstered up by the insertion of the words "for richness and singing quality" of tone, which

COMMERCIAL AFFAIRS.

NEW-YORK, Tuesday, Jan. 23, 1877.

The receipts of the principal kinds of Produce since our last have been as follows:

Ashes, pkls.	35	Molasses, (N.O.) bbls	103
Broom-corn, bales	90	Oil, bbls.	110
Beans, bbls.	538	Oil-cake, pks.	339
Cotton, bales	3,198	Pork, pks.	1,339
Cotton-seed Oil, bbls.	100	Beef, pks.	202
Copper, lbs.	32	Cut-meats, pks.	2,431
Dried Fruit, pks.	291	Grease, pks.	152
Eggs, bbls.	1,912	Lard, pks.	1,033
Flour, bbls.	10,378	Lard, kegs	740
Wheat, bushels	5,000	Butter, pks.	6,381
Corn, bushels	32,220	Cheese, pks.	1,131
Oats, bushels	17,650	Tallow, pks.	409
Rye, bushels	1,735	Lard-oil, bbls.	25
Malt, bushels	6,339	Lubricating-oil, bbls.	100
Barley, bushels	500	Dressed Hogs, No.	897
Peas, bushels	2,953	Pecans, pks.	53
Corn-meal, bbls.	400	Sugar, (N.O.,) hhds.	10
Corn-meal, bags	500	Spelter, pcs.	2,349
Starch, pkgs.	100	Starch, bxs.	980
Hops, bales	163	Skins, bales	12
Hides, No.	127	Tea, half-chests	1
Hides, bales	341	Tobacco, hhds.	7
Leather, bxs. & cs.	16,312	Tobacco, pkgs. & cs.	44
Lead, pigs	125	Whisky, bbls.	1,355

ASHES—Pots have been in light demand at $4 75, and Pearls at $6 50@$6 75 ₱ 100 lb.

BEESWAX—Yellow has been selling slowly at from 30c.@32c. ₱ lb.

CANDLES—The inquiry has been very moderate for nearly all kinds at unchanged rates....Adamantine quoted at 11½c.@15½c.; Paraffine, 19c.@20c.; Sperm, plain, 28c.; Sperm, patent, 38c.; Stearic, 27c.@28c. ₱ lb.

COAL—Pending the auction sales of Anthracite announced for this week, the general movement is very slow and unsatisfactory. Values are nominally the same as before....Liverpool House Cannel quoted at $15@$17; Liverpool Gas Cannel, $10@$11; Newcastle Gas, $5 50; Scotch Gas, $5@$7; Provincial Gas, $4 50@$5; American Gas, $5 75@$6 25; Cumberland and Clearfield, $5 25@$5 50, and Anthracite, $5 25@$4 50 for cargoes.

COFFEE—Dull and irregular; quotations nominally as in our last. Sales, 342 cases Rio, by the Commodore Dupont, from private terms.

COTTON—Has been in moderate request for early delivery at a further advance of 1-16c. ₱ lb.... Ordinary quoted to-day at 11 7-16c.; Low Middling 12 1-16c.@12 3-16c.; Middling, 12 5-16c.@12 7-16c. ₱ lb....Sales were officially reported, for prompt delivery, of 646 bales, (of which 57 bales were on last evening,) including 230 bales to shippers, 368 bales to spinners, and 48 bales remaining....and for forward delivery business has been moderately active at firmer rates....Sales have been reported since our last at 30,110 bales, of which 7,100 bales were on last evening, and 23,010 bales to-day, with 2,400 bales on the canals, on the basis of Middling, with January options closing 13 5-16c.@13 11-32c.; February, 13 11-32c.@13⅜c.; March, 13⅜c.@13 21-32c.; April, 13⅞c. May, 14 3-16c.; June, 14 5-16c.; July, 14 5-16c. August, 14 11-32c.@14⅜c.; September, 14c.@14 1-16c. October, 13⅝c.@13 11-16c.; November, 13 15-32c.@13⅝c. ₱ lb., showing an advance of 1-32c. on the earlier deliveries, and a decline of 1-32c.@1-16c. on June and later options ₱ lb. during nearly steady.... The receipts at the port to-day were 3,198 bales, and at the shipping ports 20,893 bales, against 23,139 bales last week, 31,004 bales, and this far this week, 61,004 bales, against 65,364 bales one time last week.... The receipts at the shipping ports since Sept. 1, 1876, have been 3,009,804 bales, against 2,852,947 bales for the corresponding time in the preceding Cotton year.... Consolidated exports in three days for Great Britain, from all the shipping ports, 21,758 bales; to the Continent, 15,639 bales....Stock in New-York to-night, 237,238 bales; consolidated stock at the ports, 887,285 bales.

Closing Prices of Cotton in New-York.

	Uplands.	Alabama.	N. O.	Texas.
Ordinary	11 7-16	11 7-16	11 7-16	11 7-16
Strict Ordinary	11 13-16	11 13-16	11 13-16	11 13-16
Good Ordinary	12 5-16	12 5-16	12 5-16	12 5-16
Strict Good Ord.	12 9-16	12 9-16	12⅝	12⅝
Low Middling	12 13-16	12 13-16	13 1-16	13 1-16
Strict Low Mid.	13 1-16	13 1-16	13 5-16	13 5-16
Middling	13 5-16	13 7-16	13⅜	13⅜
Good Middling	13 9-16	13 11-16	13 13-16	13 13-16
Strict Good Mid.	13 13-16	13 15-16	14 1-16	14 1-16
Middling Fair	14 1-16	14 5-16	14 7-16	14 7-16
Fair	14 15-16	15 1-16	15 3-16	15 3-16

Stained.

Good Ordinary	11 3-16	Low Middling	12 3-16
Strict Good Ord.	11 13-16	Middling	12 11-16

FIRE-CRACKERS—A slow trade has been noted even in a jobbing way, on the basis of $1 65@$2 ₱ box.

FISH—The general movement is quite uncertain, with the leading kinds, however, quoted firm....We quote: Dry Cod, $5 25@$6 25 ₱ cwt.; Dry Cod, in drums, $5 50@$6 75. Mackerel quoted at $10@$22 for No. 1; $9 50@$13 for No. 2, and $6 50@$8 for No. 3 ₱ bbl.; Pickled Herring, $2 50@$6; Smoked Herring at 16c.@18c. for Scaled, and 13c.@14c. for No. 1 ₱ box Dutch Herring. $1 10@$1 12½ ₱ keg.

FLOUR AND MEAL—The demand for the comparatively light offerings and decided firmness of holders of State and Western, current movements are generally on a moderate scale, for export as well as home use. The home trade call runs chiefly on Minnesota Extras and the better class of Winter Wheat Extras. The bulk of the business credited to export accounts is for the West Indies, British Provinces, and South America, and this trade has been on a fair scale....Sales have been reported since our last of 15,150 bbls. of all grades, including unsound Flour at $3 50@$7 25, the latter an extreme; sour Flour at $4 50@$6 50; poor to fancy No. 2 at $4 75@$5 50, chiefly at $5@$5 25, of which 240 bbls. Minnesota at $5 10@$5 25; poor to choice Superfine Western, $5 75@$6, mainly at $5 85@$6; poor to good Extra State, $6 10@$6 25; good to choice do. at $6 25@$6 50; City Mills Extra, shipping grades, $6 05@$7 35, mainly at from $7@$7 35 for the West Indies, (with fancy do. for the same trade quoted up to $7 50@$7 75,) and quoted at $8 25@$8 50 for choice to fancy for the South American trade; and $6 05@$6 15 for brands suited to the English trade; inferior to good shipping Extra Western, $5 05@$6 25; good to choice do., $6 25@$6 50; poor to very choice Western Trade and Family Extras, Spring Wheat stock, $6 40@$8 50; inferior to very choice do. do., Red and Amber Winter Wheat stock at $6 40@$8 50; part for shipment at $7@$7 75; ordinary to very choice White Wheat do. at $6 40@$9 75; poor to very choice St. Louis Extras $6 40@$9; Extra Genesee at $6 50@$7 50; poor to very choice Minnesota clear and straight Extras at $6 50@$8 25, chiefly at $7 25@$8; poor to ordinary choice, with up to $8 50 asked for fancy, and Minnesota Patent Extras, fair ordinary to very fancy, at $8@$10 75, mainly at $8 75@$10, with up to $11 25@$12 75 for small lots of very choice to fancy. ....Included in the sales have been 6,700 bbls. shipping Extras, of which 5,100 bbls. City Mills; 2,300 bbls. Minnesota clear and straight Extras, 950 bbls. do. do. Patent do., 1,550 bbls. Winter Wheat Extras, for shipment, these mostly Indiana and Ohio at $7@$7 75; 470 bbls. superfine, and 450 bbls. No. 2 at the quoted rates.... A fair inquiry prevails for Southern Flour at full figures for all really desirable brands. The offerings of which are on a restricted scale....Sales have been reported here of 1,850 bbls. in lots, at $5 70@$6 10 for poor to strictly low Superfine; $6 20@$7 50 for poor to very choice shipping Extras; $7 50@$9 25 for fair to fancy Trade and Family. The dealings were mostly in Extras at from $7 75@$8 50, part for export....Rye Flour is in good request and wanted, with favorite brands of Superfine quoted quite strong as ourselves....We quote at from $4 50@$5 25 for poor Western to very choice State Superfine, and $3@$4, for poor to choice; fine....Sales reported, in lots chiefly at $4 75@$5 for about fair to very good Superfine State, $5 10@$5 25 for choice to fancy, do., $4 70@$5 for Pennsylvania, the latter for choice, with small lots of fancy at the higher figures, and $4 60@$5 for about fair to very choice Western....Corn-meal has been moderately sought after at firm rates. We quote at $2 75@$3 15 for very inferior to choice Yellow Western; $2 65@$3 10 for Yellow Jersey; $3 50 for prime Yellow Delaware, and $3 60 for Brandywine....Sales have been reported of 450 bbls., including 275 bbls. Yellow Western, in lots, chiefly at $3, and Brandywine in job lots from store at $3 60....A rather light inquiry has been noted for Corn-meal in bags within the range of $1 07@$1 45 for poor to very choice ₱ 100 lb. Most of the sales have been of coarse lots, at $1 15@$1 16 for City Mills, coarse, at $1 07@$1 10 for (250 bags) Brandywine, (200 bags) Baltimore, from dock; 200 bags bolted Yellow, Baltimore choice, sold at $145....Oat-meal continues in request, in a jobbing way, within the range of $6 25@$7 50 for poor to choice, and $8 12@$8 25 for very fancy; Canada, $7@$7 50....Buckwheat Flour has been offered very sparingly and quoted within the range of $4 10@$4 40 for fair ordinary to strictly choice Western, and $4 50@$4 75 for Pennsylvania, and fancy lots, including Patent, held higher. Demand good for the better qualities on jobbing account. Most of the lots sold were at $4 20@$4 40 for good to very choice ₱ bbl.

FRUITS—Trade has been moderately active, with values showing no important changes. Sales include 900 bxs. Layer Raisins at $1 75; 200 quarter bxs. do. to $3 50....Currants at $5@$6 ₱ bbl.; 600 half bxs. Valencia at 8½c.; 300 bbls. Currants at 6¾c.@ 8½c.; 130 cks. new Turkey Prunes at 6¼c.@6¾c.; 100 cks. old do. at 4¼c.@4½c.; 300 cases sardines, quarter bxs., at 13c.@13¾c.

GRAIN—Very limited dealings were reported in Wheat to-day, with Spring quoted generally weaker, in instances off 1c.@2c. a bushel from yesterday's figures, though on strictly No. 2 Chicago and Milwaukee the holders were disposed to make concessions, these grades, especially No. 2 Chicago, having been practically controlled by speculative operators, and not offered in important quantities. Winter Wheat was wanted, and sales reported to-day of only 25,000 bushels, including extra choice White Michigan, 300 bushels, in store, at $1 65; fair Red Western, in store, 3,000 bushels, at $1 50; good Amber Spring, new crop, at 1875, 3,000 bushels, in store, at $1 50, for export; and Nos. 2 and 3 Milwaukee Spring, in store, 8,000 bushels, for milling, at $1 40....Corn was steadier in price, and more active, prime No. 2 Chicago being the most sought after mainly on export account; moderate purchases of New-York steamer Mixed, and New-York no grade of the new crop, were also made for shipment....Sales have been reported since our last of 109,000 bushels, including New-York steamer Mixed at 51¼c.@51½c.; New-York no grade at 50½c.@50¾c.; New-York "no established grade," 2 car loads, at 51c.; new crop Mixed Western, car lots, at 57c.@58c., for very poor to very good; Yellow Western at 61c.; ungraded sailing-vessel Mixed Western, old crop, ordinary to choice, (nominal,) within the range of 60c.@63c.; prime No. 2 Chicago, in store, 57,000 bushels, at 59½c.@59¾c. (additional cargoes, 50,000 bushels in store, rumored at 61c., and 50,000 to 100,000 bushels, in store, on speculation, at about 61c., but these not confirmed); do. afloat, 9,000 to 16,000 bushels, reported at 62c.; and choice Kansas Mixed, in store, 16,000 bushels, for shipment, at 61½c.; Yellow and White Southern, a few car lots, at 60½c. from track....Rye has been in moderate supply, and quoted, as a rule, without much change, at 73c. for corn car lots quoted at 81c.@85c., and in boat-loads up to 88c.@90c. asked; prime to very choice State, in lines or boat-loads, 93c.@97c., with car lots at 90c.@ 93c.; Canada, in bond, at 94c., asked, to arrive. Sales reported of about 12,000 bushels Jersey, Pennsylvania, and State, in lots, chiefly at 91c., and 1,500 bushels Western at 84c....Barley has been in less request, and held at rather irregular rates. No. 1 Canada, prime to choice, quoted at $1 12½@$1 15; sixrowed State, fair ordinary to prime, 70c.@80c., with higher prices asked for fancy lots; two-rowed do., fair to choice, at 67½c.@70c. Sales reported of 8,000 bushels fair ordinary, six-rowed State at 70c.... Barley Malt has been very moderatively sought after with fair to very choice Canada West, old and new crop, quoted at $1@$1 20, cash; strictly prime to very choice, new crop, do., on time, at $1 25@$1 30; and Western, about fair to very choice, nominally at 90c.@$1 05; two-rowed do., at 70c.@85c....Buckwheat has been in request, with prime State quoted at $1, but through scarcity, has been inactive....Canada Peas, in bond, continue very quiet, and quoted at 90c.@92c.....Oats have been quoted rather easier, especially other than strictly prime lots of State, on a very limited inquiry from local trade sources at the moment.....Sales reported of only 14,000 bushels, including White Western at 42c.@50c., as to quality; White State, fair to prime, car lots, at 47c.@48c.; do. do. at 53c.@55c.; Mixed Western at 42c.@47c., as to quality. New-York Extra, 750 bushels at 54½c.; New-York No. 3 White at 47c.; New-York No. 3 at 45c.; New-York Rejected at 42c.; Mixed State at 52c.@54c., for fair ordinary to choice.... Clover-seed has been again actively sought after, chiefly for shipment, at stronger rates, with strictly prime Western quoted at 10c.; about fair to very good [illegible]

Sales reported since our last of 350 bags Western (chiefly old crop, arrive) and 1,400 bags State (chiefly new crop, mostly at 15c. for a strictly prime Western, and 17c. for strictly prime State, with 17c. bid for choice samples of the latter....Other seeds quoted about as before on a limited movement....Hay and Straw without change of moment....Feed strong and wanted; offerings generally limited; 1,900 bags, 40-lb., reported sold at $19@$20; 30 tons extra choice do., from store, at equal to $21 60, as extreme quotation; Rye Feed quoted at $23 bid, and very scarcely offered.

GUNNY BAGS AND BAGGING—No important movements have been recently reported.....Domestic Bagging quoted nominal at 10¾c.@11c.....Native Bagging about 15c.@20c.....Calcutta goods wholly nominal.

HEMP—Has been generally dull at about previous rates. Jute Butts has been in exceptionally good demand.....Manila Hemp quoted at 8c.@8¼c.; final at 8c., sold, and very nearly offered. Sisal at $205, gold, ₱ ton; dressed American, $185@$225; undressed, do., $130, currency; Italian, $275@$280, gold, ₱ ton; Jute, 4c.@5c.c., currency; Jute Butts, 3¼c. @3 5-16c.; Western Flax, 9c.@15c., currency; fair to prime North River Flax, 14c.@17c.; fair to prime Canada do., 15c.@18c. ₱ lb....Sales were reported of 200 bales of Jute Butts at 3¾c., on time, and 500 bales to arrive at 3¼c.

HIDES—Have been quiet and depressed. Sales include 1,800 Dry Texas, 24 lb., (part to arrive,) at 20c., less 4 months' interest; 2,300 Dry California, (to arrive,) at 22c.; 700 City Slaughter, 35 lb.; 800 Dry California, and 100 Dry Southern on private terms.

METALS—The inquiry for Ingot Copper has been moderately active, with values at the close quoted strongest....Sales reported of 400,000 lb. at 19½c., closing at 19¼c....Pig and Bar Iron have been, as a rule, very dull throughout, and quoted nominal as to price. Some 10,000 tons Gray Forge rumored sold on private terms....Regulus Antimony quiet; quoted at 13c....Lead, Spelter, and Zinc in stock request at about previous prices....Tin has been moderately sought after at about former rates. Sales include 500 bxs. Charcoal plates, reported at 10½c.

MILK—The contract price paid to dairymen for a supply of Milk for the month of January are 4½c.@5c. ₱ quart.

MOLASSES—New-Orleans has been lightly dealt in at from 48c.@53c. for good to fancy....Market otherwise inactive and nominally as last quoted.

NAILS—Have been rather more sought after since our last, on the basis of $3 for common Fence and Sheathing, and $4 50@$5 25 for Clinch, ₱ keg.

NAVAL STORES—The inquiry for most kinds of Reein has been very moderate, on the previous basis as to values....We quote at $2 40@$2 45 for Strained, including our general brand; $2 32½@$2 37½c. No. 2, $2 87½@$4 for No. 1, $4 75@$6 50 for Pale to extra Pale and Window Glass ₱ 280 lb....Sales reported of 100 bbls. Strained at $2 40, and 350 bbls. No. 2 at $2 37½....Spirits Turpentine has been in more demand, with merchants offering more freely, quoted at the close at 46c. @46½c. ₱ gallon....Sales, 115 bbls.

OILS—Whale and Sperm have been quoted firm, but without much call noted for supplies at the moment. Linseed, Straits-sea-Island Lard Oils have been moderately sought after, and held more confidently. Most other kinds have been lightly dealt in, and without important alteration as to values....We quote Crude Whale, prompt delivery, at 57c.@58c.; Bleached do., 65c.@66c., in casks and bbls.; Olive-oil, $1 22½@$1 27½, in cans, and bbls.; Menhaden, 34½@34¾c.; Crude Sperm, 85c.@92c.; Crude Cottonseed, 47½c.@50c.; Refined Yellow do., 55c.@59c., as to quality and color; White do., 57½c.@62½c.; Paraffine, 27½c.@32c.; Palm-oil, 7½c.@8¼c.; Resin-oil, 16c.@20c.; Crude Petroleum, 7½c.@8½c.; Ged. 55c.@62½c.; Mustard-seed Oil, 75c.@78c.; Rape-seed Oil, $1@ $1 10; Neatsfoot, 60c.@$1 10; Cocoa-nut, 9¾c.@ 12¾c.; Tanners'-oil, 44c.@46c.; Lubricating-oil, 20c.@ 35c.

PETROLEUM—Business in this line shows very little animation, though the advantage as to values is in favor of purchasers. The export call for supplies is generally limited, notwithstanding the more favorable position of the ocean freight market, for the export interest....Crude quoted at 14c., in bulk, and 17c., in shipping order....Refined quoted by refiners at 26¾c., though reported as yet available from second hands at 26c. for early delivery. ....Refined, in cases, quoted at 30c.@32c.; Naphtha quoted at 14½c....At Philadelphia, Refined Petroleum, for early delivery, quoted at 26¾c....At Baltimore, quoted for early delivery at 26¾c.

PROVISIONS—Western Mess Pork has been less sought after for early delivery, and quoted weaker in price....Sales reported of 50 bbls. uninspected at $17 75, closing with $17 50 as about the best rate bid....Other kinds inactive....Extra Prime, inspected, quoted at $14; Western Prime Mess at $16 75@$17. ....And for forward delivery here, Western Mess has been quite dull to-day; quoted for January at the close nominally at $17 50@$17 62½, and $16 50@$16 62½ for Feb. ....Sales reported, $17 55@$17 75; April, $17 65@$17 80. No sales reported....Dressed Hogs continue in moderate request, with City quoted at 8¾c.@8¾c.; Western, 8¾c.@ 9¼c....Untreated Hams have been quoted strong on a fair demand....Sales include small lots of Pickled Bellies, in bulk, at 9c.@9½c., and sundry small lots of City bulk within our range. ....We quote: City Pickled Shoulders, in bulk, at 7¾c.; Pickled Hams at 10¾c.@11¼c.; Smoked Shoulders at 9c.; Smoked Hams at 12½c.@13c.; fresh Hams, 12c. at 10¾c.; Western Dry-salted, Short-cut Hams, 10c. at 9¾c.; Western Pickled Hams, 10c. to-day; Hams, in tierces, at 11c.; Western Dry-salted Shoulders, boxed, at 8⅞c.@7c....Bacon has been more active with Western Long Clear here quoted at 9½c.; and City do. at 9¾c.; Western Long and Short Clear, January delivery, at 9¾c.; do., February, at 9¼c. Sales reported of 100 bxs. Short Clear at 9¾c.; also 500 bxs. Long and Short Clear, for January delivery, at 9½c., and 250 bxs. do., February, at 9¼c.....And for Chicago delivery, Long and Short Clear, quoted at 8¾c., but without further transactions reported in this class. Of Short Rib, further sales of 1,300,000 lb., in bulk, for March delivery, at Chicago, reported at $5 70@$8 75....Western Prime Steam Lard has been more active for early delivery, but again quoted irregular in price, closing heavily....Of Western Steam, for early delivery here, sales have been reported at 11 30 bid; and 159 tcs off grade at $11 15@ $11 27½....And for forward delivery here, Western Steam has been quite active, opening stronger but closing weak....Western Steam, for January, quoted at the close nominal; February, $11 25 bid; March at $11 35; April, $11 47½.... Sales were reported of Western Steam to the extent of 1,750 tcs., January delivery, at $11 25@$11 35; 5,750 tcs., March, at $11 35@$11 45; and 3,000 tcs., April at $11 47½@$11 55....City Steam and Kettle in good request, quoted at $11 25, bid; sales 110 tcs. at this rate....And No. 2 quoted at $10 75 bid, and $10 87½@$11, asked....Refined Lard very quiet today; quoted for the Continent, for early delivery, at $11 50@$11 62½, and for the West Indies at $10....In a jobbing way, Beef has been in limited request, at steady prices....We quote barrel Beef at $12@$12 50 for Extra Mess, at $10 50@$11 50 for Plain Mess, and $13 50 @$14 for Packet, ₱ bbl.; sales 800 bbls. Extra Beef quoted thus: Prime Mess, new, at $19@$20; India Mess, new, $20@$21; City Extra India Mess, $25@$25 50; sales 100 tcs., Philadelphia, on private terms. Smoked Beef in moderate demand at 9½c. Western quoted firm at $25 ₱ bbl....Butter, Cheese, and Eggs, have been essentially as last quoted.... Tallow has been fairly active at firm rates. Sales 10,000 lb. prime to strictly choice, at 8⅜c.@8¾c.... Stearine quiet; prime to very choice Western in tcs., quoted at 9¼c.@9¾c.....Of Grease 12,000 lb. sold at 7c.

SALT—Has been offered in ample supply and quite moderate request, with prices ruling in favor of buyers....Liverpool Ground quoted at 80c.@85c.; Liverpool Fine at $1 10@$2 50, from store; Turk's Island, in bulk, 25c.@28c.; St. Martin's, 28c.@30c.

SALTPETRE—Has been inactive. In very slack request, yet quoted nominally steady at 9c.@7c., gold.

SOAP—Has been meeting with a fair jobbing inquiry on a comparatively steady basis as to values, with Castile quoted at 8¾c.@9¾c., gold; Colgate's Family, 8c., currency; and Sterling and other brands at proportionate figures, less usual discount.

SPICES—The jobbing call has been moderately active at firm prices....Sales reported of 80c. Singapore, 9½c.; 85c. Penang, 10¾c.@11¼c.; Smoked Shoulders at 9c.; Smoked Hams at 12½c.@13c.; fresh Hams, 12c. at 10¾c.; Western Dry-salted, Short-cut Hams, 10c. at 9¾c.; Western Pickled Hams, 10c. to-day; Hams, in tierces, at 11c.; Western Dry-salted Shoulders, boxed, at 8⅞c.@7c....Bacon has been more active with Western Long Clear here quoted at 9½c.; and City do. at 9¾c.; Western Long and Short Clear, January delivery, at 9¾c.; do., February, at 9¼c. Sales reported of 100 bxs. Short Clear at 9¾c.; also 500 bxs. Long and Short Clear, for January delivery, at 9½c., and 250 bxs. do., February, at 9¼c.....And for Chicago delivery, Long and Short Clear, quoted at 8¾c., but without further transactions reported in this class. Of Short Rib, further sales of 1,300,000 lb., in bulk, for March delivery, at Chicago, reported at $5 70@$8 75....Western Prime Steam Lard has been more active for early delivery, but again quoted irregular in price, closing heavily....Of Western Steam, for early delivery here, sales have been reported at 11 30 bid; and 159 tcs off grade at $11 15@ $11 27½....And for forward delivery here, Western Steam has been quite active, opening stronger but closing weak....Western Steam, for January, quoted at the close nominal; February, $11 25 bid; March at $11 35; April, $11 47½.... Sales were reported of Western Steam to the extent of 1,750 tcs., January delivery, at $11 25@$11 35; 5,750 tcs., March, at $11 35@$11 45; and 3,000 tcs., April at $11 47½@$11 55....City Steam and Kettle in good request, quoted at $11 25, bid; sales 110 tcs. at this rate....And No. 2 quoted at $10 75 bid, and $10 87½@$11, asked....Refined Lard very quiet today; quoted for the Continent, for early delivery, at $11 50@$11 62½, and for the West Indies at $10....In a jobbing way, Beef has been in limited request, at steady prices....We quote barrel Beef at $12@$12 50 for Extra Mess, at $10 50@$11 50 for Plain Mess, and $13 50 @$14 for Packet, ₱ bbl.; sales 800 bbls. Extra Beef quoted thus: Prime Mess, new, at $19@$20; India Mess, new, $20@$21; City Extra India Mess, $25@$25 50; sales 100 tcs., Philadelphia, on private terms. Smoked Beef in moderate demand at 9½c. Western quoted firm at $25 ₱ bbl....Butter, Cheese, and Eggs, have been essentially as last quoted.... Tallow has been fairly active at firm rates. Sales 10,000 lb. prime to strictly choice, at 8⅜c.@8¾c.... Stearine quiet; prime to very choice Western in tcs., quoted at 9¼c.@9¾c.....Of Grease 12,000 lb. sold at 7c.

SALT—Has been offered in ample supply and quite moderate request, with prices ruling in favor of buyers....Liverpool Ground quoted at 80c.@85c.; Liverpool Fine at $1 10@$2 50, from store; Turk's Island, in bulk, 25c.@28c.; St. Martin's, 28c.@30c.

SALTPETRE—Has been inactive. In very slack request, yet quoted nominally steady at 9c.@7c., gold.

SOAP—Has been meeting with a fair jobbing inquiry on a comparatively steady basis as to values, with Castile quoted at 8¾c.@9¾c., gold; Colgate's Family, 8c., currency; and Sterling and other brands at proportionate figures, less usual discount.

SPICES—The jobbing call has been moderately active at firm prices....Sales reported of 80c. Singapore, 9½c.; 85c. Penang, 10¾c.@11¼c.; Cassia, 21c.@23c.; Cloves, 39c.@ 42½c.; Kast India Pepper, 14c.@14¾c.; White Pepper, 23c.@23¾c.; Pimento, 12½c.@13¼c.; Ginger, 8¾c.@ 9c., gold ₱ lb. Market otherwise comparatively the same.

STARCH—Has been steady in price, and in demand in a jobbing way.

SUMAC—Has been in request, with Sicily quoted at from $60@$65 ₱ ton, and Virginia at from $60@$65 ₱ ton.

SUGARS—Raw have been moderately inquired for at former figures, with sales reported of 100 hhds. new Centrifugal at 10½c., and 160 hhds. New-Orleans at 8⅝c.....We quote fair refining Cuba at 9½c.; good do., 9¾c.; prime do., 9⅞c.; fair to very choice Grocery, 10c.@10¾c. Refined is steady at 10c. Unofficial stock at 10c.@10¾c.; Manna bags, 8¾c.@9¾c. Molasses Sugar, 8c.@9¼c. Melado, 5c.@7½c.....Refined Sugars have been in comparatively limited request, with Granulated quoted at 11¾c.@11¾c.; Powdered, 11¾c.; Crushed at 11¾c.; Cut Loaf at 11¾c.@12c.; Soft White at 10¼c.@11¼c.; Soft Yellow at 9¼c.@ 10⅜c. ₱ lb., showing a further decline.

TOBACCO—Has been quoted steady on a more active movement, partly for export.....Sales include 300 hhds. Kentucky Leaf at 4½c.@14c.; 100 cases sundries at 7c.@35c.; 40 cases 1872 Pennsylvania at 12½c.; 443 cases 1874 do. at 15c.@17½c.; 22 cases 1875 do. at 12½c.; 100 cases 1873 Ohio, at 12½c.; 138 cases 1875 Wisconsin at 4½c.; 100 cases 1875 New-England on private terms; and 200 bales Havana at 80c.@$1 15 ₱ lb.

WHISKY—Has declined to $1 10; sales, 50 bbls.

WOOL—Domestic product has been in moderately active request, chiefly on manufacturing account, and has been quoted generally firm. Foreign has been in rather more demand, but somewhat unsettled as to values....Sales have been reported, since our last, of 30,000 lb. Domestic Fleece, Wisconsin, and X and XX Ohio, at 42c.@47½c.; 1,500 lb. Utah at 31c.; 3,000 lb. Georgia at 29c.; 3,000 lb. Lake, Burrs, at 15½c.; 48,000 lb. and 60 bales Texas at 16c.@26c.; 8,000 lb. scoured Fall Texas at 60c.; 169 bales California Spring at 28½c.@30c.; 10,000 lb. and 50 bales California Fall at 30c.@24c.; and 13,000 lb. Australian on private terms.

FREIGHTS—At a further partial modification of rates, a somewhat freer movement was reported in the way of berth engagements, chiefly in the way of contracts for Cotton, Grain, and Provisions. And in the chartering line, some indications of activity were apparent, though at low figures, generally. The demand for tonnage in this connection was mostly for Petroleum, Staves, Tobacco, Lumber, and general cargo. Reports from Philadelphia were of a relief to harbor navigation from the protracted ice interruptions; and from Baltimore, by an improvement in this respect also, giving promise of an early revival of export operations at those ports....For Liverpool, the engagements reported, since our last, have been, by sail, 48,000 bushels Grain, in bags, of which 8,000 bushels Wheat, at 8½d. ₱ bushel, and 40,000 bushels Corn at 7d. ₱ 60-lb., all from store; and, by steam, 1,100 bales Cotton at ⅛d.@9-32d. ₱ lb.; 8,000 bushels Grain, rumored, at 6d. ₱ bushel; 3,400 pks. Butter and Cheese on private terms, quoted at 40s. bid and up to 45s. asked; 2,500 bxs. Bacon, at 35s.@37s. 6d.; 2,500 bxs. do., or through freight, at 40s.@42s. 6d.; 700 bags Seed on private terms, and 1,000 bags do. at 40s. asked; 200 tons Beef and 800 pks. Provisions on private terms. Also, a British ship, 1,371 tons, placed on the berth hence for general cargo....For London, by steam, 350 pks. Provisions, and 600 pks. do. on private terms; and 200 tons of steam shipment) 350 bags Sisal Grass, also on private terms; also, a British brig, 395 tons, with Slates, from Perth Amboy, at 30s. ₱ ton....For Newcastle, by steam, 100 tons Beef on private terms....For Bristol, by sail, 50 tons Tallow at 25s.; and by steam, 25 tons do., at 35s. ₱ ton; also an Austrian bark, 552 tons, hence, with Slate, reported at 26s. ₱ ton....For Cork and orders, a fine-class Norwegian bark, each with about 3,000 quarters Grain, from Baltimore, (chartered there,) at 6s. 3d. ₱ quarter, with Grain tonnage here quoted nominally as in our last....For Lisbon, an Italian brig, hence, with about 16,000 bushels Grain, reported on private terms, quoted nominally at 15c.@16c. ₱ bushel; and a Norwegian bark, 344 tons, with Centennial goods, from Philadelphia, reported on private terms....For Bayonne, a British brig, 198 tons, with about 1,300 quarters Grain, from Philadelphia, at 6s. 3d. per quarter....For Glasgow, by steam, 1,000 bbls. Flour, reported on private terms, quoted nominally at 2s. 6d., asked. ₱ bbl.; 10,000 bushels Grain at the minimum rate of 4½d. ₱ bushel; 250 bbls. Apples at 4s. ₱ bbl., 30 tcs. Beef at 6s. 6d. ₱ tierce; 1,400 bxs. Bacon at 37s. 6d.@40s., nearly all reported at 37s. 6d. ₱ ton....For the Continent, a [illegible]

LIVE STOCK MARKETS.

BUFFALO, Jan. 23.—Cattle—Receipts to-day, 731 head, making the total supply for the week thus far 3,941 head, against 4,800 for the same time last week; the market was dull and transactions mainly to local dealers; a shortage of care restricts Eastern trade demand; 70 cars were disposed of; sales of best lots shippers' stock, averaging 1,270 to 1,430 lb., at $5 25@$6 12½; butchers' Cattle, $4 50@$5; common lots, $3 50@$4 50. Sheep and Lambs—Receipts to-day, 2,400 head, making the total supply for the week thus far 10,700 head, against 14,000 for the same time last week; the market was dull and slow; shipments light for want of cars; sales of 11 cars best offerings, with about 40 cars awaiting shipment; prime wethers, $4 75; average to choice Canada and Iletters, $3 12½@$4; corn-fed Texans, $3 25@$4 25. Receipts—2,700 bbls. Flour, 7,000 bushels Wheat, 24,000 bushels Corn, 3,000 bushels Oats, 1,000 bushels Rye, 6,000 bushels Barley, 2,200 head Hogs, 900 head Cattle.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 23.—Flour steady, with a fair demand. Wheat dull; buyers offering low prices; Red, $1 45@$1 50. Corn dull, lower to sell, at 43c.@ 45c. Oats in moderate demand; Rye quiet, but steady at 82c.@83c. Barley dull and nominal. Pork steady, held at $17, spot; sales at $17 30. March; $17 60, buyer March; $17 37½, seller April. Lard inactive; Steam-rendered, 10¾c. bid; 10⅞c. asked. Bulk-meats firm; 8½c. Western Bulk-meats Shoulders, 6¾c.@6¾c.; Short Rib Sides, 8¾@ 8¾c.; Short Rib Sides, 8¾@8¾c.; Sugar-cured Hams, 13c. Lard quiet; tierces, 11¾c.@11¾c.; kegs, 10¾c.@11c. Whisky steady and unchanged. Bagging quiet at 11½c.

LOUISVILLE, Jan. 23.—Flour firm and unchanged; Wheat firm; Red, $1 36@$1 40; Amber, $1 40@$1 50; White to extra, $1 50@$1 60. Corn firm at 40c. in active demand at 80c.@81c. Oats quiet and unchanged. Pork quiet at $17 50. Bulk-meats in light demand, but holders firm; Shoulders, 6½c.; Clear Rib Sides, 8¾c.; Clear Sides, 9c., all boxed. Bacon—Clear Rib Sides, 10¾c. Sugar-cured Hams, 13c. Lard quiet; tierces, 11¾c.@11¾c.; kegs, 10¾c.@11c. Whisky steady and unchanged. Bagging quiet at 11½c.

MILWAUKEE, Jan. 23.—Flour quiet, but firm. Wheat dull; No. 1 Milwaukee, $1 39; No. 2 do., $1 33; No. 3 do., $1 10; No. 1 Spring, $1 34; No. 2 do., $1 22½. Corn steady, with a fair demand; No. 2, 46c. Oats firmer; No. 2, 34¾c.@35c. Rye in fair demand; No. 1, 74c. Barley steady; demand fair; No. 2 Spring, $1 10@$1 13 do., 99c. Provisions dull; tone shade firmer. Mess Pork, $17, cash and February. Lard—Prime Steam, 11c. Dressed Hogs firm at $7. Receipts—5,500 bbls. Flour, 16,000 bushels Wheat. Shipments—3,800 bbls. Flour, 3,300 bushels Wheat.

OSWEGO, Jan. 23.—Flour steady; sales, 1,400 bbls. at $5 50@$8 85 for Spring; $7 75@$8 25 for Amber Winter; $8@$8 50 for White do.; $8 25@$8 75 for Double Extra. Wheat unchanged; sales or No. 2 Milwaukee Club at $1 00; no 1 do. held at $1 58. Corn steady; sales, 4,000 bushels Mixed, 52c. in store. Barley quiet; No. 1 Canada held at $1 03; No. 2 do. at 93c. Corn-meal unchanged. Mill Feed unchanged. Railroad Shipments—Flour, 1,400 bbls.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 23.—Flour steady and unchanged. Wheat in active demand; Rejected, $1 15 @$1 20; No. 3 Red, $1 25@$1 30; No. 2 do., $1 35@ $1 40; Choice, $1 45@$1 50. Corn quiet and unchanged.

SHIPPING.

WHITE STAR LINE.
FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL. CARRYING UNITED STATES MAIL.

The steamers of this line take the Lake Routes recommended by Lieut. Maury, U. S. N., going south of the Banks on the passage to Queenstown all the year round.

CELTIC.....SATURDAY, Feb. 3, 8:30 A. M.
ADRIATIC.....SATURDAY, Feb. 10, at 3 P. M.
BRITANNIC.....SATURDAY, Feb. 24, 9 P. M.
CELTIC.....SATURDAY, March 10, at 2 P. M.

From White Star Dock, Pier No. 52 North River.

These steamers are uniform in size and unsurpassed in appointments. The saloon, staterooms, smoking and bath rooms are amidships, where the noise and motion are least felt, affording a degree of comfort hitherto unattainable at sea.

Rates—Saloon $80, and $100, gold; return tickets on favorable terms; steerage, $32.

For inspection of plans and other information apply at the Company's offices, No. 37 Broadway, New-York.
J. BORTIS, Agent.

CUNARD LINE B. & N. A. R. M. S. P. CO.
NOTICE.

With the view of diminishing the chances of collision the steamers of this line take a specified course for all seasons of the year.

On the outward passage from Queenstown to New-York or Boston, crossing meridian of 50 at 43 latitude, or nothing to the north of 43.

On the homeward passage, crossing the meridian of 40 at 42, or nothing to the north of 42.

FROM NEW-YORK FOR LIVERPOOL AND QUEENSTOWN.
BATAVIA....WED., Jan. 24 ALGERIA....WED., Feb. 7
ABYSSINIA....WED., Jan. 31 PARTHIA....WED., Feb. 14

Steamers marked "a" not carry steerage passengers.

Cabin passage, $80, $100, and $130, gold, according to accommodation. Return tickets on favorable terms.

Steerage tickets to and from all parts of Europe at very low rates. Freight and passage office, No. 4 Bowling Green.
CHAS. G. FRANCKLYN, Agent.

PASSENGERS PER STEAM-SHIP BATAVIA embark from the Cunard wharf, foot of Grand st., Jersey City, at noon on WEDNESDAY, 24th January, 1877.
CHARLES G. FRANCKLYN,
No. 4 Bowling Green, New-York.

STATE LINE.

NEW-YORK TO GLASGOW, LIVERPOOL, DUBLIN, BELFAST, AND LONDONDERRY.

These first-class iron-powered steamers will sail from Pier No. 42 North River, foot of Canal st.

STATE OF GEORGIA.....Thursday, Jan. 25
STATE OF INDIANA.....Thursday, Feb. 1
STATE OF PENNSYLVANIA.....Thursday, Feb. 8
STATE OF VIRGINIA.....Thursday, Feb. 22

First cabin, $60, $65, and $70, according to accommodations; return tickets, $110, $125. Second cabin, $45; return tickets, $80. Steerage at lowest rates. Apply to
AUSTIN BALDWIN & CO., Agents,
No. 72 Broadway, New-York.

STEERAGE tickets at No. 45 Broadway, and at the Company's pier, foot of Franklin st., North River.

LIVERPOOL AND GREAT WESTERN STEAM COMPANY. (LIMITED.)
TO LIVERPOOL (Via Queenstown,)
CARRYING THE UNITED STATES MAIL.

TUESDAY.

Leaving Pier No. 46 North River as follows:

WISCONSIN.....Jan. 30, at 3 P. M.
WYOMING.....Feb. 8, at noon
DAKOTA.....Feb. 13, at 3 P. M.
NEVADA.....Feb. 20, at 10 A. M.
IDAHO.....Feb. 27, at 3 P. M.
MONTANA.....March 6, at 10 A. M.

RATES OF PASSENGERS REDUCED.

Steerage, $26; intermediate, $40; cabin, $65 to $80, according to state-room. Offices, No. 29 Broadway.
WILLIAMS & GUION.

ATLAS MAIL LINE.
BI-MONTHLY SERVICE TO JAMAICA, HAYTI, COLOMBIA, and ISTHMUS OF PANAMA, and to COLON, and SPINWALL, and to PANAMA and SOUTH PACIFIC PORTS (via Aspinwall.) First-class, mail-powered iron screw steamers, from Pier No. 51, North River.

For HAYTI, COLOMBIA, ISTHMUS OF PANAMA, and SOUTH PACIFIC PORTS (via Aspinwall.)

ILPS.....Jan. 13
TNA.....Jan. 27

For KINGSTON (Jam.) and HAYTI.

ILAS.....Feb. 8

Superior first-class accommodations for cabin passengers. PIM, FORWOOD & CO., Agents,
No. 56 Wall st.

GREAT SOUTHERN

FREIGHT AND PASSENGER LINE.
SAILING FROM PIER NO. 29 NORTH RIVER.
WEDNESDAYS and SATURDAYS at 3 P. M.,
FOR CHARLESTON, S. C., FLORIDA, THE SOUTH, AND SOUTH-WEST.

GULF STREAM.....WEDNESDAY.....Jan. 24
CITY OF ATLANTA.....SATURDAY.....Jan. 27

SUPERIOR PASSENGER ACCOMMODATIONS.

Insurance to destination one-half of one per cent. Goods forwarded free of commission. Passenger tickets and bills of lading issued and signed at the office of
JAMES W. QUINTARD & CO., Agents,
No. 177 West st., corner Warren.
Or W. P. CLYDE & CO., No. 6 Bowling Green.
Or BENTLEY D. HASSELL, General Agent
Great Southern Freight Line, 317 Broadway.

NORTH GERMAN LLOYD.
STEAM-SHIP LINE BETWEEN NEW-YORK, SOUTHAMPTON, AND BREMEN.

Company's Pier, foot of 20th st., Hoboken.

AMERICA.....Sat., Jan. 27 | RHEIN.....Wed. Feb. 7
WESKIR.....Sat., Feb. 3 | ODER.....Sat. Feb. 10

RATES OF PASSAGE FROM NEW-YORK TO SOUTHAMPTON, HAVRE OR BREMEN.

First cabin.....$100 gold
Second cabin.....60 gold
Steerage.....30 currency

Return tickets at reduced rates. Prepaid steerage certificates, $32 currency, for sale. For freight or passage apply to OELRICHS & CO., No. 2 Bowling Green.

ANCHOR LINE U. S. MAIL STEAMERS.
NEW-YORK AND GLASGOW

Ethiopia....Jan. 27, 2 P. M. | Bolivia....Feb. 10, 2 P. M.
Victoria....Feb. 3, 9 A. M. | Alsatia....Feb. 17, 8 A. M.

TO GLASGOW, LIVERPOOL, OR DERRY.

Cabins $65 to $80, according to accommodations; Intermediate, $35; Steerage $28.

NEW-YORK AND LONDON.

Elysia....Jan. 27, 2 P. M. | Idalia....Feb. 10, 2 P. M.

Cabins, $55 to $70. Steerage, $28. Cabin excursion tickets at reduced rates. Drafts issued for any amount at current rates. Company's Pier Nos. 20 and 21, North River, N. Y.
HENDERSON BROTHERS,
Agents, No. 7 Bowling Green.

INMAN LINE.—MAIL STEAMERS.
FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.

CITY OF BERLIN, Saturday, Jan. 27, 1:30 P. M.
CITY OF CHESTER, Saturday, Feb. 17, at 7:30 A. M.
CITY OF RICHMOND, Saturday, March 3, at 8 A. M.

From pier 45 North River.

CABIN, $80 and $100, gold. Return tickets on favorable terms. STEERAGE, $24. Currency Drafts at lowest rates.

Saloons, state-rooms, smoking, and Bath-rooms amidships.
JOHN G. DALE, Agent,
Nos. 15 and 33 Broadway, N. Y.

ONLY DIRECT LINE TO FRANCE.
THE GENERAL TRANSATLANTIC COMPANY'S MAIL STEAMERS BETWEEN NEW-YORK AND HAVRE, Calling at PLYMOUTH (G. B.) for the landing of Passengers.

Will sail from Pier No. 42 North River, foot of Morton st., every alternate Saturday, beginning with:
FRANCE, Trudelle.....Saturday, Jan. 27, at 3 P. M.

For particulars address
LOUIS DE SEBIAN, Agent, No. 55 Broadway.

NATIONAL LINE—Piers 44 and 51 North River. FOR LONDON.
HOLLAND.....SATURDAY, Jan. 27, 2:30 P. M.
FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.
Spain....Jan. 27, 2:30 P. M. | Egypt....Feb. 3, at 9 A. M.

Cabin and steerage passage, and drafts from £1 upward, issued at very low rates. Company's offices No. 69 Broadway. F. W. J. BURST, Manager.

FOR SAVANNAH GA.,
THE FLORIDA PORTS,
AND THE SOUTH AND SOUTH-WEST.

GREAT SOUTHERN FREIGHT AND PASSENGER LINE, CENTRAL RAILROAD OF GEORGIA, AND ATLANTIC AND GULF RAILROAD.

WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY.

GENERAL BARNES, Capt. CHESEMAN, WEDNESDAY, Jan. 24. Pier 16 East River, 3 P. M. MURRAY, FERRIS & CO., Agts., 62 South st.

SAN JACINTO, Capt. HAZARD, SATURDAY, Jan. 27, Pier 43 North River, 3 P. M. GEO. YONGE, Agt., 409 Broadway.

Insurance ONE-HALF PER CENT. Superior accommodations for passengers. Through rates and bills of lading in connection with Central R. R. of Georgia, Atlantic and Gulf Railroad, and Florida steamers City Point and Dictator; also, with the steamer J. B. SCHULER, which has been placed on the inside route from Savannah to Florida, and offers unsurpassed accommodations.

C. D. OWENS, Agent A. & G. R. R. No. 315 Broadway.
GEORGE YONGE, Agent C. R. R. of Ga., No. 409 Broadway.

PACIFIC MAIL AND PANAMA TRANSIT
STEAM-SHIP LINES.

FOR CALIFORNIA, JAPAN, CHINA, AUSTRALIA, NEW-ZEALAND, BRITISH COLUMBIA, OREGON, &c.
Sailing from Pier No. 42 North River.
For Isle of PANAMA, via ISTHMUS OF PANAMA.
Steam-ship ACAPULCO.....Wednesday, Jan. 31
connecting for Central America and South Pacific ports.

From SAN FRANCISCO to JAPAN and CHINA.
Steam-ship ALASKA.....Thursday, Feb. 1
From San Francisco to Sandwich Islands, Australia, and New-Zealand.
Steam-ship ZEALANDIA.....Wednesday, Jan. 31

For freight or passage apply to
WM. P. CLYDE & CO., or H. J. BULLAY, Superintendent, No. 6 Bowling Green, Pier No. 42 N. R., foot Canal st.

NEW-YORK HAVANA AND MEXICAN MAIL S. S. LINE.
Steamers leave Pier No. 3 North River at 3 P. M.

FOR HAVANA DIRECT.

CITY OF MERIDA.....Saturday, Jan. 27
CITY OF VERA CRUZ.....Wednesday, Jan. 31
CITY OF NEW-YORK.....Wednesday, Feb. 7

FOR VERA CRUZ AND NEW-ORLEANS.
Via Havana, Progreso, Campeachy, Tuxpan, and Tampico.

CITY OF MERIDA.....Saturday, Jan. 27
connects with new steamer Feb. 2 and Feb. 23 for Vera Cruz and all the above ports.

For freight or passage apply to
ALEXANDRE & SONS, Nos. 31 and 33 Broadway.

NEW-YORK AND HAVANA
DIRECT MAIL LINE.

These first-class steamships sail regularly at 3 P. M., from Pier No. 13 North River as follows:

COLUMBUS.....WEDNESDAY, Jan. 24
CLYDE.....SATURDAY, Feb. 3

Accommodations unsurpassed. For freight or passage apply to WM. P. CLYDE & CO., No. 6 Bowling Green. MCKELLER, LULING & CO., Agents in Havana.

HAMBURG American Packet Company's Line, for PLYMOUTH, CHERBOURG and HAMBURG.
HERDER.....Jan. 25 | FRISIA.....Feb. 8
WIELAND.....Feb. 15 | GELLERT.....Feb. 15

Rates of passage to Plymouth, London, Cherbourg, Hamburg, and all points in England. First Cabin, $100 gold; Second Cabin, $80 gold; Steerage, $30, currency
KUNHARDT & CO.,
Bowling Green. General Passenger Agents.
No. 61 Broadway, N. Y.

SHIPPING.

RED STAR STEAM-SHIP LINE.
Appointed to carry the Belgian and United States mails. The following steamers are appointed to sail TO ANTWERP.

From Philadelphia. From New-York.
NEDERLAND.....Jan. 22 | SWITZERLAND.....Jan. 10
VADERLAND.....Feb. 15 | KENILWORTH.....Feb. 3

RATES OF PASSAGE IN CURRENCY:

First Cabin, $90; Second Cabin, $60; Steerage, $26.
PETER WRIGHT & SONS, General Agents, Philada., No. 52 Broadway, New-York.

JOHN McDONALD, No. 8 Battery place, New-York.

SITUATIONS WANTED.

FEMALES.

THE UP-TOWN OFFICE OF THE TIMES.

The up-town office of THE TIMES is located at
No. 1,257 Broadway, bet. 31st and 32d sts.
Open daily, Sundays included, from 4 A. M. to 9 P. M.
Subscriptions received, and copies of THE TIMES for sale.

ADVERTISEMENTS RECEIVED UNTIL 9 P. M.

COMPANION.—BY A RESPECTABLE PROTESTANT woman to take care and wait on an old lady; has the best City reference. Can be seen from 10 to 12 at No. 40 East 32d st.

CHAMBER-MAID.—BY A YOUNG ENGLISH Protestant as chamber-maid and seamstress in a private family; can wait on a lady if required, or grown children; has excellent references. Can be seen for two days at No. 234 East 25th st.

CHAMBER-MAID.—BY A FIRST-CLASS CHAMber-maid; will otherwise render herself useful; has excellent City reference. Address Chamber-maid, Box No. 1,253 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

CHAMBER-MAID AND WAITRESS.—BY A young woman; is a good seamstress; will be found willing and obliging; has good City reference. Call at No. 119 West 46th st., in grocery store.

CHAMBER-MAID AND SEAMSTRESS.—BY a Protestant girl as first-class chamber-maid and seamstress; best of reference; willing and obliging. Call at No. 333 East 31st st., top floor.

CHAMBER-MAID AND WAITRESS.—BY A young woman; has three years' City reference; City or country. Address M. C., Box No. 308 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

CHAMBER-MAID AND WAITRESS OR Nurse.—By a respectable Protestant young woman; good reference. Address No. 161 West 27th st., top floor.

CHAMBER-MAID.—BY A GOOD GIRL AS CHAMber-maid and waitress, or for general house-work; willing and competent; excellent references. Call at No. 127 East 30th st., present employer's.

CHAMBER-MAID.—BY A RESPECTABLE COLored woman as first-class chamber-maid and nurse; can give good reference. Call at No. 145 West 50th st.

CHAMBER-MAID AND WAITRESS.—BY A respectable girl as chamber-maid and waitress; City reference. Call at No. 345 East 34th st.

CHAMBER-MAID AND NURSE.—BY A RESpectable girl; is willing and obliging; City reference. Apply at No. 134 West 35th st.

CHAMBER-MAID AND WAITRESS.—BY A Protestant girl in a small private family; good City references. Call at No. 116 West 35th st.

CHAMBER-MAID.—BY A YOUNG WOMAN AS Chamber-maid and plain sewing; understands machine. Call at No. 523 West 46th st., third floor front.

CHAMBER-MAID.—BY A RESPECTABLE GIRL as chamber-maid, and would assist with the washing and ironing; no cards. Call at 248 West 41st st.

CHAMBER-MAID AND WAITRESS, OR TO do general house-work in a small family. Address present employer, J. C. J., No. 419 East 61st st.

CHAMBER-MAID AND WAITRESS.—Three years' City references. Call at No. 221 East 21st st.

CHAMBER-MAID AND ASSIST WITH Washing.—By a young girl; best City reference. Call at No. 329 East 29th st., one flight, back.

CHAMBER-MAID AND WAITRESS.—BY AN English Protestant girl as chamber-maid and waitress. Apply at No. 347 7th av.

CHAMBER-MAID.—BY A RESPECTABLE GIRL to do chamber-work and waiting; City reference. Call at No. 345 East 34th st.

CHAMBER-MAID.—BY A PROTESTANT GIRL as chamber-maid or assist with children or waiting; City reference. Call at No. 367 West 12th st.

CHAMBER-MAID.—BY A GERMAN GIRL AS Chamber-maid and to assist with washing and ironing. Call at No. 228 East 41st st., in the store.

CHAMBER-MAID.—BY A RESPECTABLE GIRL to do chamber-work, and make herself otherwise useful; good City reference. Call at 220 East 45th st.

CHAMBER-MAID.—BY A LADY FOR A CHAMber-maid whom she can highly recommend. Apply at No. 25 East 44th st.

COOK.—BY A RESPECTABLE WOMAN AS FIRST-Class cook; thoroughly understands ganes, soups, meats, boning, and larding; is an excellent baker; best City reference. Call at No. 631 6th av., in grocery store.

COOK.—BY A RESPECTABLE WOMAN; EXCELlent cook; understands all kinds of soups, meats, poultry and game; good baker; good City reference from last place. Call or address at No. 155 Madison av., for two days, basement bell.

COOK, &c.—CHAMBER-MAID, &c.—BY two respectable young girls; one a good cook, washer and ironer; the other as chamber-maid and waitress; both willing and obliging; good City reference. Call at No. 145 East 32d st.

COOK—CHAMBER-MAID.—TWO SCOTTISH Presbyterians, a good cook and washer, and the other a chamber-maid and waitress; will only go together; best of reference. Call for two days at No. 329 West 25th st.; ask for Annie Taylor; no cards.

COOK.—BY AN EXPERIENCED WOMAN AS FIRSTclass cook; best City reference from the last place; no objection to a short distance in the country. Call at No. 166 West 28th st.

COOK.—BY A RESPECTABLE WOMAN AS COOK in a private family; thoroughly understands her business; best City references. Call at No. 341 West 26th st., room No. 15.

COOK.—BY A RESPECTABLE WOMAN AS GOOD Plain cook in a private family; is an excellent washer and ironer; good City reference. Call at No. 146 East 30th st.

COOK.—BY A PROTESTANT WOMAN AS COOK; Cis first-class at bread and pastry; would do the coarse washing; best City reference; no objection to the country. Address No. 150 West 28th st., Room 5.

COOK.—BY A COMPETENT PROTESTANT COOK in a private family; will assist with the washing if required; the best of City references. Call at No. 217 East 25th st.

COOK.—BY A RESPECTABLE WOMAN AS FIRSTclass cook; understands meats and soups; excellent baker; unexceptionable City reference. Call for two days at No. 244 East 30th st.

COOK.—BY A FIRST-CLASS PROTESTANT COOK in a private family; good City reference; will do coarse washing; City or country. Call at No. 247 West 27th st.

COOK.—BY A NEAT, ORDERLY, COMPETENT Protestant woman in a private family; understands her business thoroughly. Inquire for C. D., No. 241 East 33d st.

COOK.—AS FIRST-CLASS COOK, PROTESTANT. Cin a private family; no objection to any part of the country; best reference. Call at No. 134 West 17th st., basement.

COOK.—BY A RESPECTABLE YOUNG WOMAN AS first-class cook, in private family; will assist with washing; City reference. Address B. Box No. 322 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

COOK.—BY A RESPECTABLE WOMAN AS FIRSTclass cook; understands all kinds of cooking; no objection to a first-class boarding-house; best references. Call at No. 139 West 28th st., in bakery.

COOK.—BY A RESPECTABLE GIRL AS FIRSTClass cook; has the best of City references. Address B. S., Box No. 300 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

COOK.—BY A FRENCH WOMAN AS FIRST-CLASS Cook in a private family; good City reference. Address C. S., Box No. 221 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

COOK, WASHER, AND IRONER.—BY A Cocompetent woman, or will do general house-work; City or country; City reference. Call at No. 124 West 33d st., basement, back room.

COOK.—BY A RESPECTABLE WOMAN AS GOOD plain cook; is an excellent laundress; wages no object; City or country; good reference. Call at No. 337 East 22d st., in store.

COOK.—BY A FIRST-CLASS COOK IN A PRIVATE family; understands all kinds of meats and soups; excellent baker; best City reference. Can be seen for two days at No. 478 7th av.

COOK.—BY AN EXPERIENCED COOK; UNDERstands meats, soups, jellies, pastry, &c.; an excellent baker; very best reference. Call at No. 936 Broadway, in florist's store.

COOK.—BY A FIRST-CLASS, STEADY WOMAN; Cknows her work thoroughly; good baker of bread; best City reference. Call or address two days No. 246 East 27th st. Room No. 16.

COOK.—BY A SCOTCH WOMAN; UNDERSTANDS French and English cooking, boning, larding, baking, and pastry; all kinds of sweets; best reference. Call at No. 425 West 42d st.

COOK.—BY A RESPECTABLE PROTESTANT Cwoman; excellent plain cook; would do coarse washing; best City reference. Call at No. 224 West 31st st., first floor.

COOK.—BY A RESPECTABLE GIRL AS COOK; Cthoroughly understands her business; best City references. Call at No. 777 7th av.

COOK, WASHER, AND IRONER, OR GEN Ceral house-work in a small family. Call at No. 811 2d av., corner 43d st.

COOK AND ASSIST WITH WASHING.—CBy a neat, tidy girl; best City reference. Call at No. 225 East 29th st., third floor.

COOK.—BY A FIRST-CLASS COOK IN A PRIVATE family; has the best City reference. Call at No. 709 6th av., candy store.

COOK.—BY AN EXPERIENCED COOK IN A PRIvate family; fully competent; best City reference. Can be seen at No. 235 West 24th st.

COOK.—BY A GOOD COOK; UNDERSTANDS HER Cbusiness in all its branches; will furnish the best of City reference. Call at No. 259 West 37th st.

COOK.—BY A COLORED WOMAN IN A PRIVATE Cfamily; first-class reference. Call or address No. 241 4th av., rear.

COOK.—BY A RESPECTABLE WOMAN AS GOOD Cook; will assist with the washing; good City reference. Call at 142 West 38th st., two flights up.

COOK.—BY A PROTESTANT GIRL AS COOK IN A Cprivate family; is a young City reference. Call at No. 893 West 52d st., one flight up.

SITUATIONS WANTED.

FEMALES.

COOK.—BY A RESPECTABLE GIRL AS COOK Cand to assist in washing and ironing; best of City reference. Call for two days at No. 321 West 42d st.

COOK.—BY A RESPECTABLE WOMAN AS COOK, Cwasher, and ironer; best City reference. Call at No. 329 East 32d st.

COOK.—BY A RESPECTABLE GIRL AS GOOD Cook; the best City references from last place. Call at No. 608 2d av.

COOK.—BY A PLAIN COOK, WASHER, AND Cironer; good reference. Call at No. 1,025 6th av.

DRESS-MAKER.—BY AN EXPERIENCED DRESSmaker a few more engagements to work out by the day; has the newest styles and can give city references. Address M. Y., Box No. 316 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

DRESS-MAKER.—ENGAGEMENT WITH A family for a month as seamstress. Address M. G., Box No. 294 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

DRESS-MAKER.—A FEW MORE ENGAGEments by the day or week; understands different machines. Address E., No. 321 7th av.

GOVERNESS.—BY AN AMERICAN YOUNG LADY, Cwho speaks German, as nursery governess; best of reference. Address GOVERNESS, for three day, No. 715 5th av.

HOUSEKEEPER.—BY AN AMERICAN PROTestant woman as assistant housekeeper, or would do the entire work of a small family, except washing; City or country; first-class reference. Address Economy, Box No. 318 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

HOUSEKEEPER.—BY AN AMERICAN LADY of private family; the best of City reference. Call at No. 127 West 19th st.

LAUNDRESS.—BY A FIRST-CLASS LAUNDRESS; best City reference. Call at No. 796 6th av. for two days. No cards answered.

NURSE, &c.—BY A RESPECTABLE PROTESTANT woman as child's nurse, or to wait upon an invalid or aged lady; is competent to assist in housekeeping or sewing; best of City reference. Call at No. 233 West 39th st.; ring third bell.

NURSE AND SEAMSTRESS.—BY A PROtestant young woman as nurse and seamstress; 15 years' reference. Call for two days at No. 125 West 16th st., rear.

NURSE AND SEAMSTRESS.—BY A NORTH German girl, to take care of growing children and sewing; City reference. Call at No. 23 Grand st., Hoboken.

NURSE, &c.—BY A RESPECTABLE PROTESTant woman, unmarried, as nurse and seamstress, or would go as chamber-maid or waitress. Call or address for three days No. 244 East 39th st.

NURSE.—BY A RESPECTABLE PROTESTANT woman as nurse; can take entire charge from birth; good reference. Call at No. 109 West 33d st., for two days.

NURSE.—BY A YOUNG PROTESTANT GIRL AS Nurse and to make herself generally useful; not long in the country. Call at No. 915 6th av., between 51st and 52d sts., in fancy store.

NURSE AND SEAMSTRESS.—BY A RESPECTable young girl, Protestant; best City reference. Address J. W., Box No. 255 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

NURSE.—BY A YOUNG AMERICAN GIRL TO TAKE Care of children or do light house-work in a small family. Call or address No. 206 East 26th st., three flights up, front.

NURSE AND SEAMSTRESS—OR CHAMBERwork; good City reference. Call at No. 202 West 25th st.

NURSE, &c.—BY A YOUNG PROTESTANT GIRL as child's nurse, seamstress, and chamber-maid; four years in her last place. Call at No. 11 West 35th st.

NURSE AND CHAMBER-MAID.—BY A Young American woman as nurse and chamber-maid; good City reference. Call at 306 West 37th st.

NURSE.—BY A RESPECTABLE YOUNG FRENCH Protestant girl as nurse; speaks no English. Call on or address Nurse, No. 8 West 24th st.

NURSE.—BY A CAPABLE WOMAN TO TAKE CARE of an invalid or baby from its infancy; very best of reference. Call at No. 201 West 31st st.

NURSE.—BY A YOUNG GIRL AS NURSE TO MIND children; good City reference. Call for two days at No. 323 East 54th st., second floor.

NURSE.—BY A PROTESTANT NURSE AND SEAMstress; no objection to assist with chamber-work; good reference. Call at No. 216 West 37th st.

NURSE.—BY AN AMERICAN GIRL, 17 YEARS OLD, as nurse. Call at No. 514 3d av., third floor, front.

SEAMSTRESS.—A GOOD SEAMSTRESS AND dress-maker, understanding all kinds of family sewing, is an experienced operator, wishes a few more engagements by the day or week, or take work to her own home; has an excellent Wheeler & Wilson machine; all kinds of sewing cheaply and neatly done; worn suits turned and altered. Address Miss Corsberg, No. 237 East 25th st.

SEAMSTRESS.—BY A LIGHT-COLORED NORTH-Sern girl as seamstress or nurse; understands dressmaking; good reference. Address Seamstress, Box No. 251 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

SEAMSTRESS.—BY AN EXPERIENCED FRENCH Seamstress, by the day; can do all kinds of family sewing and mending; a good button-hole maker for all kinds of clothes; well recommended. Call all the week at No. 62 West 33d st.

SEAMSTRESS.—BY A PROTESTANT GIRL AS Seamstress; can operate on Wheeler & Wilson machine; understands dress-making; City reference. Call at No. 143 West 28th st.

SEAMSTRESS.—BY A RESPECTABLE WOMAN As seamstress and to take care of grown children; best City reference. Call at No. 228 West 29th st., between 7th and 8th avs.

WET-NURSE.—BY A RESPECTABLE, HEALTHY Protestant; best of reference. Call at No. 313 East 26th st., second floor, back room.

WET-NURSE.—BY A RESPECTABLE YOUNG Cwoman; to a baby one month old; best City reference. Call for two days, at No. 224 West 32d st.

WAITRESS OR CHAMBER-MAID.—BY A respectable young girl as first-class waitress or chamber-maid; understands all kinds of salads, &c.; three years' reference from her last employer. Call for two days at No. 546 3d av., between 36th and 37th sts.; ring third bell.

WAITRESS.—BY A PROTESTANT GIRL AS Cwaitress, or as chamber-maid and waitress in a small private family; good reference from last place. Call at No. 239 West 27th st.

WAITRESS.—BY A FIRST-CLASS WAITRESS; understands dressing all kinds of salads, care of silver, waiting in all branches; best City reference. Call at No. 488 7th av.; no cards answered.

WAITRESS.—BY A RESPECTABLE GIRL AS Cwaitress, in a private family; five years' City reference from last place. Address M. B., Box No. 320 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

WAITRESS.—BY A FIRST-CLASS WAITRESS; Cthoroughly understands her business; good City reference. Call at No. 313 East 37th st.

WASHING.—BY A FIRST-CLASS LAUNDRESS; to go out by the day; can do all kinds of fluting, laces, and fine-work; would take a situation by the month; has the best of reference from last employer. Call at No. 326 East 36th st.

WASHING.—BY A RESPECTABLE WOMAN, washing and ironing at her own home, or would go out by the day; good reference. Call at No. 409 West 54th st., second floor.

WASHING.—BY A RESPECTABLE WOMAN; BY the day, or would take washing home. Call at No. 329 East 32d st.

WASHING.—BY A RESPECTABLE WOMAN washing at her house; is a first-class laundress; good City references. Call at No. 326 East 54th st.

SITUATIONS WANTED.

FEMALES.

WASHING.—BY A RESPECTABLE WOMAN; family washing and ironing by the week or month on reasonable terms. Call or address 174 West 32d st.

CLERKS AND SALESMEN.

A RETAIL CARPET SALESMAN OF EXPErience and ability, desires to connect himself with a good house; references first class. Address PHOENIX, Box No. 127 Times Office.

MALES.

A YOUNG MAN, AGED 25, HEALTHY, INTELligent, energetic, of high character, with five years experience in a manufacturing establishment, wishes employment; has the best references as to character. Address, on his behalf, G. W. E., Box No. 149 Times Office.

COACHMAN AND GROOM.—BY A YOUNG Cman thoroughly understanding care of horses, harness, and carriages; careful driver; willing to make himself generally useful; wages no object to a good home in a private family; first-class City reference. Address J. K., Box No. 320 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

COACHMAN.—BY A PROTESTANT YOUNG MAN Cas coachman and groom; will make himself generally useful; willing and obliging; no objection to City or country; thoroughly understands the care of horses and harness; can come highly recommended from both City and country. Address W. M. C., Box 263 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, 1,257 BROADWAY.

COACHMAN AND GARDENER.—BY A SOBER Cand trustworthy single man; safe and experienced driver; thoroughly understands the proper care and management of horses, &c.; can milk; is willing to make himself generally useful; low wages; good City reference. Address T. B., Box No. 235 Times Office.

COACHMAN.—BY A YOUNG MAN, (PROTESTCant;) thoroughly understands the care of horses, harness, and carriages; good groom and careful City driver; can milk; is strictly temperate; will make himself useful; good references. Address J. M., Box No. 216 Times Office.

COACHMAN.—BY A FIRST-CLASS MAN; UNDERCstands the care of horses, carriages, and harness; good groom; careful City driver; sober, honest, and trustworthy; no objection to country; seven years' best City reference from last employer. Call or address M. D., No. 331 West 41st st.

COACHMAN AND GROOM.—BY A COMPEtent single man; has a first-class knowledge of his business; is an experienced groom; careful City driver; is willing and obliging; excellent City references from most respectable families. Call or address C. W., No. 4 East 31st st., private stable.

COACHMAN AND GROOM.—BY A PROTCestant young man; excellent groom and valet; expert City driver; eight years' testimonials; leaves employer on account of selling out. Call or address Coachman, No. 912 6th av.

COACHMAN.—BY A FIRST-CLASS ENGLISH Ccoachman; four years best City references. Call or address W. P., No. 1,350 Broadway, Wood Brothers' repair shop.

COACHMAN.—BY A FIRST-CLASS COACHMAN Cof reputed merit, with seven years' unsurpassed credentials from last employer. Address James, No. 307 7th av.

COACHMAN AND GROOM.—IN PRIVATE Cfamily by a single man; English; thoroughly understands his business. Call or address P. P., No. 136 East 32 st., last employer's, stable.

COACHMAN.—BY AN ENGLISHMAN; IS THORCoughly competent in every respect; best of reference from last employers. Call or address W. Coates, No. 107 West 18th st.

COACHMAN.—BY A GENTLEMAN FOR HIS Coachman, who has been with him three years; is a good driver, sober, and industrious. Apply from 9 to 11 at No. 56 West 57th st.

COACHMAN.—BY A YOUNG MAN AS COACHCman and groom; three years' City reference. Can be seen at No. 108 West 30th st., private stable.

GARDENER.—AGED 32; MARRIED; NATIVE Of Suisse; fully competent to take charge of a first-class place; understands and has had 17 years' experience in the cultivation of stove and greenhouse plants, the forcing of grapes, peaches, &c., and vegetable gardening; first-class testimonials and best City references. Address J. C., care W. Swain, No. 343 West 52d st., New-York.

GARDENER AND FARMER.—BY A MARRIED Cman in the prime of life, as first-class gardener and farmer; thoroughly understands the business in every department in both capacities; first-class reference; three small children. Address P., Box No. 244 Times Office.

GARDENER.—BY A YOUNG MARRIED SCOTCHman as gardener, on a gentleman's place; understands his business thoroughly; can give satisfactory references. Address G. T., Gardener, West New-Brighton Post Office, Staten Island.

GARDENER.—BY A SINGLE MAN WHO THORCoughly understands his business in all its branches; good references. Call or address C. T., seed store, No. 67 Nassau st.

GARDENER.—BY A GERMAN; MARRIED; ONE Cchild. Address E. E., care John Prytting, 169th st., Morrisania.

ROOMS WANTED BY MAN AND WIFE who will take care of the rent by acting as janitors. Address Mrs. MART, Box No. 168 Times Office.

USEFUL MAN.—BY A YOUNG MAN, AGE 30, speaking French and English, to be generally useful. Call or address G. Kelecom, No. 140 West 31st st., third floor.

WAITER—COLORED, IN A BOARDING-HOUSE or private family; understands all branches of business of the kind; will give good first-class family reference from last place. Address J. A. N., Box No. 279 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, 1,257 BROADWAY.

WAITER.—BY A RESPECTABLE YOUNG MAN as waiter in a private family; thoroughly understands his business in all its branches; has good City reference. Address P. D., Box No. 286 TIMES UPTOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

WAITER.—BY A YOUNG COLORED MAN AS first-class waiter in a private family or boarding-house; will make himself useful; attend furnace, and any other kind of household duties; good reference. Call at No. 192 8th av.

WAITER.—BY AN ENGLISH PROTESTANT MAN as waiter in a private family; is a first-class servant; has City reference; no objection to live in the country. Call at No. 237 West 33d st.

WAITER.—BY A FRENCH SINGLE MAN AS first-class waiter in a private family; understands his business thoroughly; best City reference. Address J. A., No. 133 West 19th st.

WAITER.—BY A FIRST-CLASS YOUNG, SINGLE colored man; is thoroughly competent; can furnish good reference for honesty and moral habits. Call or address S., No. 163 West 24th st.

WAITER.—BY A SWISS MAN AS WAITER IN A private family; good City reference. Address Auguste, No. 150 East 42d st.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED.—BY A COMMISSION HOUSE, A SALESman to travel, who can influence a large Western dry goods jobbing trade. Address, with references, M., Box No. 123, Times Office.

WANTED—A PROTESTANT GIRL FOR GENERAL house-work; she must be an excellent washer and ironer. Apply before 12 o'clock, at No. 1 West 50th st.

WANTED—A PROTESTANT SERVANT. GOOD cook, washer, and ironer, in an American family with best of City references; wages, $10. No. 254 East 33d st.

YOUNG MEN AND LADIES TO LEARN AND engage in the telegraph business; permanent positions and fair salaries obtained. Telegraph Instruction Company, No. 21 Park row.

WANTED—A SMART, CAPABLE WOMAN TO cook, wash, and iron. Call from 10 to 12 at No. 18 West 25th st., basement door.

LAW CLERK WANTED.—GOOD WRITER who is ready to work; $5 a week. Address C. E. W., Post Office Box No. 5,549.

INSTRUCTION.

PENNSYLVANIA MILITARY ACADEMY.
Chester, Delaware Co., Pa.
Session Reopens Jan. 3.
For Circulars apply to
COL. THEODORE HYATT, President.

22 YEARS PROVE "A

THE CITY GOVERNMENT.

CONFERENCE OF LEADING CITIZENS WITH THE MAYOR.

IMPORTANT SUGGESTIONS FOR REFORMS IN THE VARIOUS DEPARTMENTS—ADDRESSES BY WILLIAM A. BOOTH, WILLIAM C. BRYANT, DORMAN B. EATON, AND OTHERS—RESOLUTIONS AGAINST INCREASING THE CITY DEBT AND IN FAVOR OF REMEDIAL LEGISLATION—A STATEMENT BY THE CONTROLLER.

The committee of merchants, bankers, and others who issued the call for a conference with the Mayor and the Controller in relation to the government of this City met yesterday for that purpose in the office of the Mayor. The room was filled, mainly by gentlemen who seldom visit the City Hall. Among those present were Messrs. William A. Booth, William Cullen Bryant, Howard Potter, Horace B. Claflin, Jackson S. Schultz, F. H. Cossitt, George W. Lane, John A. Stewart, Theodore Roosevelt, Josiah M. Fiske, Sinclair Tousey, John H. Hall, Frederick D. Tappan, Levi P. Morton, Charles G. Isham, William Orton, Oswald Ottendorfer, E. Oelberman, Samuel D. Babcock, John J. Cisco, David Dows, James M. Morrison, Dorman B. Eaton, Joseph Seligman, John H. Sherwood, William H. Appleton, P. Van Volkenburgh, B. G. Arnold, Henry F. Spaulding, Joseph H. Choate, John T. Agnew, George Cabot Ward, A. R. Whitney, George D. H. Gillespie, Seth B. Hunt, F. S. Winston, and Charles S. Smith.

All these gentlemen are members of the committee under whose auspices the conference was held. There were also present ex-Mayor Wickham, Dr. S. Hall, Henry Bergh, John B. Haskin, and a number of the Tammany Aldermen.

Mayor Ely opened the proceedings by expressing his gratification at the presence of the gentlemen who desired to have a conference on City affairs. It was pleasing to find the merchants and others coming to the knowledge that their full duty as citizens did not consist in merely voting at an election.

Mr. William A. Booth then rose and said he thought the conference would be a private one. If he had known that it would be characterized by publicity, he would probably have shrunk from speaking at it. The presence of the gentlemen before him showed the interest which the mercantile classes were taking in the government of this City. Perhaps not since the year 1871 had such interest been developed in the affairs of this City as had been manifested during the past few days. It would be necessary for them to accomplish two things. One was the reduction of the heavy debt of the City, and the other was to have an economical administration of the City Government. Mr. Booth then referred to the enormous increase of the City debt, which was a great mortgage on the property of the people. He said that whether they could go on increasing it was a serious question. If they continued to do that it would bring ruin on the City and effect a very large reduction in values. He believed that three things might command the attention of the Mayor and the Controller. They required, first, honesty in all the departments; second, efficiency among all the City officials; and third, economy in every branch of the City Government. If they could appoint honest men in all City affairs, many of the evils they complained of would be redressed. He did not mean honesty in paying out the City's money, but honesty in giving an equivalent of service for the salaries received. What they wanted was to have capable and honest men appointed to office, and to have them held to a strict account for the performance of their duties. The expenses of the City Government were largely in excess of what they should be. There was very great room for co-operation with the Mayor in reducing the expenditures. The impression prevailed that there was a large number of sinecures still existing. There was also an impression that the salaries now paid in all the departments could be reduced from the high figures that ruled in times of inflation. All the salaries should be made to conform to the present condition of the City, and to the amounts that should be paid for the services rendered. They had a heavy debt over them, and unless they arrested its increase it must produce distrust. When the City of Chicago found that she could not meet her obligations she reduced her expenses, and in four months afterward she redeemed her credit and was enabled to borrow money at the usual interest. If they (the City of New-York) went on as they have done they would be in the condition that Chicago had been. It was a question whether they should stop these things now or some months hence, when they reached the culminating point. But a man who would check the evil must be a bold one, for he would be met with opposition from various sources. The speaker then referred to his efforts in connection with the committee of citizens appointed in 1871 to ascertain the debt of this City, and then remarked that ex-Controller Green aroused a great deal of hostility because he persistently fought fraudulent claims which amounted to $8,050,000. He next alluded to the competition of Boston, Baltimore, and Philadelphia for the Western trade, and said that unless this City can have low rates, low taxes, cheap living, proper terminal facilities for our railroads, they might find that the City had reached a culminating point. They (the committee) were glad to meet the Mayor there. If his predecessor had asked them to co-operate with him they would have cheerfully responded, but they did not want to thrust themselves on City officials. "If you," said Mr. Booth, addressing the Mayor and Controller, "keep the debt from growing, you will have the gratitude of the people, but if you fail in this respect, the people will well wish that two other citizens take your places."

Mr. William Cullen Bryant was next introduced. He said he was very much pleased at the discussion. He was glad to speak to one (addressing the Mayor) who knew that the powers of the Government were to be used for the benefit of the community at large, and that he who uses them for personal purposes or advancement is guilty of not only an abuse, but a crime. It was true that it required a bold man to undertake the work referred to by the previous speaker. Mr. Bryant next referred to the administration of Stephen Allen, who was Mayor of this City very many years ago, and eulogized it as full of honesty and fidelity to the interests of the City. In regard to Mayor Ely and Controller Kelly, he said they would be supported in every measure of reform they might suggest. A great deal was to be done. Sinecures should be knocked off, and the taxes and debt should be reduced.

Ex-Chamberlain Lane next spoke. He said that inquiries were made of him by various institutions whether it was safe to invest money in the City bonds. He replied that the City debt was not increased, and that the sinking fund was to reduce the debt. But if the debt should increase, persons would not take more securities, and those who had them would sell them. It was for the Mayor and Controller to prevent an increase of the City debt, and it was the duty of the citizens to support them in such action.

Mr. Peter Cooper followed. He referred to his proposition made many years ago to unite the Police and Fire Departments, and to give its members pecuniary rewards for faithful services. He then spoke of the necessity for every person to have hose in his house so as to extinguish fires, and also stated that at one time he suggested that a great tank should be placed directly over the City Hall, and it that had been done the building would never have been on fire. Mr. Cooper then alluded to a statement he had prepared for the City Council on the subject, a copy of which he held in his hand and was ready to present.

VIEWS OF MR. DORMAN B. EATON.

Mr. Dorman B. Eaton said he believed that great good would come from the moral effect of the gathering before him. It would, at least, show officeholders the earnestness of their meeting. He thought the committee should have a definite plan of reform. They wanted economy in the reduction of the number of persons paid by the City, and they wanted to have the salaries of those employed reduced. But there were obstacles in the way. First they would have to go to Albany, where special statutes were passed creating unnecessary offices and fixing extravagant salaries, and have them repealed. The other way was for the Mayor, the Controller, and the heads of departments to reduce expenses. He thought it would be necessary for them to have a general line of policy, so that they could show their friends at Albany, whether they looked to party or not, that they must practice lessons of economy, and, therefore, he would offer the following:

Resolved, That by our words as well as by our presence here, we wish to declare our conviction—

1. That it is no less the duty of all good citizens, and especially of men of intelligence and property, to defend and aid the officers of the City in all their efforts for good administration, than it is the right of such citizens to condemn and confront such officers whenever they may be responsible for abuses.

2. That it is a condition of real reform in our City administration, that it be treated rather as a matter of business, to be done upon honest business principles, than as a matter of politics, to be managed in the interest of any party or of any party leaders.

3. That the increase of the City debt should be at once arrested, and the current City taxation and income be made equal to the current expenses, and a moderate sinking fund should be provided.

4. That there should be an immediate reduction of all those salaries and expenses which, by reason of an inflated currency or other causes, have clearly been fixed at too high a rate; and, at the earliest moment practicable, there should be a general and systematic reduction and classification of salaries, and of the official and clerical force of the City, based upon a careful examination of the numbers and compensation necessary to secure economical and efficient administration.

5. That the permanent City debt should be funded in bonds having a long period to run, and at the lowest rate of interest available; and the need for the frequent issue of short bonds should be removed by appropriate arrangements and legislation.

6. That it is much to be desired that the existing commission on City affairs should make an early report, so that the way may be open for further reforms in the structure of the City Government, and especially for securing to those who pay the taxes a larger influence as to the use to be made of the moneys with which they supply the City Treasury.

Mr. Eaton then referred to the omission of merchants and others in not having taken a deep interest in the City Government long ago, and spoke of how they were punished by heavy burdens and excessive taxation because they had not previously looked after their interest. He hoped the gentlemen would spend in sackcloth and ashes for their omissions in that respect. He next alluded to the bill offered in the Legislature to reduce the salaries of City officials; to the miserable complications and confusions in various laws creating unnecessary offices at high salaries, and to the embarrassments they produce in our local government. The merchants, the members of the bar, and others were suffering from the present state of things. There were men in the room who could shed ample light on the way the City finances should be managed and apply business principles to the whole matter. But what did they find? If the bonds of this City, of various colors and sizes, were collected on the table before them, they would present just such a strange and motley appearance as a collection of newspapers from all parts of the world. He hoped that the meeting would result in producing a better state of things.

A STATEMENT BY THE CONTROLLER.

Controller Kelly said he agreed with Mr. Eaton's views in relation to the statutes passed at Albany, and thought that the abuses in the City Government were attributable to those statutes. The debt of the City was very large, and it behooved every man to prevent it from being increased. That could be done by the gentlemen present using their influence at Albany. When they censured people in this City for the existing state of things, they made a mistake. He believed that those who rendered services to the City should receive fair salaries. Some salaries might be too large; as to sinecures, he did not know that there were any in the various departments. He had no doubt that if the meeting co-operated with the officials of the City good would come from their action. The Controller next spoke of the old system by which the Commissioners of Accounts acted, and said he was surprised at the work which his predecessor had to do. He did not think that they should give absolute independence to any department to enable them to go to Albany to have special laws passed in their behalf. In his opinion they could not get along with only one Commissioner for each department, except, perhaps, for the Dock Department. He next alluded to the course of Harbor Masters collecting fees under special laws, which should be paid into the City Treasury. In referring to the Police Board, he said they should not have charge of street-cleaning. The duty of the Police was to protect life and property—not to act as street-sweepers. As to the sinking fund, he said it should not be disturbed. Mr. Kelly then presented a long statement for the consideration of the conference, showing that the bonded debt of the City on Dec. 31, 1876, was $142,002,713 28, leaving the net bonded debt, after deducting $28,179,102 79, the amount of the Sinking Fund, at $113,823,610 49. At the same date there were outstanding revenue bonds payable from uncollected taxes amounting to $6,104,842 51, and also the debts of the annexed towns of Westchester County, for which this City is liable, to the amount of $1,245,000. From 1873 to 1876 the sinking fund paid off $6,949,637 50 of the City debts. The sinking fund [continued the statement] should be applied to the whole bonded debt of the City payable from taxation. It was believed to be ample for that purpose, as well as for the payment of that portion of the debt provided for by payment from the sinking fund. This would spread taxes more evenly over a series of years, and thus reduce the annual taxation. It was finally redeemed and canceled without excessive taxation at any one time. During the past year the revenues of the sinking fund for the redemption of the City debt amounted to $2,698,344 23, while the revenue of that fund to be applied to payment of interest on the City debt amounted to $3,181,181 45. The City's revenue could, doubtless, be largely increased and taxation proportionately reduced by opening up new sources of revenues, and by strict enforcement of collections. Ferries and street railroads were many of them in arrears for dues to the City, and they could be fairly made to contribute to the revenues for the privileges they enjoyed. Reference was next made to the appropriations comprising the tax levy of this year, amounting to $30,984,269 48, and it was proposed to sell all the real estate owned by the City for which they had no use, and apply the proceeds to the reduction of the debt, a proposition that was entitled to serious consideration, and another question proposed was that church property, and all other corporate and private property, should be equally assessed for all street improvements, and that vacations and remissions of assessments shall be absolutely prohibited by law. The City Treasury had lost millions of dollars from the failure of the law to enforce the payment of assessments on property benefited by street improvements. The arrears of taxes on real estate amounted to over $12,000,000, and those on personal estate to over $5,000,000. There were also arrears of taxes amounting to over $600,000 due from Ferries, street railroads, &c. The statement next showed that the amount of uncollected assessments on Dec. 31, 1876, was $10,333,818 54; that the amount of advances on contracts for works not completed, and for which assessments had not been confirmed at the same date, was $11,167,793 80, and that some of these last-named amounts must be charged to the City at large.

The Controller said the statement would be printed, and copies of it would be given to the gentlemen present. He believed the resolutions offered by Mr. Eaton were all well enough, but if they desired to have laws made for the benefit of the City, they should take steps to accomplish that end.

REMARKS BY OTHER SPEAKERS.

Ex-Mayor Wickham here rose, and said he was surprised at some of the gentlemen not having better information in regard to the City. He then referred to the heavy State taxes by which the incomes of the tax-payers were largely swelled, and said that not $1 of the City debt could be increased by one of its officials. The increase was made under special laws. The actual debt of the City had not been increased for several years, for the issue of assessment bonds had caused the increase, and if the property-owners would pay their assessments the debt would be greatly reduced. A very large portion of the taxation of last year was to meet State taxes and redeem part of the City debt. Notwithstanding the efforts of Tax Commissioner Andrews to have justice done to this City they had no representative in the Board of State Assessors. The ex-Mayor then referred to the various departments, and said he did not know that there were sinecures in them. As to the private charities of this City, for which appropriations had to be made on a per capita basis, the amount paid over to them was within $200,000 of the whole sum raised for the support of the public institutions. A good deal had been said about the City debt. It was proposed to issue long bonds instead of those now outstanding, the rate of interest to be 5 per cent. Now, if any person had the bonds, which carried a large premium, and asked the Controller to give them long bonds carrying 5 per cent. interest instead, he would be accommodated, [laughter,] but he did not believe that any one would do that. He thought the bonds of this City were the best. Some persons had even more confidence in them than in the securities of the United States. It would be a long time, he thought, before any of the gentlemen present would ask the Controller to give them long bonds at 5 per cent. interest for those now outstanding.

The resolutions were then adopted.

Mayor Ely said he believed his predecessors and other City officials might, perhaps, have been able to do better than they had done, if they had received the support of the merchants and others, and it the press had been more charitable. He would be happy, he added, to confer with those present at any time.

Mr. Booth said, that if legislation was the source of the difficulty, they should go to the proper place for the remedy, but if their debt had not increased, they were certainly in a happy condition.

Mr. Eaton here referred to the bill offered in the Legislature providing for the appointment of twelve citizens, representing each party, to co-operate with the Mayor and heads of departments in investigating the affairs of the City. He thought it would be well to ascertain whether Albanians or New-Yorkers were responsible for not changing the present state of things.

Mr. Charles S. Smith then offered a resolution, which was adopted, providing for the appointment of a committee of five to promote legislation in the spirit of the resolutions that had been passed.

The meeting then adjourned.

STABBING AFFRAY IN BROOKLYN.

Thomas Mallon, of No. 45 Degraw street, and Thomas Leahey, of No. 102 Wyckoff street, Brooklyn, both longshoremen, became involved in a quarrel yesterday afternoon at the foot of Joralemon street, Brooklyn, concerning the payment for some drinks. After leaving the saloon in which they had the drinks the men, from a wordy quarrel, came to blows. Mallon seized a shovel and struck Leahey over the left eye, inflicting a severe wound. The latter ran for a scoop-shovel, but before he could secure it Mallon stabbed him in the groin with a pocket-knife. The wound is three inches in depth, and the blade of the knife broke off at the handle. Fortunately, the weapon did not enter the abdominal cavity, its progress being stopped by the pelvic bone. Mallon endeavored to escape after stabbing Leahey, but was prevented by a private watchman named Brownley. Leahey was able to walk to the Long Island College Hospital. His wounds the surgeons pronounced serious, but not necessarily fatal. Mallon was locked up in the First Precinct Station-house. Leahey says he had no acquaintance with Mallon before yesterday.

LOCAL MISCELLANY.

AN EAST RIVER TRAGEDY.

A WOMAN DROWNED AT PIER NO. 37 EARLY YESTERDAY MORNING—EFFORTS OF THE POLICE TO RESCUE HER—A 'LONGSHOREMAN SUSPECTED OF HAVING THROWN HER OVERBOARD.

Michael Sullivan, a 'longshoreman, is at present under arrest, on suspicion of having been concerned in a tragedy which occurred early yesterday morning at Pier No. 37 East River. A woman, whose identity has not been and perhaps never will be established, was either thrown or fell into the river from a vessel at the pier named between 3 and 4 o'clock in the morning, and despite the exertions of several Police officers she was drowned. Sullivan was on the wharf at the time and failed to give an alarm or to aid the officers in their endeavors to rescue the woman, and it is therefore believed that through his instrumentality she met her death.

The pier is situated at the foot of Market slip, and is leased and chiefly occupied by White's Line of Norwalk steamers. To the south of the pier is a dumping-wharf, used by the Street-cleaning Bureau, which juts out into the slip about 80 feet beyond the head of Pier No. 37. A high board fence incloses the dumping-wharf on three sides, that portion facing the river being open. The canal-boat A. W. Potter was alongside the pier, and next to her was the schooner L. & M. Knowles, of Boston, and outside of the schooner was another schooner, the Zingara, which sailed yesterday. On the north side of the wharf were the freight steamer P. F. Brady, and the passenger boat American, of White's Line.

Patrolman Behan, of the Seventh Precinct, was on duty on Market street, and while near the spot where Market slip commences, his attention was attracted by a woman's shrieks coming from the direction of the river. He ran to the wharf, the screams meanwhile continuing. As he ran along the wharf he noticed a man, who subsequently proved to be Sullivan, standing at about the centre of the pier. Sullivan made no remark to the policeman, nor did he move from his position as the officer passed. The policeman boarded the canal-boat Potter, and, guided by the shrieks, peered over her side into the water. On a cake of ice, between the canal-boat and the schooner, he noticed the form of a woman. The officer at once got a rope from the deck of the schooner and threw it to her. She grasped it, and the policeman shouted to her to hold on. The woman answered "Yes, yes." Patrolman Walsh, of the Seventh Precinct, having arrived, a ladder was procured and lowered over the side of the canal-boat, and Officer Walsh started to descend. When he reached the centre of the ladder one of the rungs broke and Walsh was precipitated into the water. Behan then procured another rope and threw it to Walsh. The latter made the rope fast around his waist, and groped about in the floating ice for the woman, but she had disappeared. With the assistance of Patrolman Weiss, also of the Seventh Precinct, Walsh was drawn out of the water. Behan then thought of the man whom he had seen on the pier, and went after him. He found Sullivan standing where he had first seen him, and officer questioned him, and he said he had seen a man and woman go down the wharf, and saw them both walk overboard. When asked why he gave no alarm he replied that it was none of his business, and that he didn't want to get into trouble. His conduct was so suspicious that the officer arrested him and took him to the Madison Street Police Station. He gave his residence, when questioned by the Sergeant at the desk, as No. 15 Market slip, but it was quickly learned that he did not reside there, and he then said he lived at No. 68 Oliver street. Sullivan is short and squarely, and his frame indicates great strength. He has a light complexion and wears a heavy red mustache. Capt. McElwain subjected the prisoner to a severe cross-examination. Sullivan said that he had followed a man and woman from South street to the wharf, and that the strange couple had gone on board the canal-boat. They had a quarrel, and soon after he heard a splash, then he walked away. The man, he said, wore a light overcoat and a ribbed cloth cap, but inquiries among the crews of the vessels lying at the pier elicited the information that none of them owned a light overcoat or ribbed cloth cap, nor could any trace of a man attired so conspicuously as described by Sullivan be found in the neighborhood. Sullivan was taken to the Essex Market Police Court, and Justice Flammer remanded him to the custody of the Police until to-day, to give Capt. McElwain an opportunity of making further investigation. Yesterday afternoon Timothy Sullivan, a brother of the prisoner, called at the station. He told the Captain that he had not seen Michael since 4 P. M. on Monday, at which time he was standing on South street with some 'longshoremen. The Police have made a thorough search of the wharf and the slip, but have failed to find anything tending to throw light on the mysterious affair. The theory of the Police is that Sullivan induced the woman to accompany him on board the canal-boat for an improper purpose, and that while there a quarrel sprang up between them. A scuffle doubtless ensued, during which the woman fell or was pushed overboard, or she may have fallen overboard accidentally after Sullivan left her. The Police are thoroughly convinced that Sullivan was in her company while she was on the canal-boat. The theory that she had jumped overboard with suicidal intent is considered untenable.

Last night Capt. McElwain had the prisoner Sullivan brought out of the cell in his office at the station-house, and subjected him to another examination. The prisoner, with apparent candor, related how he had disposed of his time on Monday. Between 2 and 3 o'clock in the morning he found himself at the corner of Catharine and South streets. There he noticed a man whom he believed to be Patrick McCarty, who boards at the same house with him, going along South street with a woman. He did not accost the man, but followed him to Market street, for what purpose does not appear, and saw them go on the pier. He also said that he saw them go on board the canal-boat and soon after he heard a scream. He did not go down the pier to ascertain what was the matter, but waited until the officers came and went down the pier with them. One of the officers, he alleges, gave him a lamp to hold to give them light while they were endeavoring to rescue the woman. The officers, however, declare that this portion of his statement is false.

Sullivan will be arraigned at the Essex Market Court to-day.

OVERDUE AND MISSING VESSELS.

ARRIVAL OF THE STATE OF GEORGIA WITH A BROKEN RUDDER—NO NEWS OF THE STEAMERS GEORGE CROMWELL, COLOMBO, AND OTHELLO.

The steam-ship State of Georgia, of the State Line, arrived in this port yesterday morning at an early hour, and reached her pier early in the afternoon. She had been 16 days out from Glasgow, and some anxiety had begun to be felt about her when she was signaled at the Sandy Hook Station. It appears from the account of the pilot that her rudder broke eight days ago off the Virgin Rocks, south of Cape Race, and that she had been able to proceed only very slowly since the accident happened. A temporary steering apparatus was rigged under the direction of the Captain, who scarcely slept from the time the break occurred until the steam-ship was safely in charge of a tug at the entrance to the Bay. Monday night at 11 o'clock, when she was 25 miles east of Sandy Hook, she was spoken by the New-Jersey pilot boat W. W. Story, and Pilot Thomas Conley was put on board. Soon after the tug C. P. Raymond came alongside, and made fast under the quarter of the steam-ship, taking the place of a rudder to steer her on her course. The tug Scandinavian was also employed at Sandy Hook, and the steamship was safely brought to her anchorage. She brought only four steerage passengers, who all spoke highly of the Captain, complimenting him for his watchfulness and care.

The George Cromwell, now 19 days out from Halifax, for St. John's, Newfoundland, is not yet given up. She carried three passengers, none of whom belonged in this City, but her entire crew were shipped here. It was said at the office of the company that when she was plying between this port and New-Orleans she was missed for a month after passing Sandy Hook. It turned out afterward that she had broken her propeller and arrived in the Bahama Islands under sail. It is hoped by the agents that her present disappearance may result in a similar way. The steam-ship Colombo, now 49 days out from Hull, England, has not been heard of since leaving the Lizard on the 6th of December. The Herder and the Ohio were last night overdue, having been 14 days out, but no fears were entertained for their safety. The Royal Standard, freight-ship, from Cardiff, Wales, arrived yesterday after a journey of 93 days. The Bristol steam-ship Cornwall, Capt. Stamper, from Bristol, on Jan. 6, arrived yesterday, having met with north and northwesterly gales on her passage. She was 17 days in crossing. The steam-ship Othello, of the Hull Line, the sailing mate of the Colombo, is now 23 days out from Margate Roads. She is commanded by Capt. Bristow, formerly of the White Star steam-ship Germanic, and belongs to Thomas Wilson, Sons & Co., of Hull. Her agents are C. L. Wright & Co., of South street. The bark Sunshine, a Norwegian vessel, which sailed from this port on Dec. 20, for Christiansand, has put into Plymouth, England, with her cargo damaged.

No news has been received last night by either the Coast Wrecking Company or the General Transatlantic Steam-ship Line of the condition of the Amérique, and it was supposed that her position on the Seabright beach was materially the same as it was on Sunday last. Mr. Louis de Bébian, the agent of the line, went to the steamer yesterday to ascertain the progress of getting her off. The pilot, Wever, is still on board, but will probably come to this City when relieved by Brewer, who was appointed to bring the vessel to this City. The steam-boat Newport, of the Fall River Line, is still aground in New-Haven Harbor, but the efforts of the wrecking crew at work upon her will, it is believed, be rewarded with success in a day or two. It is expected that at the latest she will be floated off by Sunday.

THE GREAT FORGERY.

GEORGE W. CHADWICK ARRAIGNED BEFORE JUSTICE DUFFY—ARREST OF JULIUS S. COLUMBANI.

But little additional light has been thrown on the Union Trust Company forgery by the recent arrests, the interested parties as yet having failed to publish, if they themselves are possessed of the information, the chain of evidence on which the different persons under arrest are connected. In Wall street the subject has ceased to attract attention, although it was said yesterday that the search of the detectives in that quarter was by no means suspended, and that several well-devised plans were made and are being carried out to discover the entire party concerned in the forgery. There seems to be an impression that the prisoner Browne could, if he would, shed more light upon the transaction than he has shown himself inclined to do. It is said by the law firm of Pryor & Adams, No. 22 Pine street, that he will be brought up for trial on Friday for obtaining an advance in September, 1875, on a bill of lading, purporting to have been drawn against railroad ties shipped in the schooner Lamartine, which had sailed from the Rappahannock and was daily expected in the port of New-York. It afterward appeared that there was no vessel of the name represented. A number of persons who have been mentioned in connection with the handling of the check were yesterday interrogated on the subject of the forgery, but none of them were aware of the recovery of any portion of the money, nor would the officers of the Union Trust Company say that they expect to obtain a restoration of any part of the sum.

George W. Chadwick, who was arrested on Monday on suspicion of having been concerned in the forgery, was arraigned before Justice Duffy, in his private room at the Tombs Police Court, yesterday morning, and committed to the City Prison for examination to-day. The only testimony offered in the case was an affidevit submitted by Detective Allan Pinkerton, Jr., which stated that it was the belief of the witness that Chadwick had been guilty of forging the signatures of the officers of the Union Trust Company to the check for $64,325, said to have been uttered by Horace E. Browne. An ex-Alderman of Brooklyn, who claims to have been an old friend of Chadwick's father, was present at the examination and promised to procure competent counsel yesterday afternoon to look after the interests of Chadwick. Assistant District Attorney Horace H. Russell, and Mr. Wheeler H. Peckham were present at the examination. The prisoner appeared in a state of great nervous excitement, and while awaiting the arrival of Justice Duffy, asserted his innocence in emphatic terms to the reporters present. He declared that he had made $100,000 in business transactions during the past 30 days, and had bonds locked up in his safe at his office, which were guaranteed by the President of the Second National Bank of Washington, amounting to $490,000. He further stated that "M. P. Smith," who was mentioned in a morning paper yesterday as his partner, and who "could not be found," was Martha P. Smith, a respectable lady, living at No. 74 Third avenue, who had been his partner for the past six months, and had advanced money in the business. It is understood that Gen. Tracy will act as counsel for the prisoner. When Chadwick was about to be committed, he begged Justice Duffy to commit him to the City Prison, in preference to the Sixth Precinct Station-house, in Franklin street, which he characterized as "a terrible place." Justice Duffy acceded to his request, and also granted permission to a friend of the prisoner to obtain some money for Chadwick, from the safe of the latter, upon the stipulation that no papers in the safe should be molested, and an officer was detailed to accompany his friend to vouch for that fact. In reply to an interrogation of a TIMES reporter, Justice Duffy stated that the announcement in a morning paper yesterday, that "Henry Edmunds was arrested and locked up in the City Prison after the court had adjourned," was incorrect. He said that he had not heard of any such person.

In the afternoon Detectives Field and O'Connor, of the District Attorney's office, arrested Julius S. Columbani, a real estate agent, at No. 359 Newark avenue, Jersey City, for whom they had been on the watch for some days. Columbani was presumably arrested on an indictment charging him with uttering forged deeds. But the real charge against him is that of being implicated with Browne, Maxwell and others in the forgery of the $64,325 check on the Union Trust Company. The prisoner was brought before Judge Gildersleeve, in the Court of General Sessions, and committed to the Tombs.

THE NEW-YORK YACHT CLUB.

GOSSIP ABOUT THE COMING ELECTION OF OFFICERS—MR. S. NICHOLAS KANE THE FAVORITE CANDIDATE FOR COMMODORE—PLANS FOR THE YEAR.

The New-York Yacht Club will be called upon, at its meeting on Feb. 1, to elect officers for the ensuing year, and to transact other important business. It is generally understood that the past season has not been one of the activity that has been usual with the club. This inactivity was caused partly by the lack of funds in the club to stimulate its members to great exertions, and the sad accident on the Mohawk had a depressing effect from which the club did not fully recover before the end of the yachting season. Chief among the names mentioned among the members of the club for the position of Commodore, is that of Mr. S. Nicholas Kane, as it is generally understood that Commodore Kingsland will positively decline a re-election. Mr. Kane has always been known as an enthusiastic yachtsman and an energetic worker in the cause of the club, and his election would be hailed with general approval. Then the promotion of Mr. Kane, who is now Vice Commodore, would be considered a proper and deserved reward in office. There are two names spoken of for the position of Vice Commodore—those of Mr. William Astor, of the Atalanta, and Mr. James Stillman, of the Wanderer. It is not believed that either would refuse to serve, and the general impression is that the selection of either would secure a popular and competent officer. The name of Mr. James Alexandre, of the Vision, is prominently mentioned for Rear Commodore, although other names are heard as those of persons who would be acceptable in case of the refusal of Mr. Alexandre to serve. There is no probability that any attempt will be made to elect a new Secretary, Mr. Charles A. Minton, the present incumbent, being popular as a faithful officer of long service. Mr. Sheppard Homans will undoubtedly be retained as Treasurer. Mr. A. Cary Smith will be re-elected Measurer. No canvass has yet been made for members of the Regatta Committee. This committee, which requires excellent men who are willing and competent to perform arduous duties, and demanding sacrifices of time and comfort, will be made up with extreme care, as upon its composition depends, in great measure, the satisfactory transaction of the active business of the club during the yachting season. At the coming meeting the club will be called upon to decide whether the lease of the rooms at Madison avenue will be renewed on the 1st of May or not. The necessity for removing the clubhouse at Stapleton, made imperative by the order of the Court of Appeals, will also be considered. It is thought that it will be possible to remove the clubhouse without taking it to pieces, but a new site for it will have to be chosen.

SEVERAL CASES OF DESTITUTION.

Miss Bayliss, Principal of the Fifty-third Street Industrial School, No. 340 West Fifty-third street, reports the following cases of destitution: A poor woman lying very ill with cancer has two children attending the school. Her husband previous to his death was a private coachman and supported his family in comfort. They have been reduced to the utmost poverty. When their condition was discovered they were without food or fuel, and the sick woman was lying upon an old mattress spread upon the floor. Another family, who until recently were in moderate circumstances, are now dependent upon the exertions of an aged grandmother, sickness having incapacitated both the father and mother from performing any kind of labor. Their necessities are very urgent.

Miss Haight, of the Eighteenth Street Industrial School, No. 211 West Eighteenth street, has a number of very destitute families upon her books. One family comprises eight members, the youngest an infant. Until relieved by the school they were without food, fire, or wearing apparel. Miss Bishop, of the Industrial School in Fifty-second street, near Eleventh avenue, has a very long list. One of the sufferers is a German, a widow with three children, aged respectively 5, 9, and 12 years. The youngest child is in the Homœopathic Infirmary, being treated for a cataract on the eye. The poor woman is employed but one day in the week, and pays a certain amount for the treatment her child is receiving. They are destitute of everything. Before the death of her husband this family, like so many others now applying for temporary assistance, were self-supporting. The teachers named, and others we have not named, vouch for the correctness of the statements herewith given, and will gladly accompany visitors to the homes of the persons referred to. Donations may be sent to the schools specified or to the office of the Children's Aid Society, No. 19 East Fourth street, marked for the "Hungry, Naked, and Destitute."

YONKERS' EXCESSIVE ASSESSMENT.

The committee of the Board of Supervisors of Westchester County, to whom was referred the matter of the over-assessment of the City of Yonkers, yesterday reported, in compliance with a writ of peremptory mandamus issued by Judge Dykman, in favor of crediting Yonkers with the amount of $9,980, in which sum the Board of State Assessors have decided it has been illegally taxed. The report was adopted by the board, after which it adjourned.

CITY AND SUBURBAN NEWS.

NEW-YORK.

Mr. John J. Anderson, author of school histories, desires us to say that he is not the person of that name who is the Receiver of the Continental Life Insurance Company.

Rev. Charles S. Harrower, Pastor of the Central Methodist Church, will deliver the annual address, on Thursday next, before the students of the Rutgers Female College, at 1 P. M.

The Martha Washington reception and Garden party, to be given under the auspices of St. John's Guild, for the relief of the poor of this City, will take place Feb. 22, at the Academy of Music and Nilsson Hall.

The steam-ship Montana, sailing yesterday, carried a very heavy mail, consisting of 23,152 letters, 329 registered letters, and 30 bags of papers. The America and Wisconsin, both bearing mails, are overdue three days.

A grand musical and literary entertainment will take place at Steinway Hall on the evening of Feb. 6, under the auspices of the New-York Press Club. The best artists in the City will take part in the entertainment. Mark Twain will tell a story.

Yesterday morning the schooner Eothen, Capt. J. R. De La Mar, sailed on a four months' trading voyage for Cape De Verde Islands and the west coast of Africa. On her return in the Spring she is to be fitted up to go on an expedition to King William's Land, in search of the records of Sir John Franklin.

Rev. Charles E. Harris, Pastor of Allen Street Methodist Episcopal Church, writes to contradict the statement that James L. Manker, arrested for passing counterfeit money in Brooklyn, was his Secretary. Mr. Harris states that he has never even seen the man calling himself Manker, much less employed him in any capacity.

As Peter Bruner, of No. 41 West Fourteenth street, was riding on a Fourth avenue car in December, he was jostled and crushed by car thieves, and soon missed his gold watch, chain, and locket. William Stanton, "a speculator," of No. 56 South Fifth avenue, who was arrested for the theft, pleaded guilty yesterday in Part I. of the Court of General Sessions. Judge Sutherland sentenced him to three years and six months in the State Prison.

Dr. Dupuy, of London, is announced to give a short course of lectures at the Cooper Institute, commencing Thursday evening, on the recent progress of researches into the physiology of the brain. This subject has of late excited a great deal of discussion, and awakened much general interest. A good statement of the present condition of the subject will be prized by many, and Dr. Dupuy comes among us indorsed by high foreign authorities as an independent and ably qualified student of these questions, and who is, moreover, competent to present his views in a popular manner. His lectures are free, and should be well attended.

BROOKLYN.

At a meeting of the Board of City Works, yesterday, 157 bids for cleaning the streets during the current year were opened.

It is said that Mr. William Marshall, who was nominated for the office of Park Commissioner by Mayor Schroeder on Monday, will decline to serve.

Mary Jahn, a midwife, was put on trial yesterday in the Court of Sessions, on a charge of malpractice in the case of Mrs. Alice D. Mair, of Pacific street.

Dr. Henry McManus, who is charged with committing perjury in the Miller divorce case, was committed by Justice Walsh yesterday to await the action of the Grand Jury, in default of $2,000 bail.

At a meeting of the Jail Committee of the Board of Supervisors yesterday, it was decided to recommend that the lands belonging to the City Hospital, including the present jail, be purchased from the hospital authorities for $25,000 as a site for the new jail.

The annual ball of the Emerald Benevolent Association takes place to-night at the Brooklyn Academy of Music. Elaborate preparations have been made, and the ball is expected to be a finer one than has ever been given. Its proceeds go to the support of the Orphan Asylum.

Ex-Charity Commissioner Stephen H. Powell, who was convicted of fraud, and sentenced, with ex-Commissioners Ferguson and Wells, to pay a fine in June, 1873, sued the city yesterday for salary that he would have received in the interval between his conviction and removal and the expiration of the term for which he had been elected. The conviction of the Charity Commissioners was set aside on a technicality by the Court of Appeals. Judge Gilbert directed the jury to find a verdict against Powell.

LONG ISLAND.

Admiral Hiram Paulding, United States Navy, is lying dangerously ill at his residence, West Neck, town of Huntington.

The inquest as to the cause of the explosion at the Glen Cove Starch Factory on Saturday last, by which Dr. Oscar Wille and his assistant, Adolph Grimm, lost their lives, was held yesterday afternoon at Snediker's Hotel, Glen Cove village, by Coroner Valentine Baylis, of Oyster Bay. The conclusion arrived at by the jury was that the deaths were caused by the explosion of the converter, but that the cause of the explosion was unknown.

NEW-JERSEY.

William P. Lyon, ex-editor of the Bloomfield Gazette, is to deliver a new lecture on "Photography" before the American Institute, at its hall in Cooper Union, on Thursday evening, the 25th inst.

John Jones was arrested in Jersey City, by Detective Francis, yesterday, on suspicion of having committed a burglary at the residence of William Mackey, in Culver avenue, West Bergen, about a month ago. A pawn ticket for some of the stolen property was found in his possession, and he was committed for trial.

The election held yesterday in Hudson County, N. J., on the question of a Road Board or Boulevard did not create very general interest, and the vote cast was exceedingly light. The returns showed that the vote had been close, and at midnight the result was in doubt, but the probability is that the proposition has been defeated.

William Speer was arraigned in the First District Police Court, in Jersey City, yesterday morning, and committed for trial on a charge of having fired the Erie Railway building, several weeks ago. Speer was discharged from the company's employ, and it is alleged that he set fire to the building to be revenged. He was committed for trial.

Recorder Meyer, of Bayonne, has pleaded guilty to the charges of irregularities in his office, and thrown himself upon the mercy of the Council. He admits that he has conducted his business in a manner to the detriment of to the interests of the city, but promises, if the office is overlooked, to do better in the future. The Council will act on his case at the next meeting.

The trial of George Steckert for the murder of Joseph Masson was continued yesterday in the Essex County Courts. Paul Grisle testified that on the night of the murder Masson struck Steckert several times on the head with a stretcher, and endeavored to take a knife from him. Steckert kept backing, and Masson followed him until they got to a vacant lot, when Steckert struck Masson with the knife. Masson ran away, and Steckert following him, stabbed him in the back. The trial will be resumed to-day.

CONTR

The New-York Times.

VOL. XXVI.....NO. 7915. NEW-YORK, THURSDAY, JANUARY 25, 1877. PRICE FOUR CENTS.

THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR

A DAY AND NIGHT OF DEBATE.

THE SENATE CHAMBER CROWDED—FORCIBLE ARGUMENT OF MR. SARGENT AGAINST THE ELECTORAL BILL—CONCLUSION OF MR. CONKLING'S SPEECH—A DISTINCT ADMISSION FROM HIM OF GOV. HAYES' ELECTION—MR. MORTON PRESENTS INDIANA SENTIMENT—MR. BLAINE SPEAKS AGAINST THE BILL.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—Again this morning the Senate Chamber was the centre of attraction for all the political world of Washington. The crowd in the galleries was even greater than it was yesterday, and at times the floor of the Chamber was so filled with Representatives and other visitors that locomotion was almost impossible. Notwithstanding the great size of the audience, however, the utmost order was observed, and during the seven hours debate there were hundreds of persons who never moved from their seats. The session was called for 11 o'clock, an hour earlier than usual, and shortly after that time the presiding officer announced that the Senate was ready to proceed with the consideration of the bill providing for a count of the Electoral votes.

It was generally expected that Mr. Conkling, who had the floor, would continue his speech commenced yesterday, but as he was not in the Chamber when the bill was announced, the Senate took a recess for 10 minutes. At the end of that time, as the Senator from New-York was still absent, the floor was accorded to Senator Sargent, who spoke with great clearness and force in opposition to the bill. He said that he, in common with his associates who had sided against the measure under discussion, desired a result that would be satisfactory to the whole country, and that would do exact justice to all the candidates and to both parties. He did not believe the bill would accomplish this. There were in it elements of weakness and indecision, and at least a suspicion of unfairness in the application of its provisions—that should not characterize a measure of such grave public consequence. In continuation he contended that the framers of the Constitution did not contemplate the counting of the vote by Congress. Had it been intended that the two houses should count it, it would have been so expressed. A few words would have clearly expressed the intention. The absence of these words showed it was not intended. There were grave reasons why Congress should not count the vote. If allowed to do so, it could create an emergency by legislation and then proceed to make a President not the choice of the people. All through the Constitution it was intended that the Executive should be independent of the Legislature, and that the control of the Presidency should not rest with Congress, but with the people. The two houses might, as now, be divided in politics, and to submit the question to their action was to open the door to bargain and intrigue. One of the greatest men of the country had gone to his grave under a suspicion of bargaining with an Administration which he had assisted to place in power, and if such a man as Henry Clay could not escape, how could others expect to remain free from charges of intrigue? After continuing in this strain at considerable length, Mr. Sargent went into a discussion of the legal aspects of the case. The bill he said was framed to bridge over what the Democrats called the present difficulty, and it empowered the commission created by it for the next four years to use the prerogative of selecting the Chief Magistrate of the United States. This, he argued, was unconstitutional and illegal, and in support of his statement he quoted largely from many recognized authorities. Referring to a passage in Mr. Conkling's speech, he said that the Senator from New-York held that the right of the President of the Senate, if it existed, rested upon two implications. He thought it rested upon four: First, the two houses must be present when the votes are opened; second, if they must be present, they must be present for a purpose; third, if for some purpose, one of those purposes must at least be for the witnessing of the count; fourth, if to witness, and it was necessary for them to be there for that purpose, then they must be present to help count the votes. Some people, he continued, might be satisfied with this style of argument, but he was not one of them. He did not think it well, nor was it necessary in the present case, to argue from implication. They would do better to reason from the course pursued by the framers of the Constitution at a time when their own work was fresh from their hands and fresh in their minds. He then read from the proceedings of the First Congress, and showed that the President of the Senate counted the Electoral vote then, and that the same duty and power devolved upon him now. "Does anybody suppose," he asked, "that when the Constitution said that the votes shall be opened and then counted, that they did not intend that the one who opened the votes should count them?" Such an idea was to his mind, not worthy of serious consideration. It was a simple matter, and the only wonder was that there should be so many different opinions regarding it.

At the conclusion of Mr. Sargent's speech, Senator Conkling, who arrived while he was speaking, obtained the floor, and went on with his argument in favor of the bill. He spoke for upward of three hours, and made what many judges pronounce the ablest effort of his life. He commenced by reading a telegram which he said the joint committee had received from Indiana, which was signed by Gen. Harrison and 26 other Republicans, and which thanked the committee in warm terms for the plan of settling the Presidential question as proposed by the bill. This telegram Mr. Morton desired to examine, and Mr. Conkling handed it to him with a theatrical affectation of humility, which excited much merriment. Then he proceeded with his speech. In the course of it, he made one declaration which created a marked sensation. He said that he was thoroughly convinced that Rutherford B. Hayes had been fairly and legally elected to the position of President of the United States; he was a patriot and a noble gentleman, and there should be no doubt about the title by virtue of which he went into office. Were he counted in by the tribunal proposed in the bill there would be no doubt about his title; but if he went in under "the necessity pain," which was favored by the Senator from Indiana, he would be very much in the position of a man going through gates of hell honeycombed with dynamite. Senator Conkling thus clearly for the first time since the election, publicly expressed his opinion as to the result. For weeks past his probable conviction upon this point has been much discussed in Washington. Had he announced it sooner, he would have been saved from much severe and, as the event proves, unjust criticism. Shortly before he made the declaration referred to, he was interrupted by Senator Hamlin, who produced the original Electoral returns from the State of Georgia, which were sent to the Capitol in 1801. They were addressed to the Vice President of the United States and the President of the Senate, and were exceedingly irregular in form, but Mr. Hamlin, the President of the Senate, to whom they were addressed, decided that they should be counted, and by his direction they were so counted.

Mr. Morton, when Mr. Conkling finished his speech, took the floor, and as he did so there was at once an unusual stillness, which plainly indicated how anxiously his remarks were looked for. He said, however, that he did not intend to make a speech at that time. He would take another occasion to show that the argument of the gentleman from New-York was false in logic and in fact. For the present, he only desired to draw attention to the effort which had been made by that gentleman to have it appear that he, the speaker, did not properly represent the Republican sentiment of Indiana. The telegram which had been read by Mr. Conkling with this intent, was, as he had just been informed by wire, hawked all over Indianapolis for signatures, but only 30 were appended to it. On the other hand, he had received from Indiana, within the past few days, hundreds of letters and telegrams from the best Republicans in that State, denouncing the proposed compromise and urging its defeat. He thought that, instead of looking after plastic sentiment in Indiana, Mr. Conkling would do well to inquire what the people of New-York thought about the bill under discussion. If he did so, carefully, he would find that it was strongly opposed by a very large and influential class of the community, and that at the head of this opposition was the leading Republican newspaper of the country. At this point Senator McDonald, of Indiana, said that he had just returned from that State, and that nearly all the leading Republicans favored the bill. To this Mr. Morton replied, amid loud laughter, that while he had every respect for his associate's abilities, he did not think he was just the man to represent the Republican sentiment of Indiana.

At the close of this cross-firing Mr. Dawes took the floor, and objected to the bill on the ground that its jurisdiction was unlimited. To do away with this objectionable feature he offered an amendment, but before it could be considered a recess was taken until 7:30 o'clock, Mr. Edmunds announcing that he would ask for a vote before adjournment.

THE EVENING SESSION.

The Senate met after recess, at 7:30, and Senator Bayard, a member of the committee, began a speech which lasted two hours and a quarter. He reviewed the bill, and talked all around the subject, making what will be heralded as an impartial and non-partisan speech, and, perhaps, somebody will speak the truth and say it was rather dull. He very honestly expressed the creditable opinion that no Electoral vote could be rejected without the concurrence of both houses. He got into trouble by reason of a question from Senator Sherman. Mr. Bayard was attempting to justify the selection of four Justices by the beautiful geographical system, and the wisdom of leaving the four to select a fifth, and Mr. Sherman's question went to the extent of an inquiry whether the committee had not contemplated the selection of the fifth Justice by a chance method, and whether the geographical distribution of the four was not a mere accident of the choice of two Democrats and two Republicans. Mr. Bayard declined to answer the question, saying that he was discussing the bill as it was before the Senate. He did not regard the bill as bestowing any new office on the Justices; nor did he regard them as acting as members of the court, from which it would be inferred that they act only as private citizens.

Senator Christiancy followed Mr. Bayard, reading a short speech drawn up according to his custom in the form of a judicial opinion. He was sentimental and overflowing in congratulations, and had no trouble about the constitutionality of the bill. He spoke of Mr. Dawes' proposed amendment, designed to remove the ambiguity of the bill with reference to the right to go behind the returns, and claimed that the language objected to by Mr. Dawes gave the tribunal no powers it would not have under existing laws. He declined to express an opinion whether the tribunal could go behind the returns.

Mr. Dawes replied in a ten-minute speech, exposing the fact that the committee of statesmen had purposely made the bill ambiguous in this respect, in order that it might be said to certain men whose support was necessary that the language was broad enough to cover their opinion that the election of Electors might be investigated. The bill could not have been agreed to if it had not afforded, in terms, the power to go behind returns.

Mr. Thurman said Mr. Dawes' amendment was a dagger-thrust at the heart of the bill, and he frankly admitted if the tribunal were prohibited from going behind the returns, no Democrat in the Senate or House would vote for it. They were willing to leave this question, with others, to the commission. He paid a fine compliment to the Republicans of the committee, based on information not in possession of the outside world. He would even be willing as a Democrat to leave the settlement of the Presidential question to the Joint Committee that reported the bill, so impressed was he with their ability, in a great emergency, to rise above partisanship.

Mr. Thurman, like the others, expended a good deal of energy in attempting to prove that the President of the Senate cannot count the votes. It is a scheme of certain members to break down absolutely the claim that, in any event, this officer could count the votes. They expect in this way to force votes for the bill by establishing the belief that this bill must pass, or the vote cannot be counted; and that the Senate would not tolerate a claim of its presiding officer to fulfill his constitutional duty. Messrs. Conkling, Edmunds, and Thurman have been busy with the torches, burning their bridges behind them, so as to compel the acceptance of this bill or nothing. Mr. Conkling was very offensive in his manner toward Mr. Ferry while discussing this question. Mr. Thurman managed to suppress his speech at the end of an hour and 20 minutes. Before 12 Mr. Stevenson took the floor.

At midnight the Senate was still debating the bill, with no appearance of taking a vote in the next three hours. Mr. Edmunds intended to have had it passed 24 hours ago. Those who expect the bill may be defeated by delay are indebted to Mr. Conkling for this extension of a day. He has spoken altogether for six hours, and if his rhetoric had been somewhat more modest, his repetitions stricken out, and the inflation of the style somewhat reduced, all the ideas might have been expressed into two hours, and the speech would not then have been extremely compact. The members of the committee have already spoken 14 or 15 hours on a measure they promised to rush through yesterday, and now they will try to have the vote to-night. An agreement may be made to take the vote at a certain hour to-morrow. Mr. Morton has been taking copious notes, and will probably speak at length.

The purpose now in the House is to take up the bill to-morrow, and call the previous question the next day. This could not be accomplished if factious opposition were made, because the bill cannot be taken out of its place on the Speaker's table, except by unanimous consent or a two-thirds vote.

There may be a defection quite unexpected on the Democratic side by the mixing of Justice Davis' name in the Illinois Senatorial canvass. It is thought to disqualify him to act as the fifth Justice, and to compel the choice of an out-and-out Republican for the fifth Justice. This matter has been much discussed privately to-day in both houses.

A VOTE INDICATIVE OF THE FINAL RESULT.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24—12 P. M.—The Senate has just voted by yeas and nays upon a motion to adjourn. This is considered a test motion on the bill, and it was lost by a vote of 41 to 25. The number who voted for the adjournment is probably larger than the vote will be against the bill, as two or three at least voted to adjourn who will vote for the bill when put upon its passage. The vote also means that the bill will be voted on before adjournment.

Mr. Morton at 12:30 begun his speech.

Mr. Morton concluded his speech, and at 2 o'clock Senator Blaine created a marked sensation by taking the floor against the bill. He said that Congress did not itself have the power which the bill proposed to give to the commission.

THE DEBATE IN ALBANY.

THE DEMOCRATS IN THE STATE SENATE STILL FILIBUSTERING TO PREVENT A VOTE ON THE WOODIN RESOLUTIONS.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 24.—The Senate has consumed another day in the discussion of Mr. Woodin's resolutions without reaching a vote. It was thought that the more reasonable Democratic Senators would by this time have become tired or ashamed of filibustering to prevent an expression of opinion by a majority of the Senate upon a question on which the minority have had their say through the Message of their Governor. But it seems not. Democrats appear to be very much alike everywhere. The same spirit of unfairness and illiberality controls their action under all circumstances. In the Southern States they resort to intimidation and murder to prevent their opponents from voting. Here they resort to parliamentary tricks to prevent their opponents from expressing their opinions. The animus is the same. They are all "bull-dozers" at heart, and use just so much violence in manifesting their intolerance as the law and public opinion will tolerate in the locality where they live. In the treatment of these resolutions they profess to think that the Republicans wish to cast their influence against the "compromise," now pending in Congress; but, as was pointed out by Senator Carpenter, yesterday, the views expressed in the Governor's Message are in direct conflict with this compromise. Unfortunately, the rules of the Senate permit them to make themselves ridiculous without restriction, and they have not, as yet, indicated any limit to the time they propose to occupy in the disgraceful exhibition.

The previous question is not allowed in the Senate, nor can the time for discussion be limited without a two-thirds vote. So there is nothing to prevent the Democratic minority from prolonging the debate till the end of the session, and they evidently intend to keep it up till after Congress has taken action upon the compromise. Most of the time to-day was occupied by Senator Starbuck, the Democratic "accident," who misrepresents the Eighteenth Republican District. He delivered himself of a long-winded harangue, which he read from printed slips, and which was made up of a rehash of Democratic editorials attacking the Administration for employing the military to protect the right of suffrage. Mr. Woodin is in hopes of reaching a vote to-morrow. In the meantime the discussion has developed the extent of the support which the Congressional plan of counting the Electoral vote has among the Republicans in the Legislature. Of the 19 Republican Senators only 4 are in favor of it, and of the 70 Republican Assemblymen so far as can be ascertained, not more than 8 or 10 support it. This fact, coupled with the other fact that the Democrats of both houses are unanimous in advocating the plan, ought to be a sufficient guide for the Republican Congressmen from this State in their action upon the measure.

A few minutes before the House adjourned, Mr. Post, of Cayuga, rose and with the consent of the House read a resolution approving of the proposed compromise on the method of counting the Electoral vote. The resolution went over under the rule. Mr. Post desires to call it up to-morrow for action, but Friday is general order day and he will not be able to reach the resolution. It is understood that a caucus of the Republican members will be called for to-morrow evening.

THE PROCEEDINGS IN DETAIL.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

ALBANY, Jan. 24.—In the Senate Mr. WOODIN called up his concurrent resolutions relative to national affairs.

Mr. STARBUCK offered an amendment providing that the President of the United States Senate is not vested with the power to determine the validity of and count any vote which is objected to by either house of Congress. The proposed amendment was lost—yeas 11, nays 15, Mr. Bixby being excused from voting, having paired off with Mr. Tobey.

Mr. HARRIS offered the following as an additional resolution to those offered by Mr. Woodin:

Resolved, That the Legislature of New-York, dismissing all partisan feeling, and seeking only the establishment of the just result and the promotion of the common good, is gratified that the Joint committee of the two houses of Congress has been able to agree upon a plan for ascertaining and counting the Electoral vote, in which, if adopted, all will acquiesce; and, in the event of its adoption, we look to the tribunal thus created to determine the questions coming before it in exact accordance with constitutional principles.

Mr. HARRIS said the Woodin resolutions proposed simply to announce the Governor's Message, and they had his cordial approval, but he [Harris] desired to go further and approve the bill now before Congress. It is the duty of the States to appoint Electors, and there is no power vested in any person or body to change the decision of such Electors. Congress does not possess any power to interfere with the Electors from any State.

Mr. WOODIN hoped Mr. Harris would not press a vote on his amendment now, but rather offer it later. He [Mr. Woodin] desired a vote direct on his resolutions. He desired that any additional matter might come up later.

Mr. GERARD supported the proposed amendment offered by Mr. Harris.

Mr. COLE feared that the offering of Mr. Harris' resolutions would embarrass the vote on them, and he would therefore vote against them.

Mr. EMERSON said he felt he could support the Woodin resolutions, feeling that they were patriotic and becoming on the part of the Senate of the great State of New-York.

Mr. HARRIS withdrew his proposed amendment for the present. He did not desire to embarrass the Woodin resolutions.

Mr. JACOBS moved to postpone a vote on these resolutions for one week. Lost—Ayes, 9; nays, 17. Mr. Kennedy was excused from voting, having paired off with Mr. Sprague, of Erie, who is absent.

Mr. STARBUCK offered the following amendment to the resolutions:

Resolved, That the employment of federal troops to set up or pull down governments of sister States, or to determine who are entitled to occupy seats in their Legislatures, is in derogation of the rights of sovereign States, is a violation of the Constitution of the United States, is entirely at war with the genius of our institutions, and if acquiesced in by the people, must inevitably result in a military despotism.

Resolved, That the Returning Board for canvassing votes was the device of a Government which was conceived in fraud, which was imposed upon the people of a sister State and is still sustained by Federal troops, and which has been justly condemned by both houses of Congress as a mere usurpation.

Resolved, That no State Legislature has authority, nor can the troops of the Federal Government confer upon a State Legislature any authority to invest a Returning Board, or any other board of canvassers, by whatever name it may be called, with indefinite or arbitrary powers, or with any authority which by the principles and practice of our jurisprudence, and the policy of our elective system are not fairly incident to the function of ascertaining the vote of the people.

Whereas, The manner of counting the Electoral vote of the several States for the offices of President and Vice President has always been directed by the joint action of the two houses of Congress, and beginning with the election in 1793, the houses of Congress have uniformly appointed a joint committee to ascertain and report a mode of examining the votes for President and Vice President; and

Whereas, There have been invariably designated by the two houses to act as their agents in counting the Electoral votes at every Presidential election; and,

Whereas, The houses of Congress have uniformly and exclusively exercised the right to object to the counting of Electoral votes, and in the exercise of such right have at different times counted four votes, only on condition that they would not affect the final result, and excluded 13 others; and

Whereas, No Electoral vote has ever been counted without a concurring vote of both houses of Congress; and,

Whereas, No President of the Senate of the United States at any of the 21 Presidential elections which have been held under the Federal Constitution has ever objected to any teller ever named by either house of Congress; has ever offered assumption as to the mode of conducting the count of the Electoral vote unless under instructions from the two houses; has ever presumed to disobey the instructions of both houses; has ever presumed to question their supreme and exclusive authority to determine what votes should be counted and what should not be counted; has ever hesitated faithfully to declare their decisions; and,

Whereas, This interpretation of the constitutional prerogative of the two houses of Congress was deliberately approved and solemnly reasserted by Congress at the second election of President Lincoln, in 1865, in what is known as the "Second Joint Rule," which provides among other things that "no question shall be decided affirmatively and no vote objected to shall be counted, except by the concurrent votes of the two houses;" and in accordance with the procedure prescribed in said rule each of the last three Presidential countings have been conducted, and,

Whereas, The power to determine the authenticity and validity of Electoral votes, wherever vested by the Constitution, is necessarily an exclusive one, and cannot be diverted from its constitutional channel by legislation or otherwise; therefore,

Resolved, That the Constitution of the United States has conferred no power upon the President of the Senate or the United States to determine the authenticity or validity of the electoral votes;

Resolved, That the two houses of Congress are vested by the Constitution with exclusive authority to determine the authenticity and validity of Electoral votes; that they have always exercised such authority from the foundation of our Government; that such power has never been claimed or exercised by any other tribunal, and that any departure from a rule of interpretation sanctioned by uniform usage at 21 successive elections, and by the approval of 21 successive Federal Congresses, cannot be departed from in the present situation of the country without bringing the parties to any such transaction and their merited sanction; without accusing every President of the Senate and every Congress of the United States which has participated in counting the Electoral votes for President and Vice President of violating the Constitution, of neglecting powers which did, or usurping powers which did not, belong to them.

Mr. STARBUCK supported this resolution at great length, denouncing the growing practice during late years of military interference in elections, and reviewing the condition of affairs in the South during the past dozen years.

Mr. LAMONT moved to adjourn at 1:35 P. M. Lost—yeas, 10; nays, 14.

Mr. STARBUCK continued his speech, reading at length from official records and documents in support of his views. He referred to the telegrams of Secretary Chandler to Florida, more especially to the one dated Nov. 8, saying, "Hold Florida by all means; money and troops will be sent you."

Mr. WOODIN (interrupting)—The dispatch referred to is denied. No such telegram was sent by Mr. Chandler.

Mr. STARBUCK said he would do Chandler's friends the justice to say that they deny that Chandler had sent such a telegram, but that gentleman had not denied the sending of some such telegram.

Adjourned.

NEW-JERSEY'S OPPOSITION.

A DEMOCRAT WANTS TO THANK CONKLING FOR SOMETHING, BUT ANOTHER DEMOCRAT OBJECTS—THE RESOLUTION IN FAVOR OF THE COMPROMISE LAID ON THE TABLE OF THE ASSEMBLY BY A VOTE OF THIRTY-FOUR TO TWENTY-FIVE.

From Our Own Correspondent.

TRENTON, Wednesday, Jan. 24, 1877.

The House of Assembly put themselves on the record this afternoon on the hybrid Compromise Electoral bill now pending in the houses of Congress. Mr. Egan, Democrat, of Union, offered the following resolution soon after the opening of the 3 o'clock session:

Resolved, That Hon. Roscoe Conkling, of New-York, in the great speech delivered by him in the Senate of the United States on the 23d inst., in behalf of the pending compromise measure before that body, has proved himself an able and eloquent conservator of the rights of the whole people, and that the position taken by him, if sustained by both houses of Congress, will tend to a harmonious solution of the question, which for months has distracted the country, relating to the succession to the Presidency of the United States."

Mr. Bergen, Democrat, of Somerset, sprang to his feet as soon as the resolution had been read, and moved that it lay on the table. Mr. Egan said that he hoped the resolution would be adopted. He had offered it in sincerity. He was, above all, against the proposition to lay it on the table. Let the members meet the issue squarely.

Mr. Tilden, of Hudson, said he was in favor of having a square vote on the resolution.

The motion to lay on the table was adopted by a vote of 34 to 25. Mr. Matthews, Democrat, of Burlington, was absent.

Of those who voted against the motion to lay on the table, Messrs. Bennett, Drohan, Egan, Ferdon, Garrabrant, Gomer, Greer, Hannon, Rue, Kreuger, Hachett, Harris, Mackey, Malone, Paxton, Rabe, Sanderson, Stevens, Sykes, Winant, and Ford are Democrats, and Cunningham, Tilden, Traphagen, and Van Dyne are Republicans.

Mr. Egan gave notice that he should endeavor to take the resolution from the table at as early a day as possible.

Both houses have adjourned to Monday evening.

THE FEELING IN CONNECTICUT.

AN AMENDMENT TO THE RESOLUTION IN THE STATE LEGISLATURE—DEMOCRATIC OPPOSITION TO UNITED STATES SENATOR EATON.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

HARTFORD, Jan. 24.—In the State Senate, to-day, the resolution approving the Compromise bill was amended by striking out the clause which instructed the Representatives in Congress to vote for it, and was then passed and at once sent to the House, where it was referred to the Committee on Federal Relations, with instructions to report as early as possible. The Democratic members of the Legislature support the measure before Congress solidly, and in so doing fall afoul of Senator Eaton, who has denounced the whole thing as a fraud, and who, if he prides himself upon anything, is especially tender when his ability or judgment as a constitutional lawyer is called in question.

THE OPINION IN NORTH CAROLINA.

LEADING REPUBLICANS THROUGHOUT THE STATE OPPOSED TO THE BILL—HOW A VICTORY FOR TILDEN WILL EFFECT THE SOUTH—AN IMPREGNABLE POSITION SURRENDERED.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

RALEIGH, Jan. 24.—Leading Republicans throughout the State are strongly opposed to the Compromise bill for counting the Electoral vote. They believe Hayes and Wheeler were legally elected, and are opposed to giving up a certainty for an uncertainty. They hold that it is the duty of the Vice President to count the votes and declare who is elected. It is very certain if Tilden is counted in that all hopes of a contest on the part of the Republican Party during next year, or at any future time, in this State, are at an end. With Hayes as President, and without Tilden's barrel of money, and with the sweeping changes which are to be made in every department of the State Government by the present Legislature, the Republicans would enter the campaign of 1878 with an even chance of success. If Tilden is made President, the Republican organization will disband except in a few counties. Aside from these objections, no doubt is expressed as to the unconstitutionality of the bill, and grave fears are indulged that a precedent is about to be set, at war with the Constitution, and which will Mexicanize the Government after a very close Presidential election. The opinion was freely expressed at first that a mistake was made in assenting to the appointment of the committees on the part of the House and Senate, and that the Republicans had surrendered an impregnable position. The unanimous expression among Republicans is that the Northern leaders have allowed themselves to be bullied by the war talk of the Democrats. If this be so the party South cannot be rallied for another contest under such leadership. Senator Morton is sustained.

THE FEELING IN OHIO.

DEMOCRATS STRONGLY IN FAVOR OF THE PLAN—REPUBLICAN MEMBERS OF THE LEGISLATURE OPPOSED TO IT—HOW MR. TILDEN'S CHANCES ARE LOOKED AFTER.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

COLUMBUS, Jan. 24.—The Congressional discussion of the Compromise bill is read here with deep interest, but there is no material change of the first impressions, except that the Democrats are somewhat more pronounced in favor of the measure. In the Legistaure, resolutions indorsing the scheme have been introduced from the Democratic side, but there is not a Republican member who is not stoutly opposed to the bill, and who does not regard it as an unnecessary surrender of his constitutional rights. The same feeling prevails throughout the State, and is almost unanimous among the Republicans, except in some of the larger cities. No event since President Johnson's defection from his party has provoked such deep feeling and severe comment. Aside from the unconstitutionality of the scheme, the Republicans denounce it as unjust, and point to the fact that while Mr. Tilden's State had two representatives upon the joint committee, one of them his next friend and Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, Ohio was represented only by a Democrat, and is now to be denied representation among the Judicial members of the commission. It is further objected that an extreme Democratic partisan will preside over the commission, and that five of the arbitrators would sit in judgment upon any question that could be raised before the Supreme Court as to the constitutionality of the arbitration. Such is the confidence of the Republicans in the strength of their case, however, that few will wholly abandon it, even though the compromise shall be adopted. They firmly believe that no ordinary regard for the law and the facts can fail to give them a favorable verdict, and that only a corrupt grossly organized to convict can deny it. The friends of the compromise are much more active and clamorous in Ohio than its enemies, but the feeling of opposition is deep and bitter, and will be greatly intensified should the scheme result in the defeat of Hayes and Wheeler.

THE LOUISIANA HOUSE OPPOSE THE BILL

NEW-ORLEANS, Jan. 24.—The Legislature was in session to-day. The House passed a resolution expressing full faith and confidence in the President of the Senate, and requesting the Senators and Representatives from Louisiana to oppose the passage of the Electoral bill.

POSTPONEMENT IN COLORADO.

DENVER, Jan. 24.—In the State Senate to-day a resolution approving the Congressional Compromise measure was indefinitely postponed by a vote of 18 to 3.

NEBRASKA OPPOSED.

LINCOLN, Jan. 24.—The Republican members of the Nebraska Legislature held a caucus to-night and resolved that the Edmunds compromise is contrary to the provisions of the Constitution; that the Vice President is legally bound to canvass the vote and declare the result shown by the certified returns forwarded him; that the tribunal proposed by the Edmunds bill is unknown to the Constitution, hence illegal and irresponsible; and that "our Representatives in Congress are requested to use all means to the end that the Vice President shall count the vote as above indicated."

MINNESOTA.

ST. PAUL, Jan. 24.—A vote in the House, favoring the joint committee's plan for settling the Presidential count, lacked but two votes of two-thirds. The resolution went over, owing to an erroneous ruling that it required two-thirds. It will come up again.

DELAWARE FAVORS THE BILL.

DOVER, Jan. 24.—The Delaware Legislature to-day passed resolutions indorsing the Compromise bill reported by the joint committee of Congress, and requesting the representatives of the State in Congress to support the bill.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

VIEWS OF A DISTINGUISHED OFFICER. THE ONLY AND CONSTITUTIONAL MODE OF COUNTING AND DETERMINING THE VOTE FOR PRESIDENT.

The following is copied for the columns of THE TIMES from a letter written by a distinguished General, one of the closest reasoners and clearest thinkers in this country:

The Presidential question still occupies public attention. I have given it considerable thought. I have seen a great many solutions of the difficulty set forth, but somehow or even the best strike me as incomplete. The various authors may be lawyers in the ordinary or popular acceptation of the word; constitutional lawyers or historians certainly they are not.

Some years since, when before a Congressional committee, I remarked that while its several members were men of undoubted ability, they lacked culture, general ideas, and thorough knowledge. They judged well the immediate question before them, but knew nothing of its antecedents, the process of its birth, the tendency of its growth, and could not foresee its future. The law governing its production and growth were both unheard of if not unknown to them. The present crisis convinces me that the present politicians are not unlike their immediate predecessors.

Nearly all the writers (only one single exception) that I have seen use the word elect as designating the manner of making Presidential Electors. This seems to me misleading. The word in the Constitution is appoint. (Article 2, section 2.) The word elect, so frequently used, in the Constitution is carefully guarded against. The Electors are to be appointed as the Legislatures—the law-making authority—of the several States may designate. They may be elected by the several Legislatures, by the people directly, or by certain defined qualified electors. They may be appointed by the executive or judicial authority, or any other body designated by the Legislature, or, lastly, they may be drawn by lot. It is for the law-making power of the State to designate any method. The General Government has nothing whatever to do in the case.

The only question for consideration is, Has the law of the State been duly observed? If so, then its vote must be counted. The Constitution is very obscure about the process of counting the vote. The only authority under which the two houses can lay claim to any control in the count is the article of the Constitution that gives authority to Congress to make all laws necessary to carry into effect powers granted in the Constitution, i. e., to make the necessary laws to carry into effect. This power, however, is granted to Congress, that is, to the law-making power, not to the Senate or House, either separately or conjointly; but the law duly made, that is, by an act of Congress, approved by the President or duly passed over his objections. In the absence of any such law the two houses have nothing whatever to do with the count more than the Executive, Judiciary, or even a private individual, except to be present at the opening of the votes by the President of the Senate.

Historically I think it can be shown that it was the intention of the makers of the Constitution to vest in the President of the Senate the authority to count and declare the votes of the Electors; this act must be performed in the presence of the Senate and House; this power, however, he exercises ministerially, not judicially.

In amending the Constitution (1802) so much of the act of the old Constitution as referred to counting the vote was left as in the original; other parts of the article were changed.

The original Constitution assumed that many persons would be voted for; publicity in voting for President was not enacted, nor could it be assumed that until the votes were opened and counted, it would be known who was elected President. The men of that day knew little or nothing of parties. Parties, in the modern political accentuation of the term, did not then exist in this country, were in their infancy in England, elsewhere unknown. In case of no election, the House was to select from the five highest—except when two have the same number—the House voting by States to designate which one of the two was to be President; the other was to be Vice President. In the original article of the Constitution the making of the President directly or indirectly as Vice President is now here conferred on the Senate; in all questions arising out of the Presidential election it was a disinterested body. This, I think, explains why the President of the Senate was designated as the custodian of the votes of the Electors.

Judging from the stand-point of the times, it was to be assumed that the Presidency of the Senate would be one of the most honorable offices of the Government. There were objections to selecting the highest judicial officer of the Government, as judicial questions might come before him growing out of the case; nor the presiding officer of the House, as the body over which he presided had power to fill vacancy in certain case, when it could not be assumed that he would be impartial; nor could it well well be left in the hands of the Executive—judging from the temper of the times this would have been looked upon as attended with the greatest danger. The President of the Senate must have appeared to them as the most disinterested and impartial officer to whom such high trusts could be confided. The Senate was called as witness of the fact, the House was to be present to learn the fact of election or no election; in the last case being duty informed it could proceed to fill the vacancy in the manner prescribed by the Constitution. It was not to be present judicially. Nowhere in the Constitution are judicial powers granted to the House, with the exception of judging of the qualifications of its members and powers to impeach. I don't think our Democratic friends have a single peg to rest their case upon.

The Southerners have always been yelling for the Constitution, and the Democrats have ever echoed the cry and howled in unison. Their cry was hypocrisy; but let us accept it as honest, and act upon it according to the first best precedent. And, as resolved, let us repeat with Gratiano: "O upright Judge! [addressing Sammy Tilden] Mark, Jew! O learned Judge!" We accept the Constitution! Let the present crisis be judged by it.

ANCHOR.

WHICH VOTES SHALL BE COUNTED.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

With regard to the counting of the Electoral votes it seems unimportant who shall count them, for the Constitution provides which votes shall be counted. "The President of the Senate shall, in the presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, open all the certificates, and the votes shall then be counted." What votes shall be counted? Clearly the votes accompanying the certificates he shall have opened. In the present instance, 369 votes from 38 States—no more, no less. If he shall happen to have in his possession a greater number of certificates and votes than above indicated, some of them must be fraudulent. He alone can be the judge of their character and decide which are false, and after such decision he has no authority to open them. But after the certificates are opened, admit that he has no power to count the accompanying votes, still, "the votes shall then be counted." The result must be the same whoever counts them; and in the presence of 369 Senators and Representatives as witnesses, all on the alert, it is improbable that a miscount will be made. It seems impossible for a child to misconstrue the meaning of article 12 of the Constitution.

A CITIZEN.

PITTSBURG, Tuesday, Jan. 23, 1877.

ELECTION FRAUDS IN OHIO.

INTERESTING DEVELOPMENTS—BANNING'S SEAT IN THE NEXT CONGRESS IN DOUBT—THE INSIDE WORKINGS OF THE CONSPIRACY—TILDEN'S CHECK FOR $7,000 NOT YET ACCOUNTED FOR.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 24.—Investigation of the October election frauds in this city has led to interesting developments. It is believed the evidence, when produced, will oust Banning and give the seat for the Second District in the next Congress to Judge Stanley Matthews. The man Kelley who is now on trial at Philadelphia for the murder of Prof. Cato, a colored man, proves to be the identical "Charley Young," who headed a large gang of repeaters on election day, and, after his arrest, was run off by some of the leading politicians involved. He knows the inside workings of the conspiracy, and will talk. Parties left here to-day for Philadelphia to take his deposition. His testimony, and other facts which have been gathered, complete a chain of evidence that will make a profound sensation here when it is published. It will cost the Democrats two county officers, and perhaps, two Congressmen. It is hinted also that the disclosure will show treachery in the Republican Party. In this connection there is much indignation felt here at the summary refusal of the Democratic members of David Dudley Field's committee to look into the matter of the $7,000 check from Tilden which was sent to this city for corruption purposes.

NORTH CAROLINA LEGISLATURE.

THE STATE DEBT—COURTS WITHOUT JURISDICTION—A SPECIAL TAX FOR RAILROAD PURPOSES.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

RALEIGH, Jan. 24.—The committee of the bondholders of the State bonds, after employing counsel to represent them before the Legislature, returned to their homes. No action has been taken by the Legislature upon the State debt. An examination of the recent amendments to the Constitution shows that the courts have been acting since the first day of this month without any jurisdiction whatever. A bill is now before the Senate to allot the jurisdiction, and to make valid all that has been done up to this time.

The Legislature is debating a proposition to levy a special tax of 10 cents on the $100 valuation to complete, with convict labor, the Western North Carolina Railroad to Ashville, and thence to the Georgia and Tennessee lines. This tax would raise $150,000, and will be that much in addition to the taxes for ordinary expenses of the State Government. It is thought that the bill will pass. Gov. Vance came near dying the other day with an affection of the spine, but has entirely recovered.

RAILROAD AFFAIRS.

MIDDLETOWN, Jan. 24.—The difficulty between the Receiver of the New-York Midland Railroad and the Town of Warwarsing about taxes, which resulted in the abandonment of the Ellenville branch of that road, still remains unsettled. The Receiver refuses to allow trains to run unless the taxes are reduced to the same basis as at other terminal stations, which is about one-third of the present amount. The business interests of Ellenville are suffering terribly on account of the closing of the road.

BUSINESS ASSIGNMENT.

MIDDLETOWN, Jan. 24.—Jacob Hernance, of Ellenville, Ulster County, formerly a large wholesale merchant, and owner of the Merchants' and Tanners' Line of the Delaware and Hudson Canal, also of the Albany and Honesdale Freight Line, and who lately purchased the Ellenville Glass Works for $65,000, has made an assignment to Ely E. Terwilliger and R. M. Van Sickle.

TAXING DEPOSITS IN PRIVATE BANKS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—The Commissioner of Internal Revenue, in the course of his remarks before the Ways and Means Committee to-day concerning the pending bill amendatory of the Internal Revenue laws, expressed himself in favor of taxing deposits in private banking institutions the same as deposits in national banks. He also recommended legislation to enable the Department to take testimony by deposition and to cover its necessities in regard to the preparation of testimony.

THE SITUATION IN LOUISIANA.

NEW-ORLEANS, Jan. 24.—Gov. Packard yesterday addressed a note to Gen. Angur, saying he was informed that parish officers holding commissions from Gen. Nicholls took possession of the offices in Ouachita Parish on the 17th of January, in violation of the status quo. Gen. Angur called Gov. Nicholls' attention to the complaint of Packard. Nicholls replied he would have the matter investigated and the ousted officials reinstated.

GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC.

PROVIDENCE, Jan. 24.—Henry J.

FORTY-FOURTH CONGRESS.

SECOND SESSION....Jan. 24.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

In the Senate, the credentials of Mr. Windom, re-elected in Minnesota; J. E. Bailey, elected in Tennessee to succeed Andrew Johnson, in place of Mr. Key, who held by appointment of the Governor, and Isham G. Harris, elected to succeed Mr. Cooper, of that State, were presented. The bill providing for the counting of the Electoral votes came up, and, in the absence of Mr. Conkling, Mr. Sargent addressed the Senate in opposition to the bill. Mr. Conkling then continued his argument of yesterday. Several speakers followed in a running debate, when Mr. Dawes proposed an amendment designed to define the jurisdiction of the tribunal. A motion for a recess was made and another for adjournment. The latter was lost by 8 to 54, and the Senate took a recess. In the evening session Mr. Bayard spoke in support of the bill, and the debate continued.

In the House the resolutions of the Special Committee on the powers and privileges of the House in counting the Electoral votes were taken up, and Mr. McDill, of Iowa, spoke in favor of the minority resolutions, which declare that the President of the Senate has the power to count the vote. Mr. Bright, of Tennessee, advocated the majority report. No action was reached. The bill to allow national gold banks to issue gold notes to the amount of 90 per cent. of the bonds to secure their circulation, was passed. The bill to extend for eight years the time for completing the Northern Pacific Railroad was reported, but the point of order was made that it should be considered first in Committee of the Whole, and it was so referred. The bill to amend the Texas Pacific Railroad act of March 3, 1871, was reported, but objection was made to fixing Feb. 3 for its consideration. The Message of the President regarding the use of troops in the South during the election, presented a few days ago and laid on the Speaker's table, was laid before Congress. Mr. Wood suggested that the second reading be dispensed with. Mr. Hurlbut, of Illinois, objected, demanding the reading of the Message, and the documents accompanying it. The Speaker decided against this, and Mr. Hoar reminded him that that was directly opposite to a ruling of last week. The Speaker put the question of reading to the House, and decided that it was negatived. Mr. Wood then offered his resolution for a committee of inquiry. Mr. Banks made the point of order that sending for persons and papers is not authorized by the rules. The point was overruled, and Mr. Banks appealed. The appeal, on motion of Mr. Cox, was laid on the table, and the resolution was adopted.

SENATE.

The CHAIR laid before the Senate the credentials of Hon. William Windom, elected United States Senator from Minnesota for six years from March 4, 1877. Also, the credentials of J. E. Bailey, elected United States Senator from Tennessee to fill the unexpired term of Andrew Johnson, deceased. [Mr. Key has held the seat by appointment of the Governor since the death of Mr. Johnson.] Also, the credentials of Hon. Isham G. Harris, elected United States Senator from Tennessee for six years from March 4, 1877, in place of Mr. Cooper, all of which were placed on file.

THE SOUTHERN CLAIMS COMMISSION.

Mr. WRIGHT, of Iowa, from the Committee on Claims, reported favorably on the Senate Bill to extend for two years the act to establish the Southern Claims Commission. Placed on the calendar. He gave notice that he would ask the Senate to consider the bill to morrow morning.

DISORDER IN THE GALLERIES TO BE REPRESSED.

The CHAIR laid before the Senate the resolution heretofore submitted by Mr. Sherman, directing the Sergeant at Arms to arrest without further order, any person who by applause or dissent shall disturb the order of the Senate. Laid aside in Mr. Sherman's absence.

PROPOSED RECOGNITION OF WADE HAMPTON'S CABAL.

The CHAIR laid before the Senate the resolution submitted by Mr. Gordon, declaring that the State Government now existing in South Carolina, represented by Wade Hampton as Governor, is the lawful Government of the State; that it is republican in form, and should be upheld by the Government of the United States, &c. As Mr. Gordon was not in the chamber, the resolution was laid aside.

THE COMMITTEE BILL.

There being no further morning business, at 11:20 A. M. the Senate resumed the consideration of the unfinished business, being the bill in regard to counting of the Electoral vote. Mr. Conkling, who was entitled to the floor, not having reached the Senate, a recess was taken for 10 minutes, at the expiration of which Mr. Conkling was still absent.

Mr. SARGENT, of California, took the floor, and spoke in opposition to the bill. He said he had endeavored to bring his mind to an assent to the provisions of the bill. First, because he desired that a result might be worked out of the complication which would be satisfactory to the whole country; and, second, because he desired that equal and exact justice should be done to every candidate voted for at the late Presidential election, and to each of the parties which put those candidates forward. He did not believe every expedient which could be brought forward would accomplish such a result, and felt sure it would not. He did not do so. The oaths of Senators forbid careless legislation, and patriotism forbids experiments upon measures where a constitutional doubt exists. He was not sure that this bill would satisfy the hopes of the promoters. There were elements of weakness and indecision in it. There was a suspicion of unfairness about it—more than suspicion, it was almost a certainty that there would be unfairness under the bill. It gave improper powers to the tribunal which it created; power to go behind the decision of the States in matters confided to them by the Constitution. If fairness was desired, then the organization of this tribunal was most unfortunate, because the result to be accomplished depended upon one man, and that man was unknown. The supporters of this bill had addressed their arguments to the questions, first, is it constitutional? and, second, is it expedient? To his mind it was conclusively shown that the framers of the Constitution did not intend that Congress should count the Electoral vote or discriminate between returns. If they intended that this power should be lodged in the two houses of Congress, a very few words would have made it certain. The fact that those words were not used showed that they did not propose to lodge this dangerous power in the two houses of Congress dangerous because by its use the two houses of Congress could themselves create the very exigency where the Constitution provided the House should elect a President, and the Senate a Vice President of the United States. If questions which the Constitution rested entirely with the States were to be submitted to the two houses of Congress for arbitrament, there would be bargain and intrigue which would be ruinous to our institutions. He objected to this bill because it provided a tribunal composed of members of Congress and Judges of the Supreme Court, which tribunal could revise the action of the States in violation of the Constitution. The President of the Senate occupied the chair and counted the votes as a part of the Executive Department of the Government. No matter if he had been put in that chair by the vote of the Senate, he was as much a part of the Executive Department of the Government as if he had been elected Vice President by a direct vote of the people, and by this bill it was attempted to invade the executive powers of the Government lodged in the President of the Senate by the Constitution. He argued that there was no power to go behind the returns from a State. The States themselves were charged with the duty of making true returns, and, if necessary, they could examine the polls. It was not for Congress to step in. The States were to determine the manner in which Electors were to be appointed. The remedy against false returns was ample and complete in every State of this Union. The bill now before the Senate tended to strip the Executive and even the Judicial Departments of the Government of their functions, and deprived the States of an express power given them by the Constitution.

He argued at great length that the framers of the Constitution intended that the President of the Senate should open and count the Electoral vote, and quoted extensively from the Madison Papers to show the intentions of those who sat in the Constitutional Convention. He claimed that the clause now in the Constitution in regard to counting the Electoral vote as it was originally agreed upon by the convention, read, "The President of the Senate shall open the certificates, and the vote shall be then and there counted, in the presence of the Senate and House of Representatives." It was referred to a revising committee, and afterward reported back to read as it now stands in the Constitution. The members of the Revisory Committee in the convention argued that the meaning of the clause as revised was substantially the same as originally agreed upon. The Constitution did not devolve a single function upon either house or Congress in making the count. It did not recognize the two houses of Congress in a joint capacity. If there had been a gradual infringement upon the right of the President of the Senate to count the vote, it did not obscure the clear light of the Constitution. The House and Senate during the count were mere passive spectators.

Mr. HAMLIN, of Maine, interrupting, said he held in his hand the return from the State of Georgia of 1820. He could find no record of any objection made to the count of that vote. But there was a tradition that the tellers handed the return to Mr. Jefferson, who handed it back to the tellers and decided it must be counted. It was counted, as history showed. There was no certificate accompanying the return that the Electors met and balloted. It had nothing upon its face to show that votes were given for anybody. Clearly, it did not conform to the Constitution, but it was counted, as shown by the record. How could it be counted save by the decision of the person in whose custody it was—Thomas Jefferson, then Vice President of the United States? The Electoral votes were never in the custody of the Senate and House of Representatives.

Mr. EDMUNDS, of Vermont, said if the Senator from Maine would take the pains to read the contemporaneous history of that event he would see it stated that Mr. Jefferson opened that paper and handed it down to the tellers, who examined it, and entered the number of votes for Georgia in the proper column. They then passed it to Mr. Jefferson, who declared the State of Georgia had voted so and so. There was no objection, no debate.

Mr. SARGENT resumed his remarks, and argued that the bill now before the Senate, if passed, would do harm. It was broad and far-reaching in its character. The effect of it would be to weaken in the minds of all a reverence for constitutional law. He opposed the bill because it degraded the Supreme Court and brought the Judges into contempt. It brought the Judges of the Supreme Court down to the muddy pool of politics, and compelled them to wade through it. One of the hypocritical pretensions of this bill was that it was not designed to prejudice the rights of the parties, but that the courts were to be left open to settle them. He then referred to the selection of the Judge of the Supreme Court, and asked on what principle there was in selecting the Judge representing the Ninth District to represent the three great States of the far West, which had voted in opposition to him, and the opinions of a majority of whose people were as diametrically opposed to the opinions of that Justice as the poles were to each other. The same thing might be said in regard to Justice Clifford. These Judges were selected on account of their political opinions, not on account of their geographical location. He then referred to the clause requiring five members of either house to serve on the commission, and said: "Suppose the Senate should appoint on its committee three Republicans and two Democrats, and the House should then appoint five Democrats, the Senate would be cheated. Suppose both houses should act fairly in appointing the committee, there would be seven Democrats and seven Republicans. These 14 men must sit as spectators to watch the result of the fifteenth man, whom no one knew. Of course, men of pronounced opinions would be placed on that committee. They would be placed there as advocates to convince the fifteenth man." He objected to the bill because it invited a political party, defeated by the ordinary forms, a clamor for another chance. He argued that Congress could not go behind the act of the Louisiana Returning Board without committing an unconstitutional act. The people would not respect the decision of a tribunal without precedent, without sanction. The people would go behind this committee, this partisan Returning Board. He did not believe that civil war was threatened. If it did, this bill would not avert it. Speaking for the people of his State, who desired no injustice and would yield to none, he objected to the bill because it prevented this grand Returning Board from hearing any statements the Republican Party might have to make in regard to the Electoral votes of Mississippi and several other States. He objected to the bill because by it the Democratic Party yielded but one point, while the Republicans yielded two. Under this bill the House could have the vote of certain States reserred to the commission. It was a surrender of Republican rights.

Mr. EDMUNDS asked whether a bill did not pass the Senate three months ago with the vote of the Senator from California, which provided that in case of double returns from a State, neither should be counted unless both houses concurred?

Mr. SARGENT replied that he did vote for the Morton bill, the argument at the same time that the power to count the Electoral vote resided in the President of the Senate, where it belonged.

Mr. EDMUNDS said when the Senator from California asserted that this bill was a Republican surrender he was in error. He [Mr. Edmunds] did not consider this bill a Republican surrender. It was rather like a Republican victory.

Mr. SARGENT then concluded his remarks, and said he would do all in his power to avert war. He did not believe that civil disturbance would take place, but war was not the greatest calamity which could befall a nation—it was preferable to dishonor. He washed his hands of this bill; let those who desired to take the consequences of it do so.

Mr. CONKLING, of New-York, presented a petition by merchants and business men of New-York in favor of the bill, and it was laid on the table. His colleague would present to the Senate, were it not addressed to the Special Committee, a telegram received this morning from Indiana, signed by 37 Republicans and three Democrats, expressing gratitude for the intelligent and patriotic labors of the Special Committee, which have resulted in a bill for the settlement of the Presidential question, and requesting that it may become a law. That it may become a law. Among the signatures to the telegram he noticed the name of Conrad Baker, who was once Governor; that of Leonidas Sexton, who was once Lieutenant-Governor; that of Mr. Gordon, the Republican candidate for Attorney General, and that of Ben Harrison, who, as the candidate for Governor, ran on a bolting ticket and gallantly led the late canvass in Indiana, though it was disastrous.

Mr. Conkling then resumed his remarks, and after briefly reviewing the points made yesterday, argued that in no instance had the President of the Senate attempted to do anything in presiding over the joint convention to count the Electoral vote except by the command of the two houses. He then referred to the returns from Georgia, produced by Mr. Hamlin, and said the great Jefferson never silently or secretly induced tellers to count any vote which he did not believe to be right. During all the years of the Government up until the adoption of the twenty-second joint rule, the two houses had always prearranged the whole process of counting the vote. He then referred to the difficulties attending the Presidential contest in 1800, and said that not only the men in both houses of Congress, but the leaders of thought all over the country, had fixed upon the true and only method of managing just such questions as some of these that are awaiting solution now. Mr. Conkling quoted from the bill then discussed prescribing the mode of deciding disputed elections in the offices of President and Vice President, and said that in the House of Representatives the debate was led and the bill managed by John Marshall just one year before he occupied that high judgment seat whence over the whole world he become renowned. It was he who argued as to the necessity of some statutory mode for the settlement of questions like those of to-day. The Senator from Maine [Mr. Sherman] yesterday erroneously stated that the pending bill provided for secret sessions of the committee. This bill did not do so, but the bill of 1800 did so provide.

Were it not for taking up the time of the Senate, he would endeavor to show the Senator from California [Mr. Sargent] that our forefathers thought impartiality was gained by counterpoising against each other votes to be cast. Nothing in the bill of 1800 ever for one moment put forth the idea that the two houses of Congress did not have the power to count the Electoral vote; that the Vice President had any authority further than to open the certificates was never hinted in the debate. Our forefathers did provide that the President of the Senate should not direct for himself the order in which he would take up and open the certificates. He next referred to the legislation of 1824, and said it was asserted then by a unity of voices that the paramount law of the Republic had reposed in the two houses of Congress the duty of constitutionally, lawfully, and peacefully declaring the result of an election. The two houses of Congress, and they alone, must determine whether a vote was good, bad, or indifferent. He next referred to the twenty-second joint rule agreed upon in 1865, and said it was adopted when rebellion stood gory and with uplifted hands striking at the vitals of the Republic. Many acts might be proper, though not competent in such an event. He never believed the Constitution was violated because the Government asserted it had a right to be. The twenty-second joint rule had gone, and he rejoiced that it had, but the argument remained—like Banquo's ghost, it would not down—that if the power to count the vote was by the Constitution vested in the President of the Senate, the twenty-second joint rule and every other rule on the subject had been a bold usurpation.

Mr. Conkling referred to Mr. Morton's bill in regard to counting the Electoral vote which passed the Senate last session, and said there were only three Republicans who voted against it, viz., the Senator from Vermont, [Mr. Edmunds,] the Senator from Wisconsin, [Mr. Howe,] and himself. That bill would have deposited with the House of Representatives absolute power to settle this question, and yesterday during the reading of an election, the two houses of Congress, and they alone, must determine whether a vote was good, bad, or indifferent. He next referred to the twenty-second joint rule agreed upon in 1865, and said it was adopted when rebellion stood gory and with uplifted hands striking at the vitals of the Republic. Many acts might be proper, though not competent in such an event. He never believed the Constitution was violated because the Government asserted it had a right to be. The twenty-second joint rule had gone, and he rejoiced that it had, but the argument remained—like Banquo's ghost, it would not down—that if the power to count the vote was by the Constitution vested in the President of the Senate, the twenty-second joint rule and every other rule on the subject had been a bold usurpation.

Mr. Conkling referred to Mr. Morton's bill in regard to counting the Electoral vote which passed the Senate last session, and said there were only three Republicans who voted against it, viz., the Senator from Vermont, [Mr. Edmunds,] the Senator from Wisconsin, [Mr. Howe,] and himself. That bill would have deposited with the House of Representatives absolute power to settle this question, and yesterday during the reading of an election, a motion to reconsider made by a Democratic Senator. Had not that motion been made the House of Representatives could pass the bill, and unless the President found some constitutional objections to the bill he could so cast. He then read from the bill which passed at the last session, and argued that it provided that only that return should be counted which, both houses, acting separately, decided to be the valid return. The honorable Senator from Indiana [Mr. Morton] said the bill now before the Senate was a contrivance. If there ever was a contrivance it was the bill which passed at the last session. It was a political Hell Gate, paved and honeycombed with dynamite.

Continuing his argument, Mr. Conkling said he believed the Republican nominee had been chosen the chief magistrate of the country. He believed him to be a patriot incapable of inflicting injury upon his country, and he asked him to take a little more than a moment's time to consider this question. It was not for the representatives of States to refuse by an assertion of the law-making power, to have a peaceful, adequate tribunal, by the action of which every difficulty would be solved. If this bill was a compromise of truth, of law, or of right he was against it; but he denied that it was any compromise, and, above all, it did not compromise right, principle, or the Constitution. To insist upon a claim was not to compromise it. To insist upon an honest, fair counting of the Electoral vote was not a compromise. A Presidential election had occurred, and unless there was a tie somebody had been chosen. To establish that fact was no compromise. He referred to the arguments against the constitutionality of the tribunal authorized by the bill, and asked if the silver commission appointed by Congress was illegal, or had its powers destroyed because three of the members of the commission were experts and not members of Congress? Was the Army Commission illegal because the General of the Army was a member thereof? Did not his presence dignify and strengthen that commission?

Mr. SHERMAN, of Ohio, said the difference between the Silver Commission, the Army Commission and this commission to make a President, was that the Silver and Army Commissions reported to either house of Congress, and their action was of no account until accepted by Congress, while the action of the commission to make a President was binding unless overturned by a concurrent vote of the two houses.

Mr. CONKLING asked if it was ever heard that Congress could not impose upon national officers extra or additional duties? Did the honorable Senator from Ohio deny that Congress had the power to employ a Federal Judge to settle a contested boundary between States or assert any other fact essential to public welfare. The two houses, from beginning to end were to make an examination of the Electoral vote; they agreed beforehand to make it in a particular way, by a committee which was vested with the power of the two houses for the time being; the two houses of Congress retained the whole thing absolutely within their grasp to the end; the exercise of power by the two houses, and not the delegation of power as had been claimed. Recently, it was proposed to make the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court the umpire in this contest. The honorable Senator from Indiana [Mr. Morton] voted in favor thereof, no constitutional doubt him restraining.

Mr. MORTON—I will satisfy you directly.

MR. CONKLING—I thought my friend shook his head, and I was about to read from the Record to satisfy him. Resuming his argument, he referred to the Geneva Commission for the settlement of the Alabama difficulty with Great Britain, and said one of the greatest Emperors on the earth was the umpire on the San Juan question, but the $15,000,000 and the territory awarded were valueless compared with the tranquility of our land for a single day. If he who ruleth his own spirit is greater than he who taketh an armed city, what should be said of the mildness who by an act as noiseless as the wave of a wand settled this vexed question in an hour. He commented at some length upon the powers and duties of the commission, and said it could do nothing not authorized by the Constitution and the law as it now stood, and that it must report to the two houses of Congress. It was not a roving commission to traverse all the realms of fancy and imagination.

Mr. DAWES, of Massachusetts, said, while he heard the Senator from New-York, with great positiveness assert the fact that the commission must be bound by the Constitution, he had heard others with equal positiveness declare that the commission should go behind the returns from States to settle questions which belonged to States themselves. Would it not be safer for Congress by statute to limit the powers and duties of the commission?

Mr. CONKLING replied the commission would be bound with an oath, and its action was subject to review by Congress. The honorable Senator from Massachusetts proposed to launch upon the heavy current of this debate the powers of the commission, he would be launching the subject upon a sea without shore or bottom, and the 4th of March, 1877, the 4th of March, 1873, would not see the end of the controversy. Continuing his argument, Mr. Conkling denied that the bill was a compromise. It surrendered the rights of none, but asserted and maintained the rights of all. It submitted to lawful authority the solution of the pending question. The bill might be denounced by partisans on one side or the other; it might be derided by adventurers and theorizing thoughtless; it might be assailed with sourscowling gayety, as the honorable Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. Cameron] treated it; it might not for the present receive the approbation of even the thoughtful or patriotic, but he would vote for it because he believed it advantageous and within the Constitution. It would be beneficial to the people of all States, including that great State whose interest and whose honor was so dear to him. The bill might be derided now, but time, at whose great altar all passions and all prejudices must bow, would at last vindicate the bill and those who proposed it.

Mr. MORTON, of Indiana, said he hoped before this debate closed to have an opportunity of answering some things which had been said, to show that much had been said without foundation in logic, without foundation in fact. His purpose now was to notice a dispatch from citizens of Indianapolis, not directed for himself the order in which he would take up and open the certificates. He next referred to the legislation of 1824, and said it was asserted then by a unity of voices that the paramount law of the Republic had reposed in the two houses of Congress the duty of constitutionally, lawfully, and peacefully declaring the result of an election. The two houses of Congress, and they alone, must determine whether a vote was good, bad, or indifferent. He next referred to the twenty-second joint rule agreed upon in 1865, and said it was adopted when rebellion stood gory and with uplifted hands striking at the vitals of the Republic. Many acts might be proper, though not competent in such an event. He never believed the Constitution was violated because the Government asserted it had a right to be. The twenty-second joint rule had gone, and he rejoiced that it had, but the argument remained—like Banquo's ghost, it would not down—that if the power to count the vote was by the Constitution vested in the President of the Senate, the twenty-second joint rule and every other rule on the subject had been a bold usurpation.

Mr. Conkling referred to Mr. Morton's bill in regard to counting the Electoral vote which passed the Senate last session, and said there were only three Republicans who voted against it, viz., the Senator from Vermont, [Mr. Edmunds,] the Senator from Wisconsin, [Mr. Howe,] and himself. That bill would have deposited with the House of Representatives absolute power to settle this question, and yesterday during the reading of an election, a motion to reconsider made by a Democratic Senator. Had not that motion been made the House of Representatives could pass the bill, and unless the President found some constitutional objections to the bill he could so cast. He then read from the bill which passed at the last session, and argued that it provided that only that return should be counted which, both houses, acting separately, decided to be the valid return. The honorable Senator from Indiana [Mr. Morton] said the bill now before the Senate was a contrivance. If there ever was a contrivance it was the bill which passed at the last session. It was a political Hell Gate, paved and honeycombed with dynamite.

Continuing his argument, Mr. Conkling said he believed the Republican nominee had been chosen the chief magistrate of the country. He believed him to be a patriot incapable of inflicting injury upon his country, and he asked him to take a little more than a moment's time to consider this question. It was not for the representatives of States to refuse by an assertion of the law-making power, to have a peaceful, adequate tribunal, by the action of which every difficulty would be solved. If this bill was a compromise of truth, of law, or of right he was against it; but he denied that it was any compromise, and, above all, it did not compromise right, principle, or the Constitution. To insist upon an honest, fair counting of the Electoral vote was not a compromise. A Presidential election had occurred, and unless there was a tie somebody had been chosen. To establish that fact was no compromise. He referred to the arguments against the constitutionality of the tribunal authorized by the bill, and asked if the silver commission appointed by Congress was illegal, or had its powers destroyed because three of the members of the commission were experts and not members of Congress? Was the Army Commission illegal because the General of the Army was a member thereof? Did not his presence dignify and strengthen that commission?

Mr. SHERMAN, of Ohio, said the difference between the Silver Commission, the Army Commission and this commission to make a President, was that the Silver and Army Commissions reported to either house of Congress, and their action was of no account until accepted by Congress, while the action of the commission to make a President was binding unless overturned by a concurrent vote of the two houses.

Mr. CONKLING asked if it was ever heard that Congress could not impose upon national officers extra or additional duties? Did the honorable Senator from Ohio deny that Congress had the power to employ a Federal Judge to settle a contested boundary between States or assert any other fact essential to public welfare. The two houses, from beginning to end were to make an examination of the Electoral vote; they agreed beforehand to make it in a particular way, by a committee which was vested with the power of the two houses for the time being; the two houses of Congress retained the whole thing absolutely within their grasp to the end; the exercise of power by the two houses, and not the delegation of power as had been claimed. Recently, it was proposed to make the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court the umpire in this contest. The honorable Senator from Indiana [Mr. Morton] voted in favor thereof, no constitutional doubt him restraining.

Mr. MORTON—I will satisfy you directly.

MR. CONKLING—I thought my friend shook his head, and I was about to read from the Record to satisfy him. Resuming his argument, he referred to the Geneva Commission for the settlement of the Alabama difficulty with Great Britain, and said one of the greatest Emperors on the earth was the umpire on the San Juan question, but the $15,000,000 and the territory awarded were valueless compared with the tranquility of our land for a single day. If he who ruleth his own spirit is greater than he who taketh an armed city, what should be said of the mildness who by an act as noiseless as the wave of a wand settled this vexed question in an hour. He commented at some length upon the powers and duties of the commission, and said it could do nothing not authorized by the Constitution and the law as it now stood, and that it must report to the two houses of Congress. It was not a roving commission to traverse all the realms of fancy and imagination.

Mr. DAWES, of Massachusetts, said, while he heard the Senator from New-York, with great positiveness assert the fact that the commission must be bound by the Constitution, he had heard others with equal positiveness declare that the commission should go behind the returns from States to settle questions which belonged to States themselves. Would it not be safer for Congress by statute to limit the powers and duties of the commission?

Mr. CONKLING replied the commission would be bound with an oath, and its action was subject to review by Congress. The honorable Senator from Massachusetts proposed to launch upon the heavy current of this debate the powers of the commission, he would be launching the subject upon a sea without shore or bottom, and the 4th of March, 1877, the 4th of March, 1873, would not see the end of the controversy. Continuing his argument, Mr. Conkling denied that the bill was a compromise. It surrendered the rights of none, but asserted and maintained the rights of all. It submitted to lawful authority the solution of the pending question. The bill might be denounced by partisans on one side or the other; it might be derided by adventurers and theorizing thoughtless; it might be assailed with sourscowling gayety, as the honorable Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. Cameron] treated it; it might not for the present receive the approbation of even the thoughtful or patriotic, but he would vote for it because he believed it advantageous and within the Constitution. It would be beneficial to the people of all States, including that great State whose interest and whose honor was so dear to him. The bill might be derided now, but time, at whose great altar all passions and all prejudices must bow, would at last vindicate the bill and those who proposed it.

Mr. MORTON, of Indiana, said he hoped before this debate closed to have an opportunity of answering some things which had been said, to show that much had been said without foundation in logic, without foundation in fact. His purpose now was to notice a dispatch from citizens of Indianapolis, not directed for himself the order in which he would take up and open the certificates. He next referred to the legislation of 1824, and said it was asserted then by a unity of voices that the paramount law of the Republic had reposed in the two houses of Congress the duty of constitutionally, lawfully, and peacefully declaring the result of an election. The two houses of Congress, and they alone, must determine whether a vote was good, bad, or indifferent. He next referred to the twenty-second joint rule agreed upon in 1865, and said it was adopted when rebellion stood gory and with uplifted hands striking at the vitals of the Republic. Many acts might be proper, though not competent in such an event. He never believed the Constitution was violated because the Government asserted it had a right to be. The twenty-second joint rule had gone, and he rejoiced that it had, but the argument remained—like Banquo's ghost, it would not down—that if the power to count the vote was by the Constitution vested in the President of the Senate, the twenty-second joint rule and every other rule on the subject had been a bold usurpation.

Mr. Conkling referred to Mr. Morton's bill in regard to counting the Electoral vote which passed the Senate last session, and said there were only three Republicans who voted against it, viz., the Senator from Vermont, [Mr. Edmunds,] the Senator from Wisconsin, [Mr. Howe,] and himself. That bill would have deposited with the House of Representatives absolute power to settle this question, and yesterday during the reading of an election, a motion to reconsider made by a Democratic Senator. Had not that motion been made the House of Representatives could pass the bill, and unless the President found some constitutional objections to the bill he could so cast. He then read from the bill which passed at the last session, and argued that it provided that only that return should be counted which, both houses, acting separately, decided to be the valid return. The honorable Senator from Indiana [Mr. Morton] said the bill now before the Senate was a contrivance. If there ever was a contrivance it was the bill which passed at the last session. It was a political Hell Gate, paved and honeycombed with dynamite.

Continuing his argument, Mr. Conkling said he believed the Republican nominee had been chosen the chief magistrate of the country. He believed him to be a patriot incapable of inflicting injury upon his country, and he asked him to take a little more than a moment's time to consider this question. It was not for the representatives of States to refuse by an assertion of the law-making power, to have a peaceful, adequate tribunal, by the action of which every difficulty would be solved. If this bill was a compromise of truth, of law, or of right he was against it; but he denied that it was any compromise, and, above all, it did not compromise right, principle, or the Constitution. To insist upon an honest, fair counting of the Electoral vote was not a compromise. A Presidential election had occurred, and unless there was a tie somebody had been chosen. To establish that fact was no compromise. He referred to the arguments against the constitutionality of the tribunal authorized by the bill, and asked if the silver commission appointed by Congress was illegal, or had its powers destroyed because three of the members of the commission were experts and not members of Congress? Was the Army Commission illegal because the General of the Army was a member thereof? Did not his presence dignify and strengthen that commission?

Mr. SHERMAN, of Ohio, said the difference between the Silver Commission, the Army Commission and this commission to make a President, was that the Silver and Army Commissions reported to either house of Congress, and their action was of no account until accepted by Congress, while the action of the commission to make a President was binding unless overturned by a concurrent vote of the two houses.

Mr. CONKLING asked if it was ever heard that Congress could not impose upon national officers extra or additional duties? Did the honorable Senator from Ohio deny that Congress had the power to employ a Federal Judge to settle a contested boundary between States or assert any other fact essential to public

RITUALISM IN ENGLAND.

A SEQUEL TO MR. TOOTH'S DEFIANCE

EXTRAORDINARY SCENE AT ST. JAMES' CHURCH, HATCHAM—FIVE THOUSAND RIOTERS IN FRONT OF THE BUILDING—THE WORSHIPERS PROTECTED BY THE POLICE—THE INTERIOR OF THE CHURCH—"TICKETS FOR ROME."

The London News of Jan. 18 says: "The scene at St. James', Hatcham, yesterday, was one of extraordinary character. That something serious had been apprehended by the Vicar, Rev. A. Tooth, and his friends, was shown by the previous erection in front of the church of a fence extending all across the road, upon which were printed placards, with the words: 'To maintain order, the Church Wardens find it necessary to announce that on Sundays, till further notice, admission will be by card only, underneath which there was the statement in writing, 'Tickets all given away;' while, another placard made known that there would be no evening service. About 9 o'clock, or an hour and a half before matins were to commence, persons desiring admission began to present themselves before a side door in the fence, but only those who were furnished with a card were allowed to pass through. The barrier was guarded by policemen, a strong detachment of the P Division being present during the morning under Superintendent Gerdon and Inspector Ralph, for the preservation of the public peace. It soon became evident that the occasion was to be a remarkable one in the history of the Ritualistic disputes. The church was filled before 10:30 by the holders of tickets; but others were outside insisting on their right to admission to a parish church, and were far from being satisfied by the assurance that the church was full. By 10 o'clock some hundreds of persons were gathered outside the barrier, and the number gradually increased to thousands, until the whole street, more than 100 yards long, leading to the church, which forms a sort of cul de sac to the upper end of St. James' road, was thronged with people. At one period there must have been at least 5,000 persons outside the church; but among them it was stated, were many who sympathized with Mr. Tooth, and a considerable number who were actually provided with tickets and had come too late to find them of any use. The religious question was not the only one at stake on the occasion. Many persons maintained that the fence violated a public right of way, in opposition to the view of the Vicar and Church Wardens. The Church Wardens contended that as pew rents were levied before free sittings and the offertory were established, they had a right to limit admission to the church in the manner mentioned above. The inside of the church was much less crowded than on the Sunday before, when the precautionary device of issuing tickets was not adopted. On the former day the passages between the seats in the nave and the aisles were choked up with people; yesterday they were almost clear, all the seats being fully occupied. To assist the Church Wardens in preserving order there was a body of sidesmen, 30 in number, and distinguishable by a white band round one arm, and several of them were stationed near the entrance gate of the chancel. On the pillars of the church were placards, signed by the Vicar and Church Wardens, by means of which the congregation were earnestly requested to keep their seats should any disturbance or interruption arise. It should be mentioned here that shortly before the service began, Mr. Fry, the legal representative of the Church Association, on presenting himself was admitted to the church, for the purpose, as was stated, of satisfying himself by personal observation whether or not there was any alteration in the arrangements. None were discernible by an ordinary spectator, the altar and the decorations presenting the usual aspect. Matins, however, were not gone through in the customary manner, the clergy and choristers, seven in number, being just inside the rood-screen and having their faces turned toward the altar during the prayers. Rev. Mr. Hogg, of St. Alban's, Holborn, officiated, being assisted by Rev. Mr. Tanbury; and Rev. Mr. Headlam reading the first, and Rev. Mr. Maxwell, of St. Alban's, Holborn, the second lesson. During this service a number of boys of the adjacent orphanage sat on the seats in the nave nearest to the altar, being under the care of three or four Sisters of Mercy belonging to that establishment. The prayers, psalms and Te Deum may be said to have been rather read in a monotone than intoned, and in a manner which was distinctly audible in the middle of the church. In fact, this preparatory part of the service was, generally speaking, and apart from the question of relative position, remarkable for simplicity.

A few minutes before 11, at which time Mr. Tooth entered the church and proceeded to the vestry, there was heard inside the church a sound of shouting outside, and this was soon followed by a louder and more prolonged noise of the same kind, which caused an excited movement in one part of the church. The celebration of the Holy Communion commenced at 11. Just before, a chorister lighted the six high candles at the back of the altar, and two on one side, and shortly after there was the clerical procession from the vestry to the choir, led by the incense bearer, after whom came the lofty processional cross, the crucifer having on each side of him an acolyte wearing a crimson cap, and carrying a lighted candle; Mr. Tooth, officiating priest, wearing the biretta, alb, and chasuble, closing the procession, and incense being freely waved near the altar before the celebrant proceeded to the office. Soon after the introit loud singing was heard proceeding from the midst of the crowd outside. Some of the words of the national anthem were distinctly audible all over the church, mingling incongruously with those of the Ten Commandments as they were read by Mr. Tooth, and followed as in intervals by the response of the congregational response, 'Lord have mercy upon us, and incline our hearts to keep this law.' Still for the most part all looked peaceful within. Shouting and singing without were blended occasionally with the internal sounds of praise or prayer; but to the general aspect of the congregation was almost entirely that of quiet, undisturbed devotion. While the Gospel for the day was being read it was broken in upon by three loud hurrahs. At the end of the Nicene Creed, Rev. Mr. Crouch preached a very short sermon, his text being the eleventh verse of the second chapter of St. Matthew's Gospel: 'And coming were come into the house they saw the young child with Mary his mother, and fell down and worshiped Him; and when they had opened their treasures they presented unto Him gifts—gold, and frankincense, and myrrh.' The general object of the sermon was to show that the 'treasures' referred in the text symbolized in connection with public worship, incense being especially meant as symbolizing prayer. The preacher emphatically urged that true worship consists not, as many appear to suppose, in seeking to obtain something from God, but in giving something to Him, gold being emblematical of the most precious of gifts; and in concluding he exhorted the congregation to 'worship God with honest penitence, with faithful prayer, and with loving adoration.' Two or three times during the sermon a loud shouting was heard from outside. During the offertory 'God Save the Queen' was sung, and it afterward ascertained that the word 'Popish' was used before 'tricks,' and that the singing included that of a song headed 'Struggle between Protestantism and Ritualism.'

Immediately after the consecration of the sacred elements, in connection with which Mr. Tooth lifted the cruciface above the level of his head, there was suddenly heard a continuous triumphant shouting outside, succeeded by a rush and a quick succession of knockings both at the west, or principal door, and the north one. The whole church was instantly in uproar, and the faces of numbers wore an expression of painful anxiety. Mr. Crouch at once closed the chancel gate; several of the sidesmen appeared to be preparing to bar any attempt to enter the chancel; the Church Wardens, and other sidesmen, and members of the congregation rushed to the doors, and one of these was hurriedly barricaded with benches and chairs. After the lapse of about ten minutes one of the Church Wardens exclaimed 'all right,' and a general feeling of relief followed. The cause of all this natural commotion may be explained in a few words. About nine or 10 persons, opponents of Mr. Tooth's religious views, or assertors of the public right of way, or both, having got inside the barrier by a back route, then made for the fence, where they were met with a cheer from many on the other side, and a cry of 'Down with it, down with it.' The fence was instantly leveled from end to end, and before the Police could stop them a large number of people rushed in and forced the door open, knocking loudly. Within a very short time the Police had mustered and come to the rescue of the frightened congregation inside, removing those who were foremost and guarding the way against assault. In connection with this coup and some other proceedings, including an harangue, several names and addresses were taken down by the Police, but no one was taken into custody, Superintendent Gerdon being led, as regards the fence, to adopt a very cautious policy by the raising of the ticklish legal question of right of way. Order having been restored inside the church, as well as the assault checked outside, the celebration was concluded without further interruption. There were no lay communicants. Now, that the service was over, the question arose: What was the congregation to do, especially the female part of it? Were they at once to face an excited and baffled crowd, whom the fears of many, perhaps, painted in the most dismal colors? Under this state of affairs, Mr. Church Warden Croom, having ascended the little pulpit, said, 'Ladies and gentlemen, I earnestly request you to keep your seats. There is not the slightest cause for your being afraid, the Police having the entire charge of the churchyard; but you would simply be irritating the persons outside by going out. I must earnestly entreat you, therefore, to keep your places.' This appeal was followed by an announcement from Mr. Crouch that evensong would follow, and after the lapse of a few minutes, Rev. Mr. Hanbury began reading the Litany, both the doors still being closed, and not a single person having left the church so that but for the Police on guard the congregation would have appeared to be sustaining a kind of siege. The celebration of the Holy Communion having terminated a little after 12, evensong ended shortly before 1, and soon after the Police began gradually letting out the congregation by the west door. Before Inspector Ralph had formed a narrow passage with policemen on each side, and those who had been temporarily imprisoned passed through it. As they went along they were greeted with loud

T. B. Taylor, and Mrs. McS. Slaver, wives of acclimated planters, were both murdered in cold blood. They were stopping at the same house, their husbands being on route to this city with produce. The murders were committed for the purpose of robbery.

MRS. ASHTON'S CHECK.

HOW AND WHERE SHE OBTAINED IT—SOME CURIOUS FACTS DISCOVERED BY BALTIMORE POLICEMEN.

On J

LAW REPORTS.

TWO STRANGE ACTIONS.

MRS. JAMISON'S DIVORCE SUIT AGAINST HER HUSBAND AND HER STEPFATHER'S LIBEL SUIT AGAINST THE SAME—INDORSEMENTS TO LETTERS AND POSTAL CARDS — PLAIN TALK FROM JUDGE DONOHUE.

The suit for limited divorce brought by Mary L. Jamison against David F. Jamison, already referred to in THE TIMES, and a libel suit brought by Mrs. Jamisen's stepfather against the same defendant were brought before Judge Donohue, in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday, on various motions, and were argued. Mrs. Jamisen's divorce suit was betere the court on a motion by her for alimony and counsel fees. Her counsel recited from the affidavits the charges of outrageous cruelty already published. The alleged acts of cruelty and inhumanity began the very morning after their marriage, in May 1874, while the husband and wife were on board of a Cunard steam-ship on their way to Scotland. Mr. Jamison then charged his wife with having been unchaste before marriage. His after conduct, as narrated by his wife, was simply monstrous, and she avers that she was obliged to leave him, taking her child with her, and seek shelter among friends. One of the letters written by him to her was read, which was so vile that the counsel refused to stain the records of the court with it. On the other hand, however, the defendant denied the charges of cruelty, and alleged that he had always treated his wife kindly and courteously. In his affidavit yesterday, Jamison averred that his wife after their marriage had confessed to him that her stepfather had been improperly intimate with her before her marriage, having first made her intoxicated. This statement Mrs. Jamison swore was a most cruel and abominable lie.

The libel suit brought by Hugh McKay, the plaintiff's stepfather, was then taken up. It came before the court on a motion to strike out the complaint entirely, on the ground that no libel was shown thereby; or to strike out portions of the complaint as irrelevant; or to compel the plaintiff to distinguish his causes of action and separate them. Another motion was to vacate an order of arrest in the case under which Jamison is held in default of $10,000 bail, or else to reduce the bail. The story of this libel suit forms quite a commentary on the wife's action. It appears that while Jamison was traveling as a peddler in the Western States, and shortly before his wife left him, he wrote McKay a letter on the envelope of which were the words: "From D. S. Jamison, your son-in-law by fraud and misrepresentation." Jamison also sent McKay a number of postal cards, addressing them to "Hugh McKay, smuggler of poplin dresses." On one of the postal cards McKay was set down as a "liar, smuggler, and seducer." On another of these cards he charged McKay with having given his stepdaughter gin, and then having seduced her before her marriage. McKay's libel suit is brought on account of these writings. Jamison, in his application to have the order of arrest against him vacated, or else to have the bail reduced, alleged in his affidavit, besides the charge of seduction against McKay, that the latter's own son had made complaint to District Attorney Bliss that Mr. McKay had in 1860 and in 1861 been guilty of smuggling. An affidavit was also read of a former book-keeper of McKay, who averred that the latter had received woplin dress goods in carpet-bottle barrels. In reply was read Jamison's affidavit, denying the alleged seduction, and also an affidavit from Mr. McKay. The latter avers that Jamison had been a purchaser at his dry goods store for several years, and one day remarked that he would like to see McKay's house in Jersey City. McKay thereupon invited him to dinner the following Sunday, arranging to go to the house from St. Peter's Church. Jamison was a widower at the time, and while at McKay's house met Mary L. Doyle, now Mrs. Jamison. Miss Doyle was then living with her mother, whose second husband was Mr. Fuleston, a brother-in-law of Miss Doyle, and, after calling repeatedly at the house, wrote her a very peculiar letter, in which merchandise and matrimony were put in curious juxtaposition, but the gist of which was the declaration of his love for her. He also wrote to her mother, Mrs. McKay, telling the latter of his affection for her daughter. Mrs. Fuleston and Miss McKay as well as Miss Doyle laughed at the proposition, and Jamison's suit was rejected. Some time afterward, however, in April, 1874, McKay was called on by Jamison, who informed him that he [Jamison] was engaged to his [McKay's] step-daughter. McKay was surprised at this, but after consulting his wife he came to the conclusion that as his stepdaughter had taken the matter in her own hands he would not interfere. The marriage was set down for May 9, and it was arranged by Jamison that he and his bride should start for Glasgow, Scotland. Jamison then decided that the marriage had better take place in time for them to take the Cunard steam-ship which sailed on May 9, and, accordingly, the marriage took place on the morning of the latter date. No other conversation took place between him and Jamison, Mr. McKay avers, except that Jamison once asked Mrs. McKay to speak favorably to Miss Doyle of him. He responded by saying he did not think it was of any use to pursue the matter, since his step-daughter did not seem desirous of marrying anybody, but appeared more inclined to enter a convent, and that he himself would sooner see one of his own daughters enter a convent than any husband of hers. In regard to the charges of smuggling, Mr. McKay averred that these were entirely untrue. He had never been notified in any way that such accusations had ever been made against him in any court. An affidavit was also put in by a friend of McKay, a merchant, who says he has the highest respect for Mr. McKay's character, and believes him to be a very upright man. He says he would go for McKay's bail for $100,000 if necessary.

On the argument A. R. Dyett, who appeared for Jamison, claimed that the latter, as stated in his affidavit, did not use the words complained of in a libelous sense. It was not libelous, the counsel claimed, to call a man a seducer or a smuggler, and that $10,000 bail was excessive in the case.

Judge Donohue reserved his decision on the motion for alimony, though the defendant's counsel said his client was willing to pay $12 per week. He decided, however, the motion to strike out the complaint, etc., and to reduce the bail on the order of arrest. In denying the motion to vacate the arrest Judge Donohue indulged in some very plain talk. He said that any man who would send such statements as those admitted on the face of a letter or on postal cards, where they would be seen, and then deny that he did it with intent to malice or without intending them to be read, must suffer the usual penalty of one who swears to a falsehood, that none of his statements should be believed. A man who will not be restrained by the law nor even by his own oath must learn that there is some restraint for him.

PETER COOPEE'S SIGNATURE FORGED.

Charles Smith, aged 51, who said he came from Pennsylvania and who forged the signature of Hon. Peter Cooper to a check for $150 on the Fourth National Bank, was placed on trial by Assistant District Attorney Rollins yesterday, in Part I. of the Court of General Sessions. On the 16th inst. Smith visited the ship-chandlery store of Charles H. Pratt, No. 34 Burling slip, and ordered $110 worth of rope, stating that he was the Captain of the schooner Mary Foster, lying at Pier No. 22 North River. He asked Mr. Pratt whether he was acquainted with Hon. Peter Cooper, and being answered in the affirmative, tendered him a check for $150 purporting to have been signed by that distinguished philanthropist, requesting him to keep $100 in part payment of the bill, and let him [Smith] have the remaining $50. Mr. Pratt suspected that the signature was not genuine, and in order to ascertain who the Peter Cooper was that Smith said he had seen sign the check, showed him a picture of Hon. Peter Cooper. Smith immediately recognized the picture, and said it was an admirable likeness. Meanwhile, Mr. Pratt, who had taken advantage of the delay to make further inquiry, discovered that there was no such schooner as the Mary Foster lying at the pier mentioned, whereupon he had Smith arrested. On being searched at the station-house, a number of forged and blank checks were found on the person of the accused, but the document presented to Mr. Pratt was missing and had not since been discovered. On the trial yesterday the above facts were testified to by Mr. Pratt, and the venerable Peter Cooper testified that he had never given a check for $150 to the prisoner, and did not keep an account at the Fourth National Bank. The jury immediately found the accused guilty of uttering a forged check, knowing it to be forged, and Judge Gildersleeve sentenced him to five years in the State Prison at hard labor.

A WEALTHY MEXICAN'S WILL.

Señor José Nestor Moncada, a wealthy Mexican, died at the Metropolitan Hotel on the 10th inst., leaving an estate valued at $1,000,000. Yesterday his sister, Donna Manuela Moncada, applied to Surrogate Calvin for letters of administration on his personal property in this country, valued at $163,000. Ignatius Mariscо, the Mexican Minister at Washington, and Hiram Barney, formerly Collector of this port, were appointed co-administrators with the sister. Señor Moncada left a draft of a will which provided that all his property, both real and personal, should go to his sister.

SECURITY FOR COSTS OF A SUIT.

The case of Leonard J. Woodman against The United States Rolling Stock Company was brought up before Judge Joseph F. Daly, in the Special Term of the Court of Common Pleas, yesterday, on a motion by the defendants to compel the plaintiff, as a non-resident, to file security for costs. The plaintiff, it appears, sues to recover $1,666 66 for his services as the company's agent in London, England, from Dec. 31, 1873, to Sept. 15, 1875. He also sues to recover $4,000 for the expenses in maintaining the London office of the company. The defendants, by their application to compel the plaintiff to file security, alleged that the case would occasion trouble and expense to them in defending it, and that they had no guarantee that the costs would be paid by the plaintiff in case they succeeded. Judge Daly granted the company's application and ordered the plaintiff to file $500 security for costs.

UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—In the United States Supreme Court yesterday the following business was transacted:

No. 172.—The case of Donaldson, Assignee in bankruptcy of Emanuel Mann, vs. Farwell & Co., of Chicago, from the Wisconsin Circuit, presents the question whether the purchase of goods upon credit by a person who at the time of purchase is insolvent and knows himself to be so, and unable to pay, is voidable by the vendor of the goods. This case presented such a state of facts, and the court instructed the jury that under the circumstances the sale was voidable by Farwell & Co., and that if they should find that the firm reclaimed the goods in time, it was voidable even as against the claims of the assignee. It is here contended that the purchase of the goods was made without artifice or representation of any sort, in the usual course of business, and that although the bankrupt had been insolvent for some time, he had still conducted his business and was accorded usual credit. That under such circumstances the sale was not voidable and the court erred in its instructions.

W. P. Lynde for the plaintiff in error; E. Mariner for defendants.

No. 193.—In the case of Dutcher and others against Wright, Assignee in bankruptcy of Peterson, also from the Wisconsin Circuit. The question is upon the state of facts which, coming to the knowledge of the creditor, should charge him, as a prudent business man, with knowledge of the debtor's insolvency. The court below found that such notice was brought home to the firm as should have satisfied it that Peterson was insolvent when he transferred to it a number of accounts to secure new notes which he gave for his indebtedness. It is here said that the reverse was the fact; that the firm first called upon creditors of Peterson and at his bank, and that from all they could learn he was worth $12,000 to $18,000 over and above all his debts if his assets could be turned to account, and that it was under such justifiable circumstances that the accounts were taken, and that it is contended that if this state of facts is found to be true, the court will reverse the decree. W. P. Lynde for appellants; E. Mariner for appellees.

No. 177.—The case of Thompson, claimant of the tug Margaret, against the owners of the brig Mechanic, from the Eastern District of Wisconsin, was on appeal to recover damages for the loss of the brig. The tug undertook to take the brig, loaded with lumber, into the harbor of Racine, and while doing so the port line parted and the brig grounded and was subsequently lost. This was the state of facts found by the District Court. But the Circuit reversed the decree, holding that the brig was not grounded because of the parting of the port line, but on the contrary, that the port line was parted in consequence of the grounding of the brig. The evidence was very conflicting, and it is here insisted that the conclusion of the District Court is the most harmonious with the principal facts. W. P. Lynde appears for the appellants and J. P. C. Cottrill for appellees.

No. 177.—George A. Thompson, claimant, &c., appellant, vs. Charles F. Bliss et al.—The argument of this cause was continued by Mr. William P. Lynde, of counsel for the appellant, and by Mr. Alfred L. Cary for the appellee, and concluded by Mr. William P. Lynde for the appellant.

No. 13. (Original.)—Ex parte Conrad N. Jordan et al., petitioners.—This cause was argued by Mr. F. N. Bangs, of counsel for petitioners, and by Mr. William M. Evarts for the respondents.

Adjourned until to-morrow.

DISPUTING PAYMENT OF A DRAFT.

The case of Hugh McCulloch & Co. against George J. and Orrin C. Hoffman was argued on appeal before the Supreme Court, General Term, yesterday. The suit is brought on a draft for £585, 11 shillings and 11 pence, dated July 11, 1873, signed by both defendants, and drawn upon their father, George Hoffman, to the order of the plaintiffs. The case was tried at Circuit before Judge Donohue, and George J. Hoffman put in no defense. His brother, Orrin C. Hoffman, defended, however, on the ground that there had been no consideration for the loan, as far as he was concerned, but that the amount of the draft represented the aggregate of a number of loans made to his brother, George J. Hoffman, by the latter's friend, John H. Puleston, who was a member of the plaintiff's firm. Mr. Puleston, Orrin C. Hoffman alleged, had asked him to join with his brother in making the draft. He signed it simply for Puleston's accommodation, without consideration, and on the express understanding that he was not to be held responsible. His signature was really for the purpose of endeavoring to induce his father to honor the draft, which the latter would learn if George J. Hoffman's signature only were appended to it. Judge Donohue refused to admit evidence of any parol agreement with reference to the draft before it was made, and the jury found a verdict for the plaintiffs for $4,003. From this judgment an appeal is now taken, the defendant, Orrin C. Hoffman, claiming that the evidence above alluded to was stricken out improperly. Decision was reserved.

A NOTE FOR COLLECTION.

The suit of Francis Morris and Z. E. Simmons against William H. Webb was brought before Judge Speir in the Superior Court, Special Term, yesterday, on a motion by the defendant for a reference. The suit is brought to recover $37,650 on a note which was put in the defendant's hands for collection, and which the plaintiffs allege he did collect, but which he says he did not collect. The note was made by the North American Steam-ship Company to the Central American Transit Company as part of the consideration for the purchase, by the former, of the vessels of the latter company. The note was afterward given by the Central American Transit Company to the plaintiffs to indemnify the latter as sureties in an attachment suit against the Transit Company. The plaintiffs, by the terms of the note, authorized Webb, as Trustee. The North American Steamship Company afterward became insolvent. Mr. Webb says that he can only be held liable if guilty of fraud or willful neglect, but he has been guilty of neither. He made the motion for a reference yesterday that the whole matter connected with the case will involve the examination of the accounts of the North American Steam-ship Company. The plaintiffs opposed the motion, however, on the ground that these accounts are neither material nor relevant to the issues in the suit, inasmuch as Mr. Webb himself admits that the North American Company was solvent after the note passed into his hands. Judge Speir reserved his decision. William D. Hennen appeared for the plaintiffs, and Butler, Stillman & Hubbard for the defendant.

SUIT BETWEEN FORMER PARTNERS.

The rather complicated suit of John A. Gray against Samuel Green was brought before Judge Donohue in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday, on two motions. It appears that the parties to the action were formerly partners, but that in 1869 the plaintiff sold out his interest to the defendant for $106,000. Of this amount $6,000 was paid in cash, and the agreement was that the remaining $100,000 should be paid in quarterly instalments of $2,500. Thus far $35,000 have been paid. The plaintiff sued the defendant on the ground of a default in the payment of one of the quarterly instalments in 1873, and recovered a judgment against the defendant for $65,000 and interest. The General Term of the Supreme Court set this judgment aside on the ground that there had been no default. This is now on appeal. Mr. Gray subsequently made an assignment of the judgment to the defendant, and this assignment has since been the subject of litigation. Mr. Gray claims he was induced to make the assignment while intoxicated. The motions made before Judge Donohue yesterday were, first, to stay all proceedings in the first suit until the decision of the appeal in the second action, and, second, for leave to enter on the face of the judgment in the first action a judgment for all the unpaid instalments since November, 1872. The decision was reserved.

A MILLIONAIRE'S ATTEMPTED ARREST.

The case of William L. and John H. Vanderzee against William S. Slater was brought before Judge Speir in the Superior Court, Trial Term, yesterday, on a motion by the defendant to have an order of arrest against him vacated. The action is brought to recover fees for professional services, and the plaintiffs charged the defendant with obtaining from them by fraud certain securities on which they had a lien. On this charge they obtained an order of arrest against the defendant, who is a Rhode Island millionaire, as is stated. They then, according to the defendant's story, sent a notice to a Rhode Island lawyer with instructions to inform Slater that unless he came within this jurisdiction, and submitted himself to the proceedings in the case, they would take steps to execute his arrest. This the defendant's counsel, Willard Bartlett, claimed was an abuse of the process of the court and conveyed a threat of criminal proceedings. The plaintiffs denied the assertion, and maintained that the notice was merely a warning, and that no intimidation was intended. Judge Speir reserved his decision on the motion to vacate the order of arrest.

COURT OF APPEALS.

ALBANY, Jan. 24.—The following business was transacted in the Court of Appeals to-day:

No. 159—The Baltimore E. P. Co. vs. Garrison; upon arrangement of counsel this cause is settled, and further argument discontinued. No. 63—Billings vs. Russell; argued by George F. Comstock and Michael H. Cardozo for appellant, and D. J. Dean for respondent. No. 161—The Washington Cemetery vs. Craig; No. 322.—Same vs. Prospect Park, &c. R. R. Co; argued as one cause, by H. C. Place, for the Cemetery, and John H. Bergen, for defendants. No. 165—Pierce vs. Boyd; argued by William P. Baldwin for appellant, and Larry S. Gove for respondent. No. 166—Augsbury vs. Flower; argued by F. N. Fitch for appellant; submitted for respondent. No. 167—The Buffalo E. S., &c., Railroad vs. The Buffalo Railroad Co.; passed. No. 135—Millard vs. McMullin; argued by C. H. Bell for appellant, and William Grisson for respondent.

Bell vs. Hershey.—Motion granted; no costs.

Depew vs. Darrow.—Motion granted; cause to be placed on special calendar for third Friday of February, 1877.

Simon vs. Worth.—Motion denied with costs; leave to renew on terms.

Woodman vs. The United States Rolling S. Company.—Security in $500 ordered.

By Judge Robinson.

Bauser vs. Starin.—Case and amendments settled.

MARINE COURT—CHAMBERS.

By Judge McAdam.

Opinions.—Viarartes vs. Merret. Mayo vs. Pearsall. Thornhill vs. Setorchi.—Motion granted for Feb. 9, 1877.

Lane vs. Adams.—Motion denied, without costs.

Vermilye vs. Vedder.—Motion granted for Feb. 16, 1877.

Mitmacht vs. Decoty.—Motion granted, unless within 10 days plaintiffs pays $10 costs and files note of issue.

Motions Granted.—Hilton vs. Ludlow; Gould vs. Bernhard; Kittle vs. Bernstein; Josephine vs. Witkowski; Miller vs. United States Dairy Company.

Default.—Stanford vs. Moore; Deering vs. Demarest; Gerber vs. Peck.

Price vs. Liddy.—Complaints dismissed conditionally.

Woolley vs. Arcularius.—Amendments allowed.

Kelly vs Geoghan.—James McNulty, Esq., Receiver.

Mason vs. Oppenheim.—Bond on appeal approved.

Orders Granted.—Malbby vs. Coffey; Rhoades vs. Wickham; Dix vs. Nelson; Lohrer vs. Zychlinski; Sterns vs. Watson; Agastini vs. Bell; Russo vs. Mansinni; Ahern vs. Tyler; Michael vs. Schiel; Lotti vs. Krackner; Olsen vs. Peterson; Goldman vs. Reichart; Campbell vs. Smith; Zahn vs. Harding; Bainbridge vs. Allen.

Wheelwright vs. Blumbey.—E. Jacobs, Receiver.

By Judge Alker.

Adolphus vs. Carroll.—Case settled and filed Jan. 23, 1877.

Wolf vs. Hamel.—Findings filed Jan. 23, 1877.

COURT CALENDARS—THIS DAY.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS.

Held by Donohue, J.

Nos.
55—Van Dusen vs. The Board of Police.
59—Bryan vs. The Paoli Belt Co.
61—Hamilton vs. Wyeth.
89—Cunda vs. Ruck.
90—Sotelido vs. Nichols.
100—Friedlin vs. Kreizer.
128—Khuar vs. The Mayor, &c.
129—Hamill vs. The Mayor, &c.
130—Bowers vs. The Mayor, &c.
131—Ford vs. The Mayor, &c.
191—Van Raden vs. The Board of Assessors.
218—Hunt vs. McDonald.
234—Shayne vs. Coiles.
231—Campbell vs. Spratt.
238—Bolinger vs. Weed.

The Assessment Calendar will also be called.

SUPREME COURT—GENERAL TERM.

Held by Davis, P. J.; Brady and Daniels, JJ.

Nos.
109—Logan vs. The People, &c.
142—Williamson vs. The People, &c.
143—Same vs. Same.
165—The Western R. R. Co. vs. Bayne et al.
183—Doig vs. Morgan.
190—De Luce vs. Kelly, &c.
190—Clark et al. vs. Dickinson.
203—Hoffman et al. vs. McCulloch et al.
204—Block et al. vs. Steinhardt.
205—Hogarty vs. Lloyd.
206—Willett, &c., vs. Rippetoe et al.

SUPREME COURT—CIRCUIT—PART I.

Held by Van Vorst, J.

Nos.
882—The Canadian Bank of Commerce vs. Hellenbrand.
3849—Lecker et al. vs. The Mayor, &c.
3785—Obrig vs. Brodie et al., &c.
2011—Rachman vs. King.
2783—Solomon vs. Conner, &c.
1825½—Duryea vs. The Mayor, &c.
2577—Livingston et al. vs. Cornell et al.
2719—Haden et al. vs. Coleman.
2721—Thielman, Jr., vs. Emanuel.
2725—Strauss vs. Wolf.
2735—Haug vs. Koch.
4290—Flinn vs. The Mayor, &c.

SUPREME COURT—CIRCUIT—PART II.

Held by Van Brunt, J.

Nos.
1260—McMahon vs. Daley.
1398—The U.S. Sp'g Bed Co. vs. Conner, &c.
1096—Hewlett vs. Wood et al.
1496—Rogers, &c., versus Schermerhorn.
1742—The Grader C. G. Co. vs. The N. Y. Cotton Exp. Co.
3486—Whiteman et al. vs. Mayor, &c.
3516—Schelley vs. Diehl et al.
230—Lynch &c., vs. Butler
1758—Edwards vs. Scott et al., &c.
1768—Nichols et al. vs. Devlin et al.
1784—Brennan vs. The Mayor, &c.

SUPREME COURT—CIRCUIT—PART III.

Held by Barrett, J.

Case on—Prouty vs. The Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway Company. No day calendar.

SUPERIOR COURT—GENERAL TERM.

Adjourned sine die.

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

Held by Speir, J.

No day calendar.

SUPERIOR COURT—TRIAL TERM—PART I.

Held by Sedgwick, J.

Case on—No. 652—Knapp, &c., vs. Roche.
No day calendar.

SUPERIOR COURT—TRIAL TERM—PART II.

Adjourned for the term.

COMMON PLEAS—GENERAL TERM.

Adjourned until Monday, Feb. 5.

COMMON PLEAS—TRIAL TERM—PART I.

Held by Van Hoesen, J.

Nos.
143—Hunt vs. Roberts.
1004—Lamberti vs. Mentegazza.
793—Brown vs. Melcher.
370—Reynolds vs. Erie Railway Co.
915—Bogert vs. Clarke.
510—Corcoran vs. N. Y. C. & H. R. R. R. Co.
726—Fuentes vs. Mayorga.
827—Heidel vs. Bovd.
877—Wilson vs. Pine.
583—Howard, Jr., vs. McDonough.
478—Earle vs. N. Y. Life Ins. Co.
371—Booth et al. vs. Fergusou.

COMMON PLEAS—EQUITY TERM.

Held by J. F. Daly, J.

No. 14—Equitable Life Ass. Society vs. Leonard.

MARINE COURT—TRIAL TERM—PART I.

Held by Shea, C. J.

Nos.
3805—Lecombe vs. Griswold.
2975—Keller vs. Ortel.
2976—Same vs. Same.
5330—Crawford vs. Hines et al.
9075—Phelen et al. vs. Stevenson.
8295—McGrath vs. Connor.
5174—Chassetat vs. Copp.
4829—Selover vs. Lowenthal.

MARINE COURT—TRIAL TERM—PART II.

Held by Goepp, J.

Nos.
5616—Treadwell vs. Lyon.
5569—The Security Bank vs. Miller.
6710—Rogers vs. Reeve, &c.
5755—Zahn vs. Harding.
7402—Hamberger versus Brooks.
5657—Kupper vs. Brigg et al.
3857—Clark vs. The Atlas S. S. Co.

MARINE COURT—TRIAL TERM—PART III.

Held by Sheridan, J.

Nos.
5732—McKnight vs. Gerry.
5742—Bowes et al. vs. Hopkins.
5793—Solomon vs. Hamburg.
5795—Melckel vs. Bolser.
5805—Neuburger vs. Sturlevant.
5892—Arnold vs. Conner.
5717—Saingt vs. Good et al.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS—PART I.

Held by Gildersleeve, J.

George Lewis, Peter Delany, robbery.
Abraham D. Anema, Thomas Maxwell, robbery.
Charles Dougherty, Thomas Murphy, burglary.
Michael Hogan, burglary.
Julius Kosenunger, grand larceny.
Lulu Meyers, grand larceny.
Marv smith, grand larceny.
George Croft, forgery.
John Wallace, misdemeanor.
Alfred V. Fearsall, misdemeanor.
Albert Wilson, misdemeanor.
William Churchill, misdemeanor.
Henry Grefe, misdemeanor.
Charles H. Smith, misdemeanor.
Benjamin F. Craig, misdemeanor.
William Quenel, grand larceny.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS—PART II.

Held by Sutherland, J.

James Boylan, felonious assault and battery.
William Osborn, Edward McLean, Fred. S. Brown, John Long, grand larceny.

COURT NOTES.

Judge Speir, in the Superior Court, Special Term, yesterday, denied the motion for alimony in the divorce case of James A. Harper against Julia C. Harper, noticed heretofore in THE TIMES.

William Niebuhr was tried and convicted yesterday before Judge Benedict, in the United States Circuit Court, for running an illicit distillery in One Hundred and Twenty-first street last Summer.

The Emma Mine case was up before Judge Wallace again yesterday, but nothing of importance was done, the day being spent in reading the depositions of James E. Matthews, Henry C. Wallace and Charles Smith for the plaintiff.

Judge Lawrence, in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday directed the release from Ludlow Street Jail of Charles L. Halberstadt, the attorney who was committed for contempt for not paying over to a Receiver certain money collected by him in an action.

Judge Donohue, in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday, appointed John Adams as Receiver of the Ætna Iron Works in a suit brought against it by Roach and others, the former Trustees. All parties to the action consented to the Receiver's appointment.

The United States Grand Jury found a true bill yesterday against Henry M. Williams, Aaron Wolff, Lafayette Gaff, and Charles L. Lawrence, charging them with conspiracy to defraud the Government under the mail robbers, John Kelly, John D. Dedrees, and James Crawford.

James McQuade, of No. 311 Monroe street, charged with stealing several suits of clothes belonging to Charles Bousert, of the rag-boat Ceres, on Dec. 8, pleaded guilty yesterday in Part I. of the Court of General Sessions. Judge Gildersleeve sentenced the accused to two years in the State Prison.

The case of John Lawrence against the American Central Insurance Company of St. Louis is now on trial before Judge Van Hoesen, and a jury in Part I. of the Court of Common Pleas. The suit is brought to recover $2,500 on a fire policy, the answer being that the goods whose loss damages are claimed were not insured.

In the case of John J. Betz against William C. Conner and others, heretofore reported in THE TIMES, the jury in Part I. of the Court of Common Pleas, yesterday brought in a verdict of $12,042 83 for the plaintiff. The suit was to recover an account alleged to be wrongfully levy on a lot of beer belonging to the plaintiff.

Argument was had before the Supreme Court, General Term, yesterday, in the case of Joseph Spears and William C. Spears, against John Mathews and Ezekiel R. Thompson, in which the parties are litigating as to the town of Ithens are entitled to an award of $12,263, on account of the Broadway widening. Decision was reserved.

In Part I of the Court of General Sessions yesterday, Assistant District Attorney Rollins accepted a plea of guilty from Joseph Smith, a resident of Brooklyn, who in a drunken fight on the 17th inst. on John Richter, of No. 68 Willett street, on the back with a razor, inflicting an ugly cash. Judge Gildersleeve sentenced the prisoner to five years in the State Prison.

In Part I. of the Court of General Sessions yesterday, Assistant District Attorney Rollins took a plea of guilty from Peter Harfel, of Jersey City, who, on Dec. 19, stole clothing and jewelry valued at $65 from Frederick Lutz, with whom he occupied a room at No. 201 Broome street. Judge Gildersleeve sentenced the thief to two years and six months in the State Prison.

Elien Smith, of No. 102 Madison street, was charged, in Part I. of the Court of General Sessions, with receiving stolen goods. A case of spool-silk, valued at $800, was stolen from in front of the premises of Belding Brothers & Co., No. 510 Broadway, on the 17th inst., and portions of the stolen silk were subsequently found in the possession of the woman Smith. The jury found her guilty, and at the request of Assistant District Attorney Rollins, she was remanded to await the trial of George Davis, alias Stephen Whitman, who is jointly indicted with her.

Charles A. Bullard, a maker of musical instruments, was arrested and held in $5,000 bail yesterday, in a suit brought against him by Anna A. Peyin to recover $20,000 for alleged breach of promise of marriage, accompanied by seduction. Miss Peyin is in her seventeenth year and sues by guardian. She is an orphan and resides with her aunt. The latter went to Paris with her husband in June, 1875, leaving the young lady in charge of Mr. Bullard, who promised to be a father to her. It is alleged that Bullard accomplished Miss Peyin's ruin while she was an inmate of his house.

Argument was heard before Judge Donohue, in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday, in the cases of the Ellis children, known as the "boy acrobats," whose custody is claimed by their father. The boys, it will be remembered, were taken from Alfred Smith, alias Leon, while performing in a circus at Poughkeepsie, and were given to the custody of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. The father now claims the children should be restored to his custody, but the society insists that he forfeited his rights by consenting to their being employed in an unlawful manner. Judge Donohue reserved his decision.

HE NEVER INDORSED THE NOTE.

Application was made to Judge Speir in the Superior Court, Special Term, yesterday, by John Combes, for the vacating of a judgment obtained against him by William L. Alley and Joseph Meyers. Combes in his affidavit stated that the action was brought against him as the indorser of a certain promissory note for $7,000, by the plaintiffs, who claim to be later indorsers. Judgment by default was entered against him on Aug. 18, 1876, for $7,056 55, and the plaintiffs have issued execution on the judgment. Mr. Combes explained that at the time of the service of the summons and complaint on him, he was under great mental excitement and exceedingly depressed and occupied with business troubles, having been compelled to make an assignment for the benefit of his creditors. He gave the action brought in default, did not even read the papers in the case, employed no attorney, and, having numerous notes, indorsements, and obligations outstanding, did not coosider whether he had a defense to the action or not. He has now ascertained that he never indorsed the note upon which he was sued. He may be, he says, seriously prejudiced if the judgment in the case be allowed to stand. Judge Speir granted his application for the vacating of the judgment.

A MAN WITH FOUR LAWSUITS.

David J. Benolief is a gentleman who has the distinction of having four suits against him, brought by two ladies. The first of the suits is by Rosalie Charpentier, who accuses him of having assaulted her on July 4, 1876. She says he struck her several times, and used threatening and violent language toward her. She claims $500 damages. In another suit brought by her against him she asks $1,000 damages for certain slanderous words which she alleges he spoke of her in the presence of several persons, in which he charged her with laxity as regards her marriage vows. Two similar suits are brought by Leonie Chapney against Benolief. She charges him with spitting in her face several times on Aug. 21, 1876, and with slandering her on the same day. She says after calling her a thief and something worse, he said: "You are all thieves and assassins, and you have a brother and sister who were hanged." She claims $500 damages for the assault and $1,000 for the slander. Mr. Benolief demurred to the complaints in all four cases, and his demurrer was upheld. The cases were brought before Judge Donohue, in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday, on a motion to set aside the taxation of costs in the cases. The motions were denied.

DECISIONS.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS.

By Judge Donohue.

Granted.—Seymour vs. Quirk; Gofney vs. Allen; Davis vs. Murray; Seymour vs. Quirk; Mant vs. The German Mortgage & Savings Bank; The Murray Hill Bank vs. Cleary; Curnen vs. Pentz; Stammers vs. Smith; Mott vs. Aetna; and The German Life Insurance Company vs. Vilmar et al.

Matter of Rutherford.—Prisoner discharged.

The New-York Lyeing and Printing Establishment vs. Berdet.—Motion granted. Allowance of $250.

Motions Denied.—Mundy vs. Delaney; Connors vs. Titus, and The Excelsior Petroleum Company vs. Fowler.

Sibley vs. Sauer et al.—Motion granted. Memorandum.

Ronae vs. Cohen.—Order granted.

By Judge Van Vorst.

Motions Denied with Costs.—Charpenter vs. Benolief; Mapuy vs. Benollet.

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

By Judge Speir.

Orders Granted.—Frolich vs. Heller; Boardman vs. Griffith; Torry vs. The U. Locomotive Works, Payeken vs. Goetzel; Woodruff vs. Beakman; Thompson vs. Covert; Steinberg vs. Wormsuden et al.; Smith vs. Smith; Rogers vs. Rowe; Cobb vs. Knapp.

Burnham vs. Bernard.—The necessity of attending to the calendar after the cause is placed on the General Term calendar entitles the party to the term fees, although the papers may not be completed for argument.

Harper vs. Harper.—Order denying motion for counsel fee and alimony.

Scully vs. Sanders.—Order for commission.

Gebhard et al. vs. Lambert et al.—Receiver bond approved.

Doyle et al. vs. Sharp.—Undertaking approved.

COMMON PLEAS—SPECIAL TERM.

By Chief Judge Daly.

Goodman vs. Searles.—Judgment for defendant.

By Judge J. F. Daly.

Stewart vs. Fields.—Motion granted; plaintiff must supply an notice for leave to collect the costs claimed.

Searls vs. Strong.—Motion granted, if defendant within five days pay the taxable costs and disburse-

COMMERCIAL AFFAIRS.

NEW-YORK, Wednesday, Jan. 24, 1877.

The receipts of the principal kinds of Produce since our last have been as follows:

Ashes, pks	13	Lead, pigs	995
Bees-wax, pkgs	8	Oil, bbls	50
B. K. Peas, bags	70	Rosin, bbls	287
Beans, bbls	1,019	Pork, pkgs	1,426
Cotton, bales	6,902	Beef, pkgs	113
Cot'n-seed Oil, bbls	100	Cut-meats, pkgs	8,291
Copper, bbls	14	Grease, pkgs	88
Dried Fruit, pkgs	310	Lard, pkgs	911
Eggs, bbls	461	Lard, kegs	578
Flour, bbls	10,729	Stearine, pkgs	139
Wheat, bushels	9,040	Butter, pkgs	4,255
Corn, bushels	39,913	Cheese, pkgs	170
Oats, bushels	28,225	Tallow, pkgs	274
Malt, bushels	740	Lard-oil, bbls	53
Peas, bushels	3,400	Pressed Hops, No	1,709
Grass-seed, bags	3,166	Pea-nuts, bags	547
Flax-seed, bags	19	Rice, pkgs	61
Corn-meal, bbls	630	Rice Chaff, bags	230
Corn-meal, bags	50	Starch, pkgs	195
Oatmeal, bbls	100	Glue, bbls	70
Hops, bales	528	Tobacco, hhds	47
Hides, No	36	Tobacco, bxs. & cs	467
Hides, bales	613	Whisky, bbls	1,223
Leather, sides	9,057	Wool, bales	1,946

COFFEE—Rio has been very quiet for sale to-day, and quoted weak.....Stock of Rio and Santos in first hands here this morning, 14,589 bags; at the outports, 75,409 bags; and afloat and loading for the United States, 168,047 bags, of which 82,263 bags are for New-York.....Other kinds have been slightly dealt in and unsettled in price.....The recent movements have been summed up thus: 3,103 bags Maracaibo, 225 bags Laguayra, 568 bags Mexican, 236 bags Angostura, and 75 bags San Domingo, sold at the close of consumptive within our range.....Stock of other than Rio and Santos in first hands here this morning, 1,387 bags and 21,272 mats.....We quote invoices thus: Rio, ordinary, 19½c.@19¾c.; fair, 19¾c.@20c.; good, 20¼c.@20½c.; prime, 20¾c.@21c., gold, ₱ lb.

The New York Times.

NEW-YORK, THURSDAY, JAN. 25, 1877.

AMUSEMENTS THIS EVENING.

FIFTH AVENUE THEATRE.—LEMONS; OR, WEDLOCK FOR SEVEN—Mr. C. F. Coghlan, Miss F. Davenport.

UNION SQUARE THEATRE.—Miss MULTON—Miss Clara Morris, Mr. James O'Neil. Mr. J. H. Stoddart.

WALLACK'S THEATRE.—ALL FOR HER—Mr. Lester Wallack, Mr. S. Mackaye. Miss Ada Dyas.

BOOTH'S THEATRE.—DAN'L DRUCE—Mr. Lawrence Barrett.

NIBLO'S GARDEN.—AROUND THE WORLD IN EIGHTY DAYS (Spectacular)—Kiralfy Brothers.

BROADWAY THEATRE.—UNCLE TOM'S CABIN—Mrs. G. C. Howard and Georgia Jubilee Singers.

PARK THEATRE.—THE GENEVA CROSS—Mr. C. R. Thorne, Jr., Mr. Stuart Robson, Miss Kate Rogers.

EAGLE THEATRE.—ACROSS THE CONTINENT—Mr. Oliver D. Byron.

NEW-YORK AQUARIUM.—RARE AND CURIOUS FISH AND MAMMALIA, STATUARY, &C.—Day and evening.

HELLER'S WONDER THEATRE.—PRESTIDIGITATION, MUSIC, AND HUMOR—Mr. Robert Heller, Miss Heller.

STEINWAY HALL.—At 2 P. M.—READINGS FROM SHAKESPEARE—"Julius Cæsar."

LYCEUM THEATRE.—LADY OF LYONS—Mr. Edwin Booth, Mrs. Clara Jennings.

GILMORE'S GARDEN.—EQUESTRIAN GAMES AND FIELD SPORTS.

SAN FRANCISCO MINSTRELS.—MINSTRELSY, FARCES and NEGRO COMICALITIES

NATIONAL ACADEMY OF DESIGN.—EXHIBITION OF WATER COLORS. Day and evening.

THE NEW-YORK TIMES.

THE NEW-YORK TIMES is the best family paper published; it contains the latest news and correspondence. It is free from all objectionable advertisements and reports, and may be safely admitted to every domestic circle. The disgraceful announcements of quacks and medical pretenders, which pollute so many newspapers of the day, are not admitted into the columns of THE TIMES on any terms.

Terms, cash in advance.

TERMS TO MAIL SUBSCRIBERS.

Postage will be prepaid by the Publishers on all Editions of THE TIMES sent to Subscribers in the United States.

The DAILY TIMES, per annum, including the Sunday Edition.....$12 00
The DAILY TIMES, per annum, exclusive of the Sunday Edition.....10 00
The Sunday Edition, per annum.....2 00
The SEMI-WEEKLY TIMES, per annum.....3 00
The WEEKLY TIMES, per annum.....1 20

These prices are invariable. We have no traveling agents. Remit in drafts on New-York or Post Office Money Orders, if possible, and where neither of these can be procured send the money in a registered letter.

Address THE NEW-YORK TIMES,
New-York City

NOTICE.

We cannot notice anonymous communications. In all cases we require the writer's name and address, not for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

We cannot, under any circumstances, return rejected communications, nor can we undertake to preserve manuscripts.

The popular opposition to the compromise scheme is growing more manifest. In the Ohio Legislature the Democrats only sustain it. In the New-Jersey Legislature a motion to thank Mr. CONKLING for his defense of the scheme was laid on the table only from Republicans voting against such action. In Albany, four of the seventeen Republican Senators and, at the outside, but ten of the seventy-one Republican Assemblymen favor the compromise. Under all the circumstances Mr. CONKLING deserved the rebuke he got from Mr. MORTON yesterday for trying to give the impression that the Republicans favor the measure. The rebuke was not the less severe because it had been gratuitously invited.

Harper's Weekly has discovered that the Compromise bill "is a law which would hold until repealed by Congress." If the writer had taken the pains to read the title of the bill he would have seen that it applied only to the "votes for President and Vice President * * * for the term commencing March 4, A. D. 1877." The committees would not have ventured to propose so extraordinary a measure as a permanent regulation of the counting of the Electoral votes. The most they dared to do was to suggest a makeshift, and it is only as a makeshift that any intelligent lawyer could be persuaded to tolerate it.

Mr. JOHN R. MCPHERSON, the newly-elected Senator from New-Jersey, appears to be a very fair sample of the kind of man that the Democratic Party delights to honor. Equally destitute of ordinary culture and higher requisites of political training, Mr. MCPHERSON has reached the United States Senate mainly because of his command of money, and his effective use of the arts of the political wire-puller. As a representative of his party he leaves nothing to be desired; as a champion of the railroad interests represented by Col. SCOTT he is not likely to be found wanting; as a product of American statesmanship his election reflects no credit upon our institutions, and does not encourage the belief that our political methods are becoming purer and and our standard of public life more elevated. And yet, according to PARKE GODWIN, the Democratic Party is becoming stronger in nearly every State of the Union. To which respectable people will be disposed to respond, "So much the worse for the Union."

We give, in another column, the text of a bill introduced in the House of Representatives by Mr. CHITTENDEN, of this State. It is prefaced by a preamble which states in a very succinct manner the facts that make the bill a practical and desirable one. Its provisions are simply that the Secretary of the Treasury shall fund the greenbacks, on application, at their face value, in a forty-year four per cent. bond payable, principal and interest, in gold. We have several times lately called attention to the peculiar opportunity offered by the present financial situation for effective steps toward resumption in 1879. There is not the slightest reason to doubt that, with legal-tender notes worth 94⅓ (as they are when gold is worth 106,) and with money lending at the rates which now prevail at all the financial centres of the country, funding in such a bond as is provided for in Mr. CHITTENDEN'S bill, would gradually and without shock bring the notes to par, and lead the way to complete and permanent resumption. No surer, more simple, or safer method of fulfilling the pledge to resume in 1879 could be devised, and none more sound in principle. We hope that there is sense enough in Congress to take up the question. And since the arguments for and against it have long since become familiar, there should be no objection to passing the necessary legislation before the 3d of March.

In The Spirit of the Times of Dec. 23 was published a story by WILKIE COLLINS, entitled "The Captain's Last Love." That story was reproduced in the English magazine Belgravia for January, and was thence copied into last Sunday's edition of THE TIMES. As the American copyright of this tale was held by The Spirit of the Times, we regret that we unwittingly infringed proprietary rights of which the publishers of that journal ought to have received the entire benefit.

Turkey refuses interference in its internal government, but is willing to receive instruction in details of governing. As if to show how sincere the Sublime Porte is in its schemes of reform, it has decided to ask France for military officers to organize a gendarmerie, and England to send competent financial administrators to rearrange its financial system. The latter scheme is the least practicable of the two. Turkish finances have been a by-word so long that a reorganization is almost as impossible as giving life to the dry bones of a skeleton. Nevertheless, as England is, more than any other nation, interested in restoring the value of Turkish bonds, the experiment will be fairly and laboriously tried if undertaken. Everything productive in Turkey is covered with mortgages in successve layers. There is nothing left to hypothecate but the bangles of the women of the Sultan's harem.

Mayor ELY is reported to be in favor of the bill to abolish the Park Department and transfer its powers to the Department of Public Works. This is a somewhat drastic remedy for the notorious maladministration of that department for which Mr. WILLIAM R. MARTIN has been mainly responsible. If Mr. ELY desires to purge the department of the highly injurious influence of Mr. MARTIN, he can probably find charges enough to warrant the removal of that person without wiping out a department whose executive methods have been in the past, and may still be made in the future, a source of pride and profit to the City. Recent developments in the Windsor Hotel litigation have brought out very clearly the peculiar characteristics of Mr. MARTIN, and by investigating the manner in which that gentleman's real estate speculations have affected his public duties, his extreme unfitness to occupy his present position might be readily demonstrated. It is not very many years ago since Mr. MARTIN was interested in proceedings to take certain lands for the City, and, when, on the valuation of GRATZ NATHAN and HUGH SMITH, confirmed by Judge CARDOZO, there was awarded to Mr. MARTIN the sum of $285,000 for several lots, the assessed valuation of which in that year was only $82,000.

During the last ten days the Police Commissioners claim to have exhausted the greater portion of the street-cleaning appropriation in removing snow and ice from an extent of streets representing about three per cent. of the entire street-mileage of the City, and they represent that unless they can be allowed to spend in advance part of their appropriation for the rest of the year, the snow which may fall between now and the end of the month must be allowed to lie. For this prodigal waste of public money the Commissioners are solely to blame. Had the snow been removed as it fell, the main thoroughfares could have been kept clean at less than one-fifth of the cost required to quarry out with pickaxes the miles of frozen snow which their neglect allowed to accumulate. The Legislature should at once relieve the City from the incubus of this set of political jobbers by transferring the business of street-cleaning to other hands, and by breaking up the Ring which has made the entire administration of the Police Department a pernicious farce. No bill for giving to these men the power to make contracts for work which they have so signally failed in performing, or to obtain fresh opportunities for jobbery in letting out the business of removing offal, should receive a moment's attention.

THE DEBATE ON THE COMPROMISE.

The discussion of the commission scheme, which has been going on since Saturday in the Senate, is not without its grotesque side. When Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN gravely remarks of the bill, that "legislation for the right may be denounced, when it conflicts with partisan zeal or interests, and its promoters may be ostracized," it is amusing to reflect that the denunciation and the ostracism are all on the Senator's side. The authors of this remarkable plan for giving the election of President into the hands of a fortuitous commission have constantly assumed that they are the patriots, and all who oppose them are partisans or self-seekers. Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN'S own words convey this insinuation, and it is being diligently repeated all over the country, by the journals and the speakers who are sustaining the bill. To undertake to point out that there is not a scintilla of authority for the the measure in the Constitution; to show that it is a degradation of the Supreme Court by selecting its members for political duties on the sole basis of their partisan predilections; to anticipate the evils which may grow from such a precedent; or to expose it as an invitation to fraud and sedition and threats of rebellion in the future—to do any of these things, which many candid and disinterested observers have done, is to bring down on one's head the harshest accusations. Under the circumstances, Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN, talking about being "ostracized," and quoting "truth crushed to earth shall rise again," has a slight air of Pharisaism. This appearance is not confined to the Senator from New-Jersey. All the members of the committee who have yet spoken for the bill in the Senate have seemed to stand apart and thank GOD that they are not like those Republicans who are opposed to this scheme.

Yet the arguments of Messrs. MORTON, SHERMAN, SARGENT, DAWES and HAMLIN against the bill have been entirely unobjectionable in spirit. These Senators have not appealed, as they very naturally might have done, to "partisan zeal or interests." They have contented themselves with applying to the measure of the committee the tests of constitutionality and expediency. They have asked if it had any warrant in the Constitution; if it was designed to carry out any power vested in Congress or in any department of the Government; if it agreed with the interpretation of the Constitution adopted by the framers of that instrument and applied to the early elections of President. To these questions the answer is not difficult. As Mr. SARGENT very aptly argued yesterday, if the Constitution had been intended to place in Congress the power to discriminate between returns it would have done so clearly. Much more certainly would it have been precise and unmistakable in any language intended to authorize Congress to appoint a commission to discriminate between returns. We quoted the other day, from a speech made a year since by Senator EDMUNDS, a sweeping denial of the power of Congress to do anything of this kind. That was the Republican view of it. In the same debate Mr. JOHNSTON, Democrat, of Virginia, said:

"Whenever we go outside of Congress to get any man or set of men for the purpose of deciding this question, we go outside of the spirit of the instrument and outside of its letter."

That was the Democratic view of it. Both parties were practically agreed at that time, and if a proposition of the remarkable character of the one now under discussion had then been submitted, when there was no pressure of outside interests, and no incipient panic brought on by the concerted bluster of a lot of disappointed politicians, we venture to say it would not have received a score of votes.

But it is not simply in its assumption of extra-constitutional power that this bill deserves condemnation. It deserves it quite as much on the ground of expediency. One of the first duties of our public men is to keep the Supreme Court above suspicion. If that cannot be done, the one great conservative safeguard of our system is broken down. That court has been of incalculable service to the country. It was under the influence of a long series of its sagacious decisions that the Constitution was got into working shape, and the powers of the different branches of the Government were distributed. It has been at various times the bulwark of the independence of the Executive and of Congress, of the authority of the Federal Government, and of the rights of the States. In the exercise of its normal functions, it may at any time be called on to decide on questions concerning which political feeling runs high. If it is kept to its well-defined field, if it is not allowed to make an occasion for its decisions or to have an occasion made by any department of the Government, it is not likely to be suspected of partisanship. Any decision it may give on the principles involved in a specific case, brought before it by actual litigants and based on a definite transaction, will be respected. But if its members are to be called from the bench according to their political prejudices, to exercise discretion in a case over which the Constitution gives them no jurisdiction whatever, then the impregnable impartiality of the Court will soon be disbelieved in. Already we see one Judge who has been accepted as most likely to be the fifth on the commission, receiving the support of the Democrats for Senator from Illinois, and coming within two votes of an election. The spectacle is an unseemly one; but it is no worse than that presented by the concurrent committees in dividing the other four judges on the commission according to politics. It is not safe to trifle in this way with the standing of the Court. Therein lies one of the most serious objections to the committee's measure, and one to which no member of the committee has as yet furnished any reply worth considering.

LIFE INSURANCE IN THE LEGISLATURE.

If in a multitude of motions there is efficacy, life insurance will be subjected to a tolerably complete review before the Albany law-givers close their work. Inquiries have been ordered, and others are pending, in both branches of the Legislature. Mr. BIXBY'S proposition in the Senate calls for a detailed statement of the expenses of companies in the way of salaries, counsel fees, medical examinations, and so forth—a good enough demand, so far as it goes, but one that, to be really effective, should be so enlarged as to embrace commissions paid upon new policies, commissions paid on renewal premiums, and all percentages, bonuses, or other methods of benefiting officers in addition to fixed salaries. The defect in the statements of expenditure as now rendered is, that no distinction is made between the cost of new business and the cost of managing old business; a delusive average being accepted, which conceals to some extent the inexcusable extravagance of ordinary management. A loose classification in other respects enables managers to hide the prevailing wastefulness and to perpetuate improper devices for swelling the sums paid to one or more of their own number. If Mr. BIXBY'S resolution is to accomplish anything, the head of the Insurance Department must be directed to prepare his interrogations with special reference to this species of information. Another resolution, introduced by Mr. SELKREG, is intended to exact from a New-York company a more minute statement respecting its bonds and mortgages than it appears to have supplied to the department. The prescribed form of returns provides for the particulars sought, and the fact that they were not supplied voluntarily by the company, nor exacted by the department under the power it already possesses, is a reflection upon both.

Mr. FISH'S resolution, amended by Mr. SPINOLA and adopted yesterday by the Assembly, covers an important class of the companies' investments, and that about which policy-holders may most naturally be solicitous. We refer to the real estate loans. By the action of the Assembly, the companies are required to show the amounts of these loans, when they were made, where the real estate is situated, the amount of interest paid, the amounts of principal or interest in default, and, finally, the counsel fees paid in connection with the loans. As the majority of the companies will confine themselves to the letter of the requirements, and will give no more details than they are compelled to; it is to be hoped that here again the Insurance Department will so frame its queries as to reach the root of the risks and abuses that underlie the mortgage securities. The appraised value of the property at the time of the mortgage and the appraised value now are essential to the just appreciation of a loan. A clue to mysteries, financial and otherwise, will be had if, in addition to these particulars, the companies show by or through whom the loans were applied for, and to whom the amounts loaned were in the first instance paid. Mr. SPINOLA'S suggestion that the counsel fees shall be particularized will, we fear, hardly touch a notorious evil. It is certain that the owner of mortgaged property very often pays excessive charges out of the sum obtained, and that these payments quite as often take the shape of fees to counsel as of commission to intermediate agents. It is difficult to believe that the companies are in all cases ignorant of the abuse; but as it is scarcely likely to form part of their records, we doubt if the action of the Assembly will elicit the precise information which is needed to judge of the companies' management, or of the true history of many of their mortgages.

The bill presented to the Assembly by Mr. HAMMOND appears, from the telegraphic notice of its provisions, to relate mainly, if not wholly, to the kinds of investment that are available for the employment of the companies' funds. The range has from time to time been widened to meet the supposed necessities of the companies, or to create a market for some form of security, not eligible for corporate investment under the law as it stood. While the immediate effect has generally been to enable the companies to find more profitable use for the funds at their command, we think that the increased hazard has usually been proportionate. The first condition to be enforced in legislating for life insurance companies is perfect security. Of course, the theory of the system presupposes a constant compounding of interest upon investments. But, inasmuch as the New-York companies base their calculations upon a four-and-a-half per cent. rate of interest, and inasmuch as the "loading" which is included in these calculations is sufficient for all the purposes of judicious management, policy-holders' "profits" included, it is manifest that for a long time to come the companies will have little difficulty in obtaining unexceptionable securities that will yield more than sufficient to cover the bona fide exigencies of their business. Even if circumstances were different, the proper course would be, not to tolerate laxity in the use of the policy-holders' funds in order to obtain a higher rate of interest, but to throw upon the companies the onus of reconstructing their calculations, or of reducing their expenses to admit of the maintenance of the requisite reserve. What is wanted now is, a revision of the investments tolerated by the law with a view to greater stringency. The latitude possessed by managers is too wide already. An examination of the published returns will show that many of the companies have invested portions of their funds in shares and other securities which no Trustee should be allowed to touch. Railroad shares, the shares of mining and manufacturing enterprises, the shares of trust and other financial corporations, however worthy of the attention of an individual investor, using his own money and incurring no risk from which others besides himself may suffer, are utterly unfit for the purposes of life insurance accumulation. Yet we have companies whose assets include securities of this nature. Any legislation in respect of investments should, therefore, be in the direction of a more absolute limitation of the companies' choice, rather than in an enlargement of the discretionary power whose exercise has, in many cases, been attended with lamentable results.

And this consideration brings us to the most obvious evil of the life insurance system as at present administered—the irresponsibility of the Trustees, Directors, and officers of the companies, and the helplessness of the policy-holders in the presence of a mismanagement which jeopardizes their interests. There is, indeed, room for comprehensive legislation on the general subject. The frauds and abuses that are kept up with impunity under the form of amalgamations and receiverships are too flagrant to be allowed to continue much longer. The audacity with which companies in a questionable condition, working under the laws of other States, contrive, under the pretense of investigation elsewhere, to put off a more searching investigation here, exemplifies a weakness in the law that is as dangerous as it is disgraceful. The limited authority of the Insurance Department and the fact that the companies whose affairs it was created to supervise frequently intrigue to control its management, point to reforms that shall both enable and compel it to guard more vigilantly the rights of the policy-holders and the public. Desirable as these changes are, they will fail to effect the desired purpose unless they be accompanied by an assertion of the power of the State to hold to a strict account those who, having the management of companies, pervert the power they wield, or by negligence endanger the interests they should protect.

GRIFFIN'S FLY-FLAP.

Complications increase. Even in the midst of our animated discussion as to the right and propriety of leaving the question of the Presidential succession to arbitration or a game of poker, we find ourselves confronted with a new demand from the Kingdom of Samoa. Hon. G. W. GRIFFIN, presumably GEORGE WASHINGTON GRIFFIN, late United States Consul to the unbreeched Kingdom of the Samoan Islands, is on his way to Washington to ask that Section 9, Article 1, of the Constitution of the United States, shall be suspended in his behalf. Consul GRIFFIN has been appointed Minister Plenipotentiary of the Samoan Kingdom, to reside temporarily at Washington. It is a way that American diplomatists in Pacific Empires have. The universal Yankee nation has furnished more Ministers Plenipotentiary for China, Japan, Siam, Samoa, and such, than all the rest of the world included. As Minister Plenipotentiary, the illustrious GRIFFIN has been endowed with the sacred fly-flap of the Samoan Kingdom. This sanctified utensil has flapped the flies of Samoa for three centuries. It has never before been bestowed upon a foreigner. As a token of the love which the Samoans have for the United States, it has been given to GRIFFIN. But GRIFFIN is still an officer of the Government of the United States, and a clause of the above-mentioned section and article of the palladium of our liberties prohibits him from receiving any present whatever from any King, Prince, or foreign State. A fly-flap is presumed to come within the limits of this inhibition. Therefore, Consul GRIFFIN, otherwise Minister Plenipotentiary GRIFFIN, journeys to Washington to ask the permission of Congress before he can accept of the sacred fly-flap.

The precedents in this case are numerous and weighty. One of the most recent was the dilemma of SCRUGGS. SCRUGGS was at one time a diplomatic representative of the United States in one of the South American or Central American States. He was chosen arbiter in a commercial dispute in which Great Britain was concerned. He decided in favor of Great Britain, and with so much learning, impartiality, and judicial fairness, that Queen VICTORIA, when she read the report over her morning muffins, declared that SCRUGGS should have a silver inkstand as a reward of merit. SCRUGGS signified his willingness; but the ninth section of the first article of the palladium of our liberties was in the way. Due application was made to Congress, and as that was at a time when, according to Representative WILLIS, the Borgias held sway in both branches of the National Legislature, SCRUGGS got his inkstand and was blest. If SCRUGGS could have his inkstand, why should not GRIFFIN have his fly-flap?

From what we are permitted to know of this consecrated instrument, its arrival in Washington at this critical juncture is most opportune. To explain: The Government of Samoa, as students of modern history well know, was invented and patented by Col. STEINBERGER, late United States Commercial Agent in the Samoan Islands, and more lately Prime Minister of the Kingdom of Samoa. Under his system, which was a sort of reversible and double-back-action one, the kingdom could be converted into a republic at short notice "at the pleasure of the wearer." The King could be President, and the Parliament could be changed into a Congress. At last accounts, however, the Parliament, known as the Toimna, and the Faipule, or House of Lords and House of Commons, retained their several euphonious and monarchical titles. The House of Lords, or Toimua, held in fee simple the sacred fly-flap, and when Mr. GRIFFIN was clothed with ministerial and plenipotential authority this magical emblem was given into his hand. Both houses of Parliament assembled at his house and instructed him in the use of the fly-flap. He was to rest his chin on the top of the sacred staff, and with his right hand draw the sacred fly-flap thrice and slowly across his face. This performance, we are credibly informed, has never failed to check the progress of revolution and civil war. It can be readily understood how timely is the arrival in Washington of Mr. GRIFFIN and his fly-flap.

It is said that Consul (otherwise Minister Plenipotentiary) GRIFFIN was visibly affected when these honors—that is to say the fly-flap and staff—were thrust upon him, and declared that since the Constitution of his country forbade his immediate acceptance of them, he would, like SCRUGGS with his silver inkstand, ask Congress to allow him to receive the sacred trust. May we not, in the interest of an imperiled palladium, express the hope that Mr. GRIFFIN may constitutionally receive the fly-flap? It is very well known that the Democratic Party has declared that it "will not play" unless the Presidential succession is left out to an arbitration or a game of seven-up. Mr. WATTERSON and several other gifted statesmen have declared that they will have a revolution unless we leave the case to a referee. It is like a man's taking off his own coat and drawing cuts to decide whether he shall put it on again or give it to the other fellow. Old-fashioned conservative people say that this is revolutionary. Here is the opportunity for Consul GRIFFIN and his fly-flap. For three hundred years, says the Samoan chronicle, the exhibition of this sacred utensil has been efficacious in times of political distress and incertitude. On an appointed day let the learned physicians who are now engaged in providing an extra-constitutional remedy for the existing crisis invoke the fly-flap. As superstitious people say when they try to change their luck at cards by turning their chairs around three times, "it will do no harm."

If the sequel should prove that Mr. GRIFFIN'S fly-flap has arrived in the nick of time, we shall have thereby received some adequate return for the many favors which we have bestowed upon the Kingdom of Samoa. We gave the benighted people of that country STEINBERGER, a representative Government, and pantaloons. When STEINBERGER invaded the islands with civilization and a brass howitzer, he found the natives lying naked in the sand, destitute of any political system, and subsisting on the spontaneous fruits of the earth. He elevated them in the scale of humanity, and, drawing the line at calf-skin boots and tall hats, provided that the royal Parliament should clothe their upper and nether extremities in this fashion. The islanders have paid taxes, not without a murmur, and have supported a constitutional monarchy from that day to this. STEINBERGER and STEINBERGER'S Cabinet are no more, it is true. But the grateful recollection of the Samoans has manifested itself in their new gift of the sacred and anti-revolutionary fly-flap. Let Congress pause in its consideration of the Compromise bill and try GRIFFIN'S fly-flap.

THE GROWTH OF NEW-YORK.

Prior to 1820 the City of New-York had the ordinary growth of a seaport town, at the mouth of a river giving it one hundred and fifty miles of navigation into a comparatively undeveloped country.

In 1756 its population was	10,381
In 1773	21,786
In 1786	23,614
In 1790	33,131
In 1800	60,489
In 1810	96,373

The opening of the Erie Canal and the construction link by link of the leading railroads, which gave it communication with the great lakes and the valleys of the Ohio and the Mississippi, marked the second period of its growth. Its progress at once became more rapid.

	Population.	Rate of Increase. Per Cent.
1820	123,000	..
1825	166,000	33
1830	202,000	21¾
1835	270,068	33⅜
1840	312,710	15½
1845	371,223	31½
1850	515,547	38¾
1855	629,810	21¾
1860	814,254	29½

This makes an average increase at the rate of twenty-eight per cent. every five years. Since 1860 the increase has not continued at this rate. The population in 1875 was 1,200,000, which, roughly stated, shows an increase of barely sixteen and two-thirds per cent. for every five years during the period between 1860 and 1875—a period marked by civil war and the organization of our City Government by TWEED and his compeers on a system of wholesale plunder.

But in order to gain a more just idea of a city's progress, its suburbs should be included. It is seldom that the civil and natural boundaries of a city coincide. A growing city expands on all sides for five or ten miles. In the present point of view, New-York should be regarded at least as including Brooklyn, if not all the area within five miles of the City Hall. Brooklyn has increased from 7,155 in 1820 to 266,661 in 1860, and 488,252 in 1875. This, added to 1,200,000, would give New-York, viewed as a metropolis, a population of 1,638,252 in 1875, making it the third greatest city of the world—viz., London, 3,489,428; Paris, 1,851,792, and then New-York.

The most of this rapid growth has been in the region above Twenty-third street. Of the population in 1875, one-half is estimated to be above Thirty-fourth street. New-York has grown with a rapidity hitherto unknown in any of the great centres of population in the world. London does not show such changes and renovations in its ancient districts, nor is so much done there for external appearance and beauty. Obstructed by no natural boundaries, and confined by no rivers, its increasing population has spread out on every side and covered a large area of country, with a population less dense than that of any other great city. Its residences of the better class have been built at the West End, have extended over the spaces between the Thames and Hyde Park, and around that and Regent's Park have quite filled up with elegant and comfortable English dwelling-houses spaces that twenty-five years ago were as destitute of improvements as the regions to the west and north of Central Park now are.

The laboring classes in London are in full enjoyment of all the advantages of cheap rapid transit. Model tenements two stories in height, with ample light and ventilation cover vast spaces of ground at considerable distances from the great centres of trade, with which they are connected by water, the fare being one penny. What has been done in London can be accomplished here. Some mode of rapid transit by steam from City Hall Park to Harlem River is just now the most pressing want of the people of this City. An underground road connecting at Forty-second street with the Fourth Avenue Road, now in full tide of successful operation, would accomplish the desired result more speedily than any other plan, inasmuch as more than one-half of the work is already done. If Mr. VANDERBILT would put himself at the head of an enterprise of this kind, and carry it successfully through, he would earn the gratitude of every man, woman, and child who travels up and down in this City. The leading tendency and direction of the City growth arise not only from the longitudinal shape of the island, which allows expansion in one direction alone, but because of the superior beauty and attractiveness of the high elevations and natural features of the unoccupied portion, and for the reason that right in its centre has been constructed the Central Park. The regions in the upper part of the island have been laid out with parks and boulevards on a scale of regal magnificence and at a ruinous cost to the people. There are at this present writing streets and avenues enough opened on the West Side alone to accommodate an additional population of 1,000,000. We hear in certain quarters that this region will be the site of the future magnificence of this Metropolis. It has become fashionable to discourse on the age of imperial magnificence on which this City is about to enter. We are told that it cannot be urged against these improvements that they are extravagant and involve too large an expenditure; that New-York has no greater glory than the freedom with which she spends money on public institutions and for public purposes; that judicious expenditure for public purposes is the highest sort of economy; that we are an imperial people, giving freely to the public—our imperial selves—the most magnificient and costly entertainment, and much more to the same effect.

These who indulge in these high-sounding phrases have plunged this City irrevocably in debt—and are daily increasing that debt—for the sole purpose of enriching a band of political adventurers, who use their power to lay tribute on the capital, labor, and industry of this community. The melancholy results of our present system of so-called municipal Government are seen at every step: Misery and want among the poor; impoverishment of those who once were rich; confiscation of property by means of oppressive taxes and assessments; paralysis of trade, and a general complaint of hard times; immigration has fallen off; work is not to be had; rival cities, not crushed to the ground by outrageous taxes, (imposed to support an army of political bummers,) are gradually capturing our trade. If the people of this City cannot devise some plan of administering Municipal affairs on a basis of honesty, economy, retrenchment, and reform; cannot drive out the horde of adventurers now sucking the life-blood of the community; cannot summarily put a stop to any further increase of the City debt—the growth of New-York is a thing of the past.

ACTING GOVERNOR OF OREGON.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

PORTLAND, Oregon, Jan. 24.—Hon. S. F. Chadwick, Secretary of State and Acting Governor of Oregon, arrived here this morning on the steamer from the East. He proceeded without delay to Salem and assumed the duties of Chief Executive. Cronin is in San Francisco. He is expected to return home on the next steamer.

ALBANY.

GENERAL BUSINESS IN THE HOUSE.

A LONG TALK ON RESOLUTIONS—RUSH OF NEW BILLS—BILL RELATING TO NEW-YORK—A PETITION FOR THE ABOLITION OF THE USURY LAWS SIGNED BY NEW-YORK MERCHANTS.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ALBANY, Wednesday, Jan. 24, 1877.

The House did a great deal of talking this morning, but it was not the sort which is profitable or calculated to advance business. There was a long contest over the appointment of a couple of clerks and messengers, as there nearly always is over such matters. Gen. Spinola advocated the claims of his man, who had served in the Army, in a tragic speech, which was received by the House with much laughter, and that most incorrigible little "wind-bag," Mr. Purdy, of Westchester, talked and talked, and then went on and talked again, with a dreary persistency which was only checked at last by the previous question. Mr. Fish called up his resolutions calling upon insurance companies to report the amount of their loans on real estate and counsel fees, and accepting the amendment to it which had been offered by Gen. Spinola, the resolution as amended was adopted. The only person who made any vigorous opposition was Mr. Ecclesine, who continued to offend Mr. Mitchell by his remarks, and a sharp passage at arms took place between them.

There was a rush of bills this morning. Mr. Fish introduced the bill the chief provisions of which were given in THE TIMES of Monday last. The sections providing for the election of the Controller and Corporation Counsel have been struck out; also the sections reducing the Park Department to one head and the Board of Police to two Commissioners, abolishing the Dock Department, vesting the street-cleaning business in the Board of Health, abolishing the office of attorney for the collection of arrears of personal taxes, and merging the Department of Buildings in the Department of Public Works. Mr. Fish gives as his reason for doing this that it makes the bill clean, and entirely free from partisan features. It has gone to the Committee on Cities.

Mr. Corsa introduced a bill authorizing the Department of Public Works to take charge of the completion of the Third Judicial District Court-house, and abolishing the present commission. The second section makes the following distribution, so to speak, of the building when it is finished: All the rooms of the first floor are to be set apart for the use of the Second District Police Court; the second floor is set apart for the District Court of the Third Judicial District; the prison attached to the building is put in charge of the Department of Charities and Corrections, and the bell-tower in charge of the Fire Department.

The old trouble between the wharf owners in New-York and the canal bootmen of the State, reappeared again in the Assembly this morning, when Mr. Bissell, of Niagara, presented the bill, well known here, providing that a charge of 75 cents per day shall be made for canal-boats when unloading or loading at any pier or wharf, and 50 cents per day when not so engaged; and further, that no canal-boat shall be made to pay wharfage to the owners of both piers when it is lying between the two, notwithstanding that it may have changed its location during the day. Mr. Bissell made a strong effort to get the bill sent to the Canal Committee, but after a sharp contest he was beaten, and it was sent to the Committee of Commerce and Navigation. The Chairman of that committee, Mr. Webb, has introduced a bill reducing the pilotage fees through Hell Gate. This also is an old bill, having failed in the last session.

More trouble is threatening about the plans of the new Capitol building. The Albany people seem highly offended at the course of the Commission of Architects in modifying and altering the plans of the original architect, who is a resident of the city. They are endeavoring to have these revised plans done away with, and so much of the building as has been erected under them torn down and rebuilt on the first design. This morning a resolution was introduced and adopted instructing the Ways and Means Committee to ascertain whether it was advisable to do this.

Mr. Cowdin presented the following petition for the repeal of all laws on the subject of usury:

NEW-YORK, August, 1876.

To the Honorable the Senate and the Assembly of the State of New-York:

The undersigned respectfully petition your honorable bodies to enact a law repealing all laws on the subject of usury, and to substitute therefor the following provisions, to constitute title III., chapter IV., part II. of the Revised Statutes of the State of New-York:

SECTION 1. The rate of interest upon the loan or forbearance of any money, goods, or things in action shall continue to be $7 upon $100 for one year, and after that rate for a greater or less sum, or for a longer or shorter time.

SEC. 2. No person or corporation shall, directly or indirectly, take or receive in money, goods, or things in action, or in any other way, any greater sum or greater value, for the loan or forbearance of any money, goods, or things in action than is above prescribed. Whenever any greater sum or value than is above prescribed shall be taken or received, the excess over said $7 upon $100 allowed as above provided may be recovered from the person or corporation so taking or receiving the same. Provided that such action is commenced within two years from the time the excess in said transaction occurred.

SEC. 3. All other laws on the subject of usury or regulating the interest of money, except those laws which allow interest to be taken in advance, and allow exchange on drafts and checks, are hereby repealed.

Parker, Wilder & Co., No. 62 Leonard street; Wendell, Hutchinson & Co., No. 61 Worth street; Barbour Brothers, No. 134 Church street; William C. Langley & Co., No. 78 Worth street; H. B. Claflin & Co., No. 140 Church street; Rhoades, Grosvenor & Co., No. 54 White street; Howard, Sanger & Co., No. 462 Broadway; John M. Davies & Co., No. 386 Broadway; E. S. Jaffray & Co., No. 350 Broadway; Fanbri, Chauncey & Co., No. 48 South street; Howland & Aspinwall, No. 54 Beaver street; Grinnell, Minturn & Co., No. 78 South street; Hess Brothers & Co., No. 20 Wall street; A. Iselin & Co., No. 48 Wall street; A. A. Low & Brother, No. 31 Burling slip; Greenebaum Brothers & Co., No. 1 Nassau street; O. M. Bogart & Co., No. 3 Nassau street; Kuhn, Loeb & Co., No. 31 Nassau street; Garner & Co., No. 10 Worth street; Maitland, Phelps & Co., No. 45 Exchange place; Eugene Kelly & Co., No. 45 Exchange place, and 700 others, representing bankers, manufacturers, and mercantile firms, with capital of not less than $500,000,000

Mr. Cowdin also introduced a bill intended to effect this, which was ordered printed. Mr. Cowdin said it was hardly necessary to observe that the signers of it are men distinguished alike as prominent members of society and for the large and varied interests they represent. Neither the petition nor the bill which I have presented expresses the full sentiments of many gentlemen most deeply interested. A very considerable number of our leading business men desire that, while in the absence of any stipulation the rate of interest shall be 7 per cent. per annum, any other rate expressly agreed upon shall be equally lawful. This, however, is more than the petitioners ask for. What they do want is that our usury laws shall not be either constantly evaded or totally disregarded. It is well known that the present law declares that whoever receives more than 7 per cent. per annum for money is liable to forfeit the amount involved, and, moreover, subjects himself to imprisonment or fine, or both. As good citizens, the petitioners feel that a revision of the law is imperatively demanded by common morality, a desire for good government, and the best interests of the people.

Senator Morrissey introduced a bill to-day permitting the payment of assessments for local improvements in the City of New-York any time during the year to the Clerk of Arrears, who shall discharge the liens.

Senator Gerard introduced a resolution amending the Constitution so as to consolidate the Superior and Common Pleas Courts of the City of New-York with the Supreme Court. It is the same resolution introduced by him last Winter. A similar resolution was offered in the Assembly by Mr. Langbein.

STATE REGIMENTS DISBANDED.

ALBANY, Jan. 24.—On the recommendation of the Inspector General, the Adjutant General has disbanded the following organizations of the National Guard: Second Battalion of Infantry, Lieut. Col. Michael Timpane, of Troy; Nineteenth Battalion of Infantry, Lieut. Col. Daniel Torbush, of Newburg, and the One Hundred and Sixth Battalion of Infantry, Col. Henry Baldwin, of Steuben County.

ART NOTE.

Buyers of pictures may be able to pick up a few good things at Schenck's sale, to take place to-day at the auction-rooms on Liberty street, near Nassau. There is a large picture, by Thomas Moran, giving sky and air effects in his well-known manner, also a small Winslow Homer, representing a Salem girl, with Salem in the distance, and one of Henry's careful, accurately drawn paintings. The foreign painters present exhibit a low grade of talent.

WASHINGTON.

A SHARP PARLIAMENTARY CONTEST.

FERNANDO WOOD'S MOTION TO REFER THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE—THE COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO SEND FOR PERSONS AND PAPERS—DEMANDS OF THE REPUBLICANS REFUSED—POINTS OF ORDER OVERRULED.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—A sharp parliamentary contest occurred in the House to-day over Fernando Wood's resolution to refer to a special committee of 11 the Message of the President with reference to the movements of troops in some of the Southern States. The Message was sent to the House in obedience to a resolution offered some time ago by Mr. Wood, and was accompanied by copies of all correspondence and orders in reference to the matter, the accompanying papers filling three large boxes. Mr. Wood's resolution to refer to a special committee authorizes the committee to administer oaths and to send for persons and papers. The Republicans objected to this portion of the resolution upon the ground that it proposed an investigation into the conduct of the President, notwithstanding the fact that the President had furnished the House with all possible information touching the movements of troops. Demand was made that the accompanying documents should be read before action on Mr. Wood's resolution. After considerable discussion touching the rights of a member to demand the reading of the papers, the Speaker overruled the objection on the ground that the rules required the Message only to be read. Mr. Banks then raised the point of order that the committee could not be granted power to send for persons and papers without suspending the rules; the Message should be referred in the ordinary way to a special or standing committee, and if such committee should ascertain, after examination of the matter referred to them, that additional authority is needed to make their investigation, it would be time enough then to ask for such authority. The Speaker held that the clause objected to in Mr. Wood's resolution was in the nature of instructions to the committee, and on this ground overruled Mr. Banks. An appeal taken from this decision was tabled by a party vote, after which the resolution was passed. Mr. Wood stated that it was desired to know whether any law had been violated in moving troops, and interferring with Legislatures in Virginia, Florida, Louisiana, and South Carolina; but the fact that an investigation is ordered before the contents of the documents which the President sent to the House are known, and upon which he based his action, shows that the investigation has been directed for partisan purposes.

THE PACIFIC RAILROADS BILL.

MAJORITY AND MINORITY REPORTS SUBMITTED TO THE HOUSE—BOTH BILLS REFERRED TO THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—The House Committee on Pacific Railroads to-day reported the bill extending the time for completing the construction of the Northern Pacific Railroad, and also the Texas Pacific Subsidy bill. Majority and minority reports accompanied the last named bill, the views of the minority being presented by Mr. Kasson. Both bills were referred to the Committee of the Whole. An effort was made to obtain unanimous consent to fix days for the consideration of the bills, but Mr. Holman objected, which sends them to the foot of the calendar. This places the Texas Pacific bill in a position from which its friends will experience much difficulty in extricating it. The session is so far advanced that it cannot be reached in Committee of the Whole, unless it can be taken up out of its regular order. This is not probable, as a two-thirds vote would be required to set aside prior orders to proceed to its consideration. Besides, several regular appropriations are yet to be considered in Committee of the Whole, and these will require nearly all the remaining time between now and March 4. An effort will be made on Monday next to suspend the rules and fix a day for the consideration of the Northern and Texas Pacific bills, but the prospect for obtaining the necessary two-thirds vote is not encouraging to the friends of the measure. The friends of the Texas Pacific hope to be able to accomplish their object in having a day fixed for its consideration by uniting with the friends of the Northern Pacific and naming the same day for the consideration of both bills.

THE SIOUX INDIANS.

THE BILL AGREED UPON FOR CARRYING INTO EFFECT THE TREATY OF LAST SUMMER—OPPOSITION TO THE SIOUX BEING REMOVED SOUTH.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—The House Committee on Indian Affairs to-day agreed to report a bill providing for carrying into effect the treaty with the Sioux made last Summer by the Sioux Commission, under which the Indians relinquish their title to the Black Hills. The committee was unanimous in favor of the bill, except the fourth section, which authorizes the removal of the Sioux to the Indian Territory. The people of Arkansas, Missouri, and Texas are opposed to the Sioux being removed south, and this section was struck out by a vote of 5 to 4. The rejected section is to be offered in the House, the Commissioner of Indian Affairs being strongly in favor of removing the Sioux to the Indian Territory. Should the bill pass, as amended, the Sioux will probably be removed to the Upper Missouri.

BANKING AND CURRENCY LAWS.

THE LIABILITIES OF STOCKHOLDERS OF NATIONAL BANKS—SEVERAL AMENDMENTS REPORTED BY THE HOUSE COMMITTEE.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—The Committee on Banking and Currency to-day reported to the House a bill amending section 5,200 of the Revised Statutes by inserting therein the words "surplus funds," so as to provide that the liabilities of stockholders of national banks shall at no time exceed one-tenth part of the amount of the capital stock and surplus funds actually paid in.

The committee also reported a bill repealing section 3,412 of the Revised Statutes, which requires that national banks shall pay a tax of 10 per cent. on the amount of notes of any person or of any State banking association issued for circulation and paid out by national banks.

The same committee also reported a bill repealing the act which limits the legal tender of silver to $5.

THE BULGARIAN ATROCITIES.

MINISTER MAYNARD'S OFFICIAL REPORT TO THE DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—The President, in response to a resolution of the Senate, has transmitted to that body the official documents received at the Department of State from Minister Maynard concerning the revolt in Bulgaria, including the report on the subject by Eugene Schuyler, the Secretary of Legation and Consul General at Constantinople, who says that the burning of villages, and the murders and atrocities committed were clearly unnecessary for the suppression of the insurrection, for it was an insignificant rebellion at best, and the villagers generally surrendered at the first summons; nor could they be justified by the state of panic, because that was over before the troops set out on their campaign. It has been claimed that the massacres and outrages in Bulgaria were not ordered by the Porte, and that it even had no knowledge of them. However that may be, it is certain that nearly all those who particularly distinguished themselves for their cruelty and barbarity were rewarded, decorated or promoted by the Porte, or have since held high positions in the Army. On the contrary, an attempt has been made to punish some of those who did their best to act in a legal manner and to spare innocent men.

TILDEN'S BARREL OF MONEY.

TESTIMONY OF HON. W. B. NASH, ONE OF THE SOUTH CAROLINA ELECTORS—$50,000 OFFERED TO HIM TO VOTE FOR TILDEN—A SOUTH CAROLINA BANKER HIS TEMPTER.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—Hon. W. B. Nash, (colored,) of Columbia, S. C., testified before the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections this morning. In reply to questions from Senator Morton, he stated that he is a member of the South Carolina Senate, and one of the Presidential Electors of that State; knows a man named Childs, who is President of the Carolina National Bank; had an interview with Childs at his [Childs'] house, on the day previous to the meeting of the South Carolina Electoral College; Mr. Childs invited witness to come to his house; during the interview Mr. Childs and witness talked about the political situation in South Carolina, and Childs remarked to witness that if South Carolina was to have a good government and be prosperous in the future, Hampton must be the next Governor, and the only way in which this could be brought about was to have the Senate, of which witness is a member, seat the Democratic Senators from Edgefield, Laurens, and Abbeville counties, and for them to recognise the Democratic House. Mr. Childs told witness that he [Childs] had $20,000 which he would give witness if he would get votes enough in the Senate to seat the Democratic Senators from the three counties before mentioned; witness told Mr. Childs that he [witness] was in favor of seating the Democratic Senators from Edgefield and Abbeville, and that he had so expressed himself at the first meeting of the Senate in November last, but he was not in favor of seating the Democratic Senator from Laurens, and that he could not take the money offered, or do what Mr. Childs wanted him to in relation to having the Democratic House recognized by the Senate; witness mentioned to Mr. Childs, just as he was about leaving, that he [witness] could not call on him [Childs] next day, as requested, as he had to attend the meeting of the Electoral College; Childs remarked to witness that he would give him $10,000 cash if he [witness] would cast his vote for Tilden and Hendricks, and that after witness had so cast his vote Childs would give him $40,000 additional; witness refused the offer, and told Mr. Childs that he [witness] was a Republican, and that his [witness'] people would be very angry at him if he should vote for the Democratic candidates; Mr. Childs told witness that as soon as he [witness] got his $70,000, he could go to Europe or any other place and live. Witness replied: "Yes, and have people pointing their fingers at me as I pass along the street." Witness refused Childs' offers, and as he was leaving, Childs remarked: "Remember, Nash, this is graveyard talk." Witness understood that the $20,000 was to come from some merchants or lawyers living at Charleston, S. C., but he did not know where the $10,000 or the $40,000 which was promised him if he would vote for Tilden was to come from. He never met Smith Wead or a man named Reynolds from the North.

Senator Kernan cross-examined the witness at some length without bringing out anthing in addition to what he had already testified to, save that witness had a talk with Gen. Hampton previous to his conversation with Mr. Childs. Witness' conversation with Gen. Hampton was on the politics of the State in general, and Mr. Childs had told witness that Gen. Hampton had told him that he was much pleased with the way in which witness talked. The morning of the meeting of the Electoral College of South Carolina a newspaper stated that witness was going to save the country and cast his Electoral vote for Tilden. Several persons asked witness about it, and he, in a joking manner replied, "Yes, of course I am." When he went into the room where the College met he was asked about the way in which he should vote, and he replied, "Well, gentlemen, I know where some one can get $50,000 if they will vote for Tilden." Witness has seen Childs since the Electoral College met, and Childs asked witness to say nothing about the conversation they had in relation to money. Witness told Mr. Childs that he should say nothing about it except what was true.

MANAGEMENT OF THE CAMPAIGN.

TESTIMONY OF PHILADELPHIA TELEGRAPH OPERATORS—NOTHING DEFINITE ASCERTAINED.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—The Committee on the Powers, Privileges, and Duties of the House in Counting the Electoral Vote to-day examined Harry O'Neil, whose duty in the Western Union Telegraph Company' office at the Continental Hotel, Philadelphia, is to receive and check messages. He testified that on the 7th, 8th, 9th, and 10th of November he received messages from Secretary Cameron, W. H. Kimble, R. W. Mackey, Mr. Hoyt, and Major Norris, to be sent to Florida. He did not recollect the names of the persons to whom they were sent. He remembered that a telegram sent by Mackey spoke of a person in Bedford whom he had seen, and about sending a special messenger to Florida, but remembered nothing about money or troops.

Mr. Lawrence objected to the asking of questions as to the contents of telegrams when the sub-committee of the two houses had the telegrams themselves in their possession.

Mr. Tucker replied that it was proper to conduct the examination in this way, as in searching among the telegrams furnished by the Western Union Telegraph Company the telegram from Mr. Mackey might not be found.

Mr. Lawrence said to pursue this course of examination was to disregard established rules, and if continued the examination of witnesses would become a mockery. The committee overruled Mr. Lawrence's objection.

The witness was further examined about the sending of the telegrams by the persons above named, but did not remember their contents, and therefore could give no distinct statements concerning them.

J. W. Dyer, in charge of the Western Union Telegraph office at the Continental Hotel, Philadelphia, testified that he saw the telegram sent by Mackey, but it would be impossible for him to state its contents; he presumed it was about the election, as he remembered only something about a messenger being sent somewhere.

Frank Gessner, Herman Shussler, and M. C. Gross, telegraph operators in Philadelphia, were severally examined on the same subject, but they had no recollection of the contents of telegrams.

The committee adjourned until to-morrow morning.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—The Secretary of the Treasury to-day issued the thirty-eighth call for redemption of 5-20 bonds of 1865, May and November. The call is for $10,000,000, of which $7,000,000 are coupon bonds and $3,000,000 registered bonds. The principal and interest will be paid at the Treasury on and after April 24, next, and the interest on the bonds will cease on that day. The following are the descriptions of bonds:

Coupon Bonds.—$100, Nos. 21,351 to 25,508, both inclusive; $500, Nos. 26,701 to 31,500, both inclusive; $1,000, Nos. 62,401 to 70,550, both inclusive.

Registered Bonds.—$50, Nos. 301 to 400, both inclusive; $100, Nos. 4,501 to 5,300, both inclusive; $500, Nos. 3,251 to 3,600, both inclusive; $1,000, Nos. 12,001 to 13,350, both inclusive; $5,000, Nos. 4,751 to 5,100, both inclusive; $10,000, Nos. 8,201 to 9,300, both inclusive.

Capt. Eric Gabrielson, of the Revenue Marine Corps, has been assigned to the command of the Revenue steamer Stevens, now fitting out at Baltimore.

Commissioner Williamson, of the General Land Office, has directed E. A. Protois, of that office, who was charged last year with the investigation of certain land frauds committed in South-west Missouri, to proceed at once to Jefferson City, Mo., for the purpose of assisting the United States District Attorney in the prosecution of the parties indicted at the last term of court for forging and uttering applications for additional entries of public land under the Soldiers' and Sailors' Homestead act.

The President has appointed the following Commissioners to test and examine the fineness and weight of the coins reserved by the several mints during the year 1876: Hon. J. L. Chamberlain, of Maine; Profs. R. E. Rogers and W. H. Chandler, of Pennsylvania; Thomas Price, of San Francisco; J. E. Hilgard, of Washington; Hon. J. P. Putnam of Massachusetts; Hon. John C. New, of Indiana, A. J. Drexel, of Philadelphia; A. W. Lesserring; of Pennsylvania, and E. B. Elliott, of Washington. The commission meets at the Philadelphia Mint on Feb. 14 next.

The receipts from internal revenue to-day were $698,499 40, and from Customs, $417,284 89.

MAKING NEW SENATORS.

A NEW DEMOCRATIC SENATOR.

JOHN R. M'PHERSON ELECTED IN NEW-JERSEY BY STRICT PARTY VOTE—THE REPUBLICANS NOMINATE SECRETARY ROBESON AND BREAK FOR OTHER CANDIDATES.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

TRENTON, Jan. 24.—The great question as to whether any of the 41 Democratic Legislators would develop into an independent voter was settled at the joint meeting held at noon to-day. Mr. McPherson's work had been too thoroughly done to fail in the supreme moment, and, contrary to the wild rumors with which the air had been filled all day—contrary to the fears of the friends and the hopes of his enemies—he received the solid vote of his party and was duly declared Mr. Frelinghuysen's successor. The vote of the Republicans was a genuine surprise to the crowds of spectators on the floor and in the galleries. Instead of naming Mr. Frelinghuysen, for whom they had unanimously declared the day before, at the separate meeting of the two houses, the entire 40 voted for George M. Robeson. This action of Mr. Robeson's party, in his own State, was a very graceful supplement to the report of the Democratic Judiciary Committee in Washington, and coming, when it did, from the joint meeting, proved that it was not a hollow compliment, but a sincere effort to elect him Senator. When it was seen that the Democratic vote remained solid, the Republicans began to change their votes for other candidates, in order to express individual preferences, and to afford the independent Democrats an ample list of worthy Jerseymen to select from. Those of Mr. Green's adherents who have been loudly asserting that Mr. McPherson failed to represent the highest character and cultivation of the State, ought to have been able to satisfy their consciences by voting for Courtlandt Parker, or Senator Frelinghuysen, or Mr. Phelps, or Secretary Robeson—all of whom were named before the result of the roll-call was announced—but they preferred Mr. McPherson, and he is, therefore, their Senator.

The Lower House, after having finished its routine business, took a recess at a few minutes before 11 till 11:45. At that hour Speaker Rabe called them to order, and they lay back in their seats awaiting the arrival of the Senators. Precisely at noon, the doors of the Assembly Chamber were thrown open, and the Senators, with President Abbett at their head, filed in. They seated themselves in the chairs which had been placed in the aisle in anticipation of their coming. President Abbett ascended to the Speaker's desk, and the business of the convention was begun by the reading of the minutes of both houses, showing their action separately yesterday on the Senatorial question. Then, on motion of Mr. Rabe, the balloting commenced. As the long list of 81 names was called through by the Clerk, anxiety was manifest among the members of both parties. Senator Abbett, the head of the check list, emphatically declared John R. McPherson to be his choice. Mr. Ashley, who followed, created some surprise among those who had not been let into the secret of the change in the Republican caucus nominee by casting his vote for George M. Robeson, the Secretary of the Navy. The 40 other Republicans followed in his wake, while each of the 41 Democrats, as his name was called, announced his adhesion to John R. McPherson, the caucus nominee of the party. When the last name had been called, it was apparent that Mr. McPherson's election had been accomplished. A stampede from Secretary Robeson to other candidates began at once, Senator Hobart leading by changing his vote from Robeson to Frelinghuysen. Senators Kirk and Hill and 25 others followed in quick succession, casting votes for Parker, Frelinghuysen, and Phelps, till, when the end had been reached, the Secretary had only a loyal 11 left. In the break, Courtlandt Parker received 18 votes, Senator Frelinghuysen 10 votes, and Hon. William Walter Phelps one vote, the last being cast by Assemblyman Cunningham of Passaic. "Perhaps," suggested Mr. Brigham, blandly, "some of our Democratic friends would like to change their votes." But the 41 sat stolidly still, and McPherson's majority remained intact. President Abbett made formal declaration of the election; Mr. Rabe moved that the proceedings be certified to the Governor, and, the joint meeting rising, the two houses parted company.

Much speculation has been provoked by the action of the Republican caucus, held an hour previously to the joint meeting, as to the causes which led to the nomination of Mr. Robeson. The caucus had, as already announced, given their nomination to Senator Frelinghuysen. When the members went into caucus assemblage this morning, the committee who had been appointed to find out and report the lay of the land assured them that two Democratic votes had been pledged to Mr. Robeson if the 40 Republican votes could be secured for him. The nomination was therefore given to him, and the Republicans went in joint meeting with a reasonably strong confidence in his success. Some say that the scheme miscarried because the Democrats had not enough backbone to stand by their promises. Others say that they do not believe that the men upon whom the hopes of Republican success were built ever intended to redeem their pledges—that they made them with the preconceived design of breaking them. It is even said that their overtures to the Republicans were suggested by McPherson himself. "They hoped," so this view is stated, "to lead us to believe that we had secured the two votes beyond question, and that no negotiations would consequently be made with more vulnerable Democrats." The least likely explanation of the matter is that given by some enemies of Mr. Robeson, who say that they do not believe that the Secretary had any promise of Democratic support, and that the story that he had was an empty pretense which he used as a leverage to secure the Republican caucus nomination. "Of what advantage would the empty honor prove?" was asked. "Why," was the response, "a complimentary nomination gives Robeson a prior lien on the next Senatorial caucus nomination."

The break from the caucus when it became apparent that Robeson had failed of his nomination is scarcely an indication of the Secretary's want of favor among his party friends. It was mainly for the diversion of the Democrats, in the hope that the men who had smothered their hatred of McPherson beneath the vote they had cast for him, might find courage enough in the general change of votes to change them from the party nominee, and as many names as possible were put forward by the Republicans, so that the disaffected Democrats might have a variety of candidates to choose from. If any one had in this prevalent confusion cast his vote for any one of the Republican candidates, the whole Republican strength would have gone to that candidate at once.

THE KANSAS SENATORSHIP.

TWO BALLOTS TAKEN—NO CHOICE MADE.

TOPEKA, Jan. 24.—Following is the result of ballots taken in the Legislature to-day for a United States Senator from this State:

	First Ballot.	Second Ballot.
Harvey, Republican	27	27
Osborn, Republican	26	25
Plumb, Republican	25	24
Simons, Republican	23	24
Sears, Republican	20	22
Stellings, Republican	12	12
Martin, Democrat	13	13
Root, Greenback	1	3
Blair, Democrat	2	2
Lowe, Republican	2	..
Pomeroy, Democrat	1	..
Robinson, Democrat	..	1

THE WEST VIRGINIA SENATORSHIP.

WHEELING, Jan. 24.—One ballot was taken to-day for United States Senator with the following result: For the short term, Price, 24; Hereford, 21; Walker, 16. For the long term, H. G. Davis, 24; Faulkner, 24.

THE GEORGIA SENATORSHIP.

ATLANTA, Jan. 24.—The following is the result of the first ballot for United States Senator: Norwood, 96; Hill, 78; Smith, 21; H. V. Johnson, 11; D. A. Walker, 4. Both houses then adjourned till 10 o'clock to-morrow morning.

THE ILLINOIS SENATORSHIP.

THE EFFORTS OF THE LEGISLATURE—FURTHER COMPLICATIONS REPORTED—THE STRUGGLE BETWEEN THE SEVERAL PARTIES.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

SPRINGFIELD, Jan. 24.—The nomination of Judge Lawrence by the Republicans staggered the Democrats, several of whom threatened to vote for him unless Anderson was withdrawn. The independents and Democrat caucused this morning, the former nominating Judge Davis, who was promptly accepted by the latter. The Republicans had concluded to abandon the contest, as the election of Davis seemed inevitable until the discovery that two Democrats had determined to stand by John C. Haines, an independent Senator from Chicago, to vote for him and hold the balance of power. The Republicans encouraged them by giving over 60 votes for Haines, when the Democrats began to retaliate by voting for Lawrence. At this point, after six joint ballots, there was an adjournment. To-morrow the fight will begin where it left off to-day. Ten Democrats have pledged themselves to vote for Lawrence to-morrow if necessary, and Davis, who came within two votes of the prize, will not get it unless a compact is made with the Democrats, the independents, and the two bolting Democrats. John Russell Jones is here organizing a fight for Washburn. He is trying to get 10 men to speak to Washburne to-morrow and force the Republicans to take him up. If this is done, it will probably precipitate Lawrence's election by a number of Republicans and Democrats. The Independents say they have nearly got through with the Democrats, and after to-morrow will be ready to treat with the Republicans; but the Republicans will prefer an alliance with the Democrats, if it can be made to elect a Republican. The Democrats and Independents have decided to night to stick to Davis for two or three ballots to-morrow, while the Republicans will give Haines votes until the Independents break away from the Democrats to vote for Col. Plumb, of La Salle, uncle of one of the Independents, after which Plumb will be dropped, and the Independents be offered a Republican to vote for, perhaps Lawrence or Logan. The Democrats say they will vote with the Republicans to elect Lawrence if Davis is not elected on the third ballot. The Republicans distrust them. The last two ballots to-day were as follows:

	Thirty-eighth Ballot.	Thirty-ninth Ballot.
Davis	96	82
Haines	56	69
Lawrence	39	42
Raum	..	4
Plumb	..	3
Parish	..	1
Scattering	7	..

AMUSEMENTS.

ENGLISH OPERA.

Yesterday's representation of "Faust," at the Academy of Music, was remarkably good, and it attracted, as did its predecessor, an audience that tested the seating capacity of the house as severely as the most exacting manager could wish. Miss Kellogg, who was the original Marguerite in this country, has interpreted the part so often as to render a detailed notice of its characteristics quite superfluous. The artist portrays the personage with exceeding simplicity, but with all requisite emotion and grace, and at no point of her work is the tunefulness of Gounod's lovely and fluent music impaired by any tendency to subordinate the lyric to the dramatic element of the opera. The nice balance which is thus preserved, results in a prominence of the best-known numbers allotted to Marguerite of which an inclination to overact often robs them. A better rendering of all the heroine's music American audiences are not likely to hear. Last night, as heretofore, testimony to this effect was adduced at the wonted stages of action, and the pretty and expressive measures chanted by Marguerite at the spinning-wheel; the brilliant jewel-song, and the love-passages later on in the garden-act, were given with infinite taste and precision. In Valentine's death-scene, Miss Kellogg was equal to the emergency, and her emotional power found utterance in acting of decided pathos and force. "Faust" introduced, besides the American créatrice of Faust's victim, Messrs. Maas, Peakes, and Carleton, and Mrs. Seguin. With a little more warmth and vivacity, Mr. Maas' Faust would bear advantageous comparison with most representations of the character; Mr. Peakes' Mephisto is a clever bit of imitation; Mr. Carleton, aside from an inclination to now and then vary the time of his music—notably in the duel trio, when he slackened the movement of the apostrophe to Marguerite's medal, and then hurried on at a break neck pace—did all that could be done with Valentine and Mrs. Seguin portrayed Siebel in the winning way which long since established her firmly in the favor of the public. The chorus and orchestra were worthy of the principal artists. To-morrow night "The Flying Dutchman," with Miss Kellogg and Mr. Carleton in the leading rôles, will be performed for the first time in this City.

BRIEF MENTION.

Dr. Herman Linde will recite "Julius Cæsar" at Steinway Hall this afternoon.

Mr. Oliver Doud Byron acts in "Across the Continent" at the Eagle Theatre during the remainder of this week.

Mr. De Vivo has arranged with Miss Emma Abbott for a series of concerts, to begin on or about Feb. 5, and to take place at Chickering Hall.

The members of the New-York Choral Union and persons desirous of joining the society are invited to meet this evening in the chapel of the church at the corner of Twenty-second street and Fourth avenue, for rehearsal of the oratorio called "Malchus."

THE WEATHER.

INDICATIONS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25—1 A. M.—In the Middle and Eastern States, rising and high barometer, diminishing north to west winds, very generally colder and clear weather.

VIOLATION OF NEW-JERSEY LICENSE LAWS.

TRENTON, Jan. 24.—Edward O'Harra, of Hudson County, was to-day sentenced to pay a fine of $1,000 on conviction of selling liquor without license, a like amount for selling tobacco under the same condition, and to stand committed in the Hudson County Jail until the fines are paid.

THE CHARTER OAK LIFE.

HARTFORD, Jan. 24—At the hearing to-day before the legislative Committee on Insurance, on the petition of 11 police-holders asking for an investigation into the affairs of the Charter Oak Life Insurance Company, the petition was withdrawn at the request of the petitioners.

THEY SHOUT FOR TILDEN, BUT—

The San Francisco Post says: "A prominent Democratic lawyer of Washington, well acquainted on this coast, writes under a recent date to a friend here that Gen. Miller was then in the capital, and adds good-naturedly that he had no need to give himself any airs, for though he is the messenger, he is only part of a college, and a Republican one at that. The Democrats can beat that all to pieces. 'We've got a man here,' writes the correspondent, 'who is a whole college in himself, and was not elected either. Cronin, of Oregon,' he continues, 'is a constant cause of crooning on our side. Nobody knows who is President, but though it is a profound secret, most of us believe it to be Hayes. This must be told, as we are all shouting for Tilden yet, even with Cronin on our shoulders.'"

FATAL POLO ACCIDENT.

A London paper says: "Further information has reached this country of the polo accident which caused the death of Capt. Clayton, Ninth Lancers. The statements with reference to the cause of the occurrence are somewhat conflicting, but it appears that by some means, either through a collision with another player, or the pony throwing its rider, Capt. Clayton sustained a severe injury to the spine. He lingered in a state of insensibility for several hours, and subsequently died during the night. His remains were interred with military honors on the 27th ult., and the levée and entertainment which were to have taken place on Boxing Day had to be postponed."

GENERAL MISCELLANY.

A BANKRUPT SAVINGS BANK.

THE ABINGDON SQUARE INSTITUTION—FIRST MEETING OF THE DEPOSITORS AND BOARD OF TRUSTEES—A DISCOURAGING OUTLOOK.

A meeting of the Depositors' Committee and Board of Trustees of the bankrupt Abingdon Square Savings Bank was held last evening in the bank building, No. 23 Abingdon square, for the purpose of having a conference in regard to the affairs of the bank. Mr. George W. Winant presided. Mr. Frank Thompson, the Receiver, was present, as were also Mr. Charles W. Schumacker, the President, and Mr. B. T. Burnham, Vice President of the bankrupt concern. In calling the meeting to order, Mr. Winant stated that it had been called to confer in reference to the outstanding liabilities and assets of the bank, and to see what could be done for the benefit of the depositors. It had been stated that a number of the Trustees had offered to advance sufficient money to make up the deficiency, pay the depositors, and take the assets of the concern as security; and it had also been rumored that the Receiver was "slaughtering" the property of the bank, by selling it at forced sales on a bad market, for less money than had been offered for it in cash. He thought, however, that the property which had been disposed of had been sold for all it was worth. A long and rambling discussion followed, in regard to the past and present condition of the bank, and the future prospects of the depositors getting their money, which, however, resulted in nothing particularly encouraging. So far as the depositors are concerned, Mr. Burnham denied that the mortgages held by the bank on Brooklyn real estate were second mortgages.

Mr. Winant stated that the assets still remaining in the hands of the Receiver were valued on his books at $52,231, and asked how much money the Trustees were willing to advance of this amount to pay the depositors. Mr. Burnham thought the meeting had not yet reached that point. He had never heard of any proposition to advance any money. Mr. Mohlman, another Trustee, had heard of some plan of that kind at one time, whereby they would assume the indebtedness, dispense with the Receiver, and go on with the business. A depositor renewed the question previously asked by Mr. Winant, as to how much money the Trustees would advance toward paying the depositors, taking and holding this real estate as security. In reply, Mr. Burnham said that so far as he was concerned he was willing to do all he could for the benefit of the depositors, but if the young man meant by his question to ask how much money he was willing to advance out of his own pocket, he should answer not a cent. He had served the bank for years without fee or hope of reward, and he did not think he ought to be expected to do anything more.

Mr. Thompson, the Receiver, stated that he had sold sufficient property to realize about 15 per cent. of the liabilities, and that he had applied to the court for permission to pay over that amount. The papers were sent to Albany on Saturday last, and he expected to make the dividend in about two weeks. He stated further that there were assets in his hands, the nominal value of which was sufficient to pay about 50 or 60 per cent. more; but he doubted if one-fourth of that sum could be realized at present. There are negotiations pending whereby one man proposes to take seven of the Broadway (Williamsburg) lots under a building contract for nine months at $1,500 each, and give $5,000 bonds for the performance of the contract, giving the bank a first mortgage on the property. The meeting then adjourned.

THE EAST RIVER TRAGEDY.

ANOTHER STATEMENT OF THE AFFAIR—A CHILIAN SAILOR ARRESTED ON SUSPICION—THE CASE STILL A MYSTERY.

A Chilian sailor named Antonio Morreleau was arrested yesterday by Detective Shelley, of the Seventh Precinct, on suspicion of being the man who accompanied the woman who was mysteriously drowned, on Tuesday morning, at the foot of Market slip, East River. In addition to the apprehension of Morreleau, some new evidence affecting the circumstances of the woman's death was obtained, but a doubt still exists as to whether she was murdered or simply a victim of accidental drowning. Thomas Currier, a sailor, temporarily residing at No. 31 Monroe street, called at the Seventh Precinct Station early yesterday, and volunteered the information that Morreleau, according to his own admission, met on Monday night an abandoned woman, whom he invited to accompany him on board the schooner Zingara, lying at Pier No. 37. The woman accepted his invitation, and went with him to the wharf, but on attempting to step on board the vessel slipped and fell into the river. According to Currier, Morreleau further admitted that he made no effort to save her from drowning. Detective Shelley subsequently ascertained that Morreleau had enlisted on Tuesday afternoon as a common sailor on the United States frigate Colorado, at present lying at the Brooklyn Navy-yard. The detective, armed with the necessary warrant, and accompanied by Currier, boarded the Colorado in the afternoon, and immediately arrested Morreleau, whom he arraigned before Justice Flammer, at the Essex Market Police Court. Michael Sullivan, the man found by Patrolman Behan on Pier No. 37, was also taken to the court, and repeated the statement made by him on the previous day. Currier made the following statement:

I reside at present in a boarding-house at No. 31 Monroe street; I first met Morreleau on or about the 10th inst., at No. 351 Water street, where he informed me that he was a shipmate of Frank Brown, a friend of mine employed on board a schooner lying at the foot of Market street. Yesterday morning Morreleau, while at No. 31 Monroe street, said to me, "I came very near drowning a woman last night." I asked how it happened, and he answered, "I went to take a woman aboard the schooner, when she slipped and fell into the river. She yelled and called out my name, and I got frightened and ran away, and somebody came running along and got her out."

Notwithstanding the fact that Currier's statement was corroborated by John Hill and Thomas C. Brummitt, Morreleau denied the truth of the assertions. He was, however, committed to the Tombs with the prisoner Sullivan, to await the result of an investigation by the Grand Jury. Currier, Hill, and Brummitt were sent to the House of Detention.

REVIVALISTS IN JOHN STREET.

A TEMPORARY REFUGE IN THE OLD METHODIST CHURCH—THE DUTCH CHURCH TO BE OBTAINED—YESTERDAY'S PRAYERS.

The down-town prayer-meeting that began on Monday in Underwriters Hall has taken up its quarters in the Sunday-school room of the old Methodist Church in John street, so that for a time, at least, it is to be a very near neighbor of the Fulton street noonday meeting. Mr. E. E. Seldon was the leader yesterday, and the congregation numbered more than 100, very few of whom appeared to be bankers and brokers. References were made in several of the prayers to the history of the edifice in which the meeting was assembled. One speaker deplored the conversation he had overheard, where one man said: "Oh! your meeting is all very well, but So-and-so is in it, and I can't have anything to do with him." This provoked the expression from an enthusiastic brother that if they only felt that they were right it wouldn't make any difference about the individuals who are connected with it, for then they could defy even the devil himself to come in and disturb them. A man who said he had been brought up the "wrong way," and avowed himself a skeptic of the first water, wanted a religion that was practical, that would last even when the two or three who were gathered together had gone out to their business. The eager brother who followed this man, in his prayer gave thanks that the religion of our fathers and brothers was the "real Simon pure stuff." A middle-aged man told how, when he was boarding in the neighborhood, he was converted in the old Methodist Church to a sense of sin and righteousness. [A voice—"Me, too!"] He said that he had been in the habit of drinking a good deal, and often sat on the stoop of the house. To another question from the skeptic, an impatient brother was tempted to say that the meeting was no place for insincere men, whom God looked through and through, and they would better not come there, for God had more important business to attend to than that. The last brother who spoke said the skeptic needed some strong answers, and there he would be assured that he could get in answer to prayer something that he could feel in his hand. He was in the midst of an entertaining story about the Mormons when, another brother sharply reminded the leader that the closing hour had come. Dr. Patton will lead to-morrow at the 3:30 o'clock meeting.

Mr. B. B. Dyer reported yesterday that in reply to the letter sent to the Supervising Architect at Washington, asking for the privilege of using the old Post Office building, he had received a note saying that the requests would be submitted to the Supervising Engineer in the building. Mr. Dyer said that would settle it in their favor, as the Engineer had expressed his willingness that the church should be thrown open to the prayer meeting.

RAILROAD ACCIDENT.

BENNINGTON, Jan. 24.—The Montreal express train which left New-York last evening, was thrown from the track by a broken rail near Dorset this morning. A portion of the train went down an embankment. One passenger was slightly injured.

THE ASHTABULA DISASTER.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 24.—A special dispatch from Ashtabula says the following testimony was taken to-day: H. P. Hepburn sworn: Is Mayor of Ashtabula; was at the bridge within half an hour after it fell; the whole wreck was then wrapped in flames and was burning fiercely; knows nothing of any orders being given not to throw water on the wreck; is assistant civil engineer on the Franklin division of the Lake Shore Road.

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION.

AN APPROPRIATION MADE FOR THE MONTH OF JANUARY—THE SUBJECT OF APPROPRIATIONS DISCUSSED GENERALLY—THE EXPENDITURES FOR LAST YEAR.

The Board of Education held a special meeting yesterday afternoon to consider the subject of making an appropriation for a portion of the present year. Commissioner Dowd, Chairman of the Finance Committee, made the following report:

The Finance Committee respectfully report that it is necessary that appropriations should be made sufficient in amount to pay the salaries for the month of January, and for the needed supplies through the depository; also for rent, fuel, gas, and other articles, the procuring of which cannot wait the final disposition of the fund at our command, and therefore submit herewith for your approval, a resolution intended to meet the necessity:

Resolved, That $308,700 of the moneys apportioned by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment for the purposes of public instruction for 1877 be appropriated to the several purposes and in the specific sums named herein, the payments to be made therefrom in accordance with the by-laws, rules, and regulations of this board.

The resolution then recites in detail the various purposes for which this sum should be appropriated, the same being those ordinarily covered by the monthly expenditures of the board.

Commissioner Dowd said that the amount named for January was one-twelfth of the amount allowed by the Board of Apportionment for the year's expenditure, except in some instances of quarterly payments of rent.

Commissioner Beardslee wanted the amount doubled, and moved an amendment to that effect, saying that January was almost gone and that an appropriation should be made for February, or the schools would have to be closed, as it would be a misdemeanor to incur liabilities which there was no money to meet.

Commissioner Dowd said that the Controller and Chamberlain only paid appropriations monthly, and that there was no more reason why the schools should be closed on the 1st of February than there was that they should have been closed on the 1st of January.

Commissioner Beardslee's amendment was lost, 7 voting in favor of it and 12 against.

Commissioner Halstead moved, as an amendment, that the appropriation for the Committee on Supplies be increased from $25,000 to $50,000, which was lost, only 6 voting in the affirmative and 13 in the negative.

On the vote being announced, Commissioners Halstead and Beardslee asked to be excused from further service on the Committee on Supplies, Commissioner Halstead saying that he would not incur liabilities for which there was no appropriation, and that it seemed to him that the board had lost confidence in the Committee on Supplies. On motion of Commissioner West the application of Commissioners Halstead and Beardslee to be excused from service was tabled, all voting in the affirmative except the two Commissioners. The report of the Finance Committee, as originally presented, was then adopted by a vote of 15 to 4.

The following resolutions, presented by Commissioner Walker, were adopted:

Resolved, That the Committee on Salaries and Economy be authorized to secure the opinion, in writing, of

FINANCIAL AFFAIRS.

SALES AT THE STOCK EXCHANGE—JAN. 24.

SALES BEFORE THE CALL—10 A. M.

2100	West. Un	72⅞	2000	Lake Shore	57⅜
900	do	73	300	do	57⅛
100	do	72⅞	400	do	57⅜
100	do	73	7600	do	57⅜
300	do	72⅞	5600	do	57⅜
600	do	72⅞	100	do	57⅜
130	N. Y. C. & Hud	104⅞	800	do	57⅛
100	Pacific Mail	25	100	do	57⅜
300	do	25⅛	1800	do	57⅜
600	do	25⅛	400	do	57⅜
1100	do	25¼	1200	do	57⅜
400	Erie Railway	10⅝	100	Pittsburg	99¾
100	do	10⅜	100	Cen. of N. J	93½
200	Mich. Cen	49⅝	700	do	93¾
500	do	49⅝	500	D., L. & W	74⅛
300	do	49⅛	1000	do	74
200	do	49⅝	900	do	73⅞
400	do	49⅝	300	do	73¾
400	do	49⅜	300	do	74
600	do	49⅝	20	do	74¼
700	do	49⅜	300	do	74
200	do	49⅝	600	do	74¼
100	do	49⅞	600	do	74¾
1000	do	49⅜	100	Wab. R. Receipts	67⅛
200	do	49⅜	400	St. Paul. Pf	49⅞
200	North-western. Pf	67⅞	500	do	48¾
100	do	68	58	100	Ohio & Miss	7
100	do	58

GOVERNMENT STOCKS—10:15 AND 11:30 A. M.

$10,000	U. S. 6s, '81, R	$66,000	U. S. 5-20 C., '67
10,000	U. S. 6s, '81, R	700	do
10,000	do	12,114⅝	do
10,000	U. S. 5-20 C., '65	10,000	U. S. 5-20 C., '68
10,000	U. S. 5-20 C., '65	10,000	U. S. 5s, '81, R
$5,000	U. S. 5-20 R., '65	10,000	U. S. 5s, '81, C
10,000	U. S. 5-20 R., '67	10,000	U. S. 5s, '81, C
10,000	do	12,114	do
10,000	do	12,113⅞	do
8,000	do	14,000	U. S. 4½ R., '91
			do
			do
			do

SHIPPING.

WHITE STAR LINE.
FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL. CARRYING UNITED STATES MAIL.

The steamers of this line take the Lane Southern, commanded by Lieut. Maury, U. S. N., going south of the Banks on the passage to Queenstown at the year round.

CELTIC.....SATURDAY, Feb. 3, 8:30 A. M.
ADRIATIC.....SATURDAY, Feb. 10, at 3 P. M.
BRITANNIC.....SATURDAY, Feb. 24, 2 P. M.
CELTIC.....SATURDAY, March 10, at 2 P. M.

From White Star Dock, Pier No. 52 North River.

These steamers are uniform in size and unsurpassed in appointments. The saloon, staterooms, smoking and bath rooms are midships, where the noise and motion are least felt, affording a degree of comfort hitherto unattainable at sea.

Rates—Saloon $80 and $100, gold; return tickets on favorable terms. Steerage, $26.

For inspection of plans and other information apply at the Company's offices, No. 37 Broadway, New-York.

J. J. CORTIS, Agent.

CUNARD LINE S. & N. A. R. M. S. P. CO.
NOTICE.

With the view of diminishing the dangers of collision the steamers of this line take a specified course for all seasons of the year.

On the outward passage from Queenstown to New-York or Boston, crossing meridian of 50 at 43 latitude, or nothing to the north of 43.

On the homeward passage, crossing the meridian of 40 at 42, or nothing to the north of 42.

From Queenstown, via LIVERPOOL.
ABYSSINIA...WED., Jan. 31 | PARTHIA...WED., Feb. 14
ALGERIA.....WED., Feb. 7 | CHINA.....WED., Feb. 21

Steamers marked "so not carry steerage passengers.

Cabin passage, $80, $100, and $130, gold, according to accommodation. Return tickets on favorable terms.

Steerage tickets to and from all parts of Europe at very low rates. Freight and passage office, No. 4 Bowling Green.

CHAS. G. FRANCKLYN, Agent.

GREAT SOUTHERN
FREIGHT AND PASSENGER LINE.
SAILING FROM PIER NO. 29 NORTH RIVER.
WEDNESDAYS and SATURDAYS at 3 P. M.,

FOR CHARLESTON, S. C., FLORIDA, THE GULF, AND SOUTH-WEST.

CITY OF ATLANTA.....SATURDAY.....Jan. 27
GEO. W. CLYDE.....WEDNESDAY.....Jan. 31

SUPERIOR PASSENGER ACCOMMODATIONS.

Insurance to destination one-half of one per cent. Goods forwarded free of commission. Passenger tickets and bills of lading issued and signed at the offices of JAMES W. QUINTARD & CO., Agents,
No. 177 West st., corner Warren.
Or W. P. CLYDE & CO., No. 6 Bowling Green.
Or BENTLEY D. HASELL, General Agent Great Southern Freight Line, 317 Broadway.

STATE LINE.
NEW-YORK TO GLASGOW, LIVERPOOL, DUBLIN, BELFAST, AND LONDONDERRY.

These first-class full-powered steamers will sail from Pier No. 42 North River, foot of Canal st.

STATE OF GEORGIA.....Thursday, Jan. 25
STATE OF INDIANA.....Thursday, Feb. 1
STATE OF PENNSYLVANIA.....Thursday, Feb. 8
STATE OF VIRGINIA.....Thursday, Feb. 23

First cabin, $60, $65, and $70, according to accommodations; return tickets, $110. Second cabin, $45; return tickets, $80. Steerage at lowest rates. Apply to

AUSTIN BALDWIN & CO., Agents,
No. 72 Broadway, New-York.

STEERAGE tickets at No. 45 Broadway, and at the company's pier, foot of Canal st., North River.

LIVERPOOL AND GREAT WESTERN STEAM COMPANY. (LIMITED.)
LIVERPOOL, (Via Queenstown,)
CARRYING THE UNITED STATES MAIL
TUESDAY.

Leaving Pier No. 46 North River as follows:

WISCONSIN.....Jan. 30, at 3 P. M.
WYOMING.....Feb. 6, at noon
DAKOTA.....Feb. 13, at 3 P. M.
NEVADA.....Feb. 20, at 10 A. M.
IDAHO.....Feb. 27, at 3 P. M.
MONTANA.....March 6 at 10 A. M.

RATES OF PASSENGERS REDUCED.

Steerage, $28; intermediate, $40; cabin, $65 to $80, according to state-room. Offices, No. 29 Broadway.

WILLIAMS & GUION.

ATLAS MAIL LINE.
BI-MONTHLY SERVICE TO JAMAICA, HAYTI, COLOMBIA, and ASPINWALL, and to PANAMA and SOUTH PACIFIC PORTS (via Aspinwall.) First-class full-powered iron screw steamers, from Pier No. 51 North River.

For HAYTI, COLOMBIA, ISTHMUS OF PANAMA, and SOUTH PACIFIC PORTS (via Aspinwall.)

ALPS.....Jan. 18
ETNA.....Jan. 27

For KINGSTON (Jam.) and HAYTI.

ATLAS.....Feb. 8

Superior first-class passenger accommodation.

PIM, FORWOOD & CO., Agents.
No. 56 Wall st.

NORTH GERMAN LLOYD.
STEAM-SHIP LINE BETWEEN NEW-YORK, SOUTHAMPTON, AND BREMEN.

Company's Pier, foot of 3d st., Hoboken.

AMERICA...Sat., Jan. 27 | RHEIN...Sat., Feb. 10
WESER.....Sat., Feb. 3 | ODER.....Sat., Feb. 17

RATES OF PASSAGE FROM NEW-YORK TO SOUTHAMPTON, HAVRE, OR BREMEN.

First cabin.....$100 gold
Second cabin.....60 gold
Steerage.....30 currency

Return tickets at reduced rates. Prepaid steerage certificates, $32 currency. For freight or passage apply to OELRICHS & CO., No. 2 Bowling Green.

ANCHOR LINE U. S. MAIL STEAMERS.
NEW-YORK AND GLASGOW

Ethiopia...Jan. 27, 2 P. M. | Bolivia...Feb. 10, 2 P. M.
Victoria...Feb. 3, 9 A. M. | Alsatia...Feb. 17, 9 A. M.

TO GLASGOW, LIVERPOOL, OR DERRY,

Cabins $65 to $80, according to accommodations; Intermediate, $35. Steerage $28.

NEW-YORK AND LONDON.

Elysia.....Jan. 27, 2 P. M. | Italia.....Feb. 10, 2 P. M.

Cabins, $95 to $70. Steerage, $28. Cabin excursion tickets at reduced rates. Drafts issued for any amount at current rates. Company's Pier Nos. 20 and 21, North River, N. Y. HENDERSON BROTHERS, Agents, No. 7 Bowling Green.

ONLY DIRECT LINE TO FRANCE.
THE GENERAL TRANSATLANTIC COMPANY'S MAIL STEAMERS BETWEEN NEW-YORK AND HAVRE. Calling at PLYMOUTH (G. B.) for the landing of Passengers.

Will sail from Pier No. 42 North River, foot of Morton st., every alternate Saturday, beginning with:

FRANCE, Trudelle.....Saturday, Jan. 27, at 3 P. M.

For particulars address
LOUIS DE BEBIAN, Agent, No. 55 Broadway.

NATIONAL LINE—Piers 44 and 51 North River.
FOR LONDON.
HOLLAND.....SATURDAY, Jan. 27, 2:30 P. M.
FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.
Spain...Jan. 27, 2:30 P. M. | Egypt.....Feb. 3, at 9 A. M.

Cabin and steerage passage, and drafts from £1 upward, issued at very low rates. Company's offices No. 69 Broadway. F. W. J. HURST, Manager.

FOR SAVANNAH GA.,
THE FLORIDA PORTS
AND THE SOUTH AND SOUTH-WEST.

GREAT SOUTHERN FREIGHT AND PASSENGER LINE, CENTRAL RAILROAD OF GEORGIA, AND ATLANTIC AND GULF RAILROAD.

WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY.

SAN JACINTO, Capt. HAZARD, SATURDAY, Jan. 27, Pier 43 North River, 3 P. M. GEO. YONGE, Agt., 409 Broadway.

St. LIVINGSTON, Capt. MALLORY, WEDNESDAY, Jan. 31, Pier, foot of 43 North river. 3 P. M. GEO. YONGE, Agent, No. 409 Broadway.

Insurance ONE-HALF PER CENT. Superior accommodations for passengers. Through rates and bills of lading in connection with Central R. R. of Georgia, Atlantic and Gulf Railroad, and Florida steamers City Point and Dictator: also, with the steamer J. H. SCHLEY, which has been placed on the inside route from Savannah to Florida, and offers unsurpassed accommodations.

C. D. OWENS, Agent A. & G. R. R.
GEORGE YONGE, Agent C. R. R. of Ga.
No. 315 Broadway. No. 409 Broadway.

PACIFIC MAIL AND PANAMA TRANSIT STEAM-SHIP LINES.

FOR CALIFORNIA, JAPAN, CHINA, AUSTRALIA, NEW-ZEALAND, BRITISH COLUMBIA, OREGON, &c.

Sailing from Pier No. 42 North River.

For Rio de Janeiro, via ISTHMUS OF PANAMA.
Steam-ship ACAPULCO.....Wednesday, Jan. 31

connecting for Central America and South Pacific ports.

From SAN FRANCISCO to JAPAN and CHINA.
Steam-ship ALASKA.....Thursday, Feb. 1

From San Francisco to Sandwich Islands, Australia, and New-Zealand.

Steam-ship ZEALANDIA.....Wednesday, Jan. 31

For freight or passage apply to
WM. P. CLYDE & CO., or H. J. BULLAY, Superintendent, No. 6 Bowling Green. Pier No. 42 N. R., foot Canal st.

NEW-YORK AND HAVANA DIRECT MAIL LINE.

These first-class steamships sail regularly at 3 P. M. from Pier No. 13 North River as follows:

CLYDE.....SATURDAY, Feb. 3
CUBA.....SATURDAY.....Feb. 10

Accommodations unsurpassed. For freight or passage apply to WM. P. CLYDE & CO., No. 6 Bowling Green. MOKELLER, LULING & CO., Agents in Havana.

NEW-YORK, HAVANA AND MEXICAN MAIL S. S. LINE.
Steamers leave Pier No. 3 North River at 3 P. M.

FOR HAVANA DIRECT.

CITY OF MERIDA.....Saturday, Jan. 27
CITY OF VERA CRUZ.....Wednesday, Jan. 31
CITY OF NEW-YORK.....Wednesday, Feb. 7

FOR VERA CRUZ AND NEW-ORLEANS.
Via Havana, Progreso, Campeachy, Tuxpan, and Tampico.

CITY OF MERIDA.....Saturday, Jan. 27

steamers will leave New-Orleans Feb. 2 and Feb. 23 for Vera Cruz and all the above ports.

For freight or passage apply to
FALKENBERG & SONS, Nos. 31 and 33 Broadway.

HAMBURG American Packet Company's Line, for PLYMOUTH, CHERBOURG and HAMBURG.
HERDER.....Jan. 25 | FRISIA.....Feb. 8
WIRLAND.....Feb. 1 | GELLERT.....Feb. 15

Rates of passage to Plymouth, London, Cherbourg, Hamburg, and all points in England, First Cabin, $100 gold, Second Cabin, $60 gold; steerage, $30, currency.

KUNHARDT & CO., C. B. RICHARD & BOAS,
General Agents. General Passenger Agents.
61 Broadway, N. Y. 61 Broadway, N. Y.

SITUATIONS WANTED.

FEMALES.

THE UP-TOWN OFFICE OF THE TIMES,
No. 1,257 Broadway, bet. 31st and 32d sts.
Open daily, Sundays included, from 4 A. M. to 9 P. M.
Subscriptions received, and copies of THE TIMES for sale.
ADVERTISEMENTS RECEIVED UNTIL 9 P. M.

COMPANION OR HOUSEKEEPER.—BY A very companionable and efficient lady as companion or housekeeper to an aged or invalid lady. Address J. F., Box No. 227 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

COMPANION.—A RESPECTABLE PROTESTANT woman to take care and wait on an old lady; has the best City reference. Can be seen from 10 to 12 at No. 40 East 32d st.

CHAMBER-MAID.—BY A YOUNG ENGLISH Protestant as chamber-maid and seamstress in a private family; can well do a lady if required, or given children; has excellent references. Can be seen for two days at No. 234 East 25th st.

CHAMBER-MAID.—BY A COMPETENT GIRL as chamber-maid or parlor-maid; is willing and capable; first-class City reference. Call at No. 219 East 35th st., second floor.

CHAMBER-MAID.—BY A RESPECTABLE YOUNG Scotch girl as chamber-maid and waitress or assist with washing; has three years' City reference. Call at No. 431 West 40th st., in store.

CHAMBER-MAID OR PARLOR-MAID.—IS first-class for both; has best of City reference from last place. Address C., Box No. 320, TIMES UPTOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

CHAMBER-MAID AND WAITRESS.—BY A Protestants girl; or to assist in light house-work; willing to be instructed. Can be found at No. 343 9th av., second floor.

CHAMBER-MAID AND WAITRESS.—BY A young girl; has six years' City reference from last place. Call at No. 313 East 26th st., third floor, back room.

CHAMBER-MAID.—BY A RESPECTABLE COLored girl as chamber-maid and waitress; good reference. Call or address Ida Berry, No. 349 West 37th st., in the rear.

CHAMBER-MAID AND WAITRESS OR Nurse.—By a respectable Protestant young woman; good reference. Address No. 161 West 27th st., top floor.

CHAMBER-MAID.—BY A PROTESTANT GIRL as chamber-maid or assist with children or waiting; City reference. Call at No. 307 West 12th st.

CHAMBER-MAID.—BY A GERMAN GIRL AS Chamber-maid and to assist with washing and ironing. Call at No. 228 East 41st st., in the store.

COOK—CHAMBER-MAID.—BY TWO SISTERS, in a private family; one as first-rate cook and to assist in washing and ironing, the other as chamber-maid and to assist with washing; six years' City reference from one place. Address No. 369 Isaac., in the bakery.

COOK.—BY A RESPECTABLE WOMAN AS FIRST-Class cook; thoroughly understands games, soups, meats, boning, and larding; is an excellent baker; best reference. Call at No. 631 6th av., in grocery store.

COOK.—BY A RESPECTABLE WOMAN; EXCELlent cook; understands all kinds of soups, meats, poultry and game; good baker; good City reference from last place. Call or address at No. 155 Madison av., for two days, basement bell.

COOK, &c. CHAMBER-MAID, &c.—BY City and respectable young girls; can do good cook, washer, and ironer; the other as chamber-maid and waitress; both willing and obliging; good City reference. Call at No. 145 East 32d st.

COOK.—BY A FIRST-CLASS COOK; THOROUGHLY Understands her business; no objection to the country. City reference. Address No. 244 West 33d st., between 7th and 8th avs.

COOK, WASHER, AND IRONER.—BY A young Scotch woman; or will do general housework; good City reference. Call for two days at No. 341 East 16th st.

COOK.—BY A COMPETENT WOMAN AS FIRST-Class cook; willing to assist with the washing; City reference from last employer. Call at No. 1,096 3d av.

COOK.—BY A FIRST-CLASS ENGLISH COOK, IN private family; superior family cook; seven years' City reference; City or country. Address No. 115 West 19th st.; no cards answered.

COOK.—BY A YOUNG ENGLISH WOMAN, AS FIRST-Class cook, understands her business in all its branches; will not wash; understands marketing. Call at No. 233 6th av.

COOK.—BY A RESPECTABLE GIRL AS COOK, washer, and ironer in private family; is a good baker; best City reference. Call at No. 642 3d av., third bell.

COOK.—BY A FIRST-CLASS COOK; THOROUGHLY Competent; understands her business in all its branches; pastry, game, boning, larding; best City reference. Call at No. 60 East 41st st.

COOK.—BY A NEAT, ORDERLY, COMPETENT Protestant woman in a private family; understands her business thoroughly. Inquire for C. D., No. 241 East 33d st.

COOK.—BY A RESPECTABLE WOMAN AS FIRST-Class cook; understands meats and soups; excellent baker; unexceptionable City reference. Call for two days at No. 244 East 30th st.

COOK.—BY A FIRST-CLASS PROTESTANT COOK in a private family; good City reference; will do coarse washing; City or country. Call at No. 247 West 27th st.

COOK.—BY A COLORED WOMAN IN A PRIVATE family; first-class reference. Call or address No. 241 4th av., rear.

COOK.—BY A RESPECTABLE WOMAN AS GOOD Cook; will assist with the washing; good City reference. Call at 142 West 28th st., two flights up.

COOK.—BY A PROTESTANT GIRL AS COOK IN A private family; 15 years' City reference. Call at No. 386 West 52d st., one flight up.

COOK.—BY A RESPECTABLE GIRL AS GOOD Cook; the best City references from last place. Call at No. 605 2d av.

COOK.—BY A WOMAN FULLY COMPETENT AS First-class cook in a private family. Call at No. 115 West 41st st., near 6th av.

COOK.—BY A FIRST-CLASS FRENCH COOK. IN City private family; first-class reference. Call or address No. 150 East 42d st.

COOK.—BY A YOUNG WOMAN, AS COOK AND TO assist at washing and ironing. Call for two days at No. 211 West 44th st.

COOK.—BY A PLAIN COOK, WASHER AND Ironer; good reference. Call at No. 1,025 6th av.

DRESS-MAKER.—BY AN EXPERIENCED DRESSmaker a few more engagements to work out by the day; has the newest styles and can give City reference. Address M. Y., Box No. 316 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

DRESS-MAKER.—BY AN EXPERIENCED DRESS maker a few more engagements to work out by the day at $1 50; has the newest styles and can give City reference. Address M. Y., Box No. 319 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

DRESS-MAKER.—BY A FIRST-CLASS DRESSmaker the work of a few more first-class families; none to surpass in fitting and trimming; dresses made over equal to new; best of references. Call at No. 234 6th av.

DRESS-MAKER.—A COMPETENT DRESSmaker wants work by the day; ladies' dresses, &c., cut and fitted while waiting. No. 1,256 Broadway, ring second bell.

HOUSEKEEPER.—BY A YOUNG AMERICAN Protestant woman of intelligence as housekeeper in a gentleman's or widower's family; terms moderate; has best City reference. Call at No. 463 4th av.

HOUSEKEEPER.—BY AN AMERICAN LADY of large experience; is a good cook; accustomed to marketing; highest reference. Call or address Housekeeper, No. 308 East 13th st.

HOUSE-MAID.—BY A LADY FOR A GOOD, faithful, intelligent Protestant girl as house-maid; has lived over three years in her family; country preferred. Apply at No. 421 5th av.

HOUSE-WORK.—BY A YOUNG GIRL TO DO general house-work in a private family; lately landed. Call at No. 126 West 50th st., third floor.

HOUSE-WORK.—BY AN OBLIGING YOUNG girl to do general house-work, or kitchen girl good City reference. Call at No. 288 3d av.

HOUSE-WORK.—BY AN ENGLISH PROTESTANT girl, to do general house-work; City or country. Call at No. 325 East 32d st.

HOUSE-WORK.—BY A YOUNG WOMAN TO DO general house-work; plain cook, washer, and ironer; City or country. Call at No. 407 West 25th st.

HOUSE-WORK.—BY A YOUNG AMERICAN girl to do general house-work; willing and obliging; good reference. Call at No. 20 East 36th st.

HOUSE-WORK.—BY A YOUNG GIRL TO DO light house-work in a small family; willing to do anything. Call for two days, at No. 509 East 13th st.

HOUSE-WORK.—BY A RESPECTABLE YOUNG woman; is a good plain cook, washer, and ironer; good reference. Call at No. 26 Prince st.

HOUSE-WORK.—BY A YOUNG GIRL; NO OBjection to the country; good City reference. Call at No. 396 2d av., top floor.

HOUSE-WORK.—BY A YOUNG GIRL TO DO House-work; good reference. Call at 170th st. on Railroad av., Morrisania.

HOUSE-WORK.—BY A YOUNG GIRL TO DO general house-work; is a good washer and ironer; willing and obliging. Call at No. 203 East 65th st.

HOUSE-WORK.—BY A YOUNG PROTESTANT girl to do general house-work; City or country; City reference. Call at No. 407 1st av.

LADY'S MAID.—BY A FRENCH LADY'S MAID; good seamstress and hairdresser; speaks pure French and German well; would take charge or growing children; good references. Call at No. 471 6th av., fancy store.

LADY'S MAID.—BY A PERSON WHO IS A first-class hair-dresser, seamstress, and dress-maker; would make herself useful. City reference. Address K. D., Box No. 325, TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

LADIES' MAID.—BY A GERMAN PROTESTANT; good seamstress and hair-dresser; best City reference. Address C. Stubbe, No. 2 Duane st., corner of Rose st.

LAUNDRESS.—BY A FIRST-CLASS LAUNDRESS in private family; does French fluting, plaiting, and pulling; understands her business; best City reference. Address E. S., Box No. 323 TIMES UPTOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

LAUNDRESS.—BY A VERY RESPECTABLE young woman as laundress in a private family; very best City reference. Call at No. 115 West 16th st.

LAUNDRESS.—FIRST-CLASS; BEST CITY REFerence; private family preferred. Call at No. 111 West 15th st., rear.

NURSE.—BY A YOUNG AMERICAN PERSON; IS fully competent to take care of an infant from its birth; has long experience; best reference. Call or address J. D., No. 118 West 33d st.

FEMALES.

NURSE.—BY AN EXPERIENCED NURSE IN A PRIvate family; competent to take full charge of a baby from its birth; very best City reference. Call at No. 40 East 41st st.

NURSE.—BY A YOUNG GIRL TO TAKE CARE OF children, or do light chamber-work; the best reference. Call at No. 248 West 35th st.; pull the top bell, right side.

NURSE AND SEAMSTRESS.—BY A PROtestant young woman as nurse and seamstress; 15 years' reference. Call for two days at No. 125 West 16th st., rear.

NURSE AND SEAMSTRESS.—BY A NORTH German girl, to take care of growing children and sewing; City reference. Call at No. 23 Grand st., Hoboken.

NURSE.—BY A RESPECTABLE PROTESTANT woman as nurse; can take entire charge from birth; good reference. Call at No. 109 West 33d st., for two days.

NURSE AND SEAMSTRESS.—BY A RESPECTable young girl, Protestant; best City references. Address J. W., Box No. 255 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

NURSE, &c.—BY A YOUNG PROTESTANT GIRL as child's nurse, seamstress, and chamber-maid; four years in her last place. Call at No. 11 West 35th st.

NURSE AND CHAMBER-MAID.—BY A Young American woman as nurse and chamber-maid; good City reference. Call at 306 West 37th st.

NURSE.—BY A LITTLE GIRL TO TAKE CARE OF children; a home preferred before wages. Call at No. 425 West 41st st., top floor.

NURSE.—BY A PROTESTANT GIRL AS CHILdren's nurse; competent and reliable; best references. Call from 10 to 4 o'clock, No. 139 East 40th st.

NURSE.—BY A COMPETENT INFANT'S NURSE; is a good seamstress; City reference. Call for two days at No. 537 3d av.

NURSE.—BY A COMPETENT NURSE; BEST CITY reference. Can be seen at present employer's, No. 53 West 36th st.

SEAMSTRESS.—BY AN EXPERIENCED FRENCH Seamstress, by the day; can do all kinds of family sewing and mending; a good button-hole maker for all kinds of clothes; well recommended. Call all the week at No. 62 West 33d st.

SEAMSTRESS.—BY A COMPETENT SEAMStress; can operate on sewing-machine; willing to assist in other work; good references. Call at or address No. 273 6th av., between 17th and 18th sts., over corset store.

SEAMSTRESS.—BY YOUNG WOMAN IN PRIvate family; take care of grown child and do light chamber-work; three years' best City reference. Apply at No. 409 West 37th st., top floor.

SEAMSTRESS.—BY A YOUNG AMERICAN GIRL, as a nurse and seamstress; understands Wheeler & Wilson's machine; best City reference. Call for two days, or address No. 157 East 52d st.

SEAMSTRESS.—BY A PROTESTANT GIRL AS Seamstress; can operate on Wheeler & Wilson machine; understands dress-making; City reference. Call at No. 143 West 28th st.

SEAMSTRESS.—BY A COMPETENT SEAMStress and operator; can take the entire charge of a linen-room; or as housekeeper; can give best City reference. Call at No. 239 West 26th st., third bell.

SEAMSTRESS.—BY AN EXPERIENCED SEAMStress; cuts and fits; wishes work by week or month; reference from last place. Address all week No. 313 East 56th st.

WAITRESS OR CHAMBER-MAID.—BY A respectable young girl as first-class waitress or chamber-maid; understands all kinds of salads, &c.; three years' reference from her last employer. Call for two days at No. 546 3d av., between 36th and 37th sts.; ring third bell.

WAITRESS.—BY A YOUNG WOMAN AS FIRST-class, in a private family; thoroughly understands the duties of the situation; can take a man's place; has unexceptionable City references. Call at No. 459 6th av., fancy store, near 28th st.

WAITRESS.—BY A PROTESTANT GIRL AS waitress, or as chamber-maid and waitress, in a small private family; good reference from last place. Call at No. 229 West 27th st.

WAITRESS.—BY A RESPECTABLE GIRL AS waitress, in a private family; five years' City reference from last place. Address M. H., Box No. 326 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

WAITRESS.—BY A FIRST-CLASS WAITRESS; understands all kinds of salads; care of silver; can take a man's place; best City reference. Call at No. 488 7th av.

WAITRESS.—BY A RESPECTABLE GIRL AS first-class waitress in private family; best of City reference. Call at No 350 East 19th st.

WAITRESS.—BY A RESPECTABLE GIRL AS first-class waitress; two years' City reference. Call at No. 238 West 16th st., first floor, back room.

WAITRESS.—BY A RESPECTABLE GIRL AS first-class waitress; willing and obliging; good City reference. Call at No. 113 West 46th st.

WAITRESS.—BY A FIRST-CLASS WAITRESS; best City reference. Call at No. 537 3d av.

WASHING.—BY A FIRST-CLASS LAUNDRESS; would go out by the day; can do all kinds of fluting, laces, and fine work, or would take a situation by the month; has the best of reference from last employer. Call at No. 328 East 36th st.

WASHING.—BY A RESPECTABLE WOMAN, to go out by the day; can do all kinds of fluting, laces, and fine-work; would take a situation by the month; has the best of reference from last employer. Call at No. 326 East 36th st.

WASHING.—BY A RESPECTABLE WOMAN, to wash and ironing at her own home, or would go out by the day; good reference. Call at No. 409 West 54th st., second floor.

WASHING.—BY A PERSON TO GO OUT BY THE day to wash, iron, and do house-cleaning; best City reference. Call at No. 132 West 19th st., one flight stairs up, back.

WASHING.—BY A RESPECTABLE WOMAN washing and ironing at home, or would go out by the day; best reference. Call at No. 11 Varick place, basement.

WASHING.—BY A RESPECTABLE WOMAN, gentlemen's or family washing; fluting and all kinds of fineries done in the neatest manner at 75 cents to $1 per dozen. Call on or address K. D., 764 9th av.

WASHING.—BY A COMPETENT LAUNDRESS, either gentlemen's or families'; darning and mending; shirts and cuffs a specialty; terms reasonable; best reference. No. 141 West 41st st.

WASHING.—BY A FIRST-CLASS LAUNDRESS, family washing at her own home; fine bleaching. Call or address Advertiser, No. 139 West 28th st., in bakery.

WASHING.—BY A RESPECTABLE WOMAN; family or gentlemen's washing done up neatly and sent home promptly. Call at No. 115 West 33d st., top floor.

WASHING.—BY A YOUNG WOMAN AS GOOD cook or first-class laundress; has first-class reference. Call at No. 123 West 33d st.

WASHING.—BY A COMPETENT LAUNDRESS; gentlemen's washing at her own house. Call at No. 417 West 32d st.

WASHING.—BY A RESPECTABLE WOMAN washing at her house; is a first-class laundress; good City reference. Call at No. 328 East 36th st.

CLERKS AND SALESMEN.

A RETAIL CARPET SALESMAN OF EXPErience and ability desires to connect himself with a good house; references first class. Address PHOENIX, Box No. 197 Times Office.

MALES.

BUTLER.—IN A PRIVATE FAMILY, OR VALET To one or more gentlemen, by an Englishman; first-class references and New-York references. Address C. T., No. 625 6th av., fruit store.

CARPENTER.—BY A SINGLE YOUNG MAN IN A hotel or private house; has had long experience; will make himself generally useful; can do everything in mending and fitting; no objection to the country; speaks four different languages; best references. Address D. A. R., No. 45 St. Mark's place.

COACHMAN AND GROOM.—BY A RESPECTable Protestant Scotch single man; thoroughly understands his business; careful City driver; excellent groom; honest, sober, willing, and obliging, as references will state. Call or address B. E., No. 140 West 31st st.

COACHMAN.—BY A FIRST-CLASS MAN THAT thoroughly understands his business in all its branches; is an experienced groom and a careful driver; is willing to make himself generally useful; good City reference; wages $30. Address J. K., Box 318, TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, 1,257 BROADWAY.

COACHMAN AND GROOM.—THOROUGHLY Understands his business; willing and obliging; no objection to country; understands the care and treatment of gentlemen's road horses; highly recommended; lived six years in one place. Call or address for two days G. B., No. 436 8th av.

COACHMAN.—BY A FIRST-CLASS MAN; UNDERstands the care of horses, carriages, and harness; good groom; careful City driver; sober, honest, and trustworthy; is willing to country; seven years' best City references from last employer. Call or address R. D., No. 331 West 41st st.

COACHMAN AND GROOM.—BY A COMPEtent single man; has a first-class knowledge of his business; is an experienced groom; careful City driver; is willing and obliging; excellent City references from most respectable families. Call or address C. W., No. 4 East 31st st., private stable.

COACHMAN AND GROOM.—BY A PROTestant young man; excellent groom and valet; expert City driver; eight years' testimonials; leaves employer on account of selling out. Call or address Coachman, No. 912 6th av.

COACHMAN.—BY A SINGLE YOUNG MAN WHO thoroughly understands his business; will be found willing and obliging; City or country; good reference. Call or address M. J., No. 6 West 44th st., private stable.

COACHMAN.—BY A MARRIED MAN; UNDERstands the care of horses and carriages; good groom and careful driver; good vegetable gardener; can milk, attend furnace, and will make himself useful; best City reference. Address J. M., Box 244 Times Office.

COACHMAN.—BY A FIRST-CLASS ENGLISH coachman; four years best City references. Call or address W. P., No. 1,350 Broadway, Wood Brothers' repair shop.

COACHMAN AND GROOM.—IN PRIVATE family by a single man; English; thoroughly understands his business. Call or address F. P., No. 136 East 32 st., last employer's, stable.

COACHMAN, BY AN ENGLISHMAN; IS THOROughly competent in every respect; best of reference from last employers. Call or address W. Coates, No. 107 West 18th st.

COACHMAN.—BY A GENTLEMAN FOR HIS coachman, who has been with him three years; is a good driver, sober, and industrious. Apply from 9 to 11 at No. 56 West 57th st.

COACHMAN.—BY A YOUNG MAN AS COACHman and groom; three years' City reference. Can be seen at No. 108 West 30th st., private stable.

BOARDING AND LODGING.

THE UP-TOWN OFFICE OF THE TIMES.
The up-town office of THE TIMES is located at No. 1,257 Broadway, bet. 31st and 32d sts., Open daily, Sundays included, from 4 A. M. to 9 P. M. Subscriptions received, and copies of THE TIMES for sale.
ADVERTISEMENTS RECEIVED UNTIL 9 P. M.

FIFTH AV., NO. 45, BETWEEN 11TH and 12th sts.—Spacious suites of well-furnished apartments on parlor floor, with or without private table.

GRAMERCY PARK, NO. 137 EAST 21ST st.—An elegantly furnished suite of rooms; parlor floor; with or without private table; best references.

FIFTH AV., NO. 351.—PARLOR FLOOR, BEAUtifully furnished, piano, private bath, &c.; excellent table; liberal terms.

HANDSOMELY-FURNISHED ROOMS TO rent, with board, en suite or singly; references. Nos. 106 and 108 East 23d st.

TWELFTH ST., NO. 73 WEST.—SECOND story (sunny) front and other rooms; single or en suite; good table.

NO. 46 WEST 32D ST.—DESIRABLE SECOND and third-story front rooms, with board, at very moderate price.

NO. 40 IRVING PLACE.—BACK PARLOR AND extension, also other rooms; board if desired; private family; references.

HANDSOMELY-FURNISHED ROOMS, WITH first-class board, in a private family; references. Apply at No. 51 East 23d st.

NO. 3 WEST 30TH ST. — HANDSOMELY-furnished rooms; also, single room for gentlemen, with board; references.

HANDSOMELY-FURNISHED ROOMS, with unexceptional board, for gentleman and wife, or single gentlemen. No. 142 East 55th st.

NO. 118 WEST 49TH ST.—TO LET, WITH board, a double or single room, suitable for gentlemen; terms moderate; references.

TWENTY-EIGHTH ST., NO. 43 WEST.—Handsome rooms; all conveniences; with or without board; references.

NO. 29 WEST 21ST ST.—A DESIRABLE SUITE of rooms, (front,) with board; references.

NO. 148 EAST 20TH ST.—(GRAMERCY Park;) elegant rooms with first-class board.

BOARD WANTED.

BY A GENTLEMAN, AND NIECE WHO ATtends School—A parlor and two bedrooms, large, cheerful, and commodious; good and abundant table indispensable; situation between 23d and 34th sts., 4th and 6th avs., or in the neighborhood; liberal treatment intended and expected; highest references required and given; exceptional opportunity for a private family. Address C. E. A., No. 511 West 23d st.

TWO ADULTS AND MAID WANT A LARGE room on second floor, and a small room on same floor or above, with board, fire, and gas, between 6th and Madison avs.; terms not to exceed $125 per month. Address F. W., Box No. 149 Times Office.

BOARD WANTED—IN EXCHANGE FOR MUSIC and English references. Address INSTRUCTRESS, Box 307 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, 1,257 BROADWAY.

FURNISHED ROOMS.

CENTRAL FURNISHED ROOMS TO LET at from $2 to $8 per week; references exchanged. Inquire at the house of Mrs. McDermot, 63 Madison av.

A PLEASANT BACK PARLOR, WITHOUT board; also nice room on top floor. No. 117 West 34th st.

DESIRABLE FURNISHED ROOMS, WITHout board; terms to suit the times. No. 18 West 25th st.

NO. 47 WEST 29TH ST.—PRIVATE HOUSE, large front room, completely furnished; southern exposure; house and appointments first class.

HOTELS.

THE ROYAL VICTORIA HOTEL,
NASSAU, BAHAMA ISLANDS.
For full information apply to
JAMES C. INGERWOOD & CO.,
No. 753 Broadway, New-York.

RAILROADS.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.
GREAT TRUNK LINE
AND UNITED STATES MAIL ROUTE.

Trains leave New-York, via Desbrosses and Cortlandt Streets Ferries, as follows:

Express for Harrisburg, Pittsburg, the West and South, with Pullman Palace Cars attached, 8:30 A. M., 6 and 8:30 P. M., daily.

For Williamsport, Lock Haven, Corry, and Erie, at 8:30 P. M., connecting at Corry for Titusville, Petroleum Centre, and Oil Regions. For Williamsport and Lock Haven, 8:30 A. M.

For Baltimore, Washington, and the South, "Limited Washington Express" of Pullman Parlor Cars daily, except Sunday, 9:30 A. M.; arrive Washington 4:10 P. M. Regular at 8:40 A. M., 1, 6, and 9 P. M. Sunday, 6 and 9 P. M.

Express for Philadelphia, 7:30, 8:30, 8:40, (9:30 Limited,) 10:30 A. M., 1, 3, 4, 5, 6, 9 P. M., and 12 night. Sunday, 8:30 A. M., 5, 6, 7, 8:30, and 9 P. M.

Emigrant and second-class, 7 P. M.

Accommodation for Trenton, 7 A. M., 2 and 4:10 P. M.

For trains to Newark, Elizabeth, Rahway, Princeton, Trenton, Perth Amboy, Flemington, Belvidere, and other points, see local schedules at all Ticket Offices.

Trains arrive from Pittsburg, 6:20 and 10:30 A. M., and 10:20 P. M. daily; 10:10 A. M. and 6:50 P. M. daily, except Monday. From Washington and Baltimore, 6:30, 9:30 A. M., 4:10, 5:10, and 10:20 P. M. Sunday, 6:30, 9:30 A. M., 5:10, and 10:20 P. M. From Philadelphia, 5:05, 6:20, 6:30, 9:50, 10:10, 11:50 A. M., 2:10, 4:10, 5:10, 6:50, 8:40, 10:10, and 10:20 P. M. Sunday 5:05, 6:20, 6:30, 9:50, 11:50, A. M., 6:50, 10:10, and 10:20 P. M.

Ticket Offices, Nos. 526 and 944 Broadway, No. 1 Astor House, and foot of Desbrosses and Cortlandt streets; No. 4 Court street, Brooklyn. Nos. 114, 116, and 1,351 Manhattan st., Hoboken. Depot, Jersey City. Emigrant Ticket Office, No. 8 Battery place.

FRANK THOMSON, D. M. BOYD, Jr.,
General Manager. General Passenger Agent.

TO PHILADELPHIA
via
PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.
THE OLD-ESTABLISHED ROUTE AND SHORT LINE between
NEW-YORK AND PHILADELPHIA.

14 Through Trains each way daily; 3 Depots in Philadelphia, 2 in New-York.

4 Tracks, the most Improved Equipment, and the F

DRIVEN TO THE WALL.

A MASKED BURGLAR CONVICTED.

ANOTHER OF THE GANG OF ASTORIA BURGLARS SENT TO PRISON—HE IS SENTENCED TO 20 YEARS' IMPRISONMENT.

The trial of John Roberts, the fourth of the gang of ruffians who committed the burglaries at Astoria, Long Island, last month, took place at the Queens County Court of Oyer and Terminer, at the old court-house in North Hempstead, yesterday Judge C. E. Pratt presided, assisted by County Judge John J. Armstrong and Justices Chipp and Baxter. The prisoner was arraigned on three indictments, to all of which he pleaded not guilty. The first two charges were for burglariously entering the dwellings of Mr. W. H. Green and M. L. Hiller, and the third indictment was for committing highway robbery. The prisoner was represented by Mr. James W. Ridgeway, of Brooklyn, and District Attorney Downing conducted the case for the prosecution. The prisoner stood trial on the first indictment. The first witness called was Mrs. Martha Green, wife of Mr. W. H. Green, whose testimony developed nothing in addition to her evidence given in the case of John James last Monday excepting the identification of the prisoner as the man who stood at her bedside while the robbery was being committed, when he held a lamp in one hand and a pistol in the other, and told her to be still and keep quiet, and no harm would come to her.

Hugo Hiller, a son of Mr. M. L. Hiller, testified that the prisoner was the first of the gang of burglars whom he saw at his father's house on the night of the burglary. His description differed from that of Mrs. Green only in the fact that the prisoner wore a slouched hat, while Mrs. Green and her sister testified that the prisoner wore a "Derby" hat.

Mrs. M. L. Hiller, Miss Anna Hiller, Mr. Hiller, and Mr. Gustave Frank testified, the main point being the identification of the prisoner.

Capt. Murray, of the Fourth Precinct Police, of this City, was next placed on the stand. He testified to having known the prisoner for a long time when the latter was doing business at No. 99 James street; he had also known John James, alias "Fatty" Farrell; both had been living at No. 242 Fourteenth street, Brooklyn, the residence of Roberts' father-in-law. Upon being cross-examined, witness stated that he had sent Detective Carr to see Roberts, and get him to come to the station-house without formally arresting him; Detective Carr had done so; the witness took this precaution in order not to frighten the other people in the house, and by taking this method he had been the means of arresting six persons instead of one; the prisoner had not told him where he could find James; both James and the prisoner had told him they were living together; prisoner had not told him that James had gone to the residence of the prisoner through the instrumentality of his father-in-law; witness knew nothing about James having been "laid up with rheumatism."

Detective Carr testified that he knew the prisoner, and also knew Riley and James. Witness detailed the circumstances of the arrest of the prisoners and the efforts of Roberts to mislead the officers.

The prosecution here rested their case, and the case was opened for the defense. The first witness called was John Stark, the prisoner's father-in-law. He testified that he owned the premises No. 242 Fourteenth street, where his family and the prisoner lived, and also owned the buildings No. 240 and 246, adjoining the residence; on the night the burglaries were committed the prisoner was at home, and was engaged in playing a game of cards with witness and one Henry Dorr, from 7 P. M. until 1 o'clock the next morning; at that hour the family retired. Upon being examined by the District Attorney, witness testified that his daughter married Roberts on July 3, last, but witness could not tell the name of the minister who performed the ceremony, and was not present at the wedding; he did not know that the prisoner had another wife living, although he had heard that such was the case.

John Stark, a son of the previous witness, testified to seeing the prisoner in his father's house at 1:15 o'clock on the morning of Dec. 23. Witness was employed as a waiter at a restaurant in Fulton Market, and usually reached home at that hour.

Peter Stark, a boy about 10 years old, and brother of the preceding witness, testified to having seen the prisoner playing cards with his father and Mr. Dorr until 1 o'clock on the night of Dec. 22. When cross-examined, witness testified that he generally went to bed between 9 and 10 o'clock in the evening, and that that was the only occasion within his recollection when he had "been up so late."

Henry Dorr was the last witness presented by the defense. He testified to having been engaged in playing a game of cards with the prisoner and Stark on the night of Dec. 22. Witness was employed in the Brooklyn Navy-yard as a blockmaker.

Sarah Roberts was next placed on the stand on behalf of the prosecution. She testified that she lived at No. 278½ Water street, New-York, and was the wife of the prisoner. Counsel for the prisoner, therefore, objected to her testimony, on the ground that a wife was incompetent to testify against her husband, and the objection was sustained by the court, although the witness was the prisoner's wife.

The counsel for the prisoner then summed up the case, and was followed by the District Attorney. Judge Pratt charged the jury that the only point for them to consider, was whether the prisoner had been one of the gang of burglars or not. The jury retired, and returned in about ten minutes, when a verdict of burglary in the first degree was rendered. The prisoner was then asked if he would plead to the other indictments, he pleaded not guilty, and the District Attorney stated that, as there was not time to try the other indictments during this term, he should move that they be "pigeon-holed" for the present, and called for a sentence on the conviction already obtained. The court, through Judge Armstrong, then sentenced the prisoner to 20 years' imprisonment, with hard labor, in Sing Sing Prison. As the prisoner passed out of the court-room, handcuffed, and in the custody of an officer, his former wife preceded him, while his present wife followed by his side weeping bitterly. As the stairs were reached, the crowd brought the prisoner and his former wife, Sarah, in immediate proximity, when the prisoner, without a word of warning, kicked his abandoned spouse with all the force he could muster. He was quickly subdued, and was locked up with the other prisoners under sentence.

Roberts stated that he was born in Poughkeepsie and is 32 years of age; he had never before been imprisoned for felony. The two burglars remaining untried, John Schmidt and Patrick Culkin, will stand trial at the next term of the court.

Capt. Murray received many encomiums for his shrewdness and ability in arresting so many of the Fourth Ward gang, and upon his faithfulness in assisting the prosecuting authorities of Brooklyn in bringing them to justice.

A BRAVE POLICEMAN REWARDED.

PRESENTATION OF A CHECK FOR $1,000 TO PATROLMAN JOHN M'DOWELL BY THE TRUSTEES OF THE RIOT RELIEF FUND.

The following communication from the Trustees of the Riot Relief Fund has been received by Gen. W. F. Smith, President of the Board of Police Commissioners, inclosing a check for $1,000 as a reward to Patrolman John McDowell, for courage and forbearance in an encounter with a burglar:

OFFICE BOARD RIOT RELIEF FUND,
NEW-YORK, Jan. 23, 1877.

Gen. W. F. Smith, President Board of Police Commissioners:

By an official communication from your board, dated Jan. 20, the attention of the Trustees of the Riot Relief Fund was called to the courage and forbearance displayed by Patrolman John McDowell, Twenty-ninth Precinct, in his arrest of George Flint while engaged in the perpetration of a burglary on Jan. 8.

The Trustees consider themselves fortunate in being able to reward in the present case a policeman who braved death in the discharge of his duty, but who, happily, survives to be a living example of coolness and heroism to his fellows. The Trustees desire to express their recognition not only of the bravery of Patrolman McDowell, but of the self-command exercised by him under circumstances of great peril and provocation. So steadfast a sense of duty and scrupulous a regard for legal restraints, manifested in so trying an ordeal as a struggle with an armed burglar, cannot be too strongly commended.

The enclosed check for $1,000 on the Union Trust Company is sent as a testimonial of the high appreciation with which the Trustees regard the conduct of Patrolman McDowell, and as a partial recompense for the injuries received by him in the public service. Respectfully,

LEONARD W. JEROME,
ISAAC BELL,
GEORGE JONES,
WILLIAM H. APPLETON,
Trustees.

THE INDEBTEDNESS OF THE SOUTH.

A meeting will be held to-day at 12 o'clock, in the Clearing-house, having for its object, through the intervention of a committee of distinguished arbiters, a readjustment of the debts of the several Southern States which are in default. The restoration of the credit of the South is considered a matter of vital necessity; its debts are of such magnitude that the payment is an actual impossibility, and they can take no steps to reduce the amount of indebtedness except at the risk of the stigma that attaches to repudiation. It is proposed that a committee of five disinterested persons be appointed to confer with the authorities of each State in arrears, and with them, after weighing all the facts bearing on the matter, to devise and suggest a plan for the adjustment of the debts of these States upon a basis which shall be fair and just to all parties concerned. The meeting will be held to obtain emphatic public approval of the plan and indorsement of the movement, the success of which will, it is believed, tend to obliterate the last vestiges of the war and restore harmony and prosperity to the whole country. The call is signed by John T. Agnew, Babcock Brothers & Co., August Belmont & Co., Brown Brothers & Co., William C. Bryant, Frederick Butterfield & Co., John J. Cisco & Son, H. B. Claflin & Co., Thomas Denny & Co., David Dows & Co., Drexel, Morgan & Co., William M. Evarts, William H. Hays, Wilson G. Hunt, M. K. Jesup, Paton & Co., E. S. Jaffray & Co., Robert Lenox Kennedy, James G. King's Sons, A. C. Kingsland & Sons, Kuhn, Loeb & Co., A. A. Low & Brothers, Charles J. Martin, Samuel McLean & Co., Morton, Bliss & Co., E. D. Morgan & Co., George Opdyke & Co., Phelps, Dodge & Co., Henry F. Spaulding, H. G. Stebbins & Son, J. & W. Seligman & Co., John A. Stewart, Moses Taylor, L. Von Hoffman & Co., F. S. Winston. Mr. William Cullen Bryant will preside.

COAL AT LOW RATES.

TWO SALES AT AUCTION—A DECLINE IN PRICES—ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY THOUSAND TONS DISPOSED OF.

The reports that have been in circulation for two or three weeks about a new combination of coal operators and companies to regulate the supply of coal for the market do not appear to have amounted to anything more than gossip, for one of the companies mentioned as favorable to the new combination, and the only company known to be flatly opposed to it yesterday threw 150,000 tons upon the market. The interest shown in the two sales was sufficient to attract large crowds in both instances, and the bidding was sufficiently brisk to make the sales short and decisive. The first sale took place at the Exchange Sales-rooms, No. 111 Broadway, by John H. Draper & Co. The Pennsylvania Coal Company announced that 100,000 tons of Pittston coal would be offered, but after the announcement and conditions had been read by the auctioneer, Mr. George A. Hoyt, the Vice President of the company explained that, owing to a fire in one of the engine-houses of the company, it would be impossible to offer more than 50,000 tons, as hindrances had occurred to transportation. He said that 25,000 tons of lump, steamer, grate, and egg would be put up together, the purchaser to take his choice of variety, but that only 7,000 tons of egg would be sold. The first lot started with a bid of $2 50, and advanced quickly to $2 55, $2 60, $2 65, and thus upward until $2 87½ was reached. At this figure the bidding stopped, when the check "tons" was taken. The bidding then advanced to $2 90, at which price the remaining 2,000 tons were taken. The steamer and grate coal was started at $2 75, and was urged by the auctioneer to $2 82½, when it was disposed of in lots of from 500 to 5,000 tons. The stove coal was bid up rapidly from $3 25 to $3 45, when the bidding stopped, and the 25,000 tons was taken up in lots of from 250 to 5,000 tons each. No chestnut coal was offered at this sale. It was understood among the trade before the sale that if the sale proved to be a good one 200,000 tons would be disposed of by the company. The prices obtained were about the same as those realized in the December sale, the changes, when there were any, being in favor of the sellers. The prices obtained at the sale yesterday, as compared with those at the sale in December, were as follows:

	Dec. 20, 1876.	Jan. 24, 1877.
Lump	$2 82½ to	$2 82½ to .....
Steamer	2 82½ to	2 82½ to .....
Grate	2 82½ to	2 82½ to .....
Egg	2 82½ to	2 87½ to $2 90
Stove	3 40 to $3 47½	3 45 to .....
Chestnut	3 07½ to 3 15	..... to .....

At 12 o'clock, in the sales-room, No. 26 Exchange place, John H. Draper & Co. sold for the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Company 100,000 tons of Scranton coal. The room was well filled at the time of the sale, but the prices obtained were lower than those at the sale by the Pennsylvania Company. The quantity offered was classified into 10,000 tons of steam boat, 20,000 tons of grate, 15,000 tons of egg, 40,000 tons of stove, and 15,000 tons of chestnut. The steamer coal started at $2 55, the bids running slowly up to $2 65, at which figure it was bid off in lots of from 1,000 to 5,000 tons. The grate coal started at $2 50, and run up to $2 65, at which figure 5,000 tons were sold. The price then advanced to $2 67½, at which lots of from 2,000 to 5,000 tons were sold, when the price again rose to $2 70 for the remaining 400 tons. The egg coal was started at a bid of $2 65, the first lot selling at $2 80. The bids then again advanced to $2 82½, and finally to $2 85, lots being sold of from 100 to 5,000 tons. The stove coal started at $3 25, and sold at first at $3 45. An effort to push the price up to $3 50 resulted in advancing it to $3 47½, at which price it was taken up in large and small lots. The chestnut coal, for which $3 was at first offered, was disposed of in part for $3 02½, then advanced to $3 12½ under a monetary demand for it, but declined again to $3 07½, at which the lot was closed out. The second sale was taken as more correctly reflecting the market than the first. The prices obtained were 20 and 22½ cents per ton less than in December for steamer, 7 cents less than for egg, 25 cents less for stove, and 17½ cents less for chestnut. A comparison of the prices of yesterday, as compared with those obtained by the same company about the same time last month, were as follows:

	Dec. 2, 1876.	Jan. 24, 1877.
Steam-boat	$2 85 @2 87½	$2 65 @2 70
Grate	2 80 @ 2 85	2 65 @2 70
Egg	2 87½@ 2 92½	2 80 @ 2 85
Stove	3 65 @ 3 67½	3 45 @ 3 47½
Chestnut	3 20 @ 3 25	3 02½@ 3 12½

LOW CANAL TOLLS.

A MEETING OF CANAL BOATMEN—SPEECHES AND RESOLUTIONS IN FAVOR OF LOW TOLLS—A MASS-MEETING TO BE HELD IN COOPER INSTITUTE.

A meeting of merchants, forwarders, boatmen, and others interested in the subject of low tolls on the canals was held yesterday afternoon in the hall No. 10 South street. The meeting was called to order by Mr. John S. Brown, President of the Boat Owners' Association, James T. Easton was elected Chairman, and Thomas E. Bishop Secretary. Col. F. A. Conkling was introduced, who said he came on behalf of the Cheap Transportation Association, and that he was prepared to show that the Erie Canal and the Oswego Canal had earned more since they were constructed than they had cost. It becomes the duty of enlightened statesmen to reduce the cost of transportation between tide-water and the great West to the cost of maintenance alone. Primarily this object interested the boatmen, but it also deeply interested the business men of Brooklyn, New-York, and Jersey City. They require greater concessions than have yet been made, and that a uniform width and depth shall be given to the canals. If carried out, this plan, he said, would result in a remission of more than a cent a bushel on the cost of transportation.

A list of Vice Presidents was then read, when Mr. James Wadsworth, ex-Mayor of Buffalo, made an appeal in behalf of a reduction of tolls. The Constitution of 1846 should not, he thought, be senselessly insisted upon to the end of time and the destruction of the canals. That law kept us always creating a revenue, and it could be abrogated. The bonds could be lengthened, as the General Government had lengthened its bonds, so as to reduce expenses without increasing the indebtedness. The imposition of heavy tolls had sent millions of bushels of grain through the Welland Canal, and those tolls had really built that canal and the railroads that now competed with it. He would take away every restriction and all tolls. Taxes should not be assessed upon the instrumentalities, but on the results only of commerce. Unless some special reason could be given why these burdens should be continued the prohibition should be removed. He would not advise the blowing up of all the weigh-locks on the canal from Buffalo to Albany, but he who should remove them would confer a great blessing on the State.

Mr. James S. Graham, member of Assembly from Monroe County, made an argument for low tolls, and recommended the appointment of Mr. Henry L. Fish as Superintendent of Public Works. A preamble reciting the injurious effects that were threatened by the diversion of trade to other ports than New-York, was read by Mr. John S. Brown, followed by the appended resolutions:

Resolved, That we heartily indorse the action of the Buffalo Board of Trade, on Dec. 27, 1876; also, the action of the canal-boat owners of the State of New-York, on Jan. 5, 1877; also, the action of the New-York Cheap Transportation Association, on Jan. 9, 1877; also, the act on of the Boat-builders' and Boat-owners' Convention, held at Syracuse, on Jan. 10, 1877, in recommending a reduction of canal tolls.

Resolved, That we do most cheerfully indorse the Governor's recommendation in regard to the future management of our canals, and a reduction in canal tolls.

Resolved, That the public interests demand a rigorous policy in the management of the canals of this State, and the adoption of uniform rates of tolls on all articles transported on the Erie Canal, not exceeding one-half mill per 1,000 pounds per mile, and that all boats employed in the carrying trade upon the Erie Canal be exempt from tolls on said boats.

Resolved, That the non-paying lateral canals should be immediately disposed of as prescribed by law, and the illegal use of water by mill-owners prohibited, and the management concentrated under a single head, as prescribed by the recent amendment of the Constitution of the State.

Resolved, That a copy of the foregoing preamble and resolutions be forwarded to the Governor and members of the State Legislature; also to the Buffalo Board of Trade, New-York Cheap Transportation Association, New-York Produce Exchange, The Canal Boat-owners' Association, and the various Boards of Trade that may be considered interested.

The resolutions were unanimously adopted. An offer of Mr. Peter Cooper, of the gratuitous use of the Cooper Union for a mass-meeting for the cause of low tolls, was accepted with thanks. The action of the Canal Boat-owners' Association, indorsing the name of Henry L. Fish was approved, but provoked the assertions from Mr. Baker and Mr. Clark that the meeting, which had been called to promote low tolls, was being used for political purposes. The attempt in the Legislature to pass a bill taking from the canal men the piers now set apart for them on the East River and give them to the Union Ferry Company, was criticized, and a resolution adopted that the association should use all efforts to defeat it. The meeting then adjourned.

LOCAL MISCELLANY.

A RUNAWAY BOY.

THE ADVENTURES OF A BOSTON LAD—HOW HE PURLOINED MONEY FROM HIS DYING MOTHER AND WENT TO CALIFORNIA.

A boy, 14 years old, named Charles F. Barrett, arrived in this City yesterday, on board the steam-ship Acapulco, from Panama. On the 3d of September last Charley ran away from his home, in East Boston, and went to San Francisco, having stolen the money wherewith to pay his fare from his mother, who was at that time very ill and has since died. The father of this enterprising youth died in May last, leaving considerable property, and it is believed that he is now heir to about $20,000. He was sent to this City from San Francisco by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children of California, and was taken in charge, on his arrival, by Mr. E. Fellows Jenkins, the Superintendent of that society in this State, who sent him last night to Boston. Young Barrett was seen yesterday at the office of the society, No. 860 Broadway, by a reporter of THE TIMES, to whom he told his story. He is a remarkably intelligent lad, and evinces unmistakable evidence of having received a good moral training. He is well educated, and conversed of his trip in an easy, fluent manner. His mother, he said, had been sick for about four years previous to her death, and was, when he left home on Sept. 3, unable to leave her bed. On that day she sent him to get some money from a bureau drawer, and he took from it, without her knowledge, a roll of bills amounting to $170, which he placed in his breast, intending at the time to take from it only $10. Upon second thought, however, he concluded that he would take all and go to California. He left the house almost immediately and went to Boston, where he purchased a through ticket for San Francisco, paying $130 therefor. It seems remarkable that the ticket agent should have sold tickets to the boy without asking him a single question; but Charley states positively that he was asked no questions whatever. It will also be noticed that he was charged full fare, and the officials in Boston will, no doubt, make this a subject of inquiry. He arrived in San Francisco in due time with $4 50 in his pocket, and obtained work in an advertising agency, where he received $4 per week. He also went to the Young Men's Christian Association, and they procured lodgings for him. He soon became homesick, however, and went to the office of Chief of Police Ellis, to whom he told his story, and asked to be sent back home. The case was brought to the notice of Mr. Charles Sonntag, one of the Directors of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, and the Secretary corresponded with Mr. Daniel Carter, the guardian of the boy, who sent word to consign him to a reform school until he was 21 years old. Meanwhile, Charley had gone to the Industrial School, where he was domiciled for 66 days. The officers of the society concluded that they would not follow the advice of the guardian, and the boy was accordingly sent home. Upon his arrival in Boston he will be taken in charge of by the society there, and his fortune will be looked after. He seems very much pleased at the prospect of going home, and said he did not think he would run away again.

THE HASTIE-TRACY BOOK SALE.

CHOICE SCOTTISH LITERATURE—RARE EDITIONS OF SHAKESPEARE AND SHAKESPEAREANA DISPOSED OF AT EXCEEDINGLY LOW PRICES.

The sale of the Hastie-Tracy library was continued yesterday at Clinton Hall. If the lack of interest so palpably manifested by the Scotch residents in this City in the disposal of a vast number of rare and valuable volumes of purely Scottish literature is inexplicable, what is to be said in explanation of a total abandonment by every class of society, except the book-dealers and two or three gentlemen, of all interest in the disposal of most rare and unique editions of "Shakespeare," and such a quantity of Shakespeareana as was never before offered at one sale in this country. The depressing effects of the low prices realized on Monday and Tuesday seemed to have even infected the auctioneer, the hard-headed book-dealers, and the enthusiastic amateur collectors, and the result was that a great many priceless gems were sold yesterday at scandalously low prices.

The sale commenced with "Miscellaneous Scotch Poetry," which was very liberally and choicely represented. Among the items were 1726 edition of "Choice Collection of Comic and Serious Scots Poems," the first book of the kind ever printed in Scotland, brought only $4 50; an edition published in 1766, $3 25. The second edition of Fergusson's translation of Ossian's poems (Edinburgh, 1765) only brought $4 50. It was purchased for Yale College Library. Macdonald's famous edition of "Pasquils," published in three volumes in 1827-8, realized $7. An edition, in no better state, was recently sold in Edenburgh for $30. A number of original editions of Scott's poems, in handsome binding and otherwise well preserved, sold better than the general tone of the auction indicated. The principal lots, however, were the valuable editions of Shakespeare and a great quantity of Shakespeareana, numbering in all 91 titles. The fine 1685 folio (fourth) edition, in remarkably good preservation, without the portrait which faced the title-page, the only one Mr. Hastie ever had, sold for $22 50. The 1808 fac simile reprint of the first folio edition of 1623 only brought $12. Capell's famous 10 volume edition (1767) realized about its value when $20 was paid for it by Mr. Menton, who, it is understood, is purchasing for the Princeton College Library. The well-known but not particularly valuable edition published by Barkerville, the great Birmingham printer during the prevalence of the Shakespearian fever which raged when the jubilee was held at Stratford-on-Avon, in 1768. Nine post 8vo volumes, neatly bound in calf, and in good condition, brought in all only $9, not one-third of its value. A very pretty one volume, 12mo edition, printed by the celebrated Pinkerton, in 1831, was knocked down for $1. Among the Shakespeareana some rare bargains were secured. Col. R. C. Hawkins bought for $3 60 the 1779 edition (two volumes) of the six old plays which formed the foundation for the plot of "Measure for Measure," "Comedy of Errors," &c. For the modest sum of 50 cents the same gentleman secured "Chalmers' Apology," (1799) a curious Shakespearean tract not easily obtained and not likely ever to be reprinted again. The volumes bearing on the Shakespearean forgeries of the famous, or infamous, Ireland, brought fair prices. Boaden's well-known "Inquiry into the Authenticity of Various Pictures and Prints, which, from the Decease of the Poet to our own times, (1824) have been Offered to the Public as Portraits of Shakespeare," went for $5. Although the researches subsequently made by J. O. Halliwell have rendered this book comparatively obsolete, it is still regarded with much favor by Shakespearean scholars, and always finds ready sale at an auction, especially, as in this instance, when the five different portraits which adorn the book are in good preservation. Rev. J. Hunter's charming "Disquisition on the Scene, Origin, Date, &c, of The Tempest" sold for $4 25. Thirteen volumes issued by the Shakespeare Society of London, embracing many curious old plays, sold at very low prices. The first two volumes sold for $1 13 and 50 cents respectively, and the remaining 11 volumes were taken by a gentleman, whose name could not be learned, for 25 cents per volume. The charming Pisa edition (1821) of Shelley's "Adonais," &c., was purchased by Mr. Sabin, Jr., for a client, for $7 50. Gifford's splendid edition (1833) of "Shirley's Plays," in six volumes, handsomely gilt and bound in morocco, realized only $10 50 per volume, and the "Arcadia" of Sir Philip Sydney (1638) went for $2. The 1611 (the second) edition of Spenser's "Faery Queene," only brought $9. The editions of Thomson's poems sold pretty well, owing, doubtless, to the fact that most of them are in fine condition, well bound and profusely illustrated. Bensley's superb edition (1807) was purchased for $27 50 by Mrs. S. S. Price, of Philadelphia the Greek and Latin classics realizable no indifferently prices. To-day this class of books will occupy part of the time, and afterward the black-letter and early-printed books will be disposed of.

MARINE NOTES.

The fishing schooner Eliza Jane, of Gloucester, struck on Jig Rock, Shelbourne, Nova Scotia, on Jan. 23 and sank. All hands were saved.

The steam-ship Amerique had not been moved last evening from the position she has occupied for four or five days. The wreckers are now waiting for favorable winds and high tides.

The steam-ship America, from Bremen, arrived in this port yesterday. She reports having had strong westerly gales and a tremeadous sea all the way to the Banks, and from thence to this port moderate weather. On Jan. 21, latitude 41° 52', longitude 59° 9', she saw the steam-ship Hansa, for Bremen. The America brought 83 passengers and 212,500 specie.

The schooner James K. Lawrence, from Charleston, S. C., with naval stores for New-York, went ashore on Tuesday night at Far Rockaway, Long Island. The Coast Wrecking Company yesterday afternoon sent the tug Lackawanna and a force of wreckers to her relief. The schooner Richard Rhodes, of Havre de Grace, from Baltimore for this City, with hoop poles, was abandoned at sea Jan. 5. All hands were saved.

The steam-ship Colombo, of the Hall Line, now 50 days out, due for this port, was seen on Dec. 19 in latitude 40°, longitude 33°, by the steam-ship America, on her last trip from New-York to Southampton. She was then heading westward and was apparently "making good weather." She had her fore-yard lashed up in the rigging, showing that it had been carried away. The steam-ship Herder, which arrived yesterday, with 90 passengers, reports westerly gales and very high sea most of the passage. On Jan. 20, in latitude 44° 07', longitude 51° 42', she passed a capsized vessel, probably a schooner.

HUNTING FOR A CHAIN OF EVIDENCE.

POSTPONEMENT OF CHADWICK'S EXAMINATION IN THE FORGERY CASE—A NEW AFFIDAVIT AGAINST BROWNE AND CHADWICK.

The detectives employed in unraveling the facts of the recent forgery upon the Union Trust Company are still uncommunicative, but appear to be confident that they will, in a few days, make clear a chain of evidence and bring to justice the guilty parties. George W. Chadwick, who was arrested on Monday, on suspicion, was to have been examined yesterday, before Justice Duffy, in the Tombs Police Court. In consequence of a pressing engagement that compelled Mr. Wheeler H. Peckham to be absent at 4:30, the hour appointed for the examination, it was laid over until this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Before sending the prisoner back to his cell Justice Duffy called him up and questioned him in relation to the charges made in some of the newspapers that the doorman had extorted money from him. Mr. Chadwick said that on Tuesday night the doorman asked him if he wanted supper, and he told him that he did, and ordered eggs, bread, and coffee. He said he had $3 in his pocket, and some small change. He gave the doorman a dollar bill, and when the supper came, he told him that he would like to give him something, but he had only $2 and some change. The doorman told him to give him the $2 bill and he would bring Chadwick the evening papers, give him the break fast-bill in the morning, and call it "all right." Chadwick said he gave up the $2, expecting change. He got his breakfast—eggs, and coffee without sugar—but got no change. Justice Duffy said he would inquire into the matter and take steps to prevent a repetition of the affair. Mr. W. H. Beers, Vice President and Actuary of the New-York Life Insurance Company, presented a new affidavit to Justice Duffy, as follows:

"On the 2d day of January, 1877, in the City of New-York, a certain check was forged upon the Union Trust Company of said City, for the sum of $64,225, purporting to have been made and uttered by Morris Franklin, Esq., and deposited to the account of said company. Deponent has been informed and believes that G. W. Chadwick, now present, is the person who first proposed to Horace B. Browne, now in custody, to put the check through and obtain the gold therefor, and requested said Browne to select a broker through whom the business should be done. Deponent further says that the money was obtained for said check, which is falsely forged, and counterfeit. Deponent also further says that the letters attached to the complaint against said Browne are false and forged, and they bear date Jan. 2 and 3, and purport to be signed by deponent. Deponent therefore prays that said Chadwick may be held according to law. W. H. BEERS, New-York Life Insurance Co.

Sworn to before me this 24th day of January, 1877.
P. G. DUFFY, Police Justice."

THE GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC.

ANNUAL ENCAMPMENT OF THE COMRADES—ADDRESS OF WELCOME BY MAYOR ELY—REPORT OF COMMANDER TANNER AND TRANSACTION OF GENERAL BUSINESS.

The annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, Department of the State of New-York, met in Irving Hall yesterday morning. About 400 delegates were present, representing 108 posts and an aggregate membership of 15,000. After music by Koehler's band, Commander James Tanner, of Brooklyn, called the meeting to order. Gen. Joseph C. Pinckney introduced Mayor Ely, who delivered an address of welcome. His Honor said that the City of New-York never could and never would forget the services rendered by her noble volunteers at Gettysburg, and all the other great battles of the Army of the Potomac. Having herself given so many of her brave sons to the defense of the country, she might well be said to love every man who wore the blue. As citizens and as soldiers he welcomed them heartily to the Metropolis, and hoped that their stay here would be a pleasant one. Commander Tanner, in returning thanks, said that the soldiers always had pleasant recollections of New-York, and of the patriotism and public spirit displayed by her during the recent struggle. In the names of the veterans now living and those dead, he thanked the people of New-York for their universal courtesy and hospitality toward the soldiers of the Union. They, the members of the Grand Army of the Republic, met here in no partisan spirit, and with no desire to revive the bitter feelings of the war. Their aim was to cement the friendship formed on the battle-field, to succor the needy, to support the weak, and to render easy the deathbeds of those comrades who had received lifelong injuries in the nation's service. After more music the encampment went into secret session, all but the members of the organization withdrawing from the hall. Commander Tanner presided, supported by Acting Senior Vice Commander Minnes, Junior Vice Commander Hurst, of Albany; Past Department Chaplain Edey, Assistant Adjutant General George B. Squires, and other officers. The annual report of the Commander was then read, recounting the progress of the order during the past year. Notwithstanding the general stagnation of business, the organization had more than held its own, and to-day presented renewed claims to the support and confidence of the soldiers and of the community. As the ranks thinned out, an additional heritage of glory and honor was given to their care, and should be cherished as a sacred trust.

Among the recommendations made was one that the meetings of the various Posts in future should be supplemented by musical and literary exercises, and thus be made more attractive; also, that the installation of officers should be made in public. The thanks of the Encampment were due to Assistant Adjutant General Squirer and to Assistant Quartermaster General Brueninghausen for their labors during the past year. The case of a one-armed veteran, who had been turned out of a Federal office without cause, was alluded to. He [the Commander] had interceded in the man's behalf, and had been told that the removal had been made to show that the Grand Army of the Republic had no influence with the Government. The charge that the Grand Army was to be used, or had been attempted to be used, to secure the inauguration of one of the candidates for the Presidency was utterly false. The members of that order would support whoever was legally and constitutionally declared to be such, be he Republican or Democrat. The Soldiers' Home, at Bath, in this State, was already in process of completion, and bids fair to become a credit to the organization and to the State. The Adjutant General's report was next read, showing that 10 Posts had been dropped from the rolls for various causes and 13 new ones organized. The report of the Assistant Quartermaster General stated that the Encampment had on hand for current expenses nearly $1,000. Judge Advocate Seymour Dexter reported the decisions made during the year in reference to contested memberships. Chaplain E. C. Pritchard added a few remarks, after which the report of the Board of Trustees of the Soldiers' Home was presented. The report showed that $36,892 had already been subscribed, of which $30,482 had been paid in, and the remainder was amply secured. Two hundred and forty-two acres of land worth $24,000 had been set apart as a site for the proposed home at Bath, N. Y., and $60,000 more would be required to complete the buildings.

At the afternoon session, telegrams were read from the Departments of Pennsylvania and Connecticut, tendering congratulations. The sub-committees on the reports of various officers reported that they had found everything correct. After the transaction of further business, the Encampment proceeded to the election of Trustees of the Soldiers' Home. The following gentlemen were chosen: Ira Davenport, of Bath; E. B. Gere, of Syracuse; Sinclair Tousey, of New-York; Edmund L. Judson, of Albany, and E. W. Brueninghausen, of New-York. The Encampment then adjourned. By the invitation of Messrs. Shook and Gilmore a large number of the members visited Gilmore's Garden last evening. A Camp Fire was also held by Post Dalghren, No. 113, and Post Koltes, a large and influential German body, gave a ball at the Germania Assembly Rooms, at which many of the comrades were present. To-day an election for officers for the ensuing year will be held at Irving Hall, and at 8:30 P. M. a grand banquet will be given at the same place. The head-quarters of the Encampment are at the Grand Central Hotel.

THE MASSON MURDER TRIAL.

In the trial of George Steckert for the murder of Jacob Masson, at Newark, N. J., yesterday, Frederick Noach, Captain of the Schaik Guards, testified that on the night of the stabbing he was in Hart's saloon; saw Steckert scuffling with the Ehlinger brothers, who were trying to get him out; Hart, the saloon-keeper, had a club, and the witness heard two distinct raps, as it some person was being struck with it on the head; afterward Ehlinger put Steckert out, and the latter drew a knife, which he flourished on the sidewalk; witness heard Jacob Masson say, "Let's take the knife away from him;" there was a scrimmage at the door; three or four men attacked Steckert, and one man struck him on the head with a torch; witness returned to the saloon, and there learned that Steckert had stabbed Masson three times; he died subsequently. Other witnesses corroborated the story of Noach. It is probable the case will close to-day.

VIOLATIONS OF THE EXCISE LAW.

At the meeting of the Commissioners of Charities and Correction yesterday, an opinion of the Counsel to the Corporation was read to the effect that actions for the recovery and collection of penalties for violations of the Excise law must be brought in the name of the Commissioners of Charities and Correction. It was resolved to notify the Excise Board, which desired to be represented by its own counsel in such cases, that the Commissioners of Charities and Correction would consent to be represented by the counsel of the Excise Board, provided such an agreement in respect thereto was prepared as the Corporation Counsel would advise, the commissioners would relieve them and their department of all liability or expense through their acts.

CITY AND SUBURBAN NEWS.

NEW-YORK.

The annual Ladies' Reception of the Union League Club will be held this evening at 9 o'clock.

The annual ball of the Telegraphers' Association was held last evening at Lyric Hall, Sixth avenue and Forty-second street.

Central Bridge, over the Harlem River, is closed to all travel, except foot passengers, until further notice, on account of its dangerous condition.

The residence of Mr. John McMahen, No. 326 East Fortieth street, was entered on Tuesday by a sneak thief who stole therefrom jewelry and clothing worth $250.

Mr. J. F. Gatchell, of the Washington Board of Police, visited the Central Office, yesterday, and was shown through the various offices by Superintendent Walling.

There are nine entries for the amateur 25-mile walk which will take place at the Metropolitan Riding Academy, Third avenue and Sixty-third street, on Saturday evening next, commencing at 6 o'clock.

Gov. Robinson has ordered a special election to be held in the First Assembly District, on the 14th of February next, to fill the vacancy in the office of Member of Assembly caused by the death of James Healey.

A verdict of accidental death was rendered yesterday, by a jury in the case of David Haggerty, who was run over and killed by Engine No. 16, of the Hudson River Railroad, at Ninety-second street, on the 12th inst.

Judge John R. Brady lectures before the Young Men's Hebrew Association at Chickering Hall this evening. His subject is taken from Shakespeare, the title of the lecture being "How good digestion wait on appetite, and health on both."

Moses Westheimer, a cigar dealer at No. 61 Pitt street, reported at Police Head-quarters last night that his son, aged 14, whom he had sent early yesterday to the establishment of Allen & Co., No. 178 Chambers street, to pay a bill amounting to $340, had not returned home.

The room of Gen. Francisco Lyva, of Mexico, at Benito's Hotel, No. 23 Great Jones street, was entered by a sneak thief on Tuesday evening, and robbed of jewelry valued at $800. The theft was committed while the General was at dinner, he having left the door of his room unlocked.

At Gilmore's Garden, this evening, the programme will consist of equestrian performances, including trotting-matches, a flat-race, and other feats of horsemanship. Mowry and Carilio, Miss Kingston and Miss Oswald, will perform their grand saddle scene—or lovers' flying on horses—and the entertainment will conclude with the fat men's foot-race.

On Tuesday evening Major Willard Bullard presented the Commissioners of Charities and Correction with artistically engrossed and handsomely framed resolutions expressive of the warm acknowledgment of the Grand Army of the Republic of the State of New-York to the Commissioners for their reservation of a special burial plot in the City Cemetery for the interment of Union soldiers dying in the institutions.

Commissioner Erhardt, Chairman of the Committee on Rules and Discipline of the Police Board, dismissed yesterday complaints against Capt. Tynan, of the Sixteenth Precinct, and Capt. Walsh, of the Twenty-sixth Precinct. The charge against Capt. Walsh was illegal interference with the auction sale of H. B. Herts, at No. 17 Park place. Capt. Tynan was charged with unwarrantably arresting a lower man who was standing at a street corner and refused to "move on."

Mr. L. Rossvally, editor and publisher of The Hebrew Evangelist and Converted Jew, who employed Mr. James L. Manker, the young man who was arrested in Brooklyn on Saturday last for endeavoring to pass a counterfeit $20 note

The New-York Times.

VOL. XXVI.....NO. 7916. NEW-YORK, FRIDAY, JANUARY 26, 1877. PRICE FOUR CENTS.

THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR

THE SENATE PASSES THE BILL.

THE MEASURE PASSED AFTER A SESSION OF TWENTY HOURS—ONLY ONE DEMOCRAT VOTES AGAINST IT—THE DEBATE ON THE QUESTION BEGUN IN THE HOUSE—MR. HEWITT DELIVERS AN EXTREMELY PARTISAN ARGUMENT—AN ABLE AND IMPRESSIVE SPEECH BY GEN. GARFIELD.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—At 7 o'clock this morning, after a session of 20 hours, the debate on the compromise plan was ended and the bill passed by the following vote:

Republicans in roman, Democrats in italic.

YEAS.

Alcorn,	Jones, Nevada,
Allison,	Kelly,
Barnum,	Kernan,
Bayard,	McCreery,
Bogy,	McDonald,
Booth,	McMillan,
Boutwell,	Maxey,
Burnside,	Merrimon,
Chaffee,	Morrill,
Christiancy,	Price,
Cockrell,	Randolph,
Coukling,	Ransom,
Cooper,	Robertson,
Cragin,	Saulsbury,
Davis,	Sharon,
Dawes,	Stevenson,
Dennis,	Teller,
Edmunds,	Thurman,
Frelinghuysen,	Wallace,
Goldthwaite,	Whyte,
Gordon,	Windom,
Howe,	Withers.
Johnston,	Wright—47.
Jones, Florida,

NAYS.

Blaine,	Hamlin,
Bruce,	Ingalls,
Cameron, Pennsylvania,	Mitchell,
Cameron, Wisconsin,	Morton,
Clayton,	Patterson,
Conover,	Sargent,
Dorsey,	Sherman,
Eaton,	West—17.
Hamilton,

The debate which followed Mr. Morton's speech was not important. At 2 o'clock Mr. Blaine took the floor and made a short but vigorous speech against the measure. He was followed by Mr. Howe, who supported the bill in an address of great length and unusual dullness. Then came Mr. Eaton, who made something of a sensation by forsaking his Democratic friends, and taking sides against the bill. He did so on the ground that the power to count the Electoral vote was vested by the Constitution in the two houses, who should act jointly. He did not believe this power could be delegated by Congress to any commission or tribunal. After further debate between Messrs. Morton, Sherman, Edmunds, and others, a vote was taken on Mr. Sargent's amendment to limit the jurisdiction of the proposed commission, and it was lost—yeas 18, nays 47. Mr. Sargent then offered an amendment which provided that the commission should sit with open doors, except when in consultation. This also was lost by a vote of 13 to 47. At 7:30 o'clock the Senate adjourned until to-morrow at noon.

The compromise bill was taken up in the House soon after 12 o'clock to-day, and an arrangement was made to vote on it to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, and to use all the intervening time possible for debate by providing for an evening session and for an early hour of meeting to-morrow. The House galleries were well filled, and as seats were occasionally vacated, they were again occupied by such of the crowd waiting in the corridors as could obtain entrance through the guarded doors. The House galleries hold many hundreds more than the galleries of the Senate, so that the audience was really larger than that which listened to the debate in the Senate. There was nothing in the debate to interest a popular audience, but the people flock to the Capitol because there is felt to be a possibility, each day, of a lively and entertaining scene. The House was in great confusion, so that Mr. McCrary, who has a clear, ringing voice, was heard with difficulty. The area behind the seats was crowded with people busy in conversation, one of the topics being the election of Justice David Davis to the Senate. It was arranged by the managers that Mr. McCrary should open the debate, and present the arguments to the House in support of the bill. His speech was pervaded by that air of fairness for which he is noted. But he said nothing new. All that could be said in its favor was said last Saturday by Senator Edmunds, and nothing has been added thereto by anybody else. Mr. McCrary opposed the right of the President of the Senate to count the vote. He thought the party could not stand upon that theory, but admitted that an extreme emergency might arise in which it would be his duty to assume that function and declare the result of the election. He demolished again the exploded doctrine that one house alone has any right to reject Electoral votes. His speech was not concluded at the end of the hour, and the last of it he was compelled to have printed in the Record without its being read to the House. Mr. Payne objected to extending his time because 60 gentlemen had already applied to be placed on the list of speakers. Mr. Hunton, of Virginia, also a member of the committee, spoke in favor of the bill, giving the reasons that had overcome his Democratic scruples.

Mr. Goode, of Virginia, who followed Mr. Hunton, using a portion of his hour, disgusted by his shameless speech nearly everybody who heard him. He holds a place in the House to which he has no more right in law or equity than a man who was never voted for. He was beaten by 1,500 majority, and was awarded his seat in an infamous manner that will be remembered; and yet he had the audacity to stand up and cry out in a loud voice that he respected the honest indignation of the people, raised by the very suggestion that a man who was not elected should be inducted into the Presidential office. He made much of this point, probably to show his own cardiness with respect to it.

Mr. Hoar made a brief speech for the bill, of course, and was followed by Mr. Hale, of Maine, who began a strong speech, but was unable to finish it in the allotted time, and was compelled to print without delivering it all. Mr. Hale argued that the President of the Senate was the proper person to count and declare the vote. He also attacked the pleasing notion that the four Judges were selected by reason of their places of residence. He also alluded to the election of Judge Davis to-day to the Senate, and raised the question whether that was part of the scheme.

Mr. Hewitt read a speech. It was not over half an hour long, but it had points, and the first part attracted curious attention. Mr. Hewitt has been conducting himself in the meetings of the committee in a lofty, patriotic, high-toned manner, and created such an impression upon one member of the joint committee that that member was constrained to give assurance to Hewitt that he had done him an injustice by considering him a partisan and even worse. That member must have had some strange feelings when, near his seat, Hewitt rose and deliberately read one of the meanest partisan effusions that ever emanated from his curious brain. He began by excusing himself for speaking at all, but his position with reference to one of the great parties (meaning his Democratic Chairmanship) forced him to give expression to his views. He had assured the party and the world, it seems, that Tilden had been elected. This assertion by Mr. Hewitt, many times repeated, is recent and fresh in memory. He had been pressed to know, in view of this assertion of his, why he was willing to depart from the ancient methods of determining the result, which would insure the declaration of Mr. Tilden's election, and he went on to give his reasons for yielding so great a certainty. They were in substance that a wicked and powerful party was in control of the Government. When defeated in the election they had, with great industry and ingenuity, gone into several States and had succeeded in fixing up for Hayes and Wheeler 185 votes, sustained by a prima facie case. This powerful party had only to have the count made by one of their own partisans, and the President stood ready, by the use of the troops now gathered around the capital to surrender his office into the hands of Hayes. This outrage the House would not endure, and there would be two Presidents, and probably a civil war. This terrible catastrophe, due to the wickedness of the Republican Party, he desired to avert. This was about the line of his speech, and naturally it did not escape notice.

The evening session began at 7:30 o'clock. The debate passed along till near 10 o'clock without any marked incidents or new arguments. There were several short speeches, and Mr. Willard, of Michigan, a member of the committee, made a long speech, carefully prepared, in behalf of the bill. Mr. Garfield took the floor and made one of his best speeches, and urged one or two new considerations which should weigh against the bill. The first of these objections, not new indeed, but newly presented in this debate, was against the gradual control which Congress was assuming of the Presidential election. The method of electing a President had been the first to meet the Constitutional Convention. There were many times as much space devoted to it in the record of the convention debates as to all other subjects. The great question which arose at once was whether the Chief Executive should be appointed by Congress. He argued that the one great purpose held in view by the framers of the Constitution was to keep as far as possible the selection of the Executive from any interference by the National Legislature. This was why they prohibited members of Congress from being Electors. They so guarded the Constitution that Congress could not interfere with the Electoral College, and beyond fixing the time of the meeting of the Electoral College, and the casting of the Electoral vote, Congress had no control over the Electors, who are absolute and supreme as any despot in the work assigned them. When the College has performed its work, it is final, and there is no power of review. The election is over on the day fixed for casting the vote. The College dissolves when its vote has been cast, and no power can reach it. Its record is made up and must be declared as it was made. After tracing the working of the Electoral College through the various steps provided by the Constitution, he referred to the laws of the various States, and showed that 31 of the 38 provided that the executive officer of the Government should count and declare the votes for State officers, and in these 31 States this was held to be an executive act. He cited a case in Ohio where the election of Governor depended upon the vote of a disputed county. When the vote came to be counted, the Lieutenant Governor, being President of the Senate, reached down, took the votes from the hands of the tellers, counted them, and declared the result. When the circle of States is called, and the voice of the people ascertained, there is nothing left but a sum in arithmetic. The framers of the Constitution designed, in creating the Electoral College, to make a President, and made the machinery to produce the result. Congress may do many things, but it cannot engraft a judiciary system upon the word "count," or build upon it a Star Chamber. If the work of the Vice President ends with the word "count," the presence of the two houses ends then. The adoption of the pending bill, he believed, would overturn the pyramid created by the Constitution and stand it upon its apex. It authorizes the commission to go do down to the election returns, and vests it with authority to consider all manner of reports. It makes it the duty of the President of the Senate to invite objections to returns, and leaves it in the power of the two houses to throw out the vote of any State, no matter how regularly its vote may have been cast. Under the third section he showed that certificates might be fabricated by anybody and sent to the President of the Senate, and such fabricated certificates would form the basis of an objection which would turn that State over to an irresponsible commission. Gen. Garfield's speech, as a composition in English, and as an argument, was equal to any yet delivered in this debate, and, in some respects, surpassed all others. It was impressively delivered, was free from turgid ornament and theatrical effect, and yet a crowded gallery remained till 11 o'clock to listen to it with close attention, and the House unanimously extended his time, and listened to the end. He spoke in a manly way, recognizing the merits in the bill; but he was particularly happy in opening, when he exposed the unworthiness of the motive which would lead Congress to act from threats of civil war. The Congress should never act under compulsion of such threats, no matter from what quarter they might arise. The threat of civil war he heartily despised. His speech ended the debate for the evening.

The House will meet at 10 to-morrow morning, and an hour later will begin the short ten-minute speeches, which kind of debate will last till 3 o'clock, when the vote is to be taken.

SPECULATIONS REGARDING THE VOTE IN THE HOUSE.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—The calculations of gentlemen about the Capitol to-day was that three-fourths of the members of the House will vote in favor of the bill relative to counting the Electoral vote, or in the same proportion as the vote in the Senate. Should the bill pass to-morrow afternoon as contemplated, it will be sent to the President on the night of that day or Saturday morning. As the bill involves constitutional questions, it will, according to usage, be referred to the Attorney General for examination before final Executive action. It is not apprehended that the Attorney General will interpose any objections, the bill being framed after long and mature consideration by the most distinguished jurists of both houses of Congress; and as the President to-day repeated that he was in favor of the passage of the bill, considering it to be a measure in the interests of the peace and business of the country, which is now languishing owing to the uncertainty of the Electoral count, it is safe to conclude that the bill will promptly become a law.

THE FIFTH JUSTICE.

EFFECT OF THE ELECTION OF JUSTICE DAVIS TO THE SENATE—TROUBLE IN THE DEMOCRATIC RANKS—PROSPECT FOR THE SELECTION OF JUSTICE SWAYNE—JUSTICE DAVIS' ACCEPTANCE DISCUSSED.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—The Democrats are in some trouble on account of the election of Justice Davis to the Senate. There were several dispatches sent to Illinois, yesterday, asking in substance that his name be withdrawn, and saying that his election there would greatly damage the party prospects under the Compromise bill. There were members of the Illinois delegation who are said to have been very strong on this point, hoping to defeat his election, which was not agreeable to them for other reasons than his possible connection with the commission. Now the election is over, but the prediction that it would damage the Democratic prospects remains. It is agreed on all hands that his election, even if he should decline the office, has rendered him ineligible for the position of the fifth Justice in the commission. The prospect of the selection of Justice Swayne, the oldest of the remaining Justices, and an upright Republican, for the unfilled appointment, are considered as very good.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

Judge Davis was on the bench of the Supreme Court to-day, when he received a telegram from Springfield informing him of his election to the United States Senate. After the adjournment of the court he was called on by friends from Illinois, who congratulated him on the result and inquired as to his acceptance of the office. He did not say whether he would accept it or not, but if he should conclude to do so, he will not resign before the 4th of March, the Senatorial term not beginning until that time. He stated that he had not been consulted regarding the use of his name as a candidate, and had not authorized it. His friends among the Democrats say the election of Judge Davis was not a partisan act, but was a marked compliment by the State of Illinois, and, as both parties had their candidates in the field and were unable to elect either of them, that Judge Davis was selected because of his intrinsic merits and fitness for the position.

A LEGAL OPINION ON THE BILL.

JUDGE WEST, OF OHIO, ANALYZES THE PROPOSED MEASURE—ANOMALIES OF THE COMMISSION—CONFLICT WITH DIRECT DECLARATIONS OF THE CONSTITUTION.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—Judge West, of Bellefontaine, Ohio, has written to Attorney General Taft a very able opinion on the compromise bill. Judge West holds that the pending proposition of the Joint Commission ignores the precedents and opinions of the past century, and thinks that the hot haste of its advocates to secure its adoption renders it impossible to give it the consideration its novelty and startling gravity demand. It can never have more than the dignity and authority of a statute, and as such may not be free from constitutional infirmity. "The propriety of members of a judicial court considering and passing upon the constitutionality of a statute under which they have accepted and exercised the offices and functions of a political court," says Judge West, "does not favorably impress the common understanding." He thinks that the sixth section of the bill, which concedes the right of defeated claimants to the Presidency to appeal from the decision of the commission, is a delusion and a mockery, because a majority of the court before whom such a question may come for final adjudication, will, as members of the commission, have already prejudged the case. This commission is a tribunal unknown to the Constitution; its jurisdiction is limited; the qualifications of its members are that they must hold other official positions, and they are to be elected by Congress, while the second section of the second article of the Constitution provides that "all officers of the United States whose appointments are not herein otherwise provided for, and which shall be established by law," shall be nominated by the President. The President, the courts, and the heads of departments are alone given the constitutional capacity to become repositories of the appointing power. The method of appointing this commission ignores all constitutional repositories and vests it in Congress, hitherto excluded. By this bringing in the Supreme Court we have either the anomalous spectacle of a number of members of the Senate and House exercising the jurisdiction of judiciary, or the equally anomalous spectacle of the Supreme Court exercising functions of the Legislature. Either assumption is absurd. The Constitution prohibits any Senator or Representative from acting in any office which shall be created during the time for which he was elected, and no person holding office under the United States shall be a member of either house of Congress. If this commission is not a civil office what is it? Judge West argues these points at length, and presents many other new ideas and objections to this measure.

EDMUNDS REPUDIATED AT HOME.

THE REPUBLICANS OF VERMONT NOT DISPOSED TO SUSTAIN HIM—NO APPROVAL IN HIS OWN CITY.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—During the day Senator Morton has been in receipt of many telegrams expressing opposition to the bill. Among them was the following:

BURLINGTON, Vt., Jan. 25.

This is the home of Senator Edmunds. Do not know of a single Republican here in favor of his course on the Compromise bill. The Republicans of Vermont will not sustain him.

JAMES PECK.

Similar dispatches have been received from several Western States.

THE QUESTION IN ENGLAND.

EXPRESSIONS BY THE CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER—HOPES OF AN EARLY AND SATISFACTORY ADJUSTMENT.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—Sir Stafford Northcote, Chancellor of the Exchequer, speaking at a banquet in Liverpool last night, made the following allusion to the American Presidential question:

Nobody can witness without sympathy and a certain amount of admiration, the conduct of the great mass of the American people under the difficulties presented by the Presidential question. We believe they have a Constitution which they are able satisfactorily and honestly to work out for themselves. And even in the present great difficulty we cannot help seeing that they are endeavoring by honest exertions to find a constitutional solution. The matter must come to an end shortly. The settlement, I hope, will be very beneficial to the commercial condition of the United States, and therefore also to that of England. I am happy to think that good feeling exists between England and the United States.

THE DEBATE AT ALBANY.

MORE DEMOCRATIC TALK IN THE STATE SENATE—MR. HARRIS' AMENDMENT TO THE WOODIN RESOLUTIONS DEFEATED—THE RESOLUTIONS LAID OVER.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 25.—The debate on Mr. Woodin's resolutions was continued in the Senate to-day, the Democrats doing most of the talking, as they have done from the start. Mr. Starbuck's substitute was voted down, and the resolutions would probably have reached a final vote had not Senator Harris insisted on tacking on to them an additional resolution indorsing the Congressional device for counting the Electoral vote. After a good deal of discussion the resolution was voted down by 14 to 11, Mr. Harris being the only Republican who voted for it. It is proper to state, however, that two Republican Senators—Messrs. Emerson and Vedder—in explaining their votes, said that they were in favor of the compromise, and that, if the proposition to indorse it stood alone, they would vote for it, but they did not approve of mixing it up with Mr. Woodin's resolutions, which were intended as an answer to the extreme partisan view of the question taken by Tilden in his appendix to Gov. Robinson's Message. The Republicans appeared to be satisfied with the result of the vote on Mr. Harris' amendment, and as four Republican Senators—Messrs. Sprague, Wagner, Tobey, and Wellman—were absent, they consented to let the further discussion of Mr. Woodin's resolutions go over till there is a full Senate, which will not be till next Tuesday. Every one of the 19 Republican Senators has expressed himself in favor of the passage of Mr. Woodin's resolutions, but four of them are, notwithstanding, favorable to the compromise, which, in their opinion, does not conflict with the resolutions.

After the executive session Senator Harris presented his resolution approving the Electoral bill with the concurrent requirement omitted, so that it was simply a Senate resolution. It went over under the rule, and Mr. Harris stated that he would call it up to-morrow and ask for a vote upon it. He Republican Senators who are reckoned upon to vote for it are Messrs. Vedder, Harris, Emerson, Prince, and if he is present, Tobey. Senator Sprague, who the other evening declared himself in favor of the Electoral bill, will be absent.

THE PROCEEDINGS IN DETAIL.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

ALBANY, Jan. 25.—The Senate to-day resumed the consideration of the Woodin resolutions. Mr. Starbuck, resuming his speech, contended that the clause in the Constitution providing that the counting of the Electoral votes should be made in the presence of the two houses, was significant. An act done in the presence of the House of Representatives was done subject to their approval. The word "counted," as used in the Constitution, meant more than simple ministerial action. For nearly 100 years the contrary to this opinion had never maintained. The Senate is now invoked to give aid to the conspiracy to defraud the rightfully elected persons. Shall it lend its aid to such an unholy act? This crisis has come upon the country by the casting aside of the old brotherly love which used to prevail among the residents of the different States. It is the outcome of the recent raid of hate and rancor. The shadow of a great crime rests upon our land to-day. Mothers are looking upon their sons and saying, "Must this, my boy, be given up to the bloody struggle which threatens our country?" There is not a household in America where these questions are not talked of at the hearthstones. In this distracted state of affairs, blessed indeed is the man or the body of men who will strive to stem the trouble and give peace to our beloved country. The candidate of the Democratic Party was elected by a majority of 240,000, and he was as justly entitled to the Presidency of the United States as was George Washington on the occasion of his first election. We must make it impossible for any President hereafter to march an army into a State in times of peace to influence an election. We must guard with zealous care the rights of election by the people, and insist on an absolute acquiescence in the will of the majority. May Senators around this circle join hands with the lovers of fraternal feeling at Washington, and then, indeed, will they worthily receive the benediction of the Master, who said: "Blessed are the peacemakers."

Mr. Jacobs then asked for a division of the question, requesting a separate vote on each resolution offered yesterday by Mr. Starbuck. The resolutions were voted upon separately, and each in its turn lost, by a vote of yeas, 10; nays, 18.

Mr. Harris renewed the amendment which he offered yesterday.

Mr. Schoonmaker said he had not intended to enter into this discussion, but the fact that the majority pressed the resolutions after they had become obsolete, induced him to make a few remarks. News had been flashed over the wires this morning from Washington of great significance, and it behooved the majority to keep up with the march of events. He criticised the resolutions in detail and denied that the recitals contained therein were the truth of history. He read from the Constitution the duties of the Vice President, as stated therein, and denied the interpretation sought to be given its reading with reference to counting the votes by leading Republicans. The intention of the framers of the Government was that it should be supreme in Federal affairs. This is a Federal question, and Congress should have control of it. If the voice of any State is sought to be misrepresented, it is eminently proper that Congress should see that justice is done such State. He asked the Senator from the First, [Mr. Prince,] how he could go back to his constituents and explain away his action in misrepresenting them as he did in his speech supporting the resolution last Tuesday evening?

Mr. PRINCE replied that he hoped to speak in some 20 places in his Senatorial district after the adjournment of the Senate, and he invited Mr. Schoonmaker to be present, when he would then learn how he [Mr. Prince] proposed to explain his Senatorial votes.

Mr. SCHOONMAKER answered that he would enjoy being present at any such performance, for it would certainly be an amusing one.

Mr. JACOBS said, in view of the news from Washington to-day, it would be almost criminal to pass these Woodin resolutions. He, therefore, moved to postpone them indefinitely. Lost—yeas 10, nays 15.

Mr. JACOBS appealed to Senator Woodin to forget that he was a Republican, and begged of him to remember that he was a patriot and wanted the peace and harmony of his country.

Mr. WOODIN then took the floor in opposition to Mr. Harris' proposed amendment.

The question occurring on Mr. Harris' amendment, it was lost—yeas 11, nays 14. The following is the vote in detail:

YEAS—Messrs. Bradley, Gerard, Hammond, Harris, Jacobs, Lamont, Loomis, Morrissey, Schoonmaker, Starbuck, Wagstaff—11.

NAYS—Messrs. Baden, Carpenter, Cole, Coleman, Doolittle, Emerson, McCarthy, Moore, Prince, Robertson, Sayre, Selkreg, Vedder, Woodin—14.

Messrs. Bixby and Kennedy were present, but, being paired off with Messrs. Tobey and Sprague, who were absent, did not vote. Messrs. St. John and Wellman were excused.

Mr. WOODIN said there were some Republican Senators absent who desired to be present and vote upon the resolutions, and he therefore moved to table them for the present. Carried. After which the Senate went into executive session.

When the doors were opened after the executive session, at 3 P. M., Mr. HARRIS offered his resolution again, making it simply the expression of the Senate, not concurrent.

Mr. WOODIN moved to table the resolution. Carried.

A SUBSTITUTE IN CONNECTICUT.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED IN THE HOUSE BEARING UPON THE PRESIDENTIAL COMMISSION.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

HARTFORD, Jan. 25.—In the House to-day the resolutions indorsing the National Returning Board project which were passed by the Senate, came up for action, and Mr. Vincent Colyer, of Darien, proposed the following substitute:

Resolved, by this Assembly, That, laying aside all party feeling and looking only to the good of our common country, we hereby express our confidence in the wisdom, patriotism, and integrity of the Executive and the Congress of the United States in the settlement of questions growing out of the late Presidential election.

Resolved, That the provisions of our written Constitution should be strictly followed in time of peace; the three departments of the Federal Government should be kept, as far as possible, independent of each other. The remedy for defects in the Constitution is by its amendment, and not by legislative interference.

Resolved, That we are opposed to intimidation, violence, and murder as a means of influencing political opinion and elections; that we denounce all frauds in elections, and that we demand such amendments to the national Constitution as will secure fair and honest suffrage, and correct any ambiguities which may now exist in it concerning the election of President.

Resolved, That whether the pending disagreement at Washington in relation to the method of ascertaining the result of the last election for President be settled by following either the plan adopted at the first election of Washington, and followed at subsequent elections for 40 years; or by adopting a plan which would provide for the rejection by the concurrent vote of both houses of Congress, of the Electoral vote of any State, on account of intimidation, violence, or fraud, or by the operation of the proposed law to submit all the questions now at issue to a commission of 15 persons, we, the General Assembly of Connecticut, hereby heartily pledge the support of the State Government, of all our loyal citizens, to that person who shall thereby be declared elected President of the United States.

Resolved, That any armed opposition to the inauguration or administration of the person who may be declared elected President by either of the aforesaid methods which may be adopted by Congress will be treason, and all persons who threaten civil war unless some one specific plan of settling the difficulties is followed, deserve the execration of all good citizens.

A long debate ensued, and the Democrats resorted to filibustering to delay the vote and prevent action to-day; but the Republicans gave notice that they should stay in their seats all night rather than surrender, and finally, after the session had been dragged into the afternoon, the resolutions were adopted by 120 to 77.

During the discussion, Mr. Cleveland, of Brooklyn, read a dispatch from Washington announcing that Mr. Eaton, of Connecticut, was the only Democrat in the Senate who voted against the plan, and singular as it may appear, there were hisses on the Democratic side; but when the Senator gets home they will applaud him just as vigorously when he defends his action.

Speaker Harrison was to-day elected Judge of the Court of Common Pleas for New-Haven County for four years. His election was warmly advocated by Mr. Bronson, Democrat, of New-Haven, and there was no party division, which is a very handsome compliment to the Speaker.

MASSACHUSETTS APPROVES.

RESOLUTIONS PASSED BY THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES INDORSING THE BILL.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

BOSTON, Jan. 25.—In the House of Representatives to-day the Committee on Federal Relations reported through Frank Bird the resolutions indorsing the Electoral Vote bill in a new draft, as follows:

Whereas, Conflicting constructions of the provisions of the Constitution relating to the counting of the Electoral vote exist between the two branches of Congress; and

Whereas, It is in the highest degree important to the best interests of the whole country that this great controversy should be immediately settled in a way to command the confidence of the country; therefore

Resolved, That the Senate and House of Representatives of Massachusetts hereby express their approval of the plan reported by the joint committee of the two houses of Congress for the counting of the Electoral vote for President and Vice President of the United States.

Resolved, That it is desirable that an amendment to the Constitution should be prepared by Congress clearly prescribing the mode of counting the Electoral votes, to the end that this nation may be made a Government of laws and not of men.

Resolved, That his Excellency the Governor be requested to transmit a copy of these resolutions to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

These creating some opposition, the preamble was stricken out and the resolutions were then passed. Nineteen Republicans voted in the negative.

THE MINNESOTA LEGISLATURE'S ACTION.

ST. PAUL, Jan. 25.—The House passed, by a vote of 65 to 6, a resolution indorsing the Joint Committee's plan of settling the Electoral question.

THE NEW-HAMPSHIRE CANVASS.

FIRST MEETING OF THE DEMOCRATIC STATE COMMITTEE — DISSATISFACTION WITH THE STATE NOMINATIONS.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

CONCORD, Jan. 25.—The first meeting of the new Democratic State Committee was held here this evening. There was but a small attendance. The members present report the rank and file of the party, particularly the Young Democracy, almost unanimous in the support of Hon. Daniel Marcy, the Gubernational nominee. Such talk is, however, evidently for the outside public. It is a fact beyond dispute that Marcy's nomination fell on the party like a wet blanket. The young men were bitter in their denunciation of him and the action of the State Convention in forcing such a leader on the party in this crisis. This feeling was intense, nor was it confined alone to the young men of the party. It is, however, some weeks before the election occurs. The bitterness is slowly subsiding, party lines are tightening, and he who thinks that any regular Democratic nominee in New-Hampshire will not poll the full strength of that party on the second Tuesday in March is mistaken. It was rumored here at one time that Mr. Marcy would not accept the nomidation, that another convention would be called, and another ticket be put in the field. Such action is not contemplated. None of the party leaders believe that it is best to swap horses while crossing a stream. Mr. Marcy is here to-night. He talks freely and says that had he known the feeling against him, under no consideration would he have been a candidate. He says he authorized Mr. Wendall, a delegate from Portsmouth, not to let his name go before the convention under any circumstances unless it was the unanimous desire of the party that he again be its standard-bearer. He avers that he did not desire the nomination, that it was forced upon him, and rather intimated that if it was the desire of the committee he would make way for a younger man. Mr. Blodgett, of Franklin, Chairman of the Committee introduced the following resolution:

Resolved, By the State Committee, in behalf of the Democracy of New-Hampshire, that we cordially indorse and approve of the plan reported by the Joint Congressional Committee for a settlement of the Presidency which has this day passed the Senate.

The resolution was supported by Hon. Daniel Marcy, of Portsmouth; Henry O. Kent, of Lancaster; John G. Sinclair, of Bethlehem; A. W. Sullowway, of Franklin; J. W. Fellows, of Manchester; and E. C. Bailey, of Contoocookville, and was unanimously adopted.

IN MEMORY OF VICE PRESIDENT WILSON.

BOSTON, Jan. 25.—The citizens of Natick held a memorial service to-day in honor of the late Vice President Wilson.

ALLEGED SWINDLERS ARRESTED.

BOSTON, Jan. 25.—Loyal S. Smith, N. S. Stafford, John Ware, and Cyrus B. Bates were each held in $3,000 bail to-day, to answer the charge of swindling a number of persons in Vermont, of whom they purchased about $40,000 worth of hay and produce, and shipped it by rail to Lowell. In the meantime the property was brought to Boston and sold, the purchasers, as alleged, failing to make any returns, and allowing drafts made on Lowell to go to protest.

MAKING NEW SENATORS.

JUDGE DAVID DAVIS ELECTED IN ILLINOIS.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

SPRINGFIED, Jan. 25.—The Democrats whipped in line two bolters this morning, and then voted solidly with the Independents for Davis, electing him by the exact number of votes necessary. The Republicans voted, but finding that Davis had a majority, they returned to Lawrence, their caucus nominee. The 40th and final ballot was as follows:

Davis	101	Logan	1
Lawrence	94	Parish	1
Haines	3

TILDEN'S AGENT IN SPRINGFIELD DISCONTENTED WITH THE RESULT—JUSTICE DAVIS DICTATING HIS SUCCESSOR.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

SPRINGFIELD, Jan. 25.—Finley, who has been here since the Senatorial contest began as the pretended representative of Tilden, is dissatisfied with the result, and says the Democrats should have elected McCormick, which was a sheer impossibility. He says that Palmer is not to be Secretary of War, and that McCormick will control the Federal patronage in Illinois, if Tilden is President. He is mad because Tilden's programme was not carried out. The Democrats assert that Davis will not resign before the 4th of March, because, if he does, Senator Howe of Wisconsin, will be appointed his successor on the bench, and that if he is assured that Judge Drummond of Illinois, or some one acceptable to him, will be appointed, he will resign immediately. It is also stated by the Democrats that he will be their next candidate for President, and that is why he consents to descend from the bench. The result of the Senatorial contest is regarded as a draw, the Democrats being thankful that they escaped the responsibility of the election of Anderson, and the Republicans that they escaped Haines.

THE NEW SENATOR FROM ILLINOIS.

Judge David Davis, the new Senator-elect to succeed Mr. Logan, was born in Maryland in the year 1815. At the age of 17 he was graduated from Kenyon College in Ohio. He then studied law in Massachusetts, and at the Yale Law School, from which he took his degree. He began the practice of law in Bloomington, Ill., in 1835. He had early political aspirations, and in 1844 was sent to the Legislature of Illinois, and three years later was a member of the State Constitutional Convention. In the following year, 1848, he was chosen to one of the district courts, to which judicial position he was twice re-elected—once in 1855 and again in 1861. Judge Davis was a personal and intimate friend of President Lincoln, was a member of the convention in Chicago which named Mr. Lincoln for President, and afterward received the appointment to the United States Supreme Court from President Lincoln. Notwithstanding his judicial position Judge Davis has been often mentioned for political preferment, and has been recognized as a candidate for political positions. His name was prominently before the unfortunate Cincinnati Convention which nominated Mr. Greeley in 1872, where he received, on the first ballot, 92½ votes. His strength gradually dropped down from his first vote to 81 on the second, 44 on the third, 51 on the fourth, and 39 on the fifth. He was honored with one Electoral vote. He was again looked favorably upon last year by the Greenback Party, and was a candidate at the Democratic Convention at St. Louis. As a Supreme Court Judge he has pronounced some important decisions, one of which affirmed the constitutionality of the enrollment act of 1863. Another was in the trial of Mulligan by Military Commission in Indiana, which he held to be illegal. He also affirmed the judgment of the Court of Claims, in the case of the United States against the Union Pacific Railroad Company.

THE CONTEST IN WEST VIRGINIA.

WHEELING, Jan. 25.—Two ballots for Senator were taken in caucus last night, resulting as follows:

First Ballot—Short term—Necessary for a choice, 35.—Hereford, 18; Price, 19; Walker, 19; scattering, 6.

Second Ballot—Hereford, 21; Price, 20; Walker, 18; scattering, 4.

First Ballot, Long Term—H. G. Davis, 18; Faulkner, 23; J. J. Davis, 10; scattering, 10.

Second Ballot, Long Term—H. G. Davis, 21; Faulkner, 25; J. J. Davis, 8; scattering, 7.

One joint ballot was taken to-day in the House, resulting as follows: Short term—Hereford, 28; Price, 23; Walker, 12; Ferguson, 15; scattering, 11. Long term—H. G. Davis, 26; Faulkner, 23; scattering, 40.

NO ELECTION IN GEORGIA.

ATLANTA, Jan. 25.—The second ballot for United States Senator resulted as follows: Norwood, 95; Hill, 77; Smith, 29; Johnson, 10; Walker, 4. After the ballot the joint session was dissolved, and both houses adjourned. It is thought Mr. Hill cannot be elected, though his friends succeeded in preventing a second ballot to-day. There is great excitement over the contest between the friends of Messrs. Norwood and Hill.

TWO INDECISIVE BALLOTS IN THE KANSAS LEGISLATURE.

TOPEKA, Jan. 25.—The following is the result of the third ballot: Osborn, 36; Plumb, 30; Simonds, 26; Sears, 23; Harvey, 23; Martin, 15; scattering, 13.

Fourth ballot—Osborn, 36; Plumb, 31; Simonds, 28; Sears, 23; Harvey, 22; Martin, 15; scattering, 11.

ARREST OF A WITNESS OF A PRIZE-FIGHT.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 25.—Something of a sensation was created in Cincinnati to-day by the appearance of Kentucky officials armed with warrants and requisitions for the arrest of those who went down to see the great Allen-Goss prize-fight in September last. The Sheriff has already arrested several prominent young sports and sons of prominent families, and it is said that his list embraces a number of city and county officials and the representatives of the press who were present. One man who was arrested this morning made an appeal to the Mayor for protection. The indictments number over 100.

AN ULSTER COUNTY FAILURE.

RONDOUT, Jan. 25.—The liabilities of Jacob Hermance, of Ellenville, who recently made an assignment, are now shown to be about $100,000; some parties report them at about $200,000. A few days ago Hermance borrowed $5,000 in $1,000 notes. A large quantity of goods in Hermance's store have been replevined by New-York wholesale dealers, who allege misrepresentation on the part of Hermance. His assets are not yet known, as they consist of various kinds of property. He was reputed to be one of the wealthiest men in Ulster County.

THE UNION LEAGUE OF AMERICA.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 25.—The National Executive Committee of the Union League of America, at a meeting in this city at the Colonade Hotel to-day, elected Gen. Daniel Ullman, of New-York, Chairman for the ensuing year, and adjourned to meet in Washington on Feb. 13. Important action was taken in regard to an independent organization which has been started in the State of Illinois, and after speeches by Messrs. Haines and Tuck, of Maryland, action was taken in regard to the Union Leagues in that State.

LATEST NEWS BY CABLE.

THE EASTERN WAR CLOUD.

RUSSIA TO APPEAL TO THE POWERS TO RESENT THE AFFRONT OFFERED BY THE PORTE—MILITARY PREPARATIONS BEING MADE—DIPLOMATIC COMPLICATIONS.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—The Post's Berlin correspondent says it is understood that after Ignatieff has presented his report Russia will address a communication to the powers explaining her position, and appealing to their sense of honor to resent the affront offered to all Europe by the Porte, either by collective action or by empowering Russia to act for them. If this effort fails, Russia will next appeal to the allied empires. Should they not make satisfactory response, then, it is affirmed, she will act alone.

The Times' dispatch from Pera says Sir H. G. Elliott, the British Ambassador, has embarked. The suspicion that Gen. Ignatieff would negotiate separately with the Ottoman Government is unfounded. He has refused to receive communications from the Porte during the absence of the English and other foreign representatives. All the Charges d'Affaires have been instructed to avoid political negotiations and confine themselves to the ordinary business of their legations.

The Berlin correspondent of the Times reports that the Russian Government has given orders to prepare for calling out the third division of the reserve, which includes all able-bodied men. It has also ordered that the railway companies furnish exact lists of their rolling stock, rails, and other material at their immediate disposal, and has requested railway Directors to recommend foreign firms which are likely to supply railway material promptly.

A telegram to the Times from Semlin says the Committee of Seventeen elected by the late Skuptschina are in session. They are opposed to peace negotiations, except in the event of Russia taking no further steps against Turkey. Servians declare the proposed cession of Little Zwornik to Servia valueless, unless accompanied by compensation for the suffering they have end

TELEGRAPH MISCELLANY.

THE TEXAS PACIFIC BILL.

REPORT OF COL. LAMAR'S COMMITTEE—BENEFITS TO RESULT FROM COMPLETING THE ROAD—THE GRANTING OF GOVERNMENT AID URGED.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—The following is a synopsis of the majority report on the Texas Pacific Railroad prepared by Col. Lamar, the Chairman: The bill relieves the company from the consequences of their failure to complete the stipulated portion of the road and furnishes them with certain aid in the shape of a guarantee of the interest on their bonds. The report states that the failure to complete the required portion of the road was due entirely to the universal financial panic of 1873, and not at all to any mismanagement on the part of the company, and ought not to deprive them of any aid which, under other circumstances, the Government might properly give. The questions properly before the committee were: First, whether Congress has the constitutional power to grant such aid. Second, whether it is the interest of the whole country that this aid should be granted. The committee are of the opinion that the constitutional question may be considered as settled—both by the action of the Government in affording aid to other Pacific roads, thus establishing a system of Pacific connections of which the Texas Pacific is a necessary and component part, and by the full declaration of the public sentiment of both the great political parties, as declared in their respective platforms as far back as the Presidential election of 1860. The committee are also of opinion that as the Northern Pacific connection has been completed by Government aid, justice, both to the South and the whole country, requires that the system shall be completed on the same principle until its benefits are extended to all sections of the country. The committee do not entertain any doubt of the right and power of Congress to afford its aid to a road which is an absolute military and postal necessity, and which simply enables it, by the loan of its credit, to accomplish a work which it would otherwise have to finish at its own expense and by the direct exercise of its powers. The committee think that the great commerce between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts is scarcely to be considered as an inter-State commerce merely, but rather assimilates to that vast ocean commerce, in the care and protection of which Congress has never hesitated to aid ocean steamers, to make ocean surveys, and to establish light-houses, and they agree with the opinion expressed by Mr. Hunter, of Virginia, that it would weaken the great principles of State rights to attempt to stretch to cases which they do not cover in right reason, and where the obtrusion of such considerations can only seem to shock the common sense of mankind. But the committee fully agree that the conditions of this aid must guarantee the Government against sacrifice, and the people against the selfish exercise of the privileges which this aid confers. They think the provisions of the bill secure these ends. The grant is only the guarantee of the interest of the bonds which are issued only as the road is completed, and the committee estimate that from proper and trustworthy data they can assume that as a net earning of $1,500 per mile will meet that interest, the profits of the roads will be largely more than sufficient to meet that interest and prevent any necessity for the advance of a dollar from the Treasury. The mortgage of the whole property of the roads, the sale of lands, and the reserve of $5,000 per mile of bonds in the hands of the Government are further and ample security. The provisions giving equal rights of freight and passage to all the branch roads and the power reserved carefully to the Government to review and modify all charges, are, the committee think, full security against the conversion of the privileges of the road into a selfish and mischievous monopoly.

The report then proceeds in detail to state the line of route, the length of the road, trunk and branches, what has been built, what remains to be built, a calculation of probable cost, of probable gross and net earnings, and concludes by a forcible and eloquent statement of the general advantage and vast national importance of the enterprise, and its beneficent influence in developing Southern resources; in the stimulus it will give to the use of American iron, to our manufactures, in the supply of work and wages to thousands of skilled and honest laborers, who are now in destitution; in its general relief from the painful condition of industrial stagnation, and in the restoration of confidence and hope to the whole people.

THE CUBAN STEAMER MOCTEZUMA.

THE CAPTORS FIND REFUGE AT CAPE GRACIOS A DIOS—PURSUIT BY A SPANISH WAR VESSEL—THE MOCTEZUMA BURNED—FLIGHT OF HER CAPTORS.

HAVANA, Jan. 20.—The name of the steamer Moctesuma after her capture was immediately changed to Cespedes. The captors took an easterly direction, but, noticing or believing that a steamer then in sight was about giving them chase, they doubled Tortuga Island, in view of San Domingo. Having thus lost the steamer out of sight, they continued their eastern course, passing between San Domingo and Cuba, and leaving Jamaica to the right, steering toward the Nicaragua coast. To the south of Jamaica they met an English steamer, and sent a boat on board of her with two of the captors, who did not return to the Cespedes. The coal on board at the time of the capture held out up to the steamer's arrival at Cape Gracias á Dios, on the Mosquito coast, near Honduras. The point where they coast anchor was somewhat distant from the coast, and they sent a boat ashore containing four seamen and one captor, named Manuel Horey, who was the second in command of Prado. The boat capsized in the surf and one of the sailors was drowned. Horey went to some houses near by, in order to hire horses to go into the interior, but the three surviving seamen, being Spaniards, reasted, and went on foot to Trujillo, where the Spanish Consul chartered an American schooner, which brought the three men and dispatches to the Captain General about what had occurred, to this port. The intention of the captors was to penetrate into the laguna of Caratasca, belonging to the Republic of Honduras and not from the Cape Gracias á Dios, but when the Honduras authorities heard of it they sent a force of 50 men to the shore in order to capture those who might try to disembark. The captors further intended, after having entered the laguna, to make the steamer fit for receiving some artillery and to embark coal, which they hoped to be able to buy, but they found that the entrance of the laguna had not water enough. They therefore concluded to lighten the steamer. They commenced discharging her cargo, and sold part of it at a fabulously low price to the Governor of the Cape Gracias á Dios, exchanging it for some 90 tons of coal which he had, and for arms and powder, which they never received. The Cape Gracias á Dios belongs to the Republic of Nicaragua, and the captors of the Moctezuma were there treated by the Governor of the place with the greatest attention and distinction. They did not succeed in passing over the laguna entrance, and therefore they moved the steamer 18 leagues further south, to an entrance called Bragman. The location of the steamer and the way to get to it were pointed out to Mr. Captain of the Spanish gun-boat by the Captain of an English vessel, the Spaniard not even having a chart of that coast. At Bragman they were espied, on the 3d of January, by the Spanish aviso of war, Jorge Juan, who made ready to capture them, only waiting for more favorable weather to begin operations. But the captors saw the Jorge Juan, and immediately set fire to the Moctezuma, saving themselves in two boats. They took to the woods. Twenty of the original crew remained on the beach, and were taken on board of the Spanish man-of-war. The Jorge Juan then made her presence known to the Cape of Gracias á Dios, demanding from the Governor there Dr. José Dolores Bermudez, one of the captors who had remained, but the Governor could not be seen and his Secretary refused to do anything in the matter, saying that the Moctezuma had entered there with her papers all in order as a Spanish steamer in distress. The Jorge Juan then returned to the island, landing at Cienfuegos. The Spaniards are furious at the evident protection given by the Governor of the Cape to the captors of the Moctezuma, and threaten the Nicaraguan Republic with condign punishment, but it is presumed that the whole matter will end here.

NAVAL AFFAIRS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—Assistant Professor Marshall Oliver has been appointed head of the Department of Drawing at the Naval Academy, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Prof. R. S. Smith.

The officers of the Navy at Norfolk contemplate giving an entertainment to the Russian Dukes now at that port.

Master Greenleaf A. Merriam, of the Navy, seems to be missing. The Navy Department has been unsuccessful in reaching him with orders since October last.

Pay Director Robert H. Clark is ordered to duty at the League Island Navy-yard, relieving Pay Inspector Wallace. Lieut. M. S. Day is detached from special duty and placed on waiting orders.

Major Thomas Y. Field, commandant of the Portsmouth Navy-yard, has been commissioned a Lieutenant-Colonel in the Marine Corps, in accordance with his recent confirmation by the Senate.

A MISSISSIPPI SHERIFF SHOT.

MEMPHIS, Jan. 25.—Persons who arrived from Austin, Miss., this morning report that Sheriff Manning was shot about midnight on Tuesday night by John Trotwell, and died yesterday afternoon. Trotwell was refused to Mrs. Manning, and has vowed vengeance against Manning since the killing of Capt. Harvey, of Louisville, by Manning, and his separation from his wife. Trotwell was recently pardoned out of the Mississippi Penitentiary through the efforts of Manning. After being shot, Manning requested that his body be sent to New-Jersey, his former home.

THE NEW-YORK YACHT CLUB.

IT IS NOT IMPECUNIOUS—A PROPOSAL TO GIVE UP THE STAPLETON CLUB-HOUSE—PROBABLE OFFICERS FOR 1877.

The annual dinner of the members of the New-York Yacht Club was held at the club-house in this City on Wednesday evening. A large number of the members were present, and after the dinner a good deal was said about the financial condition of the club and the plans for the year. The allusions to the club which had appeared in print, representing that the society was badly in debt, provoked much criticism, and were all denied. The club five or six years ago issued bonds to the amount of about $16,000. Instead of allowing them to run 10 years, all but about $5,000 were taken up a year ago, thus exhausting all the available funds. At a meeting last Fall a well-known member of the club volunteered to contribute a large sum toward clearing off the remaining indebtedness, but the offer was declined. The club feels able to meet all its expenses, and is in no need of outside sympathy. The customary number of five regattas will be sailed next Summer and Fall. In view of the decision of the Court of Appeals making it necessary to remove the club-house at Stapleton, the expediency of giving up that building, which is owned by the Garner estate, was considered, and it is thought probable that the plan of maintaining a club-house in the Bay will be abandoned and the City house retained, although out of the 350 members of the club not more than 100 are in the habit of visiting the club-house. The nomination of Mr. S. Nicholson Kane for Commodore was generally approved, and as Mr. William W. Astor is in Florida with his yacht, and it is not known that he would accept the nomination for Vice Commodore, and Mr. Stillman was said to decline a nomination, there is every probability that Mr. Alexandre will be elected. For members of the Regatta Committee the names of Mr. G. L. Haight, Mr. William Kreba, and Mr. Philip Schuyler were mentioned as likely to be chosen. The Secretary, Treasurer, and Measurer of last year will be re-elected.

THE ALUMNI OF MADISON UNIVERSITY.

The annual meeting of the New-York Alumni Association of Madison University, at Hamilton, Madison County, was held last evening at No. 36 West Twenty-seventh street. Postmaster James, President of the association, presided, and Mr. C. F. Schroads acted as Secretary. Among those present were Rev. Dr. Dodge, President of the University; Rev. Dr. Speir, Professor of Hebrew at the University; Mr. J. B. Colgate, President of the University Corporation; Rev. Dr. Patten, of the Baptist Weekly; Rev. Dr. Gillett, of Sing Sing; Rev. Dr. Lawson, of Brooklyn; Messrs. Lyon, Middleditch, Bruner, and others. Rev. Dr. Patten, from the committee appointed to secure an orator for the annual public meeting of the association at Hamilton during Commencement week, in June next, reported that the committee were in correspondence with Hon. Roscoe Conkling, and thought it probable that the services of that gentleman would be secured as orator for that occasion. The report of the committee was accepted, and a resolution adopted that President Dodge be earnestly requested to preach the annual Baccalaureate sermon. The following gentlemen were elected members of the association: Messrs. J. B. Barry, B. A. Woods, J. C. Allen, T. B. Roberts, G. K. Allen, J. F. Elder, A. S. Lawson, T. J. Middleditch, C. L. James, and William Brooks. Officers for the ensuing year were also elected, as follows: President, T. L. James; First Vice President, Rev. Dr. A. S. Patten; Second Vice President, S. Tillman; Secretary, J. F. Schroads; Treasurer, E. H. Lyons. During the evening a collation was served, after which appropriate addresses were made by President James, President Dodge, Dr. Speir, Dr. Patten, Dr. Gillett, Mr. Colgate, and others.

A YOUNG MAN'S STRANGE SUICIDE.

Garrett Conover Vankirk, aged 24, a native of New-Jersey, committed suicide yesterday morning at No. 59 Prospect place by shooting himself in the abdomen. Vankirk boarded with Mrs. Taylor at the above-named place for two years past, during which time he was in the employ of Robert B. Gardner, dealer in hats, at No. 80 Greene street. He was in very poor health, and was of a moody and despondent nature. He told Mrs. Taylor that he was often tempted to commit suicide. Within the past two weeks young Vankirk had been suffering so severely that he was compelled to resign his situation, much to the regret of his employer. On Wednesday, Mr. Gideon McDowell, Vankirk's brother-in-law, who lives in Monmouth County, N. J., paid him a visit. This visit seemed to cheer Vankirk. In the evening they went to the theatre, and after the performance they returned home and retired to bed, Vankirk and his brother-in-law occupying the same couch. At about 6 o'clock yesterday morning McDowell was awakened by the groans of his brother-in-law, and turning down the bedclothes, found that Vankirk had shot himself with a revolver which he had doubtless concealed under the bed-clothes for that purpose. Dr. Linsey, of East Thirty-ninth street, was called to attend the young man, but could do nothing for him. He lingered until 8 o'clock, when death ensued. Coroner Croker was notified, and held an inquest in the case. A verdict of "suicide while temporarily insane" was rendered.

MOTION TO VACATE AN ORDER OF ARREST.

The case of Henry Simon against Gustav Cohen was brought before Judge Donohue, in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday, on a motion to vacate an order of arrest against the defendant. It appears that Cohen had Simon arrested on an order of arrest in a suit for assault and battery brought in the Marine Court. The order of arrest against Simon having been vacated, he brought the present suit, in which he claims $10,000 for false imprisonment. He obtained an order of arrest against Cohen, by virtue of which the latter is now detained. Cohen's release from custody is asked because no cause of action has yet accrued to Simon, the Marine Court suit not being ended. Judge Donohue denied the motion to vacate the order of arrest, but ordered the suit to be tried on Monday.

GOV. DREW, OF FLORIDA.

The Tallahassee (Fla.) Union, a Republican paper, contains an article in its issue of the 22d inst., from which we quote the following: "We have been much surprised at the storm of indignation Gov. Drew has raised among the Democracy, and, filled with a chivalrous desire to defend the right, we have determined to defend him. We cannot see in any action of his anything detrimental to the interests of the State or subversive of the principles of political economy. It is true that he has ignored the howling dervishes of the party—the men who expended so much cheap gas in his behalf during the campaign; the men who imagined that effective work was being done for their candidate by denunciation of everything Republican, and an egotistical assertion that nothing good could come out of Nazareth—and bestowed public favors upon others. Gov. Drew cannot please everybody, but he should congratulate himself that, by his lofty, resolute action, he has extorted praise from his most resolute opponents, and disregarding the behest of so-called party leaders, has made appointments that receive well-merited praise. If, at any time in the future, as now seems probable, he should need substantial support outside of party lines, let him only continue in his present most admirable course, and he will receive it with a free, unstinted hand."

PHILADELPHIA CAR FARES.

The Philadelphia Press says: "A special meeting of the Board of City Passenger Railway Presidents has decided upon a reduction of the trip fares to six cents. This concession, it is generally believed, is merely a halting place to a five-cent tariff, which, it is thought, will be inaugurated by one of the roads before the lapse of many months. The report, which was submitted by Mr. Poulterer, Chairman of the committee to which the subject of the reduction was referred, recommended the lowering of the fare to six cents, and the continuation of the sale of tickets as a matter of convenience only. The change is to take effect Feb. 1. Considerable discussion followed the reading of the report, but when a vote was reached it was found to be almost unanimous, there being only two votes recorded against the proposition. Boss Peters, Fox and Lawson, of the Second and Third and Callowhill street lines. There will be no change in the price of exchange tickets for the present. In the course of the proceedings it was stated as the sense of the board that the companies would willingly run for five cents if they were placed on the same footing with companies in other cities; in other words, if they were not obliged to keep the streets, from curb to curb, over which they pass, in repair; were not forced to pay a tax on their gross receipts, and were not saddled with a city tax of $20 per car.

EARLY FLOWERS.

The Bangor (Me.) Whig of the 24th inst. says: "A lady subscriber in Upper Stillwater, who has for several years sent us the first blossoms that have peeped from under the snow, has just sent us a dainty little bouquet of arbutus buds, wild checkerberry, and delicate trailing vines, which one would hardly expect to find in this bleak and snow-bound season. The 'May'-flower buds are bright and fragrant and partly opened, and we welcome the handy little flowers as the great courier of the yet distant Spring."

FORTY-FOURTH CONGRESS.

SECOND SESSION.....Jan. 24 and 25.

SUMMARY OF THE PROCEEDINGS.

The debate in the Senate on the Electoral vote bill was continued through the whole of Wednesday night, Jan. 24. Mr. Dawes withdrew his amendment. Mr. Morton offered an amendment prohibiting the commission going behind the action of a Returning Board established by any State law. Mr. Edmunds offered an amendment to that striking out the negative and authorizing the commission to go behind the findings. This was rejected by 61 to 1, and Mr. Morton's amendment by 47 to 18. Mr. Sargent submitted an amendment providing that the commission should sit with open doors, except in consultation on pending questions, which was rejected. The bill was then (7:10 A. M.) passed by yeas 47 and nays 17; 21 Republicans voting with the Democrats in the affirmative, and one Democrat with the Republicans in the negative. The Senate then adjourned till Friday.

In the House, soon after the opening to-day, (Thursday,) the Electoral bill was referred to the Committee on Electoral votes, who at once reported it back. It was agreed to continue the debate through the day and evening sessions and to-morrow, beginning at 10 o'clock, until 2 P. M., when a vote should be taken, the last four hours of debate to be limited to 10-minute speeches. Messrs. McCrary, of Iowa; Hunton and Goode, of Virginia; Hoar of Massachusetts, and Hewitt, of New-York, spoke in favor, and Mr. Hale, of Maine, and Mr. Monroe, of Ohio, against the bill, when a recess was taken till 7:30 P. M. After recess the debate was resumed.

SENATE.

The debate in the Senate on the bill reported by the select committee in regard to counting the Electoral vote was continued all last night.

Mr. MORTON, of Indiana, continuing his argument, claimed that the Vice President was not bound to open any fraudulent certificate from a State. If there should be half a dozen packages from a State in his possession, he was not required to open them all, but was only required to open the package which came from the Electors. As an officer of the United States he was bound to take notice as to who had been elected Electors by the States, and act upon his intelligence, just as other public officers do. There were two certificates from Louisiana in the hands of the Vice-President. He was not required to open them both. If he refused to open and present the second return, how was it to be got out of his possession? If he refused to open such return was that a cause of revolution? Had he understand that the Democratic Party threatened violence or revolution if the President of the Senate withheld a bogus certificate? This bill conferred upon the tribunal it created power to legislate, unless its action should be overturned by the action of the two houses of Congress. This commission could not carry out the bill without going behind returns from a State. It was sprinkled all over with very white pretty meal, but the Democratic cat was reposing beneath it. He argued that the bill was unconstitutional. He argued that the late Mr. Thurman had argued that the Democratic Party descended from the Republican Party of 1800. He [Mr. Morton] did not think the Democratic Party of to-day descended from anybody. He believed it to be for the best interests of all parties and all men that the Republican Party should rule this country. After the case has been made up he did not see any use in adopting a new plan, which would throw away one-half of the chances of the Republicans. He believed the Republican Party had served this nation, and the greatest considerations of humanity and politics demanded that it be continued in power.

Mr. BLAINE, of Maine, said he had, he trusted, as great an appreciation as any Senator on this floor of the gravity of the situation. He had supported the Senator from Vermont [Mr. Edmunds] in December in his constitutional amendment to leave this whole question of counting the Electoral votes to the Supreme Court. He had favored placing this power of counting the votes in the Supreme Court by a just and competent amendment to the Constitution, placing it in that great body, which by its dignity and impartiality could properly exercise it. But that proposition did not commend itself to the Senate of the Senate and was defeated by a large vote. So far as he was personally concerned, he was not wedded to any particular theory as to counting the votes. He desired simply to adhere to the Constitution, and, unlike many gentlemen with whom he was now newly associated here, he was free from any embarrassing record on this question. He was opposed to giving the power to count the votes to 14 gentlemen, four of whom were to complete the number by selecting the fifteenth, and thus by lot or chance filling that "coy and bashful blank," as Mr. Benton would have termed it, on which the attention of the country is so generally fixed. It was proposed to give these 14 power to decide finally the fifteenth alone, more power over the Electoral vote than Congress possessed, and he did not believe this could be done by a simple enactment. Nothing less than a constitutional amendment could confer on 15 men such tremendous power over the Electoral votes of the States. He did not believe it to be warranted by the Constitution, which he had sworn to support, and though he did not pretend to be what was termed a constitutional lawyer, every Senator on his oath must vote on his own conscientious belief of what the Constitution is and what it allows. He had desired earnestly to support the bill if he could do it consistently. The arguments adduced in its favor had persuaded him of its unconstitutionality, and he felt himself compelled, however reluctantly he differed from certain Senators, to record his vote against the measure. In conclusion he said that the old Republican Committee, now the public mind was so strongly directed to this question, to frame an amendment to the Constitution which would, if possible, avert in future all danger of a renewal of those troubles which were now causing anxiety in the public mind.

Mr. HOWE, of Wisconsin, denied that this bill was framed in the interest of the Democratic Party. He thought if the result of the late Presidential contest was not left in doubt, it was certainly left in dispute, and somebody must decide that dispute. He thought the bill reported by the select committee, and now before the Senate, was the best instrument in our country—the proudest tribute to American statesmanship which had been produced since the convention which framed the Constitution adjourned.

Mr. EATON, of Connecticut, said he was almost alone on the Democratic side of the Chamber in opposing this bill. He had faith, in the committee which framed this bill, and regretted he could not vote for it. He denied that the power to count the Electoral vote was vested in the President of the Senate, and argued that it was lodged in the two houses of Congress. This bill, this contrivance, now before the Senate, should sink in the earth. In his opinion the power to count the Electoral vote being vested in the two houses of Congress, it could be placed nowhere else.

Mr. THURMAN, of Ohio, said he did not believe this country could stand the quadrennial elections under the present system. He believed the people would become aroused to the facts and regulate the matter by constitutional amendment.

Mr. WHYTE, of Maryland, had doubts as to the constitutionality of this bill. If it was to be a measure, permanent in its character, he would vote against it. The ministerial duty of counting or canvassing the returns was devolved upon the people contested elections was another thing. He believed that the opening of the certificates in the presence of the two houses of Congress was to enable each house to verify the count made by the presiding officer. It argued that power was contemplated by the framers of the Constitution that the President of the Electoral returns from a State. They had no idea that there could be a dual State Government within the borders of a State. He denied that this bill was a Republican surrender. It was more like a Democratic surrender. It required all of his patriotism to surrender it all that he believed belonged to the Democratic Party. The bill presented the best mode for the settlement of the present difficulty. It was the duty of every patriot to surrender all doubts and unite upon the best means to bring peace and prosperity to the country, and not when the horse threatened to run away, rush to carnage and bloodshed. The chair was now occupied by the honorable Senator from Michigan, whose fairness and strict attention to duty no member on the Democratic side could gainsay. They well knew that he would not walk one inch out of the path of duty in counting the Electoral votes, and so duty would the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. MERRIMON, of North Carolina, said he had very serious doubts as to the constitutionality of this bill, though it was the work of an able committee. In view of the existing exigency he felt constrained to solve his doubts in favor of the bill and in the interests of peace. Its passage might save the country from civil war and strife.

Mr. BURNSIDE, of Rhode Island, referred to the remark of Mr. Morton in his recent speech that there were not a half dozen Senators on the Republican side who wanted the bill, and they would not vote for it if they were not apprehensive of danger. He denied that the Republican Senators were favorable to the bill on account of apprehensions. They were not intimidated, but were only separated from the Senator from Indiana [Mr. Morton] now, under whom they had fought many political battles, because they were acting for the good of their constituents. He favored the bill and hoped it would pass.

Mr. EDMUNDS, of Vermont, said the time had gone by now for debate. If he had time he would be glad to take up objections which had been made touching the constitutionality of the measure, and touching its fairness and expediency. It had been demonstrated, and would, although it seemed a difference of opinion, the country would drift upon a rock where the Ship of State might be broken to pieces. It might be that if the bill were defeated and Congress failed to pass any measure on the subject, one or the other of those parties would peaceably submit to a decision which they believed to be without law and authority. He would hope and earnestly pray if such an emergency should arise one or the other of the parties would submit. But he confessed to very grave doubts and very great fears that such would not be the case. He would ask the gentlemen on the one side or on the other who thought that their position was impregnable to consider whether it was probable that the common could avoid a dual Presidency and the possibility of civil commotion and civil war.

He then proceeded to quote authorities, pro and con, upon the question whether the President of the Senate had power to count the votes. It had been said by a great many people who agreed with him in political opinion that the authorities were conclusive that the Vice President had the right to count the votes, but in his opinion the authorities on the other side were equally potential and equally numerous. He thought, therefore, that it would be unwise and unpatriotic for the House to refuse to adopt a proposition, which all men might agree to as fair and just, by which the question might be settled. Would it be wise to decline such a proposition, and drift on to the 14th of February and the 4th of March with these conflicting opinions unsettled, and take the chances of a dual Presidency with all its horrors? There were some people who assumed that a single house of Congress had the right to exclude a vote. He submitted to the gentlemen who held that opinion that they could not stand on that doctrine and expect the country to acquiesce in it, or in the declaration of any result coming therefrom. He solemnly believed, however, that those who claimed the right of the Vice President to count the votes could not stand on that doctrine without great danger; that the people would not acquiesce in it.

In answer to the objection that the bill was not constitutional, he quoted from bills reported to the House in 1800 by John Marshall and in 1824 by Mr. Webster, of Massachusetts, which contained almost the same provisions as the present bill. He thought the bill was constitutional, and would with his votes and vote add its passage.

Mr. HUNTON, of Virginia, advocated the measure. He spoke of Presidential elections as dangerous periods in the history of the country, and as more likely than any other cause to wreck the ship of State. He declared that all preceding troubles of that character sank into absolute insignificance as compared with those that now stared Congress and the country in the face. From at least four States of the Union two sets of Electoral votes would be presented for counting. That was the grave question which had to be met, not in a spirit of partisanship, but of statesmanship. He himself subscribed earnestly and fully to the doctrine that the power to count the Electoral votes belonged to the two houses of Congress and not to the President of the Senate, but the opposite doctrine was held by one of the great parties of the country. As neither party was willing to yield its convictions on that point, the time had arrived when Congress should rise above partisan feeling, and adopt a mode of settlement that would tide over the difficulties and avert danger of war. He held that just as the tellers provided for in the twenty-second joint rule were but the organ of the two houses, so the commission provided for in the bill was but their organ, to do for them what they themselves might do. He also held that as the two houses had the right to count the votes, so they had a right by concurrent action to agree to any mode of counting that might seem best to them. He believed that unless some such tribunal as the bill was adopted no earthly power could prevent war, confusion, the disruption of the Government, and an end of republican institutions in America. It was, therefore, a high and solemn duty on the part of Congress to bring about a peaceful solution of the difficulty, and tide over this perilous period in our history.

Mr. HOOPER, of Virginia, said the members of the concurrent committee which had reported this bill were eminently entitled to the thanks of Congress and of the country for their patient, self-sacrificing, and patriotic labors, and he had no hesitancy in declaring that he was prepared to accept his share of the responsibility, and to accord to the plan proposed his earnest and cordial support. He enumerated circumstances, including President Grant's assertion on the 8th of November that Mr. Hayes was elected, the alarming of troops in the South, the manipulation of votes by Secretary Chandler, &c., which he said demonstrated the existence of a widespread and dangerous conspiracy to attempt the inauguration of Hayes. He was convinced, and he was strengthened in that conviction by the action of the Senate to-day, that the earnest wish of a portion of the Republican leaders that there should be no agreement on any plan for counting the Electoral votes. If this plan were rejected none would be agreed upon, and when the two houses came together to count the Electoral vote there would be a disagreement. In that event, the House of Representatives would have to elect the President, and then there would either have to be an ignominious surrender or a fight. He asked whether the gentlemen on the other side were prepared for the latter alternative. [An indistinct murmur of "Yes."] Were they or the people whom they represented ready for a conflict of arms? Were they prepared to "cry, havoc, and let slip the dogs of war?" If they were not, then he appealed to them by all the memories of the past, and all the hopes of the future, to pause before they entered on a struggle the end of which no man could foresee.

Mr. HOAR, of Massachusetts, advocated the bill. He said that the dangerous period which statesmen had foreseen in American history had arrived. In estimating the danger he was not affected by any fear of civil war or any menace of violence. Such threats, if made in the spirit of empty bluster, deserved nothing but contempt; if serious, they deserved the indignant scorn and condemnation of the loyal American people. But the evil of the civil war was not greater than the evil of yielding one jot of lawful authority. Nothing could be more injurious to the whole Republic than that a man should be put in the Presidential office whom at least one-half of the American people regard as a usurper. He could not conceive that the framers of the Constitution ever thought of yielding to the President of the Senate the vast power of counting the Electoral votes. That power was in the two houses of Congress, just as the English Parliament had for centuries regulated all questions affecting the succession to the Crown. And two houses of Congress were the tribunal which, by the pending bill, had to execute this grave authority. If they had that power by the Constitution, then it was left unsheltered. If it needed the forces of the law-making power to confer it, then this bill so constituted by it as to insure its decision according to justice and righteousness. He thought justice and right were compromised when they were submitted for their decision to force. They were compromised when they could only be maintained by the exercise of doubtful power. Our rights must not be compromised by being permitted to stand before a tribunal clothed with judicial powers, surrounded with judicial safeguards, and invested with regal authority by the law-making power of the country. In conclusion, he said the act which we are about to do will be an act unparalleled in the very newest of human history. Our annals have been crowded with great achievements in war, in peace, in arts, in literature, in commerce; but other countries, other republics, have equaled us in those particulars. But in this great act we shall stand without a rival and without an example. For a thousand years our children's children, of joyful pride, will read that while in the fierce strife for executive power the sun of other republics, after a short but brilliant day, had gone down in darkness and blood; in their own country, too, the same great strife had arisen, that their sky had been darkened by the same cloud, that their ship, weighted by its costly freight of love and hope, encountered the same storm, and was driven near the same rocks; but that in the midst of storm, darkness, and conflict the august and awful figure of law rose over the face of the waters, uttering its divine, controlling mandate: "Peace be still." [Enthusiastic applause on the floor and in the galleries.]

Mr. HALE, of Maine, said that no one was sensible that in opposing the bill he laid himself open to the charge of being an intense partisan; but he was glad no gentleman who had spoken in favor of the bill had discredited the honest objections which remained in the minds of some people. He was also aware that he would lay himself open to the charge of obstructing a peaceful settlement of the Presidential question. The voice of the great cities has been heard, and from day to day petitions have been presented from them in favor of the bill. The cities were entitled to respect, but "God made the country and man made the town," and he was willing to rest on the sentiment of the country. He had from the first been inclined to oppose the bill, and his doubts and fears had ripened into a positive conviction against the bill. The proposition was based on profound, fundamental errors. This bill, he said, created him by this bold assumption of the power of Congress to regulate and control the election of President, which power, in his judgment, had never been lodged in the two houses by the framers of the Constitution. Whatever the popular impulse might be in favor of the bill it must be met by the American people when they should have time to measure and contemplate its consequences. It struck a blow at the Electoral College—which stood as high in the Constitution as the Presidency itself, and shattered it from turret to foundation stone, and substituted for it the power of Congress, which might at any time thwart the will of the people and render nugatory its deliberate and expressed judgment. He had listened to strophes and illustrations ingeniously framed in the other end of the Capitol as to what might be the evils of a single man deciding the Presidential question; but it was a fact that this commission virtually gave the power of deciding the election to the Justice of the Supreme Court who would be selected by the other four.

At the end of Mr. Hale's speech Mr. HOAR, of Massachusetts, presented a dispatch, which he had just received from Boston, that a resolution had been passed by the Massachusetts House of Representatives indorsing and approving the Electoral bill.

Mr. HEWITT, of New-York, thought that the bill transcended in importance any measure which was likely to come before Congress during the present generation. After the election he had believed Tilden and Hendricks elected, and nothing had occurred since that time which could otherwise than strengthen that conviction. He had been asked why, holding that opinion, he should agree to depart from the ancient way in which 23 Presidents had been declared elected, which, if it had been adhered to, would have resulted in the inauguration of the Democratic candidates? This question he intended to answer fully, clearly, and without reserve. The main opposition which the Democratic Party had to meet was the influence of the Administration after the defeat of the Republican Party in November. It still remained intact and exhausted the election of its candidate, and was attempting to strengthen that claim by returning Boynton and military interference, and by declaring that the Vice President had the right to count the votes. The scheme was thus complete for counting Tilden in and Hayes in. He was confident that the plan, if last, would be executed to the letter and. The President of the Senate would count the votes and declare the result, and the President of the United States would deliver up his high office to the person so declared elected, and by the use of troops he would be duly inaugurated. Of course the House would not be silent and passive spectators of that programme, and would insist on its constitutional right to participate in the count, and would count the votes of Florida and Louisiana for Tilden. The result of such a state of things was plain. The rights and principles for which the Democratic Party of the country struggled would have perished if the attempt to count in the Republican candidate for the Presidency were acquiesced in, or if not being acquiesced in, was not should result. There was no escape from that position, except by an agreement between the patriotic men of both parties, who preferred the good of the country to the success of party. Partisan as he was supposed to be, but patriotic as he hoped henceforth to be regarded, he had deemed it his bounden duty to labor zealously toward the attainment of some just and constitutional plan of settlement, whereby but one President should be declared by a title which all citizens would respect and which no considerable number of voters would dispute. The bill, even if not within the direct letter of the Constitution, was certainly within its spirit. It substituted law and order for strife and anarchy; it meant the supremacy of the civil over the military power; it meant the preservation of the autonomy of States; it meant oblivion of all the bitterness of the past, security for the present, hope for the future.

Mr. WILLIS, of New-York, read a telegram from a New-York committee, signed by William E. Dodge as Chairman and Theodore Roosevelt as Secretary, urging the immediate passage of the bill as it came from the Senate.

Mr. MONROE, of Ohio, expressed deep regret that he could not vote for the bill. He had given it a careful and candid consideration, but there were some objections to it which, to his mind, had proved insuperable. He stated the constitutional objections to it, one of which was that it irrevocably deprived the Vice President of all power to ascertain and decide the lawful Electoral votes. He denied that Congress had the right to give away that power of the Vice President to any other body. He believed that the bill conflicted with most of the principal theories held on the subject. The practical difficulty was that members were asked to vote for a measure which conflicted sharply with cherished constitutional theories. Whoever was to be charged with disregarding constitutional convictions, that charge should certainly not be made against those who, out of regard for such convictions, refrained from favoring the measure. He should prefer to have the Electoral votes counted in the old way and trust to the good sense, the moderation, and the patriotism of Congress and of the country for a peaceful and satisfactory result.

At the close of Mr. Monroe's speech, at 5:10 P. M., the House took a recess till 7:30 P. M.

EVENING SESSION.

The House met again at 7:30 P. M., with Mr. Hooker, of Mississippi, in the chair as Speaker pro tem. The intense public interest in the debate, as manifested by the crowded condition of the galleries throughout the day, showed no symptom of abatement, the crowds in the galleries being even denser than in the morning session. As usual, however, in night sessions for debate only, the attendance of members was very small, not more than a dozen being in their seats when the House was called to order. The first speech of the evening was made by Mr. Caldwell, of Tennessee, who advocated the bill. He declared himself ready by his vote to commit the cause in which he believed to the tribunal provided for in the bill, assured that through it the country would find peace and prosperity. He was followed by Mr. Stevenson, of Illinois, and Mr. Caulfield, of Illinois, also in support of the bill.

Mr. SPRINGER, of Illinois, also advocated the bill, declaring that the inevitable result of the failure to pass it would be that Mr. Tilden would be proclaimed President in one end of the Capitol and Mr. Hayes in the other. There was no delegation of the powers of the houses; it was simply a reference to the commission to report as to which was the true return, which return would then be counted by the houses. This bill was an appeal from the Returning Board of Louisiana. It was bringing a case from the lowest order of adjudication to the very highest. He believed that the decision of the commission would be impartial and just, and would meet the approval of the American people.

Mr. LAWRENCE, of Ohio, asked whether the power of the commission was confined or left unconfined.

Mr. SPRINGER replied that it would have the power belonging to both houses, and that there was an appeal from its judgments to the two houses, which were the final arbiter in the case.

Mr. WILLARD, of Michigan, also advocated the bill, and urged that mere partisan considerations should be lost sight of and set aside in favor of the public interests.

Mr. SMITH, of Pennsylvania, spoke in opposition to the bill and in favor of the right of the President of the Senate to count the Electoral votes.

Mr. GARFIELD, of Ohio, desired as the outset in his remarks to say some good things of the bill. It had some great merits which he most sincerely recognized. It was intended to abate strife in a great and trying crisis of the nation. It was intended to aid in tiding over a great present difficulty, possibly a great peril or danger. It would doubtless bring a result, and would leave the person declared to be the elect of the nation with a more undisputed title than perhaps under any other method as yet suggested. It he had to speak of the bill only as a partisan, he should say he was not afraid of its operation. The eminent gentlemen who would compose the commission—eminent for their character and ability—were men who, he believed, would seek to do justice, and would do it. Believing, as he did, that Rutherford B. Hayes had been honestly elected President, he should confidently expect that an honest decision and declaration (as doubtless this would be) would find that to be the fact. But it might find otherwise, and if it did all good men everywhere would submit to the result. He had heard today a threat of civil war. The Roman Senate had never deliberated under the threat, or the presence of war, and if he was convinced that civil war was threatened he would be furnished with the highest and supremest reason why the American Congress ought not to do anything under such compulsion or threat. With all his soul he despised the threat of civil war, come from what quarter or party it might. Brave men and brave nations would do nothing on such compulsion. If this bill were to be opposed, it should be opposed for reasons so broad and weighty as to overcome all that had been said in its favor, and all the advantages which he admitted would follow its passage. He did not wish to diminish the stature of his enemy. He did not wish to undervalue the points of strength of a great bill before he questioned its propriety. It was not enough for him that the bill would tide over the present danger, however great. They should not forget that Hayes and Tilden forget Republican and Democrat; forget their own day and their own generation, and inquire what the thing which they were about to do would accomplish as to the future of the Republic, and in what shape, if passed, this bill would leave the institutions of the country, and transmit them to posterity. It would be unworthy of them for the sake of avoiding present danger to incur a greater danger for those who came after.

Mr. Garfield then proceeded to argue in support of the theory that it was the right of the President of the Senate to count and declare the

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

THE FEBRUARY MAGAZINES.

LIPPINCOTT'S.

—Spain is a country from whose picturesque cities the slightest sketches remain ever new and fresh. Mr. Edward King heads the Lippincott's Magazine for February with a paper on that land of poverty and pride. The pictures to which his paper forms a text are most extraordinary affairs. They are not wanting in a certain kind of savage directness, but they look as if they had been dashed off by a person who thinks recklessness is genius, and been engraved by a cutter of blocks laboring under a similar delusion concerning his part. They are burlesques on the burlesques of Gustave Doré. Edward C. Bruce has a concluding paper on "Our Floor of Fire," with many illustrations of volcanoes. Maurice Thompson contributes a pretty, even sonnet on the Wabash River. There is a story by the author of "Blindpits," and Mr. George Macdonald appears with some 20 pages of "The Marquis of Lossie." A new writer, Mr. William Henry Goodyear, talks of a thorny subject with the tone of one who knows all about it. The second part of "Faust" represents in Mr. Goodyear's mind the apogee of Goethe's genius, while Goethe himself is stated to be the greatest poet of the century. The article contains a good summary of the involved scenes that go to make up the second part of "Faust." Miss Emma Lazarus has a Christmas poem full of delicate fancy, of which we will give one stanza:

"Crusted with silver, gemmed with stars of light,
Topas and ruby, emerald, sapphire, pearl,
The enchanted tree within a world of white
Uplifts her myriad crystal branches bright
Against the pale blue skies. The keen winds whirl
Her globed jewels on the wheeted snow,
That hard and pure as marble lies below."

The chief feature of the magazine is a story by Berthold Auerbach, one of the few good novelists that Germany can boast. He will be remembered as the author of On the Heights, Villa on the Rhine, &c. We have the first six chapters of "Young Aloys; or, The Gawk from America," translated by Charles T. Brooks. The central figure is one well known in Germany—the emigrant's son who returns to the Old Country to look up the old landmarks, relationships, associations. Aloys has not yet shown anything of the commonest trait in persons of this kind, the distaste, namely, for the European spirit of supervision, which usually befalls the returning emigrant after the first novelty wears off. It will be found well worth reading. The "Monthly Gossip" department is much as usual.

CATHOLIC WORLD.

—The Catholic World has a very fair list of articles to offer for February, comprising fiction, biographical essays, travel, and history treated from a distinctively Catholic standpoint. An essay on Frederic Ozanam, Professor at the Sorbonne, is based upon a volume of his life and works published in Edinburgh and written by Kathleen O'Meara. It appears that the Ozanams trace back their family to Jeremiah Hozannam, a Jew, who was prætor in the thirty-eighth legion under Julius Cæsar, and received as his share in the military partition of land the township of Bouligneux. This is as good as the best Welsh pedigree. The essayist tells us that Fredric Ozanam's great idea from early life was the justification of the Catholic religion by the philosophy of universal history. "A Story of the Far West," is piety of the Catholic kind, clothed in the form of fiction. "Three Lectures on Evolution" attacks Mr. Huxley with charges of want of logic, which may be quite true as far as Mr. Huxley himself is concerned, but has little bearing on the theories of which he is so violent a champion. "Up the Hill" proves to be an opposition series to that running in Scribner's Monthly, but the writer is very different from Gen. George B. McClellan, in the manner of looking at sights. It reads like woman's writing, and assails Egypt from the artistic point of view, having much to say about colors, tints and hues. "Monsieur Gombard's Mistake" is a story closing in this number, which has decided cleverness of a light kind. Poetry is cultivated by an essay on "The Home-Life of some Eighteenth-century Poets," and music by an article called "Modern Melodists: Schubert."

THE AMERICAN CATHOLIC QUARTERLY REVIEW. January, 1877. Philadelphia: HARDY & MAHONY.

A review which is in its second year may be said to claim attention to its contents, for the presumption is that sufficient readers have been found to keep it on its financial legs. Whether this need necessarily be the case in a Catholic publication is, however, not so clear. It is conceivable that, for the good of the Church, a periodical of the kind may receive such gentle stimulus in the shape of a subvention that it can float across the sands on which quarterlies in this country are pretty sure to stick. The tenor of the articles in this number may perhaps warrant a notice; they are, for the most part, written with no inconsiderable ability. It does not need the talismanic initials S. J. after several contributors' names to warn one that the quarterly is in the hands and advances the claims of the Jesuits. The writing itself gives ample evidence of the peculiar minds which one is sure to find enlisted under their venerable banner. Rev. P. Bayma, S. J., discusses "The Liberalistic View of the Public School Question," founding his remarks on Francis E. Abbot's Lecture on the Public School Question, as Understood by the Liberal American Citizen. His first paragraph, contains the following phrase: "* * * by a Mr. Francis E. Abbot, who appeared before the public a week later as the champion of what is usually styled the liberal theory, viz., of a theory which ignores parental rights, and tends to transform the State into a Moloch, to which the children of the people ought to be sacrificed."

This will give the clue to the first article. The third bears the title of "The Bismarck of the Eighteenth Century," by S. J. A., who uses for texts the two following works: Polémique sur le Pape Clement XIV., Liege, 1853, and Défense de Clement XIV. et Réponse à l'Abbé Giobert, par J. C. Joley, Paris, 1847. Don Sebastian Carvalho, Marquis of Pombal, is the Portuguese Minister who figures as the Bismarck of the eighteenth century. He is introduced in dramatic juxtaposition with Gabriel de Malagrida, Priest of the Society of Jesus, at the moment when the earthquake overthrows the City of Lisbon. Naturally enough, the wars of the Jesuits in Portugal and France are brought out in strong relief. S. J. A. makes a powerful case, always writing from the standpoint of their negative harmlessness and positive good works. The article is too long, but can be recommended for an interesting although one-sided overlook of a certain phase of history. Brother Asarias follows upon this defense of the Jesuits, and assumes high ground against two of the following works: The Old Faith and the New, by D. F. Strauss; First Principles, by Harbert Spenser, and S. Thomas Aquinatis Summa Theologia. His article is entitled "Symbolism of the Cosmos," and he deals with the abstruse questions indicated by that title with the readiness of a man accustomed to subtle thinking. The text on which he insists, the principle which lays down several times in italics, is as follows: God actualizes the Cosmos by the word and completes its destiny in the word. His verdict on Strauss is, that he was a refined Fetich worshiper. "The meaning of the symbolism of the Cosmos has passed from him."

Of a lighter nature is a review of Daniel Bar- ton, Roberts Brothers, and Songs in the Night and Other Poems, London, Burns & Oates. The writer at once distinguishes himself by a wholesale division of modern poetry into the following audacious sections: 1. The Class of Motiveless Despair; 2. The Profoundly Unintelligible; 3. The Flesh Class, and 4. The Croquet Class, vers de société. He then talks in a fine strain of appreciation of Deirdré, which reveals, however that he has not read his NEW-YORK TIMES carefully. On Nov. 16, of last year, he would have seen a reference to the sources whence Dr. Joyce drew the poem. It might have made him wary of advising that poet to omit certain integral parts of the legend and add others not in keeping with tradition. It is a pity that an Irishman—as we assume from internal evidence the writer to be—should not know the antiquities of his motherland better. The Catholic Quarterly is a review of good promise.

LITERARY NOTES.

—The Christian World, of London, has a steady circulation of 190,000 copies a week.

—Mr. John Habberton's The Barton Experiment has already reached a circulation of 20,000 copies.

—Justin McCarthy's new story, Miss Misanthrope, begun in the February number, is to be the chief serial in the Galaxy for 1877.

—Rev. Dr. Richard Newton will soon begin to preach to the Musulmans through his books for children, which are being printed in Arabic.

—Mr. J. Beavington Atkinson, whom the Athenæum recently reported as dead, is to contribute a series of papers on German art for The Portfolio of 1877.

—The English and Ritualistic Church Kalender for 1877, not hitherto obtainable in this City, can be had through Charles F. Roper, No. 52 Fourth avenue.

—Robert Buchanan's Shadow of the Sword, a romance whose scenes are laid along the rugged and wild Breton coast, was published last week by D. Appleton & Co.

—Dr. Frederic De Peyster's recent scholarly address before the New-York Historical Society, of which he is President, on The Representative Men of the English Revolution, will soon be printed.

—Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. E. Holcomb's Fredthjof's Saga is the first American translation of this remarkable work, which has been reproduced in all European languages, even in Russian, Polish, and modern Greek, and has now been translated into English 19 times.

—Prof. A. M. Fairbairn's Studies in the Philosophy of Religion and History, published here by Lovell, Adam, Wesson & Co., is a book of special value to religious thinkers, and is intended to present the author's best efforts to give the studies preliminary "to what should be at once a philosophy and a history of religion."

—Annie Gaskell, a young English writer, gives a brilliant and graceful sketch of English society in A Widow of Windsor, which A. K. Loring, Boston, has just published, and which gives the publisher the same difficulty which he had with Helen's Babies—that he can hardly supply copies enough for the people who want to read it.

—The author of Joan of Arc, Mr. Robert Blake, comes to the rescue of writers who think that they are injured by the reviews of anonymous critics, and has printed a pamphlet entitled Anonymous Criticism, which authors who consider themselves unjustly treated can obtain from the English publishers, Kerby & Endean, London, and circulate among their friends.

—Robert Clarke & Co., Cincinnati, have in press, for early publication, a new and enlarged edition of S. Dana Horton's work on Silver and Gold, in Their Relation to the Problem of Resumption. The first edition of this work was "privately printed" about two months ago, and was favorably received by the leading students of the currency question in this country.

—James Parker & Co., Oxford, are bringing out 8vo editions of the liturgical works of the English Church. The initial volume is The First Prayer-book of Edward VI., compared with the successive revisions of the Book of Common Prayer, and contains a concordance to the rubrics in the several editions. The next issue will be An Introduction to these Successive Revisions.

—There are some books which never grow old. They go into new editions for every generation, and even rival the best productions of contemporary literature in the extent of their circulation. The Pilgrim's Progress is one of them, and D. Appleton & Co.'s new illustrated polyglot edition of this classic, in English and French, just published, will find a welcome at the hands of its legion of admirers.

—Mr. Charlton T. Lewis is to contribute to the International Review for March a timely article on "The Present Situation of Life Insurance." Gen. Francis A. Walker, Chief of the Bureau of Awards, is preparing for the same periodical a review of the late Centennial Exhibition, in which he will compare it with the Expositions at Paris and Vienna, and give some account of the Philadelphia Exhibition, specially as to its striking representation of new nations and countries.

—Harper & Brothers will publish, this week, R. W. Thompson's The Papacy and the Civil Power, containing an elaborate and complete history of the struggle between the temporal and ecclesiastical powers since the time of Constantine, and a vast array of facts tending to confirm the prevalent opinions of the Protestant community; an edition of William Black's Princess of Thule, in 12mo; another of his Madcap Violet, in 8vo, paper; and a new novel by the author of Ready-Money Mortiboy, entitled The Golden Butterfly.

—In the December number of the Quarterly Journal of Inebriety, a new magazine published at Hartford, Conn., under the auspices of the American Association for the Cure of Inebriates, there is a notable article by Dr. George M. Beard, of this City, on the "Causes of the Increase of Inebriety in America," which should be reprinted as a pamphlet and scattered broadcast through the land. Dr. Beard has made this and cognate subjects his special study, and regards the use of alcoholic drinks as the disease of the higher classes, coming from overwork, and the vice of the lower classes as the result of their surroundings. He writes sensibly and without a touch of fanaticism.

—Disciples of Izaac Walton were wont to be incredulous of stories brought by fishermen who penetrated to certain of the Maine lakes. If they were told of brook trout weighing eight or ten pounds they smiled in a superior manner and remarked: Lake trout! But now we have facts and figures, including an opinion of the late Mr. Agassiz to corroborate these fish stories. It appears from a sprightly article by Mr. Edward Seymour in Scribner's Monthly that the Rangeley Lakes contain trout of that and greater weights, which are true specimens of Salmo fontinalis or brook trout. Mr. Seymour's article forms one of those which call the attention of Americans to the sports and amusements that are within comparatively short range of the great cities, and, therefore, suitable for business men during vacations. The Rangeley Lakes have been exploited for some years by a fishing association, composed of business men, chiefly from New-York.

—G. A. Simcox, in the January Fortnightly Review, has an article on "Charles Kingsley," which is a notable specimen of clear, impartial, and just criticism. Mr. Simcox has seldom done better work or spoken more distinctly the collective judgment of mankind on a leading writer. Some of his statements justify themselves at once: "The ideas which were the root of Kingsley's life were so far from being clear and stable as the ideas which are the fading flowers of the lives of common men." "Yet his theology was not worthless. He was one of the first to note the fatal tendency of an old creed to become a terminus ad quem instead of a terminus a quo, and to urge the fruitful method of confronting religious classics directly with the broad, permanent facts of human experience, and the working hypotheses of virtuous lives." "With little subtlety of insight or feeling, with too much tendency to boisterous edification, he was still a most admirable descriptive writer." "The 'Three Fishers' will probably live. * * * 'Andromeda' has most of the merits of a Broad Church tract and an Alexandrian heroic idyll. His mantle as a novelist has fallen upon writers so unlike him as the author of Guy Livingstone, Called Back, and Miss Braddon."

LAW REPORTS.

A TRIANGULAR CONVENTION.

HOW THE AFFAIRS OF THE ERIE RAILWAY COMPANY WERE TO BE PROTECTED, AND WHY THE SCHEME FAILED—A DEFAULT OPENED BY JUDGE DONOHUE.

A story which sounds like an echo of that concerning the tailors of Tooley street, who began their petition "We, the people," forms the groundwork of the suit of John Livingston against John Hooper and Gustavus A. Hollinger. It appears that all three, who claim to be stockholders of the Erie Railway Company, held a meeting at the house of Livingston on July 26 last. The triangular convention organized by electing Hooper as Chairman, and Hollinger as Secretary, and then prepared for grave and weighty affairs of state. They adopted a resolution to the effect that "considering the corrupt management and present condition of the Erie Railway Company and its property, which has been shamefully wasted by the parties who obtained control thereof without any interest therein except to share in the spoils which their position enables them to obtain, it is the sense of the meeting that there should be concert of action between stockholders and bondholders," &c. The three individuals then formed themselves into the "Erie Protection Committee." Hooper was made its President, and Hollinger its Secretary. The two together composed the Sub-committee on Finance, and had power to add to their number. They exercised this power by taking in Livingston as the third member of the sub-committee. The ardor evinced by Hooper and Hollinger at the inception of the scheme soon began to wane and, a month after the organization of the committee, they met together and passed a resolution dissolving the committee and resigning their offices. Livingston, however, insisted that his fellow committeemen had no right to dissolve the organization and so he held a meeting of himself and unanimously elected himself as the President of the Committee. His two sons were then put in the other offices. After accomplishing this much, Livingston brings the present suit against Hooper and Hollinger to recover $2,500 for services in preparing for them certain letters, addresses, and documents to further the interests of the committee and "in perusing, analyzing, and digesting large masses of papers and correspondence." These defendants set forth these allegations in an affidavit to Judge Donohue, in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday. They also averred that all the resolutions referred to were passed at the instigation and suggestion of Livingston, who contrived to have them come to his house by false representations that Sir Edward Watkin, the Chairman of the English Bondholders' Committee, as well as eminent counsel, would be present. Livingston, they say, also pretended that he was a person of great influence and counsel for a number of distinguished foreigners, and that Commodore Vanderbilt acted with him. Livingston had also told them that they should not be held responsible for the expenses of the proceedings, which would be borne by the English bondholders, who, he said, had put a large amount of money in his hands. The plaintiff, however, had brought his suit and had obtained judgment against them on account of their failure to put in an appearance. Judge Donohue granted a motion to open the default against them.

ALLEGED CONTEMPT OF COURT.

A PROCEEDING TO COMMIT AN ATTORNEY, AN AUCTIONEER, AND OTHERS FOR DISOBEYING AN INJUNCTION ORDER—THEIR ANSWER TO THE CHARGES.

A somewhat remarkable case, in which it is sought to punish an attorney and other persons for contempt in disobeying an injunction issued from the Superior Court, was brought to the attention of Judge Speir in the Superior Court, Special Term, yesterday, and was made the subject of extended argument. The action is brought by Henry Wilson against Joseph M. Davis. H. B. Philbrook, the plaintiff's counsel, made affidavit that on Jan. 17 he obtained an order enjoining the defendant from foreclosing a chattel mortgage on the plaintiff's goods until the 22d inst., when the motion to make the injunction perpetual was to be heard. The order was obtained 20 minutes before the time set for the sale. The goods which were to be sold under the mortgage were at No. 24 Beekman street, and Mr. Philbrook, after obtaining his injunction order, sent his clerk, one Frederick R. Dudley, to notify the defendant and his attorney, J. P. Solomon, of the granting of the injunction. Dudley went to the place and served the injunction by showing the papers to Solomon and the defendant, and to the auctioneer, one Leo Hertzberg, and by reading aloud the injunction order. Mr. Philbrook avers that he himself went to the place a few minutes later and found that the goods had been sold, and that the auctioneer was settling with the purchaser. Mr. Philbrook asked the auctioneer whether he knew of the order of the court, and knew he was violating it. The auctioneer answered that he knew of it, but did not care anything about the order; that he had sold the property, and should move it, and that Mr. Philbrook might do his best. He handed the latter his card, told him to call on him at his store, and used other violent language against Mr. Philbrook and against the order. The defendant and Solomon were present. Mr. Philbrook spoke to them of the order and their recklessness in disobeying it, to which they made no reply. Dudley, who was still present, again showed the order of injunction to the defendant, to his attorney, and to the auctioneer. They said they did not care anything about it, or words to that effect. Mr. Philbrook says he did not have time to make and serve copies of the papers before the sale, but endeavored to serve them in the afternoon of the same day and since, but the defendant remains out of reach and his attorney refuses to accept the service. Other affidavits were presented in support of the motion, which was to punish for contempt the defendant and Messrs. Solomon, Hertzberg, and Bernhard Pinner, the latter being the purchaser of the property.

In opposition to the motion several affidavits were presented. In them the persons whose commitment for contempt is sought aver that no such language was used as is complained of; that no intentional disrespect was shown to the order of the court; that they did not know of the injunction, and that the Judge's signature to the order was not shown to them. Judge Speir, after commenting rather strongly on the state of affairs charged, took the papers, reserving his decision.

NINE BONDS WITH FORGED SEALS.

The suit of Martin Maas, and others, against the Missouri, Kansas, and Texas Railway Company, was argued before the Supreme Court, General Term, yesterday. The action is brought to compel the defendants to issue nine of their $1,000 bonds to the plaintiffs in the place of nine similar bonds of the Tebo and Neosho Railroad Company. These latter bonds were properly signed by the Secretary and President of the latter Company, and state on their face that they are duly sealed. The seals, however, have been found to be forgeries, though the signatures are genuine. The Tebo and Neosho Company was consolidated with other roads to form the Missouri, Kansas, and Texas Railway Company, and the latter proceeded to issue their own bonds in the place of the bonds issued by the former companies, but refused to take up the plaintiffs' nine bonds on the ground that they had been stolen. After the present suit was begun the defendants issued nine bonds to other parties in the place of those held by the plaintiffs. The case was sent to a Referee, who decided that the company was liable from the terms of the bonds and because of the genuineness of the signatures, even though the seals were forged, the plaintiffs being bona fide holders of the bonds for value. The defendants now bring this appeal. Decision was reserved.

AN ATTORNEY'S SLOVENLY PAPERS.

The growing practice among some attorneys of preparing their papers in a negligent and illegible manner has been made the subject of judicial comment at different times, but hardly in a more emphatic manner than that adopted by Judge Freedman, in the Superior Court yesterday, in the case of Ann L. Neill against the American Popular Life Insurance Company. The case was tried recently, and a verdict given against the company, from which an appeal is about to be taken. George Bliss, the defendant's attorney, put in a proposed case and exceptions, as it is called, in order that it might be settled by the Judge who tried the action. They were handed up to Judge Freedman, and he returned them yesterday with the following memorandum:

"In handing up the proposed case for settlement, defendant's attorney has paid no regard whatever to the requirements of the rules. As an illegible letter-press copy it is a double violation of General Rule 26, and the omission to mark thereon and upon the stenographer's minutes the parts to which the proposed amendments are applicable, together with the number of each amendment, is a failure to comply with General Rule 42. Unless defendant's attorney, within five days from date, hands up a set of papers prepared in conformity with the requirements of the rules of the courts and the special rules of this court, the amendments proposed by the respondent are allowed without further examination."

A PRISONER SEEKING RELEASE.

Moses Jesurun, who was formerly a Custom-house broker, was charged by the firm of Moses, Murphy & Co., with having converted to his own use $9,348.94 in gold, which they had advanced to him as their agent. A civil suit was brought against him, and he was arrested under the Stillwell act. The warrant of arrest was issued by Judge Westbrook. Jesurun has begun proceedings, by habeas corpus, looking to his release. The Sheriff put in a return to the writ of habeas corpus, setting forth the warrant of commitment. Jesurun filed a traverse to this return in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday, in which he claims that the warrant is void on two grounds. The first is, that the matters charged against him would have furnished proper grounds for his arrest under acts other than the Stillwell act, and that the latter act allows an arrest only when no other act will reach the case. The second point which Jesurun makes is that Judge Westbrook had no authority to issue the warrant, he not residing in this County. Judge Donohue reserved his decision in the case.

TRIAL OF THE COLLINS BROTHERS.

THE CASE OF THE ALLEGED RECEIVERS OF STOLEN GOODS GIVEN TO THE JURY.

The trial of John Collins and Nicholas Collins, dealers in general merchandise at No. 31 Bridge street, charged with receiving nearly 4,000 pounds of opium stolen from the bonded warehouse of E. C. Johnson, Nos. 6, 8, and 10 Bridge street, between the 26th and 28th of February, 1876, was resumed before Judge Sutherland yesterday, in Part II. of the Court of General Sessions. John H. Draper, the well-known auctioneer, was called by the defense, and gave the accused a good character. Nicholas Collins, one of the defendants, then took the stand, and testified that he knew nothing whatever about the opium in question until asked about it by Capt. Brackett, Special Treasury Agent. Witness told Capt. Brackett that had he known anything about the stolen property he would have reported it to the Police. John Collins next took the stand and testified that in March last a broker named McKenna, who had formerly done business for him, gave him a sample of stuff, the character of which he did not know at the time, but which he subsequently learned was opium. Two of his customers subsequently ordered a barrel each of "the stuff." He transferred the orders to McKenna, by whom they were filled, and the only connection he had with the transactions was that of acting as agent to oblige McKenna. Assistant District Attorney Bell recalled James Murray, the truckman, in rebuttal of the testimony of the Collins brothers, and the case closed. George M. Curtis, counsel for the accused, in his summing-up address to the jury, contended that the people had failed to prove their case, and that the prosecution of the prisoners was an organized conspiracy to impeach the character of the Collins brothers in several civil suits now pending. Assistant District Attorney Bell, in a brief but able address, detailed the damaging facts brought out against the prisoners, and stated that in order to acquit them the jury should disbelieve the evidence of Capt. Brackett, Capt. Petty, and every witness produced by the prosecution. He forcibly argued that receivers, especially respectable ones, like the prisoners, were ten times more guilty and more dangerous to the community than thieves, and called upon them to do their duty fearlessly by convicting these men, whom he had shown to be guilty. Judge Sutherland then charged the jury, thoroughly explaining the law in relation to stolen goods, and instructing them how they should apply it in the present case. The jury being unable to agree at 7 o'clock, were locked up for the night.

A CURIOUS DIVORCE CASE.

Judge Speir, in the Superior Court, Special Term, yesterday granted an attachment against Frederick Meincke. The latter's wife, Louisa, has brought a suit for a limited divorce from him on the ground of cruel and inhuman conduct on his part, and her counsel, Messrs. Bigler & Chamberlain, obtained the attachment against Meincke on affidavits showing that the latter refuses to pay the $10 per week alimony and the $75 counsel fee awarded to the plaintiff. The latter, in her complaint, sets forth certain acts of cruelty on the part of her husband, consisting of gentle reminders, such as choking, &c., by reason of which, she claims, she was forced to leave him. In his answer, however, he denies all this, and sets forth that she was in the habit of going to picnics in Jones' Wood with a lady friend of hers, and of whiling away the time with sundry strange men. He also charges her with having procured an abortion on herself, which she indignantly denies. There is a slight disparity in the ages of the litigants, which may possibly have something to do with fomenting the difficulties between them. He is 53 years of age and she is 23. Another funny story is told of him in one of the affidavits in the case. It appears that his wife, after leaving him, or as she says, after being forced to leave him, went to her mother's residence, which is above a livery stable. Two men in the place found a man prying around and thought his conduct rather suspicious. So they seized hold of the man and tore from him, what they say was a wig and false whiskers, disclosing the features of the defendant. The latter claims, however, that he wore neither a wig nor false whiskers, but that what was mistaken for these was only a lot of hair-grass.

CONVICTED OF FORGERY.

Edward Croft, otherwise called Craft, aged 51, who said he lived at No. 50 Bleecker street, was placed on trial by Assistant District Attorney Rollins, in Part I. of the Court of General Sessions, yesterday, charged with uttering a forged document. On Dec. 6 Croft presented to the Paying Teller of the Second National Bank a check for $463, purporting to be signed by Mrs. E. Dows, a depositor in the bank. Although the check bore a number corresponding to that last issued by Mrs. Dows, the Teller suspected the genuineness of the signature, and had Craft arrested. It was subsequently ascertained that the signature, although a good imitation of Mrs. Dows', was a forgery. Craft, in his own behalf, was examined by his counsel, Mr. Howe, and swore that the check had been given him by a man named Bob Cassidy in payment of a debt. Cassidy, he explained, had since been arrested for forgery, and was at present an inmate of the Tombs. The accused further stated that he had been in the English civil service all his life, and was in constant receipt of remittances from other sources, where he had an uncle, a member of Parliament, whose name, however, he declined to disclose. Mr. Rollins, in order to test the veracity of Craft, sent to the Tombs for "Bob," and the prisoner immediately identified him as the man who had given him the check. The jury, nevertheless, found the prisoner guilty, and at the request of Mr. Rollins, he was remanded for sentence in order that the truth of his story about his friend "Bob" could be ascertained.

THE MARSHAL OF A COURT-MARTIAL.

Judge Joseph F. Daly, in the Special Term of the Court of Common Pleas, yesterday, granted a writ of alternative mandamus in the case of The People ex rel. Frederick Unbekant against Emil Freund. The mandamus is made returnable on Feb. 2, and was issued on the affidavit of Mr. Unbekant, who is the Colonel of the Eleventh Regiment, National Guard. He avers that on May 21, 1875, an order was issued by the General commanding the Second Brigade appointing a court-martial for the trial of non-commissioned officers, musicians, and privates of the Eleventh Regiment, and appointing Capt. Otto Heinzmann as the President of the court martial. The court-martial convened on June 7, 1875, and Emil Freund, one of the City Marshals, was sworn in as the Marshal of the court. Thirteen persons were tried for various derelictions of duty, and were fined. The work of collecting the fines was put in the hands of Freund, who, it is alleged, collected $108, and has neglected and refused to return the warrant for the fines to the officer who issued the same, or to pay the money collected into the City Treasury. The mandamus is to compel him to return the warrant issued by Capt. Heinzmann to the latter, and to pay the $108 into the City Treasury to the credit of the regimental fund of the Eleventh Regiment.

WHAT IS NOT USURY.

Rather a nice point of law is involved in the case of the Equitable Life Assurance Society against Amasa Leonard and others, which was tried before Judge Joseph F. Daly, in the Special Term of the Court of Common Pleas yesterday. The suit was brought to foreclose a $7,000 mortgage made by Mr. Leonard to the society. It appears that the society, before making the loan, required Leonard to take out an $8,000 policy of life insurance from them, and to pay the first year's premium of $400 in advance. The latter amount was deducted from the amount of the mortgage, and the difference only was paid to Leonard as consideration for the mortgage. In answer to the suit for foreclosure Leonard set up the defense of usury, claiming that the $400 was really a bonus. The society, however, relied on a case reported in the third volume of Wendell's Reports wherein the Supreme Court, General Term, held nearly 50 years ago that such a transaction is not usurious. The defendants' counsel insisted, however, that the Court of Appeals had never passed directly on the point and he desired to test it. Judgment was given for the plaintiffs. The defendants' counsel intends appealing the case to the Court of Appeals. Lord, Day & Lord appeared for the plaintiffs, and Lowe & Morgan for the defendants.

RUBENSTEIN'S FATHER IN COURT.

Jacob Rubenstein, father of Pesach N. Rubenstein, the convicted murderer of Sara Alexander, appeared at the Tombs Police Court yesterday, and charged John Reinschreiber, a peddler, with having, on the 22d of last October, obtained $119 worth of jewelry from complainant, at his store, No. 83 Bayard street, on false pretenses. The defense was that the goods were sold on 30 days credit, and that $68 was paid on account at the time of the purchase. This was denied by Rubenstein, and the case was adjourned until to-day.

UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—Supreme Court of the United States, Thursday, Jan. 25, 1877: No. 100.—John L. Phipps et al., appellants, vs. John Sedgwick, assignee, &c.; No. 101—Barker Place et al., Executors, appellants, vs. John Sedgwick, Assignee, &c.—The argument of these causes was commenced by Mr. William M. Evarts, of counsel for appellants in No. 100, and continued by J. K. Haywood, for appellants in No. 101, and by Mr. B. N. Bangs for appellees.

COURT NOTES.

The argument on the taking of lands for the proposed public parade-ground will be had before Judge Donohue, in Supreme Court, Chambers, on Monday.

George Ticknor Curtis was appointed by Judge Donohue yesterday as Referee in the case of William B. Martin against The Windsor Hotel Company.

Thomas Ryan, the Captain of the officers of the Superior Court, died yesterday. He had held his position for 25 years, and was highly esteemed by his associates.

Judge Donohue, in Supreme Court, Chambers, reserved his decision yesterday as to the Referee to be appointed to settle the expenses of J. Bancroft Davis in foreclosing the fifth mortgage of the Erie Railway Company.

The answer to the amended bill in the case of Abram Miller against the East River Bridge Company was filed in the Clerk's office of the United States Circuit Court yesterday. It is a general denial of the allegations contained in the bill.

John Kelly, John Defrees, and James Crawford, were arraigned before Judge Benedict, in the United States Circuit Court, yesterday, on an indictment charging them with robbing the mails. They pleaded guilty and were remanded for sentence.

Judge Donohue, in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday, dismissed the writ of habeas corpus sued out by the father of the Ellis children. Judge Donohue says that a full consideration of the matter convinces him that Judge Westbrook passed on all the points involved.

The complaint in the case of Leonard Langbein against George D. Rollwagen was filed in the office of the Clerk of the Court of Common Pleas yesterday. The plaintiff, who is a partner of Assemblyman Langbein in the law business, sues to recover $445 and interest for professional services.

John W. Ford, of No. 319 West Forty-sixth street, was arraigned in the Yorkville Police Court yesterday on a charge of shooting Charles Barnham, of No. 263 West 17th street, and Kate Donnelly, of Seventy-second street and Eastern boulevard. He was held on the first charge in $3,000 bail, and on the second in $2,500 bail.

Justice Duffy yesterday, at the Tombs Police Court, gave Mrs. Fletcher Cobper, sister of Edward Brinckerhoff, who was committed to the Insane Asylum on Tuesday, an order on the Property Clerk at Police Head-quarters for $250 in money, a gold watch and chain, and other property taken from her brother at the time of his commitment.

Charles Dougherty, of No. 45 Cherry street, one of three youths who on the night of Sept. 12 broke into the store of Edward A. Dolan, No. 469 West Thirty-second street, and stole $5 in money and a quantity of cigars, pleaded guilty yesterday in Part I. of the Court of General Sessions. Judge Gildersleeve sentenced the prisoner to three years in the State Prison.

Julius Westheimer, a lad living at No. 61 Pitt street, was arrested last Wednesday night while attempting to pass a counterfeit 50 cent piece on a Chinaman in Chatham street. Yesterday he was taken before United States Commissioner Shields, where he stated that he knew the money was spurious, but did not think it was wrong to attempt to pass it. He was sent to Ludlow Street Jail.

The Supreme Court, General Term, yesterday appointed Chester A. Arthur, John J. Crane, and Adam S. Cameron as Commissioners of Estimate, &c., in the matter of making awards to the owners of a portion of the highway in South Fifth avenue to be taken by the Gilbert Elevated Railway Company. The first session of the Commissioners is to be held in the offices of Porter, Lewery, Loren & Stone.

The case of Jefferson W. Southmayd against Charles E. Orvis was tried before Judge Van Vorst and a jury in Part I. of the Supreme Court yesterday. The suit was brought to recover $1,200 on two notes given for the purchase of stock of the Farmers' Mower and Reaper Company. The defense was that there was no consideration for the notes, the stock being absolutely worthless. The jury brought in a verdict for the defendant.

On the 9th inst. Charles Gerhard, a discharged soldier, was inveigled into a low drinking den at No. 56 Thompson street, and was there robbed of $215, the result of years of saving. Capt. McDowell, of the Eighth Precinct, was informed of the theft, arrested three negroes named Nellie White, Mary Smith, and James Strain, and had them indicted. In Part I. of the Court of General Sessions yesterday Nellie White pleaded guilty, and Judge Gildersleeve sentenced her to five years in the State Prison.

The defendant in the suit of John W. Hamilton against Jacob Lorilliard, was examined as a witness before trial in Marine Court, Chambers, before Judge McAdam yesterday. The suit is brought to recover $350 for services rendered by the plaintiff as press agent of Howes and Cushing's circus, in which he claims the defendant is a partner. The services in question were rendered during a trip to the West Indies and South America. The defendant denies the copartnership. His examination was adjourned until April 2, to wait the return of the North Pole, the vessel which is used in conveying the circus. Mr. Hamilton is also bringing an action against Mr. Lorilliard for $5,000 damages occasioned to him by being left without means on Bermuda Island.

TWENTY YEARS IN THE STATE PRISON.

On New Year's night Jacob Miller, of No. 311 Rivington street, entered a lager-beer saloon on Goerck street, near Stanton, to look for an acquaintance, and, as he himself said, soon perceived that he was in the midst of a "hard gang." He made a hasty exit from the place, but was followed by some six or eight of the gang, who attacked him before he had gone more than a few feet from the saloon. One of them, who was subsequently identified as George Lewis, of No. 26 Goerck street, struck him in the face, while at the same moment a confederate named Peter Delaney, living at No. 87 Goerck street, attempted to snatch his watch and chain. Miller being a muscular man, defended himself for some time, but finally received a stunning blow on the forehead with a slung-shot or some similar weapon, and fell insensible to the sidewalk. On recovering consciousness he found that his watch had been stolen, that his temple was badly cut, that he had been stabbed in the back, and that a deep scar extended down his face, from the temple to the chin. Detective Charles O'Connor, of the Eleventh Precinct, subsequently arrested Lewis and Delaney, who were immediately identified by Miller as two of his assailants. The desperadoes were tried before Judge Gildersleeve yesterday in Part I., of the Court of General Sessions, and promptly convicted. After the conviction Mr. Rollins informed the court that the prisoners were members of a notorious gang of East side desperadoes; and that Lewis had already been twice convicted by him during his official career. Of Delaney's previous career he had no knowledge. Judge Gildersleeve said that the crime of which the prisoners had been convicted was a most aggravated one. As it appeared to have been Delaney's first offense, he would not impose the full penalty, but would sentence him to 15 years in the State Prison. Lewis, however, was a hardened criminal, and deserved no mercy. His Honor, therefore, sentenced the latter to 20 years in the State Prison at hard labor.

THE COURT OF SPECIAL SESSIONS.

In the Court of Special Sessions, yesterday, John O'Neil was fined $10 on a charge of beating a tenant named Louis Schenck, residing at No. 425 East Seventy-first street, who had failed to pay O'Neil rent which was due him. Thomas Kelly, charged with driving a horse afflicted with farcy, refusing to accept clemency himself at the expense of revealing his employer's name, was committed, in default of paying $50 fine. Oscar Fletcher, a colored man, was sentenced to six months' imprisonment on a charge of stealing two barrels of flour from Rudolph Kern, of No. 320 Spring street. Edward Horn stole a pair of boots from the store of McNiel, of No. 385 Sixth avenue, and was pursued by McNiel, who struck him a violent blow on the head with a shoemaker's hammer. Horn was sentenced to one month's imprisonment for the theft, and McNiel was fined $10 for the assault. William O'Brien and James Lacon, boys, were engaged, on Sunday afternoon, in stealing a pair of boots from the pockets of the female skaters. In attempting to steal a lace handkerchief from the seal-skin sacque of a fancy skater, they found the handkerchief fastened, and were caught. They were sentenced to ten days' imprisonment each.

THE STATE INEBRIATE ASYLUM.

A motion was made to Judge Wallace, in the United States Circuit Court, yesterday, by J. Alexander Koones, the counsel for the plaintiff in the suit of J. Edward Turner against the New-York State Inebriate Asylum and others to have T. Jefferson Gardiner and Charles A. Stevens made co-complainants in the suit. The action is quite a noteworthy one, and is brought to set aside the conveyances of the asylum property made to the State of New-York. The value of the property in suit is about $800,000, and consists of the buildings, land, &c., used for the purposes of the asylum at Binghamton. The property was formerly owned by a corporation, of which the complainant is a stockholder, but was transferred to the State in 1867, according to the provisions of an act of the Legislature. The plaintiff claims that such conveyance was a fraud upon the stockholders. Judge Wallace at first seemed to doubt the propriety of the motion, but was referred by counsel to precedents on the subject. After consulting these he granted the motion adding the complainants.

COURT OF APPEALS.

ALBANY, Jan. 25.—In Court of Appeals, Thursday, Jan. 25, 1877: No. 133—Willard vs. McMullin; argument resumed and concluded. No. 130—McDougall vs. Hoss; argued by M. J. Shecraft for appellant, Charles Mason for respondent. No. 128—Simpson vs. Brown; argued by Calvin Frost for appellant, W. J. Gree for respondent. Proclamation made and court ad

The New York Times

NEW-YORK, FRIDAY, JAN. 26, 1877.

AMUSEMENTS THIS EVENING.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—THE FLYING DUTCHMAN, (English Opera)—Miss C. L. Kellogg, Mr. Maas, Mr. Carleton.

FIFTH AVENUE THEATRE.—LEMONS; OR, WEDLOCK FOR SEVEN—Mr. C. F. Coghlan, Miss F. Davenport.

UNION SQUARE THEATRE.—MISS MULTON—Miss Clara Morris, Mr. James O'Neil, Mr. J. H. Stoddart.

WALLACK'S THEATRE.—ALL FOR HER—Mr. Lester Wallack, Mr. S. Mackaye, Miss Ada Dyas.

BOOTH'S THEATRE.—DAN'L DRUCE—Mr. Lawrence Barrett.

NIBLO'S GARDEN.—AROUND THE WORLD IN EIGHTY DAYS (Spectacular)—Kiralfy Brothers.

BROADWAY THEATRE.—UNCLE TOM'S CABIN—Mrs. G. C. Howard and Georgia Jubilee Singers.

ASSOCIATION HALL.—RECITATIONS and MUSIC by Miss M. Mason and the Young America Club.

PARK THEATRE.—THE GENEVA CROSS—Mr. C. R. Thorne, Jr., Mr. Stuart Robson, Miss Kate Rogers.

EAGLE THEATRE.—ACROSS THE CONTINENT—Mr. Oliver D. Byron.

NEW-YORK AQUARIUM.—RARE AND CURIOUS FISH AND MAMMALIA, STATUARY, &c.—Day and evening.

HELLER'S WONDER THEATRE.—PRESTIDIGITATION, MUSIC, AND HUMOR—Mr. Robert Heller, Miss Heller.

GILMORE'S GARDEN.—EQUESTRIAN GAMES AND FIELD SPORTS.

SAN FRANCISCO MINSTRELS.—MINSTRELSY, FARCES and NEGRO COMICALITIES.

LYCEUM THEATRE.—RUY BLAS—DON CESAR DE BAZAN—Mr. Edwin Booth.

NATIONAL ACADEMY OF DESIGN.—EXHIBITION OF WATER COLORS. Day and evening.

GRAND OPERA-HOUSE.—MAN AND WIFE.

THE NEW-YORK TIMES.

THE NEW-YORK TIMES is the best family paper published; it contains the latest news and correspondence. It is free from all objectionable advertisements and reports, and may be safely admitted to every domestic circle. The disgraceful announcements of quacks and medical pretenders, which pollute so many newspapers of the day, are not admitted into the columns of THE TIMES on any terms.

Terms, cash in advance.

TERMS TO MAIL SUBSCRIBERS.

Postage will be prepaid by the Publishers on all Editions of THE TIMES sent to Subscribers in the United States.

The DAILY TIMES, per annum, including the Sunday Edition.....$12 00
The DAILY TIMES, per annum, exclusive of the Sunday Edition.....10 00
The Sunday Edition, per annum.....2 00
The SEMI-WEEKLY TIMES, per annum.....3 00
The WEEKLY TIMES, per annum.....1 20

These prices are invariable. We have no traveling agents. Remit in drafts on New-York or Post Office Money Orders, if possible, and where neither of these can be procured send the money in a registered letter.

Address THE NEW-YORK TIMES,
New-York City

NOTICE.

We cannot notice anonymous communications. In all cases we require the writer's name and address, not for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

We cannot, under any circumstances, return rejected communications, nor can we undertake to preserve manuscripts.

The flow of eloquence in the House on the surrender plan of counting the Electoral votes will be copious though brief. Fortunately, the main force of the stream will be deflected into the Congressional Record where it will expend its somewhat muddy volume unnoticed and unfelt. The Democrats in the House are too well tutored to throw away so good a chance as the bill affords them of securing what does not belong to them, and when the weak but well-meaning Republicans are added to the sore-heads and the schemers, there is no better prospect of any formidable opposition to the plan than there was in the Senate. The vote in the House will be taken this afternoon, and then it will devolve on the President to say whether he can affix his signature to a measure which goes outside of the Constitution to create an agency for the performance of duties which if intrusted to Congress cannot be delegated, and if not so intrusted are clearly beyond its disposal. The President may not improperly take some counsel, regarding the constitutionality of such a device before allowing it to become law.

Judge DAVID DAVIS, who has just been elected United States Senator by the Democrats of Illinois, has always been an active and fairly successful politician. Born in Maryland, and educated in Ohio, he entered public life in the early history of Illinois, and was successively elected to the State Legislature and the Constitutional Convention. In 1848 he was chosen by the people Judge of one of the Judicial Circuits of Illinois, and was subsequently twice re-elected. While he was yet on the bench he took a conspicuous part in the Republican campaign, and, whether justly or not, gained the reputation of managing the "trading" part of the programme which resulted in the nomination of LINCOLN at Chicago in 1860. He was appointed to the Supreme Bench by President LINCOLN, in December, 1862. Judge DAVIS has been a candidate for the Presidential nomination on several occasions. He developed considerable strength in the Cincinnati Convention of 1872, which nominated HORACE GREELEY. Previous to the assembling of the Democratic Convention of 1876 his claims were also actively canvassed, but the superior management of Gov. TILDEN left him, with numerous other lesser competitors, far behind. Judge DAVIS will enter the sixty-third year of his age a few days after the beginning of his Senatorial term, March 4, 1877.

The election of Judge DAVIS to the United States Senate may reasonably be expected to deprive the Counting Commission of the benefit of his services as the fifth Associate Justice, who will hold the balance of power in that body. Of course, it cannot be said with absolute confidence that but for this election Judge DAVIS would be selected, though the law was as clearly drawn to secure his admission as if he had been named in it. This will be a grievous disappointment to the Democrats, and probably a welcome relief to Judge DAVIS, whose Presidential aspirations would hardly be aided by a participation in the somewhat perilous work of the commission. There remain Judges SWAYNE, of Ohio; BRADLEY, of New-Jersey; and HUNT, of New-York—all Republicans—from whom the four Justices must select, "in such manner as a majority of them shall deem fit," their fifth associate. If connection with the State to which either candidate belongs is held to be a disqualification, Judge BRADLEY must, obviously, be the man, though Judge SWAYNE as the oldest of the three is said to be a probable selection.

Senator BIXBY's bill for abolishing the Marine Court and substituting in its place a City Court, presided over by four Judges, to be elected next Fall, will unquestionably receive the approval of a very large proportion of the legal profession in this City. The judicial methods of that court are a subject of constant complaint; its disposal of business, instead of being cheap and rapid as intended by its founders, is both tedious and costly; its cumbrous array of clerks and doorkeepers involves a waste of public money, and by general consent it has long outlived its usefulness. There may in the details of the bill be much to amend, but its general principles are likely to command the approval of most people who are qualified to have an opinion on the subject.

The Legislature has got an exhaustive statement of the real estate held by the City, and it may be a matter of some public interest to know what they are going to with it. If, as some eminent authorities urge, the property ought to be sold, it becomes a question whether this is the proper time to throw it on the market, and if so, what benefit the tax-payers will derive from such a proceeding. We believe it was Senator GERARD who called for the return, and we presume that if the disposal of the Senator's own real estate were in question he would hardly, unless pressed by the most urgent necessity, try the experiment of selling it at the present time. It is tolerably clear that any large lot of real estate exposed for sale in the existing condition of the market would fetch very much less than what the owner would consider its real value. Then, the revenue from the City's real estate is pledged for the redemption of bonds payable out of the sinking fund, and the sum realized by its sale must, of course, be turned over to that fund. It could not be touched till the bonds for which it stands as security mature, and that fund is already more than sufficient to meet the demands on it. To sell the City's real estate now would simply be to incur needless loss, and to substitute for the revenue derived from its occupancy the interest which its realized value would yield in much less profitable investments.

What has become of the report of the Municipal Commission appointed about a year ago by Gov. TILDEN to devise a plan for the government of the cities of the State, and, particularly, to give stability and permanence to the fundamental law of this City? The expected result of their labors is already being used as an argument to stave off all attempts to give relief to New-York tax-payers, and unless the members of the commission desire the reputation of being made the instruments of doing the work of Tammany Hall, they should promptly report their agreement or disagreement on the details of the task committed to them. Meanwhile, the Assembly Committee on Cities would do well to set to work on the various bills before them as if no Municipal Commission were in existence. The public will not willingly be cheated out of some substantial reforms for another year by any pleas based on the assumed necessity of consultation, investigation, or general agreement about principles which are already sufficiently well settled. The Committee on Cities need the aid of men of practical experience in Municipal affairs before maturing from the numerous proposals before them some comprehensive scheme of reform. This they should at once secure in quarters where selfish or partisan interests are not likely to interfere with the value of the counsel to be obtained.

THE ELECTORAL BILL AND THE SENATE.

The opposition to the scheme of a commission to review the election of President was from the first a forlorn hope in the Senate, and yesterday morning, after a session of twenty hours, the bill was brought to a vote. Only one Democratic Senator is recorded against it, with sixteen Republicans. The vote for the bill was forty-seven, including both Senators from each of fifteen States, and one Senator from each of seventeen States; twenty-one of the supporters of the bill were Republicans, and twenty-six were Democrats. It will thus be seen that the measure received a majority of the votes in its favor from the Democratic Party, and that all its opponents but one were Republicans. The fact is significant, and goes a great way to explain the course of events by which a plan, wholly outside of the Constitution, without a shred of support in that instrument, based on a principle never before thought of in the administration of our Government, and directly conflicting with some of the most important and most firmly-established principles of our system, has been forced upon the country—for the opposition in the House cannot hope to accomplish the defeat of the measure. The essential motive force in this strange proceeding is the desire of the Democratic leaders to secure possession of the Government at any cost. For that purpose it was necessary to set aside the time-honored methods of declaring the Electoral vote, and to find some means by which the choice of the States, made and ascertained in accordance with the laws of the States, under the direction and with the sanction of the national Constitution, could be reviewed, and to accomplish this it was necessary to win, in one way or another, the support of Republicans. The policy adopted can readily be traced in the history of the past three months.

The first step was, by the concerted action of the Democratic journals and committees in every part of the country, regulated by the agents of Mr. TILDEN, to create the impression that a majority in the Electoral Colleges had been obtained for their candidate. That attempt was defeated, largely, we take the liberty of saying, through the vigilance of THE TIMES, and the promptness with which it gathered the facts from every part of the Union, and was able, from the morning after the election, to guard the minds of its readers against the devices of the Democratic managers. The next step was to claim the election in spite of the facts; to make the most extreme pretensions concerning the powers of the House of Representatives, and to fill the air with threats regarding the disorders which would follow the disappointment of their hopes. The country was vexed from Maine to Texas with alarmist predictions, and with seditious threats. The business community was frightened with the prospect of a "disputed succession," with prolongation of stagnation in trade, with tainted public credit, and with interruption of the profitable commercial relations that had at last begun to spring up with the South. In Washington the game of "bluff" was played with great boldness and skill. The managers pretended to be holding in leash the passions of the rank and file. Mr. TILDEN was represented as counseling "moderation," while the statesmen from remote regions, the temper of which could be safely exaggerated, represented that their constituencies would not listen to such counsels. The Northern leaders were reported to be laboring with the Southern leaders to keep their tempestuous dispositions in bounds; the Southerners replied that they would wait for their Northern friends to begin, but that there was a limit beyond which they would not be responsible for consequences. As a foretaste of the confusion which would flow from a denial of Democratic claims, an imposing demonstration was got up in New-Orleans, while vague threats were circulated regarding HAMPTON's intentions in South Carolina.

Meantime, the people of the country, who, if any one, must bring about the dreadful state of things which we were told was upon us, were going about their affairs as usual. No one could be found who had any intention of making trouble; the only fear was that some one else, not known and undiscoverable, might be violent, and this fear the Democratic managers encouraged to the utmost. The Republican Senators and Representatives were found, in the majority of cases, unable to face the terrors of this purely theatric storm. To them the sheet-iron thunder and the gun-powder lightning, provided by the Liberty Street Bureau, seem to have been real and impressive. They were persuaded that it was better to do almost anything that could be asked of them rather than to stick to their posts and sail the ship of State by the ancient way-marks quietly and steadily through these imaginary dangers. To this causeless dread were added other motives. Some of our friends saw no other way of proving their freedom from partisanship than to support a Democratic scheme. No one could then accuse them of a narrow devotion to the Republican cause, and if they threw away the solid interests of the country for this cheap and fleeting gratification, let us hope that they did not know the evil they were doing. Others were not so simple. Mr. CONKLING, for instance, cannot have coveted a non-partisan reputation, because, for some time past, no one has suspected him of partisanship. If he were as innocent of other unworthy motives as he is of an undue attachment to Republicanism, his fame would be much safer than it now is.

It would be unjust to the Democratic Senators not to acknowledge that at the last moment they dropped the mask, and left the Republicans no room for doubt as to the intent of the bill. Mr. EDMUNDS, in his opening speech, had declared that there was nothing in the bill which affirmatively gave the commission the right to go behind the vote of the Electors of a State chosen, in the language of the Constitution, "in such manner as the Legislature thereof may direct." An amendment was offered forbidding the commission to undertake any such usurpation, whereupon Mr. THURMAN declared that the amendment was "a dagger in the heart of the bill," and that no Democrat in the Senate or House would support the bill so amended. And so the act has passed the Senate, and will pass the House, giving to the commission unlimited authority to exercise powers which Congress dares not assert, and making it the arbiter of questions solemnly and expressly reserved to the States. Whatever may be the result—and even if Mr. HAYES shall through it come to his rights—the bill is a monstrous wrong. In any possible event, we shall be much mistaken if the terrified Republicans who are responsible for it are not yet made to deeply regret their action.

OBJECTIONS ANSWERED.

The fact is significant that the objections made to the method of the Constitution and the arguments in favor of a triangular commission, by Messrs. EDMUNDS, CONKLING, and FRELINGHUYSEN, are precisely the same as those of Messrs. POTTER, FIELD, and PROCTOR KNOTT, to establish the absolute authority to control the election of a President by the House of Representatives. The points, which seem to be regarded as knock-down arguments, from their perpetual repetition, are these:

1. If the framers had intended that the President of the Senate should count the Electoral vote, they would have said so. These marvelous logicians do not seem to see that the complete answer to this point is that if the framers had intended that Congress should count the Electoral votes, they would have said so. This they could have done by the addition of two simple words—"by Congress." They did not make this addition, therefore, according to the logic of these gentlemen, they intended Congress should have nothing to do with the counting at all. But the makers of the Constitution did say that the President of the Senate should perform the ministerial function of counting the Presidential vote—not expressly in the Constitution, but expressly in a communication attached thereto, and expressly in Congress assembled. The Edmunds-Field theory is that when LANGDON, ADAMS, JEFFERSON, and a dozen other Presidents of the Senate certified, with the approval of Congress, that they had counted the votes of the Electors, they certified to a falsehood; or, at least, that these presiding officers counted only in a ministerial way, forgetting that the vote could be counted neither by Congress, nor the Vice President, nor by both combined, in any other than a ministerial way.

2. The next most important point of the new coalition is that the House of Representatives, having the constitutional right to elect a President in a certain contingency, must themselves decide when that contingency has happened. The answer to this point is that the House has never so decided since the founding of the Government. In every solitary instance, when there has been a failure to elect either a President or a Vice President by the Electors, the President of the joint meeting of Congress has announced and made proclamation of such failure, and has officially declared upon which house devolved the duty of filling the vacant office. Certifying the non-election of a candidate by resolution or any other action of the House has never been thought of by a member of Congress until the year of grace 1876. This argument, then, based, as it is, on the reversal of the facts of official history, falls to the ground.

3. The third argument of the Conkling-Potter combination is that Congress has assumed the power to canvass the State Electors' votes, and Presidents of the Senate have acquiesced in such assumption. To this the answer is that one or both houses of Congress have been guilty of assumptions of power every year from 1789 to 1877.

But why did not the first Congress, in which were eighteen framers of the Constitution, assume the power to open, canvass, and count the Electoral vote? The sealed and certified votes of the Electors were transmitted "to the Secretary of the United States in Congress assembled," and yet these votes were taken from the custody of the Secretary of the old Congress and placed in the hands, not of the Secretary of the new Senate or House, to be counted ministerially or otherwise, by either or both houses, but the special election of a pro tempore officer was commanded to count and declare the vote, which an existing Congress was prohibited from doing by the men who made the Constitution. Why did not the second, the third, the fourth, and the fifth Congresses assume powers over the Electoral votes? Because the makers of the Constitution were still alive and in Congress, and would not permit its provisions to be misinterpreted or violated. In no instance before would the assertion of the Vice President's prerogatives have changed the result, and hence the slight necessity in later years of putting forth his authority. Besides, the vote when constitutionally, that is, ministerially, counted, is the same by whomsoever the act is performed.

4. The one-man-power argument is powerful with the advocates of the Clifford Commission and with those who maintain that the House is supreme. To allow one officer, the second highest in the Republic, to enumerate the votes the various States have cast for President would be the death of democracy without, and possibly with, a capital letter. But these men who believe in mobs and debating committees discharging executive functions, have provided a politically balanced committee of seven Democrats and seven Republicans, thus placing the decision of all material issues in the power of one man, the unknown fifteenth Commissioner.

It is not clear that one man who has not studied the questions, and who is not authorized by the Constitution to decide them, is to be preferred to that one man whose daily duty it has been to study them, and whom the framers of the supreme law directed should decide them. To the constitutional exercise of power by one man, however, there is only the demagogue's objection. The veto power is a power wisely granted. Every executive act of the President, and such acts are great in number and importance, is an exhibition of one-man power. The decision of the Chief Justice, when the highest court is equally divided, is the decision of one man. In every department of all Governments the will or power of a single individual determines questions and results. The argument, if good against the President of the Senate, is good against the exercise of executive power by all officers, from the President of the United States down.

SELF-HELP FOR THE SOUTH.

The movement that has been started in this City for promoting a readjustment of Southern State debts is kindly and generous. Whether it is in its present form wise, considered in relation to the future of the South, or just, considered in relation to the claims of the creditors of the repudiating and defaulting States, is a question about which opinions will probably differ. Mr. BRYANT says, truly, that a judicious creditor does not seek to crush a debtor whose insolvency is traceable to misfortune. Such a man, we are reminded, is entitled to sympathy and support. The illustration is perfectly adapted to the purpose for which it is used. For the debtor in the case supposed must establish a title to consideration by honest and conciliatory conduct. He must show that he has made no attempt to evade lawful obligations, and that he has exerted himself to the utmost to pay his debts. These are essential conditions of Mr. BRYANT'S hypothetical case. Unfortunately, they do not appear in the record of the insolvent States. Few of them have made any strenuous effort, or any noticeable sacrifice, to maintain their credit. Impatient under a taxation, which as a rule has not been greater than that patiently borne by Northern communities, they have either dropped their burden of interest or "scaled" or repudiated their indebtedness without reference to aught besides their own convenience. Political feeling has had almost as much to do with these proceedings as the promptings of the pocket. The reconstructed Governments incurred heavy obligations for the construction of railroads and other public works of more or less utility to the States concerned. Jobbery and waste entered into many of these expenditures, and there were perhaps, in some instances, technical irregularities of a kind which in private transactions a pettifogging lawyer might turn to account. Other of the debts were free from objection under either of these heads. The forms of law were strictly complied with; the proceeds of the bonds were expended faithfully. The pretext upon which these items of debt were assailed involved a rejection of authority created by the Reconstruction acts, and originated in a determination to discredit and embarrass Republican administration. The consequence has been the open and shameless repudiation by certain of the States of large amounts of indebtedness and the arbitrary cutting down of other amounts without regard to equity or reason. These are not circumstances that can be expected to reconcile the creditors of Southern States to the loose financial morality of which they are the victims, or to bring into active exercise the sympathy and generosity of the North.

The position of the defaulting States is not mended by the line of conduct they have since followed. They have at every step consulted their own immediate advantage only. They have said what they would pay and what they would repudiate—what taxes they could carry and what they meant to throw off—the creditor being all the time treated as of no importance whatever. They had got his money, and they have left him to whistle for interest or principal. They have reminded him, indeed, that he ought not to have supplied money to Republican Governments, and that the Democratic States, who are getting the upper hand, do not concede even moral responsibility for debts incurred by their partisan opponents. The latest evidence of this sublime indifference to common honesty appears in a Message of the Governor of North Carolina, in response to a modest endeavor of the creditors of that State to obtain their own money. "While it is certainly desirable in many respects to take this debt up and restore our credit to its ancient standard," Gov. VANCE remarks, "I am far from believing that we are subject to self-reproach, or are in any way obnoxious to the sneers of those who hold claims upon us. In regard to much the greater part of these claims," he proceeds to say, "there is not the slightest moral obligation resting on the conscience of any honest citizen of North Carolina. The story of the iniquities practiced upon us is an ample justification of our delay." This language is, no doubt, exceptional. There is no lack of repudiators in the South, but there are few so lost to decency as to "glory in their shame," after the manner of Gov. VANCE. After all, however, he has merely formulated the ideas upon which other States as well as his own have acted. May we not, then, repress all gushing tendencies in behalf of the defaulting and repudiating States until they show signs of repentance? Prudence may require the suffering creditors to forego some portion of their rights; but, before the States can have any claim to Northern succor, they must prove in some decisive way that they really desire an equitable arrangement. They must evince a disposition to help themselves before they can look for substantial help from others. If they can do nothing else, at least they can assume the moral obligation which Gov. VANCE discards, and so concede something to the just demands of their creditors.

The same theory upon which the South acts when it requires its creditors to submit to sacrifice for its accommodation obtains expression in the advocacy of the Texas-Pacific Railroad swindle. That measure is urged as a means of building up Southern prosperity. Appeals are addressed to Northern members in Congress on the assumption that the North, being responsible for the poverty and embarrassment of the South, is bound to contribute by divers legislative subsidies to its recovery and enrichment. It is not pretended that the Texas-Pacific scheme, gigantic as it is, covers all the South seeks in the shape of national aid to local and sectional undertakings. It is but the beginning of a system whereby the South proposes to fasten upon the national Treasury liabilities for the exclusive benefit of Southern States. The excuse is that extensive internal improvements will attract settlers, enterprise, and capital from the North and from Europe, and that an era of prosperity will thus be created whose benefits the whole country will share. Even if it were true that projects like the Texas-Pacific would have this effect, and that the absence of them is the main obstacle to Southern development, the iniquity and impolicy of the proposed subsidy would be unchanged. The nation would still be justified in refusing to assume liabilities on account of a project which has no solid business basis, and no claim of any sort that might not with equal fairness be pressed in behalf of other undertakings.

But the plea is not true. Capital and emigration are not debarred from going to the South by a dread of taxation, as one of the speakers at the Clearing-house alleges, or by the absence of railroads, as the friends of the Texas Pacific maintain. The real hindrances must be sought among the Southern whites, whose partisan intolerance, and the social ostracism growing out of it, repel Northern settlers and make material improvement impossible. That the South to-day pines for Northern enterprise, and mourns over the absence of immigration, is a circumstance for which it should blame only itself. Its people have adopted the best possible methods of keeping away both. Before they can hope to obtain either, they must rid themselves of their malignant partisanship, and impart to the politics, business, and society of their respective States the temper which prevails in all other parts of the Union. The South has many natural advantages over the West, but they count as nothing in the presence of the relentless hate and persecution which a political contest brings to the surface. A genuine change in this respect would be worth more to the South than many subsidies.

"AFTER MANY YEARS."

It is doubtful if the history of American criminal jurisprudence affords any such curiosity as that of the trial and sentence of JOHN D. LEE, who is to be executed at Salt Lake City to-day. He committed his frightful crimes twenty years ago. He was one of the leaders of a band of assassins undoubtedly acting under orders from the Mormon hierarchy. He has been twice tried; and he is to be shot to death, choosing this method of execution to any other. Twenty years have wrought great changes in the status and relations of the Mormon settlement in the heart of the continent. When the Mountain Meadows massacre was perpetrated, BRIGHAM YOUNG was at the zenith of his power. The effect of the overland emigration to California had not then (in 1857) become so marked as to appear ominous to the long-secluded Latter-Day Saints. YOUNG and his colleagues had openly defied the power of the United States and the General Government, BUCHANAN, then being President, had organized an expedition against the rebellious Mormons. The Army, under Gen. ALBERT SIDNEY JOHNSTON, subsequently killed in the rebel ranks during the civil war, was already moving against the Mormon capital. The Mormons were further inflamed by the killing of one of their Bishops, PARLEY P. PRATT, who had been overtaken and shot in Arkansas by the husband of a woman who had been abducted by this polygamous person. These events had greatly excited the Mormons, and, infatuated with the notion that they were to inherit the earth, they were ready to hasten matters by exterminating the Gentiles.

It is not necessary to rehearse the details of the massacre at Mountain Meadows. It is well known that, in September, 1857, an emigrant train of one hundred and fifty people camped in the Meadows, one hundred and twenty miles south of Salt Lake. The emigrants were well-to-do Californians who had been to Arkansas for their families, and were returning with wives, children, cattle, and much property. It has been proved that three Mormon Bishops, of whom LEE was one, were concerned in the butchery and plunder which followed. Seventeen small children were spared. The rest of the company suffered the most horrible deaths. There was an attempt to disguise the assassins as Indians, but this was of no avail. Some of the surviving children, now grown to mature years, testified as to the recognition of white men in the gang, and repentant Mormons confessed their guilty knowledge of the crime as perpetrated by order of high dignitaries in the Church. Gradually the dreadful secret came to light, and in 1859 a company of United States cavalry visited the scene of the massacre, gathered up the skeletons of the slain, and erected over them a cairn and a cross of timber. The simple inscription carved on the monument is "Vengeance is mine, saith the Lord."

Vengeance has come tardily to LEE; but it comes at last. In the Summer of 1875 he was tried for murder, the principal witness against him being one KLINGENSMITH, who was present at the murder. Strenuous attempts were made to connect BRIGHAM YOUNG and other Mormon potentates with the deed. This was only partially accomplished, and the prosecution gave up that feature of their case. But no impartial man who paid any attention to the trial could fail to be convinced that the massacre at Mountain Meadows was wholly a Mormon work. All movements against the suspected persons failed while juries in the Territory were packed with Mormons; and when LEE was finally placed on trial, the resident Mormons exhausted every means to frustrate the course of justice, and in the progress of the case endeavored to get him out of duress by stealth. The jury disagreed, but LEE was kept in custody, and last October was again tried, found guilty, and condemned to death. A curious statute of the Territory gives a condemned felon the right to choose hanging, beheading, or shooting, as a means of exit from this mortal life. LEE, who is known to have killed three of the helpless emigrants with his own hand, has chosen to die by the bullet.

After all, this execution of one of the leaders in that historical slaughter of innocents seems an inadequate retribution. To be sure, LEE was chief executioner. Many of the participants in the crime have gone the way of all the earth during the lapse of these twenty years. Some of them have died since the final trials were begun. Possibly, the moral effect of the shooting of this miserable man will not be great. After these many years, however, he suffers death justly, and as a terror to evil-doers everywhere. The law will be satisfied, though some may think that the arms of the timber cross in Mountain Meadows are yet stretched out for vengeance unappeased. But it should not be forgotten that from the day of that frightful butchery until now, the power of Mormon has steadily waned. When the hapless emigrants were slaughtered, BRIGHAM YOUNG reigned almost supreme in Utah. The "Gentile" Governor, CUMMING, was a cipher, and the isolation of the Mormon capital assured the hierarchy in their high-handed courses. So reckless were these creatures that they openly tithed the booty obtained at the Meadows, and added property to the amount of $30,000 to the storehouse of the Church as its share of the plunder. Mormondom, with its bestiality and strange delusions, remains like a plague spot in the midst of the continent. But its power for active evil is utterly gone. The original manhood of the strange sect has gradually sunk in its own infamy. The irresistible forces of social and political life have closed in upon the once-isolated community, and are slowly strangling its peculiar institution. The inherent weaknesses of the system have insidiously sapped its strength. But it is possible to see in this final decay some fulfillment of the vengeance which has so long cried up from the fatal field at Mountain Meadows.

A NEW SOCIETY.

The world is alleged to be full of mute, inglorious Miltons and other great men, who for lack of opportunity have never been able to demonstrate their greatness. This is their misfortune, and it should entitle them to the pity and consideration of their fellow-men. Nevertheless, in at least one respect these unknown great men are treated with unfeeling coarseness. When a statesman, author, or other person of notoriety dies, his friends are frequently guilty of the bad taste of having his brains weighed and the result widely published. Thus, when DANIEL WEBSTER died and his brains were put on the scales, the public was informed that they weighed about twice as much as the brains of the average statesman, and that hence his exceptional intellectual greatness was beyond all question. Now, at that date, there were thousands of young men in the New-England States alone, each one of whom was perfectly confident that he was at least the equal of Mr. WEBSTER in intellect, and that he had in all probability from five to seven or eight more pounds of brains than Mr. WEBSTER'S skull could possibly have held. But how could these young men demonstrate their wealth of brains? When Mr. WEBSTER'S friends flaunted his brains in the face of the public and asserted that no other New-Englander could furnish an equal quantity, they knew that their challenge was a hollow mockery. The ambitious young man who felt sure that his brains would outweigh Mr. WEBSTER'S, also knew that a fair count was out of the question. He could not have his brains weighed while living, and he was morally certain that were he to die, no one would take the trouble to weigh them. Thus his feelings were outraged, and he was virtually taunted with his accidental insignificance. Only the favorites of fortune possessed the privilege of having their brains weighed, while men equally great in their own estimation were compelled to take their brains with them to the silent tomb, without being allowed the consolation of having them weighed upon a platform scale or measured in a bushel basket.

The dissatisfaction which this grossly unfair system of brain-weighing has created has finally led to the establishment of a brain-weighing society on the part of a number of Frenchmen whose intellectual greatness the Academy and the nation has hitherto refused to recognize. Members of this society bind themselves to bequeath their corpses to the society, and in return the society engages to discover and weigh the brains of all its deceased members, and to publish the result in its official journal. Every Frenchman who feels confident that his brain would make a creditable appearance, if properly placed on exhibition, will hasten to join this society, and will thus be enabled to leave, as a precious legacy to his family, a handsomely engrossed certificate setting forth the exact weight of his brain, and thus showing that he had been the possessor of a really gigantic intellect, although while living the public had refused to recognize the fact. Henceforth the honor of having their brains weighed will no longer be the monopoly of a privileged class, but the most modest and obscure Frenchman can join the Mutual Brain-Weighing Society, and enjoy the certainty of receiving justice after his death.

It is certainly to be hoped that a society so beneficent in its purpose will prove a brilliant success, but it is possible that the present expectations of its founders may be disappointed. When it occurs to M. THIERS to remember that he has neglected to die for a long series of years, and when he accordingly repairs that neglect, and his brains are duly weighed, the society will naturally be anxious to show that among its members are those who in weight of brains equal or even surpass the veteran statesman. There will, hence, be a strong temptation to seize upon the member who possesses the largest head and to weigh his brains without delay, in order to check the boastings of M. THIERS' admirers. This temptation may be resisted during the early period of the society, but the day will come when the man with the large head will be informed that if he does not care enough for the honor of the society to voluntarily surrender his brains, they must be forcibly weighed, no matter how much inconvenience the process may give him. Thus, membership in the society will become a hazardous thing for men who boast that they are obliged to wear unusually large hats, and in time only those possessing small or moderately-sized heads will venture to join it.

With the defection of the large-headed element, the society would lose all interest in cerebral investigations. To hunt all over the body of a small Frenchman for the trifle of brain that he may have concealed about his person would be a tedious and thankless task. The friends of the corpse would be indignant at receiving a certificate announcing that the brain of the deceased brother weighed two and a half scruples, and the heartless world would mock and jeer at the society. No organization of Frenchmen can withstand ridicule, and in a short time the society for mutual brain-weighing would be laughed out of existence, and the dissecting instruments and patent scales would be sold at auction.

Happily for us, we need no such society in this country. We have a Supreme Court the business of which is to settle all vexed questions that are not its business. If any man thinks he has more brains than DANIEL WEBSTER, while his enemies pretend that he has less than Mr. HEWITT, he can promptly bring the matter before four Judges of the Supreme Court, who will select a fifth as umpire, and proceed to make a final decision in the matter. The custom of weighing the brains of dead statesmen will go out of fashion, since the opinion of five Supreme Court Judges is obviously to be preferred to the mere counting of weights; and in the place of the uncertainty which now prevails as to the weight of, say Mr. WATTERSON'S brain, we shall have that absolute certainty which the opinion of Justice FIELD and his associates alone can give.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

SENATOR CONKLING.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In his speech last night in advocating the plan of the joint committee of Congress to decide who has been chosen by the people of the United States to be their President for the next four years, Mr. Conkling expressed the opinion that Rutherford B. Hayes was legally elected. Why, then, did he consent to be one of the most active agents in concocting a scheme to give the Democracy a chance to defeat the popular will by counting in Mr. Tilden? For the first time since the nomination of Gov. Hayes he has publicly expressed a favorable opinion in regard to him. Republicans will never forget that in the only speech he made during the canvass he did not mention Gov. Hayes' name. This tardy tribute on the part of the New-York Senator to the high character of the man whom the Republican Party put forward as its leader will not relieve the former from his responsibility for an unconstitutional scheme by which the latter may be defeated and the popular will overruled and reversed.

A.

THE COPYRIGHT QUESTION.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I find the following paragraph in your editorial columns this morning:

"In The Spirit of the Times of Dec. 23 was published a story by Wilkie Collins, entitled 'The Captain's Last Love.' That story was reproduced in the English magazine Belgravia for January, and was thence copied into last Sunday's edition of THE TIMES. As the American copyright of this tale was held by The Spirit of the Times, we regret that we unwittingly infringed proprietary rights of which the publishers of that journal ought to have received the entire benefit."

There is evidently a misunderstanding here. Mr. Wilkie Collins could never have held, in any legal sense, the American copyright of "The Captain's Last Love," and it was not possible for him to transfer to another that which he did not own himself. Therefore "the American copyright of this tale" could never have been vested in The Spirit of the Times. As a matter of courtesy you might have refrained from the publication of the story, but you did not infringe upon the legal rights of either Mr. Wilkes or Wilkie Collins in reprinting it.

READER

NEW-YORK, Thursday, Jan. 25, 1877.

ALBANY.

BUSINESS IN BOTH HOUSES.

THE ELECTORAL BILL AND RESOLUTIONS RELATING TO IT—NEW BILLS INTRODUCED—TAXATION OF CHURCH PROPERTY—THE DISTRICT COURT CLERKS—INSURANCE MATTERS—POOL-SELLING.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ALBANY, Thursday, Jan. 25, 1877.

This being general order day in the Assembly, the two houses went into Committee of the Whole on assembling this morning, and having finished that order of business, introduction of bills, petitions, and resolutions followed. Judge Hogeboom called up Mr. Post's resolutions, offered yesterday, approving the Electoral bill now pending in Congress. He did this for the purpose of offering a substitute, which he read from his place. His resolutions strongly denounced the bill, declaring it to be a dangerous departure from well-settled law and precedent. Some little controversy followed between Mr. Post and the Judge on points of order, and Mr. Alvord moved that both resolutions and substitute be referred to the Committee on Federal Relations. This proposition was opposed by Mr. Hepburn, of St. Lawrence, who declared himself in favor of taking time for a full consideration of the Electoral bill, and was understood to say that he did not desire Judge Hogeboom's resolution to go out as the expression of the opinion of the Legislature. He desired the matter to be held before the House, so that it might be called up at any time and debated. Mr. Alvord then withdrew his motion to refer, and Mr. Post's resolution and Judge Hogeboom's substitute lie upon the table, where they can readily be taken up when desired.

The bill for the relief of those clerks of the several District Courts of New-York who, by decision of the Court of Appeals, were declared to have been illegally appointed to their positions, was ordered to a third reading this morning. There was not much, if any, serious opposition to the bill excepting from Messrs. Purdy and Spinola, who, of course, talked as long and as drearily as ever. Mr. Purdy, speaking as a lawyer, declared in the most positive manner that if the bill passed the City would have to pay both classes of clerks, the legal and the illegal ones. Mr. Strahan replied that the new clerks were ousted by the old ones on a quo warranto. The decision of the Court of Appeals in the cases declares that the title to the office was in the relators, i. e., the old clerks; but there the decision spends its force. The emoluments of the office which the de facto clerks had received during the time they were illegally holding must be recovered from them personally on action by the de jure clerks. Now, it happened that the new clerks, while they held office, were not paid a dollar by the City, because the Controller refused to do so while the title to the office was in dispute. They have not been paid to this day. If they are paid now, as the bill referred to proposes, they at least will have the money for which under any circumstances they are liable at any time to an action for recovery. The City is perfectly safe. Mr. Strahan concluded his explanation by remarking that if the City had to pay double, as Mr. Purdy had so positively asserted, the cost would be a little less than the State had to pay for the luxury of hearing the endless talk of the gentleman from Westchester. The bill, which authorizes the District Judges to appoint their own Clerks, which was introduced by Mr. Strahan, to do away with the present anomalous situation of affairs in these courts, where the Clerks are an independent power not responsible to their superior officers, will undoubtedly be passed without delay. It is also pretty safe to say that the salaries of these Clerks will be reduced to a proper amount.

There was a dreadful slaughter of the innocents by the Judiciary Committee. Yesterday they considered seven bills, and this morning six of them were reported adversely. It made quite a little flutter in the House when the string of adverse reports was read. The House agreed to four, and at the request of the members who introduced the bills, laid two on the table. With the official mark of disapproval attached to them, it is unlikely that even these two will pass.

Mr. Marvin, of Kings, introduced a bill this morning amending the law in relation to exemption of church property from taxation. As the law now stands, the real estate belonging to a religious corporation, be it 40 feet or 40 acres, is exempt; this bill declares that the exemption shall extend only to 25 feet around the church building.

A bill was introduced by Mr. Case putting State banks and banking associations and individual bankers on an equality with national banks in respect to rates of interest on notes, &c.

Mr. Nachtmann introduced, by request, another bill to amend the Excise laws of the City. Its purposes may be briefly summed up thus: To relax the restrictions now in force on the sale of lager beer; to reduce the fees charged for licenses; to prevent any arrest for violation of Excise laws except after refusal to obey a summons; to erect the Excise Board into a separate department of the City Government. It should also be added that the penalty for selling liquor without a license is made by this bill $25 per day. Mr. Cooke's bill for the same subject forbids the fees for licenses to exceed $30; this bill declares they shall not be less than that nor more than $100.

Several bills are coming, and some have come, into the Legislature from the trades-unions, having for their object the prohibition of employing convict labor in trades pursued outside prisons. A bill to this effect was offered this morning by Mr. Cozzens, who is not, however, understood to favor it. Such bills come to the Legislature every year from the same sources.

THE SENATE.

Controller Kelly's response to Senator Gerard's resolutions relative to the property belonging to the City of New-York and not used for public purposes was received. He gives a list of such property, and says he is in favor of its being sold and the proceeds put in the Treasury as soon as the condition of the real estate market shall warrant such a sale. But at the present time, he thinks, it would not be for the City's interest to sell, as the property would only bring a nominal price.

Insurance Superintendent Smythe, in response to a resolution of the Senate calling for a detailed list of the bonds and mortgages of the Equitable Life Insurance Company, reported that he had directed the company to furnish such a list last October, and that it was now in course of preparation. Meanwhile, he gives a list as filed by the Company in his office on the 31st of December, in the years 1874 and 1875. For the latter year the total loans on bond and mortgage amounted to $17,085,951 88; but a detailed list of the property was not given.

Senator Robertson, from the Judiciary Committee, reported favorably the bill understood to have been drawn by the District Attorney of New-York to prevent the sale of pools on elections. Some amendments were made to the bill in committee tending to increase the stringency of its provisions and to cover all cases of pool-selling except on contests of speed or horse races.

Senator Bixby will introduce to-morrow his bill relating to the Marine Court. It abolishes this court and substitutes for it a City Court, presided over by four Judges, to be elected at the next general election. The average salaries of these Judges will be $3,000, which is one-half the amount now paid to the Judges of the Marine Court. The bill limits the jurisdiction of the court to $1,000, and provides for three continuous trial and one continuous special term during the year. In cases in which the civil courts have jurisdiction, the costs allowed in this new court are to be the same as allowed in the District Courts. As, at present constituted the Marine Court is more expensive in the way of fees than any other court in the State. The new court will have no general term: appeals will go at once to the Court of Common Pleas. The limitation to the expenses of the court for minor offices shows a further saving of $37,400. Provisions have been made for the payment of all the fees to the City, which it is estimated amount to about $30,000 per year; but the former Marine Hall Clerk, it is asserted, only returned about $4,000 per year.

WORK BEFORE THE COMMITTEES.

HEARING ON THE NEW-YORK SALARY BILL TO BE HEARD BY THE COMMITTEE ON CITIES—TAMMANY OPPOSITION TO BE MADE THROUGH PRETENDED REPUBLICANS—THE BANK TAXATION HEARING—THE FISH BILL ABOUT TRAMPS.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 25.—The Ways and Means Committee heard Mr. Cowdin and State Assessor Briggs on the bill of the former for the reduction of bank taxation. Mr. Cowdin presented the case in behalf of the banks, alleging the great injustice of the present system of State and municipal taxation. He stated that one-third of the total amount of personal property assessed in this State is in bank stock, for the simple reason that the capital and the market value of the shares is known to all and the collection of the tax is an easy matter. He claimed that all the banks ask is that measures be taken to place all personal property, whether belonging to moneyed corporations, other than banks, or private bankers, on a par with the banks. Mr. Alvord disputed many of the statements of Mr. Cowdin, and a spirited debate took place between them. It is understood that the committee is not inclined to favor the bill in the shape in which it stands.

There will be a hearing by the Committee on Cities next Tuesday on some of the bills affecting New-York, the Salary bill included. Mayor Ely will appear. It is now known here that the opposition to the Salary bill will come from persons who, while calling themselves Republicans, are in close alliance with Tammany Hall, and will do its bidding in this matter. It is not unlikely that no prominent Democratic politician will openly appear at Albany to oppose this measure, but Mr. John I. Davenport has declared his intention of coming up to work against that and any other measure which THE TIMES advocates. The influences which will operate most strongly against the passage of this bill centre around the Police Board. Every scheme of intrigue will be used to defeat it. The general impression here, however, appears to be that the time has come when no more delay is possible, and that something will have to be done, any way, in reference to the unanimous demand for retrenchment in the expenses of the City Government.

The Judiciary Committee this afternoon heard an argument from Mrs. Shaw Lowell on the bill relating to tramps and vagrants, recently introduced by Mr. Fish at the request of the State Board of Charities. Some progress was made in the consideration of the measure, and it will be favorably reported in a short time.

AMUSEMENTS.

GENERAL MENTION.

Mr. Montague is about to depart on a starring tour.

Mr. George Fawcett Rowe is expected in town on Sunday.

The Soldene English Opera Bouffe Company will perform at the Park Theatre in April next.

Mr. Maurice Grau intends directing Mlle. Aimée's footsteps toward South America next Summer.

Mr. Daly's play of "Man and Wife" is the attraction—and a powerful one—this week at the Grand Opera-house.

A concert in aid of the Tompkins Square Homeopathic Dispensary will be given at Steinway Hall, to-morrow evening.

Mr. Edwin Booth acts to-night in "Ruy Blas" and in "Don Cæsar de Bazan." His engagement at the Lyceum Theatre terminates with the present week.

"The Flying Dutchman" will be represented for the first time in this City at the Academy of Music, this evening. Miss Kellogg will sing Senta and Mr. Carleton Vandedecken. In view of the success which has thus far attended the performances of English opera, it has been judiciously determined to extend the sojourn of the company in this City over next week.

Dr. Hermann Linde read "Julius Cæsar" at Steinway Hall, yesterday afternoon. Some interest was attached to the effort from the fact that Dr. Linde has in a few weeks acquired a sufficient control of the English language to deliver the speeches in the tragedy with fluency and clearness of articulation; in so far as the rendering of the text was concerned, however, his performance yesterday was quite mediocre.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—The House Committee on Appropriations to-day heard the Secretary of the Navy in explanation and advocacy of the department's request for a deficiency appropriation of $1,500,000 for the pay of the Navy. The committee received from the Secretary of the Treasury a letter recommending the passage of a bill to appropriate $500,000 specifically in money, instead of in "money or bonds," to pay Capt. Eads the first instalment on his contract for deepening the channel of the Mississippi, and agreed to report a bill in accordance with Secretary Morrill's recommendation.

THE WEATHER.

INDICATIONS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26—1 A. M.—In the lower lake region and Middle States, falling followed by slowly rising barometer, westerly to southerly winds, warmer and generally clear weather, excepting occasional light snows in the former.

WESTWARD TRAINS DELAYED.

The great snow-storm which spread over the territory from Albany almost to the Mississippi, on Wednesday, impeded railroad travel considerably. In the vicinity of Syracuse several trains were delayed hours. The express train from St. Louis, due in this City at 10:39 yesterday morning, did not arrive until 11:10 at night, 12 hours and 40 minutes late. A train bound to the West arrived at Syracuse drawn by five locomotives, their shapes almost concealed by the great masses of snow in them. The train was 12 hours making seven miles. At times the snow drifts were so deep the engines were stopped altogether. Then the brakeman and baggage-attendants were set to work with shovels. The late afternoon train from Albany yesterday could not be made up on account of the lack of cars caused by the non-arrival of trains from the West. When the St. Louis express reached Albany at 6 o'clock last evening, several cars were added to it, and the regular Albany express to the City was thus dispensed with.

ANNIVERSARY OF THE BIRTH OF BURNS.

The one hundred and eighteenth anniversary of the birth of the Scottish poet, Robert Burns, was celebrated in this City yesterday by a dinner in the afternoon at Southerland's, in Liberty street, at which were present: Robert Gordon, Chairman; James Brand, Walter Watson, Bryce Gray, W. J. Ingram, Alexander King, John McKay, John Laird Wilson, J. Goldie, D. McG. Crerar, J. Harcombe, and J. Sutherland. In the evening a ball was given by the New-York Caledonian Club at Ferrero's Assembly Rooms.

SUPPOSED INDIAN MASSACRE IN KANSAS.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 25.—A special dispatch from Leavenworth, Kan., to the Globe-Democrat says: "About two weeks ago George Clark, Jesse Eatob, Virgin Wright, and W. B. Powall, well-known citizens of Austin, Summer County, Kan., left that place for Kiowa, Barbour County, with four wagons laden with corn. Not returning at the time they were expected, the opinion prevails that they were murdered by Indians and their teams stolen. This opinion is strengthened by the report that the remains of four wagons and harness were found on the road by hunters, and by the fact that a party of Sioux passed through that section of the country a short time ago. A number of the friends of the missing men have started out in search of them.

A SWINDLER AT LARGE.

PROVIDENCE, Jan. 25.—A young man, giving the name of H. J. Clark, has this week victimized a jewelry firm here by paying what purported to be a certified check on the Manufacturers' National Bank of Boston for a bill of goods. He laid plans for extensive operations. He had operated successfully in Boston, and is supposed to have gone West.

REPORTS OF A MASSACRE CONTRADICTED.

YANKTON, Dakota, Jan. 25.—The reports circulated through special dispatches of the massacre of Volin's train between the Black Hills and Fort Pierre, are ascertained to be entirely untrue. Volin's train has arrived at Pierre all safe and sound, without seeing any Indians or being in

THE UNION LEAGUE CLUB.

BRILLIANT EVENING RECEPTION.

THE WEALTH, REFINEMENT, AND FASHION OF THE CITY LARGELY REPRESENTED—THE DECORATIONS AND THE PICTURES—NAMES OF SOME OF THE LADIES AND GENTLEMEN PRESENT—THE RECEPTION COMMITTEE.

The annual ladies' reception of the Union League Club was held last night, and proved in every way as enjoyable and select as the preceding reunions of that well-known organization. The entire house was thrown open, and the most elaborate preparations were made by the various committees for the comfort of their guests. The reception-room was exquisitely decorated with natural flowers, the mantel-pieces and cabinet-tops being almost concealed in banks of choice callas, roses, camellias, heliotropes, hyacinths, cardinal flowers, and pinks, garnished with ferns, smilax, and mosses. The massive chandelier was artistically wreathed with smilax adorned with red and white pinks and cardinal leaves. The parlors, supper rooms, and corridors were also profusely adorned with flowers and wreathed in national flags. The theatre, which for the occasion was converted into a ball-room, was beautifully decorated. The stage was transformed into an elegant garden, in which beds of choice flowers were almost hidden by palms and other tropical plants. A pretty garden and balcony scene was set, and the front of the stage was hung with green and crimson drapery, studded with gold stars. In the retreat behind the miniature garden Bernstein's full band was stationed, and supplied the dancers with music. The theatre and ante-room were also handsomely draped with national flags and glittering shields. The view from the reception-room clear through the theatre was very fine, and appeared exceedingly brilliant when the chambers were filled with richly-dressed ladies and gentlemen in sober evening costumes, the monotony of which, however, happily was relieved by the gay uniforms of the Army and Navy officers present. The hallway and staircases were tastefully adorned with evergreens, and one of Bernstein's bands was stationed in the reading-room to greet the visitors.

At 9:15 exactly Mr. John Jay, President, attended by his wife, who was attired in a superb robe of black velvet, trimmed with rich point lace, headdress of feathers and flowers and diamond ornaments, took his station in the reception-room, and the business of hand-shaking commenced. For the ensuing half hour the arrivals were not numerous; but before 10 o'clock the reception rooms and corridors were thronged. The company of course included nearly all the wealth, refinement, and fashion of the City, and the display of costumes was superb. Matrons, as a rule, wore rich robes of black, ruby, and crimson velvet, trimmed with white and black lace, head-dress of feathers, and diamond ornaments; while the favorite colors of the younger ladies were white pink, cream color, and pale blue. Flowers were worn in profusion, but jewelry rather sparingly. The costumes included every conceivable tint and color, and were both rich and novel. Between 600 and 700 guests were present, and the details of the entertainment were carried out in a most satisfactory manner.

Among the distinguished guests were: Mayor Ely and lady, Col. Willie Jay, Mrs. Paran Stevens and Miss Stevens, District Attorney Phelps, Mrs. Phelps and Miss Phelps, Prof. Chandler and lady, Collector Arthur and lady, Dr. Charles Phelps and lady, George Jones and Miss Jones, Gilbert E. Jones, Assistant District Attorney Horace Russell and lady, Col. and Mrs. Rush C. Hawkins, Col. Ethan Allen and lady, Commodore Nicholson, of the Navy-yard; Dr. Bloodgood, Dr. Bogert, of the Franklin; Chief Engineer Waring, of the Swatara; Commander Ramsay, Lieut. Commander Cotton, Major Dawson, of the Marine Corps; Dr. Keshner, of the Swatara; Assistant District Attorney George W. Lyon and lady, Assistant District Attorney Horace Russell and lady, Assistant District Attorney Joseph Bell and lady, Andrew W. Leggat and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Thomas, Albany; Mrs. William G. Thomas, Albany; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Watrous, Josiah M. Fiske and wife, Levi P. Morton and wife, Judge Fancher and lady, Albert Bierstadt and wife, Jasper F. Cropsey and wife, ex-Mayor Wickham and wife, ex-Mayor Hunter, of Brooklyn, and wife, Baron Blanc, the Italian Minister; M. De Vaugdas, Secretary of French Legation, Chevalier Bagnotte, Vice Consul of Italy; Dr. J. G. Holland and wife, W. D. Foulks, of London; Gen. J. G. Barnard, Judge Noah Davis, Joseph Seligman and daughter, ex-Alderman Vance, wife, and daughter, Joseph H. Choate, ex-President of the club, and Mrs. Choate, William Orton and lady, Jackson S. Schultz and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Nash and Miss Bessie Nash, C. W. Marshall and Miss McKesson, Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Richardson, Gen. James H. Van Alen and lady, John Sloane, Courtlandt D. Parker and lady, Seymour Prince and Miss Bunce, Mr. and Mrs. Dominick and Miss Marshall, Thomas L. Thornell and lady, C. C. Waite, Police Commissioner Wheeler and lady, Police Commissioner Erhardt and lady, Watson E. Case and wife, J. W. Godgard and wife, Lieut. Toffree, Nathaniel A. Prentiss, S. Franklin Stanton, Carlisle Norwood, Mrs. Maxwell Norwood, Thomas Denny and lady, A. B. Darling and wife, Hon. John D. Lawson and wife.

The following were the Reception Committee:

Charles Watrous,	N. A. Prentiss.
Levi P. Morton,	Josiah M. Fiske,
Frederick D. Tappen,	Marshall O. Roberts,
Daniel F. Appleton,	William Orton,
Elliot C. Cowdin	Charles W. Griswold,
Charles S. Smith,	Edward Seddard,
John E. Van Alen,	Robert Lenox Belknap,
Chauncey M. Depew,	George Jones,
Nathaniel P. Bailey,	Chester A. Arthur,
Elliot F. Shepard,	J. B. Kiddoo.
Fletcher S. Harper, Jr.,	Benjamin K. Phelps,
John T. Denny.	Anson G. McCook,
Richard Butler.	Jonas M. Bundy,
Edward M. Townsend,	Thomas L. Thornell,
George Bliss,	Cornelius D. Van Wagenen,
John C. Southwick,	Oliver P. C. Billings,
Augustus G. Paine,	James O. Hoyt,
George B. Butler,	Ethan Allen,
William Rogers,	L. Laflin Kellogg,
George C. Magoun,	Horace Russell,
William Armstrong,	Elihu Root,
William A. Paton,	Carlisle Norwood, Jr.,
Charles F. Hardy,	Joseph M. Hasseltine,
S. Edward Naso,	Frederick C. Richardson,
Charles C. Beaman, Jr.	Louis C. Lewis.
Warren E. Greenleaf,	Harvey D. Gibson,
Gilbert E. Jones,	W. H. Hollister,
John D. Lyon,	Edgar T. Blake,
Isaac F. Roe,	Henry M. Burdett,
C. C. Worthington.	Ernest G. Stedman,
William Carpender,	John W. Atwood.
David Milliken, Jr.,	A. Franklin Stanton.

Dancing commenced at 10:15 and was kept up with vigor until the programme had been exhausted. Supper was served in splendid style at midnight in the billiard rooms.

THE PAINTINGS.

The reception at the Union League has been graced, according to custom, with a small loan collection belonging chiefly to members of the club. This year the number of pictures is not great, but their average of excellence is very high. In regard to size, that by Mr. James M. Hart may be considered the most impressive picture on the wall. Its title is "The Autumn Woods," although it is first of all a cattle piece. Mr. Hart has long been remarkable for his cattle and seems to be one of our painters who has progress and improvement in him. This picture is an excellent piece of work as to the cows that file out from between the trees, nor will it prove displeasing in respect to the leafage and background. It has just caught a certain spirit or sentiment which does not always appear in cows in the forest, but is seen at times by the eyes that know how to look. Close beside it hangs one of Hamon's peculiar paintings, having a kind of dry mist between one and the hardly human figures. In shape, Hamon's round-bosomed, soft-muscled women are earthy enough; it is the atmosphere that gives them unreality. This picture is very attractive, being less shadowy than some he has painted, while the naughty little chained cupid whom the maiden has in leash, like a pet dog, is a delicious bit of canvas. This bambino stops to smell of an iris flower, while his mistress handles a grievous whip, as if about to bring it around upon his poor bare little back. Flowers and shrubs of various dates of flowering are all blooming at once; we may suppose, then, that the couple are walking where it is perpetual Spring. On the left of Mr. Hart's fine cattle piece hangs a portrait done after the inimitable manner of French artists. It is a three-quarters length of a young lady by G. Jacquet, in which equal attention has been given to face and dress. The interest has not been centred on the clothes alone, as is so often the case with Toulmouche and his confrères, but they are equally satisfactorily rendered. It would have been the easiest matter in the world to make of this a simpering Miss buttoning an obtrusive glove, but Jacquet has not only avoided such a thing, but given her a sweet, mild expression which stamps her a lady.

The same cannot always be said of Madrazo, who has three pictures of women here, which if not portraits are copies of individuals. The one hanging on the same wall with those mentioned has just a suspicion of vulgarity which does not arise from the pronounced colors used, but from something deeper in the painter. The lady wears a pink bow in her hair and her bouquet, which is disagreeably flamboyant, is reinforced by a backing of white paper; this is a mere accessory, but it gives the key-note to what is undoubtedly otherwise an excellent piece of fine-art. The other Madrazos are more refined. They are both women in bright dresses seated in gardens. The parasol of one has fallen and a swallow flits across it. Some of the dress textures are heavy, compared with other artists present. A picture of a high type is signed Madou. It gives some jovial scene wherein the actors are for the most part enjoying themselves immensely. One gray-haired or powdered man is talking insinuatingly to a laughing woman; another, the master wit of the quartet, is advising a third man as to his course of action. The comedy of this little picture is of the most delicate and real kind, yet there are no grimaces. The painting is also quiet in tone, and done, to all appearance, without great abundance of retouches. One of the pictures of J. B. Irving here presents forms a marked contrast to these qualities. Two red priests and one white-clad one are enjoying a cock-fight in a monasterial garden. Their faces are distorted in violent fits of laughter. The owner of this picture must get very tired of it and of that terrible "laughing priest," which has been reduplicated thousands of times and now reinforces thousands of rooms in the United States. Mr. Irving is a conscientious, laborious workman, but he is still in the imitative stages of his art.

The most attention is given to a large painting of the "Paris Flower Market," by Firmin-Girard, (1875.) The actual workmanship of this picture requires no praise; to see it is to wonder at the admirable hand that can group with such close fidelity to nature human beings, flowers, carts, and other city things. But it would be wrong not to stop just there, and remember that one can go no further. It is a near approach to the real thing, but nothing more. There are those well-known houses of modern French architectural design; there is the bridge over the Seine, the laughing damsels chaffering with the flower-women—and in the midst, M. Firmin-Girard himself, in a straw hat, and with him his wife, a child, nurse, and party of friends. It is wonderfully accurate, but must make the bones of Delacroix rattle in the grave. The same brush is at work in a fine little figure on the opposite wall, which has been in the gallery of Mr. S. P. Avery. Another painting known to modern fame will be found in "The Fête Day," by Louis Leloir, which has appeared in the illustrated papers of Paris, London, and New-York. The bourgeois tone of the flower-market does not intrude on this graceful and beautifully-painted canvas. The procession going in some little state to grandpapa's chair is ably managed, and the contrast between the grandfather's warm kiss and the stolid look of the youngest grandchild is delicate. The old butler behind the patriarchal chair directs the attention by his look of suppressed glee to the meeting of old age and youth.

But there are so many charming pictures got together in this little gallery that we have not space to speak adequately of them. For landscapes of surprising power and sentiment there is one by A. Maure, very sad; another, a water view, by W. Xylander, (1873,) which is grave and fine. There is one of Ziem's gorgeously unreal spreads of color that are so grateful to the eye, a Kaemmerer—after his kind, and a remarkable table piece by Hübner, painted as if the brush had never been changed from first to last. Mr. E. L. Henry has an interior, with portrait of "Lucy Hooper, Paris Correspondent." Much might be said of the beauty of two white dresses in this picture, but jewelry rather sparingly. The costumes included every conceivable tint and color, and were both rich and novel. Between 600 and 700 guests were present, and the details of the entertainment were carried out in a most satisfactory manner.

THE NANCY BRYSSON.

ARRIVAL OF HER MASTER AND CREW IN THIS CITY—THE CAPTAIN'S STORY OF THE VESSEL'S LOSS.

The Havana steam-ship City of Vera Cruz, which arrived in this port on Wednesday, brought Capt. Hugh Duncan, master of the British bark Nancy Brysson, and the crew of the vessel. The Captain tells an interesting story of the encounter by the brig of prolonged gales and heavy seas. The Nancy Brysson left Pernambuco on Nov. 23, with a cargo of sugar for New-York. At starting the weather was favorable, and continued so from the time the line was crossed, on Dec. 2, until the 22d of that month, when it became unsettled. Strong winds arose, frequent squalls struck the vessel, and a heavy cross sea arose, the barometer falling to 29.20. On the 23th the wind had increased to a strong gale, the ship running under lower topsails, the barometer still falling. The gale increased on the 29th, the ship was hove to under lower main-topsail, reefed spanker, and mizzen-staysail. At noon the wind was blowing terrifically, a tremendous cross sea was running, and the ship was laboring and straining heavily. The pumps had been properly manned and attended to, the ship making but the usual quantity of water—about three inches in four hours. At midnight she was struck by a tremendous sea, that carried away the starboard bulwarks and stanchions from the cathead to the main rigging, the fore house, boat skids, water casks, and everything moveable on deck. It also burst the spanker and mizzen-staysail, and carried overboard with the house four men and all their effects. The men were taken safely on board again, but the boats on the skids were stove, the port well of the pumps was broken, and the foremost shifter of the main rigging was carried away. The carpenter was sent below, who did not find the least sign to indicate that the ship was making water until he reached the lower hold, where he found the water above the kelson. Both pumps were then manned and the ship was got before the wind. Keeping the pumps going all night, at daylight the carpenter and one man reported the leak with a head-sheet where they were stove. About 9 o'clock it was found that it would be impossible to save the vessel, as the water was gaining very rapidly on the pumps, and was more than half-way up to the hold beams. The pumps were abandoned and the boats made ready for leaving the ship, as she was found to be settling very fast. The vessel was hauled to the wind, so that the boats might be launched, but in launching the small boat it was stove and sunk by the heavy sea. The remaining boat, with 11 men, 80 pounds of bread, a small breaker of water, and the ship's log, left the ship about noon, in latitude 34° 45', longitude 73°. All the men's effects were left on board. About 10 minutes after leaving, and while the boat was still but two ship's lengths distant the vessel gave a tremendous plunge and disappeared. A drag was rigged with the oars and the boat's head laid to sea. A terrible sea was running and heavy squalls and rain prevailed all night. At daylight a vessel was sighted bearing down toward the boat, which proved to be the brig A. J. Pettingill, Capt. Hull, from Philadelphia, for Matanzas. The Captain took all hands on board with great difficulty, as it was dangerous to approach the vessel in the heavy sea. The rescued party were most kindly treated by Capt. Hull and his crew. They were landed at Matanzas on the 11th inst., whence they made their way to Havana and embarked on the Vera Cruz for this City.

THE SOUTH AND THE DEMOCRATS.

The Richmond (Va.) Whig of the 24th inst. contains as its leading article an editorial which reads thus: "We regret to notice a want of confidence expressed by some of our conservative contemporaries in our Northern allies. If it indeed be true that we cannot rely upon the Democrats of the North and West, then we must either discard them and unite with their opponents and our unrelenting enemies, the Republicans, or else, as a sectional party largely in the minority, we must as sectionalists remain under the ban as helpless to protect ourselves against the united North as we were at the conclusion of the great struggle in 1865. But why should we distrust the Northern Democracy? Have they not been our friends, sympathizing with us in all of our troubles since the close of the war, opposing every amendment to the Constitution, and all legislation in the dark hours of reconstruction that was harsh and ungenerous? Have they not as a party made themselves odious in their own section because of the particular and definite wish which they have fought our battles and maintained our cause? We may and do differ with the policy advocated by some of the leaders of the Democracy in some respects, but we do not distrust their loyalty to the Constitution or their disposition to advocate such measures as are just and generous alike to all sections. Nor can we find in the past history of the Republican Party aught that would inspire the hope that it would be safe to look to them for that friendship in the future that they have withheld from us in the past. No; as the friends of 'home rule' the Northern Democracy are our friends, and so long as they remain true to themselves, true to constitutional liberty, to State rights, which has ever been the cornerstone upon which the party has, if not impregnably, at least consistently stood, we shall continue as an ally faithfully to espouse its cause, which is ours and the cause of truth, justice, and civil liberty."

THIEVISH DOGS.

A Pawtucket correspondent of the Providence Journal tells these two stories: "The dinner table was spread in the house of one of our most excellent townsmen. After all was ready, the lady of the house went into an adjoining room, leaving the outer door to the dining-room ajar. While she was gone, a large dog came up the stoop, pushed the door open, took the turkey from the table, and when the lady returned she saw him trotting off with it; nor did he drop it or relinquish his hold on it at her call. Possession with him was nine points of the law, dog law. Another instance was in the case of a lady who had invited company to dinner. She had bought a piece of roast beef weighing nine pounds. It was in the oven, and dinner was nearly ready. It was necessary for her to leave the room for a minute or two, when a dog came in, pushed the oven door open, it not being latched, took the hot beef in his mouth from the pan and went off with it, leaving the steps just as the lady returned to the kitchen, dropping it only once on his way, but seizing it again, and, as in the other instance, making it his own. It is not safe to leave the door open."

GRAND ARMY ENCAMPMENT.

ELECTION OF TRUSTEES AND OTHER OFFICERS—BANQUET AT IRVING HALL—SPEECHES BY GEN. SICKLES AND OTHERS.

The State Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic resumed its session yesterday morning in Irving Hall. Commander Tanner occupied the chair, and about 200 delegates were present. The Board of Trustees was completed by the election of William Rumsey, of Bath, vice E. B. Gere, of Owego, resigned; Louis Schampf, of New-York, vice Ben F. Finley, whose term had expired, and A. H. Nash, of Geneva, re-elected. Pending the election, Past Department Commander Daniel E. Sickles entered the hall, and was received with an ovation of cheers and other demonstrations of good will. When the applause had subsided, the General briefly returned thanks. Resolutions were passed by the encampment thanking Commissioner of Charities Thomas S. Brennan for his kindness to old soldiers committed to his charge. Resolutions were also adopted tending the thanks of the order to Post Kitchen, of Yonkers, for hospitality on a past occasion. A ballot was had for Department Commander for the ensuing year, with the following result: James Tanner, of Brooklyn, 82 votes; Henry A. Barnum, of Troy, 71; Mr. Tanner was accordingly elected. Constantine Nitzsche, of Koltes Post, No. 32, of New-York, was chosen Senior Vice Commander; Robert W. McCormick, of Post No. 5, of Albany, Junior Vice Commander, and Henry Place, of Post No. 113, Medical Director.

The following were appointed delegates to the National Encampment: J. C. Julius Langbein, New-York; Willard Ballard, New-York; L. L. Cole, Troy; Frank Shephard, Utica: A. H. Mulligan, New-York; H. H. Rockwell, Elmira; D. H. Clark, New-York; B. B. Finley, New-York; E. B. Gere, Owego; John K. Perley, James A. Stevens, New-York, and J. M. Guion, Seneca Falls. John H. Barnard, of Norwich, was elected Chaplain.

The annual banquet of the encampment took place at Irving Hall last evening, and was a highly enjoyable affair. Shortly after 10 o'clock the cloth was removed, and the assemblage called to order by Gen. Henry A. Barnum, who ushered in the regular toasts by a short and pleasant address, in which he took occasion to remind his hearers that the Grand Army was in no sense a political order, but that, like the armies of the Union, was composed of men of all parties. Gen. Graham, of Rochester, read letters of regret from President Grant, Gen. Sherman, Gen. Winfield Scott Hancock, Gen. Stewart L. Woodford, Horace Binney Sargeant, Commander of the Department of Massachusetts; Hon. Smith Ely, Jr., and Mayor Schroeder, of Brooklyn. The name of Gen. Grant was greeted with a perfect hurricane of applause, repeated several times, and concluding with "the volley salute." The names of Gens. Sherman and Hancock were also cheered to the echo. Gen. Sickles, who responded to the first toast "Our Country," said that the organization represented 1,000,000 of men who were as ready to respond to the call as they were prompt as in 1861. [Tremendous applause.] At this moment it was no exaggeration to say that the eyes of all nations were fixed upon this country. To the inhabitants of the Old World the present condition of this country was a mystery that passed understanding. Such a state of affairs would appall the greatest statesmen of Europe and exhaust the patience of any of its peoples. And yet we of America were perfectly confident of the settlement of this great political question in an honorable and peaceful manner. This result was due to the courage of the soldiers of the Union, backed by the valor had put down the rebellion, and demonstrated to the world that this Republic bore a charmed life. [Applause.] Commander Tanner responded to the second toast—the "Grand Army of the Republic."

Assistant Adjutant Gen. George B. Squires followed with a recitation entitled "Friendship, Charity, and Lovalty"—the motto of the order. Other toasts were given, after which it was announced that the next semi-annual Encampment will take place at Bath, N. Y., on the 4th of July next.

THE BONANZA MINES.

DISCOVERY OF A DIABOLICAL PLOT TO DESTROY THE C AND C SHAFT—ATTEMPT TO FIRE THE WORKS OF THE CONSOLIDATED VIRGINIA.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 25.—A Virginia City dispatch of to-day says: "A plot to destroy the hoisting works in the C and C shaft has been discovered. On Monday morning, just as the engineers had changed shafts, the man who had just come on tried the water-cocks, and was astonished to find no water in the lower one. He turned on the pumps at once, but was still unable to fill the boilers. It was then discovered that the blow-off cocks of the shaft boilers had all been turned open, so that the water was blown out as fast as the pumps forced it in. The steam and water from the blow-off pipes are carried a long distance down the hill from the works so that the engineer could not tell at first what the trouble was. A few minutes later and a terrible explosion would have occurred, which would have caused the destruction of the works and a great loss of life. Last Friday night an attempt was made to fire the hoisting works of the Consolidated Virginia mine, but it was discovered and frustrated by a watchman. The incendiary escaped. The force of watchmen around all the works of the Bonanza Mines has been increased, and all have been supplied with shot-guns. The chief of police has both of these attempts have been made by scoundrels in the employ of 'bear' operators in San Francisco."

A NICE, FAT BOY WANTED.

From the Chicago Inter-Ocean.

In the advertising columns of one of our Sunday contemporaries appears the following:

BOARD—A gentleman and wife will give $25 per week (prompt paying and no grumbling) for first-class accommodations in a home-like family who have a nice, fat, hearty, attractive boy about 10 years of age. Having lately lost their own, or would adopt: please inclose photograph of the boy, and describe him, stating age, weight, and name.

We have not the slightest doubt that the advertisers are a good, honest, respectable couple who sincerely and from the bottom of their hearts desire the daily society and converse of a nice, fat boy. It is so comforting, when one has lost a boy of fine eating capabilities, to be constantly reminded of him by the presence of another boy of equal fatness and gastronomic abilities. There is at the same time a cannibalistic look about the wording of this paper which may have a tendency to cause some doating mothers to cheap more tenderly to their breasts their fat but affectionate offspring. A party who offers $25 per week for accommodations in a home-like family "who have a nice, fat, hearty, attractive boy, about 10 years of age," may not be possessed with a desire to eat that boy, but $25 is a large sum to offer for board in these hard times, and it would look as if delicacies were expected. The gentleman and wife want a photograph as well as age, weight, and name. The word weight looks suspicious. We shall give this couple the benefit of the doubt, and presume that they merely desire to measure their grief by the exact pound of flesh. The fat boy in "Pickwick" was much addicted to sleep and vitiels; and there can be but little doubt that great comfort is to be derived by persons who have had fat boys of their own, more especially mothers, from watching over the slumbers, or helping other people's fat boys to additional slices of "weal and 'am pies" and apple dumplings. We do not like to think that there is any chance of cannibalism becoming an established institution in Chicago, but we have had so many alarming departures lately in different eccentric directions that we have really some little cause to feel afraid.

BRIGHAM YOUNG ON THE GENTILES.

The dedication of the new Mormon Temple at St. George, Southern Utah, took place Jan. 1. The Salt Lake Deseret News of the 13th prints the sermon of Brigham Young delivered on the occasion, and also the three dedicatory prayers by Elders. They are two and a quarter, one and an eighth, and one and a quarter columns in length respectively. Referring to the Gentiles and the miners, Brigham said: "Perhaps, brethren and sisters, you will not get my meaning, but now go to work and let these bodies to the ground alone, and let the Gentiles alone, who would destroy us if they had the power. You are running after them, and some of our brethren are putting their w

FINANCIAL AFFAIRS.

SALES AT THE STOCK EXCHANGE—JAN. 25.

SALES BEFORE THE CALL—10 A. M.

200	West. Un	b.c.	76⅜	100	Lake Shore
200	do	c.	76⅝	000	do
905	do		77	2100	do
300	do	s.	77⅛	700	do
800	do		77⅛	100	do
1000	do		77⅛	100	do
800	do	c.	77	1000	do
500	do		76⅝	000	do
900	do	c.	77	400	do
600	do		77	1100	do
700	do		76⅝	000	do
400	Pacific Mail		25⅛	500	do
200	do	b3.	25⅜	500	do
1100	do		25⅜	000	do
300	Erie Railway		9⅜	100	St. Paul
1300	do	b3.	9⅜	300	do
2900	do		9⅜	300	do
200	do	b5.	9⅜	300	do
700	N. Y. C. & Hud		102⅝	300	St. Paul Pref
100	do		103	200	do
100	do		102⅝	400	do
100	Mich. Cen		49⅛	200	do
200	do	s3.	49⅛	100	do
200	do		49⅛	1900	do
500	do		49	700	do
200	do		48⅞	600	do
500	do		48⅞	600	do
200	do	b3.	49	200	do
300	do		49	500	do
100	Un. Pacific	b3.	64	700	Cen. of N. J
900	Ind., Bl. & W		20½	100	do
700	D., L. & W		73½	100	do
500	do		73⅜	200	do
400	do		73½	200	do
400	do		73½	200	do
400	do		73⅜	100	do

GOVERNMENT STOCKS—10:15 AND 11:30 A. M.

$10,000	U. S. 6s. '81, C.	114⅝	$10,000 U. S. 5-20 R., '65
16,000	U. S. 5-20 R., '65 N	110⅝	2,000 do '67
10,000	U. S. 5-20 R., '65	109	10,000 do '67
10,000	do	12 108⅜	13,500 do
20,000	U. S. 5s, '81, '65	112⅜	11,000 U. S. 5s, '81, C
10,000	do	108⅞	$30,000 do
10,000	U. S. 5s, '81, R	111	35,000 U. S. 5s, '81, C
20,000	U. S. 10-40 R	112⅝	100,000 do

SECOND BOARD—1 P. M.

$2,000	M. & St. P. 1st. pf. La. C. Div	96	300	Mich. Cen	b.c.
1,000	Erie 1st	110	100	Wab. Pur. Com. Rec'pts
1,000	Long Dock	105	$800	L. S. & M. S. 4s	b.c.
2,000	Cen. Pac. 1st, S. J. Br.	92⅜	1000	do	b3.
6,000	do	92⅛	2100	do
2,000	Cen. Pac. 1st, C. & O. B'h.	90⅜	100	Ill. Cen	b.c.
5,000	Un. Pac. 1st	104	100	do
1,000	So. Pac. of Mo.	74	100	R. & St. P. 1st pf.
9,000	do. W. 1st.	68⅜	200	Alt. & T.
5,000	do	103⅜	200	C. of N. J	b.c.
10,000	Cleve. & Tol. new	b.c.	100	do
3,000	Cen. Pac. 1st, C. & O. Br.	90⅜	200	do
1,000	Un. Pac. 1st	104	50	Pitts., Ft. W. & C.
8,000	do	104		gd.
1,000	Un. Pac. s. f.	97	10	do
1,000	Pac. of M. 2d	89	100	Un. Pac	b.c.
2,000	St. L. & I. M. 1st	103⅜	400	do	b3.
3,000	T. & W. 1st	103	100	do
1,000	T. & W. 1st. St. L. div	82	100	do
1,000	do	81⅜	100	do
4,000	Quin. & Tol. 1st	73⅛	100	do
4,000	D. & H. R. '91	102⅜	100	do
3,000	Long Dk	b.c.	106⅜	200	C. & N. W.
10	Am. Ex. Bank		108	200	do
10	North River Bk		70	1000	do
50	Md. Coal		11⅜	300	do
200	Del. & H	b.c.	68	500	do
200	do		67⅛	100	do
100	do		67⅜	200	do
100	do		67⅛	700	do
100	do		67⅜	400	do
100	do		67⅛	200	do
100	do		67⅜	100	Chi. & N. W.
100	do		67⅛	100	Chi. & N. W.
100	Adams Ex		103⅜	b.c.
80	do	b.c.	108⅜	50	Chi. & Alt.
15	Amer. Ex		87⅛	100	C., M. & St. P.
538	N. Y. C. & H	b.c.	102⅜	600	do
500	Mich. Cen.	b.c.	48⅞	300	do
100	do		49⅜	200	Chi., R. I. & P.
100	do		49⅛

SALES BEFORE THE CALL—12:30 P. M.

$5,000	U. S. 5-20 R., '65	103⅞	100	Lake Shore	b3.
54,000	do	104	200	do	s3.
100	West. Un	b.c.	77⅜	100	do
300	do		77⅜	200	do
200	do	s3.	77⅜	300	do
500	do		77⅛	100	Cen. of N. J
200	do		77⅜	200	do
100	do	b4.	77⅛	100	do
200	Pacific Mail	s3.	25⅛	100	Un. Pac
100	do		25⅛	100	do
100	N. Y. C. & H		102⅜	100	St. Paul
100	Ill. Cen	b.c.	95⅜	100	St. Paul Pf
700	Erie Railway		10⅛	400	D., L. & W
500	do	s3.	10⅛	200	do
200	Mich. Cen		49⅜	100	do
700	do		49⅜	100	Pac. of Mo
100	Rens. & Sar.	b.c.	111

GOVERNMENT STOCKS—2 P. M.

$5,000	U. S. 5-20 R., '65	108¾	$5,000 U. S. 5s. 10-40 C.
10,000	U. S. 5-20 C., '67	113⅛	10,000 U. S. 5s, '81, R.
10,000	do	b3.	113⅜
20,000	U. S. 10-40 R	b.c.	113⅛
100,000	do		112
35,000	U. S. 6s, '81, C		112⅛
			453,000 00

SECOND BOARD—1 P. M.

$2,000	M. & St. P. 1st. pf. La. C. Div	96	300	Mich. Cen	b.c.
1,000	Erie 1st	110	100	Wab. Pur. Com. Rec'pts
1,000	Long Dock	105	$800	L. S. & M. S. 4s	b.c.
2,000	Cen. Pac. 1st, S. J. Br.	92⅜	1000	do	b3.
6,000	do	92⅛	2100	do
2,000	Cen. Pac. 1st, C. & O. B'h.	90⅜	100	Ill. Cen	b.c.
5,000	Un. Pac. 1st	104	100	do
1,000	So. Pac. of Mo.	74	100	R. & St. P. 1st pf.
9,000	do. W. 1st.	68⅜	200	Alt. & T.
5,000	do	103⅜	200	C. of N. J	b.c.
10,000	Cleve. & Tol. new	b.c.	100	do
3,000	Cen. Pac. 1st, C. & O. Br.	90⅜	200	do
1,000	Un. Pac. 1st	104	50	Pitts., Ft. W. & C.
8,000	do	104		gd.
1,000	Un. Pac. s. f.	97	10	do
1,000	Pac. of M. 2d	89	100	Un. Pac	b.c.
2,000	St. L. & I. M. 1st	103⅜	400	do	b3.
3,000	T. & W. 1st	103	100	do
1,000	T. & W. 1st. St. L. div	82	100	do
1,000	do	81⅜	100	do
4,000	Quin. & Tol. 1st	73⅛	100	do
4,000	D. & H. R. '91	102⅜	100	do
3,000	Long Dk	b.c.	106⅜	200	C. & N. W.
10	Am. Ex. Bank		108	200	do
10	North River Bk		70	1000	do
50	Md. Coal		11⅜	300	do
200	Del. & H	b.c.	68	500	do
200	do		67⅛	100	do
100	do		67⅜	200	do
100	do		67⅛	700	do
100	do		67⅜	400	do
100	do		67⅛	200	do
100	do		67⅜	100	Chi. & N. W.
100	do		67⅛	100	Chi. & N. W.
100	Adams Ex		103⅜	b.c.
80	do	b.c.	108⅜	50	Chi. & Alt.
15	Amer. Ex		87⅛	100	C., M. & St. P.
538	N. Y. C. & H	b.c.	102⅜	600	do
500	Mich. Cen.	b.c.	48⅞	300	do
100	do		49⅜	200	Chi., R. I. & P.
100	do		49⅛

SALES FROM 2:30 TO 3 P. M.

$35,000	U. S. 5-20 R., '67	113¾	3600	Lake Shore	56⅝
10,000	Mo. 6s, long	104⅜	1000	do	56⅞
42,000	do	104⅝	1000	do	57
3,000	Cen. Pac. gold	108	350	do	57
3,000	Mil. & St. P. con.	80	100	do	57
600	West. Un	b.3.	77⅜	1800	do
100	do	s3.	77⅜	100	do
400	do		77⅜	100	do
300	do		77⅜	100	do
100	do	s3.	77	300	do
100	do		77⅜	100	do
200	do		77⅜	100	do
100	do		77⅜	100	do
300	do		77⅜	1100	do
100	do	s3.	77	400	do
200	do		77	100	Del., L. & W
100	do		77⅛	1000	do
200	do	b3.	77⅜	100	do
300	do		77⅜	200	Pittsburg
200	do	b3.	77⅜	155	Cen. of N. J
200	do	s3.	77⅜	100	do
600	do	b3.	77⅜	100	do
100	Pac. Mail		25⅜	100	do
75	do		25⅜	200	North-W. Pf
100	do		25⅜	300	St. Paul Pf
75	do		25⅜	100	do
100	do	b3.	25⅛	100	do
100	Erie Railway		10⅜	100	Ohio & Miss
100	do	s3.	10⅜	2100	D., L. & W
100	Mich. Cen		50⅝	100	do
130	do	b.c.	118⅜	40	do
500	Harlem	b.c.	140	100	Ohio & Miss
200	C., C. & I. C	b.c.	3¼

SALES BEFORE THE CALL—12:30 P. M.

$5,000	U. P. 1st	103⅞	100	Lake Shore	b3.
54,000	do	104	200	do	s3.
100	West. Un	b.c.	77⅜	100	do
300	do		77⅜	200	do
200	do	s3.	77⅜	300	do
500	do		77⅛	100	Cen. of N. J
200	do		77⅜	200	do
100	do	b4.	77⅛	100	do
200	Pacific Mail	s3.	25⅛	100	Un. Pac
100	do		25⅛	100	do
100	N. Y. C. & H		102⅜	100	St. Paul
100	Ill. Cen	b.c.	95⅜	100	St. Paul Pf
700	Erie Railway		10⅛	400	D., L. & W
500	do	s3.	10⅛	200	do
200	Mich. Cen		49⅜	100	do
700	do		49⅜	100	Pac. of Mo
100	Rens. & Sar.	b.c.	111

SECOND BOARD—1 P. M.

$2,000	M. & St. P. 1st. pf. La. C. Div	96	300	Mich. Cen	b.c.
1,000	Erie 1st	110	100	Wab. Pur. Com. Rec'pts
1,000	Long Dock	105	$800	L. S. & M. S. 4s	b.c.
2,000	Cen. Pac. 1st, S. J. Br.	92⅜	1000	do	b3.
6,000	do	92⅛	2100	do
2,000	Cen. Pac. 1st, C. & O. B'h.	90⅜	100	Ill. Cen	b.c.
5,000	Un. Pac. 1st	104	100	do
1,000	So. Pac. of Mo.	74	100	R. & St. P. 1st pf.
9,000	do. W. 1st.	68⅜	200	Alt. & T.
5,000	do	103⅜	200	C. of N. J	b.c.
10,000	Cleve. & Tol. new	b.c.	100	do
3,000	Cen. Pac. 1st, C. & O. Br.	90⅜	200	do
1,000	Un. Pac. 1st	104	50	Pitts., Ft. W. & C.
8,000	do	104		gd.
1,000	Un. Pac. s. f.	97	10	do
1,000	Pac. of M. 2d	89	100	Un. Pac	b.c.
2,000	St. L. & I. M. 1st	103⅜	400	do	b3.
3,000	T. & W. 1st	103	100	do
1,000	T. & W. 1st. St. L. div	82	100	do
1,000	do	81⅜	100	do
4,000	Quin. & Tol. 1st	73⅛	100	do
4,000	D. & H. R. '91	102⅜	100	do
3,000	Long Dk	b.c.	106⅜	200	C. & N. W.
10	Am. Ex. Bank		108	200	do
10	North River Bk		70	1000	do
50	Md. Coal		11⅜	300	do
200	Del. & H	b.c.	68	500	do
200	do		67⅛	100	do
100	do		67⅜	200	do
100	do		67⅛	700	do
100	do		67⅜	400	do
100	do		67⅛	200	do
100	do		67⅜	100	Chi. & N. W.
100	do		67⅛	100	Chi. & N. W.
100	Adams Ex		103⅜	b.c.
80	do	b.c.	108⅜	50	Chi. & Alt.
15	Amer. Ex		87⅛	100	C., M. & St. P.
538	N. Y. C. & H	b.c.	102⅜	600	do
500	Mich. Cen	b.c.	48⅞	300	do
100	do		49⅜	200	Chi., R. I. & P.
100	do		49⅛

The following table shows the half-hourly fluctuations in the Gold market to-day:

10:00 A. M.	106	1:00 P. M.	106⅛
10:30 A. M.	106	1:30 P. M.	106⅛
11:00 A. M.	106	2:00 P. M.	106⅜
11:30 A. M.	106	2:30 P. M.	106⅛
12:00 M.	106	3:00 P. M.	106⅜
12:30 P. M.	106⅛

The following were the closing quotations of Government bonds:

	Bid.	Asked.
United States currency 6s	123¼	123½
United States 6s, 1881, registered	114	114¼
United States 6s, 1881, coupons	114⅜	114½
United States 5-20s, 1865, registered	108⅜	109
United States 5-20s, 1865, coupons	108⅜	109
United States 5-20s, 1865, new, reg	110½	110⅜
United States 5-20s, 1865, new, coup	110½	110⅜
United States 5-20s, 1867, registered	113⅜	113⅝
United States 5-20s, 1867, coupons	113½	113⅝
United States 5-20s, 1868, registered	117	117½
United States 5-20s, 1868, coupons	117	117⅜
United States 10-40s, registered	113⅜	114
United States 10-40s, coupons	113⅞	114⅛
United States 5s, 1881, registered	110⅞	111
United States 5s, 1881, coupons	112	112⅛
United States 4½s, 1891, registered	107⅜	108

The Sub-Treasurer disbursed in gold coin $101,000 for interest, $91,000 for called bonds, and $9,200 silver coin in exchange for fractional currency.

The following were the gold clearings by the National Bank of the State of New-York to-day:

Gold cleared	$38,977,000
Gold balances	1,490,559
Currency balances	1,884,894

The following is the Clearing-house statement to-day:

Currency exchanges	$70,194,966
Currency balances	3,137,710
Gold exchanges	2,917,427
Gold balances	1,108,253

The following were the bids for the various State securities:

Alabama 5s, '63	33	Asy. or Unf., due '92	104½
Alabama 8s, '86	63	H. & St. Jo., due '86	104¼
Alabama 8s, '86	33	H. & St. J., due '87	104¼
Alabama 8s, '88	33	N. Y. Reg. B. L	101
Ark. 6s, funded	18	N. Y. Comp. B. L	101
Ark. 7s, L.R. & F.S. 1s	10	N. Y. 6s, G. Reg. '87	115
Ark. 7s, Wen. & L. B	10	N. Y. 6s, G. L'n, '91	120
Ark. 7s, L.R. & F.N.O. 1s	10	N. Y. 6s, G. L'n, '92	123
Ark. 7s, M. O. & R. Riv.	10	N. C. 6s, old, J. & J	90
Ark. 7s, Ark. Cen. R.	10	N. C. 6s, N. C. R. J. & J	64
Connecticut 6s	110½	N. C. 6s, N. C. R. A. & O	62¾
Georgia 6s	98	N. C. 6s, do. o. bdf. J. & J.	45½
Ga. 7s, new bonds	104½	N. C. 6s, Fd'g Act '66	36
Georgia 7s, endorsed	102	N. C. new bds., A. & O	8
Georgia 7s, Gold Mtge. bds	104½	N. C. 6s, class 3	9
Illinois coup. 6s, '79-'81	101	N. C. 6s, class 2	2½
Illinois War Loan	101¼	N. C. 6s, T. class 3	9
Kentucky 6s	103	Ohio 6s, '86	111
Louisiana 6s	38	Rhode Island 6s	110
Louisiana 6s, n. b	38	S. C. 6s	38
Louisiana 6s, Pr. Dis	33	S. C. 6s, J. & J	35
La. 7s, Penitentiary	38	S. C. L. C. '30, J. & J.	45
La. 6s, Levee bonds	38	S. C. 7s, '88	35
La. 7s, Consolidated	57	S. C. Non. F. bs	2½
Michigan 6s, '78-'79	101	Tennessee 6s, old	42⅝
Michigan 6s, '83	104	Tenn. 6s, a. b. n.	40
Michigan 7s, '90	103	Virginia 6s, old	30
Missouri 6s, '77	100⅜	Virginia 6s, n. bds. '66	30
Mo. 6s, due in '75	100⅜	Virginia 6s, n. bds. '67	30
Mo. 6s, due in '76	100⅜	Va. 6s, Con. Bonds	78¾
Long Dk. '82 to '90	104¼	Dis. of C. 3.65s, 1924	73

And the following for railway mortgages:

Ala. & Sus. 1st bds.	109¾	Clev. & Tol. new bs.	106
B., C. R. & M. 1st 7s, g.	38	Clev., P. & A. old bs.	104¼
Chic. & Alton 1st	114	Clev., P. & A. new bs.	107½
Chic. & Iowa 1st	103	Clev. & Pitts. con. bs.	105
Joliet & Chic. 1st	108	Kal. & W. Pig. 1st	85
La. & Mo. 1st, gr	85	D. M. & T. 1st 7s, 1906	108¼
St. L. J. & Chic. 1st	105½	L. S. Div. bds	106½
C., B. & Q. 8 P ct. 1st	111	L. S. Cons. C. 1st	107
C., B. & Q. 7s	110	L. S. Cons. R. 1st	107
C. R. I. & P. 1st 7s	101	L. S. Cons. C. 2d	96
C. & R. I. & P. 1st 6s	101	Marietta & Cin. 1st	106
C. R. of N. J. 1st cons.	104	Mich. C. Con. 7s, 1902	103
C. R. of N. J. 1st Con.	78	Mich. C. 1st 8s, '82	112
M. & St. P. 1st C. & P. D.	116	N. Y. Cen. 6s, '83	104
M. & St. P. 1st C. & M.	94	N. Y. Cen. 6s, '87	105
M. & St. P. Con. S. P.	80	N. Y. Cen. 6s, R. E.	101½
M. & St. P. 1st 7s	90	N. Y. C. & H. 6s, '97	109
Chic. & N. W. S. F.	110	N. Y. C. & Hud. 1st	117
C. & N. W. Int. bds	104⅝	Hud. R. 7s, 2d, S. F. '85	111
C. & N. W. Con. bds	104¼	N. Missouri 1st	97⅜
C. & N. W. Ext. bds	106	Ohio & M. Con. S. F.	85
C. & N. W. 1st	108	Ohio & Miss. Cons.	84
C. & N. W. C. G. bds.	93⅝	Cen. Pac. Gold bds	107⅞
Galena & Chic. Ext.	104½	Cen. Pac. San J. Br. 6s	92
Penin. 1st Con.	100	Cen. P. Cal. & O. 1st	90⅜
Chicago & Mil. 1st	103	West. Pacific bs	101
Winona & St. P. 2d	76	Union Pac. 1st	103⅞
C. C. C. & I. 1st 7s, S. F.	109¾	Union Pac. L. G. 7s	103
Del., L. & W. 2d	108	Union Pac. S. F	97
Del., L. & W. 7s, C.	103	Pac. R. of Mo. 1st	90¼
Mor. & Essex 1st	117	Pt. Ft. W. & Chic. 1st	118
Mor. & Essex 7s	109½	Ver. & P. Con. S. F.	109¾
M. & E. 7s, of 1871	109	Clev. & P. 4th. S. F.	104½
M. & E. 1st, C. G.	100¼	Col., Chic. & Ind. 1st	38
Erie 1st Extended	109⅞	Col., Chic. & Ind. 2d	8½
Erie 2d 7s, '79	104⅝	A. & T. H. 2d Pref.	21
Erie 3d 7s, '80	101⅛	A. & T. H. 1st Inc.	39
Erie 4th 7s, '80	101⅛	B. & S. Ill. 1st, 8s	86
Erie 5th 7s, '85	100	T., P. & W. 1st, W. D.	84
Long Dock Bonds	105¼	Tol. & W. 1st Ex	104
B., N. Y. & E. 1st '77	95	Tol. & W. 1st, St. L. D.	81½
H. & S. J. Land G'nts	112	Tol. & Wab. 2d	74
H. & St. J. 8s, Con	85	T. & W. Eq'p. bds	15
Dub. & Sioux C. 1st	104½	Tol., P. & W. new C. Con.	99⅜
Dub. & S. C. 1st 7s	104½	Han. & Naples 1st	40½
C. Falls & Minn. 1st, 8s	85	Gt. West. 2d, '86	73
Ind., Bloom. & W. 1st	90	Quincy & Tol. 1st, '90	72½
M. So. 7 P ct. 2d	102½	W. U. bds. 1900, C.	105⅜
M. S. & N. I. S. F. 7 P ct.	109½	W. U. bds. 1900, R.	104⅜

And the following for City Bank shares:

America	130	Hanover	93
American Exchange	107¼	Imp. & Traders'	185
Bank of Brok. Ass.	80	Leather Manuf.	130
Central National	135	Mechanics'	115
Commerce	107	Metchants'	129
Continental	70	Metropolitan	115
Corn Exchange	129	New-York	115
First National	260	Republic	98½
Fourth National	93	State of N. Y., (new)	125
Fulton	150

PHILADELPHIA STOCK PRICES—JAN. 25.

	Bid.	Asked.
City 6s, New	112	112⅜
United Railroads of New-Jersey	140½	140¾
Pennsylvania Railroad	48¼	48⅜
Reading Railroad	15¼	15⅜
Lehigh Valley Railroad	49¼	49½
Catawissa Railroad Preferred	34½	36
Philadelphia and Erie Railroad	13½	13⅝
Schuylkill Navigation Preferred	9	10
Northern Central Railroad	28	28½
Lehigh Navigation	29	29½
Oil Creek and Allegheny Railroad	8¼	8⅝
Hestonville Railway	19	19⅝
Central Transportation	38⅜	39

The Board of Directors of the Corn Exchange Bank have declared a dividend of Five P cent., payable Feb. 1.

The annual report of the Atlantic Mutual Insurance Company is published, showing total amount of assets $15,694,867. The outstanding certificates issued 1873 are called in and dividends are declared at the rate of Six P cent. on outstanding certificates of profit and Forty P cent. on net earned premiums for year 1876.

The Washington Life Insurance Company publishes the result of the recent examination of its affairs made by direction of the State Superintendent of Insurance. The Examiner finds the admitted assets to be $5,173,278, and total liability to policy-holders, $4,386,685. The report declares the Company to be ably and prudently managed.

CALIFORNIA MINING STOCKS.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 25.—The following are the closing official prices of mining stocks to-day:

Alpha	20	Kenworth	1
Belcher	8	Kentuck	7½
Bent and Belcher	10	Leopard	1½
Bullion	19	Mexican	16¾
Consol. Virginia	43	Northern Belle	20½
California	4 13⅜	Overman	91
Chollar	6 1	Potosi	22¾
Confidence	9	Raymond and Ely	7½
Caledonia	9½	Silver Hill	5¾
Crown Point	7¼	Savage	6
Exchequer	7¾	Seg. Belcher	6
Gould and Curry	11	Sierra Nevada	8½
Hale and Norcross	5	Union Consolidated	9½
Imperial	2	Yellow Jacket	12
Julia Consolidated	1	Eureka Consolidated	21¾
Justice	13⅜

COMMERCIAL AFFAIRS.

NEW-YORK, Thursday, Jan. 25, 1877.

The receipts of the principal kinds of Produce since our last have been as follows:

Ashes, pks	58	Spirits Turp., bbls	147
Beans, bbs	427	Steam, pbs	2,189
Cotton, bales	6,383	Stock, pks	971
Cot'n-seed Ca's, bags	200	Pork, pks	1,078
Copper, bdls	54	Beef, pks	126
Dried Fruit, pks	125	Cut-meats, pks	7,102
Eggs, bbls	259	Lard, pks	2,508
Flour, bbls	9,068	Lard, kegs	570
Wheat, bushels	6,883	Stearine, pks	10
Corn, bushels	45,200	Butter, pks	4,642
Oats, bushels	25,800	Cheese, pks	941
Rye, bushels	125	Tallow, pks	160
Malt, bushels	1,400	Lard-oil, bbls	100
Barley, bushels	6,500	Pressed Hops, No	1,654
Peas, bushels	1,200	Ashes, pks	539
Grass-seed, bags	1,519	Rice, pks	674
Corn-meal, bbls	400	Sugar, (N. O.,) hhds	824
Wh't Flour, pks	5	Syrup, bbls	20
Oat-meal, bbls	3	Sugar, boxes	1,093
Oil-cake, pks	7	Starch, pks	1,932
Hops, bales	331	Skins, bales	85
Hides, No	5,131	Spunge, bales	60
Hides, bales	1,236	Tobacco, pkgs	97
Leather, sides	7,788	Tobacco, hhds	114
Lead, pigs	980	Tobacco, bxs. & cs	263
Molasses, (N. O.) bbls	1,226	Whisky, bbls	1,111
Moss, bales	33	Wool, bales	318
Oil, bbls	50

COFFEE—Dull and nominal; quotations as in our last.

COTTON—Has been inactive for early delivery at unaltered figures. The seven sail vessels reported as from Galveston, Indianola and Matagorda have carried 11⅝c. @ 11¾c. Low Middling 12 13-16c. @ 13 12-16c.; Middling, 13 15-16c. @ 13 7-16c. ₱ lb.... Sales were officially reported, for prompt delivery, for 700 bales, (of which 400 bales were actually sold,) including 571 bales to spinners and 137 bales to speculators.... And for forward delivery business has been on a moderate scale at variable prices.... Sales have been reported since our last evening, and 19,500 bales to-day, with 700 bales on the call, on the basis of Middling, with January option, closing at 13 11-32c. @ 13 9-16c.; February, 13 5-8c. @ 13 13-32c.; March, 13 21-32c.; April, 13 25-32c.; May, 14 1-16c. @ 14 3-32c.; June, 14 7-32c. @ 14 9-32c.; July, 14 11-32c. @ 14 ½c.; August, 14 ⅝@14 ¾c.; September, 14c. @ 14 1-32c.; October, 13 11-16c. @ 13 23-32c.; November, 13 15-32c. @ 13 ½c.; December, 13 7-16c. @ 13 19-32c. ₱ lb., showing an advance of 1-32c. lb., closing steady. The receipts at this port to-day were 6,383 bales, and at the shipping ports 19,618 bales, against 13,450 bales same day last week and thus far this week, 93,858 bales, against 93,801 bales same time last week. The receipts at the shipping ports since Sept. 1, 1876, have been 2,982,656 bales, against 2,906,265 bales for the corresponding time in the preceding Cotton-year.... Consolidated exports (five days) for Great Britain, from all shipping ports, 50,289 bales, to which the exports from 23,400 bales.... stock in New-York to-day, 241,559 bales; consolidated stock at the ports, 879,534 bales.

Closing Prices of Cotton in New-York.

	Orleans.	Alabama.	N. O.	Texas.
Ordinary	11⅝	11¾	11¾	11¾
Strict Ordinary	12	12⅛	12⅛	12⅛
Good Ordinary	12⅝	12¾	12¾	12¾
Strict Good Ord	12⅞	12⅞	12⅞	12⅞
Low Middling	12 13-16	12 13-16	12 15-16	12 13-16
Strict Low Mid	13 1-16	13 1-16	13 1-16	13 1-16
Middling	13 7-16	13 7-16	13 7-16	13 7-16
Good Middling	13 15-16	13 15-16	13 15-16	13 15-16
Strict Good Mid	14 1-16	14 1-16	14 1-16	14 1-16
Middling Fair	14	14 1-16	14 1-16	14 1-16
Fair	14 15-16	14 15-16	15	14 15-16
	Stained.
Good Ordinary	11¼	Low Middling	12	3-16
Strict Good Ord	11⅝	Middling	13	11-16

FLOUR AND MEAL—Trade was generally light to-day, frequently all kinds of State and Western Flour, at, however, generally firm prices, the principal receivers resisting to recede from full asking figures, in view of the very light offerings of the leading kinds. Export trade was unimportant. City Mill Extras quoted somewhat easier.

Jan. 25.—Cotton—Fair demand; Middling, 12¾c.; Low Middling, 12¾c.; Good Ordinary, 11¾c.; net receipts, 4,813 bales; gross, 6,049 bales; exports to the Continent, 736 bales; coastwise, 2,868 bales; sales, 2,500 bales; stock, 67,880 bales.

MOBILE, Jan. 25.—Cotton quiet; Middling, 12½c.; Low Middling, 12 3-16c.; Good Ordinary, 11¾c.; net receipts, 4,172 bales; exports, coastwise, 944 bales; sales, 1,500 bales; stock, 79,880 bales.

FOREIGN MARKETS.

LONDON, Jan. 25—12:30 P. M.—Consols, 96 5-16 for both money and the account. United States Bonds, 1867s, 106¾; 10-40s, 110. Erie Railway shares, 9¾; do. preferred, 20.

3 P. M.—The bullion in the Bank of England has decreased £125,000 during the past week.

3:30 P. M.—The proportion of the Bank of England reserve to liability, which last week was 44¾ ₱ cent., is now 45 ₱ cent. The amount

SHIPPING.

WHITE STAR LINE.
FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL. CARRYING UNITED STATES MAIL.

The steamers of this line take the Lane Routes recommended by Lieut. Maury, U. S. N., going south of the Banks on the passage to Queenstown all the year round.

BALTIC.....SATURDAY, Feb. 3, 8:30 A. M.
ADRIATIC.....SATURDAY, Feb. 10, at 8 A. M.
BRITANNIC.....SATURDAY, Feb. 24, 2 P. M.
BALTIC.....SATURDAY, March 10, at 2 P. M.

From White Star Dock, Pier No. 52 North River.

These steamers are built of iron and unsurpassed in appointments. The saloon staterooms, smoking, and bath rooms are amidships where the noise and motion are least felt, affording a degree of comfort hitherto unattainable at sea.

Rates—Saloon $80 and $100, gold; return tickets at favorable terms. Steerage, $28.

For inspection of plans and other information apply to the Company's offices, No. 37 Broadway, New-York.

J. J. CORTIS, Agent.

CUNARD LINE B. & N. A. R. M. S. P. CO.
NOTICE.

With the view of diminishing the chances of collision the steamers of this line take a specified course for all seasons of the year.

On the outward passage from Queenstown to New-York or Boston, crossing meridian of 50 at 43 latitude, or nothing to the north of 43.

On the homeward passage, crossing the meridian of 41 at 42, or nothing to the north of 42.

FROM NEW-YORK FOR LIVERPOOL AND QUEENSTOWN.
ABYSSINIA....WED., Jan. 31 PARTHIA....WED., Feb. 14
ALGERIA....WED., Feb. 7 CHINA....WED., Feb. 21

Steamers marked "do not carry steerage passengers.

Cabin passage, $80, $100, and $130, gold, according to accommodation. Return tickets on favorable terms.

Steerage tickets to and from all parts of Europe at very low rates. Freight and passage office, No. 4 Bowling Green. CHAS. G. FRANCKLYN, Agent.

GREAT SOUTHERN
FREIGHT AND PASSENGER LINE,
SAILING FROM PIER NO. 43 NORTH RIVER.

WEDNESDAYS and SATURDAYS at 3 P. M.,
FOR CHARLESTON, S. C., FLORIDA, THE SOUTH AND SOUTH-WEST.
CITY OF ATLANTA.....SATURDAY.....Jan. 27
GEO. W. CLYDE.....WEDNESDAY.....Jan. 31

SUPERIOR PASSENGER ACCOMMODATIONS.

Insurance to destination one-half of one per cent. Goods forwarded free of commission. Passenger tickets and bills of lading issued and signed at the offices of

JAMES W. QUINTARD & CO., Agents,
No. 177 West st., corner Warren.
Or W. P. CLYDE & CO., No. 6 Bowling Green.
Or BENTLEY O. HASELL, General Agent
Great Southern Freight Line, 317 Broadway.

STATE LINE.
NEW-YORK TO GLASGOW, LIVERPOOL, DUBLIN, BELFAST, AND LONDONDERRY.

These first-class full-powered steamers will sail from Pier No. 43 North River, foot of Canal st.

STATE OF GEORGIA.....Thursday, Jan. 25
STATE OF INDIANA.....Thursday, Feb. 1
STATE OF PENNSYLVANIA.....Thursday, Feb. 8
STATE OF VIRGINIA.....Thursday, Feb. 22

First cabin, $60, $65, and $70, according to accommodations; return tickets, $110, $125. Second cabin, $45; return tickets, $80. Steerage at lowest rates. Apply to

AUSTIN BALDWIN & CO., Agents,
No. 72 Broadway, New-York.

STEERAGE tickets at No. 45 Broadway, and at the company's pier, foot of Canal st., North River.

LIVERPOOL AND GREAT WESTERN STEAM COMPANY. (LIMITED.)
LIVERPOOL (Via Queenstown.)
CARRYING THE UNITED STATES MAIL.

TUESDAY.

Leaving Pier No. 46 North River as follows:

WISCONSIN.....Jan. 30, at 3 P. M.
WYOMING.....Feb. 6, at noon
DAKOTA.....Feb. 13, at 3 P. M.
NEVADA.....Feb. 20, at 10 A. M.
IDAHO.....Feb. 27, at 3 P. M.
MONTANA.....March 6, at 10 A. M.

RATES OF PASSENGERS REDUCED.

Steerage, $26; intermediate, $40; cabin, $65 to $80, according to state-room. Offices, No. 29 Broadway.

WILLIAMS & GUION.

ATLAS MAIL LINE.

BI-MONTHLY SERVICE TO JAMAICA, HAYTI, COLOMBIA, and ISTHMUS of PANAMA and SOUTH PACIFIC PORTS (via Aspinwall). First-class full-powered iron screw steamers from Pier No. 51 North River.

For HAYTI, COLOMBIA, ISTHMUS OF PANAMA, and SOUTH PACIFIC PORTS (via Aspinwall).

ALPS.....Jan. 13
ETNA.....Jan. 27

For KINGSTON (Jam.) and HAYTI.

ATLAS.....Feb. 8

Superior first-class passenger accommodations.
PIM, FORWOOD & CO., Agents.
No. 56 Wall st.

NORTH GERMAN LLOYD.
STEAM-SHIP LINE BETWEEN NEW-YORK, SOUTHAMPTON, AND BREMEN.

Company's Pier, foot of 20th st., Hoboken.

AMERICA....Sat., Jan. 27 | HERMANN....Sat., Feb. 10
WESER....Sat., Feb. 3 | ODER....Sat., Feb. 17

RATES OF PASSAGE FROM NEW-YORK TO SOUTHAMPTON, HAVRE, OR BREMEN.

First cabin.....$100 gold
Second cabin.....60 gold
Steerage.....30 currency

Return tickets at reduced rates. Prepaid steerage certificates, $32 currency. For freight or passage apply to OELRICHS & CO., No. 2 Bowling Green.

INMAN LINE.—MAIL STEAMERS.
FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.

CITY OF BERLIN, Saturday, Jan. 27, 12 P. M.
CITY OF CHESTER, Saturday, Feb. 17, at 7:30 A. M.
CITY OF RICHMOND, Saturday, March 3, at 8 A. M.

From Pier 15 North River.

CABIN, $80 and $100, Gold. Return tickets on favorable terms. STEERAGE, $24. Currency. Drafts at lowest rates.

Saloons, State-rooms, Smoking, and Bath-rooms, amidships. JOHN G. DALE, Agent,
Nos. 15 and 33 Broadway, N. Y.

ONLY DIRECT LINE TO FRANCE.
THE GENERAL TRANSATLANTIC COMPANY'S MAIL STEAMERS BETWEEN NEW-YORK AND HAVRE, Calling at PLYMOUTH (G. B.) for the landing of Passengers.

Will sail from Pier No. 42 North River, foot of Morton st., every alternate Saturday, beginning with:

FRANCE, Trudelle.....Saturday, Jan. 27, at 3 P. M.

For particulars address
LOUIS DE BEBIAN, Agent, No. 55 Broadway.

NATIONAL LINE—Piers 44 and 51 North River.
FOR LONDON.
HOLLAND.....SATURDAY, Jan. 27, 2:30 P. M.
FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.
Spain....Jan. 27, 2:30 P. M. | Egypt....Feb. 3, at 9 A. M.

Cabin and steerage passage, and drafts from £1 upward, issued at very low rates. Company's offices No. 69 Broadway. F. W. J. HURST, Manager.

FOR SAVANNAH GA.,
THE FLORIDA PORTS,
AND THE SOUTH AND SOUTH-WEST.

GREAT SOUTHERN FREIGHT AND PASSENGER LINE, CENTRAL RAILROAD OF GEORGIA, AND ATLANTIC AND GULF RAILROAD.

WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY.

SAN JACINTO, Capt. HAZARD, SATURDAY, Jan. 27, Pier 43 North River, 3 P. M. GEO. YONGE, Agt., 409 Broadway.

R. R. LIVINGSTON, Capt. MALLORY, WEDNESDAY, Jan. 31, Pier No. 43 North River, 3 P. M. GEO. YONGE, Agent No. 409 Broadway.

SAN SALVADOR, Capt. NICKERSON, SATURDAY, Feb. 3, Pier 43 North River, 3 P. M. GEO. YONGE, Agt., 409 Broadway.

GENERAL BARNES, Capt. CHERMAN, WEDNESDAY, Feb. 7, Pier 16 East River, 3 P. M. MURRAY, FERRIS & CO., Agts., 62 South st.

Insurance ONE-HALF PER CENT. Superior accommodations for passengers. Through rates and bills of lading in connection with Central R. R. of Georgia, Atlantic and Gulf Railroad, and Florida steamers City Point and Dictator; also, with the steamer J. R. SCHLEE, which has been placed on the inside route from Savannah to Florida, and offers unsurpassed accommodations.

C. D. OWENS, Agent A. & G. R. R. No. 315 Broadway.
GEORGE YONGE, Agent C. R. R. of Ga., No. 409 Broadway.

FLORIDA.

Caution to travelers! Great reduction in fare via the inland route, from Savannah to all Florida ports. Only $2 to Jacksonville. Meals and state-rooms extra. The ROSE OF SHARON and CHARLES HOWES make close connection with all Savannah steamers, thus forming the quickest and most agreeable route as well as the lowest in fare. Accommodations for passengers unsurpassed. Travelers are cautioned against purchasing through tickets via any other route.

PACIFIC MAIL AND PANAMA TRANSIT
STEAM-SHIP LINES.

FOR CALIFORNIA, JAPAN, CHINA, AUSTRALIA, NEW-ZEALAND, BRITISH COLUMBIA, OREGON, &c.

Sailing From Pier No. 42 North River.

For SAN FRANCISCO, via ISTHMUS OF PANAMA.
Steam-ship ACAPULCO.....Wednesday, Jan. 31

connecting for Central America and South Pacific ports.

From SAN FRANCISCO to JAPAN and CHINA.
Steam-ship ALASKA.....Thursday, Feb. 1

From San Francisco to Sandwich Islands, Australia, and New-Zealand.

Steam-ship ZEALANDIA.....Wednesday, Jan. 31

For freight or passage apply to
WM. P. CLYDE & CO., or H. J. BULLAY, Superintendent, No. 6 Bowling Green, Pier No. 42 N. R., foot Canal st.

NEW-YORK AND HAVANA
DIRECT MAIL LINE.

These first-class steamships sail regularly at 3 P. M., from Pier No. 13 North River as follows:

CLYDE.....SATURDAY, Feb. 3
CUBA.....SATURDAY.....Feb. 10

Accommodations unsurpassed. For freight or passage apply to WM. P. CLYDE & CO., No. 6 Bowling Green. McKELLEE, LULING & CO., Agents in Havana.

NEW-YORK, HAVANA AND MEXICAN MAIL S. S. LINE.
Steamers leave Pier No. 3 North river at 3 P. M.

FOR HAVANA DIRECT.
CITY OF MERIDA.....Saturday, Jan. 27
CITY OF VERA CRUZ.....Wednesday, Jan. 31
CITY OF NEW-YORK.....Wednesday, Feb. 7

FOR VERA CRUZ AND NEW-ORLEANS, via Havana, Progreso, Campeachy, Tuxpan, and Tampico.

CITY OF MERIDA.....Saturday, Jan. 27

Steamers will leave New-Orleans Feb. 2 and Feb. 23 for Vera Cruz and all the above ports.

For freight or passage apply to WM. P. CLYDE & CO., Agts., 142 and 144 Front st., or to JNO. E. DE PEYSTER & SONS, Nos. 31 and 33 Broadway.

HAMBURG American Packet Company's Line.
Via PLYMOUTH, CHERBOURG and HAMBURG.
From Pier 41 North River, foot of Fulton st.
HAMMONIA.....Jan. 25 | SILESIA.....Feb. 8
WESTPHALIA.....Feb. 1 | GELLERT.....Feb. 15

Rates of passage to Plymouth, London, Cherbourg, Paris, and Hamburg, and to principal points in England, Ireland, and Scotland: First Cabin, $100; Second Cabin, $70; Steerage, $30, currency. Prepaid Steerage Tickets from Hamburg and Cuxhaven, $30 gold. Steerage, $30, currency.

For freight or passage apply to
RICHARD & BOAS,
No. 5 Bowling Green.
General Passenger Agents.

SHIPPING.

ANCHOR LINE U. S. MAIL STEAMERS.
NEW-YORK AND GLASGOW.

Ethiopia....Jan. 27, 2 P. M. | Bolivia....Feb. 10, 2 P. M.
Victoria....Feb. 3, 9 A. M. | Alsatia....Feb. 17, 8 A. M.

TO GLASGOW, LIVERPOOL, OR DERRY.

Cabins $65 to $80, according to accommodations. Intermediate, $35. Steerage, $26.

NEW-YORK AND LONDON.

Elysia....Jan. 27, 2 P. M. | Italia....Feb. 10, 2 P. M.

Cabins, $35 to $70. Steerage, $25. Cabin excursion tickets at reduced rates. Drafts issued for any amount at current rates. Company's Pier Nos. 20 and 21, North River, N. Y.

HENDERSON BROTHERS,
Agents, No. 7 Bowling Green.

STEAMBOATS.

STONINGTON LINE
FOR BOSTON AND ALL POINTS EAST.
REDUCED FARE.

Elegant steamers leave Pier No. 33 North River, foot of Jay st., at 4:30 P. M.

Tickets for sale at all principal ticket offices. State-rooms secured at offices of Westcott Express Company, and at No. 359 Broadway.

PROVIDENCE LINE.

Freight only, steamers leave Pier No. 27 North River, foot of Park place, at 4 P. M. Freights via either line taken at low rates. Apply on the pier or to

D. S. BABCOCK, Pres. | L. W. FILKINS, G. P. Agent.

FALL RIVER LINE
FOR
BOSTON AND THE EAST.
FARES REDUCED.

Leave New-York daily, (Sunday excepted,) from Pier No. 28 North River, foot of Murray st., 4:30 P. M.

GEO. L. CONNOR, General Passenger Agent.

NEW-HAVEN, HARTFORD AND THE NORTH.—Steamers leave Peck slip for New-Haven at 5 P. M., (except Sundays,) connecting with road.

FOR BRIDGEPORT AND ALL POINTS ON Housatonic and Naugatuck Railroad.—Pier 21. Steamers leave Catharine slip at 11:30 A. M.

DIVIDENDS.

Fiftieth Dividend.

CLINTON
FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY,
NO. 156 BROADWAY.
NEW-YORK, Jan. 4, 1877.

The usual semi-annual Dividend of TEN PER CENT. is payable on demand. G. T. PATTERSON, Jr., Secretary.

DIVIDEND,
OFFICE OF THE
Brewers' and Maltsters' Insurance Co.
No. 139 Broadway, New-York, Jan. 24, 1877.

The Board of Directors have this day declared a semi-annual dividend of

FIVE (5) PER CENT.,

payable Feb. 1. WM. B. OGDEN, Secretary.

DIVIDEND NO. 46.
REPUBLIC FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY.
OFFICE NO. 153 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK, Jan. 11, 1877.

At a meeting of the Board of Trustees, held this day, the following dividends were declared, viz:

A Semi-annual Dividend of Five per Cent. on the capital stock, payable on demand; six per cent. interest on the scrip of the years 1873, 1874, and 1875, payable on and after Tuesday, the 13th day of March next, and a scrip dividend of Fifty per Cent on the earned premiums of 1876, to policy-holders entitled to participate in the profits of the business, for which certificates will be issued on and after Tuesday, the 13th day of March next.

DUNCAN F. CURRY, Secretary.

EXCHANGE FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY.
Office No. 172 Broadway, corner Maiden lane.

The Board of Directors have declared a SEMI-ANNUAL DIVIDEND of FIVE (5) PER CENT., and an EXTRA DIVIDEND of FIVE (5) PER CENT., payable Feb. 1. TRANSFER BOOKS will be closed from Jan. 20 to Feb. 1. G. W. MONTGOMERY, Secretary.

NEW-YORK, Jan. 11, 1877.

BOSTON AND NEW-YORK AIR-LINE RAILROAD COMPANY.
TREASURER'S OFFICE, No. 12 WALL st.,
NEW-YORK, Jan. 25, 1877.

THE INTEREST DUE FEB. 1, 1877, ON the First Mortgage Bonds of the Boston and New-York Air-Line Railroad Company will be paid at the office of Hatch & Foote, No. 12 Wall st.

D. B. HATCH, Treasurer.

OFFICE OF THE NEW-YORK, PROVIDENCE AND BOSTON RAILROAD COMPANY, (STONINGTON RAILROAD,)
NEW-YORK, Jan. 25, 1877.

A QUARTERLY DIVIDEND OF TWO AND A HALF PER CENT., out of the earnings of the past three months, will be paid at the office of Messrs. M. Morgan's Sons, No. 39 William st., New-York, on the 10th day of February.

The transfer-books will be closed from the 1st to the 10th, both inclusive. F. B. NOYES, Secretary.

STUYVESANT
INSURANCE COMPANY,
No. 122 Bowery and No. 200 Broadway,
NEW-YORK, Jan. 11, 1877.

The Board of Directors have this day declared a SEMI-ANNUAL DIVIDEND OF EIGHT PER CENT., payable on the 15th inst. at the office, No. 122 Bowery.

GEO. B. RHOADS, Secretary.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY,
NEW-YORK, Dec. 20, 1876.

A DIVIDEND OF TWO PER CENT. HAS been declared by this company, payable on the 1st day of February next, to the holders of the capital stock of this company as registered at the close of the 13th day of January next, after which, and until the 5th day of February, the transfer-books will be closed.

L. V. F. RANDOLPH, Treasurer.

MISSOURI PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY,
OFFICE No. 5 BOWLING GREEN,
NEW-YORK, Jan. 25, 1877.

THE COUPONS DUE FEB. 1, 1877, ON THE first mortgage bonds of the Pacific Railroad Company (of Missouri) will be paid on and after that date, at the office of this company.

C. K. GARRISON, President.

OFFICE OF THE LENOX FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY,
No. 158 BROADWAY, NEW YORK, Jan. 9, 1877.

FORTIETH DIVIDEND.

The Board of Directors have declared the usual semi-annual dividend of FIVE PER CENT., payable on demand.

A. H. WALTON, Secretary.

OFFICE OF THE HOWARD INSURANCE COMPANY,
NEW-YORK, Jan. 10, 1877.

THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS HAVE DECLARED a semi-annual dividend of SIX PER CENT. upon the capital stock, payable on demand.

CHAS. A. HULL, Secretary.

NEW-YORK, Jan. 22, 1877.

COUPONS.—THE COUPONS OF THE FIRST mortgage bonds of the Columbus and Toledo Railroad Company, due on the 1st day of February next, will be paid on and after that date at the St. Nicholas National Bank. M. M. GREENE, President.

THE FEBRUARY COUPONS OF THE REAL Estate Bonds, Mortgage No. 2, held by the Mercantile Trust Company, will be paid at the office of the company, Equitable Building, No. 120 Broadway, on the 1st day of February next.

E. L. MONTGOMERY, Treasurer.

CORN EXCHANGE BANK, NEW-YORK, Jan. 24, 1877.

THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS HAVE DECLARED a dividend of five per Cent., payable Feb. 1, 1877. The transfer-books will be closed from the 24th inst. to 1st proximo. By order

WM. A. NASH, Cashier.

PACIFIC BANK, NEW-YORK, Jan. 12, 1877.

THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS HAVE THIS day declared a quarterly dividend of THREE PER CENT., payable on and after the 1st day of February.

R. BUCK, Cashier.

ELECTIONS.

MISSOURI PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY,
OFFICE, No. 5 BOWLING GREEN,
NEW-YORK, Jan. 25, 1877.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THE Annual meeting of the stockholders of the Missouri Pacific Railway Company will be held at the office of the company, in St. Louis, Mo., on TUESDAY, the 6th day of March, 1877, at 12 o'clock M., for the election of thirteen Directors for the ensuing year, and for the transaction of any other business that may come before the meeting.

The annual meeting of the Board of Directors will be held at the same office on WEDNESDAY, the 7th day of March, 1877, at 12 o'clock M.

The transfer books will be closed on the afternoon of the 3d day of February, and will be reopened on the morning of the 8th day of March, 1877.

C. K. GARRISON, President.

C. L. WHITE, Secretary.

THE ANNUAL MEETING OF STOCKHOLDERS of the Maryland Coal Company for the election of a President and ten Directors, and for such other business as may come before the meeting, will be held at the company's office, No. 111 Broadway, Feb. 6, at 11 A. M. Polls open from 12 M. till 1 P. M.

S. T. ROSS, Secretary.

PROPOSALS.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

Sealed proposals will be received by the Board of School Trustees of the Twelfth Ward, at the Hall of the Board of Education, corner of Grand and Elm sts., until TUESDAY, the 6th day of February, 1877, and until 4 o'clock P. M. on said day, for altering and fitting up the premises on the north-east corner of Avenue A and 118th st. for school purposes.

Plans and specifications may be seen at the office of the Superintendent of School Buildings, No. 146 Grand st., third floor.

Two responsible and approved sureties, residents of this City, will be required from the successful bidder.

The party submitting a proposal, and the parties proposing to become sureties must each write his name and place of residence on said proposal.

The Trustees reserve the right to reject any or all of the proposals submitted.

HOWELL G. ROLSTON,
DAVID H. KNAPP,
CHARLES CRAKY,
JOHN L. TENNELE,
BENJAMIN HAUSCHILL,
Board of School Trustees, Twelfth Ward.

Dated NEW-YORK, Jan. 23, 1877.

MISCELLANEOUS.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING. Each packet is labelled, JAMES EPPS & CO., Homœopathic Chemists, No. 48 Threadneedle st. and No. 170 Piccadilly, London, England. New-York Depot, SMITH & VANDERBEEK, Fifth place.

BUSINESS CHANCES.

PARTNER WANTED—IN A GOOD, WELL-established, and profitable business, centrally located in the City of Rochester, comprising stoves, tin, and sheet-iron ware, house-furnishing goods, and general jobbing work. A capital of $6,000 required. Address K. Box No. 145 Times office, or EDWARD JONES, Rochester, No. 16 South st. Paul st.

FINANCIAL.

VERMILYE & CO.
BANKERS

No. 16 and 18 Nassau st., New-York.

DEALERS IN ALL ISSUES OF GOVERNMENT SECURITIES,
NEW-YORK CITY
AND BROOKLYN BONDS,
BUY AND SELL ON COMMISSION
RAILWAY STOCKS, BONDS, AND GOLD.

INTEREST ON DEPOSITS.

JAS. A. TROWBRIDGE. DONALD MACKAY
LATHAM A. FISH

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF THE NINTH NATIONAL BANK, at New-York, in the State of New-York, at the close of business, Jan. 20, 1877.

RESOURCES.

Loans and discounts	$4,264,555 21
Overdrafts	2,763 35
United States Bonds to secure circulation	700,000 00
United States Bonds on hand	151,500 00
Other stocks, bonds, and mortgages	523,623 19
Due from other National Banks	664,239 93
Due from State Banks and bankers	122,830 62
Real estate, furniture, and fixtures	500,000 00
Premiums paid	86,273 07
Checks and other cash items	1,377 09
Exchanges for Clearing-House	394,478 00
Bills of other National Banks	4,775 00
Fractional currency (including nickels)	980 00
Specie (including gold Treasury notes)	356,173 00
Legal-tender notes	953,300 00
United States certificates of deposit for legal tenders	645,000 00
Redemption fund with United States Treasurer (5 per cent. of circulation)	31,500 00
Due from United States Treasurer, other than 5 per cent. redemption fund	20,000 00
Total	$9,423,868 36

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in	$1,500,000 00
Surplus fund	110,000 00
Other undivided profits	15,318 52
National bank notes outstanding	495,000 00
Dividends unpaid	1,518 00
Individual deposits subject to check	2,558,383 44
Demand certificates of deposit	1,372 78
Certified checks	129,587 00
Cashier's checks outstanding	92,632 31
Due to other National Banks	2,700,609 51
Due to State banks and bankers	1,819,136 50
Total	$9,423,868 36

State of New-York, County of New-York, ss:

I, H. H. NAZRO, Cashier of the above-named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

H. H. NAZRO, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 25th day of January, 1877. J. H. V. ARNOLD, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest:
JOHN T. HILL,
GARDNER R. COLBY,
ALVAH HALL,
Directors.

CHASE & ATKINS,
BANKERS AND BROKERS,

NO. 18 BROAD STREET, NEW-YORK.

INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS SUBJECT TO DRAFT AT SIGHT.

GOLD, GOVERNMENT, STATE, MUNICIPAL AND RAILROAD SECURITIES BOUGHT AND SOLD ON COMMISSION FOR CASH OR UPON MARGIN.

J. & W. SELIGMAN & CO.,
BANKERS,

No. 21 Broad st., New-York,

Issue Letters of Credit for Travelers,

PAYABLE IN ANY PART OF EUROPE, ASIA, AFRICA, AUSTRALIA, AND AMERICA.

DRAW BILLS OF EXCHANGE AND MAKE TELEGRAPHIC TRANSFERS OF MONEY ON EUROPE AND CALIFORNIA.

Choice and Safe Investments.

7, 8, AND 10 PER CENT.
CITY AND COUNTY MUNICIPAL BONDS.
FIRST MORTGAGE RAILROAD BONDS.
CITY RAILROAD STOCKS AND BONDS.
INSURANCE AND BANK STOCKS.
GAS-LIGHT STOCKS AND BONDS.
STRICTLY FIRST-CLASS SECURITIES.
PAYING 10 TO 15 PER CENT.
INTEREST ALWAYS PROMPTLY PAID.
For sale at desirable prices by

Albert H. Nicolay & Co.,

NO. 43 PINE ST., NEW-YORK.

N. B.—INVESTMENT SECURITIES OUR SPECIALTY 26 YEARS.

WABASH RAILWAY COMPANY.
NOTICE TO BONDHOLDERS.

The holders of the following Divisional Bonds of the Wabash Railway, viz:

Toledo and Illinois Railroad Company.
Lake Erie, Wabash and St. Louis Railroad Company.
Detroit and Western Railroad Company.
Illinois and Southern Iowa Railroad Company.

On presentation, on Feb. 1, next, of the past due and current coupons to the Metropolitan National Bank, will receive therefor cash for the coupons due Feb. 1, 1877, and a certificate of deposit bearing interest for those past due.

For further information and particulars in regard to all classes of bonds, inquiry may be made of JAMES A. ROOSEVELT, President Wabash Railway Company, No. 32 Pine st., or of the Purchasing Committee, No. 52 William st., New-York.

NEW-YORK, Jan. 26, 1877.

OFFICE OF THE FARMERS' LOAN AND TRUST COMPANY,
No. 26 EXCHANGE PLACE, CORNER WILLIAM ST.,
NEW-YORK, Jan. 8, 1877.

THE FARMERS' LOAN AND TRUST COMPANY of the City of New-York, Trustee of the sinking fund of the construction and equipment bonds of the Cleveland and Pittsburg Railroad Company, hereby give notice that in accordance with the provisions of the said sinking fund, they have drawn by lot the following numbers of sixteen of said bonds, viz: Nos. 59, 449, 554, 676, 709, 711, 739, 867, 883, 885, 925, 945, 950, 980, 1,100, 1,342, and 1,345, due on presentation and delivery to them of said sixteen bonds, or any part of the same, they will be redeemed at par value thereof, and that interest on all of the said numbers not presented for redemption on or before the 1st day of July next will cease from and after that date.

R. G. ROLSTON, President.

OFFICE OF THE FARMERS' LOAN AND TRUST COMPANY,
No. 26 EXCHANGE PLACE, CORNER WILLIAM ST.,
NEW-YORK, Jan. 19, 1877.

THIS COMPANY HAVE BEEN APPOINTED the agents in New-York of the Reconstruction Trustees in London of the Erie Railway Company, under the amended scheme of reconstruction adopted by the English bond and shareholders.

Bond and shareholders are respectfully requested to present their bonds and certificates of stock for adjustment under the amended scheme of reconstruction, at this office, at the earliest moment. Circulars and particulars will be furnished on application.

R. G. ROLSTON, President.

BROWN BROTHERS & CO.,
NO. 59 WALL ST.,
ISSUE COMMERCIAL AND TRAVELLERS' CREDITS AVAILABLE IN ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

A FEW CHOICE CITY FIRE INSURANCE STOCKS for sale by E. R. BAILEY,
No. 55 Wall st.

FINANCIAL.

CHICAGO, BURLINGTON AND QUINCY RAILROAD COMPANY.

Proposals for Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad bonds amounting to $2,500,000, being part of a series of $3,500,000, dated Oct. 1, 1876, and payable in twenty-five years in Boston, with interest semi-annually at the rate of five per cent. per annum, will be opened at the undersigned, at RAILROAD HOUSE, on the 27th day of January instant, at noon, and will be awarded to the highest bidders, subject to reservation by the company of the right to reject all bids if unsatisfactory.

For the security of the above bonds an equal amount of bonds of even date of the St. Louis, Rock Island and Chicago Railroad Company, bearing seven per cent. interest per annum, and issued by a first mortgage on said road and equipment thereon, which road has been agreed to be leased to the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad Company, will be deposited with Trustees, and said Trustees are to apply each six months the amount of the difference then received between the five per cent. and the seven per cent., to buying such five per cent. bonds upon public proposals as may be offered at a cost not exceeding par and interest, and all bonds so purchased to be canceled by the Trustees.

The sinking fund will absorb the whole issue within the twenty-five years, if holders will sell at par and interest, thus making a permanent market for the bonds, which should maintain and appreciate their value from year to year, and make them a very desirable investment, especially for trust funds.

The full amount to be made of Directors upon the St. Louis, Rock Island and Chicago Railroad is $2,500,000, of which it is estimated that about $2,200,000 will supply all present requirements, leaving $300,000 to be held in reserve for future needs of the road.

The road is 270 miles in length, in fair condition, and the equipment belonging to it is appraised, at present low values, to be worth $500,000.

Payments to be made at Directors' Office, No. 2: one-third Feb. 26, and one-third March 26, with accrued interest from date of bond; or by giving notice at the time of acceptance of proposals any installments may be anticipated.

Subscribers can have registerable coupon bonds or registered bonds, in any amount of even thousands, with interest payable to their order.

By order of the Board of Directors.

J. N. A. GRISWOLD, Chairman.

BOSTON, Jan. 12, 1877.

CINCINNATI 7 3/10 PER CENT
MUNICIPAL BONDS, DUE 1906.

A LIMITED AMOUNT FOR SALE BY

KUHN, LOEB & CO., NO. 31 NASSAU ST.

OCEAN NATIONAL BANK.
ASSETS AT AUCTION,
MARCH 27, 1877.

For catalogue apply to ADRIAN H. MULLER & CO., No. 7 Pine st., or to the Receiver, No. 21 Nassau st.

THEODORE M. DAVIS, Receiver.

SITUATIONS WANTED.

FEMALES.

THE UP-TOWN OFFICE OF THE TIMES.

The up-town office of THE TIMES is located at No. 1,257 Broadway, bet. 31st and 32d sts. Open daily, Sundays included, from 4 A. M. to 9 P. M. Subscriptions received, and copies of THE TIMES for sale.

ADVERTISEMENTS RECEIVED UNTIL 9 P. M.

COMPANION OR HOUSEKEEPER.—BY A very accommodating and efficient lady; a companion or housekeeper to an aged or invalid lady. Address J. F. C., Box No. 327 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

COPYIST.—BY A RESPECTABLE YOUNG LADY as copyist; is a first-class writer; will work for a small salary. Call on or address for two days H. Elliott, No. 823 West 46th st.

CHAMBER-MAID AND WAITRESS.—BY A very respectable girl as chamber-maid and waitress in a private family; good reference. Call at No. 222 East 29th st.

CHAMBER-MAID AND WAITRESS.—BY A Protestant girl; or to assist in light house-work; willing to be instructed. Can be found at No. 343 9th av., second floor.

CHAMBER-MAID AND WAITRESS.—BY A young girl; has six years' City reference from last place. Call at No. 313 East 26th st., third floor, back room.

CHAMBER-MAID AND NURSE.—BY A respectable young woman; willing and obliging; no objection to the country; best City and country reference. Call or address R. Kesley, 246 West 35th st.

CHAMBER-MAID.—BY A COLORED WOMAN; will do plain sewing, or as laundress in a private family; good reference. Call at No. 148 West 27th st.

CHAMBER-MAID.—HIGHLY RECOMMENDED. Can be seen at present employer's, 25 East 44th st.

COOK, WASHER, AND IRONER—CHAMBER-maid and Waitress.—By two respectable girls, one as cook, washer, and ironer; is a good bread and biscuit baker; the other as chamber-maid and waitress; best City reference. Call at No. 158 West 28th st., Room No. 3.

COOK.—BY A COMPETENT WOMAN AS FIRST-class cook in a private family; understands family baking; will take care of milk and butter; good reference. Call at No. 152 West 23th st., second floor, rear.

COOK.—BY A RESPECTABLE WOMAN AS FIRST-class cook; thoroughly understands games, soups, meats, boning, and larding; is an excellent baker; best City reference. Call at No. 631 5th av., in grocery store.

COOK.—BY A RESPECTABLE WOMAN IN A PRIvate family; thoroughly understands her business; would assist with washing; City reference. Call at No. 244 West 33d st.

COOK—WAITER.—BY A FIRST-CLASS FRENCH Cook—husband as waiter—in a private family; first-class reference. Call or address S., No. 150 East 42d st.

COOK.—BY A YOUNG WOMAN AS COOK; will assist with washing; best City reference. Address A. L., Box No. 279 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

COOK.—BY A RESPECTABLE COLORED WOMAN As cook in a boarding-house or private family; good City reference. Call or address Mrs. J. T. B., No. 151 West 24th st., top floor.

COOK.—BY A RESPECTABLE YOUNG WOMAN AS Good cook, and to do plain washing in a private family; is a good baker; City reference. Call at No. 324 East 36th st.

COOK.—BY A RESPECTABLE WOMAN AS COOK; understands her business thoroughly; good baker; will assist with washing and ironing; good reference. Call at No. 239 West 27th st.

COOK.—BY A FIRST-CLASS ENGLISH COOK, IN private family; superior family cook; seven years' City reference; City or country. Call at No. 115 West 19th st.; no cards answered.

COOK, WASHER AND IRONER.—BY A RESpectable woman; good baker; either in the City or out of City reference; willing and obliging. Call at No. 268 7th av., second floor.

COOK.—BY A RESPECTABLE WOMAN AS GOOD cook and baker, pastry, game, and soup; good City reference; City or country. Call for two days at Grammar School No. 40, in 23d st., near 2d av.

COOK—LAUNDRESS.—BY TWO RESPECTABLE Girls; one as cook and the other as laundress; both highly recommended. Can be seen at present employer's, No. 39 West 54th st.

COOK.—BY A YOUNG ENGLISH WOMAN, AS FIRST-class cook; understands her business in all its branches; will not wash; understands marketing. Call at No. 238 6th av.

COOK.—BY A NEAT, ORDERLY, COMPETENT Protestant woman in a private family; understands her business thoroughly. Inquire for C. D., No. 241 East 33d st.

COOK.—BY A WOMAN FULLY COMPETENT AS first-class cook in a private family. Call at No. 115 West 41st st., near 6th av.

COOK.—BY A FIRST-CLASS FRENCH COOK, IN A private family; first-class reference. Call or address No. 150 East 42d st.

COOK.—BY A YOUNG WOMAN, AS COOK AND TO assist at washing and ironing. Call for two days at No. 211 West 44th st.

COOK, WASHER, AND IRONER.—IN A PRIvate family; experienced cook, &c.; best City reference. Call at No. 146 East 30th st.

COOK.—BY A GOOD FRENCH COOK IN A PRIvate family or a private boarding-house. Address No. 135 West 3d st., near 6th av., front basement.

COOK.—BY A YOUNG WOMAN AS FIRST-CLASS Cook; thoroughly understands her business; excellent baker. Call at No. 638 3d av.

DRESS-MAKER.—BY A FIRST-CLASS DRESSmaker the work of a few more first-class families; none to surpass in fitting and trimming dresses made over equal to new; best of references. Call at No. 234 6th av.

DRESS-MAKER.—A COMPETENT DRESSmaker wants work by the day; ladies' dresses, &c., cut and fitted while waiting. No. 1,256 Broadway, ring second bell.

DRESS-MAKER.—BY A COMPETENT DRESSmaker and family seamstress in a private family; operates on Wheeler & Wilson machine and others. Apply at No. 233 West 19th st.

HOUSEKEEPER.—BY AN EXPERIENCED, energetic housekeeper in a first-class hotel or family; experienced in sickness; an excellent needlewoman; fond of children. Call or address for one week Housekeeper, Ladies' Depository, 576 Broadway.

HOUSEKEEPER.—BY A YOUNG AMERICAN Protestant woman of intelligence as housekeeper in a gentleman's or widower's family; terms moderate; has best City reference. Call at No. 463 4th av.

HOUSE-WORK.—BY A YOUNG W

LOCAL MISCELLANY.

THE UNION TRUST FORGERY CASE.

MR. SYLVESTER L. BLOOD TELLS HOW HE RECEIVED THE CHECK—THE PRISONER, HORACE E. BROWNE, TESTIFIES AGAINST CHADWICK AND MAXWELL.

The examination in the case of George W. Chadwick, arrested on the charge of being implicated in the Union Trust Company forgery case, was begun yesterday afternoon at the Tombs Police Court, before Justice Duffy. Mr. Wheeler H. Peckham appeared for the prosecution and Mr. Benjamin F. Tracy for Chadwick, who showed an intense interest in the proceedings, eagerly watching each witness as he testified. Sylvester L. Blood, called by the prosecution, testified as follows: I am a broker, doing business at No. 16 New street; I first saw this check [the forged check] on the afternoon of the 2d of January; Maxwell came to my office and handed it to me; I had no conversation with him previously about the check; I told my cashier to put the check in the bank; next day there was a payment on account of the check of $53,287 66 to Richards & Cohen, for $50,000 in gold, which I gave to Maxwell, and on the same day I gave him our check for $500; on Jan. 5 I gave him $9,500 in gold; on Jan. 6 I paid Richards & Cohen $1 95 commission, and on Jan. 8 I paid Maxwell's dues in the Stock Exchange, amounting to $54, and I placed a balance of $40 14 to Maxwell's credit; I identify Maxwell's signature on the back of the check.

Cross-examination by Mr. Tracy—I never before knew of Maxwell being in possession of a check of this large amount; I asked him nothing about the check; I saw it was on the New-York Life Insurance Company, payable to his order; I never conversed with Maxwell on the question of how he came by the check.

William H. Beers, Actuary of the New-York Life Insurance Company, called by the prosecution, testified: Our company never made or issued the check; the signatures to the letters attached to the check were not written by me; our company never have occasion to buy gold; we sometimes sell it; I think I have seen Maxwell.

Cross-examined—I never saw Chadwick that I recollect.

Theodore M. Banta, called by the prosecution, said: I am Cashier of the New-York Life Insurance Company; the check in question was never issued by the company; the check was returned to me as a voucher against the company, and I pronounced it a forgery; our company has never purchased gold during the time I have been with it.

Horace E. Browne, brought up from his cell, and called by the prosecution, gave evidence as follows: I have resided in the City 17 years, and know both Maxwell and Chadwick; I am engaged principally in the ship-broking business and sometimes deal in stocks and bonds through brokers; I was introduced to Chadwick about six weeks ago, by a Mr. L. A. Brown, a curb-stone operator, and Chadwick, who had bonds of the South Brooklyn and Park Railway Company, gave me one to negotiate for him; Chadwick told me about this time that an institution that he knew of wanted to get depreciated securities in an indirect way, to substitute for other securities, and he asked me if I knew of any broker who could get them; I went to Maxwell, and he said he could do it, and that there was no risk in it; I told Chadwick I had found a broker, and it was arranged that the commission to be paid Maxwell for getting the securities should be divided between Maxwell, Chadwick, and myself; on Tuesday, the 2d of January, I asked Chadwick if everything was progressing right, and he said yes, and that the institution he spoke of was the New-York Life Insurance Company; he said he had received orders from that company and the check in question; I shortly afterward met Maxwell, and he told me that the check was all right; I heard that the check was a forgery was from Maxwell, who told me that there was trouble and that I had better get out of the way; I saw Chadwick at his office in Dey street, and told him what Maxwell had told me, and when I got home I found Maxwell there, who said that the check was a forgery, and that he had been obliged to throw the whole thing on me; the next morning I told Chadwick what Maxwell had said, and Chadwick said he had been hauled up by the Trust Company, and that the best I could do was to go and see them: I went to the Union Trust Company and had interviews with the officers of the company, one or two detectives, and Mr. Peckham; I was then locked up in Police Head-quarters.

Cross-examination—I believed that Chadwick, Maxwell, and myself were engaged in a scheme with officers of an institution who wanted to make away with funds; I first suspected that I had been engaged in a criminal act on the Saturday before the forgery was discovered; Maxwell became very nervous on that day, and I began to feel nervous because he did; he had been my mainstay; up to that day I thought the check was a genuine one, drawn by the officers of the insurance company; I have not yet made up my mind as to whether the check is a forgery; from what I know of the check, I believe it to be a legitimate check, signed by the officers that it purports to be signed by; I believe this on Chadwick's statement; Chadwick told me so yesterday, and that he believed that the whole thing arose from a mistake in the insurance company, and that he had no reason to disbelieve that the check was cut out of the check-book of the company; Chadwick said some time ago that it was within the range of possibility that the check was good and that it was gotten up by an officer who might become a defaulter; the commission which was to be received from the insurance company, as stated by Chadwick, who said it was to be 25 per cent., Maxwell was to get one-half, of the other half I was to have one-quarter, and Chadwick, who said he would have to divide his share, was to get the balance; the L. A. Brown who introduced me to Chadwick was not a relative of mine; my place of business was No. 35 Broad street; I think Chadwick was never in my office.

The further hearing was adjourned to 10 o'clock to-morrow morning.

A CLUE FROM BROOKLYN.

The Brooklyn Argus of yesterday says that about three weeks ago Mr. Charles Tremain let the furnished house No. 399 Grand avenue, Brooklyn, to a man giving his name as Harrington, who referred to Mr. P. Smith, of No. 85 Dey street, where Chadwick's office is located, and the reference appearing satisfactory, on examination Harrington obtained possession of the house on condition of paying the rent at the end of the month. About a week afterward Mrs. Tremain had occasion to call at the house, and found it closed. On Friday [January 5] an examination was made, and it was found that Harrington had left, and had taken about $150 worth of property with him. George W. Chadwick has been identified by Mr. Tremain's brother as the "M. P. Smith" who had vouched for Harrington, and Harrington has been identified by the police as Oscar F. Wainwright, a "straw" bondsman who was pardoned by the President, and it is said that the forged check was probably gotten up in the deserted house in Brooklyn.

THE BRAIN AND NERVOUS SYSTEM.

LECTURE OF DR. EUGENE DUPUY AT COOPER INSTITUTE—DESCRIPTION OF THE NERVES AND THEIR FUNCTIONS.

Dr. Eugene Dupuy gave the first of a series of three free lectures on the recent advances in the physiology of the brain and nervous system, at Cooper Institute last evening. The lecture was delivered in Room No. 30, which was far too small to hold the large number of persons who desired to hear what Dr. Dupuy had to say on the subject. The lecturer began by speaking of the nervous system. The nerves, he said, were not immaterial, but were made up of fibres and cells, the latter being very minute, and not visible except under a high magnifying power. He then made a drawing on the blackboard of the cell and fibre, illustrating their relative positions. The fibre, he said, was called the cylinder axis and was entire, but was coated with a system of cells which insulated it. There was a distinction between nerves, as there were nerves of common sensation and special sensation, nerves of sight, smell, motion, and mortal nerves, the latter being those which animated the blood. It had been supposed that there were muscular nerves, but their existence had not been satisfactorily proved. Of what the nervous fluid consists, he said, was unknown. At one time it was supposed to be identical with electricity, but it had been proved that it was not. As an example he stated that a wire through which an electric current was passing might be divided, but the ends being placed together the current would still be transmitted. Should a nerve be divided it would no longer convey any sensation to the brain, even though the ends should be placed together in the same manner as those of the wire. Electricity was also transmitted through a wire with much greater rapidity than sensation through the nerves, the latter only travelling at the rate of 90 to 500 feet a second. Dr. Dupuy then explained the reflex action of the nerves, illustrating his description by means of diagrams on the blackboard. This action, he said, was stronger than the will, and acted independently. Thus, he said, if he were to advance the piece of chalk which he held in his hand rapidly toward his eye, although he was well aware that he would not allow it to strike it, he could not refrain from closing it. As another instance of the power of this action, he said that it was impossible for any one to suspend the process of respiration for a sufficient length of time to produce death. So soon as the blood became charged with carbonic acid, in consequence of the want of oxygen, the nerves became irritated and the reflex action set in, and respiration was involuntarily resumed. In cases of what might be called "emotions," such as the receipt of unexpected news, &c., causing a shock to the nervous system, the pulsation of the heart was often momentarily stopped. This was caused by a contraction of the innumerable small blood-vessels of the body, forcing the blood to the heart. Thus sudden paleness on the receipt of unexpected intelligence was accounted for. Persons in such cases were often insensible to pain, and this was because of their being occupied with one subject to the exclusion of everything else, and the peculiar nerve centre to which the sensation of pain was transmitted was not at work. This last fact was exceedingly important, and was valuable in explaining the effects of animal magnetism. The nerves were constantly taking up nutrition, and throwing off that which they no longer needed, and consequently were not always the same. Whence, then, came the power of recalling events? It was through what was called organized past experience. It was a sort of dynamic force stored in the cells like latent heat in steel, iron, &c. In concluding, the Doctor entered upon the theory of dreams, and explained that they were induced by abnormal causes operating upon the brain. During the delivery of the lecture Mr. Peter Cooper occupied a seat on the platform.

THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

HEADS OF DEPARTMENTS TO CONSULT MONTHLY WITH THE MAYOR—A TAMMANY ALDERMAN ON THE PRESIDENTIAL QUESTION—HEATING THE STREET RAILROAD CARS.

In the Board of Aldermen yesterday, Mr. Purroy offered a resolution directing the Mayor to summon the heads of the various departments and branches of the City Government, including the President of the Board of Education, to meet him at his office on the first Wednesday of each month, and oftener, if deemed by him advisable, for the purpose of conferring and taking counsel together, with the view of devising and recommending measures affecting the public interests, and of securing that concert of action which is essential to a harmonious and efficient Municipal Administration. The resolution was adopted.

Alderman Cole offered a resolution reciting that "it is of vital necessity, not only to the immediate well-being of the community, but to the stability and permanence of the Republic," that the Presidential question should be peacefully settled; that this Common Council "cordially approve" of the Electoral bill reported by the Joint Conference Committee on the Counting of the Electoral Vote, and "that we regard with satisfaction" the advocacy which the measure has received from both the Senators from this State, and "that we trust it will receive the support of the entire New-York delegation in Congress, and be adopted."

Alderman Purroy said he agreed with the views of Mr. Cole, but he thought that, as the Senate had taken action on the matter, the resolution should be placed on file. This suggestion was approved.

The Committee on Railroads presented a majority report signed by Messrs. Gantzer and Reilly, and a minority report signed by Mr. Cowing, on the question of heating the street railroad cars. The majority report was against the artificial heating of the cars. The signers state they were induced to believe that great importance was attached to the subject by the traveling community, but in this they were greatly disappointed. They found that the public were not represented at their meetings, and the only parties who appeared to take any interest in the matter were railroad officials and inventors of car-heating apparatus. No disinterested parties appeared. From inquiries made, they believed that the public were adverse to the heating of cars, because of apprehension that a crowded car, heated by artificial means, in addition to the natural heat of the body, would superinduce disease, and that the seeming comforts of the heated car would be more than offset by the fear of contracting disease. The cars can, they think, be made sufficiently comfortable without resorting to artificial heat. This could be done by keeping the front doors closed in cold weather from the time of leaving the depot until they reached their destination. Clean straw should be placed daily in the bottom of every car, and the ventilation should be so arranged that impure air could be permitted to escape by some arrangement that would at the same time prevent the admission of cold air. The Common Council could enforce regulations of this kind. So many considerations of health, &c., arose in connection with the question, that the signers thought it better to leave the matter of heating cars to those who were charged with the preservation of the public health.

To this report was appended a resolution providing that the City railroad companies be required to conform to all the regulations imposed for the comfort and convenience of passengers by the Board of Health, and that the said board be required to compel the companies to keep the front doors of cars closed and supply them with clean straw daily, and to ventilate them in a manner that will not admit draughts of cold air.

The minority report agreed with many of the features of the majority report, but recommended the heating of 10 per cent. of the cars as an experiment, and stated that the Health Board had approved of this latter proposition.

After a brief debate both reports were laid over.

Alderman Toomey offered a resolution, which was adopted, instructing the special committee on the increased supply of water to investigate the allegations that the contractor for tapping Croton mains had used tapping cocks of an inferior quality which, as alleged, caused leakages and consequent waste of water.

The communication of Mayor Ely, sent in at a previous meeting, vetoing the resolution to repeal the ordinance authorizing the lease of the premises Nos. 7, 9, and 11 West Thirteenth street for armory purposes, was called up and approved.

Alderman Purroy presented a resolution reciting that the Third District Court-house still remains incompleted; that the Commissioners appointed to superintend the work had no power under the law to take further charge of it after Dec. 31, 1876; that their office was abolished by law on that date, and that the Commissioner of Public Works be instructed to supervise the work necessary to finish the building. The resolutions were referred to the Committee on the Third District Court-house.

The Board then disposed of some unimportant business, after which they adjourned.

THE BOARD OF POLICE.

The Board of Police at its session yesterday received a communication from the Greenwich Street Elevated Railway Company, announcing that in consequence of the large number of policemen applying for free rides the company had resolved to issue passes only to the officers of the precincts through which the tracks run. The Secretary of the Board of Fire Underwriters notified the Commissioners of the adoption of the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the Board of Fire Underwriters observe with approval the action of the Boards of Police and Fire Commissioners looking toward the better protection of life and property in theatres and other public buildings, and it is of the opinion that the inspection authorized and required by chapter 742, laws of 1871, should be frequently made, to the end that the requirements of the same shall not be neglected, but rigidly enforced.

Resolved, Further, that the special attention of the said Commissioners be respectfully invited to the authority given them by section 6 of chapter 742 of the laws of 1871, and they be and are hereby requested to fully exercise that authority with reference to all classes of buildings referred to in the act.

A communication was received from Hon. Hamilton Fish, Jr., notifying the board that the Committee on Cities of the State Legislature will, on Tuesday next, consider matters affecting the Police Department of New-York. The letter of the Riot Relief Fund Committee, accompanying the $1,000 check to Patrolman John McDowell, of the Twenty-ninth Precinct, was ordered to be read at the stations to the members of the force, and the Treasurer was directed to transmit the amount of the check to the brave officer to whom it was awarded.

A DESPERADO CAPTURED.

After a long search Detectives McGowan and Tooker, of the Nineteenth Precinct, succeeded in arresting John Ford, a desperate character, against whom two charges of felonious assault are pending. Ford, who formerly lived at No. 349 East Forty-sixth street, was, it is alleged, concerned in an affray at Tivoli Hall, No. 263 West Seventeenth street, on Nov. 9 last, during which Charles Barnham alias "Rocks," the bartender, was shot, and, as it was supposed at the time, mortally wounded. Barnham, after spending several weeks in Bellevue Hospital, was discharged as cured. James McGuire, of No. 426 West Thirty-second street, was arrested on Monday night, charged with having shot Barnham, and on being arraigned at court admitted his participation in the affray, but claimed that the shooting was done by Ford. Acting upon information given by McGuire, the detectives went to a tenement-house at No. 164 Seventh street early yesterday morning, and bursting in the door of one of the rooms, found Ford in bed. He was secured before he could offer any resistance and taken to the Central Office. Superintendent Walling ordered his photograph to be taken, after which the prisoner was arraigned at the Fifty-seventh Street Police Court for examination, and held in default of bail. Ford is also charged with having shot and seriously wounded Kate Dounell, his mistress, in whose shanty, at Seventy-second street and Boulevard, he had taken refuge immediately after the shooting of Barnham.

AN IMPORTER CALLED TO ACCOUNT.

Officer Crowley, of the United States District Attorney's office, yesterday arrested Morris Hess, a general importer doing business at No. 198 Canal street, who is charged with conspiracy with Lawrence Williams to defraud the Government of duties on imported goods. He was admitted to bail by Commissioner Shields in the sum of $10,000. Hess was arrested last Summer on a similar charge, but the Grand Jury failed to find an indictment against him. Against himself and Herman Hirsch, a former partner, the Government has begun a civil suit for $540,000, gold. A similar suit was also begun yesterday against Lewis & Edward Haas, both of whom are now under arrest on a criminal suit, for the sum of $210,000, gold. Also, one against Christabel Altenas for $15,000, gold. All of the suits are brought for undervaluation of goods and fraudulent importations.

SOUTHERN STATE DEBTS.

PLANNING FOR THEIR SETTLEMENT.

INFLUENTIAL MEETING OF THE CLEARING-HOUSE—VIEWS OF BANKERS AND OTHERS ON THE SUBJECT—A COMMITTEE APPOINTED TO PROMOTE A PLAN WHICH WILL BE ACCEPTABLE ALIKE TO DEBTOR AND CREDITOR.

The meeting called by a large number of prominent citizens, bankers, merchants, and others, to arrange a plan for the settlement of the indebtedness of the Southern States, was held yesterday at noon in the Clearing-house. The meeting was not large in numbers, but was important in character. Among those present were Mr. H. B. Claflin, Mr. Levi P. Morton, Mr. George Opdyke, Mr. Thomas Denny, Mr. P. C. Calhoun, President of the Fourth National Bank, Mr. Henry F. Spaulding, President of the Central Trust Company, Mr. Cyrus W. Field, Rev. Samuel Osgood, Mr. Moses Taylor, Mr. Theodore Gilman, Mr. John A. Stewart, Mr. F. S. Winston, and Mr. Joseph Seligman. Mr. Frederick Taylor, of Butterfield & Co., called the meeting to order, and Mr. William Cullen Bryant was elected Chairman. Mr. Thomas Denny was made Secretary. Mr. Bryant in taking the chair said that they were assembled for a purpose that might without offense be called philanthropic. Certain of the States of the Union are, he said, in a condition of deplorable insolvency, from which no exertions of their own can extricate them—so deeply in debt that only the assistance of some friendly hand can enable them to emerge. This meeting had been called to initiate a method of helping those States which are past helping themselves. To this end it had been proposed, he said, to call in the aid of some of our wisest and most experienced men of business, whose names would be given to the meeting for approval.

Mr. Frederick Taylor said that at a meeting of the creditors of South Carolina, held a few weeks ago, a resolution was passed appointing Messrs. George S. Coe, J. D. Vermilye, B. B. Sherman, B. B. Comegys, and Enoch Pratt a committee to act as disinterested arbiters between the creditors and State, and since that time the plan had been generally approved. It was not necessary to tell of the condition of the South. We all know it, he said, and the world knows it to our disgrace. Virginia is steeped to the very lips in debt that she cannot pay and is too honest to repudiate. The same is true of Louisiana and South Carolina. Their creditors are scattered throughout the world. Any attempt to negotiate the debt would develop a vast contrariety of opinion. The inactivity of the States is largely due to the difficulties they know will confront them if they endeavor to effect a settlement alone. Their default is like a millstone about their necks, dragging them down. In this emergency something clearly must be done, and assurances had been received from the Southern States of their readiness to co-operate with the committee to be appointed. The meeting had not been called exclusively for the bondholders—there was no hall that would hold them. It was a matter that interested every citizen. The decision reached by the committee to be appointed could be accepted by any State without incurring the slightest taint of repudiation.

Col. Stebbins then read the following preamble and resolutions:

Whereas, Several of the Southern States of this Union have incurred heavy public debts which have become a burden greater than they can now bear; and,

Whereas, Such financial embarrassments naturally tend to check immigration and enterprise from those States, and operate continually to retard their growth in population and wealth: and so long as those States remain in default these accumulating sums of unliquidated debt will prove an insuperable obstacle to all true progress and prosperity; and,

Whereas, The various States of the Union are so indissolubly bound together by commercial and political relations that when one member suffers all the members suffer with it; and while the public debts of any State are in disrepute, not only are the bonds of that State hindered in the markets of the world, but the credit of the national securities is likewise measurably affected; and,

Whereas, It is matter of vital importance to the people of those States and also of the nation, but especially of the City of New-York that the financial affairs of the whole country should be speedily restored to a healthy condition, it seems eminently fitting that the commencement of the second century of the nation's existence should be signalized by this happy consummation; therefore, be it

Resolved, That as citizens of New-York, we deplore the existing state of things in the defaulting States of the South, and we desire to express our feelings of sympathy with the people of those States in their unhappy condition. We recognize the insurmountable obstacles in the way of an honorable discharge by them in full of all their financial obligations, and we perceive that some method of compromise and readjustment is absolutely necessary. Anxious to promote such a settlement upon equitable terms, we recommend the intervention of a committee of disinterested arbiters between the States and their bondholders, as offering a method fair and honorable alike to debtor and to creditor.

Resolved, That, in the opinion of this meeting, the five bank officers named, to wit, George S. Coe, J. D. Vermilye, B. B. Sherman, B. B. Comegys, and Enoch Pratt, possess the fullest confidence and respect of the country, and are, therefore, eminently fitted to discharge such a duty, not only from their high personal character and qualifications, but also from their long experience in important business affairs.

Resolved, That we most respectfully commend this movement to the earnest consideration of the authorities of every delinquent State, and we cordially invite them to signify to this committee their desire to confer upon this important subject.

Mr. George Opdyke said he cordially approved the resolutions and the remarks of the speakers. The financial and material condition of the South all knew had resulted from their efforts to dissolve the Union, and by the transition from slave to free labor. We cannot, he said, but commend the efforts of the States to bring about the needed restoration of prosperity. Their labors have done more than could have been expected. It was right to come forward now in a spirit of liberality and justice to help this people out of a debt that by accumulation of interest had almost doubled its principal. The pride and sense of honor of these States will acquiesce in every proposition from the committee seeking to restore prosperity and cordiality of feeling between North and South, and it would set an example to the rest of the world.

Mr. John A. Stewart said he came simply as a citizen, having the interest in the movement that every good citizen ought to have. At the outbreak of the war this City had owed much of its prosperity to the South, and this City ought now to aid in readjusting the indebtedness of the States, as in the present state of things it cannot be brought about for many years.

Mr. F. S. Winston approved of all that had been said, and said that with a relief from the oppression of debt the South would be a new field for the investment of Northern capital. No better selection could have been made of a committee, and from their temperament and occupation they were entirely fitted for the delicate and important duties to be intrusted to them.

Rev. Dr. Osgood said he had not expected to be called upon to speak. He came because he was interested on ethical and patriotic grounds. The plan seemed to him most patriotic and dignified. There was a financial as well as a military patriotism. There was a mistaken idea that when business men do a thing they do it with the purpose of taking advantage of somebody; that business was a kind of preying on the community. But there was a higher idea that business involved, a sort of self-sacrifice, and they would not laugh at him when he said that he thought a business man must be a Christian man. He delighted in being there on a ground of justice and true patriotism. If Gen. Grant should say: "I have saved the country three or four millions of dollars, and now I want 3 or 4 per cent.," he would be thought insolvent. That was not the ground of New-York merchants or of the country. The members of the committee had been chosen for their sagacity, courage, and integrity. Coleridge had said: "The Rome of the future is business." The Rome of the future, the real empire of the future, will depend upon business sagacity and courage.

Mr. Cyrus W. Field called for a vote upon the resolutions, and they were unanimously adopted.

On motion of Mr. H. S. Taylor, the committee was increased to seven, on account of the extension of the sphere of labors of its original members, Mr. Henry G. Stebbins and Mr. Cyrus W. Field being named and elected.

Mr. Edward Atkinson spoke on the elements of prosperity in the Southern States, which he said contained all the qualities necessary to the development of prosperity. Texas in the next decade might claim with New-York the title of Empire State. No other State has shown such productive power and force. By the success of the proposed plan they would launch the other States into the same prosperity. The real gain to the community would be in the steady gain secured in the courses of the Southern States. We should, he said, see to it that we were not taxed to pay any of the one who had studied the Southern question of the country, there was nothing to observe more startling than the reconstruction going steadily on beneath all the turmoil of politics. The South was never before so rich and productive, but her force of prosperity is hampered by burdens of debt. Never before had they made their cotton crop their surplus. Never before had they, as in the past few years, subsisted themselves as they do now, and at the same time increased their cotton crop 1,500,000 bales beyond the crop for the same period before the war. Remove the debt and the contamination of bad money, and they will give the North a hard strain to keep up with them. He recalled a remark of Theodore Parker, that slavery was passive war and could only be removed by active war, and the latter should be followed by the restoration to prosperity of the men who had been the victims of the evil system.

Mr. L. P. Morton and Mr. Joseph Seligman were appointed a committee and escorted the committee named in the resolutions to the room. The resolution by which the names of Mr. Field and Mr. Stebbins were added to the committee was reconsidered, and the power of adding to their number was given to the committee, to be used at their discretion.

Mr. George S. Coe, of the committee, said the idea of the meeting was suggested by a gentleman who was closely identified with the Centennial Exhibition, who thought that if the Exhibition could be followed by a settlement of the debts hanging over the Southern States it would have a salutary effect upon the nation, of which the Centennial would be but the flower of which this was the fruit and outcome. Five bank Presidents had been chosen for the committee because they were outside of buying and selling bonds, and when asked to serve they had said that if a good committee was selected they would consent to serve if the approval of the debtor and creditor interests were obtained. The sentiment pervading them was supposed to be a common one. There were hanging over the Southern States $150,000,000 to $200,000,000 of bonds, and it was a matter of national interest and pride that this indebtedness should be honorably settled. The committee had not sought the position in which they were placed; it had sought them. A gentleman had visited North Carolina and Virginia, and the committee were agreeably surprised to find what a gravity the plan had assumed. Mr. Coe then read the following letter in reply to the proposition sent to Virginia:

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 20, 1877.

George S. Coe, Esq.:

DEAR SIR: Some weeks ago Col. J. F. Peyton, of New-Jersey, appeared before the Finance Committee of the House of Delegates of Virginia, of which I am Chairman, and informed the committee that a number of bankers and other gentlemen of influence in commercial circles, sympathizing with the Southern States in their present financial embarrassment, had kindly proposed to act as mediators between those States and their creditors, with a view to effect some arrangement which should be satisfactory to all parties. Col. Peyton further suggested that in order to give the Board of Mediators full information as to the financial condition of Virginia before the war, when the State was undivided, and also at the present time, it would be well to compile from authentic sources the various items showing the entire resources of the State in 1860, with the amount of the debt, for what purposes contracted, and what means she then had to meet it, and similar tables showing the present taxable values, the losses of real and personal property, &c., &c., which she had suffered, the heavy burdens which she had to bear in educating and governing the liberated negroes, and other causes which had diminished her ability to meet her obligations. Such a committee was appointed to compile the facts from the records of the various Government offices, and their report has been printed by order of the House of Delegates, and, under the instructions of that body, I have ordered 100 copies of that report to be sent to you for the use of yourself and those associated with you in your kind endeavor to render us service. The report you will observe is limited to a simple statement of facts, without any at empt by argument to add to their force. In conclusion, I beg leave, on behalf of the committee of which I am Chairman, to say that we appreciate the kind feeling which has induced you and those associated with you to tender your mediatorial offices in this delicate and important matter, and let the result be what it may, we can only say that your disinterested effort to promote the interests of our impoverished and languishing State. Very truly yours,

ALEXANDER H. H. STUART.

Chairman Finance Committee, House of Delegates.

Mr. Coe, in acknowledging the receipt of the documents sent by Mr. Stuart, said that the present meeting will be followed by a request for the bondholders of the respective States to come together, and should they also choose with unanimity to select the gentlemen named to sit in the capacity of arbiters, they will probably convene and organize for the work. He added the assurance that whether the names mentioned should be accepted or not, the great and patriotic object aimed at will, by some means, be satisfactorily secured.

After a few remarks by Mr. Jacob D. Vermilye, on motion of Mr. Field, the meeting adjourned.

THE ARKANSAS BONDHOLDERS.

The State of Arkansas has issued bonds to the amount of $17,000,000, upon which no interest has been paid for several years. These bonds are held largely in this City, Philadelphia, and Boston, and have been selling at 12. A meeting was held yesterday in the office of R. L. Cutting & Co., No. 19 William street, at which a large number of bondholders were present. Mr. G. W. Stanton was made Chairman and Mr. D. W. McWilliams Secretary of the meeting. The object of the meeting was stated by the Chairman to be to devise a plan by which the Arkansas bondholders of the State could be brought to an understanding as to what could best be done toward providing for the settlement of its indebtedness. Mr. J. L. Macaulay offered the following resolutions, which were adopted:

Resolved, That a committee of five bondholders be appointed by the Chairman, who are hereby requested to carefully examine into the financial condition and resources of the State of Arkansas, and that said committee be authorised to make such proposals to the Governor of said State for a fair and equitable adjustment of its debts, by the issuance of new bonds, as will enable the State in future to promptly pay the interest on the same annually; and be it further

Resolved, That this meeting is of the opinion that if a fair and equitable adjustment of the bonded debt can be agreed upon with its committee, all the bondholders of the state will accept it in settlement as their voluntary contribution, relieving the State of Arkansas from any charge of repudiation in the premises.

The meeting adjourned subject to the call of the Chairman.

THE STATE PRISON ASSOCIATION.

ANNUAL MEETING AND ELECTION OF OFFICERS—A COMMITTEE APPOINTED TO LOOK AFTER THE INTERESTS OF INSANE CRIMINALS.

The New-York Prison Association held its annual meeting at Room No. 38, Bible House, last evening, Mr. George H. Yeaman in the chair. The reports of the Secretaries and the Treasurer were not ready, and a brief verbal report was made by those officers. Dr. Elisha Harris announced that the annual report of the association would be ready in about a week. On motion of Mr. Gilman, the Executive Committee was instructed to complete the compilation of that document, preparatory to presenting it to the Legislature. The election of officers next took place, and during the progress of balloting Dr. Harris embraced the opportunity to make a few remarks. He said that the jails throughout the State were unusually full at the present time. As an instance, the jail in Westchester County contained on last New Year's Day 102 prisoners, of which number 96 were males and six were females. In that institution no separation of sexes was observed, and for these 102 prisoners only 32 cells were provided. The evil of overcrowding the prisons he said was increasing rather than diminishing in extent, and the vagrants formed no inconsiderable portion of the occupants of the jail. Remarks were made by Mr. William P. Letchworth, of Buffalo, and others. Mr. Charles H. Kitchel said he thought that the treatment of insane criminals required some attention, and offered the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, That a committee of five be appointed by the Chair to investigate and report to this association as to the condition and treatment of the insane in the various penitentiaries and prisons in this State and also in this City.

The Chairman appointed the following gentlemen to act as such committee: Charles H. Kitchel, Z. Styles Ely, Dr. Elisha Harris, James H. Titus, and Theodore H. Mead. Dr. Harris said that in probably one-third of the counties of the State the officers in charge of the prisons were unable to determine what treatment was due to insane prisoners. The proposed investigation by the committee would not provoke the slightest opposition. It was not pity that the insane creatures wanted, but competent treatment. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President, Theodore W. Dwight; Vice Presidents, John T. Hofman, William F. Allen, Charles J. Folger, Dorman B. Eaton, William Law Learned; Corresponding Secretary, Elisha Harris, M. D.; Recording Secretary, Cephas Brainerd; Treasurer, William C. Gilliman.

The meeting then adjourned.

DOWN-TOWN REVIVALISTS.

The basement of the old Methodist church, in John street, was well filled at the meeting held there yesterday afternoon. Mr. Joseph Mackay presided, and the services, consisting of song, prayer, and exhortation, lasted an hour. Very few brokers or bankers were seen in the meeting. Orville Gardner related a chapter of his recent experiences, and two women made zealous efforts to convince the unconverted. Mr. Dexter, the man who a day or two ago related his experiences with the women who drank beer in Trinity steeple, said he wished they had the devil there, that they might sink him 400 miles deep in the ocean. A young man who had been fond of playing euchre told how he stopped one evening and went out to prayer-meeting, "just to see what was going on," and he found "Jesus waiting there" for him. One man said he was converted in Beaver street on the 29th of February, 1863, and he had the real kind of religion ever since. "If you don't have the real kind of religion," said he, while groans of "Amen!" "So be it!" and "Glory!" interrupted him, "it will not carry you through." It was announced that Dr. Patton would lead the meeting to-day, and that on Monday it would be led by Mrs. Van Cott.

ARRIVALS AT THE HOTELS.

Prof. M. B. Riddle, of Hartford, is at the Grand Hotel.

T. Scott Stewart, of California, is at the New-York Hotel.

Commander Henry Wilson, United States Navy, is at the Westminster Hotel.

Ex-Congressman William H. Upson, of Ohio, is at the St. Nicholas Hotel.

L. Nicholsky, of the Russian Centennial Commission, is at the Albemarle Hotel.

George Collins Levey, of the Australian Centennial Commission, is at the Hotel Brunswick.

John Newell, General Manager of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railroad, is at the Clarendon Hotel.

Profs. Theodore D. Woolsey and George E. Day, of Yale College, and Ezra Abbott, of Harvard College, and Rev. W. H. H. Murray, of Boston, are at the Everett House.

Hon. John P. Usher, of Kansas; Hon. John H. B. Latrobe, of Baltimore; Judge Joseph Casey and John D. McPherson, of Washington, and F. Gordon Dexter, of Boston, are at the Fifth Avenue Hotel.

CITY AND SUBURBAN NEWS.

NEW-YORK.

The annual reunion of the New-York Wesleyan University Club will be held at the residence of Mr. A. V. Stout, No. 260 Madison avenue, on Monday evening next.

Gen. B. B. Foster, who has charge of the criminal branch of the United States District Attorney's office, will remain at his post, Gen. Woodford having urgently requested him to do so.

The Controller has sent a communication to the Senate showing the real estate owned by the City and not used for public purposes. He suggests that this property be sold, whenever the condition of the real estate market would justify such sale, and that the proceeds be placed in the Treasury.

At the annual meeting of the North-western Dispensary, Thirty-sixth street and Ninth avenue, held on the 18th inst., the following gentlemen were elected officers for the year 1877: Ambrose C. Kingsland, President; Erastus Littlefield, First Vice President; W. Douglas, Second Vice President; John Hardy, Treasurer; Robert H. Browne, Secretary.

The accidental drowning of Louis Neef, aged 2 years, in a water-tank on the steam-boat William Fletcher, while being transferred with his mother from the steam-ship France to Castle Garden, on Saturday last, was investigated yesterday by Coroner Flanagan. The testimony taken tended to show that the child stumbled into the tank immediately after boarding the Fletcher; that the top of the tank was on a level with the deck, and that although usually kept carefully closed, it was partially uncovered at the time of the accident. The jury being unable to learn from the testimony who was responsible for the exposed condition of the tank, rendered a verdict of accidental death unaccompanied by any censure.

BROOKLYN.

There were 193 deaths in this city during the past week.

Charles Butterhorn was arrested yesterday on a charge of keeping a policy shop at No. 625 Third avenue. The Police seized the books, slips, &c.

The Charity Commissioners complain that the Board of Supervisors refuse to furnish funds to buy furniture for the Asylum for Incurable Insane People, or to purchase fire-escapes for Alms-house.

In the suit of Leon Winship against James B. Adriance to recover $20,000 for slander, the jury yesterday disagreed. Adriance charged Winship, who was a clerk in his store, with theft. The defense was justification.

Mrs. Margaret Rau, of No. 41 Meserole street, was charged by Mrs. Stark, of No. 839 Park avenue, with defrauding her in a real estate transaction of $16,000. The case will be examined by Justice Semler to-day.

In the Hempstead Reservoir reference case no new testimony was elicited yesterday. Mr. Backhouse, Chairman of the Committee of Fifty, testified that the bid of Kingsley & Keeney for building the reservoir was $400,000 in excess of Mr. William Beard's bid.

In the Court of Sessions yesterday, Edward Fisher and William Riley were sentenced to five years each for shoplifting. Ellen Kelly, an accomplice of the men, was sentenced to three years. The prisoners were arrested last week by Detectives Folk and Corwin.

An inquest was held yesterday in the case of Christina Wambaich, of No. 9 Essex street, New-York, who committed suicide on Tuesday night by cutting the arteries in her wrists and jumping off a house in Hart street. A verdict was rendered in accordance with the facts.

Julius A. Wuncher, a tailor, who swindled several people by representing himself to be Gen. Steinmetz, was yesterday convicted of stealing two watches from the jewelry store of M. Heilzmann, No. 518 Broadway. D. D., and sentenced by Judge Moore to two years in the Penitentiary.

LONG ISLAND.

Patrick Culkin, alias "Coffee" and "Whitey," arrested by Capt. Murray at Owen Geoghegan's, in the Bowery, on suspicion of being one of the Astoria masked burglars, and who, upon arraignment before Recorder Farrell was partially identified by one of the Misses Miller, was yesterday discharged by Judge Pratt, he having produced satisfactory proof of his whereabouts on the night of the burglary.

Thomas, alias "Pigeon," McGuirk, one of the notorious Jamaica gang of roughs and thieves, was arrested on Tuesday evening, by Deputy Sheriff Harner, on a bench-warrant, charged with burglary at Neall's harness store in Jamaica village. When found by the officers he was at home and preparing to go to bed. As they entered the house McGuirk, shoeless and without his hat, leaped from a window to the road and fled. After a long chase the officer captured him. Yesterday, at the Queens County Court of Oyer and Terminer, upon arraignment, he pleaded not guilty and was remanded for trial.

NEW-JERSEY.

The trial of George Steckert for the murder of Jacob Masson, at Newark, is still in progress in the Essex County Court of Oyer and Terminer. Several witnesses were examined yesterday, but no new facts were elicited.

Mrs. Griffin, residing at No. 32 Colden street, Newark, was passing by the Newark Hotel Wednesday night when a shutter was blown down by the wind, and in falling struck her on the head, inflicting very serious injuries.

Mrs. Curtis, aged 62, residing at No. 188 Newark avenue, Jersey City, fell while ascending the stairs to her apartments, Wednesday, and died a few minutes later. A medical examination showed apoplexy to have been the cause of death.

Rev. Edward L. Stoddard, recently of York, Penn., has been accepted as successor of Rev. Dr. Rulison, in the Pastorate of St. John's Free Episcopal Church, on Summit avenue, Jersey City Heights. Dr. Rulison has taken charge of a church in Cleveland, Ohio.

While a number of boys were coasting down a hill on Chesnut avenue, Orange, Wednesday evening, Philip Venino, aged 15, ran head foremost against a post, and fractured his skull. Death ensued immediately. The body was taken to the residence of the boy's parents, in Orange Valley.

Burglars gained an entrance, Wednesday night, to the gr

The New-York Times.

VOL. XXVI.....NO. 7917. NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, JANUARY 27, 1877. PRICE FOUR CENTS.

THE COUNTING BILL PASSED

THE HOUSE DEBATE AND THE VOTE.

SEVEN HOURS' SESSION OF THE HOUSE DEVOTED TO GOING OVER THE GROUND TRAVELED BY THE SENATE—LEADING FEATURES OF THE DISCUSSION—THE VOTE 191 YEAS, 86 NAYS—IMPRESSIVE STILLNESS DURING THE ROLL-CALL—ANALYSIS OF THE VOTE BY POLITICAL AND STATE DIVISIONS.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—The House assembled at 10 o'clock this morning, and without any delay resumed the debate on the Compromise bill. The galleries were already well filled and continued so to the close of the seven hours' session. The debate as a whole was not remarkable, though many of the speeches were strong and well put, and nearly all had a merit of compactness which was lacking in the unlimited speeches of the Senate. There were few points made approaching newness and many of the suggestions of the debate had long ago become stale and commonplace. For instance, a great many of the speakers referred to the constitutional provision respecting the counting of the vote, and the quoting in a solemn manner befitting the Constitution of the country of the clause, "and the vote shall then be counted," became gravely ridiculous. Gen. Sherman was again present to hear the debate, and a portion of the day the venerable historian of the country, Mr. George Bancroft, was upon the floor. The House was often in much confusion, especially when uninteresting speakers were giving reasons to their constituents at home for their votes on the bill. The announcement of the election of Ben Hill to the Senate, privately circulated, caused disorder for a time, a great many members coming to the front row, where he sat, to congratulate him. At another time Frank Hereford, the West Virginia river navigator, held in the corner a reception of his knot of friends, who shook hands on account of his election to the Senate for the short term. Mr. Randall spent a great deal of time in keeping order, but did not have very good success.

The debate was begun by Mr. Hooker, of Mississippi, who spoke with moderation for the bill, making, as he always does, a neat and polished speech. After one or two other speeches, Mr. Mills, of Texas, made a sharp constitutional argument against the bill. He was the first Democrat to speak against it, and his speech was decidedly able. He attacked the constitutionality of the measure, and complained of it particularly because it abrogated the right of the House to reject the vote of a State, independently of the Senate. This reason for opposing the bill, of course, found no response on the Republican side. In connection with Mr. Mills' speech, a question arose touching the distribution of time for debate, and it was agreed that the calling of the previous question should be postponed till 4 o'clock, which was one hour later than the hour fixed yesterday. Mr. Lamar followed Mr. Mills, but succeeded in delivering only a small portion of his speech, and will print what he wanted to say in the Record. Mr. Lamar spoke of the count of the vote by the Vice President as necessary for validity, if valid at all, to be done in the presence of the two houses. The houses were not compelled to witness a fraudulent vote, and if they should put upon their records that what they had witnessed was not a fair count but a fraud, there would be no election. He urged the bill rather sentimentally than by argumepts, and took occasion to tickle the ears of his political brethren from the North by denying the charge—which everybody knows to be true—that Northern Democrats encouraged secession and then deserted the seceders.

Mr. Watterson spoke for the bill. He had been violently opposed to it, and had tried to prevent the Democrats on the committee from agreeing to it; but he is in the traces, and like any well-trained draft horse, pulls the way that is required. The word has been passed to the Democrats that they must take the bill, and that is enough for Watterson. He referred to the fact in a rather lugubrious strain that the Democrats could never have such an organization again as in the last campaign. He voted for the bill because he believed the danger of civil war was as great as in 1861, and this measure would save the country from strife. He voted for it with a full consciousness that its results might disappoint the Democracy. Ben Hill spoke for the bill. Like Lamar, appealing to sentiment instead of reason, he said he had at the opening of the session prepared a speech against the counting of the vote by the Vice President, but it was now unnecessary to deliver it. He would vote for the bill because it was constitutional; because it was remarkably wise in its every provision, and because it was eminently patriotic in all its purposes. He ended with a burst of patriotic sentiment, rather suggestively enthusiastic, which was loudly applauded. Soon after concluding, he received information of his election to the Senate, and handed the dispatch around with conscious satisfaction and pride. Davis, of North Carolina, not often heard from, and never with profit, made a ten-minutes' speech without mentioning the bill. He simply took the occasion to make a ridiculously grotesque speech, attacking Gen. Kilpatrick. Mr. Lapham, of New-York, made a ten-minutes' speech, earnestly against the bill. Mr. Vance, of Ohio, a Democrat, spoke also against the bill, and Mr. Foster for it.

Martin I. Townsend, of New-York, made one of his quaint, humorous speeches in opposition. The trouble with the Democrats was, they wanted office. He alluded humorously to the interference of the citizen of Gramercy Park with the campaign, and said he had ordered Justice Davis to be chosen Senator in Illinois for the purpose of making him perfectly impartial. Interspersed with the speeches which have been referred to were near or quite 30 other ten-minute speeches, some very good, but most of them of no consequence.

At 4 o'clock Mr. Payne took the floor to call the previous question, according to agreement. Then there was an attempt to get in some amendments, a gentleman on the Democratic side proposing one that would have nullified the bill by giving the House alone the right to reject the finding of the tribunal. There was apparently a shower of amendments ready, and Mr. Payne refused to hear them read even, and moved the previous question. This was carried, with scarcely a dissenting voice, and Mr. Payne then parceled out his closing hour, reserving only eight minutes for himself. Blackburn, of Kentucky, made a violent Democratic speech against the bill, preferring, if Hayes were to be made President, that it should be done by the power of Republican usurpation, and not be disguised under the forms of law.

David Dudley Field created a sensation. It had been reported about that Mr. Payne had given him half an hour to close the debate. He sat in his seat mild and conscious, and the object of great expectation. At 20 minutes before the end of the hour he arose, and it was supposed he would make a speech. The House became silent, and curiosity reigned supreme. He was on his feet about three minutes, without saying anything, and then sat down. That ended the sensation. No other incident marked the debate, and at 5 o'clock the calling of the roll promptly began, and ended with the passage of the bill by 191 to 86.

During the call perfect quiet was maintained, and the responses of members were plainly audible throughout the chamber. This is a very unusual thing in the House. Generally when the Clerk commences to call the yeas and nays members pay little attention, many retreating to the cloak-rooms to avoid the tediousness of the hour consumed in calling the long list of names. This practice adds to the duration of the roll-call, as the members who thus absent themselves come forward to be called in detail after the last name on the roll has been regularly called. To-day but two members stood up to be called after the Clerk had called the last name on the list. The first nine members voted yea, seven of these nine being Democrats. Then came four Republicans, headed by Baker, of Indiana, all of whom voted nay. Three Democrats were next recorded for the bill, when Blackburn was called and gave the first negative vote from the Democratic side. As the roll-call proceeded it was apparent that the bill would pass by a very large majority. But few suspected that more than two-thirds of an unusually full House would record themselves in its favor. The record was completed in 17 minutes from the time the first name was called. Many members kept tally, so that the result was very generally known throughout the House before the Clerk passed the figures to the Speaker. The buzz of conversation which followed when the result became known ceased when the Speaker rapped for order, that the official announcement might be made. Standing in his place the Speaker hesitated for a moment, then said in a loud tone: "The Speaker upon this occasion proposes to exercise his constitutional right as a Representative from Pennsylvania, and directs that the Clerk call his name that he may record his vote upon the bill. This announcement of the Speaker of his purpose to vote excited as much curiosity as surprise, because his position with reference to the bill has been a subject of speculation, and he was very generally supposed to be opposed to it. When the Clerk called "Samuel J. Randall" he answered with an emphatic "Aye." which elicited applause from the floor. This completed the record of a vote that will stand out prominently in American history, and the Speaker announced: "On the final passage of the bill the yeas are 191, the nays are 86. The bill is passed." Slight applause followed the announcement, which the crowds in the galleries regarded as a signal for the adjournment which immediately followed, and in 15 minutes the hall was almost deserted.

An analysis of the vote shows that of the 86 votes against the bill 68 were given by the Republicans and 18 by Democrats. Of the affirmative votes 159 were given by Democrats and 32 by Republicans. Of the 32 Republicans who voted for the bill 11, or more than one-third, are from New-York, five each from Massachusetts and Iowa, four from Michigan, two from Pennsylvania, and one each from Ohio, Indiana, Minnesota, Mississippi, and Louisiana. The New-York Republicans who voted for the bill are Adams, George A. Bagley, Chittenden, Davy, Hathorn, Haskins, Leavenworth, MacDougall, Miller, Norton, and Platt. Of the 18 Democrats who voted against the bill, five are from Kentucky, four from Alabama, three from Ohio, and one each from Indiana, Wisconsin, Arkansas, Georgia, Mississippi, and Texas. Foster is the only Ohio Republican who voted for the bill, and he represents the district in which Gov. Hayes resides. No votes were given for the bill in Maine, Vermont, Rhode Island, Nebraska, Kansas, or Nevada, and none against it from Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, and Oregon.

There are a few striking results in the vote of the House. It will be observed, for instance, that all the Democrats from New-England voted yea; but the Republican members were much divided. All the Vermont delegation voted against the bill, though both Vermont Senators had voted for it, and Mr. Edmunds was its champion. Both the Rhode Island Representatives voted against the bill, while Senator Burnside voted for it, and Senator Anthony would have voted the same way if he had been present. The Massachusetts Republicans went with their Senators, except Banks, who voted no. New-York Republicans nearly all followed their Senator. The Indiana Republicans voted with Mr. Morton.

THE NEXT STEP TO BE TAKEN.

FUTURE ACTION OF THE REPUBLICANS—CAUCUSES OF BOTH HOUSES TO BE HELD—THE COMPOSITION OF THE REPUBLICAN ELEMENT ON THE COMMISSION.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan 26.—The Republicans of the House will to-morrow morning hold a caucus and consult what party action may be made necessary by the passage of the bill, for there is no doubt that the President will give it his signature. This is well understood to the opponents as well as the advocates of the measure. The question will be brought up as to the employment of counsel. The names of several men, eminent in the law, have already been talked of. There are also two Republican members of the commission from the House to select. Who will be chosen is entirely a matter of speculation, but the intention is to have good and true Republicans and able men.

The Senate Republicans will also soon meet in caucus and choose three Republican Senators for the commission. There has been some talk of making the commission consist of Edmunds, Frelinghuysen, and Morton. There is a strong desire to have Mr. Morton on the commission, and it is quite possible that one member of it may be chosen who was not on the joint committee. Some are opposed to including any member of that committee, but such a proposal will hardly be accepted. There is no doubt that both Edmunds and Frelinghuysen desire Hayes inaugurated, and believe him to have been lawfully elected, though they have taken rather a curious method to convey that information. As to the hearing of counsel that will be determined and the regulations prescribed by the grand commission.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

An analysis of the vote on the Electoral bill shows that 158 Democrats and 33 Republicans voted for it, and 68 Republicans and 18 Democrats voted in the negative. The names of the 33 Republicans are:

Adams,	Hoar,	Pierce,
Bagley, G. A.,	Hoskins,	Platt,
Bradley,	Hunter,	Potter,
Burleigh,	Keifer,	Sampson,
Chittenden,	Leavenworth,	Seelye,
Crapo,	McDougall,	Strait,
Darrall,	McCrary,	Townsend, of Pa.,
Davy,	McDill,	Wells, of Miss.,
Foster,	Miller,	Willard,
Harris, of Mass.,	Norton,	Williams, W. B.,
Hathorn,	Oliver,	Wilson, J.

The eighteen Democrats who voted against the bill are:

Blackburn,	Durham,	singleton,
Bradford,	Forney,	Stemons,
Caldwell, of Ala.,	Hurd,	Smith, of Georgia,
Carr, the successor of Speaker Kerr,	Jones, of Ky., Knott, Milliken,	Vance, of Ohio, Poppleton, Williams, of Alabama.
Cate,	Mills,

Thirteen Southern Republicans voted against the bill, and two in its favor, viz.: Messrs. Wells and Darrall.

Only seven Democrats and seven Republicans were absent, viz.: Messrs. King, Collins, Egbert, Wiggington, Lord, Hayes, Bass, Stevens, Cason, Phillips of Kansas, Schumaker, Odell, Ross, and Wheeler.

Senator Sherman was on the floor throughout most of the day, and during the last act Senator Morton was carried in on his chair. Sir Edward Thornton, the British Minister, was an interested spectator, and so also were the Danish Minister and Gen. Sherman.

The bill has been already enrolled by Mr. C. C. Sympson, Enrolling Clerk of the Senate, and will be signed by the President pro tem. as soon as the Senate meets to-morrow, that body having adjourned until 11 o'clock for the purpose of having the bill signed and transmitted to the President as soon as possible. After being signed by Mr. Ferry it will be transmitted to the House, where it will be signed by Speaker Randall and handed over to the Committee on Engrossed Bills, which will deliver it to the President by noon to-morrow for his approval. If he signs it the joint convention of both houses will meet in the hall of the House of Representatives on Thursday next for the purpose of counting the Electoral votes.

SENATOR MORTON SUSTAINED.

TEXT OF A DOCUMENT SENT HIM BY NUMEROUS CITIZENS OF INDIANAPOLIS.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan 26.—The following document was forwarded to Senator Morton this evening:

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 26, 1877.

Hon. O. P. Morton, United States Senate, Washington:

DEAR SIR: We, your fellow townsmen of the City of Indianapolis, having read with great interest your argument in opposition to the proposed compromise bill, and knowing your position in reference to said measure, desire to assure you that we most heartily approve your course in opposing said bill. We feel sure that a very large majority of the Republicans of Indiana are opposed to the measure.

George F. McGinnis,	John C. Burton & Co.,
J. H. Bayliss,	J. C. Denny,
S. B. Curry,	Daniel Stewart,
Fred Kuefler,	N. S. Bryant,
E. F. Ritter,	W. V. Wheeler,
D. E. Stout,	J. T. Layman,
R. Andrus,	Israel Taylor,
J. M. Ridenou,	J. M. Bramwell,
Horace Parrott,	James Greene,
L. C. Walker,	Samuel Hanway,
A. A. Barns,	William Hadley, and 50 others, all leading business men, bankers, merchants, ministers, &c.

GOV. HAYES' POSITION.

COLUMBUS, Jan. 26.—In referring to the passage of the bill for counting the Electoral vote, Gov. Hayes said to a friend several days ago, but who makes it public this morning: "I want it distinctly understood that I do not desire to influence the action of Congress one way or the other in the matter of the Electoral bill, or any other matter relating to the Presidential election; the whole thing is in the hands of Congress, and I shall be content with its action."

THE VOICE OF PENNSYLVANIA.

A RESOLUTION IN THE LOWER HOUSE OF THE STATE LEGISLATURE—GOV. HAYES SHOULD BE INAUGURATED.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

HARRISBURG, Jan. 26.—This was a lively day in the House. The dull routine of proceedings was enlivened by an exceedingly animated political contest. Mr. Richardson offered the following:

Resolved, That the action of the United States Senate, in passing the Electoral bill, as reported from the committee, meets our unqualified approval.

A motion to read the resolution a second time was defeated by a vote of 74 yeas to 83 nays. Mr. Long, of Allegheny, then offered the following:

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, That the vote cast by the authorized Electors for President and Vice President of the United States indicates the election of Rutherford B. Hayes and William A. Wheeler to those offices respectively, and they of right ought to be inaugurated at the national capital on the ensuing 4th day of March by the constituted authorities.

On this resolution a call for the main question was sustained by a vote of 89 yeas to 67 nays. Seeing the resolution was likely to pass, the Democrats sought to defeat it by withdrawing from the House, thus leaving it without a quorum. Upon the question of the adoption of the resolution, the first call showed 89 yeas and only one negative vote. The stampede of the Democrats was momentarily successful, as the House lacked 11 of a quorum. The Speaker ordered the Sergeant at Arms to bring in such absent members as he could, and to prevent those then in who had refused to vote from leaving the hall. A second call of the House showed 105 members present, and the yeas and nays were then taken with the following result: Yeas 94, nays 21. Much amusement was occasioned by the manner in which the Democrats were forced into voting on the resolution, though entire good feeling characterized the proceedings.

NEW-YORK OPINION.

THE REPUBLICANS OF THE SEVENTEENTH ASSEMBLY DISTRICT OPPOSE THE BILL.

At a meeting of the Republican Association of the Seventeenth Assembly District, on Thursday last, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, The Constitution of the United States of America provides for the appointment by each State of a number of Electors equal to the whole number of Senators and Representatives to which the State may be entitled in the Congress; and, whereas, the Constitution further provides that the Electors shall meet in their respective States, and vote by ballot for President and Vice President of the United States; and, whereas, Electors have been appointed by every State in the Union, under the laws thereof, and have met and cast their ballots for President and Vice President under said provisions of the Constitution; and, whereas, it is further provided by the Constitution that the person having the greatest number of votes for President shall be the President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of Electors appointed; and, whereas, Rutherford B. Hayes has received a constitutional majority of the votes cast for President by the Electors so appointed, and has by reason thereof been elected President of the United States for the term of four years, commencing March 4, 1877; and, whereas, William A. Wheeler has been in like manner elected Vice President for the same term,

Resolved, That the Republican Association of the Seventeenth Assembly District of the County of New-York are opposed to any and every scheme, plan, project, agreement, or compromise which may in any manner impair the absolute right of Hayes and Wheeler to the offices to which they have been respectively elected, or which may be construed to admit, or from which it may be inferred that there is an admission, that there is any doubt of their right to said offices.

Resolved, That the so-called Compromise bill now under discussion in Congress, and which has this day passed the Senate, is in contravention of the Constitution, and will, if enacted, operate as a surrender to the clamor of the Democratic Party.

WASHINGTON.

HOW TILDEN VOTES WERE MADE.

AN EX-CONFEDERATE OFFICER'S TESTIMONY AS TO INTIMIDATION IN MISSISSIPPI—REPUBLICANS' LIVES IN DANGER—A FRESH DISCOVERY IN THE PLOT TO STEAL OREGON—ANOTHER $8,000 WHICH WAS NOT RETURNED.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—Senator Morton's sub-committee continues to investigate the means which the Democrats employed to carry Mississippi for Tilden. Judge William B. Frazee, an ex-Confederate officer, and a gentleman of known respectability and truthfulness, testified to-day. He swore that in all parts of the State the White League had so intimidated the colored men that they were afraid to vote the Republican ticket. The Democrats had threatened that they would carry the election if they had to kill half the "niggers" in the State to do so. Judge Frazee is a Republican, and he swore that his life was often in danger. Leading Democrats frequently told him that he was only spared because he had been a brave Confederate soldier.

The sub-committee charged with the duty of sorting the election dispatches received from the Western Union Telegraph Company, have thus far discovered about 20 which were sent by Abram S. Hewitt and others to Oregon. Many of these are in cipher, but one of them, in plain English, addressed to the Chairman of the Democratic Committee of Oregon, says "We must have Oregon at any price." This is signed by Col. Pelton, ex-Gov. Tilden's nephew. It has also been discovered that in addition to the $8,000 sent to Oregon by the New-York Democrats through Runyon & Co., a second $8,000 was sent through Kunze Brothers, bankers, of New-York. There is no claim as yet that this sum was returned. It was sent on Doc. 6.

HONOR TO JUDGE SETTLE.

A PLEA FOR SOUTHERN REPUBLICANS—NO NEED OF COWARDS IN THESE DAYS.

From an Occasional Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—The President has nominated Judge Thomas Settle, of North Carolina, for the position of United States District Judge of Florida. Whenever the President has made a nomination, unpopular or impolitic, the press, without distinction of party, has been unsparing in its rebukes. It ought now to be equally emphatic in its praise.

Judge Settle, although he is known in every State, can hardly be said to have a national reputation. He is known to the political leaders, but not to the people of the North. To them he is a name only. But, if the Republican Party shall survive the first match of the new national game of tossing up a Judge of the Supreme Court to see whether he falls heads or tails, in order to decide (in strict accordance with the Constitution) how the American nation voted at the last Presidential election, Judge Settle, I venture to predict, four years hence, will be known as our candidate for the Vice Presidency. He is a man in the prime of life, an able lawyer and of spotless character—without fear and without reproach; heartily respected by his political opponents alike for his courage of opinions and his personal bravery. He comes of a family that have lived in North Carolina for many generations. In early manhood he imbibed the heresy of State rights, but not of State supremacy—and, although he went into the rebel army, he was the first of the young men to agitate for a cessation of hostilities and a return to the Union. If his counsels had prevailed, North Carolina and all the Southern States to-day would have been prosperous and in harmony with the national idea. At that time Judge Settle was supported by his recent competitor, Gov. Vance—then as now the most popular and effective mob orator of the South—but that pestilent demagogue fell before the temptation held out by Mr. Davis and his Cabinet that he might become the second President of the Confederacy; and, from a tar-heel Paul, he became a turpentine Saul—the most implacable and remorseless persecutor of the Unionists of the mountains. Vance will occupy in the history of North Carolina the same position that Claverhouse holds in the annals of Scotland.

Last Summer I spent a month in North Carolina, chiefly in the mountains, talking with the hardy and noble people of that magnificent region of our country. I saw widows whose husbands, I spoke with children whose fathers, I talked with old men whose sons, had been shot down or hanged as cruelly as the Covenanters were hunted and slaughtered by the English soldiery. Centuries have passed since those bad old days, and still in the Lowland hills and vales the names and memories of the English officers are uttered with imprecations. It was startling and sad to know that such savagery was possible in America in the nineteenth year of the Republic. More startling still, and sadder, was the fact that the man who sustained these organized and regularly enlisted murderers was then a candidate for the office of Governor of the State. No scaffold ever shook beneath the weight of a greater criminal than the candidate of the Democratic Party—now the Governor of North Carolina, whose recent violent inaugural address was inspired by a spirit of hostility to the Union and its preservers.

This is the man whom the Democracy delighted to honor. This is the man who now sits in the chair of the Governor of North Carolina. This is the man whom Judge Settle met in debate for four or five months in every portion of the State, chiefly (for Vance's friends dictated the appointments) in the districts where the Democracy were overwhelmingly in the majority. It needed both physical and moral courage to enter into such a campaign and to fight through it to the end. This test Judge Settle stood. Since the days of the early Abolitionists, there has been nothing more heroic in American politics than this campaign. Such a man we cannot honor too highly, either on his own account or as a representative of the Southern national sentiment.

In such men rest our hopes of a united country as contrasted with the policy of two united sections. We have treated them with cruel ingratitude. Northern men as "carpet-baggers," Southern men as "scallawags," have been denounced and persecuted to the death by the Southern Democracy; and we in the North—from ignorance, chiefly, from a mistaken magnanimity, partly—have looked on with incredulity or indifference.

Chamberlain, for example, a noble and brave soldier, a man of high culture and lofty purpose, is suspected by many Northern Republicans who forget to remember the blistering rebuke of Gen. Sherman (a competent judge) of "the braggart," Hampton, and his disunion record before the war began, and rather regard him as the better man of the two rivals for the Governorship of South Carolina. We have paid more honor to Kuklux chiefs and the men who profited by their crimes than to brave Republicans, once Confederates, like Alcorn, of Mississippi, and Settle, of North Carolina. It is time to give honor to whom honor is due. It is noble to forgive our enemies, but it is dastardly to help them to punish our friends. We have done so for years. Let us inaugurate a new policy. Let Southern Republicans feel that we honor them and will stand by them; and there will soon be a divided South and therefore a united nation. Not till then. I know these Southern Republicans as a class; and I do not hesitate to repeat what I have already publicly said, that we Northern Republicans are not worthy to untie the latchets of their shoes. It needs no courage to be a Republican in the North. But everywhere in the Gulf States, and in some other Southern States, it requires courage of a rare and splendid type to acknowledge and vote for the creed of Lincoln and Sumner. It costs loss of social influence and recognition always, and often it is rewarded with exile and death.

And yet we have played parrots to Kuklux slanderers! We honor Gordon and sneer at Spencer—Gordon, who marched with Early on Washington; Spencer who led the advance of Sherman to the sea! We talk of Lamar, a brilliant rhetorician and nothing more, as a "national statesman," and hardly recognize the brilliant administrative genius of Alcorn, who crushed the Kuklux in Mississippi—the same bandits whose crimes subsequently culminated in the election of Lamar.

Isn't it about time to stand by our friends and strike out at our foes? If Supreme Judge No. 5 turns Republican side up with care, and gives Gov. Hayes what the people have already given him—the Presidential chair—a policy that shall honor the Southern Republicans may give us still another lease of power; but a bad-God good-devil policy, a policy that sneers at scallawags and patronizes their persecutors, will end, as it ought to end, in the dissolution of our party. America has no need of cowards.

J. R.

VERY SMALL FRY.

HOW PROCTOR KNOTT'S COMMITTEE WASTED THEIR TIME YESTERDAY.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—The Committee on the Powers, Privileges, and Duties of the House in Counting the Electoral Vote to-day examined Charles H. Brush, who was a telegraph operator at Tallahassee from the 8th to the 12th of November. He was asked whether he remembered telegrams sent by any person in Tallahassee to Z. Chandler, and his responses, and he replied in the affirmative, but he had no copies of them. One of them, from Gov. Stearns to Z. Chandler, said in substance: "Bismarck should be at or near Tallahassee immediately." This was sent before the troops arrived there. Z. Chandler telegraphed to Gov. Stearns that he had seen the President and Secretary of War, and the troops would be sent.

Q.—Do you remember any telegrams while you were at Lake City, on the 25th of November, asking Mr. Chandler questions about attacking the returns? A.—I remember one asking on what grounds they should proceed; my impression is that it was sent by Gov. Stearns to Mr. Chandler; a dispatch was subsequently received from Mr. Chandler in which the words "fraud" and "intimidation" appeared, and I think another word, "violence," but am not sure. In answer to Mr. Lawrence, the witness said he did not see the original of the dispatches, but heard their contents as they passed over the wires; he did not pretend to give the exact words of the telegrams.

Q.—Did you speak to anybody of the contents of the telegrams? A.—I decline to answer on the ground that to do so might tend to criminate me, as it is a penal offense by the law of Florida to divulge the contents of telegraphic dispatches.

Q.—Did you communicate with any persons out. side of Florida while you were outside of Florida? A.—I communicated only with members of the committee, not with any other persons. The witness stated that he voted for Drew and Tilden.

Mr. Tucker facetiously remarked, "That does not criminate him."

Mr. Field—It might subject him to court-martial though, if troops were there.

Q.—Was there a dispatch from Mr. Hewitt in these words: "You must spare no exertions or expense in securing the vote of Florida for Tilden." A.—I have no knowledge of such a dispatch; I remember, however, a dispatch, but do not know from whom, saying, "Every endeavor must be made to secure certified copies of returns;" it seemed that was from some member of the National Democratic Committee to parties in Florida.

Q.—Was there a dispatch saying money would be furnished? A.—I do not recollect that any telegram was sent about money being sent to carry the State for Tilden.

Q.—Was there any dispatch received saying: "We must have Florida, South Carolina, and Louisiana, by fair means or otherwise?" A.—To my recollection no such dispatch was received from either party.

After further interrogation the committee adjourned until to-morrow.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—Yesterday afternoon Detectives Miller, McDevitt, and McElfresh arrested two men who gave their names as George Eager and J. C. Bartoz, and who had taken rooms at the Ebbitt House, claiming St. Louis as their place of residence. They entered the room of one of the guests of the hotel early yesterday morning intent on plunder, but were frightened off by the sudden appearance of the fireman before they had secured any booty. When arrested these parties had in their possession two fine gold watches, one of them blue enameled, No. 14,009, the other No. 19,815. One of them also had a handsome Howard gold watch, No. 37,198.

Ex-Gov. Kellogg and United States Marshal Pitkin, of Louisiana, had an interview with the President this morning in relation to political affairs in that State.

On inquiry of Senator Ferry this afternoon as to the correctness of a reported interview yesterday between the President and himself, and which is published this morning, he authorized the statement that his visit to the President was on private business, entirely outside of the Presidential question. Nor had it any reference whatever to the Electoral bill of the Joint Committee, nor had he conversed with the President on that subject. In other words, no such interview took place.

The President sent the following nominations to the Senate to-day: Thomas Settle, of North Carolina, to be United States District Judge for Florida; Benjamin F. Flanders, to be United States Assistant Treasurer at New-Orleans, La.; Medical Director William Grier to be Chief of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery in the Navy Department; William Pitt Dewey, to be Surveyor General for the Territory of Dakota. Collectors of Customs—Harris P. Hurst for the District of Pearl River, Miss.; John S. Braxton for the District of Norfolk and Portsmouth, Va. Postmasters—S. W. Rathbun at Marion, Iowa; Benjamin Neal at Eaton, Ohio; George R. Buckner at St. Charles, Mo.; C. D. Hayne at Aiken, S. C., and H. C. Stevens at Keeseville, N. Y.

The receipts from internal revenue to-day were $351,358 87, and from Customs $520,844 09.

The bill reported by Mr. Allison from the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs to-day provides for ratifying the agreement made with the Sioux Indians last October for the cession of the Black Hills country, without any material amendment except one which omits the provision for their removal to the Indian Territory.

The Senate in executive session to-day confirmed the following nominations: Alexander Sharp, to be Paymaster in the United States Army, and Jessie A. Glenn to be Postmaster at Dalton, Ga.

A sub-committee of the House Committee on Appropriations to-day heard the Supervising Architect of the Treasury, Congressman Pierce, of Massachusetts, and ex-Postmaster Burt in advocacy of an appropriation of $174,000 for the purchase of additional land adjacent to the Boston Post Office. The sub-committee agreed to report favorably upon the application, and it is believed that the desired amount will be provided for by the full committee in the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill.

Judge W. B. Fraser, a Republican candidate for Presidential Elector in Mississippi, testified before the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections to-day that he was several times prevented by intimidation from making speeches in his State during the late political campaign.

Mr. Washington McLean, of Cincinnati, and Representative Ben Hill have reconciled their differences. They had a conversation to-day in the office of the Sergeant at Arms of the House. Mr. McLean now remembers he did meet Mr. Hill in New-York in 1865, and Mr. Hill authorizes the statement that he is fully satisfied that Mr. McLean had no interest whatever in or connection with any cotton transactions in Georgia. He is also satisfied that Mr. McLean was no party to any conspiracy or other wrong against him in Washington. The meeting was very cordial and they parted warm friends.

The following were the balances in the Treasury at the close of business to-day: Currency, $8,461,065; special deposit of legal tenders for the redemption of certificates of deposit, $37,220,000; coin, (including $33,483,400 in coin certificates,) $87,861,490; outstanding legal tenders, $366,035,084.

Aaron W. Smith was to-day appointed Revenue Storekeeper and Gauger for Kansas, and William Houghton, for the First District of Indiana.

The Speaker has announced the following Select Committee on the use of troops in the Presidential election: Messrs. Wood of New-York, Goode of Virginia, Beebe of Ohio, Throckmorton of Texas, Caldwell of Alabama, Smith of Georgia, Harrison of Illinois, Kasson of Iowa, Foster of Ohio, Eames of Rhode Island, Page of California. Messrs. Cassanave and Kewner, the two colored members of the Louisiana Returning Board, have arrived in this city and are to be examined to-morrow.

DEMOCRATS GOING TO JAIL.

HOW THE ELECTION WAS CARRIED IN CINCINNATI—ARREST OF THE SHERIFF OF HAMILTON COUNTY—TOO MUCH TILDEN AND REFORM.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 26.—Hamilton County politics are being stirred to the depths, and the result is a spectacle of rottenness that shocks the people. To-day the Sheriff of the county and his chief clerk were arrested for the abduction of the witness Charles Young, now on trial for murder in Philadelphia. Young was captured in Cincinnati soon after the election, and was on the point of revealing the whole conspiracy of illegal voting when he was snatched out of the hands of the officers one night, placed in a close carriage standing near, and driven off. Two of Sheriff Wallace's tools in the plot to abduct Young have disclosed the whole affair, and there is a fair prospect now of some politicians of standing going to the penitentiary. It is shown beyond question that Banning's majority over Matthews was fraudulent, and that three or four county officers who were elected by small majorities have very uncertain tenure of their seats. Republicans here, chafing at their defeat by repeating, and at the brazen speech of Banning in Congress for an honest ballot box, are determined to probe the conspiracy to the bottom.

HONORS TO GRAND DUKE ALEXIS.

HOW HE IS BEING ENTERTAINED AT NORFOLK, VA.—A GRAND BALL TO BE GIVEN SHORTLY.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

NORFOLK, Jan. 26.—Grand Duke Alexis and the officers of the Russian Navy were entertained last night by the Norfolk German Club at the Masonic Temple. This morning the Grand Duke left, in company with several of his officers and a number of our local gentlemen, for a day's hunting and shooting. The naval officers of this station give the Duke a grand ball at the Navy-yard on the 8th of February. Several thousand dollars have been subscribed by the naval officers for the occasion, and the busy notes of preparation indicate that it will be a grand affair. A number of the dignitaries from Washington are expected to be present, also the Army officers stationed at Old Point. The rest of the Russian fleet, which sailed from Port Royal on the 22d inst., have not yet arrived.

SENATORIAL ELECTIONS.

BEN. HILL ELECTED IN GEORGIA—THE RESULT IN WEST VIRGINIA.

ATLANTA, Jan. 26.—Ben. Hill has been elected United States Senator.

TOPEKA, Jan. 26.—The fifth ballot for United States Senator to-day resulted as follows: Osborne, 36; Plumb, 33; Simons, 26; Sears, 25; Harvey, 22; Blair, 12; Stillings, 5; Elder, 4; Phillips, 2; Martin, 1. On the sixth ballot, Harvey gained 1, Plumb lost 1, Simons gained 1, Stillings lost 1.

WHEELING, Jan. 26.—On the first joint ballot to-day H. G. Davis was elected United States Senator for the long term by a vote of 60 to 27 scattering, and F. Hereford for the short term by a vote of 70 to 17 scattering on the second joint ballot.

LOSSES BY FIRE.

Between 2 and 3 o'clock yesterday morning a fire was discovered in McCormick's cabinet shop at Medina, N. Y., which destroyed the brick block containing his furniture store, the store of James Brothers, drugs and medicines, and the office of the Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph Company. The upper part of the building was occupied by families, and the Sons of Temperance also had their hall there. The following are the losses: Smith's brick block, partial; Smith & Brown, clothiers, partial; William Smith, groceries, partial; Masonic Hall, total; Bancroft & McDonell, wines and fruit, partial; a frame building, total; G. M. Fray, boots and shoes, in frame building, partial; McDonnell's stone block, damaged; Kelly Brothers., groceries, in stone block, partial. The total loss will reach about $50,000.

Last evening a fire burned out the top of the Garfield Building, No. 256 Chapel street, New-Haven. The building was completely soaked with water, and the damage is estimated at $10,000, which is covered by an insurance of $12,000, half in the Queen, of London, and the balance divided between the Liverpool, London, and Globe. B. Butler, proprietor of the 99 cent store, lost most of his stock, which was valued at $15,000; and N. S. Garfield most of his stock of fancy goods, valued at $8,000. Several other occupants of the building lose from $200 to $500 each. The insurance on Mr. Butler's stock is $2,250 in the Merchants, of Providence, $2,250 in the Penn. of Philadelphia, and $1,000 elsewhere. The fire was probably caused by the explosion of a kerosene lamp.

A fire in Carleton, New-Brunswick, yesterday, destroyed the car repairing shed of the Western Extension Railway, and the New-Brunswick Red Granite Company's Works. The total loss is about $25,000.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT IN OREGON.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

PORTLAND, Jan. 26.—W. Kay Nell was hanged to-day at 1 o'clock, in the Court-yard at Albany, for the deliberate and unprovoked murder of Seth W. Hays, at Halsey, Nov. 1. Before the execution Nell made a confession of the crime, but just before being launched into eternity he most solemnly asserted his innocence.

CONNECTICUT LEGISLATURE.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

HARTFORD, Jan. 26.—The Senate Committee on the Constitutional Amendments reported to-day in favor of biennial sessions of the Legislature, of giving each town but one representative, and prohibiting towns from granting aid to railroads. Both houses have adjourned to Tuesday.

AN INSANE MOTHER'S CRIME.

WATERTOWN, Jan. 26.—Some weeks ago a man named Crouch, living near Sacket's Harbor, deserted his wife and child, the latter 18 months old, leaving them in destitute circumstances. The mother and child suffered great privations, and have been supported by charity since. Ten days ago Mrs. Crouch gave birth to another child, which she burned to death in a stove yesterday. She was brought to this city, being insane.

SHOOTING AFFRAY IN A HOTEL.

LOUISVILLE, Jan. 26.—B. W. Stockton, chief clerk at the Willard Hotel, in this city, was shot and probably fatally injured this morning by W. C. D. Whipps, his employer. Stockton came into the office later than usual and was severely reprimanded by Whipps. An altercation ensued, resulting in Whipps firing three shots from a revolver, one of which entered Stockton's neck and another his abdomen.

FATAL RAILROAD ACCIDENTS.

BOSTON, Jan. 26.—A man named Innes, an employe of the Boston and Providence Railroad Company, while walking on the track was struck by a loc de terre, but Argus-eyed and Briareus-handed Titans, as they went to work at everything but the ordinary prosaic business of legislation. They meddled with affairs of daily traffic, with commercial customs and social institutions; they changed weights and measures; they made war on the calendar, on harmless household superstitions and venerable religious faiths; they undertook to suppress nature and to tinker at the mighty machinery of the universe. After drowning the noblest names of France in blood, they snuffed out the notion of immortality like a poor candle, and abolished God. But neither ideas nor things would long be measured by their standard; the months of the year refused to know themselves as Pluviose, Thermidor, and Messidor; the saints came out of limbo; nature and the noble old names arose from the red sea of revolution; immortality revealed itself as no taper, but an unquenchable star, and God yet lives, even in France.

Not all at once did those men fall into the folly of meddlesome legislation, into the madness of aggression and usurpation. Step by step they advanced, urged by the passions of the hour—misled by the sophistries of ambition. It was while proclaiming popular sovereignty that they usurped the rights of the people; it was while exalting the democratic principle that they betrayed democracy. We have only to thank God that we have no howling mob of sans culottes and poissonnières to urge on our Deputies to the desperate deeds their words daily shadow forth.

Dickens once said: "I like Americans, but I don't like America." I like Democrats, (some of them,) but I don't like Democracy. It seems to me a marvelous system of mechanism most cunningly worked. Republicanism had in the beginning a soul of humanity—something of moral force and purpose, not yet all sinned away, I hope. There have been times during the last Presidential term when I have been disheartened and sickened at beholding the degeneracy of the Republican Party—its inconsistency and bad faith; the arrogance of success and insolence of power it has displayed; its lack of high-hearted courage, of coherence, of that loyal esprit de corps, always such an admirable characteristic in the Democratic Party; its readiness to give heed to every hue and cry of its enemies, to obey every frantic demand for investigation, ostracism, and immolation; to consider and act upon miserable anonymous accusations against its best men, till every street-lamp letter-box became like the lion's mouth of the Venetian Council of Ten, and espionage and the most dastardly treachery were at a premium. I acknowledge that I came home from Europe feeling that a little chastisement was necessary for that once glorious organization, and that a four years' retirement for meditation and prayer could but be salutary. But since I have seen what is the spirit of the Democratic faction over yonder—since I have read the ferocious fulminations of the Democratic press, seeking to increase the depression and anxiety of this distrustful time, by breathing out threatenings and slaughter," by uttering menaces and maledictions, which seem writ with each pen dipped in the last deadly distillation, the "black drops" of treason-why, I have reconsidered the matter. If these orators and journalists are in deep, dead earnest in their threats of violence and carnage, it were perilous to place them in power: it is merely a "bluff game" they are playing they deserve to be beaten. At all events, it is best to stand by the old ship, disabled, begrimed, and clogged with barnacles though it be. A sound plank of the old Mayflower was built into its hull; it mounts a gun or two of the old war ship Constitution, and, floating or foundering, carries at the mast-head the old flag of the Union. Were I a man I would rather sail or march under the flag of the Confederacy—an honest standard of rebellion once borne by brave men through a long, heroic struggle, ending in a not ingloricus defeat—than range myself under the double-faced banner of the Democracy—Stars and Stripes on one side, Stars and Bars on the other.

The all-engrossing topic now is the report of the joint committee. I doubt not that a power of wisdom went to make up that report and that committee, but the plan seems to my feeble, feminine comprehension an utter abandonment of the constitutional ground on which Republicans stood—more or less unsteadily, it is true, but stood; and though I remember that of old compromises had a way of returning to "plague the inventors," it may be that we must have one now, for the sake of peace, or rather the postponement of strife; for as I understaud, it is but an "after-us-the-deluge" policy that is advocated—but what moral right has Congress to fling its mantle, or the Vice President's mantle, of responsibility and obligation on to the shoulders of the Supreme Court Judges—even if it be as uncomfortable an article of wearing apparel as the shirt of Nessus? Why burden those worthy elderly gentlemen, whom Mr. Cox reverently calls "other fellows," with a duty so onerous and so perilous? Cannot something be left for us to venerate here in Washington? Those black-robed dignitaries have always been present on great occasions of state, but have sat in mute impassivity, grave, grand, unapproachable, even as the white-robed vestal virgins appeared at the great shows of the Coliseum, in places of honor, never to take part in the strife of the dusty arena. By the way, why could not the whole morphadite matter have been referred to the women in connection with the Suffrage Convention lately in session here? The Democrats could have relied on Mrs. Stanton and Miss Anthony, the Republicans on Mrs. Gage and Mrs. Lockwood, while Dr. Mary Walker could have served as the fifth or neutral Judge. Perhaps it is not yet too late to make a change of referees. I have no doubt but those plucky dames would accept any amount of responsibility, would brave any amount of obloquy, would go to work in a way that meant business, and give us a President in no time.

I have another plan, which I hold is a good plan, as plans go. It was suggested to my mind, toiling at midnight over the great national problem, by the recollection of a singular natural curiosity I once described—two pairs of kittens Siameesed, side to side, and back to back, in such a way that when two were on their feet, two were obliged to lie helpless, if not quiescent, with their legs in the air. They had to take turns in promenading, and in coming down to supper. Now, my idea is to have Messrs. Tilden and Hendricks, Hayes and Wheeler play the role of these duplicated and complicated cats, and give us a sort of "ride and lie" government—changing every moons or the seasons. There are some old rats in the Government pantry I would like to see scamper before the feline furies of Democracy, and perhaps they would not all steal back, when the Republican side of the Government came down. The Democratic moiety of the composite cat being the hungrier, the fiercer, and the smarter of the two, it would do the most execution in devouring, driving out, and frightening away, before its turn should come for turning up and turning in. In a bipartite arrangement of this kind, the disadvantages would, of course, be on the side of Republicanism—which proves it to be a compromise of the good old sort. I commend it to the Senate and the high judiciary. GRACE GREENWOOD.

COUNTERFEIT HALF-DOLLARS.

Mr. William E. Du Bois, Assayer of the United States Mint in Philadelphia, warns the public against counterfeit half-dollars. He writes as follows:

"As these pieces are beginning to show themselves, though not in an alarming quantity, a few simple directions for detecting them may be useful, especially in the stores and shops. Counterfeiters generally content themselves with the cheap and quiet process of casting from molds, though sometimes they strike the pieces from dies. The mold is made from the genuine coin, and yields a fac simile. They use a type metal, sometimes hardened and sonorous by the addition of copper, and the whole being slightly silvered over in a battery, and the "gate" neatly ribbed out on the edge, such a piece may pass while fresh and new. They are, however, rather too white and too thick, or, if of a right thickness, too light. There is something about the genuine coin that ordinarily puts it above suspicion, particularly after the new white surface has given place to the intimitable and permanent "nine-tenths tint." It may be abused by heating or staining, or by contact with gum elastic bands. It has been disfigured with tin foil for the small purpose of provoking a bet. In rare cases it may have a piece cut at the edge, or shut in, which destroys the ring. But generally it speaks well for itself as to color and sonority. The genuineness of a half-dollar is something worth looking after to any of us, and especially to a storekeeper taking them often through the day. It is, therefore, worth the trouble to have on the counter one or two reliable pieces, easy to be had. First, a balance, which need be no more than a thin strip of wood, eight or ten inches long, neatly poised. Place a good piece on one end and the suspected one on the other, and have a weight of three grains at hand. If the difference is more than that decline taking the piece. A much better instrument would be the one in vogue many years ago, for gold, made of brass, and taking not only the weight, but also the gauge of diameter and thickness. Any one wishing to see this simple affair, with a view of making it for sale, may call at the office of the undersigned; no doubt it could be sold at 50 cents. It should be adapted to the half and quarter dollar, and, perhaps, the whole dollar. Second, a liquid test, composed as follows: Twenty-four grains of nitrate of silver in crystals, one granule (say 15 grains) of nitric acid, and one ounce of water. Any druggist can put this up in a small bottle, with a pointed glass dropper made for lifting drops, taking care to use pure ingredients. Remove a little of the surface of the coin by a knife and then touch the place with a drop from the stopper. If good, there will be no action; if bad, it blackens at once. It should be observed that is not the compound we use for examining gold counterfeits and jewelry, and, further, some persons use nitric acid alone, which will discolor a good coin as well as a bad one. As for the pieces struck from dies, they are generally such poor imitations that the taker almost deserves to lose by them. Such a piece, dated 1876, is now before me—a good color, feeble and faulty devices, figure weight, but quite too thick. It would be caught by the gauge already mentioned. It is a whitish brass, with silver plating more substantial than the electro-silvering. It is well that the courts and officers of the law are diligent in arresting this business, while the Tellers of the Treasury and the banks throw out spurious offers, so that it will not commonly be necessary to use any other test than the eye."

EXPERIENCES IN THE SOUTH.

LECTURE BY DR. F. A. PALMER IN PLYMOUTH CHURCH—CRUELTIES TO THE NEGROES DURING THE RECENT ELECTION—MR. BEECHER'S COMMENTS.

A large audience assembled at Plymouth Church last evening to hear an address by Dr. Fred A. Palmer, entitled "My Experience in the South During the Recent Campaign and Election." The Doctor, who is of Northern birth and a resident of South Carolina, was introduced by Mr. Beecher, who stated that perhaps the discussion of such a topic at the present time might be thought by some to be injudicious. Plymouth Church, however, was too old in sympathy with the downtrodden and oppressed to refuse to hear their complaint now. He who wished to have God on his side would do well to sympathize with the weak and against the strong. Dr. Palmer read the larger part of his address from manuscript. He spoke of the colored people of the South as a race who for centuries had labored in ignorance and want that their masters might roll in luxury and live lives of pampered idleness. When persons among these toilers grew weary and refused to work with their accustomed activity, they were treated to 100 lashes on the bare back. It was a lie to say that these patient people who toiled so long for others would not work now for themselves without a task-master armed with a loaded whip stationed over them. It was equally false and calumnious to charge them with the constant perpetration of those base crimes against women and children of which their slanderers often accused them to cover up their own villainies. Here were 1,000,000 of men who could have swept from the earth the families of their oppressors while the latter were fighting in the field to secure their further enslavement, and yet who guarded, cared, and labored for the wives and children of their owners with a fidelity for which the world afforded no parallel. It was said to-day that there were no slaves in America. It was true that there were no "chattels" so called, but could the helpless victims of the late reign of terror in South Carolina and other Southern States be called free men? There were planters down there to-day so mean, so contemptible, that they would not scruple to hire the negro's labor and then refuse to pay him, on the ground that they [the whites] "were entitled to all the nigger labor they could get, and meant to have it." This was not done in solitary instances, but as a system. The jealousy and malignity which the Southerners manifested at any attempt to educate or elevate the black man could not be conceived of at the North. Any man who attempted even in the mildest and quietest way to protect or educate them was at once abused, reviled, and threatened with assassination. He would not speak of the number of times in which he had been treated in this way himself; he knew, however, of a young English man who attempted to start a school for the benefit of the blacks in a South Carolina village, and who was visited by a delegation who tore down his school-house, and were about to tar and feather and further outrage him, and would have done so, but for his promise to leave at once. The colored man of the South had during the last few years shown a patience with an amount of insolence, abuse, and outrage which would have driven any less patient and docile race into a war of massacre and devastation. It he murmured or rebelled at such treatment, the word was "Shoot him down." "This is a white man's Government," said the man who was to-day playing the farce of Governor in South Carolina, and who had so much of the traditional southern magnanimity that he could dispense with such a trifling accessory as a Senate.

Dr. Palmer then proceeded to describe some of the scenes of horror which had taken place in the Palmetto State during the past Summer—the riots at Hamburg, in which seven men had been murdered, one of them having his tongue cut out and placed on his face for having had the insolence to "answer back" a white who styled himself "the nigger ruler." During all that fearful time thousands of armed men in blood-red shirts were riding up and down the highways of South Carolina, terrifying and outraging the colored inhabitants. At Ellenton, S. C., there shot down 25 negroes in cold blood, and were making preparations to butcher several hundred others, when a small detachment of United States troops appeared on the scene and prevented it. His own life, the speaker said, had been frequently attempted, simply because he was known to be a friend of the blacks. On one occasion, while addressing a colored meeting in a church, the warning hand of his wife had saved him from being shot in the back by a "chivalrous" assassin, who had sneaked up to a window in the rear.

At the conclusion of the doctor's speech, which was frequently applauded, Mr. Beecher made a few comments. He said that while these things were all very much to be deplored, the provocation under which the whites labored should be remembered. To see a humbler race, who had long been their serfs, raised to a superiority over them in a day, as it were; to see their despised chattels holding the highest places in the State, while their own homes were rendered desolate by the war; to be forced to work, where formerly they had lived in elegant idleness—it was to be doubted whether the Northern people would have behaved any better had they been circumstanced as were the Southerners. This, however, did not excuse the enormities which had been depicted. There were two unfortunate classes in this country who were chronic sufferers at the hands of the white man. These were the negro and the Indian. How many violated treaties, breaches of faith, and outrages of all sorts had the latter to complain of. It was the unfortunate characteristic of the Anglo-Saxon civilization that it was ever harsh and overbearing to the weaker peoples with whom it came into contact. We had rigid consciences regarding ourselves, and still more rigid ones regarding our neighbors. The most that could be hoped for was mutual forbearance and patience on both sides and the cultivation of religious and kindly sentiments that would gradually extinguish the evil—if it was possible to ever extinguish it. In the present state of affairs, the Southern problem appeared to him to be almost hopeless—it could only be solved by the help of that Divine Providence that had so signally come to our assistance in the past.

LIBRARY OF THE LATE CHARLES S. HUNT.

The late Charles S. Hunt, formerly of THE TIMES editorial staff, and well-known as a writer on finance, left a small collection of books of considerable rarity and value. Most of the works relate to political economy, finance, and the biographical studies which would naturally be associated with these subjects. There are among these some choice copies of Tooke, Ricardo, Adam Smith, Overstone, McCulloch, and others, and a few rare classics. It has been decided to sell these as they are called for, and persons desiring works of this class, in excellent condition, will find an opportunity of examining them by calling on Mrs. Hunt, at No. 358 West Fifteenth street.

THE MUNICIPAL CONFERENCE.

The sub-committee of the conference committee of citizens, which met the Mayor and Controller at the City Hall on Wednesday, has not yet been organized, and no plans of operation have yet been formed by its members. Mr. William A. Booth said yesterday that he was not certain when he appointed Mr. Howard Potter Chairman that he would be able to serve, but he hoped that he could find it possible to do so. It was not probable that a meeting of either the committee or sub-committee would be held until next week. Mr. Howard Potter said he could not say whether he would accept a position on the committee. He would require some time to think about it, and would as soon as possible apprise Mr. Booth of his decision.

THE SCHOONER JAMES K. LAWRENCE.

The schooner James K. Lawrence, Capt. Dolliver, from Charleston for this port, with 1,100 barrels of resin, which went ashore at Far Rockaway, now lies broadside on the beach, and is filled with water. The crew were taken off by the men of the Life Saving Station, and all but three, who came to New-York, were provided for at the station. The Coast Wrecking Company are discharging her cargo, and, having a steam pump aboard, expected to get her afloat last night.

SWINDLING IN THE COURT-HOUSE.

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat says: "A short time since a couple of villainous wags perpetrated a paying joke in connection with the Police Court in this way: One of the young men, with an official bearing, went around through the city with a paper purporting to be a summons to attend the Police Court in the capacity of jurors. This he read to such persons as he chose to, entering their names in a memorandum book. He notified some 40 or 50 persons in this way to be present the next forenoon. As the proper time a large proportion of them were on hand. The other was there, too, and having received descriptions of several of the men, and noticing the impatience of some who wished to be attending to their business, he approached them and inquired if they had come to serve on the jury, (naming the case.) They would each say, 'Yes, and I with they would hurry it up, as I wish to leave.' The young fellow would then tell the parties that he was an officer of the court, and that if they would give him $1 he would fix things all right."

YACHTING ON THE ICE.

FROZEN WATERS INSTEAD OF THE SAD SEA WAVES—BOATS ON STEEL RUNNERS INSTEAD OF ON THE BOUNDING BILLOWS—ALL SAILS SET AND A LIGHT WIND BLOWING—THE RACE WON BY THE FLYING CLOUD.

From Our Own Correspondent.

POUGHKEEPSIE, Friday, Jan. 26, 1877.

Both of the ice-boat races announced to take place at New-Hamburg to-day, under the rules of the New-Hamburg Ice-Yacht Club, were not put on because of the condition of the ice and a lack of wind. It was decided, however, to start the scrub race, and at 11 o'clock six ice-yachts were in line waiting for the word. The wind was at that time blowing lightly from the south-west, and it was evident that it would be a slow race, even if the wind did not entirely die out and leave the crafts becalmed. At 11:10 they got the starting signal, and Dart taking the lead. The course was two miles up the river from a flag off New-Hamburg dock to a flag off Van Rensselaer's Point and back, all boats to sail over the course twice. The Whiff was second, followed closely by the Tough, and two cat-rigged boats far to the rear, evidently working badly. Soon after the start the wind lulled and the Dart was the only boat that went the entire course, returning home at 12:03, when the judges decided that it was no race.

At 2 o'clock the wind had freshened and again the yachts were ordered into line, 11 boats responding, viz: Magic, Puff, Quickstep, Zephyr, Whiff, Bertie, Qui Vive, Flying Cloud, Zero, Zig-Zag, and Phantom. Each yacht carried one or two men, and sailing masters were notified that all boats must go over the course three times, and there would be no distinction as to class. The judges were Philip Schuyler, of the New-York Yacht Club, Mr. A. Myers, and Mr. P. M. Van Wyck. The handsome yachts lay in line with the bowsprits pointing to the south-west, and the helmsmen on each craft stood leaning on the tiller awaiting the word. At 2:10 o'clock Mr. Schuyler gave the signal to start. As each one of the 11 novel crafts "put away" before the wind the sight was a fine one. The three cat-rigged boats, and one or two of the yachts were "lifted," but they got speedily down to work, and dashed away in fine style, the Zephyr getting the best of the start. As all turned their bows up the river, the humming noise from their steel runners could be heard a long distance. As they glided away faster than the wind, it was noticed that the Flying Cloud was overpressing the Zephyr hard, and at the flag off Van Rensselaer's Point all three were well together, with the Quickstep a good fourth. On the return the boats arrived at the first four-mile flag, and turned it handsomely in the following order and time:

Yacht.	Owner.	H.	M.	S.
Zero	P. Letlow	2	27	0
Zephyr	J. R. Lawson	2	27	35
Flying Cloud	Irving Grinnell	2	27	50
Quickstep	Willis Sharpe	2	28	25
Phantom	P. M. Van Wyck	2	28	28
Whiff	I. Grinnell	2	29	40
Magic	J. Losee	2	34	30
Zig-Zag	G. C. Lawson	2	35	50
Qui Vive	C. LeRoy	2	36	10
Bertie	C. Lawson	2	42	19
Puff	I. Grinnell	2	49	39

The Puff was the only cat-rigged yacht in the race. All the rest were sloop-rigged. Going up the river again the wind lulled a little and the sailing was not so rapid. Indeed, once or twice some of the boats had to be moved just a little when turning for a back. On the way up the Zephyr passed the Zero, and the Phantom led the Flying Cloud, while the Quickstep felt back to fifth position. The turn of the eight-mile flag was made in the following order and time:

	H.	M.	S.
Zephyr	2	46	28
Zero	2	46	33
Phantom	2	46	45
Flying Cloud	2	46	51
Quickstep	2	47	50
Whiff	2	48	44
Magic	2	58	00

The rest of the boats did not turn and consequently no record was made of their positions. The time made in the last four miles was slow, because of the light wind, and it was quite evident that the closing scenes were going to be exciting. However, the Flying Cloud and Zephyr had a hot race for the finish, and they dashed across the line, almost side by side, but the Flying Cloud won the race, the Zephyr being only two seconds behind. The judges only timed the finish of six boats, as follows:

	H.	M.	S.
Flying Cloud	3	3	10
Zephyr	3	3	12
Phantom	3	3	15
Zero	3	4	33
Quickstep	3	5	00
Whiff	3	5	40

This ended the racing for the day. Commodore Grinnell states that the regular regattas of the association will not occur until after a thaw or a rain, as the surface of the river is at present too rough. The regatta of the Poughkeepsie Association for the Citizen Pennant takes place at 10 o'clock to-morrow morning.

THE ELECTION IN ARIZONA.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 26.—A San Diego dispatch says W. H. Hardy, the defeated candidate for Congressional delegate of Arizona, has petitioned the Supreme Court of that Territory to compel the Secretary of State to recanvass the vote. Mr. Stevenson, the present Delegate, having received the certificate, it is not thought probable that the court will grant the petition, and if it should the facts will show that the Secretary acted lawfully and Stevenson will be sustained. Nothing new has been received from Sonora. The recent revolution is considered at an end.

MARINE DISASTERS.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 26.—The bark Hudson, Capt. Vaughn, from Patchie, with guano, has been carried ashore by the ice at Cove Point. She lost her anchor and chains off Sharp's Island. Information has been received to the effect that the French schooner Delphic, from Martinique, for Baltimore, with sugar, is ashore on Cobb's Island. No particulars.

QUEENSTOWN, Jan. 27.—The steamer Somerset, which sailed from Bristol Jan. 20 for New-York, has put in here with her steam-pipe broken.

MURDER IN TENNESSEE.

MEMPHIS, Jan. 26.—A horrible murder was committed at a boarding-house on Poplar street, near Second, to-night. Robert Gibson, Deputy United States Marshal, of Carroll County, Tenn., was shot, and almost instantly killed, by Robert Drury. The father of Drury is under indictment for issuing counterfeit money, and his trial is set for to-morrow, before Judge Trigg, of the United States District Court. Gibson was the principal witness against him.

AN AVALANCHE OF SNOW.

LARAMIE CITY, Jan. 26.—Three men were overwhelmed and carried down the mountain, near the Centennial Mine, yesterday, by a snow-slide. One of them, Thomas Hodgson, of Holland, Mich., was killed. The other two, Capt. Kelly and George R. Davis, escaped with slight injuries. The avalanche was set in motion by the discharge of a blast in a prospecting hole.

FROM PRISON TO PRISON.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 26.—Stephen Raymond, who was connected with the Erie bond forgeries, and escaped from the Sheriff of Elmira, N. Y., will be released from the Eastern Penitentiary to-morrow, where he has served a term of imprisonment, and will be taken back to New-York.

MEETING OF VETERANS.

A Maine paper says: "An interesting incident occurred in Brownfield last week. Capt. Abner Gee, the veteran fiddler, aged 80 years, called upon Lancaster Hodges, aged 106 years. Capt. Gee, having his fiddle, struck up the tunes of 'The Girl I Left Behind Me,' 'Money Musk,' and 'Fisher's Hornpipe,' which so animated the veteran centenarian that he took the floor, and the way he cut the 'pigeon-wing' and several other scientific steps would put to shame many a more youthful, even professional, dancer. Lancaster Hodges is to celebrate his one hundred and sixth anniversary on the 31st inst."

ARRIVAL OF THE STEAM-SHIP OHIO.

The German steam-ship Ohio, Capt. Meyer, from Bremen Jan. 9, arrived at this port at an early hour this morning. She experienced strong westerly gales and heavy seas during the greater part of the passage.

DROWNED IN THE SAVANNAH RIVER.

SAVANNAH, Jan. 26.—John G. Kelly, a native of Halifax, N. S., was found drowned in the Savannah River yesterday. His wife and child are in New-York City.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

David Teets, house-furnishing goods, of No. 507 Eighth avenue, made an assignment to Charles E. Teets.

Thomas L. Vaughan assigned his property for the benefit of creditors to Herbert A. Shipman yesterday.

Augustus H. Adams and Samuel G. Adams, composing the firm of A. R. Adams & Co., grocers, of No. 485 Greenwich street, and of No. 38 Water street, made an assignment to Martin Kiernan.

FORTY-FOURTH CONGRESS.

SECOND SESSION.....Jan. 26.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

In the Senate the petition of persons pretending to be Democratic Presidential Electors from Florida, and asking that their votes should be counted, was called up, and Mr. Jones, of that State, addressed the Senate on the recent election in that State. The Pacific Railroad Sinking Fund bill was called up in order to come up as unfinished business to-morrow. The Military Academy Appropriation bill was reported with amendments, including one to restore longevity pay to Professors, and another appropriating $11,000 for the pay of the band. The Fortifications Appropriations bill was also reported, with an amendment increasing the amount for sea coast defenses from $100,000 to $200,000.

The House met at 10 A. M. and at once resumed the debate on the Electoral Vote bill, which continued through the day. Soon after 5 o'clock the vote was taken on the final passage of the bill, resulting in yeas 191, nays 86.

SENATE.

The Chair laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of War, asking an appropriation of $36,840 71, to supply a deficiency in subsistence for the support of the Army during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877, caused by the loss of subsistence stores burned on the steamer Montana in the Gulf of California, in December last. Referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

THE PACIFIC RAILROAD SINKING FUND.

Mr. THURMAN, of Ohio, gave notice that at the expiration of the morning hour he would move to take up the bill reported by the Judiciary Committee to create a sinking fund for the liquidation of the debt due the Government by the Pacific Railroad companies. After some discussion it was agreed that the bill should be taken up just before adjournment to-day, so as to be the unfinished business to be considered on Monday.

THE PRETENDED FLORIDA ELECTORS.

Mr. JONES, of Florida, called up the petition of persons claiming to be Democratic Presidential Electors of Florida, asking that their votes be counted. The three men from that State. He said it was universally conceded that peace and order prevailed in Florida. The government of the State had lately been transferred to Democratic hands, but in 1874, while a Republican Governor was in power, it was admitted that absolute peace existed there, and nothing was known of White Leagues. He spoke of Gov. Drew, and said he was a man of Northern birth and Union proclivities, but the people of the State elevated him to the highest position in the State. He then referred to the Supreme Court, and spoke of the Judges as men of ability and integrity. They were Republicans, but what of that? They were honorable men, and enjoyed the confidence of the community in which they lived. He then spoke of the action of the Canvassing Board in regard to the recent election, and read from the laws of the State to show that the board acted illegally in rejecting the vote of Jefferson. He argued that the Tilden Electors were legally elected, and have been deprived of their rights by the State Canvassing Board. He spoke at some length as to the duty of the State in appointing Presidential Electors, and the manner of ascertaining the true vote, and argued that they were officers of the State, not of the United States.

THE PACIFIC RAILROAD SINKING FUND.

Mr. THURMAN, of Ohio, called up the bill to amend the Pacific Railroad acts so as to provide a sinking fund for the liquidation of the indebtedness to the Government of said roads, so that it should be the unfinished business for to-morrow.

THE MILITARY ACADEMY BILL.

Mr. ALLISON, from the Committee on Appropriations, reported with amendments the Military Academy Appropriation bill. Placed on the calendar. Most of the amendments are of an unimportant character, the two principal ones being to restore the longevity pay to professors and instructors, and appropriating $11,000 for the pay of the band.

THE FORTIFICATIONS BILL.

Mr. WINDOM, of Minnesota, from the same committee, reported back the Fortification Appropriation bill with an amendment increasing the appropriation for the ornament of sea-coast defenses from $100,000 to $200,000. Placed on the calendar.

ARCTIC EXPLORATION.

Mr. HOWE, of Wisconsin, presented the resolutions of the Milwaukee Board of Commerce in favor of an appropriation of $50,000 to aid in the establishment of a temporary colony for the purpose of exploration and scientific research at or near the 81st degree of North latitude. Referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

The Senate then, at 4.45 o'clock, went into executive session, and, when the doors were reopened, adjourned until 11 o'clock to-morrow.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THE ELECTORAL VOTE.

The House was called to order at 10 o'clock, with but few members in attendance, and was addressed by Mr. HOOKER, of Mississippi, who proceeded to argue against the power of the President of the Senate to count the Electoral votes, and quoted precedents in support of his view. The present bill did not, as the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Garfield] had said, destroy the Electoral College; on the contrary, it provided that the action of the commission might be reviewed by either house. There was no surrender in the powers of either house. So far as the report of the committee was concerned, it came with the sanction of the ablest men in both ends of the Capitol, who believed that that plan was the most feasible method of meeting the present difficulties.

Mr. HARTRIDGE, of Georgia, believed the bill was perfectly constitutional and safe. He felt sure that the tribunal would be governed by fairness, by law, by patriotism, and by the Constitution. The proposition that the Vice President could count the vote was utterly absurd; but the doctrine held by many of his own party that the House could cast out the vote of any State, was supported by the strictest constructionists of the Constitution, who held to the doctrine set forth by the bill, that it required concurrent action to reject a vote. He did not apprehend war; he never had.

Mr. FELTON, of Georgia, followed in favor of the bill.

Mr. MILLS, of Texas, opposed the bill. The Constitution and the law had been sufficient to carry on the country for a hundred years, and they were still sufficient. There were some good things in the bill; among them, that it silenced the pretense that the President of the Senate had the power to count the vote, and established the principle that no vote could be counted until it received the concurrence of both houses.

At the expiration of Mr. Mills' time the point of order was raised that he could not speak more than 10 minutes according to the arrangement made yesterday, but after some discussion his time was extended to an hour, and 4 o'clock was fixed as the time for calling the previous question.

Mr. Mills (continuing) claimed that each house had a right to exclude the vote of a State without concurrent action. He also opposed the bill because it provided for an unholy alliance between the Legislative and Judicial Departments of the Government, and that alliance, whenever it took place, was the absolute prostration of all civil liberty. Those departments must retain their independence.

Mr. LAMAR, of Mississippi, said he understood the opponents of the bill opposed it on the ground that it involved the delegation of the power which the Constitution lodged in two houses. The fallacy was in the assumption that the power claimed either on the one hand for both houses, or on the other for the Vice President to count the vote, was a legislative act by a legislative body. It was no such thing. A legislative body could not do an act without having the President approve that action. It was not a legislative body in the contemplation of the Constitution. It was an organized body clothed with a single function. It could not do a single legislative act. It had but one function, and that was to count the votes, as the Democrats contended, or to witness the count, as the Republicans held. Therefore, the bill was not a delegation of legislative authority. It was claimed that the Vice President had the power to count the votes. He admitted that for the sake of argument. They had to be counted in presence of the House and Senate. They were there to witness the count. But they not have the right to refuse to witness a fraud? But they not have a right to refuse to attest what either thought was not a vote, and if they did refuse did not that render the transaction a nullity? In his opinion the bill was in harmony with the genius of the Constitution. If it failed in these points, the next President would have to be inaugurated by a method which was exclusively advocated and pressed by one party alone, and with a view to a single object—a method advocated by one-half of the country against the wishes of the other half—and the result would be looked upon as the result of fraud and force. There would have to be either submission or resistance to it by the people. There was no use in trying to blink the question. The man who said he despised the menace of civil war was a man who overlooked one of the most important factors in all governments; that was the content, the satisfaction, the repose of the society for which he had legislated, and he had got to learn the very first lesson in the elementary book of practical legislation.

At this point the legislative session of yesterday closed with a formal adjournment, and immediately thereupon, the House was called to order, and to-day's legislative session was opened with prayer by the Chaplain, who, as usual, confined himself to a selection of collects from the Episcopal Prayer-book.

The reading of the journal of yesterday was postponed till to-morrow.

Mr. LAMAR then resumed the floor and proceeded with his address in support of the bill. He said that the bill eliminated the sword from the controversy and sent it to a tribunal whose character guaranteed justice, right, and truth in its decision. It placed the controversy in the pure atmosphere of constitutional right and justice, and gave promise of an era of justice, equality, and rights in the settlement of all public questions.

Mr. BAKER, of Indiana, could not see the controversy of creating a commission outside of the Constitution, and foreign to the institutions of the Government. Neither did he think it was constitutional for Congress to delegate its power. He criticised the bill for excluding from the commission the Chief Justice, declaring it an odious and unjust reflection on a wise magistrate.

Mr. WATTERSON, of Kentucky, said that it might not be true the country stood on the brink of civil war, but it was true that grave danger threatened every public interest. He wished to inveigh against no man or party, but there was well-organized conspiracy to place in the Presidential office a man who had not been elected existed he most conscientiously believed. The Democratic Party was strong enough to make its exit from power by a great sectional war; the Republican Party was strong enough to prevent a peaceful country into civil war. If the two houses failed to agree upon some plan to tide over the great emergency, the country would see a Senate declare Hayes elected, and it would see the President of the United States, supported by the Army and Navy, prepared to seat him in office. The House would then proceed to elect a President, and then there would be either a case of law or a civil war, but in either event there would be commotion and discontent. If the decision of the Senate was peacefully acquiesced in he did not believe, as some persons did, that four years hence there would be a change of parties by such overwhelming majorities as would leave no room for fraud or conspiracy. Four years of plotting and planning would leave the Republican Party better organized and more prejudiced, and the South despairing, disorganized, and demoralized. He would adopt and accept the views of the members of the joint commission without reservation. He would support them, conscious that the action of the commission might bring bitter disappointment to him, but if he did he would be satisfied that he had done his duty in striving to preserve the peace of the country.

Mr. HUMPHREYS, of Illinois, opposed the bill. He said that every form of influence in the weight of the Senate, in the reputation of its supporters here, in the occasional threats by injudicious men of possible civil war and possible complications, had been brought to bear on the House to induce individual members to forego their own conclusions and their own views of what the Constitution required of them. But he for one could not yield his opinions on a constitutional question on any idea or expediency or even on the weight of authority. He would have to stand by his constituents in the discharge of his duty. He proceeded to argue against the bill.

Mr. HILL, of Georgia, confessed that when this Congress assembled his mind had been filled with apprehensions for the future of the country. Those apprehensions had been dispelled, and had been dispelled by the pending bill and by the conviction was he entertained that it would become a law by an overwhelming vote of both houses. He supported the bill, first, because in his judgment it was constitutional, in character wholly so; second, because in his judgment it was wise, in its every provision remarkably so, and third, because it was patriotic, in its every purpose eminently so. Speaking of the South he said it had been a witness of the sorrows of that people, and a willing sharer of all their sufferings. May I, therefore, be pardoned, on this occasion, for calling the attention of the House and of the country to the spirit which has been manifested by that derided people during the entire controversy. On another occasion I intended their manhood, their patriotism, their humanity from what I know to be unjust charges. If the answer then was unsatisfactory, let the further answer be found in the spirit which the people of the South have manifested during the last sixty days. There is scarcely a man in that country who does not believe that the Democratic ticket was elected, and who does not believe that all that they have remaining of property, of rights, of justice, depends upon the inauguration of that ticket; yet, during this whole controversy—I say it with pride and pleasure—the South has manifested but one spirit, and that has been the spirit of forbearance. They have been deprived of their rights by the State Canvassing Board. He spoke at some length as to the duty of the State in appointing Presidential Electors, and the manner of ascertaining the true vote, and argued that they were officers of the State, not of the United States.

Mr. BLAND, of Missouri, sustained the bill because it provided a remedy for existing difficulties, but he expressed his belief that no constitution or law could be devised which would secure honest elections, or which thieves and robbers could not find some means of evading.

Mr. SOUTHARD, of Ohio, sustained the bill, but suggested that it should be amended so as to provide for submitting to the commission the question as to the right of Colorado to vote as a State.

Mr. VANCE, of Ohio, opposed the bill as unconstitutional, and because Congress had no power to delegate its authority.

Mr. HARRISON, of Illinois, sustained it.

Mr. FOSTER, of Ohio, declared his belief that Gov. Hayes had received 185 Electoral votes and was elected, but yet he was not elected.

Mr. LANDERS, of Indiana, presented resolutions of the Indianapolis Board of Trade and of the Democratic members of the Senate and House of Representatives of the Indiana Legislature, in favor of the bill. He said the resolutions expressed his sentiments, and he hoped to see the bill pass by a large majority.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New-York, opposed the bill. He was convinced that on the 7th of November Mr. Hayes was elected President, and he did not propose to put in jeopardy that election. There had been intimidation practiced not only in the South, but it had also been attempted in the House. Something had been said comparing the House to the British House of Commons, but there were some things about it which assimilated it with the French Constituent Assembly. We have had, said he [alluding to Mr. Watterson, of Kentucky,] our citizen Marat, and true to the practice of the Constituent Assembly, he has gone down and harranged the sections and then he has come up to this House to see if terror did not prevail. Our "Citizen Marat" has threatened this Assembly with the overawing of 100,000 [a comical pause] unarmed Democrats. [Laughter.] What, in heaven's name, would 100,000 Democratic petitioners be doing at the capital, unless they were armed either with shotguns or with that other Democratic weapon which does more harm to him who holds it than to anybody else? [Laughter.] Our "Citizen Marat" has failed to imitate the French Marat in one particular—we have no heroes here he is comely. The French Marat sat in the French Constituent Assembly with a wet towel on his head, and I have wondered a good deal from day to day when I see that our Citizen Marat has failed to equip himself in the habiliment belonging properly to his position. To-day he "roars you as gently as any suckling dove." [Laughter.] He spoke not all the men on this side of the House have failed to be affected. I heard yesterday a stalwart Republican, weighing 230 pounds, telling us there was great fear of trouble. I want the people of the country to know that there are a few Republicans on whom the great fear does not rest. [Laughter.] It is not in regard alone to the States of Louisiana, Florida, and South Carolina that there is difficulty; and when the question in regard to them is settled, the whole difficulty is not settled, not a bit of it. The question of Color

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

THE MAKERS OF FLORENCE. By Mrs. OLIPHANT. New-York: MACMILLAN & Co.

Mrs. Oliphant's Makers of Florence is an account of the artists, poets, and statesmen to whom the city owes its treasures of art and its interesting historical recollections. It contains sketches of Dante, Giotto, Savonarola, Michael Angelo, and of other Florentines less famous than these. Mrs. Oliphant's part is pleasantly done. The pictures are from Prof. Dalamotte's drawings, and are beautiful. The book presents an attractive and brilliant picture of the city at its most famous epoch.

The story of Dante has, of course, been told many hundreds of times, but the world in some way appears to prefer to read such stories in new books rather than in old ones. The chapters on the "Cathedral Builders" treat of Arnolfo and Giotto, of Ghiberti Donatello and Filippo. Lorenzo Ghiberti was the sculpter of the bronze gates of the Baptistry, and an old story connects with the competition for these gates the names of both Donatello and Filippo. Lorenzo was then 20 years of age, and, though a Florentine, had left Florence. He was wandering about Italy, painting here and there a stray picture, casting little figures in bronze, and working in wax and stucco even, when nothing better was to be had, when he received from his father, an inferior artist of Florence, the news that the Signoria and the Trades had concluded to make the other two gates of the cathedral, and had summoned to the competition all the best masters in Italy, each of whom was to furnish a "story in bronze" as a proof of what he could do. Lorenzo was so excited by the intelligence that "it seemed to him a thousand years before he could reach Florence." He set to work at once to prepare his model. There were present at the competition, besides the Signoria and the Operai, many grave burghers and illustrious artists from all parts of the country, who had been summoned to assist in the very important task of a decision. Filippo was also one of the competitors. The story represents Filippo, with Donatello, the latter a boy of 17, as surveying the various models with anxious faces. The two youths went apart to consult, and not without some bitter disappointment, confessed that Lorenzo's model was the best, and that he would be given the building of the Baptistry gates. The Signoria, the Operai, and all their advisers were of the same opinion. Lorenzo was thus in a moment lifted from insignificance to be one of the most eminent artists of the day. The building of the gates was a very long task, the two taking 40 years to complete. Lorenzo, however, had time to produce many other works in the same time. The work must have been begun at once, since we find by a public notice of the date of Jan. 7, 1407, that "all working at the doors of San Giovanni" are licensed "to go about Florence at all hours of the night, but always carrying lamps lighted and visible." This brings before the mind very clearly the state of things in an Italian city in the Middle Ages, the narrow and deserted streets, the rioters and robbers, the partisans of rival houses fighting in the dark.

This Lorenzo, by the way, was afterward joined with Filippo in the building of the great dome of the cathedral, a work for which Lorenzo was not at all fitted. Lorenzo, however, liked the salary, and maintained his place notwithstanding the disgust of Filippo. Filippo at last got rid of the incumbrance by professing to be ill and going to bed, leaving Lorenzo to demonstrate his inability to get on without him. Filippo and Lorenzo, it would seem, then were enemies, but Filippo and Donatello appear to have been friends from boyhood. The story of Donatello's crucifix is told by Mrs. Oliphant. This was the first great crucifix of the artist, and still stands in Santa Croce. When Donatello had finished it, he brought his friend, Filippo, to see it, and Filippo, who was a frank critic, told him that it was not in the least Christ whom he had put upon the cross. Donatello, much hurt, answered: "If it is so easy as you think, take wood and make one yourself." Some years ago the late Augustus Welby Pugin made a similar remark, when suffering under the strictures of young Mr. Ruskin, likewise an energetic critic. The architect said: "Let the fellow build a church." Filippo went home and set to work upon a similar crucifix. He gave it a few months of concealed labor, and when it was finished invited Donatello to dine with him. The two young artists, on their way home, bought their meal of eggs, bread, and fruit, and Donatello carried the things in his apron. Filippo, excusing himself under some pretense of business, bade his friend enter first and wait for him. The story is that Donatello no sooner saw the beautiful crucifix than, raising his hands in wonder, he let fall the contents of his apron and spoiled the dinner.

In a chapter upon the life of a peaceful citizen of Florence, whose diary has come down to us, Mrs. Oliphant sketches the private life of the time. She shows how in the midst of the fierce feuds which were always waging in the streets of the town, there was still in Florence a quiet household life, which existed by the side of the battles of angry factions. This citizen was the ancestor of the Pandolfini family. The old Pandolfini, who flourished in the year 1400, was, like most of the great men of his city, a shopkeeper. He was an Ambassador to foreign princes, was one of the most influential public leaders and wisest counselors in Florense, yet we find him returning from the business of State to that of the counter with the most complete satisfaction in the source of his own fortune. From the following account which the Chronicle gives us of the villa which he kept near the city, we may get some notion of the way in which a Florentine shopkeeper lived in mediæval times:

"Here he had a most worthy house, full of everything necessary to the condition of a man of gentle blood—dogs, hawks, and every kind of nets, both for fishing and birding. In this house all guests are received honorably. He was very liberal, and there being no other house in the Florence of such quality and so well regulated, all the great personages who came were lodged there. There he received Pope Eugenius, King Rivieri, Duke Francesco, often Marchess Niccolo, and many other great people; and the house was always so well provided that nothing was wanting. When it happened that a Pope or other day his children came from Florence to visit him without bringing other guests, he complained and reproved them. This house was habitaties of well-doing. And Angelo was in his time another Lucullus, having his dwelling furnished with every kind of poultry and provision for guests, as did honor to those who came. When it happened that there were no visitors in the house after a great hawking, he sent to the road to see if any one passed that way, and gave orders to bring in all wayfarers to dinner. When they reached the house water was given them to wash their hands, and dinner was served by 6 or 8 boys, well attended, he thanked them and said that they were free to go—that he did not wish to hinder their journey. The exercises followed here were those of gentlemen, hawking with falcons and with dogs; and he never went out after the birds with less than 15 or 20 companions on horseback, besides those that went on foot with dogs."

Mrs. Oliphant describes the economy of the Pandolfini household; and we have conversations between the elder Pandolfini and his dutiful sons with regard to morality and other questions affecting the conduct of life. The old man dwells with delight upon the advantages of a country life, yet when his son press upon him the question whether it is best to bring up a family in the country or in town, he decides in favor of the city, and gives a curious reason for his preference: It is that in the city the young learn what vice is and see the necessity of avoiding it. "For no one," he continues, "can judge what vices are who does not know them, as no one can judge of a sound who has not heard that sound, nor can criticise either the instrument or the player." Mrs. Oliphant gives several chapters to Savonarola. The frontispiece is an engraved portrait of Savonarola; there is also a fine print from the recent bust placed in San Marco. There is a chapter upon Michael Angelo, with engravings illustrating his life and works.

LITERARY NOTES.

—Rev. T. Teignmouth Shore will soon publish a work on Some Difficulties of Belief.

—Green's Short History of the English People has reached a circulation of 40,000 copies.

—J. R. Osgood & Co. will publish immediately Charles Blanc's Art in Ornament and Dress.

—A Musical Review, containing works by Turkish composers, is to be published at Constantinople.

—The autobiography of the Danish novelist, M. Goldschmidt, published in monthly parts, is at tracting much attention.

—The Norwegian poet, Andreas Munch, has just brought out at Copenhagen a translation of Tennyson's Idyls of the King.

—Though the Contemporary Review has changed publishers, Mr. Alexander Strahan still remains its editor and proprietor.

—Jacques Offenbach's book on America has at last left the translator's hands in Paris, and will soon be published by G. W. Carleton & Co.

—Life's Aftermath and Mrs. Mainwaring's Journal, two of Mrs. Marshall's most popular novels, have each reached a sale of 5,000 copies.

—An episode in the life of Beethoven, An Unrequited Love, translated from the German of Dr. Nohl, is one of Bentley's latest publications.

—Two famous contemporary Danish poets died in Christmas week, within three days of each other, F. Taludam Müller, and Christian Winther.

—Estes & Lauriat are making arrangements for the publication of translations of all Daudet's novels. Le Nabob, Robert Helmot, The Lovers, Jack, Tartarin de Tarascon, and Hortense.

—The Longmans have just brought out a new work on Iceland, Across the Vatna Jokull, which describes hitherto unknown regions in that country and gives a map and illustrations of the scenery.

—Occasional Papers and Reviews is the title of the new volume of John Keble's writings, edited by John Henry Newman and Dr. Pusey, and already published by James Parker & Co., London.

—E. P. Dutton & Co. have still another of Mrs. Emma Marshall's works in press and nearly ready, to be called A History of France for Children. It is this writer's first venture outside of fiction, and will attract special attention.

—Edward W. Cox, President of the Psychological Society of Great Britain, has written The Mechanism of Man, just published by the Longmans, as a popular introduction to psychology, and as an argument to prove the existence of the soul by science.

—England is to have a new technical weekly journal, to be called Cotton, and to be devoted to the interests of cotton cultivation, manufacture, and commerce, and of woolen and other textile manufactures, and particularly of improvements in textile machinery.

—In criticising Tennyson's "Harold" in The Academy, J. A. Symonds says that his blank verse "lacks the variety, rapidity, and spontaneity we find in the best dramatic writers," and that "at no time are we precisely overborne and carried away by the presentation either of passion or of action."

—The sale of the North American Review for January has been so great that within three weeks from the date of publication the largest edition which has been printed for many years has been entirely exhausted, and the publishers, J. R. Osgood & Co., have been obliged to print a second edition.

—Protection and Free Trade is the subject of a new work upon which Prof. Fawcett is engaged, and in which he will consider the arguments advanced by the advocates of Protection in the United States, and the special causes which prevented the realisation of the predictions so constantly made at the time of the repeal of the English Corn laws.

—The latest magazine novelty in England is The Cosmopolitan Critic and Controversialist, a new monthly, published by Elliot Stock, London, which discusses such questions as "The Utility of Controversy," "The Temperance Legislation," "Ought Museums and Literary and Scientific Institutions to be Open on the Sabbath?" and invites "laconical replies" to such articles.

—The Parish Choir, published and edited by Rev. Charles L. Hutchins, Medford Mass, enters upon its fourth year, as a musical monthly which pays its way and furnishes the best English and American church music at the reasonable price of 50 cents for a year's subscription. It is one of the first ventures in America to supply Episcopal and other choirs with the best current music, and meets a want which is generally felt by musical people.

—Hector Servadac, which means travels through the solar world, is the latest translation from the French of Jules Verne, and will be published by Scribner, Armstrong & Co. The same publishers announce the publication of an edition of Principal Tulloch's Christian Doctrine of Sin, and the reproduction of two works by Dr. Joseph Parker, The Priesthood of Christ—A Re-statement of Vital Truth, and The Ark of God.

—Mr. Niles, of the firm of Roberts Brothers, recently gave a new title to the Mice at Play, and put forth a book with the name, Other Babies than Helen's, and now G. W. Carleton & Co. are just ready with a companion volume, Annals of a Baby, by a well-known author. D. Lothrop & Co. issue a small periodical entitled Babyland, and it seems as if the baby literature were rapidly becoming quite as voluminous as that confined to weightier matters.

—Lovell, Adam, Wesson & Co., No 796 Broadway, have brought out an edition of Letters from High Latitudes, to which Lord Dufferin, the author, who resides at the Government House, Ottawa, and is Governor General of Canada, has contributed an interesting preface on the prospects of the English language becoming universal, and the encouragement to writers to make it the medium of their thoughts. This is the third edition of a yacht voyage to Iceland, Jan Mayen, and Spitsbergen, in 1858, which is described in such a delightful manner that the book is sure of permanent fame as a record of travel.

—T. L. Simmonds, editor of the Journal of Applied Sciences, is the author of a valuable work on Hops—their Cultivation, Commerce, and Uses in Various Countries, which is intended as a manual of reference for the grower, dealer, and brewer, and condenses into a reasonable compass the latest statistics of production and consumption in different countries. It also gives many hints and suggestions in regard to their growth and medicinal uses, and has a special chapter on the hop production of the American continent. It may be obtained at No. 446 Broome street, through E. & F. N. Spon, the publishers.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

—A Widow of Windsor. A novel. By Annie Gaskell. Loring, Publisher, Boston.

—Blackwood's Edinburgh Magizine. American edition. New-York: January, 1877.

—Courtship in 1720 and 1860. By Hawley Smart. Philadelphia: J. B. Lippincott & Co.

—The Sanitarian. A monthly magazine. New-York: February, 1877. No. 83 Nassau street.

—The Shadow of the Sword. A romance. By Robert Buchanan. New-York: D. Appleton & Co.

—Tales from Two Hemispheres. By Hjalmar Hjorth Boyesen. Boston: J. R. Osgood & Co., 1877.

—Beauties Selected from the Writings of Thomas De Quincey. New-York: Hurd & Houghton. 1877.

—Van Nostrand's Eclectic Engineering Magazine. New-York: February, 1877. No. 23 Murray street.

—The Molly Maguires. Origin, Growth, and Character. By F. P. Dewees. Philadelphia: J. B. Lippincott & Co., 1877.

—History of the City of New-York, Part 10. By Mrs. Martha J. Lamb. New-York and Chicago: A. S. Barnes & Co. By subscription.

—Twice Defeated; or, the Story of a Dark Society in Two Countries. By Rollin Edwards. Philadelphia: J. B. Lippincott & Co., 1877.

—The Shadow of the Sword. A romance. By Robert Buchanan. New-York: Lovell, Adam, Wesson & Co., No. 764 Broadway. Author's edition.

—Bragelmann's Classified Business Directory of the United States. First branch—Jewelry, watches, clocks, silver, and plated ware, optical goods, &c., giving the address of each firm. Price, 50 cents. New-York: Martin B. Brown. 1877.

LAW REPORTS.

DECISIONS ON APPEALS.

RULINGS OF THE GENERAL TERM OF THE SUPREME COURT—THE DISBARRING OF ATTORNEYS—SUITS AGAINST THE CITY—INFLUENCES AFFECTING REFEREES—PUNISHMENT FOR CONTEMPT—DRAWING MONEY FROM A BANK.

A number of decisions were handed down by the Supreme Court, General Term, yesterday. Among these were fewer cases of public interest than usual. The court took cognisance of the proceedings brought to disbar various attorneys, and, by the decisions, seem determined to weed out attorneys against whom charges of corrupt connect can be proved. They rendered a judgment, yesterday, disbarring Sigismund Bett, who was accused of forging Judge Joseph F. Daly's signature to an order in supplementary proceedings. The case of Hymes H. Lowenthal, another accused attorney, is referred to ex-Judge Henry E. Davies, to take the proofs. Lowenthal's accuser is one William N. Loew, formerly an attorney, who was disbarred for making false statements in regard to a pleading in the Marine Court in the case of Bernhard against Leo and others. Accuser and accused were in the same office, and from that office a pleading was served on J. C. Julius Langbein, the opposing attorney in the case. Langbein returned the pleading, on the ground that the verification was improper. The same pleading was sent back to Mr. Langbein with an erasure in the verification. Loew was disbarred on account of the proceeding, and now charges Lowenthal with having made the erasure. A third case of an attorney for whom disbarment is sought is that of Joseph S. Ridgway. He is given until March 1 to file an answer to the charges against him.

Among the decisions of the General Term are also some in suits against the City. A very important case is that of Henry Wines against the Mayer, &c. It appears that in May, 1870, the Board of Supervisors passed an ordinance increasing the salaries of attendants of courts from $1,200 to $1,500 per annum. Connolly, then Controller, refused to pay the amount of the increase, and the present suit, which is a test case, was brought. There are, however, some special points with reference to Wine's case. Thus, on April 26, 1870, an act was passed by the Legislature prohibiting the Board of Supervisors from increasing the salaries of "officers," and in the Sweeny suit it was held that attendant in the Court of Common Pleas is an "officer." After the passage of this act, but before the passage of the Supervisor's ordinance, another act was passed by the Legislature relating especially to the Marine Court attendants, of whom the plaintiff was one. Judge Daniels, who writes the opinion of the General Term in the case, holds that this second act, as far as the Marine Court is concerned, repealed the effect of the first act and left the Supervisors with power to increase the salaries of Marine Court attendants. Judge Daniels says, however, that the decision in the Sweeny case—that attendants of courts are "officers"—has been greatly shaken, if not wholly overturned, by subsequent decisions, and is, therefore, doubtful whether the act of April, 1870, applies at all to court attendants. The plaintiff in the present case, he holds, is entitled to judgment.

The General Term, by a decision yesterday, sent back for a new trial the well-known case of William A. Seaver, Administrator of John L. Brown, against the mayor, &c., in which action was brought to recover an advance payment under the terms of a contract for regulating and grading First avenue, between Ninety-second and One Hundred and Ninth streets. The case was tried for the second time in March last before Judge Lawrence, and the plaintiff obtained judgment for $36,668. This has now been reversed and a third trial ordered. The contract sued upon was one of those passed upon by the Contract Commission created under chapter 580 of the Laws of 1872, which was generally known as the "Sutherland Board." This board had power to declare valid certain informal contracts, and in the present case their certificate was indorsed on the contract, the indorsement having been made seven months after their term of office had expired, and had been made by them individually, and not at a joint session. The court holds that it must at least be shown that a favorable decision was rendered by the Commissioners during the period of 90 days, within which the statute empowered them to act. On the point raised as to whether the coming to a decision without thereupon expressing that decision in a certificate was enough to validate the contract, the opinion of the court is reserved until the next trial. For the reason, also, because of the admission of heresay evidence in the shape of a reported statement of Chief Engineer Tracy, the judgment is reversed. Develin and Miller appeared for the plaintiff, and Francis L. Stetson for the City.

The General Term has reversed an order vacating an assessment in the matter of the petition of James Alexander Sayre, the court holding, as they have in several recent cases, that the proof necessary in these special proceedings must be as full as in the trial of an action. As the petitioner failed to establish his case in any particular he is sent back for a new trial. Sayre & Sayre appeared for the petitioners, and H. L. Cole for the City.

The case of the Harlem Bank against Alfred Todd was also decided by the General Term, and the decision may be regarded as an illustration of the careful scrutiny which the courts are disposed to give to the conduct and decisions of referees, even where no fraud is charged. The suit in question came up on appeal from an order of the court below setting aside the report of the Referee in the case. The action itself was against the defendant as a party to a promissory note. The defendant claimed his signature had been forged, and the Referee reported in his favor. The plaintiff's attorney swore that the defendant's attorney had informed him, after the report had been made, that the Referee had become convinced, upon an examination by means of a comparison of the signature to the note with other signatures of the defendant, that no forgery existed in the case after the trial, that the signature was forged. The plaintiff's attorney also made averment as to certain facts which showed that the Referee and the defendant's counsel were on very intimate terms, and hinted at certain friendly influences which might have swayed the mind of the Referee. No action was, however, asked to be made. Judge Daniels, who writes the opinion of the General Term, after alluding to the manner in which certain influences arising from personal friendship might operate in such a case, says: "The probability of such existence of such influences always engenders controversies arising out of the suspicions of the defeated party that his failure may have been attributed to some other cause than a just view of the evidence; and, when they do arise, the facts are not always capable of being accurately ascertained. It would be much more comportable with an inflexible administration of the law that a report assailed as this one has been should be set aside than that the court should enter upon a minute investigation of probabilities for the purpose of invalidating that report." The difficulty of detecting the existence of friendly influences is such, even far the person who may be affected by them, that judicial officers in their proceedings should be expected to carefully avoid even their appearance." The judgment setting aside the report of the Referee is therefore affirmed.

Two appeals in the much-litigated case of John Foley against Charles S. Rathbone are decided by the General Term of the Supreme Court. In this action the plaintiff obtained a judgment for $1,500 against the defendant. An execution was then issued against Rathbone's property, but was returned unsatisfied. Then Rathbone was examined in supplementary proceedings, and it appeared that he was in partnership with one Charles F. Wetmore. The latter, however, had furnished all the means to the partnership fund, Rathbone drawing from the fund for his needs. Wetmore was examined as a third party in the supplementary proceedings, but refused to answer certain questions relating to his private business, and an order was made by Judge Donohue directing Wetmore to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt. The decision on this matter was suspended, and Wetmore answered the questions. He was, however, fined to the whole amount of the judgment by Judge Donohue for his refusal, and was ordered to be committed to jail in case he did not pay the amount of the fine. The General Term reverses this decision. Judge Brady, who writes the opinion, says Judge Donohue must have misunderstood the facts of the case. Pending these proceedings, however, an order was made by Judge Donohue enjoining the withdrawing by Rathbone of the partnership fund from the Continental National Bank, where it was on deposit. This order was afterward so far modified as to apply to only so much of the fund as would cover the amount of Foley's judgment. A motion to set aside the injunction was denied, but this decision is reversed by the General Term, which orders the setting aside of the injunction.

A very curious case decided by the General Term of the Supreme Court is that of the National Broadway Bank against George Miller. It seems that the bank, by a mistake, credited the defendant with $1,916 97 deposited by one James Miller. The defendant drew against the deposit and afterward became insolvent. The officers of the bank, finding out their mistake, brought the present suit against Miller to recover the money, and caused the latter's arrest on an affidavit charging him with fraud. He made a motion in Supreme Court Chambers to have the order of arrest vacated. On that application he explained that he occasionally deposited money in the bank without marking it in his check-book. The explanation seemed satisfactory, and the order of arrest was vacated. On appeal, however, the General Term reverses this decision. Judge Daniels, who writes the opinion of the court, maintains that it is a case of fraud from the fact that the defendant had only $50 on deposit in the bank when he drew the $1,916 97, and from other suspicious circumstances.

THE NILES ESTATE LITIGATION.

Judge Donohue, in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday rendered the following decision on the motion for a Receiver of the property of Nathaniel Niles, deceased, which was made by Mrs. Wilbanx and Mrs. Gen. Badeau recently:

"Assuming as plaintiffs claim, that plaintiffs and Nathaniel Niles are co-trustees, it seems to me the preponderence of evidence in this motion is against the plaintiffs on all the facts on which relief is asked. There is no doubt of the rights and duty of the court to interfere in a proper case to protect funds from the improper acts of Trustees; but a proper case for that interference should be made out. On the facts on these papers I think the plaintiffs wholly fail. Motion for Receiver denied."

COURT NOTES.

Wilhelmina Rogar, of No. 194 Allen street, one of the persons indicted for selling adulterated milk, pleaded guilty before Judge Sutherland yesterday and was fined $20.

William Williams, alias "Blueskin," of No. 71 Thompson street, a notorious pickpocket, who stole a pocket-book containing $1 from Patrick May, was brought before Judge Gildersleeve yesterday and sentenced to three years in State Prison.

John Murray was arrested in this City in December last, charged with passing a counterfeit $10 bill, apparently issued by the Lafayette National Bank, of Lafayette, Ind. Commissioner Shields held him for the Grand Jury, but as that body failed to indict him he was discharged from custody yesterday.

Judge Donohue, in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday, denied a motion, made by William R. Martin, to set aside the sale, under foreclosure of mortgage, of lots at Fifty-eighth street and Broadway. The property was sold Dec. 27 in actions by George M. Miller and others against Martin and others.

James Ryan, of No. 326 East Twentieth street, who snatched a gold watch, chain, and locket from Thomas Bradley, of No. 269 West Nineteenth street, while the latter was walking on Third avenue, on the 16th inst., pleaded guilty yesterday in Part I. of the Court of General Sessions. Judge Gildersleeve sent him to State Prison for three years.

In the suit of Hans Pfeiffer against Philip and Madalena Hossenlopp, Judge Joseph F. Daly, in the Special Term of the Court of Common Pleas, yesterday, opened the judgment by default for $2,000 obtained against the defendants, on condition that the latter give security for the amount of the judgment. The plaintiff charges the defendants with outrageous slanders, in consequence of which his intended marriage was broken off.

In the suit in regard to the estate of the late Walter Pearsall, Surrogate Calvin yesterday announced that he would reject the testimony of William Korff. This person, who was employed by Pearsall's brother in his business in the Fulton Fish Market, testified some time ago that three days before Pearsall's death (when the witness) drafted for him a will, which was properly attested, and by which the testator bequeathed to his reputed daughter, Eliza Jane Pearsall, the whole amount of his property, thus leaving his wife nothing.

Judge Donohue, in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday, appointed William Sinclair, the Clerk of the Court, as Referee to take testimony in the habeas corpus proceeding whereby Miss Margaret O'Brien seeks to obtain the custody of Ada Teresa McNamara, a bright-looking flaxen-haired miss of 12 years of age. The child is at present residing with Mrs. Sarah V. Kelly, of No. 297 Beckett street, Brooklyn. Miss O'Brien claims the right to the child's custody by virtue of a power of attorney from the girl's father, Thomas McNamara, who is a lawyer of San Francisco.

The jury in the case of John Collins and Nicholas Collins, speculators and general dealers, at No. 31 Bridge street, charged with receiving opium stolen from the bonded warehouse of E. C. Johnson, Nos. 1 and 10 Bridge street, returned into the Court of General Sessions at 10.10 A. M. yesterday, having been locked up all night. The foreman announced that they had not agreed upon a verdict, and found it impossible to do so. Judge Sutherland thereupon discharged them. On motion of Assistant District Attorney Bell the accused were required to give new bail. Patrick Lollard, of Nos. 50 and 52 Moore street, former bondsman for the Collins brothers, again became their surety.

UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—In the United States Supreme Court yesterday the following business was transacted:

No. 100—Phipps & Co. vs. Sedgwick, assignee in bankruptcy of Place & Co.; and No. 101—Susan A. Place's Executors vs. Sedgwick.—These are appeals from the Circuit Court for the Southern District of New-York, involving questions of the validity of a post-nuptial settlement made by James K. Place upon his wife, and of a mortgage made by their joint execution to Phipps & Co. on a house which was a part of that settlement. The court below found that Place's circumstances were not such as to admit of the settlement when it was made, and that the property so conveyed, consisting of a house at Fifth avenue and Forty-third street, in New-York, and its furniture, remained a portion of the bankrupt's assets, subject to distribution among his creditors, the attempted conveyance being in fraud of their rights. It is here contended that a husband may make such a settlement upon his wife that will be valid either against existing or subsequent creditors, if he be in prosperous circumstances, and the gift be a reasonable provision, and enough is reserved to meet the husband's debts existing at the time, and that all these elements concur in the present instance, as shown by the evidence in the case. F. N. Bangs appears for the appellees, and William M. Evarts, Foster & Thompson for Phipps & Co. and the Executors.

ANOTHER SUIT AGAINST MR. TILDEN.

Jacob Weidermann, an architect and landscape gardener, at No. 110 Broadway, has begun suit in the Superior Court against ex-Gov. Samuel J. Tilden to recover the balance of a bill alleged to be due him for work done and materials furnished at defendant's house, No. 115 East Twentieth street, between the 1st of April and the 1st of September, 1874. According to the complaint, the amount of the original bill was $6,530, a credit for $2,000 of this amount is acknowledged. The suit is for the balance. The answer denies any indebtedness, claiming that the amount paid was in full for the services rendered. Mr. Edward Fitch, of the law firm of E. & A. P. Fitch, who are counsel for plaintiff, said yesterday that his client had informed him that there was no contract as to the amount to be paid for the work, that the amount charged was only fair and reasonable, and that Mr. Weidermann had frequently made personal application to Mr. Tilden for payment of the balance of the bill, but had been put off on various pretexts until his patience was exhausted. Mr. Fitch further stated that his client told him that when he presented his bill Mr. Tilden seemed surprised, and asked him if he was not employed in the Department of Parks, and that he replied that he had been, but was not at that time.

AN INCENDIARY SENTENCED.

On the night of the 13th of July last a mill at Mott Haven, owned by R. W. Townsend, and leased by James M. Bennett, was burned. The fire extended to the dwelling-house of William Birch, adjoining, which was also consumed. Traces of incendiarism being discovered, an investigation was held, and Samuel Hibbs, a laborer in the mill, was arrested. During his confinement Hibbs admitted that he had set fire to the mill, but explained that he had done so at the instigation of his employer, Bennett, who owed him wages, but refused to pay him unless he should set fire to the mill, which was fully insured. After these disclosure efforts were made to arrest Bennett, but he fled from the City, and has not since been seen. In the Court of General Sessions yesterday Assistant District Attorney Rollins called for sentence upon Hibbs, and Judge Gildersleeve sentenced him to four years in State Prison.

PRISONERS SENTENCED.

Judge Gildersleeve and Assistant District Attorney Rollins disposed of the following burglars yesterday in Part I. of the Court of General Sessions: Richard Muller, No. 439 West Twenty-sixth street, who broke into the premises No. 524 West Thirtieth street, and stole the plumbing materials, two years and six months in State Prison; William Campbell, who effected a burglary on the premises of Margaret Campbell, No. 100 West 11th street, and stole $1 and a quantity of clothing, two years in State Prison; Henry Garn, No. 304 West Eleventh street, who stole gas fixtures and lead pipe from the premises No. 29 Macdougal street, two years and six months in State Prison; James Brady, of No. 301 East Eleventh street, who broke into the store of Abraham Simon, No. 252 Avenue A, and stole two pairs of shoes, three years and six months.

THE METROPOLITAN FIRE COMPANY.

Justice Gilbert, in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, yesterday appointed Charles Edgar Appleby Receiver of the Metropolitan Fire Insurance Company, of New-York, with the requirement that Mr. Appleby furnish bonds for $50,000. The application was granted on the petition of George W. Gilbert, who prays that the company may be dissolved. He alleges that the capital stock is $300,000, and that the defendants have violated the provisions of its acts under which they were incorporated and other laws binding on them, in the following particulars: That the officers have loaned and invested part of the capital in illegal securities, and thus impaired the capital stock to such an extent that they have not sufficient lawful assets remaining to authorize their continuance in business; that they loaned $60,000 in the bonds and stock of the Knickerbocker Gas Company of New-York, which is not paying dividends, and whose stock and bonds have no fixed market value.

THE ASSESSORS IN ALLEGED CONTEMPT.

About one year ago B. Van Raden obtained a writ from the Supreme Court directing the Board of Assessors to estimate the damages to him resulting from the closing up of the Bloomingdale road above Eighty-third street. The Assessors have thus far failed to make the estimate, on the ground, as they claim, that they are unable to fix on any rule for the measure of damages to apply to the case. Mr. Van Raden becoming tired of the delay, applied to Judge Donohue, in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday, and the latter issued an order directing the committal for contempt of Messrs. Green, Morris, Mullaly, and Wiley, the Assessors, unless they comply with the original order of the court within ten days.

THE BROOKLYN THEATRE.

When the Brooklyn Building Company were about to erect the Brooklyn Theatre, by the burning of which on the night of Dec. 5 so many lives were lost, a loan of $60,000 was obtained from John A. Cross. After the fire, a friendly suit to foreclose the mortgage was commenced in the Supreme Court by Seymour L. Husted and Charles J. Lowery, as Executors and Trustees of the last will and testament of John A. Cross, deceased, against the Brooklyn Building Company and Edward M. Cullen, as additional Trustee for Sheridan Shook and Albert M. Palmer. The plaintiffs held policies of insurance for $40,000, of which $30,000 has been paid since the fire. The Building Company urge the suit for the purpose of effecting a change of title. Justice Gilbert appointed H. B. Bradshaw, Referee. Mr. Bradshaw reported that $31,208 14 was due on the mortgage, and judgment for that amount was given. An execution has been placed in the hands of the Sheriff, and the property will be sold by public auction on the 17th of February. When the $10,000 insurance policy, held by the plaintiffs, is paid up, the amount owing to the estate of the late John A. Cross will be about $20,000. The lots upon which the theatre was built will realize, it is expected, much more than this sum. In the suit brought by Mr. Cross's Executors, Shook & Palmer were included with the Brooklyn Building Company, because they have an interest in the property under a three years' lease.

A CLERK CHARGED WITH EMBEZZLEMENT.

The case in which Hugh McClellan, formerly bookkeeper and treasurer of William H. Webb, the ship-builder, is charged by his former employer with embezzlement was resumed yesterday before Justice Duffy, at the Tombs Police Court. Counsel for Mr. Webb said that he had consulted with the District Attorney, and that they agreed in the opinion that the prosecution had made out a prima facie case to the effect that the evidence had shown that McClellan had in the years 1871 and 1872 misappropriated $3,475 97. The prosecution then rested. McClellan, the defendant, testified that he had been in the employ of Mr. Webb from December, 1865, until he left him in 1872, in several capacities connected with Webb's steam-ship enterprises. Mr. Webb never told him that the amount of his compensation would depend upon the success of these enterprises. Witness said he never embezzled any of Mr. Webb's money, that he did not leave this City in a surreptitious manner, and that he returned to the City from the West to testify in a case against Mr. Webb, and was then arrested. The case was here adjourned to next Friday afternoon.

THE DROWNING OF "LITTLE BOSTON."

At the Essex Market Police Court yesterday afternoon, in the cases of Michael Sullivan and Antonia Morello, charged with being connected with the drowning of an "unfortunate" woman, at the foot of Market street, on Tuesday morning, the evidence of Peter Manahan was concluded, and the case submitted. Justice Flammer held Morello, without bail, to await the action of the Grand Jury, and committed Sullivan, as a witness against him, to the House of Detention, in default of $1,000 bail. Manahan was discharged on his own recognizance. It came out in the proceeding that the real name of the woman was Eliza Rosamond, alias "Marshal," alias "Little Boston," by which latter name she was generally known.

THE BENNETT-MAY DUEL.

The Grand Jury, which is still struggling to throw some light on the Bennett-May duel, issued additional subpœnas on Thursday evening, and in response thereto Dr. May, father of Mr. Frederick May, and James Kearny Warren, the banker, of No. 36 Wall street, appeared yesterday. The examination of both gentlemen occupied less than 10 minutes, and at the expiration of that time they were allowed to depart. It was expected that Dr. May, at least, would be able to give some important information, but he failed to do so, and the Grand Jury, consequently, has no more evidence in its possession now than it had two week's ago.

COURT OF APPEALS.

ALBANY, Jan. 26.—In the Court of Appeals to-day the following business was transacted: No. 170—Tyler vs. Brock.—Submitted. No. 172—The Tribune Association vs. Smith.—Argued by William Rosenblatt for appellant and Charles D. Adams for respondent. No. 173—Devello vs. O'Neil.—Argued by Allen Macdonald for appellant and Francis C. Develin for respondent. No. 176—Morris Run First National Bank of New-York.—Argued by Charles E. Patterson for appellant and John Cadman for respondent. No. 177—The Knickerbocker Life Insurance Company vs. Dill.—Submitted. No. 179—Wood vs. Sheehan.—Submitted. No. 180—Long vs. Warren.—Argued by H. Beck for appellant and H. E. Sickels for respondent.

The day calendar for Monday, Jan. 29, is as follows: Nos. 86, 183, 184, 185, 187, 188, 189, and 191.

DECISIONS.

SUPREME COURT—GENERAL TERM.

Held by Davis, P. J.; Brady and Daniels, JJ.

Matter of Striker.—Order reversed, further hearing directed, costs to abide event. Opinion by Judge Daniels.

Wines vs. The Mayor, &c.—Motion denied; judgment ordered for plaintiff on verdict. Opinion by Judge Daniels.

Foley vs. Rathbone.—Order denying motion for resettlement reversed; order denying proceedings modified as in opinion. Opinion by Judge Daniels.

Same vs. same.—Order reversed with $10 costs and disbursements. Opinion by Judge Brady.

Somerville vs. Cook.—Judgment reversed without costs; order entered formally confirming Referee's report, with liberty to defendants within 10 days to make and file exceptions to report, and serve case upon which application can properly be made to set aside report. Opinion by Judge Daniels.

The National Broadway Bank vs. Miller.—Order reversed, with usual costs and disbursements; order entered denying motion. Opinion by Judge Daniels.

Kindervater vs. Cargo.—Order affirmed with $10 costs and disbursements. Opinion by Judge Daniels.

Miller vs. Senior.—Order affirmed, with $10 costs and disbursements. Opinion by Judge Daniels.

Fitch vs. Pearsall.—Order affirmed, but with costs and disbursements to abide the event of another trial. Opinion by Judge Daniels.

Bucking vs. Hausell.—Order to be entered reversing order appealed from, and directing that the judgment entered be set aside, costs and disbursements to abide the final determination of the case. Opinion by Judge Daniels.

Anderson vs. Callahan.—Order affirmed, with $10 costs and disbursements. Opinion by Judge Daniels.

Matter of Keegan.—Proceedings affirmed. Opinion by Judge Brady.

Seaver vs. The Mayor, &c.—Judgment and order reversed; new trial ordered; costs to abide event. Opinion by Judge Daniels.

Matter of Bott.—Order to be entered directing that the name of the respondent be stricken from the roll of attorneys and counselors of this court, and that he be prohibited from appearing and practicing as such in any of the courts of this State, and that his license be surrendered and canceled.

Aiden vs. Dicesy.—Order reversed, with costs and disbursements, and the injunction dissolved. Opinion by Judge Donohue.

Larry vs. The National Trust Company.—Order reversed, with $10 costs and disbursements to abide the event of the action. Injunction to be continued during its pendency. Opinion by Judge Daniels.

Matter of McCahill.—Order denied.

The Metropolitan Gas-light Company vs. The Mayor, &c.—Motion for rearrument denied.

Matter of Addyman, &c.—Leave given to the respondent to answer in this matter and file such answer on or before the first Monday of March next, and in default of such answer the court will proceed to dispose of the application without further delay.

Matter of Lowenthal, &c.—Reference to take testimony, and report the same with his opinion, ordered. Henry E. Davies, Jr., Referee.

Schaack, &c., vs. The Mayor, &c.—Judgment affirmed. Opinion by Presiding Judge Davis.

The New-York Dispensary vs. The Mayor, &c.—Judgment affirmed. Opinion by Presiding Judge Davis.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS.

By Judge Donohue.

Granted.—Abbott vs. Richardson; Roth

The New-York Times.

NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, JAN. 27, 1877.

AMUSEMENTS THIS EVENING.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—Matinée at 2—THE FLYING DUTCHMAN, (English Opera)—Miss C. L. Kellogg, Mr. Maas, Mr. Carleton.

UNION SQUARE THEATRE.—Miss MULTON—Miss Clara Morris, Mr. J. O'Neil, Mr. J. H. Stoddart. Matinée.

WALLACK'S THEATRE.—FORBIDDEN FRUIT.—Mr. Harry Beckett, Mr. H. J. Montague, Miss Ada Dyas. Matinée.

FIFTH AVENUE THEATRE.—LEMONS; OR, WEDLOCK FOR SEVEN.—Mr. C. F. Coghlan, Miss F. Davenport. Matinée.

PARK THEATRE.—THE GENEVA CROSS—Mr. C. R. Thorne, Jr., Mr. Stuart Robson, Miss Kate Rogers. Matinee.

LYCEUM THEATRE.—OTHELLO—Mr. Edwin Booth as Iago. Matinée—HAMLET.

NIBLO'S GARDEN.—AROUND THE WORLD IN EIGHTY DAYS (Spectacular)—Kiralfy Brothers. Matinée.

GRAND OPERA-HOUSE.—MAN AND WIFE. Matinée.

BROADWAY THEATRE.—UNCLE TOM'S CABIN—Mrs. G. C. Howard and Georgia Jubilee Singers. Matinée.

NEW-YORK AQUARIUM.—RARE AND CURIOUS FISH AND MAMMALIA, STATUARY, &c.—Day and evening.

HELLER'S WONDER THEATRE.—PRESTIDIGITATION, MUSIC, AND HUMOR—Mr. Robert Heller. Matinée.

GILMORE'S GARDEN.—EQUESTRIAN GAMES AND FIELD SPORTS.

SAN FRANCISCO MINSTRELS.—MINSTRELSY, FARCES, AND NEGRO COMICALITIES. Matinee.

NATIONAL ACADEMY OF DESIGN.—EXHIBITION OF WATER-COLORS. Day and evening.

THE NEW-YORK TIMES.

THE NEW-YORK TIMES is the best family paper published; it contains the latest news and correspondence. It is free from all objectionable advertisements and reports, and may be safely admitted to every domestic circle. The disgraceful announcements of quacks and medical pretenders, which pollute so many newspapers of the day, are not admitted into the columns of THE TIMES on any terms.

Terms, cash in advance.

TERMS TO MAIL SUBSCRIBERS.

Postage will be prepaid by the Publishers on all Editions of THE TIMES sent to Subscribers in the United States.

The DAILY TIMES, per annum, including the Sunday Edition	$12 00
The DAILY TIMES, per annum, exclusive of the Sunday Edition	10 00
The Sunday Edition, per annum	2 00
The SEMI-WEEKLY TIMES, per annum	3 00
The WEEKLY TIMES, per annum	1 20

These prices are invariable. We have no traveling agents. Remit in drafts on New-York or Post Office Money Orders, if possible, and where neither of these can be procured send the money in a registered letter.

Address THE NEW-YORK TIMES, New-York City

NOTICE.

We cannot notice anonymous communications. In all cases we require the writer's name and address, not for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

We cannot, under any circumstances, return rejected communications, nor can we undertake to preserve manuscripts.

THE UP-TOWN OFFICE OF THE TIMES

The up-town office of THE TIMES is at No. 1,257 Broadway, between Thirty-first and Thirty-second streets. It is open daily, Sundays included, from 4 A. M. to 9 P. M. Subscriptions received, and copies of THE TIMES for sale. Dealers supplied at 4 A. M.

ADVERTISEMENTS RECEIVED UNTIL 9 P. M.

The Counting bill passed the House yesterday with 191 votes recorded in its favor, and 86 against it. This is a decidedly more respectable opposition than was mustered in the Senate, though the majority had five votes more than two-thirds, in a very full house. It will be observed that five-sixths of those who voted in favor of the bill are Democrats, while nearly four-fifths of those voting against it are Republicans. This State supplies one-third of the Republicans voting in favor of the bill—a fact which may be explained in three words—Commerce, Cowardice, and CONKLING.

It is obvious that the division in the House represents the Republican sentiment of the country on this measure much more faithfully than did the division in the Senate. Had a few more days been allowed for the expression of that sentiment, the Republican votes in favor of the bill would have been still further diminished. It is gratifying to observe that Senator EDMUNDS failed to secure the vote of a single Representative from Vermont for his pet scheme, and that the able and manly opposition of Senator MORTON was indorsed by nearly all the Representatives from Indiana. As there seems to be no doubt about the President's readiness to sign the bill, the question of selecting members for the Joint Commission from both houses is already being discussed. Earnest Republicans will notice with some apprehension that it is proposed to include among the three Republican Senators to be appointed at least two of the authors of the plan under which the commission is to act.

Cincinnati is having its turn of a revelation of the "true inwardness" of Democratic politics. The election frauds in that city appear to have been carried out according to the most approved methods of TWEED and TILDEN, and the abduction performance, for which the Sheriff of the county and his chief clerk have just been arrested, is quite in the line of our most famous artists of the Tammany school. The Republicans of Cincinnati are, at length, well assured of the fact that BANNING'S election was carried by fraud, and that the seat in Congress rightfully belongs to STANLEY MATTHEWS. In view of the fraudulent methods to which BANNING owes his election, some natural disgust is expressed at his recent impudent professions of regard for the purity of the ballot-box. These, however, are not surprising. Some of the greatest rascals in Congress have been most emphatic in their declared attachment to the cause of public virtue. GOODE, of Virginia, has as little right to his seat as BANNING can possibly have, and obtained as well as retained it by frauds of the most unblushing character. Yet he was perhaps the most blatant of the Democratic orators who on Thursday invoked the sacredness of the popular will expressed at the polls as a reason for giving TILDEN a chance of being counted in.

The Police Commissioners of this City appear to have some very active friends in or around the State Legislature. Three bills apparently in their interest were introduced in the Assembly yesterday, in addition to a few others already in the hands of the Committee on Cities. One was for the formation of a pension fund to be administered by the men who have been so faithful in their management of the Police Life Insurance fund that they diverted a portion of its revenues to the payment of thirty extra patrolmen appointed in defiance of the absence of any provision for paying them. The other was for the transfer of the functions of the Board of Health to the same set of incompetent jobbers whose gross neglect of the business of street-cleaning has swelled the bills of mortality as effectively as it has interfered with business and locomotion. The third is for allowing the Commissioners, some of whom are notoriously adepts in the formation of Rings, to organize a remunerative business in filling up sunken lots with City refuse. It used to be the Department of Public Works that furnished "bones" for needy legislators and prizes for the Albany lobby. It must be a great comfort to both classes that there is so good a prospect of the Police Department undertaking this business.

It is now positively stated that the Sublime Porte intends introducing of its own accord the reforms demanded by the powers at the conference. The statement is made with as much solemnity as if it were entirely novel. No "reforms," so called, presented by the conference were late inventions, except so far as some of them proposed a change in existing boundaries of the Christian provinces. Almost every other project of reformation had been repeatedly urged upon Turkey, and had repeatedly been accepted—and thrown aside. The pivot on which the whole schedule of reforms turned was the demand that Turkey should admit a foreign force, in order that her promises should be executed under foreign supervision. To accept this was to surrender Turkish sovereignty, however small the proposed body of gendarmerie might be. Although Turkish promises are never kept, and Turkish intentions of reform are as idle as the whistling of the wind, the Sublime Porte has gained some respect by its refusal to consent to the guarantee which was demanded by the powers. It seems early to renew the old game of promises.

"AN ERA OF GOOD FEELING."

The enactment of the Compromise bill, we are assured, will be followed by an era of good feeling. It is to be the forerunner of millennial bliss in the political world, the Democratic wolf lying down with the Republican lamb, and both bearing witness to the patriotism, wisdom, and consummate skill of a bargain which gives the wolf its own way and leaves the lamb at its mercy. Partisan bitterness is to be obliterated. Everybody is to declare that the new President was lawfully elected. And, under the stimulating influence of a settlement which, in other circumstances, would be called a surrender, industry and trade are instantaneously to acquire a prosperity that has rarely been paralleled. How these results are to be produced, the sanguine supporters of the scheme have not paused to explain. They are so elated at the chance so unexpectedly conceded to Mr. TILDEN that they have not time to tell by what miraculous processes an arrangement inherently bad is to be made the cause of blessings innumerable.

Falling back upon the common-sense aspect of the case, we not only fail to discover any solid ground for the bright predictions of Mr. TILDEN'S no-party friends, but we see many reasons for thinking that, so far as political feeling is concerned, the measure will produce effects the very reverse of those which are foretold. The first and most obvious reason is derived from the fact that the measure, divested of pretense, is essentially a Democratic measure. Parade the names of its Republican supporters as you please, disguise the jugglery it sanctions in any manner you like, talk of the "exalted patriotism" it has called forth, until you half forget the paltry enmities and jealousies that have sought the shelter of fine words—still the truth remains, that the bill sacrifices the strong position held by the Republican candidate under the Constitution, and exposes the lawful Electoral vote to the capricious authority of a tribunal whose verdict may be determined by the toss of a nickel coin. For practical purposes, a measure of this nature must be regarded as in the interest of the Democratic Party. Defeated as that party is on a fair count of the Electoral votes, the Electoral bill creates for it machinery whose working may be controlled by treachery or accident. Such an experiment is more likely to multiply the causes of partisan bitterness than to give rise to good feeling.

A yet more prolific source of irritation will probably be found in the indignation of the great mass of the Republican Party, if the fears entertained by the opponents of the plan be realized. There is a disposition even now to believe that the party has been betrayed in the house of its friends. The origin of the measure was suspicious. It was sprung upon the country. No time was allowed for its discussion before the people. The unhallowed combination which controlled the action of the Conference Committee has forced the bill through Congress. An ordinary constitutional amendment progresses slowly. Ample precautions are provided to insure a due understanding of its nature, and a deliberate judgment upon its merits by the States. Here, however, is a sweeping constitutional change—a change which puts in jeopardy the result of a Presidential election, and introduces into the Governmental system contrivances that have no warrant in the Constitution—and a few hours only are allowed for its consideration. The great majority of the people are at this moment ignorant of its provisions. They have had no opportunity of saying yea or nay. The expressions of opinion in its favor came from particular classes in the large cities. From interior States, and from the rural districts of the Atlantic States, indications of opinion are only now beginning to come. So far as we can judge, they are overwhelmingly against the bill. The rank and file of the Republican organization view it with distrust as a device constructed for the benefit of the enemy. If this interpretation be strengthened by the operation of the plan, the Republican leaders who are in part responsible for its authorship, and whose advocacy alone secured its adoption, will be exposed to more obloquy and suspicion than men of average sensitiveness like to encounter. Instead of an era of good feeling we may expect to witness a torrent of popular indignation which the legislators in question will not easily withstand. There will be a ready acquiescence in the results of the law as such, but its Republican champions will be required to explain, in circumstances not flattering to their pride. An affectation of judicial impartiality will not ward off the imputations which passing occurrences may seem to suggest, and the imaginary glories of the millennial era will be obscured by the unpleasant realities of a quarrel within the party.

THE COURSE OF TRADE IN EUROPE.

For several months past there has been a general impression reported by the commercial journals of Europe, that the customary quarterly and annual statements made up at the close of the year would show some decided improvement in the activity of trade. This expectation has been, as a rule, disappointed. While there has been a quiet gain in some directions, there has been no marked general improvement, and the comparisons with the year 1875, or with the last quarter of that year, in the various branches of business and in the principal countries are, on the whole, unfavorable.

The most notable evidence of the course of trade in Great Britain, apart from the periodical statements of exports and imports made by the Board of Trade, is found in the revenue returns. These for the last quarter show a falling off of £85,000, against a gain of £81,000 in June, and of £352,000 in the September quarter. This decrease has been nearly equal in Customs and excise, and largest in the revenue from stamps, and it is now quite likely that the fiscal year will close with a small deficit.

Turning next to the returns of the Bankers' Clearing-house, covering the last sixteen weeks of the year, we find that the total amount of business done this year is £1,437,925,000, against £1,617,698,000, a falling off of £179,773,000, or 11.1 per cent. During the preceding four months, it had been 12.4 per cent. An analysis of the figures shows that the larger part of the decrease is traceable to diminished transactions on the Stock Exchange, which, on the seven settling days included in the above returns, betrayed a loss of £100,034,000, or 33.6 per cent. In the preceding four months the decrease had been 27.8 per cent. Nothing is more certain than the connection between stagnation in general trade and stagnation on the Stock Exchange. People speculate with their profits, and though money is a drug in the London market, it does not find its way to the Exchange. How little profitable employment for it is to be found anywhere is shown by the facts that bank managers are refusing deposits; that private banks allow no more than 1 per cent., and generally less, on deposit accounts; that the joint stock banks are gradually giving up the payment of interest on current balances, and that the quotations for mercantile paper at the opening of the year were from 1⅜ per cent. to 2½ per cent., and for six months only occasionally 3 per cent.

The general dullness is reflected in the profits of the banks. The Economist publishes a comparison between the last half-year for 1876, 1875, and 1874, in the cases of seven principal joint-stock banks. The average rate per annum for 1874 was 13.43 per cent.; for 1875, 11.71 per cent.; for 1876, 10½ per cent. The London and Westminster, which made 22 per cent. in 1874, made only 14 per cent. last year; the Union Bank sank from 15 per cent. to 12½ per cent., the London Joint Stock from 22 per cent. to 17, while the others showed smaller rates, both of profit and of decrease in profit. A somewhat better showing is made by the railway companies, 17 of which show an increase of traffic for the half year of 1 per cent., but this is more than offset by an increase of working expenses, leaving smaller net gains to be distributed over an increased capital. In the iron trade of the North of England, there has been a considerable fall in prices, without any corresponding reduction of the cost of labor. There is some improvement in iron other than rails, but these latter have fallen in price and in production. They now constitute but 17.59 per cent. of the total amount turned out, whereas two years since they were 54 per cent. On the Berlin and Vienna markets there has been a general decline, not large in Government securities, but considerable in bank shares, and very marked in railway shares and in miscellaneous stocks, while the premium on gold in Vienna, which a year ago was 114.78, has advanced to 126.57.

In Paris there has been a peculiar course of prices. The net result, as given by L'Industrie, is a depreciation of 375,177,000 francs on about 100 securities. This depreciation is the difference between an advance of 1,563,995,000 francs, and a decline of 1,939,172,000 francs. The advance has taken place in French rentes and the shares and bonds of French railway companies. The decline, so far as French securities are concerned, has taken place almost entirely in those of financial companies, the Bank of France counting 63,000,000 of francs and the Credit Foncier 50,000,000. The remainder of the decline has been in foreign Government bonds, which count the large sum of 1,490,552,000 francs, and in foreign railway shares and financial companies. During the year the new issues on the Paris Bourse amounted to but 585,000,000 capital, against 1,088,000,000 in 1875.

The facts which we have here brought together are significant because they are taken from the records of trade in the various countries which directly or indirectly control far the greater part of the business of the world. Those of England are particularly interesting, because London is the financial centre of a commerce much greater than that directly transacted by British traders. They are instructive to American readers as showing that the depression under which our country has suffered is not confined to ourselves, or wholly caused by influences peculiar to ourselves, but is to a great extent our share in the effect of causes nearly universal in their extent. There are reasons, some of which we have from time to time pointed out, why American commerce may be expected to recover rather earlier, and perhaps more rapidly, than that of Europe from this depression. If our Government now had the courage and sagacity to give us a securely good currency, this expectation would be much more easily realized.

THE CITY DEBT AND FINANCES.

The first bonded debt of this City was created in pursuance of "an act to regulate the finances of the City of New-York," dated June 8, 1812, which authorized $900,000 as "a permanent arrangement of the finances of the City." During the next seventeen years there were two more authorizations and issues, but such reductions were also made that the net amount was less than the original issue. The following shows the progress since:

Year.	Bonded Debt.	Valuation.	Ratio of Debt to Valuation.
1830	$774,555	$125,288,518	0.62
1835	902,534	218,723,703	0.41
1840	10,775,385	253,233,517	4.25
1845	13,629,591	239,995,517	5.67
1850	12,204,176	286,161,816	4.26
1855	15,024,418	486,998,278	3.58
1860	18,901,440	576,631,706	3.21
1865	35,973,597	608,827,855	5.91
1870	73,373,552	1,047,388,449	7.05
1875	116,773,724	1,100,943,699	10.60

In 1830, the debt was $3 82 per head; in 1850, $23 69; in 1870, $77 87; in 1875, $105 25. The increase during 1874 in the net debt was $8,824,498; in 1875, $1,585,752. There appear to be at least fifty issues, at four rates of interest, and at least twenty-five different kinds of bonds. The oldest dates now out are of 1841; the longest to run are fifty-year, maturing in 1926; the only uniformity is in the dates of interest payment, which are May and November in all but a dozen instances. Approximately 5 per cent. (none of it of later issue than 1860) bears 5 per cent. interest; 60 per cent. bears 6 per cent. interest; 35 per cent. bears 7 per cent. interest. The debt of Boston is about one-half at 5 and 5½, with one issue at 4½; two or three small amounts bear 7; the rest bear 6. Baltimore pays 6, except on two small issues at 5. Brooklyn mostly pays 7 and has nothing below 6. Philadelphia pays 6, except on one issue of 5s. St. Louis pays 7 on one issue, and 6 gold on the rest. Cincinnati pays 6 gold and 7 and 7.30 currency, the latter on the bulk of her Southern Railroad debt. St. Paul has the heaviest rate, 12, on a portion of her revenue bonds. Other Northern cities pay 6 and 7, with a few exceptions as low as 4 and as high as 10.

New-York thus appears to be not more unfortunate in her rate of interest than other cities, except Boston, and yet it is clear that a great city ought to be among the most favored borrowers, and to command money upon terms nearly, or quite as favorable, as those of the United States. The great need as to the existing debt is that it be re-funded, not only for the purpose of reducing the rate but for that of simplifying the issues into a smaller number and variety, and graduating their time of maturity according to some intelligent estimate of the City's ability to pay. The national debt is made a still heavier burden than it need have been, and the re-funding process is made slower than it need have been, but for the short-sightedness which supposed the war would be brief and the borrowing moderate, and so introduced a confusing variety of short-time issues. In our City debt the error of short time has not been so marked, yet the debt has grown as a temporary expedient, the want of intelligent and systematic procedure being only less notable than the want of honesty. The conditions requisite for re-funding at lower rates—supposing the borrower to be in good credit—are, that he have the right to offer the bondholder the choice between the principal sum and a new lower-rate bond, and that he have the money wherewith to pay him if he elects payment. Without the aid of these conditions the United States might have appealed in vain for an exchange of 6 per cents. for 5s. Neither of these is to any considerable extent attainable by this City at present; for, as nearly as we can ascertain, not more than $25,000,000 of her debt matures within the next ten years, and—by the management of her affairs for the last ten years, and without very material change for the better—it is safe to say that she has not the pecuniary ability. Hence, the funding scheme seems to us an excellent one to discuss and keep in view, but not to have much prospect of realization for a long time yet.

A still more pressing and immediate necessity with regard to the debt is to arrest its progress, and if this cannot be accomplished now, what financier can name the time when it can be, short of the destruction of Municipal credit? The weapon which the Tammany Ring found ready for their hand and turned against the City was the excellence of its credit, and the facility of raising money thereon without alarming the tax-payers by demands; hence they turned to the lenders and thus ran their course, leaving a legacy of claims and judgments, which has since been changed into fixed debt. But the worst feature, because the most dangerous, is not that the debt so largely represents most repulsive stealing, but that, because the burden of expenses and interest (the latter now exceeding $9,000,000) is heavy, we are making it heavier. We are still borrowing in order to avoid paying, and, in violation of JOHN RANDOLPH'S rule, are not paying as we go. The City's credit, judging by the quotations of brokers, is still surpassed by that of no large city except Boston, and the bonds are still a favorite class with investors, the bulk of the sixty millions of City bonds held by the City banks and trust and insurance companies probably consisting of the bonds of the two cities; but the City is following a financial path which has only one ending. Whether a boat which starts northward from Buffalo will go over Niagara depends on whether it stops before reaching the rapids. The reputation of the Metropolis naturally serves to blind the eyes of investors and tax-payers alike to the drift of events, but, unless there is a change for the better, investors will hardly retain more than three years longer their customary willingness to take new issues of bonds at good prices. Some change must come; and if that change is not wisdom and courage it will be depreciation of credit and whatever follows that. There is not one set of financial laws for individuals and villages, and another set for great cities. Funding the debt is hardly practicable at present, but keeping it from further increase is; yet that will require something more direct and positive than an occasional anxiety on the part of bankers and merchants, or even an informal meeting at the Mayor's office.

AN ENGLISH LIBERAL ON RUSSIAN CONQUEST.

A member of the Liberal Party in England—Sir GEORGE CAMPBELL—has recently put forth a volume on the Eastern question, wherein the new views of many Liberals on the importance of Constantinople as a neutral city to English interests are forcibly expressed. Before the Crimean war it was held almost as an axiom by patriotic Englishmen, that the possession of the great Turkish city by the Russians would be a new danger to India, and destructive to the British commerce in the Mediterranean. COBDEN was almost alone among the leaders of the Liberals in doubting both of these propositions; but his views were held then as unreasonably pacific and as savoring too much of the spirit of the trader. When the Suez Canal was finished, and British commerce soon began to flow in full flood through it, the opinion increased in England that the possession of Constantinople by a weak or neutral power was absolutely indispensable to the safety of the trade through this new route. Latterly, however, as the thoughtful men of Great Britain have begun to study the Oriental questions more carefully, and to investigate the condition of Russia itself more closely, a new aspect to this matter has been obtained.

CAMPBELL, for instance, asks why the occupation of Constantinople by the Russians should threaten British commerce in the Mediterranean, any more than the possession of any good port on that sea by a first-class power does now. Why is not Marseilles in the hands of the French as dangerous to British trade, in the event of a war, as a Russian port on the Bosphorus would be? The danger to English trade would come from the Russian control of that sea, but does the conquest of the "City of the Golden Horn" give her that? Does not that still depend on the number of guns and the quality of ships and sailors each power can show upon that inland sea? But, says the objector, the Russians on the Bosphorus would control the Suez Canal. Sir GEORGE meets that point very fairly by showing that the use of the canal in time of war, would depend on the fleet which protected each end of it. There is no question that the British fleet could—so long as Great Britain remained a first-class naval power—protect the Oriental end. The connection through the Mediterranean would again depend on the ships of war there that could convoy the merchant ships. Constantinople would only give to Russia what England has now in Malta and Gibraltar—a place to refit vessels and an impregnable harbor from which to sally.

As to general trade, according to the modern school of political economy, Great Britain would only benefit by a new outlet of trade for the Empire of the Czar. With a vigorous and progressive race in that unequaled capital, there would be a new development of commerce with the vast Empire behind it, and with all Asia. No power outside of Russia would share so much in such improved trade as England itself. In all probability, there is no port in Europe or Asia with such capacities for a widespread commerce as the old Byzantine capital, under a Northern and advancing race. As to the dangers to India, the English Liberal justly observes that the immediate possession of Constantinople would rather withdraw Russian attention and efforts from that direction. The occupation of the Bosphorus does not put the Czar a step nearer the English Empire. Even if this occupation prevented troops being sent by the canal to India, it would not check their transfer by the Cape, and would only lengthen the time of transporting forces to Bombay some three weeks. But even with this lengthening of the voyage England would be nearer India than Russia would be by Turkestan.

Mr. SCHUYLER'S book on this region has already had one good effect on Englishmen, in proving to them how empty a bugbear is the old fear of Russia's attacking India by Turkestan and Affghanistan. It is plain, till Central Asia is cut with railroads, that India is as safe from Russia as Colorado would be from a foreign attack on the Pacific coast, even unsupported by the United States. Vast wildernesses and frightful mountain passes best defend the English possessions from the west; moreover, Englishmen are beginning to see what has been so often alluded to in these columns, that Russia herself has her own internal fermenting questions, which may soon absorb all her vitality and energy. The ideas and feelings which are at work in that vast Empire, seem like those which kept France in a ferment before the Revolution of 1789. It is plain that, within a brief period, Russia will have enough to occupy her within herself to prevent all thoughts of India or foreign conquest in any way claiming her attention. Such considerations as these, occurring now to most English Liberals, are destined to affect British policy profoundly in the coming war.

A MYSTERY SOLVED.

An eminent statistician has made the assertion that there were 64,000 book-agents in this country in 1876, of whom 1,000 committed suicide. Painful as it is to every reverent mind to cast doubt upon figures, it must be said that there is reason to suspect the accuracy of this statistician's statement. It is one of the leading principles of the science of statistics that a round number is essentially suspicious. Had the astronomers told us that the moon is distant from the earth exactly 30,000 miles, they would not have commanded our confidence; but when they call the distance 29,874 miles and 13½ feet, we surrender at once, and admit the impossibility of contradicting such evidently sincere figures. Perhaps the chief reason why astronomical calculations are so universally regarded as impregnably true is the fact that, in every single case in which the astronomers have decided upon the distance of any star from the earth, they have avoided the use of round numbers; while in terrestrial measurements they have taken the precaution to add rows of decimals to every set of figures. The man who would express skepticism as to decimals is not far from atheism, and can have no particle of reverence in his nature. In view of this principle, we are compelled to doubt that there were last year precisely 64,000 book-agents, and that precisely 1,000 of them died by their own hands—or tongues. We might have believed in 64,012 book agents, and unsuspectingly rejoiced in the death of 974⅘; but the numbers as stated are too symmetrical to warrant entire confidence.

It has long been known to profound students of criminal statistics that there is a mystery concerning the fate of those unhappy beings who practice the nefarious occupation of book-agency. Unless a book-agent happens to be killed by a railroad accident, or fatally injured by an exceptionally vigorous stroke of lightning, we never hear of his death. The assiduous attendant of funerals has never heard the officiating clergyman remark: "Our dear departed brother was a book-agent." The most exuberant obituary column of a Philadelphia newspaper never contained a notice of the death of a book-agent. Neither the Roman nor the Anglican Prayer-book contains a service for the funeral of book-agents, although special services for the benefit of criminals in prison and those condemned to the gallows are thoughtfully provided. We may search ecclesiastical law in vain for a provision authorizing the burial of book-agents in consecrated ground; and, finally, there is not a medical journal in the country which contains an account of the illness or death of a single member of that pernicious class. The conclusion is inevitable. The book-agent does not die after the manner of other and better men. No physician accelerates his death with drugs; no clergyman tries to awaken his dying conscience, and no undertaker has the satisfaction of placing him where he will do the most good. What, then, is the solution of the mystery which clouds the end of the book-agent?

There is no doubt that to some extent he does commit suicide. It is impossible that he should always be the utterly hardened and pitiless being that he ordinarily seems. At times the sense of his isolation from mankind must overpower him. When he sees women fleeing in terror from his approach, and strong men grasping clubs, and babies falling into sudden colic, he must wish that he had the brand of CAIN, or some other comparatively inoffensive label, carved upon his brazen brow. It is also possible that an occasional book-agent becomes a prey to remorse, as he remembers the consumptive clergyman whom he talked to the borders of the grave, or the lone widow whom he reduced to imbecility by an hour's relentless exposition of the merits of a new cook-book. There is no doubt that remorse and a vivid sense of the last stalwart Irishman to whom he tried to sell Fox's Book of Martyrs have sometimes driven the book-agent to suicide. To suppose, however, that during any one year a thousand book-agents thus evinced the possession of human emotions is manifestly preposterous. Very probably a thousand book-agents did disappear in 1876, but only a very small proportion of them committed suicide. No man, says the Roman poet, can suddenly become a book-agent. When we reflect upon the total elimination of shame and pity which a man must undergo before he can become an open and avowed book-agent, it is evident that only in rare cases does he retain sufficient moral susceptibility to feel the propriety of withdrawing from the world.

It is manifest that the book-agent cannot die as other men die. He has neither home nor friends, and when he is taken ill the landlord of the hotel at which he is stopping cannot, in justice to his fellow-men, permit any one to incur the terrible risk of venturing into the sick-room. No doctor will visit his bedside, for fear that the patient may revive and attempt to sell him a Handbook of Domestic Medicine, and the bravest clergyman, if summoned to attend a dying book-agent, would reply that the unhappy man had put himself beyond the pale of priestly ministrations, and that no clergyman, with a family depending upon him for support, had a right to risk his life or reason by voluntarily entering the presence of a book-agent. Knowing these facts, the book-agent carefully avoids dying in a hotel. When he feels his last hour approaching he takes his implements of crime in his bundle, and seeks the depths of some lonely forest. Then he makes a pillow of the last new humorous book, and, placing his other books by his side, repeats aloud the familiar lecture upon their alleged merits which has so often maddened the strong and crushed the weak. The frightened birds and outraged chipmunks fly from the scene, and not until his lessening voice has finally faded into silence do the cautious crows assemble to discuss the possibility of digesting him.

Such is the manner of the book-agent's death; such is the solution of the mystery of his disappearance. Perhaps, years afterward, a hunter discovers his bleached skeleton, and it figures in the local newspapers as a "Probable Fiendish Crime." Perhaps his bones molder away unseen by human eye. Will not the young take warning by this terrible picture, and forbear to indulge in murder or burglary, or any of those seemingly unimportant crimes which, nevertheless, sear the conscience and drag their votary downward until at last he takes the fatal plunge, and becomes a pitiless, shameless, club-and-stove-lid-defying book-agent.

OBITUARY.

HON. DANIEL HAINES.

A dispatch from New-Hamburg, Sussex County, N. J., announces the death yesterday morning at his residence in that place, of Hon. Daniel Haines of neuralgia of the heart. The deceased was one of the best-known men in New-Jersey, of which State he was twice Governor, once Chancellor, and twice a Justice of the Supreme Court. He was born in New-Jersey in 1800, graduated from Princeton College in 1820, and was admitted to the Bar in 1823. He was the only Supreme Court Justice—except Gov. Bedle—who has ever been elected Governor. By the Legislature of 1843 he was appointed Governor, and Chancellor on Oct. 27 of that year, the Governor being appointed under the old Constitution, and was the last to hold the office before the adoption of the so-called "Constitution of 1844." He was the second Governor under the new Constitution, having been chosen at the November election of 1847, and taking his seat on the second Tuesday of January, 1848, filling the office for three years. On the 15th of November, 1852, he was appointed one of the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court, and was reappointed in 1859, serving 14 years, by his office being also a member of the Court of Errors and Appeals. He served during most of this time in the district embodied in Union and Essex Counties. He was a Trustee of Princeton College at the time of his death, and had been a Trustee of the State Reform School and other charitable and reformatory institutions, in which he had shown a life-long interest. Ex-Gov. Haines leaves a wife whom he married 10 years ago, it being his second marriage.

ALBANY.

ANOTHER RUSH OF BILLS.

A SQUABBLE IN THE ASSEMBLY—MORE CITY BILLS INTRODUCED—THE POLICE DEPARTMENT THE SUBJECT OF THREE—BUSINESS IN THE SENATE—PASSAGE OF A WORTHLESS RESOLUTION.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ALBANY, Friday, Jan. 26, 1877.

The only matter which relieved the routine of business in the Assembly this morning was a sudden but most lively squabble over printing a certain bill relating to pilotage fees. In the ordinary way a bill is not printed until it has been favorably reported from the committee to which it was referred; but if a member requests when he introduces a bill that it be ordered printed, the House may permit this to be done. It seems that when bills are printed on this order, they have to be paid for as extra work, and of this little fact Mr. Husted reminded the House. Then sprang up the squabble referred to, which had progressed some time, when Mr. Alvord put on the previous question. It was ordered, and the agony of Messrs. Purdy and Spinola, who had not had an opportunity to speak more than twice upon the matter, was really pitiable. Fortunately for the former gentleman, whose rage for talking seems almost a mania, had an opportunity to speak again by explaining his vote, and pathetically he reminded his fellow Democrats that they could expect no fair treatment in debate from the majority. This caused a general titter around the house, as it was known that on Wednesday evening a sort of caucus or indignation meeting was held by the rural Democrats, to consider what steps could be taken to bring Messrs. Purdy and Spinola under proper discipline. They both assume to speak for the minority, they have done more talking than all the rest of the Assembly put together, they allow no member of their party to speak if they can get in before him, and generally they have made themselves a public nuisance. Poor Mr. Cozzens, who was selected as leader of the minority, has scarcely had a chance to open his mouth. Under these circumstances the pathetic reminder of Mr. Purdy was extremely funny. The end of the whole dispute was that the bill was ordered printed, and the House adjourned till Monday evening.

There was another heavy rush of bills to-day. Mr. Cowdin introduced one prohibiting the admission to the common schools of the State of children under the age of six years. This prohibition is not to apply to children already admitted.

Mr. Marvin introduced a bill providing that when an action has been commenced against any physician, surgeon, or dentist, for alleged malpractice, the court may, on motion, require a written undertaking on the part of the plaintiff, with one or more sureties, that if the defendant recover judgment, that the plaintiff will pay all costs that may be awarded, and the damages the defendant may sustain in his business and reputation by reason of such action, not exceeding the sum specified in the undertaking, which shall not be less than $100.

When the District Court Clerk's bill came up for reading this morning, Mr. O'Hare moved to recommit, with instructions to the committee to amend by adding a section authorizing the Controller to require of the clerks a sworn statement of the fees which they had received during the time they held office, how much of these they had retained, and ordering that such amount be deducted from the salary due them. Mr. O'Hare said he had been positively informed that two of these clerks had retained all the fees coming into the court. Mr. Strahan thought this was a mistake, but he had no objection to the resolution, and it was adopted without dissent.

A bill authorizing the Board of Police to establish a retiring pension fund was introduced this morning. The Police Commissioners are constituted the officers of the fund. By the fourth section of the bill any member of the force who pays $2 a month to the fund for 10 years shall be entitled at the expiration of that term to be retired on an annual pension equal in amount to 20 per cent. of his salary at the time of his retirement. The board may, by unanimous vote, retire from the force and place upon the pension list, at an annual pension equal to 25 per cent. of his salary, any member of the force who shall have served in it 15 continuous years. Pensions granted under this act shall be inviolate and irrevocable. By section 2 of the bill, the pension fund is made to consist of the following incomes: First, 10 per cent. of the gross amount of the moneys received as fees for licenses; second, all moneys received under the second section of the act; third, all moneys received as voluntary contributions; fourth, all increase derived from interest on investments of the fund.

Mr. O'Hare has brought in a bill which, though of considerable length, may be very briefly summarized. It vests in the Board of Police all the powers of the Board of Health, and abolishes that body. Police Surgeons are to act as Sanitary Inspectors, and to receive for this addition to their present duties a salary of $2,500 per year. All the duties now performed by the subordinates of the Health Department are to be performed by the subordinates of corresponding grades in the Police Department. The Board of Health as constituted under this act is to consist of the Police Board and three Health Commissioners, who shall be physicians. The chief Commissioner to receive a compensation of $6,000 per year, the others nothing. As the bill has not the remotest chance of becoming a law, more extended analysis of its very radical provisions is unnecessary.

Yet another bill relating to the Police Department made its appearance this morning. It authorizes the Board of Police to cause the erection, by contract or otherwise, of cribwork inclosing any lands within the State and belonging to it which are overflowed by salt water; also lands owned by private persons, after consent obtained from the owners; these contracts to be made on such terms as may be advantageous to the City. The Police Commissioners are directed to deposit within this inclosed area the refuse collected from the streets; these deposits are to be covered with clean sand to the grade of the neighboring streets. The Board of Apportionment is to appropriate the funds necessary for the erection of the cribs, and the work is to be done under the Supervision of the Dock Department. The intent of the bill appears to be to give the Police Department authority to make contracts to fill in sunken lots and so forth with the refuse of the streets instead of throwing it into the harbor.

The Judiciary Committee reported a bill to prohibit pool-selling. It is short, and reads as follows:

Any person who shall keep any room or building, or any part or portion of any room or building, for the purpose of recording or registering bets or wagers, or of selling pools; and any person who shall record or register bets or wagers or sell pools upon the result of any trial or contest of skill or endurance, or upon the result of any political nomination, appointment, or election, or being the owner, lessee, or occupant of any such room, building, or part or portion thereof, shall knowingly permit the same to be used or occupied for any of the purposes aforesaid, or shall therein keep, exhibit, or employ any device or apparatus for the purpose of registering or recording such bets or wagers, or the selling of such pools, or shall become the custodian or depository for hire or reward of any money, property, or thing of value staked, wagered, or pledged aforesaid upon any such result, such person shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction, be punished by imprisonment in the County Jail for not more than one year, or by fine not exceeding $2,000, or by both such fine and such imprisonment.

Some bills which have been introduced on this subject have had provisions in them to work a forfeiture to the county of all the moneys wagered, which seems to be a more effective remedy for pool-selling than any other penalty.

THE SENATE.

Senator Harris having failed to get any vote but his own for the resolution offered by him yesterday, indorsing the Congressional scheme for electing a President, this morning submitted a modification of the same, which he succeeding in pressing to a vote. The modified resolution expresses gratification at the fact of a Congressional committee having come to an agreement on a plan, and says that if it is adopted it will be expected that the tribunal thus created will settle the disputed questions in strict accordance with constitutional principles. After an hour's discussion, at the end of which 11 Senators were absent from the Chamber, including Mr. Woodin, the resolution was put to a vote and adopted by 15 to 6. Among the Republicans who voted for it were Baaden, Emerson, Harris, McCarthy, Prince, and Vedder. The resolution amounts to nothing as an indorsement of the propriety of any compromise being made by the Republicans on the Presidential question, and its passage cannot be regarded in any sense as a fair expression of the sentiment of the Senate, since more than one-third of the Senators were absent, and the vote in its favor was less than a majority of the Senate.

Senator Bixby introduced this morning his bill to abolish the Marine Court, the provisions of which were printed in THE TIMES this morning.

Senator Baaden introduced a bill to amend the law of 1875 relative to savings institutions. It reduces the rate of interest to be paid on deposits from 6 to 5 per cent., and requires 15 per cent. instead of 10 per cent., as at present, to be kept on hand, in money or securities immediately available, for the payment of depositors. It requires all savings banks to make semi-annual instead of annual reports, to be made to the Bank Superintendent. In determining the per cent. of surplus held by a bank, its interest-paying stocks shall not be estimated above their cost, nor above their par value, nor above their market value. A penalty of fine and imprisonment, one or both, is imposed on the misappropriation or illegal use by Trustees of the funds of a savings bank.

ATTEMPTED ARSON AND MURDER.

AN ALLEGED CONSPIRACY TO COMMIT BOTH CRIMES—HOW THE SCHEME WAS FRUSTRATED—A DETECTIVE IN THE ROLE OF A TRAMP—THE CONFEDERATES IN THE AFFAIR—ARREST OF A WELL-KNOWN CITIZEN.

From Our Own Correspondent.

HUDSON, N. Y., Friday, Jan. 26, 1877.

A conspiracy to commit the crime of arson and murder has just been brought to light by the arrest of John Newton Hover, a well-known resident of the Town of Livingston, in Columbia County, N. Y., who was apprehended by Detective John M. Crofts, and brought before Police Justice John H. Overhiser, at Hudson, by whom the prisoner was committed to jail to await further examination. The particulars of the conspiracy are as follows:

It is claimed that Hover is in debt to a considerable amount to Abram Post, his uncle, who resides about three miles from the village of Catskill, Greene County, being the same person who was robbed by masked burglars some time ago. For these obligations Post holds notes, or other written evidences, and in order to destroy them, Hover conceived a plot which involved the killing of the entire Post family and the destruction of their residence and its contents. It became necessary, in order to put into execution this plan, to have the assistance of other persons, and Hover accordingly proceeded to Albany and took into his confidence a man named C. E. Ward, to whom he made known his intentions and negotiated for his services. Ward was authorized by Hover to employ such other aid as he might require, and a liberal reward was offered for the accomplishment of the villainous work. In accordance with this arrangement two additional persons were taken into the conspiracy. Operations were commenced, and several visits were made by these hired confederates to the residence of Hover, in Livingston, and also to points contiguous to Livingston Station, on the Hudson River Railroad, where interviews were had and the arrangements perfected with Hover. In the course of these interviews Hover gave the confederates in detail his proposed plan. He suggested that access should be gained to the residence of Mr. Post in the night time, while the members of the family were asleep, and the inmates were to be suffocated by the fumes of brimstone, which was to be burned in the several sleeping apartments occupied by them. After this work had been successfully accomplished, kerosene was to be sprinkled in liberal quantities about the interior of the house, the incendiary torch applied, and the building burned.

For reasons unexplained, but believed to be because funds were not supplied as promised, one of the persons engaged by Ward withdrew from further connection with the conspiracy, and finally Ward himself became frightened, and disclosed the whole plot to Detective Crofts. This officer at once notified Detective George Douglass, of Albany, who set about preparing a trap to ensnare the schemer, Hover. Clothing himself in the attire of a tramp, the detective proceeded to Livingston and held an interview with Hover. He informed that person that he had been substituted in the place of one of the confederates at Albany who had withdrawn from the plan, and was at once taken into Hover's confidence and made acquainted with the scheme. Several interviews were had between Hover and the detective, during one of which Hover went by appointment across the bridge at Catskill village, where Ward was taken into Hover's vehicle and conveyed to a point near enough to the residence of Mr. Post to enable him [Ward] to look over the premises and make himself familiar with the surroundings. Hover was, of course, not aware that Ward had disclosed the scheme. Various sums of money were from time to time paid by Hover to Ward to cover incidental expenses, and a reward of $500 was promised the latter upon the completion of the crime, provided that the work was effectually performed—the house burned and the inmates destroyed. Upon each of these occasions, when money was advanced, the time having been fixed for firing the house of Post, Hover furnished a can of kerosene for that purpose; but it was deemed inexpedient at that time, and the perpetration of the deed was deferred. Matters having thus ripened, and there being no further excuse for delay, it was deemed advisable by the Detectives to arrest Hover. Accordingly a warrant was sworn out, and Crofts yesterday proceeded to Livingston, arrested Hover, and brought him to Hudson. When arrested the prisoner expressed considerable astonishment, but subsequently seemed to feel keenly his unfortunate situation.

A CHIEF JUSTICE IN POLITICS.

AND HOW HE GOT THE WORST OF IT—THE STORY OF A FUGITIVE MEXICAN.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 26.—Ex-President of Mexico Iglesias states that when Lerdo carried the Presidential election in July last in defiance of the Mexican Constitution, which limits the incumbent to one term, he, as Chief Justice, in the absence of a legal election, was entitled under the Constitution to succeed to the Presidency. He put himself in communication with Gen. Diaz, who agreed to assist him to his rights. After Congress, on the 26th of October last, declared Lerdo elected, Iglesias, finding his position dangerous, fled in disguise, with four friends, to Guanajuato, which had declared in his favor.

On Nov. 16 last, Diaz, with 7,000 or 8,000 volunteers, defeated 3,000 regular troops at Tecoac, ending Lerdo's rule. Victory converted Diaz from a partisan to an aspirant. The army followed him in a body, leaving Iglesias without support. On Dec. 21 Diaz had Iglesias brought before him for conference, and declared his intention of following up his revolutionary course, and reap the benefit of his victories. Iglesias and party then struck out for the Pacific coast, reaching Manzanillo on Jan. 13. He says, as regards his future intentions, that he is determined to make every endeavor to secure his constitutional rights. The only two Mexican war vessels in the Pacific were, when he last heard from them, both pledged to his cause. If still true to him, they will arrive here within two weeks, and he will return with them at once. If they fail, to come he will within 20 days leave for either Guaymas or Acapulco, probably the latter, believing that Gen. Alberez will hold that city true to him. If he cannot obtain foothold in any of the Pacific States, Iglesias will go to New-Orleans and hence get into the north-eastern States, which favor his cause. He says that Lerdo, after the battle of Tecoac, found his cause lost, and with a party of 15, including Escobedo, after many dangers reached Signantaijo, in Guerrero. Here the party were taken prisoners by Gen. Alberez, a partisan of Iglesias, but were allowed to escape. No nothing could be gained by holding them. Escobedo was not shot as reported, but with Lerdo and the rest of the party, on the 26th of December, embarked on a German merchant vessel bound for Panama. Lerdo declared to Gen. Alberez that he considered his cause hopeless and would not return to Mexico except as a private citizen.

ACCUSED OF FRAUDULENT BANKRUPTCY

MIDDLETOWN, Jan. 26.—The liabilities of Jacob Hermance, who made an assignment at Ellenville, N. Y., a few days ago, are reported at $300,000; assets nothing. Hermance is accused of fraudulently obtaining indorsements to the amount of $65,000, and raising money thereon. He has not been seen since his assignment. Hermance was one of the directors of the Ellenville Glass Works, which employed 200 hands, and which recently failed for $200,000. By an arrangement with the creditors, and upon the plea of again starting them up, Hermance bid the works in at the sale for $65,000. Indorsements were readily given, but the works did not start. New-York creditors seized $1,400 worth of new goods in store, which Hermance purchased just before assignment. Various parties in Ellenville and Kingston lose from $1,000 to $30,000 each.

CHARGED WITH MURDER.

NEWBURG, Jan. 26.—In the Coroner's inquest on the body of Mrs. Omelia, near Shawangunk, on Wednesday, the jury found that the death was caused by injuries inflicted by her husband, Thomas Omelia. The Coroner committed Omelia to the county jail, and also committed as witness, Peter Omelia, his son, who was previously reported as having fled.

AMUSEMENTS.

MUSICAL.

THE ENGLISH OPERA.

"The Flying Dutchman" was represented at the Academy of Music, last evening, for the first time in this City. The story of this opera and a review of its most important numbers appeared in these columns about two months ago, when, under its original title of "Der Fliegende Holländer," and with the original text, the work was made known to an American audience in Philadelphia. There is therefore small need of going over traveled ground, although something must be done to at least refresh the memory of the reader, if not to deal in detail with the subject anew. "The Flying Dutchman" is one of Wagner's earliest achievements, and is, therefore, marked by very few of the characteristics of his later writings. In the literal sense of the word, it is more tuneful than any of the compositions of maturer years; the forms established by Italian composers are not so systematically disregarded as to be imperceptible, and the orchestration is less elaborate than it has since become, while quite as rich and ornate as the average opera-goer would care to have it. The influence of the Italian masters is often traceable in the melodious outbursts, doubly grateful after the prolonged and severe recitative which pervades the score, and there are brief climaxes which would not be out of place in a lyric drama by Verdi. With such traits, it is not wonderful that Herr Wagner repudiates "The Flying Dutchman," nor is it to be marveled at, either, that, in Germany at least, its music should still be more popular than the more labored productions of his riper genius. The story is a familiar one. Vanderdecken the Flying Dutchman, is doomed to wander upon the ocean, until the self-sacrifice of a loving woman, whom he is allowed to seek out on land once every seven years, ends his punishment. Such a one does Vanderdecken meet in Senta, a sort of dreamy enthusiast who, having long pondered over the fate of the wanderer, determines to wed him. Vanderdecken, touched by her devotion, flies from her. As his ship—a phantom vessel, with crimson sails and a ghostly crew—glides from the shore, Senta springs into the sea and perishes. Then the clouds covering the horizon lift, the noiseless bark disappears, and Vanderdecken and Senta are beheld ascending heavenward, locked in a fond embrace. The unfolding of this legend is accomplished in three acts, the second of which is, lyrically and dramatically, the best. But both the first and second abound in beautiful music, and in music, too, which, considering that Herr Wagner composed it, is readily appreciable. In act the first, the pilot's song, as graceful and symmetrical as an admirer of Rossini even could wish, and wholly escaping a charge of commonplace, is noticeable, and follows almost immediately upon the brief and stormy overture, illustrative of the course of the Flying Dutchman over the roaring deep. Vanderdecken's recitative is a fine bit of declamatory writing, but it requires a different delivery from that which it had yesterday to be effective. The duet between Dalando and Vanderdecken includes some very sweet passages, in which the wanderer's hopes at the prospect of redemption from his fate find expression. The resumption of the pilot's song by the chorus is not a particularly felicitous thought for the finale. The second act is a succession of good points. There is first the spinning chorus, a capital specimen of imitative music, with the fanciful and original interruptions by the maidens' laughter. Senta's ballad has the merit of quaintness, and the prayerful motive suggestive, somewhat, of the prayer in "Zampa"—heightens its weird impressiveness. A pretty and thoroughly Italian cavatina for Erik—the discarded lover—comes next, and then, after a smooth and eloquent introductory trio between Dalando, Vanderdecken, and Senta, follows an admirable duet, in which the height of passionate utterance is reached by the nicest gradations and in measures of extreme pathos and loveliness. A breezy and vigorous chorus of sailors in the opening scene of the last act is the only notable number occuring between that stage of events and the close, but the parting of Vanderdecken and Senta is happily treated, and the culminating tableau is attained to with a vocal and instrumental accompaniment of all requisite sonority. The representation of "The Flying Dutchman," last evening, gave a capital exposition of the drama and its accompaniment. Had Mr. Carleton proved equal to his opening recitative, and had the chorus been occasionally a trifle steadier—two drawbacks to an absolutely perfect performance which will no doubt be missed when the opera is repeated—it would have left nothing to desire. For Miss Kellogg, the occasion was one of an artistic triumph. It is poor praise to say that she is the best Senta we have yet listened to, for it can be conceded that she has never sung or acted with more feeling and skill than throughout the second act of the opera. We do not recall a personation wherein the tone, dramatically and lyrically, was more completely in harmony with the intentions of the dramatist and musician. The spell of the legend was upon the artist throughout. Her eyes never turned from Vanderdecken's picture; her whole soul yearned for him in the words and tones of the ballad in which she lamented his fate; her emotion, when the door opened and Vanderdecken stood before her, was pictured in look and gesture with unmistakable power, and in the soaring themes and impassioned perorations of the grand duet, her singing was worthy the music in its thrilling beauty. Senta does not appear in the first act, and is concerned in the third for a few minutes only; the second act, however, is sufficient to establish a prima donna's claim to very high rank, and the applause and recalls which followed the fall of the curtain made it clear that Miss Kellogg's uncommonly fine performance was not misjudged. Mr. Carleton, who portrayed Vanderdecken, did exceedingly well in the second act. A remarkably good representation of Dalando was contributed by Mr. Conly, and the tenor song—the pilot's verses in the first act—introduced a singer new to us, a Mr. Turner, whose high tenor voice impressed us as of rare quality and no mean strength. The chorus fulfilled its duties passably, and will probably afford entire satisfaction in future. Mr. Behrens kept the orchestra, which might advantageously be increased, well in hand, and the "scenic effects" of "The Flying Dutchman"—consisting chiefly of two large ships which move about with commendable celerity and noiselessness—had been seen to with praiseworthy liberality. An audience that crowded the Academy in every part enjoyed the representation, was generous of plaudits, and summoned the artists before the curtain subsequent to the denouement.

MISCELLANEOUS.

GENERAL MENTION.

"Lemons" will be acted this afternoon at the Fifth Avenue Theatre.

The San Francisco Minstrels offer an afternoon enter -day.

The Aquarium can be visited to-day, as usual, morning, afternoon, and evening.

A day-performance of "Around the World" occurs this afternoon at Niblo's Theatre.

Mr. Heller will give an après midi entertainment at his Wonder Theatre this afternoon.

A matinée representation of "All for Her" may be attended to-day, at Wallack's Theatre.

Mr. Oliver Doud Byron acts in "Across the Continent" at the Eagle Theatre this afternoon.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" will be performed, afternoon and evening, at the New Broadway Theatre, to-day.

A matinée performance of "The Flying Dutchman" will be given at the Academy of Music, to-day.

Mr. Booth appears in "Hamlet" at the Lyceum Theatre this afternoon, and in "Othello" this evening.

An afternoon performance of "The Geneva Cross" may be witnessed this afternoon at the Park Theatre.

A matinée representation will be given at the Grand Opera-house to-day, "Man and Wife" being the attraction.

A NORTH RIVER SCHOONER SUNK.

Yesterday morning, about 5:30 o'clock the schooner Marie Louise, which was on her way from Sing Sing to this City, with a load of hay, ran into a field of ice on the New-Jersey shore near Excelsior Grove. The ice was three inches thick and it crushed in the starboard side of the vessel so that it immediately filled, and in less than 10 minutes sunk. There was a crew of four men on board the Marie Louise, and all but one of them, with Capt. Reynolds, took to the ice. Philip Handy, aged 22 years, who lived in Jersey City, was drowned. Capt. Reynolds and the three men who were with him, after having been four hours on the ice, were taken off in a small boat which had been sent out from Manhattanville.

LATEST NEWS BY CABLE.

THE EASTERN COMPLICATIONS.

ADDITIONAL DETAILS OF THE PROPOSED RUSSIAN MEMORANDUM—REFORMS EXPECTED FROM THE PORTE—FRIENDLY RELATIONS URGED—RUSSIA'S WAR-LIKE PREPARATION—SERVIA'S POSITION.

PARIS, Jan. 26.—It is expected that the Russian circular upon the Eastern question will be issued in a few days.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—The Paris correspondent of a morning paper gives the following additional details of the proposed Russian memorandum: "Russia will further remind the European powers that, in consequence of the refusal of Austria, France, and England to participate in this programme, Russia entered upon the more direct individual intervention, and that the Czar at Moscow announced his intention to act alone if necessary to exact by force from Turkey what Russia knew beforehand could not be otherwise obtained. The memorandum will state that Russia agreed to join the conference because of her profound respect for the pacific wishes of Europe, and, so as to permit the Porte to show the full extent of its refractoriness and ill-will, Russia agreed to reduce her demand to a minimum. Henceforth Russia thinks herself entitled to reckon on the continued collective efforts of Europe, whose accord for common ulterior action has not been destroyed by the conclusion of the conference. The memorandum concludes by stating that Russia proposes shortly to submit a programme to which she hopes to obtain the adhesion of the powers."

The plenipotentiaries who were detained at Constantinople after the close of the conference, rendered important service by persuading the Porte to inaugurate reforms of its own free will, instead of yielding to the advice of the war party to force on a rupture with Russia by immediately attacking Servia.

A telegram from Constantinople says: "Sir Henry Elliott, the British Ambassador, left here to-day. Baron Von Werther, the German Ambassador, and Count Zichy, the Austrian Ambassador, will sail on Saturday. Gen. Ignatieff's departure is still retarded by tempestuous weather in the Black Sea. It is positively stated that the Porte intends introducing of its own accord the reforms demanded by the Powers at the conference."

LONDON, Jan. 27.—A telegram from Constantinople says it is asserted that Midhat Pasha has addressed a conciliatory dispatch to the Princes of Servia and Montenegro, proposing a direct understanding with the Porto before the expiration of the armistice. The Turkish Ambassadors have been ordered to communicate this step to the various cabinets. Midhat Pasha has also ordered the Provincial Governors to maintain friendly relations with the foreign Consuls and residents, and take measures to prevent disorder.

A morning paper's dispatch from Bucharest says it is asserted that the Russian War Office is preparing circulars to inform commanders of the Army entering a friendly country that the inhabitants must be treated like their own countrymen, and any offense against them will be severely punished. This injunction refers to Roumania.

A later Bucharest telegram says matters seem to have taken a serious turn. Russian pioneers have arrived on the Danube, and are examining sites for bridges. Work on the Roumanian Railway and the Summer residence of the Prince has been stopped, as war is believed to be imminent.

The Times' correspondent at Vienna says Russia, before making a formal proposal for common action, has sounded the various powers. None of them, however, seem at present prepared to go beyond the moral pressure which they have already exercised by withdrawing their Ambassadors from Constantinople. This is especially true of Austria. If Russia entertained the idea that Austria would now be more disposed than she was at the time of Soumarakoff's mission, not only to sanction, but eventually to participate in coercive measures. She has probably been undeceived by this time. It is sheer delusion to expect that Russia will allow Servia to make peace separately while the possibility of war between Turkey and Russia exists. Servia will not dare to do so against the will of Russia.

A Belgade dispatch confirms the report that Midhat Pasha has proposed peace negotiations to Servia. The correspondent adds that this fine stroke of diplomacy is to force Russia's hand. The Servians will not dare to refuse the Porte's overtures unless Russia openly promises to support Servia. Hence Russia will be compelled to declare herself or lose the assistance of the Servian Army and Servian territory in case of war.

The Vienna correspondent of a morning paper telegraphs the text of Midhat Pasha's dispatch to Prince Milan. The dispatch concludes as follows: "Convinced that your Highness shares my desire to secure peace, and terminate a regretable and disastrous strife, I frankly invite you personally to conciliation with the Porte by direct negotiations." The special states that the powers have agreed not to interfere with the negotiations between Turkey and Servia unless Turkey's conditions infringe on Servia's rights as established by treaty.

The Pesth correspondent of the same paper says: "I hear from Cettinje that the Montenegrins are enthusiastic for war, and are making all preparations to resume hostilities. Prince Nikita has declared he will never make peace unless he receives additional territory. Official statistics show there are now over 56,000 Bosnian refugees on the Croatian frontier."

A special from Vienna reports that Dervisch Pasha, by command of the Grand Vizier, has made overtures to the Montenegrins at Scutari for an arrangement which would include territorial concessions. The Paris Temps announces that France has refused to furnish the Porte with officers for the gendarmerie.

SPAIN AND ITALY.

BILBAO, Jan. 26.—Great excitement continues in the Basque provinces concerning the conscription, and especially in the mining districts of Somorrostro and Galdames. Several war steam-ships have arrived at Bilbao, and been placed at the disposal of the military authorities.

ROME, Jan. 26.—The congregation of Cardinals which was ordered by the Pope to examine the Clerical Abuses bill, has unanimously declared that it violates the liberty of the clergy. It is stated that the Pope will publicly protest.

Audiences at the Vatican were suspended to-day because of the Pope's indisposition.

AFFAIRS IN FRANCE.

IMPORTATION OF LIVE STOCK PROHIBITED—A MINISTERIAL DISAGREEMENT—GAMBETTA'S RE-ELECTION AS CHAIRMAN OF THE BUDGET COMMITTEE.

PARIS, Jan. 26.—An official decree, promulgated to-day, prohibits the importation into, or transit through, France, of horned cattle, sheep, or goats from Germany, England, Austria, the Danubian Principalities, or Turkey. Importation from other countries is allowed, subject to rigorous preliminary inspection by the Sanitary authorities.

Distressing accounts are received of scarcity in Pondicherry, and famine is considered imminent. The Government will demand a credit of the Chambers for the necessary relief.

The Bien Public to-day says: "Should the Duc Decazes, Minister of Foreign Affairs, retire from the Cabinet in consequence of disagreement with M. Simon, Minister of the Interior and President of the Council, M. Simon will take the foreign portfolio and M. Bardoux become Minister of the Interior."

M. Gambetta has been re-elected President of the Budget Committee. He made a speech denying that the Republicans are disunited. He urged the necessity of the maintenance of a complete agreement, and declared that he would act as a friendly, trusting, fellow-worker of the Ministry.

VERSAILLES, Jan. 26.—The Minister of Colonies has asked the Chamber of Deputies for a grant of $220,000 to meet expenses caused by the famine in Pondicherry.

PENNSYLVANIA INVESTIGATIONS.

PROPOSED EXAMINATION OF THE SEVERAL DEPARTMENTS OF THE STATE GOVERNMENT—THE REPUBLICANS ANIMATED BY A REGARD FOR REFORM.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

HARRISBURG, Jan. 26.—The Senate has taken the first step toward the redemption of the pledges of reform made to the people of the State during the last campaign. That body has been seized with a fancy for investigation, as is evident from the tenor of a resolution adopted to-day. The resolution reads as follows:

Resolved, That the Finance Committee be requested to inquire whether in their judgment any reduction can be made in the salaries and fees of officials and employes in the several departments of the State Government, and whether the number of such officials can be reduced without detriment to the public service; and also to inquire whether any officials or employes have been receiving any fees or salaries not authorized by law.

This resolution is supposed to foreshadow a reduction of force and salaries in all departments of the State Government, as well as a thorough investigation of the management of these several departments. The investigation will be searching and general. The Republicans are animated by a desire to correct abuses where they exist, and to reorganize the State Government on a more economical basis. The Democrats hope to find affairs in such a condition that their cause will be strengthened for next Fall's canvass. Which party is animated by the purest motives is not difficult to decide. Were the Democrats in control of the State Government, and in the ascendency in the Legislature, investigation is the last thing they would think of.

ASHTABULA BRIDGE INQUEST.

TESTIMONY BEFORE THE CORONER'S JURY—THE DEMAND OF A JEWELER ON THE FIRE DEPARTMENT.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 26.—The Leader's Ashtabula special says: James Doran testified—Is employed as track master on the Lake Shore Railroad at Ashtabula; was so employed when the bridge was built across the Ashtabula Creek; said that a double track was laid across the bridge at or about the time it was built, but that only one of them was used for ordinary travel until a double track was laid over the whole road, which was about four or five years ago; has never found the rails on the bridge much out of line; examined the track east of the bridge the morning after the accident, and found no evidence of the train having left the track; could have discovered it easily, if it had done so; has never known a car to run off the track on the bridge; said there were guard rails the whole length of the bridge.

James T. Stebbins testified: Is a jeweler at Ashtabula; was at the bridge about 40 minutes after hearing the alarm; said when he first saw the wreck the frames of the cars were standing; helped some of the wounded up the hill and then went to the cars; heard cries for help from different parts of the wreck at this time, and wondered why water was not being thrown on; got some buckets and men to use them, and then went in search of the fire steamer; found the steamer standing idle, and asked why water was not being thrown on the fire; was answered that they had been told that water was not wanted; told them that people were burning alive, and could be saved by water; they told him that they could not act without orders from their chief; witness asked, "Where is he? we will have water down there or we will hang him," and was answered that they did not know where he was; being exhausted and discouraged, witness left the wreck and went to care for the wounded.

THE RESULT IN SOUTH CAROLINA.

THE PROCEEDINGS AGAINST THE HAYES ELECTORS DISPOSED OF—A JUDICIAL OPINION AS TO THE GOVERNORSHIP TO BE REPORTED.

COLUMBIA, Jan. 26.—The Supreme Court today rendered a decision in the quo warranto proceedings against the Hayes Electors, dismissing the case on the ground that the proceedings were illegally presented on the part of the State instead of the United States. This technical flaw disposes of the Electoral case of this State.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—Hon. R. B. Carpenter, Judge of one of the Circuit Courts of South Carolina, has been here several days writing a decision on some important questions coming before him, and gravely affecting the relations of parties in South Carolina. The main questions involved are as follows:

First, was the Legislature that counted the votes and declared Chamberlain elected a legal Legislature? Second, was Chamberlain's installation as Governor legal? Third, if Chamberlain's installation was not legal, was the installation of Hampton legal? Fourth, if Hampton's inauguration was not legal, does Chamberlain continue to hold the office of Governor under the constitutional provision—"until his successor is chosen and qualified?" Judge Carpenter will return to South Carolina to-night, and his decision will be made early next week.

TERRIBLE KEROSENE EXPLOSION.

THE EXPLOSION FELT TWO MILES AWAY—THE LOSSES—THE CAUSE OF THE ACCIDENT.

BOSTON, Jan. 26.—At 8 o'clock this evening an explosion occurred in the kerosene oil works of B. & F. Jenney, No. 291 West First street, South Boston. The main building was entirely demolished and immediately took fire. The explosion was heard and felt two miles distant. One tank containing 900 barrels of oil took fire, and with the main building was entirely consumed.

At 11:30 o'clock P. M. the fire was completely under control, and it is thought the loss will not exceed $60,000 or $70,000. Many theories are advanced as to the cause of the explosion, the most plausible being that it occurred from the ignition of naphtha gas escaping from the stills. While the fire was in progress a slight explosion occurred which blew up some of the connecting pipes. Ed. P. Haskell and P. J. Kelley, firemen, were dangerously injured, and carried away insensible. J. F. Currie was also badly injured, and several others slightly. Thousands of people were in the vicinity of the fire. A number were on the ice, near Boston wharf, when it gave way, and Nellie Crowley, of No. 117 Essex street, and an unknown boy, were drowned.

SUICIDE OF AN INVALID LADY.

Mrs. Hubershoff, aged 45, wife of Gustav Hubershoff, a real estate broker, having an office at No. 66 Bond street, committed suicide yesterday by taking a dose of arsenic at her residence, No. 87 Allen street. Mrs. Hubershoff was the victim of an incurable complaint, and was in consequence very despondent. She frequently, during the past year, threatened to put an end to her life by taking poison, and with that object always carried about her person a package of arsenic. At 10 o'clock A. M. yesterday she swallowed a portion of the contents of the package, and shortly after her groans attracted the attention of a woman residing in adjacent apartments. Her husband was immediately informed of her condition, and Drs. Bogart, Nichols, and Weissman summoned to attend her. Their services proved of no avail, and she died at 10 o'clock last night.

THE STATUS QUO IN LOUSIANA.

NEW-ORLEANS, Jan. 26. — Representations having been made to the President that in the Parish of Natchitoches, D. Pierson, commissioned District Judge by Mr. Nicholls, took possession of the court-room Jan. 20, and suspended all the Republican officials of the parish, and also, that in Ouachita Parish, officials holding Nicholls' commissions took possession of their respective offices Jan. 17, the Secretary of War telegraphs Gen. Augur that the President has heard both sides, thinks the Ouachita case not a violation of the status quo, but that the Natchitoches case is, and orders him to restore the status as it existed there Jan. 16.

SINGULAR ACCIDENT.

CONCORD, Jan. 26.—Edward T. W. Wright, of Contoocookville, was found this morning lying by the side of the track of the Northern Railroad insensible, and with one of his arms broken and his skull fractured. He will die. It is supposed he fell from some train.

TWO MEN INSTANTLY KILLED.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 26.—W. W. Christian and William Howell were both instantly killed to-day, caused by the bursting of an agitator at the Standard Oil Company's refinery.

THE WEATHER.

INDICATIONS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27—1 A. M.—In the Middle and Eastern States, falling barometer, increasing westerly to southerly winds, probably brisk and high along the coast, warmer, partly cloudy weather, and possibly in the latter and northern portions of the former rain areas, partly turning into snow, succeeded by rising barometer.

IN THIS CITY.

The following record shows the changes in the temperature for the past 24 hours, in comparison with the corresponding date of last year, as indicated by the thermometer at Hudnut's pharmacy:

	1876.	1877.		1876.	1877.
3 A. M.	30°	20°	3:30 P. M.	31°	35°
6 A. M.	24°	20°	6 P. M.	30°	33°
9 A. M.	24°	29°	9 P. M.	29°	33°
12 M.	27°	31°	12 P. M.	29°	31°

Average temperature yesterday ..... 28½°
Average temperature for corresponding date last year ..... 28°

NEW-ORLEANS MERCANTILE REGULATIONS.

NEW-ORLEANS, Jan. 26.—The Merchants' Exchange on Thursday passed resolutions adopting the rules and regulations of the Pork Packers' Association of the West, and this market will hereafter be guided by such rules and regulations between sellers and buyers of hog products. A resolution was also adopted making all sales of provisions, breadstuffs, and other produce from and after the 1st of February payable in cash upon the delivery of the goods, unless otherwise especially agreed upon between the parties interested.

A GERMAN CONSUL SERIOUSLY AFFLICTED.

RICHMOND, Jan. 26.—Frederick Wm. Hannewinckel, Consul to this city for Germany and Austria, was stricken with paralysis this morning, and his life is now despaired of. He has been a resident of Richmond for 36 years, during which time he has been largely engaged in exporting tobacco for a foreign government.

SUSPENDED ANIMATION.

A telegram from Janesville, Wis., to the Chicago Inter-Ocean, dated 23d inst., says: "A case of suspended animation, being that of Miss Anna Hennessy, is creating considerable excitement here. Miss Hennessy had been suffering with the toothache for some time, and, on Thursday, Jan. 18, called upon Dr. McCausey, a dentist of this city, to have her aching tooth extracted. She insisted upon taking chloroform, which Dr. McCausey refused to administer. As he is opposed to using chloroform in his practice, he endeavored to persuade her not to take it, but take it she would, and procured the services of Mr. Woodworth, one of our best physicians, to administer the same, which he did in a very skillful form, from the effects of which she is still lying unconscious at her father's house. She shows signs of life occasionally by throwing her arms over her head in a delirious manner, and apparently gasping for breath, and immediately following her appearance is that of a person dead. She has been in this condition since last Thursday, Jan. 18. Our physicians are doing what they can to relieve the sufferer, and are in hopes of bringing her out of this lethargic condition.

THE PANIC-STRICKEN MULES.

From the Burlington Hawkeye.

Mr. Abram Hewitt was the innocent cause of a very singular accident one day last week. He was driving out in a sleigh, when he met a farmer driving into the city with a team of mules. The mules stopped suddenly as Mr. Hewitt approached, and gazed steadily in his face for a second, and then, turning deadly pale, they jumped out of their harness, and scrambling hastily into their owner's wagon, curled up under the seat, and could not be induced to come out until dark.

A PASTORAL CALL DECLINED.

ALBANY, Jan. 26.—Rev. Dr. Bridgman, Pastor of the Emmanuel Baptist Church of this city, has declined the call of the Madison Avenue Baptist Church of New-York.

AS THE LIVER is easily disordered, and a great deal of bilious distress apt to prevail during the Spring, Dr. JAYNE'S SANATIVE PILLS are of seasonable efficacy, as they restore the liver to healthy action, and remove all biliousness.—Advertisement.

A CLEAN, ROSY BABY, just out of the bath-tub, is one of the most beautiful objects in nature. Yet how many are ultimately killed by the many deleterious scented soaps in use. B. T. BABBITT'S TOILET SOAP is not only the most agreeable, but a perfect safeguard in this respect. It can be trusted as the most innocent as well as pleasant of toilet soaps.—Advertisement.

Holmes' Burglar Alarm Telegraph Company, No. 571 Broadway. Within a few months we have arrested two burglars in the store of J. Thornton, Walker st.; one in Bacon & Eaton's, Walker st., and two in H. B. Claflin's. We never fail. We jingle no bell at our door. We appropriate no 600 names from other parties to our circulars.

First Premium

Awarded by Centennial Exposition to ELECTRO SILICON. The best article for cleaning and polishing silverware and household utensils. Sold by druggists, house furnishers, jewelers, and grocers.

While Parker's Ginger Tonic subdues irritation of the stomach and bowels it is equally efficacious in its effect on the lungs. As a cure for coughs, colds, and sore throat it is without exception superior to any and all others. A teaspoonful taken hourly will cure the worst cold in two days.

Graduated Chest and Lung Protectors are the best undergarments for securing sound lungs, health and comfort. Sold everywhere. Mailed, $2. ISAAC A. SINGER, manufacturer, No. 704 Broadway.

Everdell's, 302 Broadway, elegant Wedding and Ball Cards, Foreign Note Papers, Coat of Arms, &c., lowest prices.

Pomeroy's Trusses—By far the Best in Use. Ask your physician. POMEROY TRUSS CO., 746 Broadway.

MARRIED.

COWING—MATCHITT.—On Thursday, Jan. 25, at Bedford, Westchester County, by Rev. Leo Luquer, assisted by Rev. Baucroft, JAMES R. COWING to EMILY, daughter of the late Ridley J. Matchitt, of Montreal.

LARY—HALL.—On Wednesday, Jan. 24, at the residence of the bride's parents, by Rev. William Day, Mr. SEYMOUR M. LARY, of Jersey City Heights, and Miss JENNIE R. HALL, daughter of Wm. H. Hall, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.

MURRY—BAILEY.—On the 25th inst., at the residence of the bride's parents, by Rev. Dr. Taylor, assisted by Rev. William H. H. Murry, of Boston, CHANCEY D. MURRY to EMMA J. BAILEY, daughter of Charles D. Bailey, Esq.

OGDEN—BOWMAN.—At St. Stephen's Church, Wilkesbarre, Jan. 25, 1877, by Rev. Henry L. Jones, H. CORDIT OGDEN to LIZZIE C., daughter of the late Col. A. H. Bowman of Wilkesbarre.

SHERMAN—DE GRAUW.—In Brooklyn, Thursday, Jan. 25, 1877, at the residence of the bride's parents, by Right Rev. A. N. Littlejohn, D. D., Bishop of the Diocese of Long Island, CHARLES A. SHERMAN, of New-York, to Miss MARY LOUISA, only daughter of James A. DeGrauw.

DIED.

AVERILL.—Jan. 26, suddenly, JEANETTE H., wife of Horace Averill, aged 65 years.

Relatives and friends are invited to attend the funeral, at 1 o'clock P. M., Sunday, Jan. 28, from her late residence, No. 151 Washington st., Brooklyn.

☞ Albany and Hartford papers please copy.

BUTLER-SHAW.—On Friday morning, Jan. 26, suddenly, of scarlet fever, CHARLIE SHAW, youngest son of Edward and Sarah A. Butler, aged 6 years 9 months and 6 days.

Relatives and friends of the family are invited to attend the funeral from the residence of his parents, No. 134 Forrest st., Jersey City Heights, on Sunday next at 3 o'clock P. M. Train for Bergen av, leaves foot of Liberty st. at 2 o'clock.

EDWARDS.—On Jersey City Heights, Jan. 24, JENNIE LOUISE, daughter of John S. and Eliza D. Edwards, aged 8 years 11 months and 3 days.

Relatives and friends are respectfully invited to attend the funeral from the First Presbyterian Church, corner Clinton and Hague sts., West Hoboken, N. J., on Saturday morning at 11 o'clock. Take Palisade av. cars from Hobokenl Ferry to Hague st.

FERGUSON.—At the residence of his parents, Cincinnati, Ohio, of consumption, WILLIAM MOORE FERGUSON, eldest son of Hon. E. A. Ferguson.

HURLBUT.—At Yokohama, on Jan. 25, 1877, in the 40th year of his age, GEORGE HURLBUT, son of the late George Hurlbut, of Brooklyn.

MARTIN.—At Bloomfield, N. J., Jan. 26, 1877, LAWRENCE MARTIN, in the 52d year of his age.

Funeral from the Methodist Episcopal Church on Monday at 3 P. M.

MARTIN.—At Summit, N. J., on Wednesday, 24th inst., ROBERT NEVINS, son of Archer N. and Mary T. Martin, aged 19 months and 24 days.

Funeral on Saturday, 27th inst., at 12 o'clock. Train leaves Christopher Street Ferry at 10:15 o'clock.

MILLER.—At Englewood, N. J., on Wednesday, Jan. 24, LIVINGSTON K. MILLER, counselor at law, in the 54th year of his age.

Relatives and friends are invited to attend the funeral at the Englewood Presbyterian Church on Saturday, the 27th inst., at 10 o'clock. Train leaves per Northern Railroad of New-Jersey from foot of Chambers st. at 8:30 and 23d st. at 8:15.

MELLEN.—On Friday, the 26th inst., of scarlet fever, A. PERCY MELLEN, aged 5 years and 2 months, eldest son of A. Mellen, Jr., and S. Evelyn Mellen.

MORGAN.—At Washington Heights, Jan. 26, JUDITH P., wife of Gen. M. R. Morgan, United States Army.

Notice of funeral hereafter.

NEGUS.—In Jersey City, on Friday, Jan. 26, OSCAR

FINANCIAL AFFAIRS.

SALES AT THE STOCK EXCHANGE—JAN. 26.

SALES BEFORE THE CALL—10 A. M.

$10,000 N. J. C. Conv. 73½ | 100 North-w. Pf..... 57¾
300 Pacific Mail..... 25⅝ | 500 Lake Shore..... 57¾
40 N. Y. Cen. Rr..... 102¾ | 300 do.....b2. 57⅝
100 Erie Railway..b2. 10¼ | 300 do.....s3. 57¾
500 West. Un..... 77⅛ | 1000 do..... 57⅞
300 do.....s3. 77½ | 1200 do..... 57¾
700 do..... 77⅝ | 100 do.....c 57⅝
200 do.....s3. 77½ | 200 do.....s3. 57¾
400 do..... 77½ | 100 do..... 57¼
100 do..... 77½ | 100 do.....b3. 57¼
300 do.....s3. 77⅝ | 1400 do.....s3 57⅝
900 do..... 77½ | 100 do.....s3. 57
2000 do.....s3. 77¼ | 400 do..... 57
500 do..... 77¼ | 100 do.....c 57
300 do.....s3. 77⅝ | 500 do.....b3. 57⅜
700 do.....s3. 77⅜ | 300 do..... 57⅜
700 do.....s3. 77½ | 200 Cen. of N. J..... 93¾
100 do..... 77⅜ | 100 do.....c 93¾
300 do..... 77¼ | 100 do..... 93½
100 do..... 77¼ | 100 do..... 93¼
100 do..... 77¼ | 400 do..... 93¼
200 Rock Island..... 102 | 500 do..... 93¼
500 do..... 102¼ | 200 do..... 93¾
900 Mich. Cen..... 49⅝ | 500 do..... 93⅞
100 do.....s3. 49⅝ | 100 do..... 93¾
500 do..... 49⅝ | 100 do..... 93¾
100 do.....s3. 49⅝ | 200 do..... 93⅞
600 do..... 49⅜ | 100 D., L. & W..... 92
100 do..... 49⅜ | 1100 do..... 92½
1000 St. Paul. Pf..... 48⅜ | 980 do..... 92¼
500 do..... 47¾ | 100 Ohio & Miss...b3. 7⅜
1300 do..... 47⅞ | 100 do..... 7⅜

GOVERNMENT STOCKS—10:15 AND 11:30 A. M.

$10,000 U. S. 6s, '81, B..... 114⅛ | $10,000 U. S. 5-20 C., '67..... 113⅞
30,000 do...b.c.s3.114 | 23,000 do..... 12.114
10,000 U. S. 6s, '81, C..... 114¼ | 10,000 U. S. 5s 10-40 do..... 114¼
10,000 U. S. 5-20 B..... 114⅜ | 3,000 do..... 12.114
$65,800 U. S. 5-20 C., '65 N..... 12.110⅜ | 50,000 U. S. 5s, '81, B..... 111
$6,850 U. S. 5-20 C., '65 N..... 12.110⅜ | 20,000 U. S. 5s, '81, C..... b.c.112⅜
2,500 do.....b.c.110⅞ | 10,000 do.....b.c.112⅜

FIRST BOARD—10:30 A. M.

1,000 N. J. Cen. Rr..s.109 | 100 Mich. Cen.....b.c. 49⅜
2,000 M. & St. P. Pf.s.b. 117½ | 100 do.....s3. 49⅜
2,000 M. & St. P. 1st | 100 do.....s3. 49⅝
La C. Div.... 95 | 100 do..... 49⅝
1,000 M. & St. P., C | 100 do.....s3. 49½
& M. D..... 94½ | 1000 do.....s3. 49¾
1,000 Mil. & St. P. | 100 do.....c 49¾
c.s.f..... 79⅝ | 1100 do..... 49¾
5,000 do..... 79½ | 100 do..... 49¼
2,000 do.....b.c. 79¾ | 100 D., L. & W.....b.c. 92
2,000 Long Dock..... 105¼ | 300 do.....s3. 57
5,000 L. S. 1st, con. R. 107 | 100 do.....b3. 57
5,000 North Mo. 1st. 97¼ | 100 do.....s10. 56⅞
1,000 Cen. Pac. 1st, S. J. Br..... 92½ | 1000 do.....s3. 56⅞
1,000 West. Pac..... 101½ | 200 do..... 56⅞
7,000 Un. Pac. 1st..103⅞ | 800 do.....s3. 56¾
1,000 Un. Pac. 1s, '96. 102⅜ | 100 C. & N. W. Pf.b.c. 87½
1,000 Un. Pac. s. f.... 97½ | 100 do..... 86⅜
1,000 Pac. of M. 2d... 90 | 500 do.....b3. 56¾
10,000 N. Y. C. 1st, R. & A.....s.c. 106½ | 100 do..... 56¾
5,000 C., C. & I. C. 1st. 98 | 700 do.....b3. 56⅝
1,000 T. & W. 1st..... 104⅝ | 300 do.....s10. 56⅞
4,000 do..... 104¾ | 700 do..... 56⅝
15,000 T. & W. 2d..... 70 | 100 Ill. Cent..... 66
2d.....b3. 75 | 30 do.....b.c. 66
3,000 R., C. R. & M. 1st..... 40 | 200 do..... 55⅝
5,000 Ut. W. 1st. '83. 104⅞ | 100 Chi. & N. W.b.c. 38½
17,000 do..... 105 | 100 C. & N. W. Pf.b.c. 87⅜
5,000 D. & H. C. 7s, '94..... 97 | 100 C. of N. J.....c. 33½
3,000 D. & H. R. '91. 102½ | 300 do..... 33⅜
1,000 D. & H. R. 1st. 102½ | 200 do.....c. 33¼
1,000 Can. So. 1st, cp. on..... 52 | 100 do.....c. 33¼
2,000 W. U. C. 1900. 106 | 100 do..... 33
69 Am. Ex. Bank.... 107½ | 200 do.....s3. 32⅞
40 German Am. Bk.. 99 | 200 do..... 32⅞
100 Del. & Hud.....s60. 65½ | 500 do..... 32¾
100 do.....b.c. 66¾ | 100 do..... 32¾
200 do..... 66½ | 200 do..... 32¾
100 do..... 66¾ | 100 do..... 32¾
100 do..... 66⅝ | 100 do..... 32¾
100 do.....s10. 66¼ | 100 C., M. & St. P.b.c. 18
100 Del., L. & W.....b.c. 87½ | 100 do..... 17⅞
100 do..... 87⅝ | 100 do..... 17⅞
200 do.....s10. 87¼ | 100 do..... 17⅞
100 do..... 87⅛ | 100 C., M. & St. P. Pf.b.c. 47⅞
100 do..... 87⅜ | 100 do.....s10. 47¾
100 do..... 87½ | 100 do..... 47¾
100 do..... 87⅝ | 100 do..... 47⅝
100 do..... 87¾ | 100 do..... 47⅝
100 do..... 87⅞ | 100 do..... 47⅝

SHIPPING.

WHITE STAR LINE.
FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.
UNITED STATES MAIL.

The steamers of this line take the Lane Routes, recommended by Lieut. Maury, U. S. N., going south of the Banks on the passage to Queenstown all the year round.

CELTIC.....SATURDAY, Feb. 3, 8:30 A. M.
ADRIATIC.....SATURDAY, Feb. 10, at 3 P. M.
BRITANNIC.....SATURDAY, Feb. 24, 2 P. M.
CELTIC.....SATURDAY, March 10, at 2 P. M.

From White Star Dock, Pier No. 53 North River.

These steamers are uniform in size and unsurpassed in appointments. The saloon, staterooms, smoking and bath rooms are amidships, where the noise and motion are least felt, affording a degree of comfort hitherto unattainable at sea.

Rates—Saloon $80 and $100, gold; return tickets on favorable terms; steerage, $30.

For insertion of plans and other information apply at the Company's offices, No. 37 Broadway, New-York.
R. J. CORTIS, Agent.

CUNARD LINE B. & N. A. R. M. S. P. CO.
NOTICE.

With the view of diminishing the chances of collision the steamers of this line take a specified course for all seasons of the year.

On the outward passage from Queenstown to New-York or Boston, crossing meridian of 50 at 43 latitude, or nothing to the north of 43.

On the homeward passage, crossing the meridian of 41 at 42, or nothing to the north of 43.

FROM NEW-YORK FOR LIVERPOOL AND QUEENSTOWN.
ABYSSINIA...WED., Jan. 31 | PARTHIA...WED., Feb. 14
ALGERIA...WED., Feb. 7 | CHINA...WED., Feb. 21

Steamers marked * do not carry steerage passengers.

Cabin passage, $80, $100, and $130, gold, according to accommodation. Return tickets on favorable terms.

Steerage tickets to and from all parts of Europe at very low rates. Freight and passage office, No. 4 Bowling Green.
CHAS. G. FRANCKLYN, Agent.

GREAT SOUTHERN
FREIGHT AND PASSENGER LINE.
SAILING FROM PIER NO. 29 NORTH RIVER.
WEDNESDAYS and SATURDAYS at 3 P. M.
FOR CHARLESTON, S. C., FLORIDA, THE SOUTH, AND SOUTH-WEST.

CITY OF ATLANTA.....SATURDAY.....Jan. 27
GEO. CLYDE.....WEDNESDAY.....Jan. 31

SUPERIOR PASSENGER ACCOMMODATIONS.

Insurance to destination one-half of one per cent.

Goods forwarded free of commission. Passenger ticketed and bills of lading issued at all stations on the line.

JAMES W. QUINTARD & CO., Agents,
No. 177 West st., corner Warren.

OR W. P. CLYDE & CO., No. 6 Bowling Green.
OR BENTLEY & HASELL, General Agents.
Great Southern Freight Line, 317 Broadway.

STATE LINE.

NEW-YORK TO GLASGOW, LIVERPOOL, DUBLIN, BELFAST, AND LONDONDERRY.

These first-class full-powered steamers will sail from Pier No. 42 North River, foot of Canal st.

STATE OF GEORGIA.....Thursday, Jan. 25
STATE OF INDIANA.....Thursday, Feb. 1
STATE OF PENNSYLVANIA.....Thursday, Feb. 8
STATE OF VIRGINIA.....Thursday, Feb. 23

First cabin, $60, $65, and $70, according to accommodation; return tickets, $110, $125. Second cabin, $45; return tickets, $80. Steerage at lowest rates. Apply to
AUSTIN BALDWIN & CO., Agents,
No. 72 Broadway, New-York.

STEERAGE tickets at No. 45 Broadway, and at the company's pier, foot of Canal st., North River.

LIVERPOOL AND GREAT WESTERN STEAM COMPANY. (LIMITED.)
LIVERPOOL (via Queenstown),
CARRYING THE UNITED STATES MAIL.

TUESDAY.

Leaving Pier No. 46 North River as follows:

WISCONSIN.....Jan. 30, at 3 P. M.
WYOMING.....Feb. 6, at noon
DAKOTA.....Feb. 13, at 3 P. M.
NEVADA.....Feb. 20, at 10 A. M.
IDAHO.....Feb. 27, at 3 P. M.
MONTANA.....March 6, at 10 A. M.

RATES OF PASSENGERS REDUCED.

Steerage, $26; intermediate, $40; cabin, $65 to $80, according to state-room. Offices, No. 29 Broadway.
WILLIAMS & GUION.

ATLAS MAIL LINE.

BIMONTHLY SERVICE TO JAMAICA, HAITI, COLOMBIA, and ISTHMUS, and to PANAMA and SOUTH PACIFIC PORTS (via Aspinwall). First-class full-powered iron screw steamers, from Pier No. 51 North River.

For HAYTI, COLOMBIA, ISTHMUS OF PANAMA, and SOUTH PACIFIC PORTS (via Aspinwall.)

ALPS.....Jan. 13
ETNA.....Jan. 27

For KINGSTON (Jam.) and HAYTI.

ATLAS.....Feb. 8

Superior first-class passenger accommodations.
PIM, FORWOOD & CO., Agents,
No. 56 Wall st.

NORTH GERMAN LLOYD.
STEAM-SHIP LINE BETWEEN NEW-YORK, SOUTHAMPTON, AND BREMEN.
Company's Pier, foot of 2d st., Hoboken.

AMERICA.....Sat., Feb. 3 | ODER.....Sat., Feb. 17
WESER.....Sat., Feb. 3 | RHEIN.....Sat. Feb. 10

RATES OF PASSAGE FROM NEW-YORK TO SOUTHAMPTON AND HAVRE OR BREMEN.

First cabin.....$100 gold
Second cabin.....60 gold
Steerage.....30 currency

Return tickets at reduced rates. Prepaid steerage certificates, $32 currency. For freight or passage apply to OELRICHS & CO., No. 2 Bowling Green.

INMAN LINE.—MAIL STEAMERS.
FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.

CITY OF BERLIN, Saturday, Jan. 27, 12 P. M.
CITY OF CHESTER, Saturday, Feb. 17, at 7:30 A. M.
CITY OF RICHMOND, Saturday, March 3, at 8 A. M.

CABIN, $80 and $100, Gold. Return tickets on favorable terms. STEERAGE, $24, Currency. Drafts at lowest rates.
Saloons, state-rooms, Smoking, and Bath-rooms, amidships.
JOHN G. DALE, Agent,
Nos. 15 and 33 Broadway, N. Y.

ONLY DIRECT LINE TO FRANCE.
THE GENERAL TRANSATLANTIC COMPANY'S MAIL STEAMERS BETWEEN NEW-YORK AND HAVRE,
Calling at PLYMOUTH (G. B.) for the landing of Passengers.

Will sail from Pier No. 42 North River, foot of Morton st., every alternate Saturday, beginning with:
FRANCE, Trudelle.....Saturday, Jan. 27, at 3 P. M.
For particulars address
LOUIS DE BEBIAN, Agent, No. 55 Broadway.

NATIONAL LINE—Piers 44 and 51 North River.
FOR LONDON.
HOLLAND.....SATURDAY, Jan. 27, 2:30 P. M.
FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.
Spain...Jan. 27, 2:30 P. M. | Egypt.....Feb. 3, at 9 A. M.

Cabin and steerage passage, and drafts from £1 upward, issued at very low rates. Company's offices No. 69 Broadway. F. W. J. HURST, Manager.

FOR SAVANNAH GA.,
THE FLORIDA PORTS,
AND THE SOUTH AND SOUTH-WEST.

GREAT SOUTHERN FREIGHT AND PASSENGER LINE, CENTRAL RAILROAD OF GEORGIA, AND ATLANTIC AND GULF RAILROAD.

WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY.

SAN JACINTO, Capt. HAZARD, SATURDAY, Jan. 27, Pier 43 North River, 3 P. M. GEO. YONGE, Agt., 409 Broadway.

M. LIVINGSTON, Capt. MALLORY, WEDNESDAY, Jan. 31, Pier No. 43 North River, 3 P. M. GEO. YONGE, Agent, No. 409 Broadway.

SAN SALVADOR, Capt. NICKERSON, SATURDAY, Feb. 3, Pier 43 North River, 3 P. M. GEO. YONGE, Agt., 409 Broadway.

GENERAL BARNES, Capt. CRESSMAN, WEDNESDAY, Feb. 7, Pier 16 East River, 3 P. M. MURRAY, FERRIS & CO., Agts., 62 South st.

Insurance ONE-HALF PER CENT. Superior accommodations for passengers. Through rates and bills of lading to Florida, connecting with Central R. R. of Georgia, Atlantic and Gulf Railroad, and Florida steamers City Point and Dictator; also, with the steamer J. R. SCUDLER, which has been placed on the inside route from Savannah to Florida, and offers unsurpassed accommodations.

C. D. OWENS, Agent A. & G. R. R.
GEORGE YONGE, Agent C. R. R. of Ga.,
No. 315 Broadway. No. 409 Broadway.

FLORIDA.

Caution to travelers! Great reduction in fare via the inland route, from Savannah to all Florida ports. Only $2 to Jacksonville. Meals and state-rooms extra. The elegant steamer J. R. SCHEUDLER makes close connections with all Savannah steamers, thus forming the quickest and most agreeable route as well as the lowest in fare. Accommodations for passengers unsurpassed. Travelers are cautioned against purchasing through ticketed via any other route.

PACIFIC MAIL AND PANAMA TRANSIT
STEAM-SHIP LINES.

FOR CALIFORNIA, JAPAN, CHINA, AUSTRALIA, NEW-ZEALAND, BRITISH COLUMBIA, OREGON, &c.
Sailing from Pier No. 42 North River.

For SAN FRANCISCO, via ISTHMUS OF PANAMA.
Steam-ship ACAPULCO.....Wednesday, Jan. 31
connecting for Central America and South Pacific ports.

From SAN FRANCISCO to JAPAN and CHINA.
Steam-ship ALASKA.....Thursday, Feb. 1
From San Francisco to Sandwich Islands, Australia, and New-Zealand.
Steam-ship ZEALANDIA.....Wednesday, Jan. 31

For freight or passage apply to
WM. P. CLYDE & CO., or H. J. BULLAY, Superintendent, No. 6 Bowling Green. Pier No. 42 N. R., foot Canal st.

NEW-YORK AND HAVANA
DIRECT MAIL LINE.

Those first-class steamships sail regularly at 3 P. M., from Pier No. 13 North River as follows:

CLYDE.....SATURDAY, Feb. 3
CUBA.....SATURDAY.....Feb. 10

Accommodations unsurpassed. For freight or passage apply to WM. P. CLYDE & CO., No. 6 Bowling Green. MORELLET, LELING & CO., Agents in Havana.

NEW-YORK, HAVANA, AND MEXICAN MAIL S. S. LINE.
Steamers leave Pier No. 3 North River at 3 P. M.
FOR HAVANA DIRECT.

CITY OF MEXICO.....Saturday, Jan. 27
CITY OF VERA CRUZ.....Wednesday, Jan. 31
CITY OF NEW-YORK.....Wednesday, Feb. 7
FOR VERA CRUZ AND NEW-ORLEANS.
La Habana, Progreso, Campeachy, Tuxpan, and Tampico.
CITY OF MERIDA.....Saturday, Jan. 27

Steamers will leave New-Orleans Feb. 2 and Feb. 23 for Vera Cruz and all the above ports.

For freight or passage apply to
PALMYRA ANDREW & SONS, Nos. 31 and 33 Broadway.

HAMBURG American Packet Company's Line for PLYMOUTH, CHERBOURG, and HAMBURG.
IRELAND.....Feb. 1 | SCHILLER.....Feb. 15
FRISIA.....Feb. 8 | PRINCE BISMARCK.....Feb. 22

Rates of passage to Plymouth, London, Cherbourg, Hamburg, and all points in Saxony, First Cabin, $100 gold; Second Cabin, $60 gold; Steerage, $30, currency.
GUNTHER BROS. & CO., G. H. RICHARD & SONS,
General Agents, General Passenger Agents,
61 Broadway, N. Y. 61 Broadway, N. Y.

SHIPPING.

ANCHOR LINE U. S. MAIL STEAMERS.
NEW-YORK AND GLASGOW.

Ethiopia...Jan. 27, 2 P. M. | Bolivia....Feb. 10, 2 P. M.
Victoria...Feb. 3, 8 A. M. | Alsatia....Feb. 17, 8 A. M.

TO GLASGOW, LIVERPOOL, OR DERRY.

Cabins $65 to $80, according to accommodations; intermediate, $35; Steerage $28.

NEW-YORK AND LONDON.

Elysia...Jan. 27, 2 P. M. | Italia....Feb. 10, 2 P. M.

Cabins, $55 to $70; Steerage, $28. Cabin excursion tickets at reduced rates. Drafts issued for any amount at lowest rates. Company's Pier Nos. 20 and 21, North River, N. Y.
HENDERSON BROTHERS,
Agents, No. 7 Bowling Green.

RED STAR STEAM-SHIP LINE.
Appointed to carry the Belgian and United States mails. The following steamers are appointed to sail
TO ANTWERP.

From Philadelphia. | From New-York.
NEDERLAND.....Jan. 22 | SWITZERLAND.....Jan. 10
VADERLAND.....Feb. 15 | KENILWORTH.....Feb. 3

Lowest passage in currency.

First Cabin, $90; Second Cabin, $60; Steerage, $26.
PETER WRIGHT & SONS, General Agents, Philad'a.
No. 52 Broadway, New-York.

JOHN McDONALD, No. 8 Battery place, New-York.

AMERICAN STEAM-SHIP LINE
Between Philad'a & Liverpool, calling at Queenstown.
Thursdays from Philad'a, Wednesdays from Liverpool.

Steamers to sail from Philadelphia as follows:
*Lord Clive.....Jan. 18 | *City of New-York...Feb. 8
Ohio.....Jan. 25 | Indiana.....Feb. 15
Pennsylvania.....Feb. 1 | Illinois.....Feb. 22

Price of passage in currency:
Cabin, $75 to $100. Intermediate, $40. Steerage, $28.
PETER WRIGHT & SONS, Gen. Agents, Philad'a.
No. 52 Broadway, New-York.

JOHN McDONALD, No. 8 Battery place, New-York.

RAILROADS.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.
GREAT TRUNK LINE
AND UNITED STATES MAIL ROUTE.

Trains leave New-York, via Desbrosses and Cortlandt Streets Ferries, as follows:

Express for Harrisburg, Pittsburg, the West and South, with Pullman Palace Cars attached, 8:30 A. M., 8 and 8:30 P. M., daily.

For Williamsport, Lock Haven, Corry, and Erie, at 8:30 P. M., connecting at Corry for Titusville, Petroleum Centre, and the Oil Regions. For Williamsport and Lock Haven, 8:30 A. M.

For Baltimore, Washington, and the South, "Limited Washington Express" of Pullman Parlor Cars daily, except Sunday, 9:30 A. M.; arrive Washington 4:10 P. M. Regular at 8:40 A. M., 1, 6, and 9 P. M. Sundays, 8:40 A. M. and 9 P. M.

Express for Philadelphia, 7:30, 8:30, 8:40, (9:30 Limited,) 10:30 A. M., 1, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8:30, 9 P. M., and 12 night. Sunday, 8:30 A. M., 5, 6, 7, 8:30, and 9 P. M.

Emigrant, accommodation, 7 P. M.

Accommodation for Trenton, 7 A. M., 2 and 4:10 P. M.

For trains to Newark, Elizabeth, Rahway, Princeton, Trenton, Perth Amboy, Flemington, Belvidere, and other points, see local schedules at all Ticket Offices.

Trains arrive: From Pittsburg, 6:20 and 10:30 A. M., and 10:20 P. M. daily; 10:10 A. M. and 6:50 P. M. Sundays. Monday, From Washington and Baltimore, 6:40, 9:50 A. M., 4:10, 5:10, and 10:30 P. M. Sunday 6:30, 9:50 A. M. From Philadelphia, 5:05, 6:20, 6:30, 9:50, 10:10, 11:50 A. M., 2:10, 4:10, 5:10, 8:50, 9:40, 11:10, and 10:20 P. M. Sunday 5:05, 6:20, 6:30, 9:50, 11:50, A. M., 6:50, 10:10, and 10:20 P. M.

Ticket Offices, Nos. 526 and 944 Broadway, No. 1 Astor House, and foot of Desbrosses and Cortlandt streets; Nos. 4 Court st., Brooklyn; Nos. 114, 116, and 118 Hudson st., Hoboken; Depot, Jersey City. Emigrant Ticket Office, No. 8 Battery place.

FRANK THOMSON, D. M. BOYD, Jr.,
General Manager. General Passenger Agent.

TO PHILADELPHIA
via
PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.
THE OLD-ESTABLISHED ROUTE AND SHORT LINE between
NEW-YORK AND PHILADELPHIA.

14 Through Trains each way daily; 3 Depots in Philadelphia, 2 in New-York.

4 Tracks, the most improved Equipment, and the Fastest Time consistent with absolute safety.

Express Trains leave New-York, via Desbrosses and Cortlandt streets Ferries, as follows:

7:30, 8:30, 9:40, 10:30 Limited,) 10:30 A. M., 1, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8:30, 9 P. M., and 12 Midnight. Sunday, 8:30 A. M., 5, 6, 7, 8:30, and 9 P. M.

Returning, trains leave Philadelphia 3:20, 8:30, 7, 7:30, 8:30, and 11 A. M., (Limited Express, 1:35 P. M.,) 1:40, 4, 5:30, 7, and 7:35 P. M., and 12 Midnight. On Sunday, 3:20, 8:30, 7, 8:30 A. M., 4, 7, 7:35 P. M., and 12 Midnight.

Ticket Offices, Nos. 526 and 944 Broadway, No. 1 Astor House, and foot of Desbrosses and Cortlandt sts.; No. 4 Court st., Brooklyn; Nos. 114, 116, and 118 Hudson st., Hoboken; Depot, Jersey City. Emigrant Ticket Office, No. 8 Battery place.

FRANK THOMSON, D. M. BOYD, Jr.,
General Manager. General Passenger Agent.

NEW-YORK CENTRAL AND HUDSON RIVER RAILROAD.—Commencing Dec. 26, 1876, through trains will leave Grand Central Depot:

7:15 A. M., Western and Northern Express with drawing-room cars to Canandaigua.

8:30 A. M., special Chicago and St. Louis Express, with drawing-room cars to Rochester and Buffalo. Also, to St. Louis.

11:00 A. M., Northern and Western Express.

3:30 P. M., special Albany, Troy and Western Express. Arrives at Buffalo 7:10 A. M.

5:00 P. M., Express, with sleeping cars, for Watertown and Canandaigua. Also for Montreal via Plattsburg.

8:30 P. M., Pacific Express, daily, with sleeping cars, for Rochester, Niagara Falls, Buffalo, Cleveland, Indianapolis, and Louisville. Also for Chicago, via both D. L. & W. and M. C. Railroads, and to Montreal via St. Albans.

11:00 P. M., Express, with sleeping cars, for Albany and Troy. Way trains as per local Time Tables.

Tickets for sale at Nos. 252, 261, and 413 Broadway, and at 4 Western Express Company's offices, Nos. 7 Park place, 785 and 942 Broadway, New-York, and 333 Washington st., Brooklyn.

C. B. MEEKER, General Passenger Agent.

ERIE RAILWAY.

Winter Arrangement of through trains, From Chambers Street Depot. (For 23d st. see note below.)

9:00 A. M., daily, except Sundays, Cincinnati and Chicago Day Express, drawing-room coaches to Buffalo.

10:45 A. M., daily, except Sundays, Express Mail for Buffalo and the West. Sleeping coach to Buffalo.

7:00 P. M., daily, Pacific Express to the West. Sleeping coaches through to Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Cincinnati, Chicago, and St. Louis without change. Hotel dining-coaches to Chicago.

7:00 P. M., except Sundays, Western Emigrant train. Above trains leave Twenty-third Street Ferry at 8:45 and 10:15 A. M., and 6:45 P. M.

For local trains see time-tables and cards in hotels and depots.

JNO. N. ABBOTT, General Passenger Agent.

NEW-YORK, NEW-HAVEN, AND HARTFORD RAILROAD.

After Dec. 10, 1876, trains leave Grand Central Depot (42d st.) for New-Canaan Railroad at 8:05 A. M., 1:40 P. M.; Danbury and Norwalk Railroad at 8:05 A. M., 1, and 4:40 P. M.; Naugatuck Railroad at 8:05 A. M., and 4:40 P. M.; Housatonic Railroad at 8:05 A. M., and 3 P. M.; New-Haven and Northampton Railroad at 8:05 A. M., and 3 P. M.; for Newport at 8:05 A. M. and 1 P. M.; Boston and Albany Railroad at 8:05 and 11 A. M., 3 and 9 P. M. (9 P. M. on Sunday.) Boston, (via Shore Line,) at 1 and 10 P. M., (10 P. M. on Sundays.) Boston and New-York Air Line, 8 A. M., 1 and 11:35 P. M.

Way trains as per local time-tables.

LEHIGH VALLEY RAILROAD.
ARRANGEMENT. PASSENGER TRAINS. JAN. 1.

Leave depots foot of Cortlandt and Debrosses sts., at 6:30 P. M.—Night Express, daily, for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Wilkesbarre, Pittston, Scranton, Ithaca, Auburn, Rochester, Buffalo, Niagara Falls, and the West. Pullman's sleeping coaches attached.

General Eastern office corner Church and Cortlandt sts., CHARLES H. CUMMINGS, Agent.
ROBERT H. SAYRE, Superintendent and Engineer.

WICKFORD RAILROAD ROUTE TO NEWPORT, R. I.—Passengers for this line take 8:05 A. M. and 1 P. M. express trains from Grand Central Depot, arriving at 4:18 and 8 P. M. at Newport.
THEODORE WARREN, Superintendent.

STEAMBOATS.

STONINGTON LINE
FOR BOSTON AND ALL POINTS EAST.
REDUCED FARE.

Elegant steamers leave Pier No. 33 North River, foot of Day st., at 4:30 P. M.

Tickets for sale at all principal ticket offices. Staterooms secured at Office of Westcott Express Company and at No. 362 Broadway.

PROVIDENCE LINE.

Freight only, steamers leave Pier No. 27 North River, foot of Park place, at 4 P. M. Freights via either line taken at lowest rates.

D. S. BABCOCK, Pres. | L. W. PILKINS, G. P. Agent.

FALL RIVER LINE
FOR
BOSTON AND THE EAST.
FARES REDUCED.

Leave New-York daily, (Sunday excepted,) from Pier No. 28 North River, foot of Murray st., 4:30 P. M.

GEO. L. CONNOR, General Passenger Agent.

NEW-HAVEN, HARTFORD AND THE NORTH.—Steamers leave Peck slip for New-Haven at 3 P.M., (except Sundays,) connecting with road.

FOR BRIDGEPORT AND ALL POINTS ON Housatonic and Naugatuck Railroad.—Fare $1. Steamers leave Catharine slip at 11:30 A. M.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CONSUMPTION,
INDIGESTION AND WASTING
DISEASES. The most efficacious REMEDIES are PANCREATIC EMULSION
and PANCREATINE. The original and genuine prepared only by
SAVORY & MOORE,
No. 143 New Bond st., London. Sold by them and all CHEMISTS AND STOREKEEPERS THROUGHOUT THE UNITED STATES AND CANADA.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING. Each packet is labelled, JAMES EPPS & CO., Homœopathic Chemists, No. 48 Threadneedle st. and No. 170 Piccadilly, London, England. New-York Depot, SMITH & VANDERBEEK, Park place.

TAMAR INDIEN.—A LAXATIVE FRUIT LOZENGE; agreeable to take; specific for constipation and its sequences. S. GRILLON, No. 27 Rue Hauteur, Paris depot. CASWELL, HAZARD & CO., N. Y.

MEETINGS.

AMERICAN INSTITUTE.—THE ANNUAL meeting of the institute will be held on THURSDAY, the 1st day of February, 1877, at its rooms in the Cooper building, at 7:30 o'clock P. M.
CHARLES MOC. GEORGE, Recording Secretary.

RELIGIOUS NOTICES.

ASSOCIATION HALL.
23d st., corner 4th av.
SERVICES SUNDAY, Jan. 28.

MEDICAL STUDENTS' MEETING, Parlor 4, o'clock. BIBLE CLASS, conducted by Dr. THOMSON, 5 o'clock.

YOUNG MEN'S MEETING, after tea, 6:30 o'clock.

During the week, Thursday and Saturday evenings, at 8 o'clock, in the Parlors, are MEETINGS FOR YOUNG MEN.

A meeting is held daily, (except on Saturday and Sunday,) at 3:30 o'clock, in the Parlors, open to all who will come, for prayer and conference.

Young men are cordially invited to attend the meetings and visit the rooms.

ANTHON MEMORIAL CHURCH,
45th st., west of 8th av.
Rev. R. HEBER NEWTON, Rector.
Services on Sunday at 10:30 A. M. Prayers at 4 P. M.

EVEN SONG AT 7:30 P. M.

A special service of song, with Sermon by Rev. Mr. NEWTON.

All seats free at the opening hour.

AT WASHINGTON SQUARE METHODIST Episcopal Church.—Rev. William Lloyd, Pastor, will preach: Morning Subject—"Young Men's Christian Associations and Evangelists." Evening—"Voices from the Mount of Transfiguration." Young people's prayer-meeting at 6:30 P. M. Strangers cordially welcomed.

AT THE FIFTH AVENUE BAPTIST Church, West 46th st.—Services and preaching by Dr. Armitage, Pastor: 10:30 A. M., subject—"Jesus Prays for His Murderers;" 7:30 P. M., "Proverbs for Business Men." Sunday-school, 9 A. M.; congregational Bible class, 3:30 P. M.

AMERICAN TEMPERANCE UNION.—A Science Hall, No. 141 5th st. near Broadway, Sunday, Jan. 28, 3 P. M. Several distinguished ladies and gentlemen will address the meeting. Other interesting exercises. All are welcome.
J. B. GIBBS, President.

ALLEN STREET M. E. CHURCH, BETWEEN Delancey and Rivington sts. Rev. Charles E. Harris, Pastor.—Preaching in the morning by Rev. M. S. Souder, D. D. Evening, by the Pastor; subject—"From Death to Life." Services commence at 7 o'clock. Seats free. Jewish prayer-meeting Monday evening.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC, BROOKLYN.—REV. Alfred Bell, the Singing Preacher, will preach and sing to-morrow at 10:45 A. M. and 7:45 P. M. Morning subject—"Evil Speaking." Evening subject—"A Warning." All are welcome.

ALL SOULS' CHURCH, 4TH AV., CORNER OF 20th st.—Rev. Dr. Bellows will preach Sunday, at 11 o'clock. Subject—"The Divinity of Human Nature; or, Men, the Sons of God." Rev. John A. Bellows will preach in the evening, when seats are free.

AT ST. PAUL'S METHODIST EPISCOPAL Church, 4th av. and 22d st.—Preaching by the Pastor, Rev. Dr. Chapman, at 10:30 A. M. and 7:30 P. M. Lecture Wednesday evening at 7:45 P. M. All cordially invited.

AT ST. JAMES' METHODIST EPISCOPAL Church, corner of Madison av. and 126th st.—Preaching to-morrow at 10:30 A. M., by Rev. W. H. Depuy, D. D., and in the evening at 7:30 o'clock, by Rev. Cyrus D. Foss, former Pastor.

AT FREE TABERNACLE M. E. CHURCH, 34th st., between 7th and 8th avs., Rev. J. Johns, Pastor.—Preaching at 10:30 A. M. by Rev. M. D. C. Crawford, D. D. At 7:30 by the Pastor. Subject—"Fire! Fire!"

AT SIXTY-FIRST STREET M. E. CHURCH, between 2d and 3d avs.—Preaching at 10:30 A. M. by Rev. J. H. Lightbourn, of Seventeenth Street M. E. Church, and at 7:30 P. M. by Rev. William McNicholl. Service of song at 10 A. M.

AT CHICKERING HALL, 5TH AV., CORNER 18th st.—Rev. Samuel Colcord preaches Sunday at 10:45 A. M. and 7:30 P. M. Sunday-school morning and afternoon by Chas. L. Gunn and the large choir. Seats free. All invited. Sunday-school, 9:30.

BEDFORD STREET M. E. CHURCH.—REV. Spencer H. Bray of New-York East Conference, will preach to-morrow (Sunday) morning at 10:30, and in the evening at 7 o'clock. Rev. S. H. Bray will preach every evening during the week, (except Saturday.) All are cordially invited.

CHURCH OF THE COVENANT, (PRESBYterian,) corner Park av. and 35th st.—Rev. Marvin R. Vincent, D. D., Pastor, will preach Sunday morning: services at 11 o'clock. At 3:30 P. M., worship and Bible service, conducted by the Pastor. Sunday-school at 9:30 A. M. Preparatory lecture Friday at 8 P. M.

CALVARY BAPTIST CHURCH, 230 st., between 5th and 6th avs.—Rev. R. S. Macarthur, Pastor, preaches Sunday morning and evening; Baptism administered at morning service; Sunday-school, 2:30 P. M. Meetings Monday and Friday evenings. Strangers cordially welcomed.

CHURCH OF ST. JOHN THE BAPTIST, (Episcopal,) Lexington av., corner 35th st., Rev. Dr. Duffie, Rector; Rev. R. T. Widdemer, Assistant Minister.—Sunday services—Morning, 10:30 o'clock; evening, 7:30. Wednesday evening, 7:45. Strangers welcomed and furnished with seats.

CHURCH OF THE ANNUNCIATION, 14TH st., between 6th and 7th avs., seats free. Rev. William J. Seabury, D. D., Rector.—Sunday, 28th inst., Holy Communion, 7:30 A. M. Morning prayer, litany, ante-communion, and sermon, 10:30 A. M. Evening prayer, (choral,) 4 P. M.

CHURCH OF THE ATONEMENT, MADIson av. and 429th st., Rev. A. G. Tuffen Reeve.—Sunday-school at 9:30 A. M. Divine services at 11 A. M. and 3:30 P. M. Preaching services at 7:45 P. M., at which all seats are free and strangers cordially invited.

CATHOLIC APOSTOLIC CHURCH, 16TH st., between 6th and 7th avs.—Sunday evening, 7:30 o'clock, Rev. W. Andrews will lecture on "The Religious and Prophetic Bearings of the Eastern Question." Seats free.

CENTRAL M. E. CHURCH, 7TH AV., NEAR 14th st.—Preaching on Sunday at 10:30 A. M. and 7:30 P. M., by the Pastor, Rev. C. S. Harrower. Special services every night next week, except Saturday. Come.

CENTRAL PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, 55th st. near Broadway.—Rev. J. D. Wilson, Pastor. Series at 10:30 A. M., evening service in the new chapel, 57th st. near Broadway at 7:30 P. M., also Sabbath-school at 2:30 P. M.

CHURCH OF THE HOLY SEPULCHRE, 74th st., east of 4th av.,
Rev. J. Tuttle Smith, Rector. Services Sunday at 10:30 A. M. and 4 P. M. Seats free.

CHURCH OF THE HEAVENLY REST, 5TH AV., ABOVE 45TH ST., REV. DR. HOWLAND, RECTOR.
SERVICES, 11 A. M. AND 4 P. M.

CHRIST CHURCH, 5TH AV. NEAR 35TH St., Rev. Dr. McVickar, Rector.—Services at 10:30 A. M., and 7:30 P. M. Children's service with catechising at 3:30 o'clock.

CHURCH OF NATURE, STANDARD HALL, Broadway and 42d st.—Dr. S. M. Landis repeats, by request, Sunday evening, Jan. 28, at 7:30 o'clock, "Floating on the Clouds of Paradise."

CHURCH OF THE INCARNATION, MADIson av. and 35th st. Rev. Arthur Brooks, Rector.—Divine service at 10:30 A. M. and 3:30 P. M.

DESTINY OF THE EARTH—BISHOP Snow, the interpreter of prophecy, will preach in the Medical College, corner 4th av. and 23d st., on Sunday at 3 P. M. Subject—"The Fifth Universal Monarchy," Daniel vii. 17, 18. Christian strangers welcome.

EIGHTY-SIXTH STREET M. E. CHURCH, 86th st., between 2d and 3d avs.—Rev. C. D. Foss, D. D., President of the Wesleyan University, will preach Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock. Sermon in the evening by the Pastor, Rev. A. J. Palmer, at 7:30. Seats entirely free. A hearty invitation is extended to all. Revival meetings during the week.

EIGHTEENTH STREET M. E. CHURCH, Lower 8th av.—Preaching by the Pastor, Rev. W. F. Hatfield; morning, "Radiant Crowns;" evening, "Neglect, and What Of It;" prayer and praise meeting after sermon; revival meetings during the week.

FIRST REFORMED EPISCOPAL CHURCH.
Temporarily worshiping at Madison av. and 47th st.
Permanent location, (church now building,)
Madison av. and 55th st.
Rev. WILLIAM M. BAIRD, Pastor.
Divine services: Morning, 10:30; evening, 7:45 o'clock. Sunday-school at 9 A. M. The Pastor will preach. Children's service at 3:30 P. M.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH, CORNER OF 39th st. and Park av.—Preaching by the Pastor, Rev. T. DeWitt Anderson, D. D., at 11 A. M. and by Rev. Jos. R. Elder, D. D., at 7:30 in the evening. Baptism and prayer-meeting at close of service. Cordial invitation.

FREE EPISCOPAL CHURCH OF THE Reconciliation, No. 242 East 31st st., near 2d av.—Services and sermons by Rev. E. B. Widmer every Sunday, at 10:30 A. M. and 7:30 P. M. Sunday-school at 9 A. M. A cordial welcome to all.

FIVE POINTS HOUSE OF INDUSTRY, NO. 155 Worth st., William F. Barnard, Superintendent.—Service of song by the children on Sunday at 3:30 o'clock. Public invited. Second-hand clothing and shoes urgently solicited.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, 5TH av. and 11th st.—Rev. Wm. M. Paxton, D. D., Pastor, will preach at 10:30 A. M. and 4 P. M. Strangers cordially invited.

GRACE CHAPEL, EAST 14TH ST., REV. William Egbert, Pastor.—Services, 11 A. M. and 7:30 P. M. The Pastor will preach the third in a course of sermons on "Popular Skepticism" in the evening.

GRACE BAPTIST CHURCH, 530 ST., NEAR 7th av., Rev. J. Spencer Kennard, Pastor.—Morning sermon, "God's Jewels;" evening, "The Waters of Life." Sunday-school, 2:30. P. M. Revival services through the week.

HARLEM UNIVERSALIST CHURCH, ON 127th st., between Lexington and 4th avs., Rev. J. M. Getchell, Pastor.—Morning at 11 o'clock; subject—"Mistakes." In the evening at 7:30; subject—"Recognition in Heaven."

LYMAN C. HOWE (TRANCE SPEAKER) Lectures for the Society of Progressive Spiritualists at 10:30 A. M. Questions answered; and 7:30 P. M. Subject—"Hard Times: the Cause and Cure." The children's lyceum meets at 2:30 P. M., No. 55 West 33d st., near Broadway.

MADISON AVENUE REFORMED CHURCH, 57th st.—Rev. E. J. Goodspeed will preach Sunday, 28th inst., at 11 A. M. Subject: "Preparations for the Coming of Christ." And Rev. Carlos Martyn at 4:30 P. M. Subject: "Jesus and Nazareth Passeth By." Strangers cordially welcomed.

MEMORIAL PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, Madison av. corner 53d st., Rev. Charles S. Robinson, D. D., Pastor.—Service in morning, 11 o'clock; communion at 4 P. M. Praise and question meeting in the evening at 7:30.

NEW-YORK SUNDAY-SCHOOL ASSOCIATION.—"Primary" class this day at 2:45, Young Men's Christian Association Building, Mrs. Clark, teacher. "Superintendents'," Tuesday, 4 o'clock, Fulton street Chapel, Rev. Geo. S. Chambers, conductor. "Normal," Thursday, 4:45, Dr. Crosby's Church Chapel, Mr. Ralph Wells, conductor. Monday evening, 7:30, Young Men's Christian Association Hall, the fourth lecture in the course on "The Bible," by Rev. Dr. Storrs, of Brooklyn.

NORTH PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, COLlege Place, and 31st st.—Preaching by the Pastor, Rev. S. B. Rossiter; morning service, 10:30; subject—"A Plea for Good Works." Evening services, 7:30; the first of a series of sermons before the Young People's Association, "Talmudism."

RELIGIOUS NOTICES.

OLD JOHN STREET METHODIST CHURCH. —Preaching Sunday, 10:30 A. M., by Rev. Charles E. Harris; at 7:30 P. M., by the Pastor, Rev. M. L. Scudder, D. D.; subject, "The Business Man and Christ." Seats free. Let all who will, come.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH OF SHA AND Lead, Rev. E. Hopper, D. D., Pastor.—Sabbath services, 10:30 A. M. and 7:30 P. M. Sabbath-school, 9:30 A. M. and 2 P. M. Young people's prayer-meeting, 6:45. Seats free.

PILGRIM BAPTIST CHURCH, WEST 32D st.—Rev. Dr. Randolph, of Philadelphia, will preach Sunday morning at 10:30, and Prof. Nathan Sheppard, of Chicago, in evening at 7:30. Sunday-school and Bible class at 2:30. Strangers welcomed.

PILGRIM BAPTIST CHURCH, 33D ST

LOCAL MISCELLANY.

THE CONTINENTAL LIFE.

TESTIMONY AS TO THE CONDITION OF THE CONCERN GIVEN BEFORE THE REFEREE—THE REPORT OF THE RECEIVER TO BE FILED TO-DAY.

Mr. William Allen Butler, the Referee appointed some days ago by Justice Pratt in the suits brought by Stephen English and other policyholders against Mr. John J. Anderson, the Receiver of the Continental Life Insurance Company and others, commenced his examination yesterday, at No. 111 Broadway. The Receiver was represented by Messrs. Robert Sewell and John L. Hill, and the principal petitioner by Mr. Moses. Mr. James Mc. Donnell and other policy-holders were represented by Gen. Tracy and others. After a mode of procedure had been agreed upon, and it had been arranged that at the next hearing the books of the company should be produced before the Referee by the Receiver, the latter was placed upon the stand, and, in response to interrogations propounded to him by the petitioner's counsel, stated that Mr. Luther W. Frost and R. C. Frost were two of his bondsmen. At the time of his appointment, Oct. 25, the former gentleman was acting as an officer of the company but he could not say positively whether or not Mr. R. C. Frost was one of the Directors. He, the witness, was worth about $100,000 over and above his debts and liabilities, his property consisting mostly of real estate in Long Island and Texas. About one-half of it was situated in this State. He had in his possession, at the present time, as Receiver of the Continental, about $85,000 or $90,000. He had also about $85,000 in bonds, which were deposited with a safe deposit company.

The next witness was Mr. John A. McCall, Jr., Deputy Superintendent of the Insurance Department of the State, who before being sworn said that another action for the appointment of a Referee was now pending, and he must have it understood that he was no party to the present proceeding. Upon being sworn, he said that about Oct. 31 he called at the office of the Continental Life Insurance Company, with Mr. Smyth, the Superintendent of the department; the latter, after introducing himself to the Receiver, Mr. Anderson, said that he was there to examine the condition of the company under the statutes, and that the witness would conduct the examination. Mr. Anderson said that he must first consult his counsel in regard to the matter, and subsequently stated that he could not allow them to proceed. Mr. Smyth then told him they were not there with any antipathy toward himself, or the former officers of the company, but that the office of the department was deluged with inquires from all parts of the State regarding the solvency of the company. The Receiver replied that he was then preparing a statement of the condition of the concern, and that it would necessarily take some time, whereupon the witness responded that if he would allow him to examine the books he would give him the liabilities in two weeks. Mr. Anderson, however, would not consent to any examination by the department. The witness had been in the Insurance Department four years, and during that time no examination of the Continental company had been made. He had been the Examiner for the past two years, and during that period no application had been made to him to examine the company, and none had been made to the department that the witness knew of. This concluded Mr. McCall's testimony.

Counsel for the petitioner then put in evidence a certified copy of a petition and order granted by Mr. Justice Pratt, on Nov. 8, a certified copy of the bond given by Mr. Anderson, and a certified copy of the last sworn statement of the company's officers, with a schedule of the assets containing a list of the bonds and mortgages on hand at that time.

The next witness was Mr. John J. McKinnon, who was examined at length by the petitioner's counsel. He said that during the past three weeks he read any statements concerning the condition of the Continental Company, and he had had no valuation of its assets. He did not say to the counsel on the day previous that he had all the "bottom facts" in regard to the company, but he did say that he did not received sufficient information to make him believe the company was legally solvent. Counsel then asked if he had received this information from Mr. George W. Crofut, which was objected to. Subsequently the witness said he had received the information from the employes of the Receiver, principally from the actuary. Mr. McKinnon then stated that he had been endeavoring to purchase the stock of the company for the purpose of again making it solvent, and in order to do so he had made such inquiries and was shown such data that he was now convinced it was legally solvent; he had no recollection of having shown to Superintendent Smyth a detailed statement of the company's assets and liabilities; indeed, he never had any statement; he did not represent the Mutual Assurance Society of Leavenworth, Kan., nor was he ever an officer of that company; he had conversations in regard to the company's condition with Mr. Crofut and Mr. Chandler, the Actuary. The witness was cross-examined at considerable length by Messrs. Hill and Tracy, and stated that he was a counselor at law in Chicago; he never had been connected with an insurance company, and his business here was purely that of a lawyer; he did not know how long he should remain in the City, and when asked if Saddler in Chicago stated that a letter addressed to him at that city would no doubt find him; he was the representative of capitalists who proposed to make the concern solvent by putting money into it, if necessary; he thought he knew about how many policies were now in force from the data given him by the Actuary; he said that he could, on behalf of the company they were perfectly willing to issue new policies to any of the old policy-holders whose policies had lapsed since the appointment of the Receiver.

Mr. H. D. McKay, the President and Actuary of the Alliance Life Insurance Company of Leavenworth, Kan., was then called. He said that Mr. McKinnon's arrangement had nothing whatever to do with his company; regarding the condition of the Continental, he said he had some conversation with the Actuary, upon which he formed some approximations, and he would not at the present time like to put any money into it; the Actuary had given him a list of the policies in force on Oct. 25; he had shown this paper to Mr. Smyth. Upon being cross-examined by Mr. Hill, he said that, although he was not an Actuary, his profession being law, he had some experience, and thought the company might be saved with very little money and proper management.

Mr. George W. Crofut, the former Superintendent of the Continental was then examined. He said he had been in the employ of the Receiver until Gen. T. Luther W. Frost had been the President of the company, and R. C. Frost was one of the Directors; he had considerable conversation with the Receiver regarding the condition of the company, for the purpose of trying to save the policy-holders, but he had never mentioned the name of either Mr. McKinnon or Mr. McKay to Mr. Anderson in connection therewith. A long examination of Mr. Crofut elicited very little information, and he said he had made efforts among men of this City to have the concern again put upon its feet. His propositions might have been made in behalf of the two gentlemen above mentioned, but their names were not used. This was the last witness, and the petitioners' counsel moved that, on the testimony already in, the Receiver make a special report to the court, and that the Receiver be required to furnish additional bondsmen in place of Luther W. and R. C. Frost. The Referee said he would consider the matter, and the hearing was adjourned.

The report of the Receiver, which it is understood will be unfavorable to the company, will probably be filed to-day.

THE CONTROLLER'S VIEWS ON THE BONDED DEBT.

Controller Kelly has transmitted a communication to Hon. Hamilton Fish, Jr., the Chairman of the Assembly Committee on Cities, in answer to a resolution of the committee passed on the 16th inst., requesting his views on the subject of the proposed constitutional amendment, introduced by Mr. Spinola, to limit the bonded indebtedness of this City to $150,000,000. The Controller in his communication states that a knowledge of all the facts relating to the origin, nature, and amount of the debt are necessary to a solution of the question, and that its solution could not be reached by any partial or arbitrary legislation. The Controller then says that the proposed amendment of the State Constitution is wholly impracticable under existing laws; "that to use a homely, but pertinent and forcible old adage, it puts the cart before the horse;" that it proposes to place the responsibility for the bonded debt where it does not properly belong. In referring to a provision of the proposed amendment making it a felony for any person to issue bonds beyond a certain limit, the Controller says that he does not know of "any person" who can issue City bonds and stocks, except the Controller, who is the ministerial agent of the law for that purpose, but he performs that duty, however, in conjunction with the Mayor and other officers of the City Government. They were all like himself, only ministerial agents in carrying the laws into effect. They were not responsible for the bonded debt. There were numerous existing laws which not only authorized but directed the Controller to issue City bonds for many different objects. The Controller next gives a long list of the bonds which are authorized to be issued under special statutes, which he enumerates. There is no limit to the issue of some of the bonds. The Controller further says the proposed amendment does not go to the root of the matter. As a preliminary measure to the proposed amendment, all laws conferring unlimited debt-contracting power, and directing the Controller to issue bonds, must be repealed. The responsibility clearly rested with the Legislature. The Controller next alludes to the debt of the City, $148,107,557 79, and states that it must continue to increase while the statutes to which he referred are in operation. He also adverts to the large amounts of claims against the City, and repeats the views he expressed in regard to the sinking fund at the recent conference between the merchants and Mayor Ely. After referring to the obvious object for which bonds are issued in pursuance of various laws, the Controller says that he does not oppose or object to the principle of limitation of the bonded debt, but is in favor of all proper restrictions in relation to the matter.

A TELL-TALE PHOTOGRAPH.

THE VANITY OF A THIEF LEADS TO HER DETECTION—AN INTERESTING STORY TOLD TO SUPERINTENDENT WALLING YESTERDAY.

Mrs. Anna Endress, residing at No. 181 Eldridge street, called on Superintendent Walling, at Police Head-quarters, yesterday, and told how she had been made the victim of misplaced confidence. She said that for some months past she had known Miss Francisca Geider, and on Sunday she had paid her a social visit. After remaining in the apartments a short time Miss Geider threw out a gentle hint that she was hungry, and the hospitably-inclined Mrs. Endress went out to procure refreshments, leaving her visitor alone in the room. Mrs. Endress returned with a string of sausages and a pitcher of beer, and she and her guest had a jolly time. After the sausages and beer had disappeared Miss Geider rose to go, and requested her hostess to accompany her to a photographer's establishment to have her picture taken. Mrs. Endress declined the invitation, and her guest thereupon took her leave, apparently well pleased with the visit. On Wednesday Mrs. Endress had occasion to open a jewel-box in the upper drawer of her bureau, and she then discovered that two valuable rings had been taken away. She at once jumped to the conclusion that Miss Geider was the thief, and started out to find her. She went to Miss Geider's cousin and, without revealing her business, learned that Miss Geider had started for California, and that her brother, John Adam Geider, had arrived to meet her at the Belmont Hotel at Sacramento. Mrs. Endress expressed her regret, and then innocently asked whether the cousin had a photograph of Miss Geider. She at once produced one, and Mrs. Endress, upon examining it closely, had her suspicions confirmed by the discovery that when she sat for the photograph Miss. Geider wore the two rings stolen from her jewel case. She was anxious for the Superintendent to telegraph to Sacramento and cause the arrest of her false friend. The matter was referred to Sergt. Kealey, of the detective staff, for investigation.

A POLICE PRECINCT ABOLISHED.

THE SIXTH TO BE DIVIDED BETWEEN THE FOURTH AND FOURTEENTH PRECINCT—THE STATION-HOUSE PRONOUNCED TO BE IN AN UNSAFE CONDITION.

The Board of Police Commissioners yesterday adopted a series of resolutions abolishing the Sixth Police Precinct, and dividing its territory and a portion of the force of patrolmen between the adjacent Fourth and Fourteenth Precincts, the order to go into effect on Feb. 1. This action was taken, as recited in the resolutions, because of the unsafe condition of the station-house and the lack of funds with which to build another. All that portion of the precinct lying south of the centre line of Mott street has been annexed to the Fourth, and all lying north of the same line to the Fourteenth Precinct. The boundaries of those precincts will therefore be as follows:

Fourth Precinct—South-easterly by the East River, south-westerly by the centre line of Fulton and Chambers street, westerly by the centre line of Broadway, Park row, and Centre street, and northerly by the centre line of Worth, Chatham, and Catherine streets. Fourteenth Precinct—Easterly by the centre line of the Bowery and Chatham street, southerly by the centre line of Worth street, westerly by the centre line of Broadway, and northerly by the centre line of Bleecker street. Twenty-six of the patrolmen of the Sixth will be assigned to duty in the Fourth, and 28 to the Fourteenth Precinct, and, after Feb. 1 the quota of patrolmen for the Fourth will be 100, and that of the Fourteenth 90.

The abolished precinct embraces a portion of the City which is inhabited by the most dangerous classes of the community, and some years ago, especially during the period of the late war, many of the vilest dens of iniquity were to be found within its limits.

INSTALLATION OF A PASTOR.

On Thursday evening Rev. Charles A. Harris, formery of Ithaca, N. Y., was installed as Pastor of the Baptist Church, at Westfield, N. J. The house was crowded, and the exercises, of three hours' duration, were of the most interesting character. The sermon was delivered by Rev. Edward N. Harris, of Germantown, Penn., the father of the new Pastor. He spoke of his son's early preferences for mercantile life, and how, after a short experience therein, he had been providentially turned from that to the ministry. Rev. Robert Lowry, of Plainfield, offered the installation prayer. Rev. T. A. K. Gessler, of Elizabeth, extended the right hand of fellowship; Rev. Thomas Armitage, of New-York, delivered the charge to the Pastor; Rev. D. J. Yerks, of Plainfield, the charge to the church, and Rev. A. Craig, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Westfield, offered the final prayer. The Doxology was then sung and the large congregation was dismissed with the benediction.

ST. GEORGE'S CRICKET CLUB.

At the annual meeting of the above club, held at Delmonico's, the following officers were elected for the coming year: President, J. T. Soutter; Vice President, G. T. Green; Treasurer, F. Satterthwaite; Secretary, M. H. Talbot; Committee, W. R. Bowman, E. H. Moeran, B. Mostyn, J. B. Sleigh, D. B. Gilbert. The Young America, Philadelphia, Germantown, and Merion Clubs, of Philadelphia, will visit New-York to play return matches with the St. George's during the coming season; and an effort will be made by the St. George's to visit Canada and play a series of matches with the prominent Canadian clubs. The finances of the club are in excellent condition, the Treasurer reporting over $400 in the treasury after paying all expenses.

THE NEW-YORK EAR DISPENSARY.

The fifth annual report of the Board of Trustees of the New-York Ear Dispensary has just been published. In reviewing the charitable work of the past year, the Trustees say that they find added proof of the public value of such an institution for the west side of the City, where a large portion of the indigent population resides. Their records show that nearly all their patients live west of Sixth avenue. The hope that many of those cases attracted to the institution would be among young children mostly, when treatment could be made available, has been realized, and the Trustees again feel the necessity of urging upon parents and teachers the importance of looking closely to the deafness of children under their charge. The number of children treated at the dispensary indicates that many must be in constant attendance at school who are almost totally incapacitated from receiving instruction. The medical observations made at the dispensary point to the conclusion that in a great majority of cases these affections of the ear are remediable. The Trustees have not been able fully to carry out the intention of the charity for want of funds, and as the increased attendance at the dispensary necessitates larger accommodations, they are compelled to appeal to friends for further aid. The services of the officers are entirely without compensation, and the daily clinic is free to such physicians and students as desire to attend. The total number of patients treated in 1876 was 570. The medical staff for the ensuing year is as follows:

Consulting Staff—Austin Flint, M. D., John T. Metcalf, M. D., T. G. Thomas, M. D., D. B. St. John Roosa, M. D., Alfred L. Loomis, M. D., Edward Mc. D. E. A. Witthaus, M. D. Surgeon in Charge—Samuel Sexton, M. D. Funds may be sent to the Treasurer, Alfred J. Wolf, No. 120 Wall street.

TWO CITIZENS OF FISHKILL MISSING.

Much anxiety is felt by the people of Fishkill and Newburg in regard to the fate of two citizens of the former place who have strangely disappeared. On Wednesday, the 17th inst., Henry Knickerbocker, a resident of Matteawan, left his home to go to Newburg, intending to return shortly. He was last seen in Newburg, where he collected $80. It is believed by some that he has met with foul play; others think he may have fallen through an air-hole in the ice when returning across the Hudson to Fishkill. He was a man of steady, habits and owned a harness store, and did a good business. His accounts are correct, and he never gave any evidence of an intention to leave his home. A young man by the name of Luyster has also disappeared from Fishkill. He was last seen at a trotting race near there, on Tuesday last, when he seemed to be in possession of a good sum of money.

ARREST OF TWO SNEAK-THIEVES.

Yesterday afternoon, while Detective McConnell, of the Central Office, was passing through Hudson street, near Jane, he noticed two well-known sneak-thieves loitering about, and followed them through several streets. The thieves, finding the basement door of the residence of Mr. John Demorest, No. 351 West Twenty-fifth street, open, they sneaked in, and were immediately arrested by the officer. One of the prisoners gave his name as John Forester, of No. 57 Grand street, but he was identified as John Handley, whose picture is No. 451 in the Rogues' Gallery, under the name of John Daw. His companion gave his name as Frank Smith, and his residence as No. 60 Henry street. His picture was ordered to be taken. The prisoners will be arraigned at the Washington Place Police Court to-day.

A SUIT OF ANCIENT DATE.

A MARRIAGE SETTLEMENT IN THE OLDEN TIME AND WHAT CAME OF IT—EIGHTEEN YEARS OF LITIGATION CONCERNING SOME REAL ESTATE.

One of the old cases, which has been before the courts in one shape or another for the past 18 years, which has at different times engaged the attention of every Supreme Court Judge in this district, and which, after running the gauntlet of several General Terms, has been argued in the Court of Appeals, was argued before the Supreme Court, General Term, yesterday. The plaintiffs in the suit are Elizabeth M. Jones and her brothers and sisters, the defendant being their aunt, Cecilia Ann Butler. The object of the action is to obtain possession of two pieces of real estate in this City. The present appeal is from the dismissal of the complaint in the case. The history of the transactions involved in the litigation is rather interesting. In 1830 Thomas C. Butler, Jr., then about 18 years of age, was traveling in Georgia for his father, who was then a merchant, doing business in this City. Young Butler, in the course of his travels, met a young lady named Jane Ann Jones, the daughter of a planter, and became enamored of her. They were married in due course of time, but before the nuptial knot was tied they executed a deed of trust to her uncle Seaborn Jones of all her property. According to this marriage settlement Mrs. Butler, after the death of her husband, was to have the income of the property until her own death, when it was to be divided among her children. In case her husband survived her the entire property was to go to him. Seaborn Jones died two years later and Thomas C. Butler, Sr., was made Trustee in his stead, and came into the possession, it is claimed, of $20,000 of the trust estate. Five thousand dollars of the trust money was invested in one of the pieces of property now in suit. Mr. Butler, Sr., afterward conveyed this property to his clerk, who immediately conveyed it back to him as Trustee. He held the property so until 1834, when he conveyed it—the beneficiaries of the trust joining with him in the deed—to his son Jonas, to raise money claimed to be due to him from Thomas C. Butler, Sr. By a mortgage in July, 1836, Jonas raised $6,000 on the property, and paid the money to his father. Two years later Jonas conveyed the property to his brother Frederick, who reconveyed it to Jonas, and the latter then conveyed it to his sister, Cecilia Ann Butler, the present defendant. There was no consideration at either of these transfers. In May, 1837, Thomas C. Butler, Jr., and his wife executed a release to their father, he claiming that the trust estate had all been expended, the son having failed in business, and being, as asserted, indebted to his father in $30,000. The plaintiffs, who are the children of Butler, Jr., and have for many years resided in Cincinnati, Ohio, assert in their complaint that their aunt Cecilia holds the promises as a cover, while their grandfather was the real possessor. The old gentleman was 84 years old when the suit was begun, and died in 1865, before the case had gone to the Court of Appeals. Jane Ann, the plaintiff's mother, died in 1851, while their father, Thomas C. Butler, Jr., lived until after the second trial of the case, in 1874. The Referee on the first trial gave judgment for plaintiffs, and the defendant was obliged to give up the property to them, as she could not give security on appeal. The Court of Appeals, however, reversed the judgment in 1870, holding that the plaintiffs were not entitled to the property under the trust deed, because their father had survived his wife, and no estate was given over to them in that event. On the second trial in 1874 they sought to maintain the action, as heirs at law, of their mother, but Judge Van Brunt held they could nor do that until the death of their father. On the appeal they claim that there should be a decision in their favor, their father having since died. It is claimed on the other side that the release and deed of their father and mother acts as an estoppel, but this is met by the argument that their mother's interest in the Broome street property was vested neither in possession nor in right, there being only a naked possibility or reverter, and was, therefore, inalienable. A deed, therefore, would not pass title, except by reason of the covenants of title acting as an estoppel; but, she being a married woman, her covenants were void. The court took the papers, reserving its decision.

THE GREAT BOOK SALE.

THEOLOGICAL AND CLUB AND SOCIETY PUBLICATIONS OF THE HASTIE-TRACY LIBRARY DISPOSED OF YESTERDAY—THE WORKS SOLD FOR LESS THAN THE COST OF THE BINDING.

There was but a poor attendance at Clinton Hall yesterday afternoon when the theological portion of the Hastie-Tracy Library was disposed of. This was perhaps partially due to the peculiarly Calvanistic tone of the majority of the works and the very dilapidated condition of many of the volumes. The bidding was in consequence very spiritless, and even fine editions of immortal works, which, from a literary point of view, apart from their peculiarly theological merits, will ever command the admiration of the reading public, went for less than the cost of the binding. This remark applies with peculiar force to the writings of Luther, Fuller, (Thomas,) Hooker, Barrow, Jeremy Taylor, Cranmer, Baxter, Grotius, (Hugo,) Hale, (Sir Matthew,) Hall, (Robert,) Keith, Knox, Leighton, (Archbishop,) Milton, Neal, Newton, Pascal, Porson, and others too numerous to mention. A very fine edition of the famous "Clond of Witnesses," printed at Glasgow in 1846, brought $1 50; and another edition, from the library of William Wilberforce, $2 75. Coleridge's "Church and State and Lay Sermons," the Pickering edition of 1839, $1 15; several editions of the "Confession of Faith" brought $1 each; Cotton's (H.,) five books of Macoabees, $2 25; Cranmer's "Short Instruction," &c., $1; Cressey's valuable "Church History of Brittany," the 1668 edition, $6 75, Mr. Halliwell, of New-York, being the purchaser; a fine edition of Cruden's "Concordance," $2; Dodwell's work on "Marriages," $1 25; a fine copy of the complete works of Dr. John Douglas, Bishop of Salisbury, only realized $1 25; the charming "Church History of Britain," Thomas Fuller, a work which will live and be read as long as the English language is spoken, was knocked down for $3 75, and the same quaint author's "Holy War," for $1. Goll's (Robert) curious, if not particularly edifying, "Essay toward the amendment of the Last English translation of the Bible, London, 1659," $4 25; the original edition of Gladstone's famous work on Church and State, $1 25; a splendid 10-volume edition of Robert Hall's works, with Foster's well-known analysis and eulogy on his character, brought $1 25; a neat edition of Ancient Religion of the Gentiles," written by Lord Herbert, of Cherbury, who held such chivalric notions about the duello, and wrote so charmingly on the subject, sold for the small sum of $1 25; Lawrence Howell's "Compleat History of the Holy Bible," in three volumes, profusely illustrated, brought $3 75 per volume; Howie's (John) "Reformation Principles," &c., Glasgow, 1787, $1 13; Keith's great work on the fulfillment of prophesy, finely illustrated, $2 13; Kirton's "Secret and True History of the Church of Scotland," &c., printed at Edinburgh in 1817, $2; the Glasgow (Foulis') edition of Knox's "History of the Reformation," $1; Samuel Laing's edition of the works of Knox, in two handsome volumes, brought only $1 25 per volume; Luther's "Colloquia Mensalia," the translation made by Bell (London, 1652,) $6; the later edition edited by Burckhardt, and printed in 1791, brought only $4. The various editions of the "Book of Common Prayer," sold cheap, Archbishop Land's edition, (the one prepared for the special use of the Church of Scotland, which Jenny Geddes threw at the head of the officiating clergyman in the old Tron Church, Edinburgh,) was bought by Mr. Duncan, of Edinburgh, for $20. The Pickering (1842) "Liturgies Britannicæ," edited by Keeling, a most scarce and valuable work, $3 25, the purchaser being Mr. Jeffries, of Bristol. A superbly illuminated edition only brought $7 50. The various editions of the Psalms sold for a few cents per volume. Erasmus' famous "Paraphrase upon the New Testament," "Englished" by Udall, and printed in 1549, sold for the small sum of $5; Beiza's Testament, the translation made by Tomson, (London, 1576,) $6 25; the Antwerp (1600) Testament, $5, the translation made by Fulke, (London 1617;) this was purchased by Mr. Sabin, Jr., for a client, who was prepared to go as high as $16. It was secured for $4 50.

In the evening one of the most valuable and interesting divisions of the library, namely, the club and society publications, and other productions issued from private presses, were sold. The bidding was a little more animated, but the prices realized still fell far below the market value of the many extremely valuable and scarce works sold. Unfortunately, there was not a complete set of the publications of any of the noted clubs, and the single volumes sold were thereby greatly depreciated in value. Of the Abotsford Club publications there were only 31 volumes. The highest price realized was for the Black Letter edition of the fine old romance of "Guy of Warwick," which was edited from the Auchinleok manuscripts. It was purchased for Princeton College library by Mr. Vinton for $7. The Auchinleok Press publications were represented by nine editions of the "Frondes Caduces," which averaged about $3 each. The Bannatyne Club was represented by 40 different publications, nearly every one of which was secured by Mr. Renton, of Sabine & Sons, for the Congressional Library, for, on an average, $2 50. Fifteen publications of the Camden Society sold for $1per volume. There were publications of the Ælfric Society, the Maitland Club, Percy Society, the Spalding Club, the Speculative Society, and a number issued by the learned Sir Egerton Brydges from his own private press. In no case did the works realize anything like their value, the Parker Society publications excepted. For these 27 volumes $1 per volume was paid—quite a fair price. To-day works treating of Bibliography and literary history will be disposed of, the sale commencing at 1 o'clock.

ATLANTIC GALES.

TEMPESTUOUS VOYAGES OF THE STEAMSHIP OTHELLO AND THE SHIP JOHN O. BAKER—THE MISSING STEAM-SHIP COLOMBO.

The steam-ship Othello, of the Wilson Line between Hull and New-York, arrived off Sandy Hook early yesterday afternoon, and arrived at Pier No. 53, North River, at 6 o'clock in the evening, having been 26 days on the voyage. The vessel was commanded by Capt. Bristow, who has been 22 years in the Atlantic and Indian trade. To a reporter of THE TIMES he said last night, on board the Othello, that in all his experience he had never made so stormy a passage. The vessel left Hull on the 31st of December at 6:30 o'clock in the morning. At Dungeness a furious gale from the south-west burst upon the ship, so fierce that she could not face it. She was hove to on the starboard tack, and at 11:30 on the morning of Jan. 1 he sighted the Varne light-ship, and ran into Newgate Roads and anchored. On the 2d he proceeded again. From the 3d to the 6th there were constant stormy gales and heavy head sea, and on the 7th a furious gale arose, with the barometer at 28° 35', which increased to a hurricane accompanied by a terrific sea. The gale was less violent on the 8th, but heavy northerly squalls kept the ship rolling badly. On the 9th and 10th the winds were variable; on the 11th a hard gale with a heavy head heat sea the steam-ship about, and on the 12th the gale terminated in a hurricane from the north. The ship bore the strain bravely, but her season of trial was but half over. Again on the 13th she bore up against a hard gale and very heavy sea until 6 P. M., when the gale developed into another hurricane from the north, the barometer dropping to 28.65. During this gale the steering gear gave way and the main and mizzen stay-sails were blown to pieces. The steering gear was replaced by extra fittings. On this day the distance sailed was but 60 miles. On the 14th there was another very heavy gale with terrific sea until 6 in the evening, when the wind and sea moderated. On the 15th there was another furious gale with thick snow, and during the gale to ease the ship, she was hove to on the starboard tack with the tarpaulins in the main and mizzen rigging. The sea was again very heavy. Toward morning on the 16th the gale moderated, but there was still a heavy head sea and the appearances were threatening. As if determined not to abandon the steamship, the winds on the 17th blew a strong gale from the south-east, and then veered to the north, from which favorite quarter they blew with great violence, bringing thick snow-squalls and a sea that kept the ship rolling heavily. On the 18th there was a strong gale and heavy northerly sea, and on the 19th more strong gales with heavy head sea, through which the ship went racing and plunging heavily. On the 20th the winds became variable and more moderate, continuing so until the 25th, when there was another hard gale and heavy head sea. This brought the steamship to the end of her voyage, from the beginning to the end of which not a sail was seen, with the exception of a schooner seen off the banks a few days ago.

When the Othello left Hull the Colombo was but 26 days out, but considerable anxiety had begun to be felt about her. The master was Capt. Laru, an experienced seaman, who formerly commanded the Inman steamers City of New-York and City of Antwerp, and resided in Liverpool. The second officer was named Maine, and the third officer Warne, both of Hull. The crew was 45 in number and was shipped in Hull. Capt. Bristow was not inclined to give up the Colombo, as he thought it possible she had broken down in mid-ocean and put back for an English port. There were several instances that might be recalled of vessels missing for as great a length of time, where they afterward reached port safely.

The British ship John O. Baker, which left London on the 23d of November, and arrived here on Thursday evening, had a perilous voyage. She was commanded by Capt. S. Peonel, and left London with light weather which lasted ten days. On the 25th of November the sky became overcast, a fierce, cold wind came up and increased to a gale, and throughout the night and the two following days the sea ran so high and the wind blew so furiously that it was perilous for the sailors to undertake to reach the yards. Sails were blown into ribbons, and the sea poured into the cabin through the doors and broken dead-lights, drenching the crew, and making it impossible to keep a fire in the galleys. On the 4th of December the gale was so violent that the ship lay to under the maintopsail. On the 8th, Henry Butler, a Staffordshire seaman, fell from the upper top sail yard to the deck, and was killed, and he was buried the same day. On the 11th the gale increased to a hurricane that blew away the lower fore and mizzen topsails. The ship was under bare poles, and no one could live on deck unless lashed there. The weather was at this time intensely cold, and the gale continuing until the 15th, none of the crew expected to reach port, so prolonged was the tempestuous weather. Since the 18th the weather had been more moderate, and at that time new sails were bent and the fires in the galleys were relighted. On that day the ship fell in with the wrecked schooner Champion, of Prince Edward Island, with a cargo of deals. In this port, the 22 men of the John O. Baker's crew were worn out with constant exposure and labor.

THE RING SUITS.

RUMORS RESPECTING THE PROBABLE RELEASE OF TWEED—THEY ARE DENIED BY THE LAWYERS IN THE CASE.

A report was current yesterday to the effect that William M. Tweed would shortly be released from Ludlow Street Jail, and that a dismissal of the Ring suits would follow close on the return of Peter B. Sweeny in April next. Mr. Wheeler H. Peckham, on being questioned on the subject, said that, so far as he knew, there was no foundation whatever for the report; that there was nothing new of moment in relation to the suits against Tweed and Sweeny, nor likely to be within a short time, and that he had no reason to believe that there would be until Sweeny's return in April, and that it was too early now to say definitely what would be done then.

Gen. Barlow said that he had no knowledge whatever in reference to the status of the Tweed and Sweeny suits. He had no control of them. He had charge of the suits against the estate of Henry Starkweather, the deceased Collector of Assessments and father-in-law of ex-Gov. Hoffman, and those against Thomas Coman, John J. Walsh, James H. Ingersoll and Michael Norton, ex-Councilmen Commissioners, and Cummings H. Tucker, ex-Superintendent of the County Court-house. Judgment was obtained last Summer, in the Superior Court, against Starkweather's estate, for $193,000, and an appeal was now pending in the General Term of that court. Coman's case was, he said, to be brought to trial at the next term of the Supreme Court, and Walsh's case was not yet ready for trial. Norton, he said, had no property that would warrant the pushing of a suit, and Tucker's case was still pending trial.

Mr. John McKeon, Sweeny's counsel, said that there was no truth in the report, so far as his client was concerned, but that he knew nothing about Tweed's case. Nothing whatever had been done about a settlement of Sweeny's case, and Mr. Sweeny would be present in the case of a trial.

Mr. Dudley Field said that there was no truth in the report in relation to Tweed, so far as he knew, and he ought to know all about it; but that if there was any foundation for the report he would certainly say nothing about it.

A WOMAN CHARGED WITH GRAND LARCENY.

Roundsman John H. Curtin, of the Twelfth Precinct, brought before Superintendent Walling, at the Central Office, yesterday, Sarah A. Oester, whom he had arrested for grand larceny. The woman, under the pretense of peddling ladies' underwear, entered the residence of Mr. Tooker, corner of One Hundred and Twenty-eighth street and Lexington avenue, and being left alone for a few moments, unlooked a trunk with false keys, and stole jewelry valued at $150. The theft was discovered, and she was arrested by the roundsman as she was leaving the house. In a satchel in which she carried her stock in trade was found the stolen jewelry. The prisoner refused to inform the Police where she resided, and was locked up at the Central Office. She will be arraigned at the Fifty-seventh Street Police Court for examination this morning.

THE MASSON MURDER CASE.

The trial of George Steckert for the murder of Jacob Masson in Newark, N. J., was resumed yesterday in the Essex County Court of Oyer and Terminer. The testimony taken corroborated that of other witnesses that Steckert had done the stabbing. Sergt. Meldrum testified that when Steckert was brought to the station-house he declared that he had done all the stabbing, and asked the Sergeant if he would not have done the same thing under the circumstances. Detective Smith testified that he took Steckert to Masson's house, and Masson identified him as the man who had stabbed him. The case was still on when the court adjourned for the day.

CUSTOM-HOUSE SEIZURES.

The United States Revenue Inspectors yesterday seized, at Pier No 3 North River, on board the Havana steam-ship Vera Cruz, 9,000 cigars and 286 bundles of cigarettes that bore no mark, and they were placed in the Seizure Room at the Custom-house. Among other things held at the Seizure Room are three publications, which were held for payment of duty. It is said that the dog business has of late become very brisk, and that many foreign born and bred animals have been smuggled into this port on various pretenses. It has been deemed proper to interfere with this traffic, and the three terriers secured yesterday are the first results of jurnior ovor this new law.

CITY AND SUBURBAN NEWS.

NEW-YORK.

Samuel Robinson, aged 70, a hatter, of Bloomfield, New-Jersey, dropped dead yesterday in the depot of the Hudson River Railroad.

Rev. Benjamin N. Martin, of the University of New-York, delivered a lecture on Herbert Spencer, in the Liberal Club, last evening.

Charles Werner fell dead last night in the hallway of No. 3 Marion street, where he was employed in the capacity of private watchman.

The members of the Lincoln Club are making extensive preparations to celebrate their ninth anniversary in a fitting manner on the 22d prox.

The Executive Committee of the German Republican Central Committee was organized last evening, and elected Morris Friedsam President, and E. A. Kliebe Secretary.

The next lecture in the Cooper Union, free course, will be delivered this evening, in the Great Hall, at 8 o'clock, by Prof. E. S. Morse, of Salem, Mass., on "Evolution," being the last of a series of four lectures on that subject.

A team of horses, attached to car No. 77 of the Sixth Avenue Line, became unmanagable at Sixteenth street last evening, and ran violently against another car of the same line, damaging it slightly and injuring the horses attached to it.

The regular German Republican Club of the Eighth Assembly District met last night at the Tenth Ward Hotel, Charles Schafer presiding. Resolutions pledging fidelity to the Republican cause were unanimously carried by the crowded audience.

The Municipal Committee on Railroads will meet early next week to hear the committee appointed by the North Side Association present their views on the matter of the opposition of the Sixth Avenue Railroad Company to the Gilbert Elevated Road.

Henry Mitchell, of No. 180 Thompson street, and John Anderson, of No. 180 Bleecker street, were arrested by a Central Office detective last evening on suspicion of attempting to steal a pocket-book containing valuable papers, from William Smyth, of No. 18 William street, in a Fourth avenue car, on the 22d inst.

Francis Ernst is seeking by a habeas corpus proceeding in the Supreme Court to recover possession of his two nephews, who are detained by their mother, Louisa Ernst. Mr. Ernst is the testamentary guardian of the children, and claims that their mother is unfit, morally and otherwise, to bring them up. These statements were made in Mr. Ernst's traverse, which was filed in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday.

A suit has been begun in the Court of Common Pleas by Margaret F. Milward against the Guardian Mutual Life Insurance Company to recover $10,000 on a policy taken out by the plaintiff's late husband, Henry Milward. The premiums on the policy for 1873 were not paid, but the plaintiff states that this was owing to the company's negligence, of which it cannot take advantage. An answer will be put in in a few days.

Mr. A. B. Cornell was sworn in as Naval Officer of this Port, by Judge Johnson, in the United States Circuit Court, yesterday afternoon. Ex-Congressman John D. Lawson, and ex-Commissioner of Charities William Laimbeer became his bondsmen. Other persons were witnessed by State Senator F. W. Tobey, Dwight Lawrence, ex-Fire Commissioner Van Cott, and others. Mr. Cornell will enter upon the discharge of his duties in the Custom-house on Feb. 1.

A motion was made before Judge Joseph F. Daly, in the Special Term of the Court of Common Pleas, yesterday, to open a judgment obtained by default in a case in the General Term of the court. One of the arguments made by the attorney who opposed the motion was that in the General Term, when Chief Justice Daly presided, there was little necessity for any argument by counsel on either side, as before Judge Daly's elevation he was argued a case on both sides and did it better than counsel.

The proceeding of Capt. William A. Van Duzen against the Police Commissioners, in which it is sought to set aside the dismissal from the Police force of Van Duzen by the Commissioners, was before Judge Dunne, in the Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday. The counsel for the Police Board claimed that the Commissioners are not bound to furnish, even on the order of the Supreme Court, papers which are not relevant or material to the case, which were called for by a writ of certiorari. Decision was reserved.

BROOKLYN.

A pedestal lamp at the intersection of Broadway and South Eighth street will cast the taxpayers within the area of assessment $774 37.

Proposals for building a public bath in the Western District of this city were opened yesterday by the Board of City Works. The lowest bid was $10,745.

The Democratic primaries, to elect delegates to the Kings County Democratic General Committee, were held last evening. Three delegates were elected from each ward and county town.

A number of human bones, found by workmen engaged in excavating for the Fourteenth Regiment Armory, on North Portland avenue, will be buried in Green-Wood. The site selected for the armory was formerly a graveyard.

The Referees appointed to hear testimony in the suit of Kingsley & Keeney against the city to recover $178,000 for extra work alleged to have been done on the Hempstead Reservoir held a short session yesterday. Mr. Backhouse, who was the only witness examined, testified as to the investigation of the contract made by the Committee of Fifty. The Referees will meet again on Feb. 7.

Archie Quigley and John Newman, both well known young sneak-thieves, were committed by Justice Ferry yesterday for burglary. The prisoners are members of a gang who have stolen a great many overcoats recently, by entering, by means of false keys, the front doors of houses in wealthy neighborhoods. One of the gang, named Williams, was arrested some days ago, and informed on his companions.

Henry Myers, alias "nibbs," alias "Lawson," was arrested for picking pockets in Jersey City, on the 25th inst. On his person were found two gold watches, and in his shirt front a $1,000

The New-York Times.

VOL. XXVI.....NO. 7917. NEW-YORK, SUNDAY, JANUARY 28, 1877.—TRIPLE SHEET. PRICE FIVE CENTS.

A DAY IN THE SENATE.

EIGHTEEN HOURS OF DEBATE ON THE COMPROMISE.

REMARKABLE SCENES IN THE CAPITOL—A GREAT MAN'S WEAKNESSES — ROSCOE CONKLING AS AN ACTOR—HIS WONDERFUL MEMORY—MORTON'S CONVICTION AND HIS ELOQUENCE—FROM DUSK TO MORNING—HOW THE COMPROMISE BILL WAS PASSED.

From a Special Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Jan. 25, 1877.

The debate on the Electoral Count bill, which was concluded in the Senate at daylight this morning, after a session which lasted all through the night, was in many respects the most noteworthy public discussion that has ever taken place in Washington. It was remarkable because of the grave questions, the great interests, involved: because of the determination, the desperation almost, with which it was advocated and opposed, and because of the peculiar positions occupied by the men who led the contending forces. Both were prominent candidates for the Presidency, and one of them at least has not yet given up all hope of ultimate success. They are both Republicans, and they each profess to desire the inauguration of the Presidential nominee of that party, yet upon the great question of how the Electoral votes should be counted, and by what means Mr. Hayes should enter the office to which he is entitled under the Constitution and the laws of the nation, they were as far apart, as widely separated, as are the poles. Senator Oliver P. Morton, whose fidelity to the principles of the Republican Party has never been doubted, whose very religion is to be a Republican, contended from first to last, and against overwhelming odds, that the President of the Senate was vested with full power to count the votes and declare the result, and that the compromise plan proposed by the bill was unconstitutional and illegal. Senator Roscoe Conkling, on the other hand, a gentleman whose extraordinary legal ability, power of mind, and quickness of wit are admitted by men of all parties, was the leading advocate of the plan to submit the Presidential question to the decision of a joint commission of members of Congress and Justices of the Supreme Court. In this advocacy he made a speech of seven hours' duration, thus breaking a silence which, with a single exception, has lasted since the Cincinnati Convention. He is evidently restored to his usual robust health, and last night and to-day he was warmly congratulated by the many leading Democrats who acted with him in securing the passage of the compromise. Regarding the matter of his argument there are many conflicting opinions. One distinguished critic says, "It is one of the speeches that will go down to posterity as a portion of the history of our country," and another gentleman, who occupies a large place in the public eye, declares that "It was a false argument, based upon a misstatement of facts." Regarding the manner in which the address was delivered columns could be written, for the Senator's acting and "business," to use a stage expression, were worthy the notice of even those who are most eminent in that peculiar branch of literature known as dramatic criticism. Mr. Conkling's audience was a remarkable one. The diplomatic gallery was well filled, Sir Edward Thornton, the English Minister, sitting pale, dignified, and thoughtful, in the front row. On the floor were seated all the Senators, nearly every prominent member of the lower house, the General of the Army, silent and attentive to every word, and many distinguished jurists, journalists, and politicians from all parts of the Union. The galleries were filled with the most prominent men and women in Washington society. They all came to hear and see Mr. Conkling, and, like a true artist, Mr. Conkling appreciated the situation and let the stage wait. A recess was taken for 10 minutes, but still he did not make his appearance, and the business of the day was commenced without him.

CONKLING ON THE FLOOR.

Shortly afterward the Sergeant at Arms threw open the doors of the main entrance, and the Senator from New-York entered the chamber amid a loud buzz of excitement and expectation. He walked slowly to his seat, looking neither to the right nor left as he went, until, arriving in front of Senator Morton, who sits opposite to him, he bowed low and with mock deference in response to the quick, short nod of recognition which he received from that gentleman. Then he sat down, and the business of the Senate went on. An hour afterward he rose to conclude his speech, commenced the day before. He did so deliberately, with a full realization of the fact that 2,000 people were waiting for his appearance. Every detail of his entrée, so to speak, was carefully considered, "the properties" were all in their place, and they were of the most striking and effective character. A copy of the Constitution, from which the great actor quoted, was gilt-edged and bound in dainty form. His notes were written upon cream-tinted paper; everything was in order, everything in its place. Mr. Conkling was faultlessly attired. His coat and vest opening down to the waist displayed his chest and shoulders to the best advantage. His hands, white as any maiden's, were frilled with spotless linen, and his hair, the golden splendor of which dazzled many a beholder in the days that are gone, was thrown back from the broad, massive brow with a studied carlessness which was the very perfection of art. As he took the floor he carefully pushed two obstructing chairs out of his way, and then he stood for a moment calm and self-possessed, six feet and two inches of manhood, filled to overflowing with conscious greatness. He was about to speak—indeed, he had just opened his mouth—when a page, "with frantic haste to gain the proud man's approbation," rushed to his side with a glass of water. For an instant he looked at the child as if he would have crushed him, and then, remembering the audience, he gently waved him aside, and commenced his speech.

Why he rejected the water which the poor little page offered him was soon apparent, for he had hardly commenced to speak when his own body-servant entered, bearing a silver salver, upon which was a gold-edged cup, filled with fragrant tea. Having partaken of this, the Senator went on with his speech. It was a wonderful effort—there can be no doubt about that; wonderful because of its real sophistry and false logic, and because of its apparent candor, frankness, good nature, courtesy, and high-minded, disinterested statesmanship. Principally, however, was it remarkable because of the wonderful power of memory which the Senator displayed in its delivery. He had carefully studied, committed to heart, and rehearsed every word in the oration, and at the same time he so played his part as to lead many of those who listened to him into the error of believing that it was extemporaneous. With well-studied affectation, he paused from time to time, as if to collect his thoughts, gently pressing his temples the while, seemingly to quiet his overworked and troubled brain. Then, with increased energy, he uttered the well-rounded sentences which for days had been fixed in his mind. Everything considered, his speech was the greatest specimen of "the art which conceals art" that has ever been displayed in this country. During its delivery there was but one moment when Mr. Conkling forgot himself. This was when, to give greater emphasis to what he evidently considered "a very gem of thought," he pushed his heavy arm-chair like a battering-ram toward the pale and thoughtful Senator Morton. That gentleman retreated before the towering form and mock heroic frown of his great antagonist. Seeing this, Mr. Conkling exclaimed in his most dramatic tone, "I see that the Senator retreats before what I say." "Yes," replied Morton in his blunt, outspoken way, "I will always retreat as far as I can from such false doctrine as that taught by the gentleman from New-York." For a moment, but only for a moment, Conkling was put out, and his frown was not affected. He recovered his self-possession in a second, however, and but few persons noticed that he had been disconcerted. His wonderful self-control and ability to act a part he did not feel made it seem as if he cared nothing for the sharp answer referred to, but from the moment it was given until the end he was careful to make no further allusion to Mr. Morton.

A NIGHT SESSION IN THE SENATE.

Senator Conkling's address was, of course, the principal feature of the day session, and soon after its close the Senate took a recess. At half-past 7 the night session commenced, and continued until daylight. Up to 12 o'clock the galleries continued to be filled to overflowing, and the floor was even more densely thronged than it was during the day. At midnight, however, the audience, worn out with waiting in vain for the appearance of "Indiana's great war Governor," began to leave the chamber, and half an hour later there were only a few persons in the galleries. On the floor most of the Senators were still seated, Conkling, wrapped in a flannel jacket, listlessly, but with an air of polite condescension, listened to the addresses which were being made. Dorsey, of Arkansas, pretended to be awake, but was not; Patterson, of South Carolina, defied the night and was open-eyed and watchful, as usual. Gen. Burnside, crowned with a gray skull cap which he wears to protect his hairless head, sat in the cloak-room dozing; Ferry was still in the chair, keen-witted and wide awake, and poor old Mr. Bogy, after fighting manfully against nature for an hour or more, slept peacefully upon his desk, dreaming no doubt of that happy day when what he delights to call "cold-blooded partisans" will no longer denounce as inhuman and atrocious the outrages committed by the White League of the South. This was the condition of things when the floor was at last vacant, and it became possible for Mr. Morton to speak. He was evidently in great pain. His face was white, pinched, and drawn, and in sheer pity for his suffering, Senator Sherman appealed to the generosity of Edmunds, who had charge of the bill, and asked him to let it go over until the next day. But this reasonable request was refused, and with great drops of sweat pouring from his forehead, trembling in every limb, the Senator from Indiana was cruelly compelled to make his speech in opposition to the compromise. Again, as upon previous occasions, however, his desire to do what he believed to be his duty made him forget the weakness of his body, and for upward of an hour he continued to hurl argument after argument against the bill. His manner of speaking was in marked contrast to the air of his principal opponent, Mr. Conkling. No man could doubt that he was in earnest; no man could doubt that he believed what he said, and that he spoke from deep conviction. The knowledge that he did so was felt by all his hearers, and made his plain, homespun, matter of fact expressions more truly eloquent than all the finely spun sentences and carefully polished periods of the great Senator from New-York. At the end of his address ex-Speaker Blaine, who was sworn in the day before, created a marked sensation by taking the floor and making his maiden speech in the Senate. He spoke in his usual dashing style, and, greatly to the surprise of most of his audience, opposed the bill. When he concluded it was 2:30 o'clock, and the rest of the night was spend in dull routine debate. The speeches were delivered to empty galleries and sleepy Senators, who took no trouble to conceal their condition. The cold gray dawn of the Winter morning was stealing dimly into the Capitol when these prosy addresses were finished, and it was broad day-light before the great compromise bill was passed. H. C.

THE NORFOLK NAVY-YARD MURDER.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

NORFOLK, Jan. 27.—The Naval Board has been in session at the navy-yard for several days past investigating the particulars of the shooting of the river thief, Michael Joyce, while in the act of robbing the Canandaigua on the night of Jan. 1, 1877. The board exonerated the watchmen as being justified in the discharge of their duty. Admiral Almy and the other members of the board return to Washington in the morning.

ALEXIS AS A FOX-HUNTER.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

NORFOLK, Jan. 27.—The Russian frigate Bogatyr, four days from Port Royal, S. C., arrived in the harbor this morning, and anchored near the flag-ship Svetlana, exchanging the customary salutes. The Grand Duke indulged in a big fox-hunt this morning near this city, and was rewarded with the brush of reynard as a token of the chase.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT AT FRANKLIN.

MIDDLETOWN, Jan. 27.—At the Franklin, N. J., zinc mines yesterday, by the loosening of a pile of frozen ore, James May was thrown down an embankment 20 feet, and seriously, if not fatally, injured. John Cunningham, another victim, was caught by one foot while his body hung over the cliff, the ore rolling over him. Both men are residents of Ogdensburg.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

MIDDLETOWN, Jan. 27.—William W. Cox, a leading merchant of Deckertown, Sussex County, N. J., has made an assignment to James H. Dunning. His liabilities are $50,000 and assets $25,000. Albert Thompson, of Boston, the head of the Ellenville Tanning Company, has ordered the stoppage of four tanneries at Ellenville in consequence of the withdrawal of railroad facilities by the New-York Midland Railroad Company.

VISIT OF THE PRESIDENT TO BALTIMORE.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 27.—President Grant and Secretary Robeson spent several hours in this city this afternoon, and returned to Washington to-night.

WASHINGTON.

PREPARING THE COMMISSION.

TWO MEMBERS FROM THE HOUSE SELECTED BY THE REPUBLICAN CAUCUS—GEN. GARFIELD, OF OHIO, AND MR. HOAR, OF MASSACHUSETTS — WEAK REPUBLICANS REBUKED—THE SENATORS TO CAUCUS ON MONDAY.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—The Republican members of the House met in caucus to-day to select two of their number to be presented to the House for membership of the commission created by the Electoral bill passed yesterday. Before nominations were made, Mr. Frye made a short speech, in which he spoke with some bitterness of the action of those Republicans who assisted the passage of the compromise. He said its enactment had been demanded by scared merchants and broken-down ship-builders, and not by the masses, who had elected Hayes and Wheeler. Should the commission scheme result in placing Mr. Tilden in office, the people would be heard speaking out in tones that would shame those weak Republicans who had surrendered a clear title for a game of chance. He urged that no man be selected to represent the Republican Party on the commission in whose political orthodoxy implicit confidence could not be reposed.

Mr. Hoar regarded Mr. Frye's remarks as a reflection upon himself and his associates on the Joint Committee. He claimed to be as sincere a Republican as any man. He was one of the earliest members of the Republican Party, and believed now, as he had always, that the interests of the country would be best promoted by the administration continuing in its hands. He believed Hayes had been honestly elected, and would do everything possible to make that fact apparent to all the people of the country. He believed the passage of the Electoral act was the best settlement that could be reached in view of the emergencies presented, and that time would vindicate the wisdom of that act. After further discussion it was agreed that two persons should be selected by ballot to be presented as members of the Electoral Commission. The first ballot resulted in the unanimous choice of Mr. Garfield, of Ohio. The second ballot resulted: Hoar, 17; Hale, 32; Townsend, of Pennsylvania, 17; Frye, 10; Kasson, 7; McCrary, 2. The result of the ballot was a surprise to Mr. Hoar's friends, and they at once commenced canvassing to save him from the threatened defeat. Messrs. Townsend, Kasson, Frye, and McCrary announced that they had no desire to serve on the commission, and all of them, except Mr. Frye, made individual appeals to members to elect Mr. Hoar. The second ballot resulted: Hoar, 41; Hale, 40; McCrary, 2. Mr. Hoar was still one vote short of an election, and another ballot was had, resulting: Hoar, 42; Hale 39: McCrary, 2. This gave Mr. Hoar the exact number of votes required to elect him.

A proposition was then made that a committee be appointed to act with a committee of Republican Senators to select counsel, and to arrange such evidence as may be required for presentation to the commission touching the contested States. Without acting upon this proposition, the caucus adjourned to meet at the call of the Chairman, Mr. McCrary. The Republican Senators will meet in caucus on Monday morning, and the Democrats of both branches on Monday night, to select the other eight members of the commission to be chosen by Congress.

CONTEMPT OF TILDEN DEMOCRACY.

SUCH APPEARS TO HAVE BEEN THE CRIME COMMITTED BY GOV. WELLS AND ASSOCIATES—THEY WILL BE HELD IN CUSTODY UNTIL THEY PURGE THEMSELVES OF AN OFFENSE WHICH IS SHARED BY MILLIONS OF PEOPLE.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—Messrs. Wells, Anderson, Cassanave, and Kenner, members of the Louisiana Returning Board, were brought to the bar of the House to-day to answer for contempt of its authority. In reply to questions by the Speaker, each of them answered that as Cassanave and Kenner had only arrived here yesterday, they had not had opportunity for consultation, and requested until Monday or Tuesday to prepare a reply. When their answers were made, Mr. Lynde presented resolutions on which he moved the previous question, remanding the witnesses to the custody of the Sergeant at Arms, and directing that they be required to produce the consolidated returns, affidavits, protests, and other papers relating to a number of parishes which were named.

The Republicans objected to passing the resolutions without giving the witnesses an opportunity for consultation, and tried to induce Mr. Lynde to withdraw the demand for the previous question, so that some satisfactory arrangement might be made. This was denied by Mr. Lynde, who, under the noisy dictation of his side of the House, insisted upon the regular order. Finding the Democrats were determined to force the resolutions, Mr. Kasson moved to adjourn, and this was immediately followed by a motion to adjourn until Tuesday, and the yeas and nays ordered on the last motion. After the roll-call, Mr. Lynde consented to give the witnesses one-half hour for consultation. Messrs. Wells and Anderson, who have been in charge of the Sergeant at Arms for a week, having their answer prepared, only desired opportunity to submit it to Messrs. Cassanave and Kenner, and as the time offered was sufficient, the arrangement was agreed to, and the four witnesses retired. At the expiration of the half hour they were again brought in, and their answer read by the Clerk. Not being deemed a sufficient answer, Mr. Lynde again presented his resolutions, when they were passed by a yea and nay vote. The four prisoners are lodged at the Congressional Hotel in charge of the Sergeant at Arms.

CONGRESSIONAL PASTIMES.

A HOUSE COMMITTEE'S AMUSING EFFORTS TO BE SERIOUS—TWEED'S LEGAL ADVISER IN A NEW ROLE—DID TILDEN'S MAN ROB THE LOUISIANA STATE-HOUSE?—MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—The Committee on the Powers and Privileges of the House met again to-day, and examined Louis Kenner, one of the Louisiana Returning Board. During the investigation, Mr. David Dudley Field, who is now generally known in Washington as Tilden's man Field, produced what he professed to believe was the original return from the Parish of Vernon, in the State named. This he showed to the witness, and asked him if it was not the one which had been acted upon by the board. Mr. Kenner said he thought it was, but could not say positively. "Do you notice any change or erasure in that return?" asked Mr. Field. The witness thought there was an erasure and alteration of figures, but stated he knew nothing about it, and could not tell how or when it had been made. At this point Kenner was called to appear before the bar of the House, and the examination was closed. It is understood that Mr. Field has entered upon this line of argument indicated in the hope of proving that Gov. Wells, the President of the Returning Board, altered the returns from Vernon in order to elect the Republican candidate for Parish Judge, who was a friend of his and his colleague Gen. Anderson. If the return which he produced to-day was an original one it must have been stolen from the State-house in New-Orleans, and it may not be amiss for some member of the committee to ask if Mr. Field was a party to the theft.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—The Committee on the Powers, Privileges, and Duties of the House in Counting the Electoral Votes met this afternoon and recalled Mr. De Berry, telegraph operator at Tallahassee, Fla., who testified that before entering upon his duties as operator in Florida he did not take an oath that he would not communicate the contents of any telegram to any person not lawfully entitled to know the same.

Q.—By Mr. Lawrence—Did you tell Joseph Bowes that Mr. Hewitt sent a message from New-York to members of the Democratic Committee, telling them to spare no means or money to secure the result of the vote of Florida for Tilden? The witness answered that he did not, and further that he did not tell Bowes anything on that subject.

Mr. Louis Kenner, of the Louisiana Returning Board, was next examined and testified that for eight or nine years he has kept a bar and billiard-saloon in New-Orleans. He thought he was elected a member of the Returning Board in 1872 and 1872, and, so far as he knew, the office was without limit as to duration. The Returning Board by law consists of five members, but four had been acting; in reply to a question by Mr. Field why a fifth member was not elected the witness said because of a disagreement on the part of the board. Kennedy was named by the Democrats to fill the vacancy, but he was not elected, the board being equally divided; Dr. Kennedy was a citizen of high reputation, known to the people, and commands their confidence. In further response to questions the witness said that so far as he knew none of the returns of the elections had been destroyed; Mr. Field handed him the returns of the Parish of Vernon, which he recognized as the original.

Q.—Did you not, after receiving affidavits from three precincts, strike all these precincts out? A.—I do not remember.

Mr. Field asked the witness whether he did not see there had been a mutilation, some figures erased and others substituted. The witness, after examining the return, said it looked as if the figures had been altered. He did not recollect any discussion of the board relative to the return of Vernon.

Q.—Can you give any reason why three precincts of Vernon Parish were thrown out after they had been approved as correct? A.—I do not remember any.

Mr. Field said, by asking these questions he expected to prove that the District Judge and the District Attorney of that district were neighbors of Gov. Wells, and that Gov. Wells procured the alterations to be made in the returns in order thus to elect his friends, and in this the returns of the Presidential canvass were also altered. Mr. Field further remarked that this was a part of the conspiracy to alter and fabricate returns.

The witness was asked whether the Returning Board certified to the election of Mr. Hunter as Judge, and Anderson as District Attorney? He answered that he did not know who were elected. And on being asked whether Anderson did not write a letter declining the office on the ground of fraudulent character of the returns, witness replied that he had merely heard of such a letter.

Mr. Field showed the witness a certified copy of the returns of the Parish of Vernon, in which 178 votes had been given for Hayes, while in the original returns two votes only were given to Hayes. Witness having been asked to explain the difference, said that if any returns had been thrown out he was not aware of it. It did not take place while he was in the board.

Mr. Field directed the witness to look with the magnifying glass, furnished by Mr. Hewitt, (who at this point came into the room,) at the original papers and find whether there had been any erasures or alteration. Witness, after scrutinizing the figures, said it looked as if something had been done, and as if figures had been written over the erasures. Owing to the required presence of the witness at the bar of the House, the committee then took a recess till 3:30 P. M.

THE OREGON BRIBERY CASE.

HOW TILDEN SECURED THE SERVICES OF GROVER AND THE MAN CRONIN—CIPHER DISPATCHES FULLY EXPLAINED—THE SENATE COMMITTEE INVESTIGATION.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—The Sub-Committee of the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections continued the taking of testimony in relation to the Oregon Electoral case this afternoon. The first witness examined was Mr. A. Bush, of the firm of Ladd & Bush, of Salem, Oregon. Senator Mitchell asked witness if he sent the following dispatch to C. C. Tilton, of No. 115 Liberty street, New-York, on the second day of last December.

"Sabre cause can myriad be had for subject matter needed."

Witness answered that he presumed he sent it; the dispatch was written in the business cipher of his firm, but he could not read, it as he had not the key of their cipher with him; the dispatch had no reference to the $8,000; it had reference to paying the fees of the lawyers who were retained to argue before the Governor or in any of the courts against the issuing of an Electoral certificate to Watts; witness sent the dispatch at his own instance, though he had talked of this matter (the Electoral case) with Mr. Bellinger, Chairman of the Democratic Committee of Oregon; witness thinks that the word "myriad" in the above dispatch signifies $10,000. He received the following reply to the above dispatch: "No funds to be had." Mr. Bellinger told witness that he wanted $3,000 for lawyers' fees. On the 6th of December the London and San Francisco Bank advised witness' firm that $7,200 or $7,300 had been deposited with them payable to the order of witness' firm; witness does not know for what purpose the money was placed at the disposal of his firm, but he gathered from Mr. Bellinger that funds were to be raised, and he supposed this sum was for use in the Electoral contest; he thinks a Mr. Griswold advised him that money would be placed in the London and San Francisco Bank, payable to the order of his firm; witness was at the Capitol building at Salem, at about noon on the 6th of December, and saw Mr. Bellinger and State Treasurer Brown there; he went to the Capitol on private business; he received the following dispatch from A. E. & C. E. Tilton, of New-York, on the 25th of November last: "Use all means to prevent certificate. Very important." Witness understood the dispatch to refer to Watts, but Tilton told him afterward that it referred to Cronin, but witness thinks that Tilton should, if he intended witness to understand that Cronin was the one to be prevented from getting a certificate, have been more definite in his dispatch. The dispatch of Nov. 25 was the first witness had received in relation to the Oregon Electoral case; witness' firm hold a note for $8,000 signed by R. R. Thompson and J. C. Ainsworth, and indorsed by Senator Kelly and J. F. Miller; on this note witness' firm have paid a check of $3,000 drawn by Mr. Bellinger, and a check for $3,200 drawn by Senator Kelly; $3,000 of the sum drawn by Senator Kelly was to pay lawyers' fees; a little more than $15,000 was placed to the credit of witness' firm, ($8,000 on the note above-mentioned, and $7,200 or $7,300 deposited in the London and San Francisco Bank;) witness understood from Bellinger that this sum ($15,000) was for use in the Electoral matter; he received a dispatch from C. E. Tilton on Dec. 6, saying: "Could do nothing; leave if you want; look; telegraph." Witness understood that that there were no funds to be had from New-York; the "look" referred to was for the vault of his bank. On the 7th day of December witness telegraphed Ladd & Tilton, of Portland as follows: "Kentucky aggregate—C. B. Bellinger," which was an order for Ladd & Tilton to pay Bellinger $8,800. On the 6th of December witness received the following from New-York: "Martin & Runyon have deposited medicine dollars to your account. C. Dimond." He received the following from San Francisco, Dec. 6: "Deposited $7,380 your bank. G." Witness supposed "G." was "W. D. Griswold," from whom he received the following dispatch on Dec. 5: "The funds from New-York will be deposited in bank here when it opens to-morrow; I know it; act accordingly. Answer. Witness received the following from Bellinger Dec. 8: "Telegraph Ladd and Tilton let Cronin have $3,000; he wants to start in the morning." Witness made the acquaintance of a Mr. Patrick about a week before the Electoral College met; Senator Kellogg introduced Patrick to witness; witness understood that Patrick represented some one in Nebraska, and that he [Patrick] was a Democrat and men interested in the election of Tilden; the reason witness sent the dispatch of Dec. 2 to C. E. Tilton, of No. 115 Liberty street, New-York, was on account of the dispatch received by witness from A. E. & C. E. Tilton on Nov. 25.

The next witness, C. B. Bellinger, Chairman of the Oregon Democratic State Committee, testified that he met a man named Patrick, in the latter part of last November, in the Clarendon Hotel, Portland, Oregon. He conversed with Patrick in relation to the Oregon Electoral case, and to engaging counsel to argue against the issuing of a certificate of election to Watts in case such argument should be necessary; witness retained the firm of Thompson, Durham & Hill to argue against the issuing of a certificate to Watts; Hill is editor of the Oregonian, a leading Republican paper in Oregon, and witness did not know but the fact of Hill's being editor of this paper might be of benefit to the Democratic side of the question if he retained his firm in this case, but the main reason for retaining the firm was on account of their ability; witness was one of the three men who signed the following telegram sent to Gov. Grover from Portland on Nov. 14:

Come down to-morrow morning, if possible.
EPPINGER,
NUTTKNER,
BELLINGER.

Gov. Grover did not come at once to Portland in reply to this dispatch, and when he did come he had but little to say.

The committee continued the investigation this evening, Senator Mitchell introducing a large number of dispatches in evidence, a large portion of which were written in cipher and had no signatures. The following are a portion of the dispatches thus offered:

NEW-YORK, Nov. 15.

Hon. James K. Kelly, Portland, Oregon:

Upon investigation, the legal opinion is that votes cast for Federal office-holders as Electors are void, and that the person receiving the next highest number of votes should receive the certificate of appointment. Canvassing officer should act on this rule and the Governor's certificate of appointment be given to the Elector accordingly, and the subsequent certificate of the votes of the Electors so duly made, specifying how they voted. This will force Congress to go behind the certificates, and open the way to go into the minutes in all cases, which is not only right, but will relieve the embarrassment of the situation.

A. S. HEWITT.

NEW-YORK, Nov. 10.

Hon. L. G. Grover, Salem, Oregon:

We have private advices that your State is close, and that the official count will be required to determine it, and that Republicans are devising fraudulent schemes to defeat us, and to decide you into expression as to result, be careful that the count is honest, and be certain of result before you give it.

A. S. HEWITT,
Chairman Democratic Committee.

NEW-YORK, Nov. 19, 1876.

Dr. George L. Miller, Omaha, Neb.:

Yes, go yourself. Will write you at Salem. Also telegraph. W. T. P.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 19, 1876

William T. Pelton, No. 15 Gramercy Park, New-York:

Will send better man first train—11:15 A. M. Will telegraph officer. GEORGE L. MILLER.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 19, 1876.

W. T. Pelton, No. 15 Gramercy Park, New-York:

Can't wait. Can reach destination Saturday morning. Will this be in time? Answer immediately.

GEORGE L. MILLER.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 20, 1876.

W. T. Pelton, No. 15 Gramercy Park, New-York:

By going out of question, better man gone, with authority to open letters and telegrams.

GEORGE L. MILLER.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 27, 1876.

W. T. Pelton, No. 15 Gramercy Park, New-York:

Do whatever our friend asks promptly, on a still hunt Nebraska, which you will find.

GEORGE L. MILLER.

NEW-YORK, Dec. 7, 1876.

C. C. Bellinger, Portland, Oregon:

See that the three certificates of the votes cast record their destination without fail. Governor certifies certificates only to the Electoral College as originally constituted, see that supplemental certificates are made afterward showing the college as originally constituted, when the changes, and reasons therefor. See that every point is covered.

A. S. HEWITT,
Chairman Democratic National Committee.

NEW-YORK, Nov. 8, 1876.

Hon. Lafayette Lane, Roseburg, Oregon:

See Pelton's telegrams to dellinger. If necessary go to Portland. Give us prompt information.

S. S. COX.
W. T. PELTON.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 6, 1876.

Hon. J. K. Kelly, Oregon:

Head-quarters. Telegraph me my request granted as first asked. Will make transfer to-morrow. Will programme be carried out? Answer. PATRICK.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 6, 1876.

Gov. Grover, Salem, Oregon:

Accept my congratulations. You have saved the Republic. JAMES D. FAY.

PORTLAND, Oregon, Dec. 1, 1876.

Hon. S. J. Tilden, No. 15 Gramercy Park, New-York:

Head, scantiness, cramp energe, peroration, hot-house, survivor, brows, of plamster, dotted, hot-house, exactness, of, services, highest, cunning, dotted, of, a, galvanic, survivor. By, accordingly, respectful, merciless. Of, Senator, inconsequent, cosiese.

GOBBLE.

NEW-YORK, Nov. 27, 1876.

J. M. Patrick, Salem, Oregon:

Secure your point at all hazards. Communicate with me immediately. DAVIS.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 15, 1876.

Hon. J. K. Kelly, Salem, Oregon.

Have the Governor look into the legality of giving Watts Postmaster certificate. He was clearly ineligible to be voted for. JOHN G THOMPSON."

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—Detectives Miller, McDevitt, and McElfresh last night arrested a man named Jacob H. Richardson, and recovered a portion of the jewelry and diamonds stolen at Saratoga from a large jewelry firm of New-York City last September, the thieves stealing a trunk containing diamonds, watches, &c., to the amount of $20,000. McKenzie, the principal, was arrested by these officers in November last, a quantity of the goods recovered, and he was sent to prison. The arrest of Richardson will probably lead to the recovery of the remainder of the articles stolen.

The Treasury now holds $339,032,200 in United States bonds to secure bank circulation, and $19,087,000 to secure public deposits. United States bonds deposited for circulation for the week ending to-day, $1, 571,200; United States bonds held for circulation withdrawn for the week ending to-day, $1,064,200; national bank circulation outstanding—currency notes, $320,051,009; gold notes, $2,037,390.

The following were the national bank notes received for redemption for the week ending to-day, and for the corresponding week of last year:

	1876.	1877.
New-York	$1,879,000	$2,161,000
Boston	1,940,000	1,827,000
Philadelphia	184,000	439,000
Miscellaneous	876,000	1,044,000
Total	$4,879,000	$5,471,000

The receipts for to-day were $927,000. The receipts from internal revenue to-day were $343,933 98, and from customs $195,780 62.

The Commissioner of Indian Affairs is daily in receipt of letters complaining that the Indians in the North-west need food and clothing, that there is not a supply to give them owing to the appropriations being exhausted, that there is no money to buy ammunition to hunt game with, and that they are generally in a deplorable condition.

Upon an interview with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue it is found that his exact statements to the Committee of Ways and Means upon the Amendatory Internal Revenue law were misapprehended to some extent. The Commissioner considers that the present tax upon capital and deposits, as provided by law, is large enough against State banks and private bankers, and that he had made no recommendations to the Committee of Ways and Means to increase that tax. He called the attention of the committee to the fact that there were certain bankers in the country who did a large loan business upon funds which they alleged did not come under the designation of capital or deposits, and were therefore exempt from taxation by the United States under existing laws. The Commissioner thinks it was proper that Congress should be apprised of these facts, so that if, in their judgment, it was right to provide for taxing this class of banks, the necessary legislation therefor might be provided.

The engines of the Trenton at New-York were under trial yesterday, and were working in a very satisfactory way. The Richmond arrived at Rio de Janeiro Dec. 10, from Montevideo. Commodore Caldwell reports that the city is perfectly healthy, which is attributed to the fact that the Summer commenced with unusually cool weather, accompanied by constant and heavy rains. The Richmond left Rio Dec. 30 for St. Catharines.

The Electoral Count bill has not yet reached the Executive Mansion. The President left here at noon to-day for a visit to Baltimore, and will return in the late train to-night. Affairs are consequently very quiet at the White House. Secretary Robeson has also gone to Baltimore.

The Commission for the Reform and Reorganization of the Army have reported to the President that there has been a very general discussion and interchange of opinions by them, but other important matters have so occupied their time that they have not been able to give the matter before them that attention and deliberation that the importance of the subject demands, and they repeat that they are not prepared at this time to submit a plan or make proper recommendations for the reform and reorganization of the Army. The report is signed by Secretary Cameron, Senators West and Conkling, Congressmen Banning and Hurlbut, and Gens. Sherman and Meigs. The commission convened last August and it is not likely that a report will be made during the present session of Congress.

Major-Gen. Irvin McDowell and Major T. F. Barr are ordered to proceed to Boston, Mass., on public business connected with their duties as members of the Military Prison Board, and on its completion will return to this city. Lieut. Col. John M. Brannan, Fourth Artillery—recently promoted from Major, First Artillery—will join his station in the Military Division of the Pacific. Major John Mendenhall, First Artillery—recently promoted from Captain, Fourth Artillery—will join his station in the Military Division of the Atlantic. Capt. S. Heintzleman, Assistant Quartermaster, will repair to his proper station, having finished the business assigned him on the 6th of November, 1876.

The bill introduced by Senator Allison to-day, amendatory of the Pacific Railroad acts, provides that the Union Pacific Railroad and the Burlington and Missouri Railroad shall pro-rate with each other on terms to be established by the Secretary of the Interior after making due investigation of the subject. The bill provides that for this purpose he may employ three experts and otherwise obtain opinions and recommendations calculated to throw light upon the inquiry, the expenses to be paid by the railroad companies in proportions to be fixed by him. The bill also empowers the United States Circuit Court to "compel the observance of such regulations as he may establish on the subject."

The application for the pardon of ex-Supervisor McDonald, now in the Penitentiary at Jefferson City, mentions that his health has suffered to such an extent that it is exceedingly improbable that he will recover. A pardon has not yet been granted, but it is very certain that one soon will issue in his behalf. There is no recent application on file in the Department of Justice for the pardon of Joyce, and no intimations are made that Executive clemency will visit him. Notwithstanding this, it is believed that Joyce's pardon will follow in case the favor hoped for from Government should meet other similar offenses. This is, however, not based upon any statement from the Attorney General.

The following were the balances in the Treasury at the close of business to-day: Currency, $8,626,476; special deposit of legal tenders for the redemption of certificates of deposit, $34,290,000; coin, including $53,588,490 in coin certificates, $87,728,757; outstanding legal tenders, $366,055,084.

Representative Ben Hill was in the Senate Chamber to-day. He was congratulated by many Senators. Among the first to greet him was his former antagonist in the House, Senator Blaine.

Senator Anthony continues to improve. He rode out yesterday.

Senator Blaine was on the floor of the House some time to-day. It was his first visit since his election to the Senate.

Immediately after the Electoral bill had been signed by the President of the Senate, Senator Conover, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Engrossed Bills, started with the bill to deliver it to the President, but reached the Executive Mansion about five minutes after he had left for Baltimore. The President delayed his departure to the last moment, but was compelled to leave on the 1:30 P. M. train, in order to keep a previous engagement. He will return to-night. Mr. Conover has returned to the Capitol with the bill, and will again, on Monday, carry it to the Executive Mansion and deliver it to the President for his signature.

It is understood that Judge Campbell, of Louisiana, (formerly of the United States Supreme Court) and ex-Senator Trumbull have been engaged to prepare the Louisiana branch of the arguments concerning the disputed Presidential question for submission to the tripartite commission, and that their services will probably be secured for the conduct of the case in general. It is reported that ex-Senator Carpenter will also be retained by the Democrats in connection with the Louisiana matter.

LOSSES BY FIRE.

The packing-house of the Ellenville Glass Works, together with its contents and other property, was destroyed by fire at 8 o'clock on Friday night. The loss on the glass works property, which was in the hands of the assignees of Jacob Hermaner, was $5,000 on the building and $4,000 on goods. The canal dock was damaged to the extent of $500; George Young, who had goods stored in the building, loses $5,000; H. K. Thurber, of New-York, loses $500, and Z. H. Gale and George H. Smith, on wood and railroad ties burned, lose $1,000. The only insurance is on goods to the amount of $2,500, which is in favor of the Assignees of the glass works.

At 10 o'clock last night a fire broke out in the Academy of Music, at the corner of Illinois and Ohio streets, in Indianapolis, destroying the entire building, together with H. F. Lee's tea store, Smith & Pott's grocery, J. A. Lyon's stove store, Joseph Paquette's confectionery, and Reidy's liquor saloon. Fortunately there was no entertainment in the Academy of Music at the time. The loss will aggregate $150,000 to $200,000. The amount of insurance is not yet known.

Yesterday morning a fire occurred in a frame block on River avenue, Parker City, Penn., which totally destroyed Hursam's bakery, McLaughlin's furniture store and warehouse, Gleason's clothing store, and Miller's grocery, and damaged several other buildings. The total loss is estimated at about $25,000; partially insured.

The creamery of Henry Allen & Platt Smith, two miles east of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., was destroyed by fire last night. The loss is $4,500; insured for $3,500.

A fire on Friday in the Van Orden block on Lafayette street, Salem, Mass., damaged stock of the several occupants to the extent of $3,000; insured.

A house occupied by P. Dube, a farmer, at St. Fialve, Quebec, was burned Friday night. Three children perished in the flames.

A COLD FRIDAY IN NEW-ENGLAND.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Jan. 26.—This morning is the coldest of the season, the thermometer ranging from 20° to Lewis was a tradesman when they received his invitation cards, (designed by a leading Punch artist,) and the cream of literary and artistic London were to be found at his magnificent "free and easy" dinners and suppers. The refined and elegant orgies (they were proper as they were splendid) eventuated in Mr. Lewis marrying the most charming of the ladies who graced the Bohemian festivals. Miss Kate Terry became Mrs. Lewis, and recently her younger sisters have been bidding for more than common dramatic fame. There was quite a scene at the Prince of Wales' not long since, when a section of the audience behaved almost brutally to our greatest comedy actress, Mrs. Bancroft, in order more particularly to mark their special commendation of one of the Miss Terrys. One begins to despair for the triumph of genuine honesty and enterprise when success in any direction is put down to intrigue and bribery. The Daily Telegraph has got ahead of its contemporaries in the matter of news from the East, and Truth cries "Corruption! corruption!" "It is monstrous that an English journal should sacrifice the cause of the entire press of the United Kingdom by consenting to submit to terms such as all other English newspapers have declined." We are not told what the terms are, but the Telegraph continues to get exclusive news from Turkey, and its first leader every day is a well-written defense of the Turkish position. Mr. Edwin Arnold writes this article, but the policy and tone of it is the inspiration of the editor, Mr. Levy Lawson.

To-night is the last of the "Si Sloeum" performances at the Olympic. Although the first week of their novel melodramatic entertainment crowded the halls with the aristocracy who wanted to see what "this kind of thing" was like, the engagement has not been a profitable one to the management. On Monday night "The Queen of Connaught," written for Miss Ada Cavendish, will be produced. It is founded upon the novel which, under the same title, was successful a season or two ago. Some of the papers state that the play is by Mr. Robert Buchanan, the poet. But the management tell me that this is not so. The novel was written by Mr. Buchanan's sister-in-law, and she has dramatized it, with some practical assistance. The cast is a strong one. It includes Mr. Henry Neville, Mr. Vollaire, Mr. Flockton, Mr. Hill, and Mr. Arnold. Miss Cavendish will play the part of the heroine, and a young American actress, Miss Gerard, will make her first appearance in an important part, and, if she is well enough to do justice to herself, is likely to be successful; but our treacherous climate has seized upon her, and she is suffering from a severe cold. Another great first night is fixed for the same evening. The opera of "Biorn," by Mr. Frank Marshall and Lauri Rossi, the Italian composer, is announced to be performed for the first time on any stage at the handsome but unlucky Queen's Theatre. The work has been written with a special view to the debut of Mrs. Fitzsimmon Marshall, the wife of the accomplished author of the libretto. It is five years since the lady retired from the stage to cultivate her taste for the lyric drama. She has studied under Ressi almost ever since. She has a charming appearance, and gives the most delightful parties to the inhabitants of that intellectual society called Bohemia, to which I have previously referred. Everybody hopes she will be successful; but the ordeal is a trying one, and even a moderately successful first night should be regarded as eminently satisfactory. The opera is founded upon the story which gave to Shakespeare his materials for the tragedy of "Macbeth." Signor Tito Mattei is to conduct the orchestra, which is, with the chorus, selected from her Majesty's and the Royal Italian Operas. They will be further supplemented by the band of the Scots Fusilier Guards, by permission of Lord Abinger. Mr. Marshall has taken the Queen's until Easter, and is himself at the entire risk of the speculation. His name will be familiar to the United States as the author of a very pretty comedy which has been played with success on your side of the Atlantic under the title of "False Shame."

The "Danicheff" has been accorded a favorable reception at the St. James'. The critics attack the English adaptation. It is loose, slipshod, and lacks construction. They don't give the name of the author of the work, but I betray no confidence in telling you that Lord Newry is not only the adapter but that he shares the risk and glory of the management. Mrs. John Wood looked well, and wore many thousand dollars' worth of jewels. Miss Lydia Foote made the only genuine hit of the night. The artists suffer somewhat in comparison with the French company who played the piece at this theatre last year, but on the whole the work receives justice at the hands of an unusually strong cast, which counts in the leading rôles Mrs. Wood, Miss Foote, Miss Fanny Addison, Mr. Vezin, Mr. Clayton, and Mr. Warner.

A new comedy called "Heroes," evidently written years ago on the Robertsonian lines for the Prince of Wales' company, was produced for the first time in London last night at the Aquarium Theatre. Mr. and Mrs. Billington and Miss Meyrick have been playing it on a country tour, and it was well received here, the author, a Mr. Conway Edwards, being called at the close to submit to the noisy applause of a demonstrative audience. By the way the new management of the Aquarium is making a vigorous effort to push the fortunes of that once promising institution. There is a pantomime for the mornings in the theatre, and a comedy at night. In the Aquarium, the fishy attractions have been supplemented by Marionettes, Punch and Judy, automatic chess-players, promenade concerts, and "Fine Art Exhibitions." The latest addition to the Aquarium proper is a tank of "American alligators." It is said that Mr. Barnum is shortly to pay England another visit, this time with the intention of exhibiting his museum, but more particularly to show us his tattooed man. The Aquarium is the place for him. We want a great showman in London. Our biggest theatrical showman was the late Mr. Bateman, who knew the art thoroughly. Had he lived he would have made an enormous fortune. At the time of his death he was in treaty for the finest theatrical site in London, and his scheme for a new theatre, hotel, and stores was perfect in conception and design. But the man who can successfully combine a theatre and an aquarium in Winter Garden, such as we have at Westminster, and work it upon the plan of Barnum's Museum in its palmy days, will find his reward in the establishment of an institution which will become even more popular than Mme. Tussaud's Wax-work Exhibition, in Baker street, the most popular and the most profitable of all the London shows.

A new scheme for a model theatre is being privately circulated. The plans are the work of Mr. Edwin W. Godwin, the architect who designed the scenery for the "Henry the Fifth" revival at the Queen's, and who recently married the daughter of Phillip, the sculptor of the Albert memorial. The present defects of our English theatres have long been the subject of condemnation in artistic and other circles. Of that part of the theatre devoted to the public the seat accommodation is barely more than accommodation; it cannot be called comfort. The ventilation is bad, and the exits in case of panic are wholly insufficient. The coriaria of the Colosseum have silently teaching us in vain for centuries how to empty a theatre in a few minutes. That part of the house which is devoted to the performers is notably objectionable for its unnatural and inartistic system of lighting. There is, also, the awkward condition of living and moving perpetually on an inclined plane, producing in buildings a false perspective and absurd effects. Sky borders to imitate clouds are ungainly and primitive, and scene-shifting ought not to go on in presence of the audience. Outside the margin of the stage we meet with rooms or docks for the storage of scenery, property-rooms, carpenter shops, the gas man's forge, and dressing-rooms, all inefficient, higgledy-piggledy, and ill arranged. There is no proper space or light for the painter, and everything is "confusion worse confounded." But the worst defect, and one which must have a bad influence on the stage, is the manner in which the dressing-rooms are contrived. The sanitary question is rarely or never entertained; the rooms are little better than low-ceiled closets, cheaply and flimsily partitioned, wretchedly furnished, having doors opening on passages or stairs common to both sexes, and so limited in number that, for the most part, from two to ten persons or more are obliged to live in the same room. It is wonderful that, considering these disgusting accessories, artists retain any self-respect at all. Mr. Godwin proposes a most intelligent and easy remedy for all this in a model building, the designs and estimates for which I have inspected. I am not at liberty to describe his views in detail, but one of the novelties of the idea is a flat stage, with solidly-built scenes, having no artificial or fudged perspective. By a simple mechanical contrivance these set scenes could be so arranged that the present excessive cost of carpenters and scene-shifters might be reduced to a minimum, and the time between the acts considerably saved; while another advantage would be gained in the scenery not being exposed to its present great wear and tear. The footlights would be abolished by a light placed above and in front of the stage. A small model theatre with these and other much-needed reforms—decent entrances, back and front, proper dressing rooms, and comfortable exits—can be built for £26,000, including site, and it is to be hoped that a party of capitalists will be found to provide the means for commencing a revolution in theatrical property; for nothing is more behind the age than the average English theatre, artistically, morally, and from a sanitary point of view.

One has almost ceased to hope that the moral tone of the theatre can be much changed in our day. The license of the aristocracy is very much akin to life in the days of "the Merry Monarch," and unfortunately it seeks an outlet for its waste steam in connection with the theatre. The Prince of Wales and his personal friends have done much to promote the popularity of burlesque and opera bouffe, and though this class of entertainment is on the wane, the demi-monde are always ready to rush in at the smallest effort at its revival. The Duke of Newcastle is credited with backing the Royalty management, which has revived "Orphee aux Enfers," with Mme. Dolaro and Miss Kate Santley, and the stalls are filled with a crowd of the leering young sprigs of fashion who used to be so constantly devoted to the Gaiety. If the nobility of England took a genuine interest in the stage, there would soon be a reform in all this; or if the Queen went to the theatres, things would improve; but at present every earnest effort to make the theatre respectable is impeded by sensual lords or vinous stock-jobbers who regard the theatre as a toy for a mistress. Unfortunately, as a rule, these "patrons" of dramatic art select for distinction some woman who is incompetent as an artist and who possesses no attribute in any other direction that can atone for her usurpation of the place of a respectable woman and an actress. Her next step is to get Mr. Mortimer, of the once decent Figaro, to publish her portrait in one of his catch-penny photographic albums or sketch-books, and then she gives a reception to all the aristocratic riff-raffs and hangers-on of her acquaintance, and she is enrolled as an artiste and a lady to be envied even by the capable women who have to play in the same theatre and perhaps receive their salaries almost from her hands. The truth is these uxorious lords are a public nuisance, and in these days of new newspapers, started to discover grievances and pluck out abuses from the body politic and social, it is surprising that they are not held up to the nation's scorn and contempt.

The information I gave you some time ago about the Queen's return to the world and society is now indorsed by the fashionable journals. The West-end tradesmen are throwing up their hats with joy. Not that the Queen is such a profitable customer to them, but she is the cause of other people's extravagance. Her Majesty will live for some time at Windsor, and during the season she will come to Buckingham Palace every Tuesday and stay in town until Friday. I don't profess to be on visiting terms at Windsor Castle, but you may take this news as authentic. If we are at war with Russia, the season will be a very interesting one; if we are not, it will be brilliant beyond many previous seasons, as we shall, in addition to having the royal family in town, be honored with visits from some of the great monarchs of Europe.

In view of our unusually busy season, Mr. Gye has done a clever thing. He has anticipated and outbid Mr. Mapleson for Drury Lane Theatre, so that he will direct the Italian opera at both Covent Garden and Drury Lane. The public will not benefit by the new announcement, as it puts an end to that immediate and wholesome competition which gave us so many rival novelties at the two adjacent houses. It is a pity the new house on the Thames Embankment is not likely to be ready for another year. The sinister reports put about to the effect that the scheme had fallen through, and that no more capital could be obtained, are just the opposite of the truth. The building is progressing satisfactorily, and Mr. Mapleson has found a new capitalist who has added to the fund already invested $650,000. St. Stephen's Club, which represents progressive conservatism, will have a private entrance to the opera-house. They have purchased land for the purpose. When they have added this new way to the club, the members will have advantages over every other club in London. Already they have a private way into the House of Commons, and another to the under-ground railway; electric bells communicate in every room with the division bell in the House of Commons; and when the session opens ministers will resume their weekly dinner at the club. The approaches to the Grand Opera-house will be covered with a new wood pavement. It is also pretty well settled that the new India Museum will be built upon the Embankment, which will certainly one day be the most magnificent riverside promenade in Europe.

THE EVOLUTION OF SPECIES.

LECTURE AT THE COOPER INSTITUTE BY PROF. E. S. MORSE—THE GENERIC AND FAMILY DISTINCTIONS IN THE DIFFERENT CLASSES OF ANIMALS.

A very large audience assembled in the large hall of Cooper Institute last evening to listen to Prof. E. S. Morse's fourth and concluding lecture on the subject of "Evolution," which was devoted to the consideration of the generic and family distinctions in the different classes of animals. The lecturer first explained the peculiarities of several different classes of salamanders, the strange changes of whose bodies illustrated the marvelous workings of the evolution principle, and then passed to a consideration of the peculiar traits of birds and reptiles. In its earlier development the bird presented a form so exactly like that of the embryo reptile that it was almost impossible to distinguish between them.

At a later stage the features of similarity still existed, but in a hidden state, that could only be recognized by careful investigation. They were present, however, and demonstrated the close relationship of the bird and the reptile. The lecturer next explained the meaning and significance of the term "the imperfection of the geological record," and passed to the consideration of the geological peculiarities of the western regions of America. There were not only fossil forests, but also rocks filled with the innumerable forms of reptiles, mammals, and birds. These discoveries broke down all the demarkation of species, two or more types being very often united in one fossil, justifying the evolutionist in tracing them back to the very earliest types of animals. The lecturer next devoted some time to a review of the origin and development of the vertebrae, and to the tracing in developments in the legs of horses evidences of the truth of the evolution theory. In the same way he also traced the development of rudimentary forms of organs, which could only be explained on the theory of evolution. The first chapter of Genisis did not, he contended, correctly account for the present distribution of man and animals on the globe. As the evolutionist traced back from type to type the forms of birds and reptiles to a primitive species, so he also traced back man, from age to age, to some type of being which possessed features closely related with and peculiar to both the man and the animal.

SINGING OF HYMNS IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The Paterson Board of Education at their regular meeting Friday evening condemned the singing of hymns in the public schools. The discussion arose over a letter received a month ago by the board from Rev. Max Maul, Rabbi of a Jewish synagogue on Van Houten street, in which he protested against the singing of Christian hymns in the schools as sectarian. The committee to whom the letter was delivered investigated the matter, and discovered that though secular songs were sung in most of the schools, the singing of "Hold the Fort" and "Pull for the Shore" was permitted in schools Nos. 1, 2, 5, 6, and 10. The report made to the board by the committee Friday night recommended nothing, though its tenor indicated that no hymns will hereafter be permitted to be sung in the schools.

EQUESTRIAN GAMES AND FIELD SPORTS.

There was a large attendance at Gilmore's Garden last night to witness the equestrian games and field sports. The game of polo was played between the Nationalists under Carillo, and the Californians under Mowry. The former won in four straight games, after very good play on both sides. Mr. Doherty was the winner in the fat men's footrace of two laps over four hurdles. A flat race of three laps was decided by Miss Mattie Jackson; Miss Maud Oswald, and Miss Agnes Kingston, who reached the winning post in the order named. A trotting match for $200, mile heats, best three in five, was won by Myron Perry in three straight heats. Time—2:48.

A PROTEST FROM BROOKLYN.

The Central Association of German Republicans have directed a committee to draw up resolutions which are to be sent to President Grant, protesting against the compromise bill, and requesting the President not to sign it.

THE WORK ON THE NEW COURT-HOUSE.

The work of completing the new Court-house in this City is proceeding, to say the least, after a most slovenly fashion. The iron work, which was put as a foundation for the dome as originally designed, is being torn down, but no precautions are being taken to prevent the chips of iron, bolts, &c., from falling on the heads of those who are obliged to cross the corridors of the building, and several narrow escapes from what might have been fatal accidents have been reported. In regard to the work itself, it appears that four huge brick and stone piers are being built to sustain the weight of the proposed octagonal dome. These piers, which are at points on the edge of the rotunda, promise to be a great nuisance, being placed within a very short distance of the staircases.

THE ROYAL CASTE.

THIRTY-SIX REIGNING SOVEREIGNS.

THE RELIGION OF THESE PRINCES—EMPEROR WILLIAM THE OLDEST OF THE LOT—MARRIED AND UNMARRIED—THE COST OF IMPERIAL STATE AND DIGNITY—THE LAW OF PRIMOGENITURE—CLAIMANTS TO CROWNS.

From the Pall Mall Gazette.

There are at present thirty-six reigning Sovereigns in Christendom, from the Queen of England, to whom 237,000,000 of human beings owe allegiance, to the Prince of Monaco, whom 5,741 subjects acknowledge as their liege lord. Of these Princes, ten are nominally Roman Catholics, namely: the Emperors of Austria and Brazil, the Kings of Italy, Spain, Portugal, Belgium, Bavaria, Saxony, the Princes of Lichtenstein, and Monaco. At least three of these monarchs, however, are very far from being on friendly terms with the Pope, the King of Italy actually lying under sentence of excommunication; while the King of Saxony, himself a Catholic, rules over a population almost exclusively Protestant. The old maxim of German jurists, "Cujus dominio ejus religio," has long wanted a foundation in fact. Of the remaining 26 Princes, two belong to the Greek Church, though the Czar and the King of the Hellenes belong to different branches of it. The other 24 are Protestant, 16 being called Lutherans, 4 (including the German Emperor) belonging to the "Evangelical" Confession, 3 to the "Reformed" Church, and 1 being the "supreme head on earth" of the Church of England. But the vast majority of Queen Victoria's subjects (139,000,000) are neither Protestants nor Catholics, but Hindoos, while the Mohammedans, 40,000,000 in number, are themselves more numerous than the Protestants of all denominations in the empire.

The oldest of reigning Sovereigns is William, German Emperor and King of Prussia, who completes his eightieth year on the 22d of March in the present year; the youngest is Alphonso XII. of Spain, was 19 last birthday, (28th of November, 1876.) In this list we do not count the Pope, because his Holiness can scarcely be considered any longer as a Sovereign, and in any case does not belong to the royal caste or cousinhood of reigning families, which is so distinguishing a feature of modern history. The average age of the Sovereigns now reigning is 47½ years. It may be added that five out of the 36—to wit, the Kings of Spain and Bavaria, the Duke of Brunswick, and the Princes of Schwarzburg-Rudolstadt and Lichtenstein—are bachelors, though all happily provided with heirs presumptive. There is only a doubt in one case as to whether the heir, being a Sovereign who has lost his own dominions, will be permitted to succeed to those of his cousin. At all events, the Brunswickers need not fear lest they should be left without a Governor, it being generally understood that they are the object of much thoughtful solicitude at Berlin. Of the 31 other Sovereigns, 28 have been once married, two have taken unto themselves second consorts, and one has been fortunate enough to draw three prizes in the great lottery. The morganatic marriages of certain Princes need not to be taken into account. The 31 Sovereigns have between them 95 children living, to say nothing of grandchildren, which gives an average of more than three each. The titles borne by these illustrious personages are many and various. Five have in modern times assumed the imperial style, the oldest of existing imperial titles being that of the Czar, whose predecessor, Peter the Great, dubbed himself Emperor in 1722, and was soon after generally acknowledged as such. The Emperors of Austria, as such, date from 1806; the title of Emperor of Brazil from 1822. The King of Prussia has been styled "German Emperor" since 1871; and the Queen of England has just been proclaimed Empress of India. The title of Dom Pedro II., by the way, which is that of "Constitutional Emperor and Perpetual Protector of Brazil," is worth noting as one of the rare instances in modern times in which the language of heraldry has made an effort to be in accordance with fact. So the two Italian sovereigns, who call themselves by the will of the people as well as by the grace of God, and the First Napoleon even took at one time the curious designation of "Emperor by the Constitutions of the Republic." The old Kings of France had several centuries before designated themselves "Kings by the grace of God and the will of the nobles."

The Sovereigns not being Emperors are eleven in number, seven dating their titles from the present century. It is difficult to say which of the Kingly titles in existence is the oldest. Those of Denmark and Norway seem to run each other closely. On the other hand, our own Sovereigns, though in diplomatic documents they bear a title which only dates from 1801, are called by the people they govern and by the rest of the world Kings or Queens of England, a title dating from 828, when it was first assumed by Egbert. Down to the reign of Henry II., however, the Sovereign seems to have been more commonly called King of the English. Harold II. was "King of the English and Lord of the Island of Britain." Four of the Sovereigns above mentioned bear titles originally bestowed by the Pope, the Emperor Francis Joseph being "Apostolic" King of Hungary, whatever that may mean, Alphonso XII. the "Catholic" King, and the King of Portugal "the Most Faithful" King. The Queen's title of "Defender of the Faith" was conferred on Henry VIII. for an indifferent theological treatise against "one Martinus Eleutherus," who was officially proclaimed by the Privy Council to have "erced sore." Those Princes who are not Emperors or Kings are "Princes," "Dukes," or "Grand Dukes." A majority of them will probably have ceased to exist as Sovereigns before very long. Indeed, the claim of some of the German Princes to be regarded as independent Sovereigns is somewhat doubtful. The various conventions concluded by Prussia with the various States which form the Empire have been coarsely termed "treaties between a dog and its fleas."

All the monarchies of Christendom are now hereditary and nominally constitutional save the Empire of Russia, which, indeed, Comte considered as having no part in Western civilization. The Czar still proudly declares himself "Emperor and Autocrat" of All the Russias; and if his own power sometimes appears to be a fiction, at any rate the liberties of his subjects are equally non-existent. Hence in Russia there is no such thing as a Civil List properly so-called, the Czar being supposed to have the absolute control of all the money raised for State purposes in his dominions. As far as one can make out, he does actually dispose of something like five millions sterling for the maintenance of his own imperial state and dignity. The German Emperor has not much less than three millions and a half at his disposal. His brother of Austria has a more modest, but nevertheless fairly substantial, Civil List of £935,000 per annum. Our own royal family costs us between £650,000 and £700,000, including the revenues drawn by the Queen and the Prince of Wales from the Duchies of Lancaster and Cornwall respectively. The King of Italy receives £570,000 a year. On the whole, it may be doubted whether the 36 Sovereigns and their families are in receipt of much under 12,000,000 sterling a year. Whether Presidents elected every four years would cost less, or considerably more, is another question. The present age can hardly be said to have seen a republic and a kingdom fairly pitted against each other, France having been twice cursed by six months of defeat when as a Republic she took up the legacy of war bequeathed her by the Second Empire. Yet the disasters of the French in the Autumn and Winter of 1870-71 did conclusively prove that a nation may call itself a republic without thereby acquiring any remarkable access of energy or discretion. Republics, too, have their legends, and the legend of '93 is now finally exploded. If we compare the progress made by the English of the monarchy and the English of the republic during the past century, we shall not be inclined to think that any very good arguments for the republican form of government have been urged on the other side of the Atlantic.

The succession in all the monarchies of which we are speaking is according to the law of primogeniture; but in thirty out of thirty-six a woman is incapable of reigning. In Russia, England, Spain, Portugal, Brazil, and Sweden women can reign, and in most of those Kingdoms have reigned with signal success. Elective kingdoms have long since died out, that of Poland alone surviving till the latter part of the eighteenth century; while the order of succession which prevails in Turkey is that the eldest male of the Imperial House should ascend the vacant throne. Nine of the reigning Sovereigns have, however, been called more or less irregularly to the throne. The Emperors of Austria and Brazil owe their crowns to revolutions, so does the King of Greece, and, to a certain extent, the King of Spain, though he only recovered what his house had lost. The German Empire and the Kingdom of Italy are built upon the ruins of other monarchies. The Grand Duke of Baden and the Duke of Brunswick have replaced brothers with prior titles. The King of Denmark is King by virtue of the treaty of 1852. The Prince who has just lounged on the throne is Dom Pedro II., who was proclaimed Emperor of Brazil in 1831, when only six years of age. Her Majesty is fourth on the list, and will have completed the fortieth year of her reign on June 20 next. It is curious to consider the changes in the kingdoms of Europe of which her Majesty has been a witness from the serene heights of the most solid throne in the world. It is sufficient to say that most of the existing Constitutions in Europe are of much later date than the year 1837. Two dynasties have been hurled from the French throne during this period, and one Republic was founded and disappeared. From Spain, also, two dynasties have been banished, though one has been restored, and a remarkable sort of republic was also tried and failed. Probably at no time in European history have claimants to crowns been more numerous. France alone boasts three, and what is amusing is that two out of the three are themselves oppressed by pretenders to their own shadowy rights. Prince Napoleon (Jerome) is the rival of the Prince Imperial; while a young Lieutenant in the Dutch Army disputes the claim of the Comte De Chambord to be de jure King of France, alleging that he himself is the son of Louis XVII., and therefore male heir of the House of Bourbon.

THE HASTIE-TRACY BOOK SALE.

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL AND WORKS ON LITERARY HISTORY DISPOSED OF AT FAIR PRICES—A LIVELY DEMAND FOR CATALOGUES OF FAMOUS LIBRARIES.

The sale of the bibliographical and works on literary history in connection with the disposal of the Hastie-Tracy Library by auction at Clinton Hall, took place yesterday. The attendance was above the average of the previous days, and the bidding, more particularly for rare catalogues of great libraries, was remarkably spirited. The demand for catalogues of this class has become one of the "crazes" of book collectors, and a highly meritorious craze it is. Of late years, as much learning, great industry, and discriminating research have been bestowed on catalogues as on purely bibliographical works, treating of some specific branch of literature. The catalogue, for instance, of a the great Menzies Library, sold in this City in November, was in every respect a splendid work. It was originally published at $3, and now it would be almost impossible to obtain a single copy for $5. A marked copy would probably bring $8 or $10, and in a few months the catalogue of the library at present under the hammer will be "on demand" as a curiosity. It is certainly a good, compact record of one of the most remarkable libraries ever offered for sale in this country, and, although it is pretty full of misprints and blunders, consequent on its hurried "get up," it is nevertheless creditable to Mr. Wright, the learned compiler. The first book sold yesterday which brought a decent price was Sir Egerton Brydges' "Archaica Heliconia," in five volumes, which brought in all $50. Burry's "Philobiblon" brought $4, and Griffith's "Bibliotheca Anglo Poetica" $4 25. The catalogue of the famous Fonthill-Abbey Library, (Beckford's,) $6 25; the Harleian catalogue, $6 75; (MacCarthy Reagh, (Paris, 1815,) $5 25; George Steevens' famous catalogue, "Bibliotheca Steevensiana," $3 50; the catalogue of the library of Archdeacon Wrangham, printed at Malton in 1826, $3 50. The various volumes of Dibdin Bibliography sold remarkably well, as the following prices will show: "Bibliographical Decameron and Antiquarian Tour in the Northern Counties and in Scotland," $54; "Book Madness," $20 50; "Thomas A. Kempis," with Dr. Dibdin's notes, &c., $22; "Young Man's Guide," $4 50; another edition on large paper, $11; "Reminiscences of a Literary Life," $5; "Tour in France," $2 50; "Poems," (the suppressed copy,) $6 50; the edition of More's "Utopia," $3 75, and the catalogue of the great Bibliopolis Library, $11. Among the miscellaneous works in this division the following sales may be noted as illustrating the bargains at this sale: Fry's (E.) "Pantographia," a most valuable work on the history of typography, $2 75; another copy, printed on one side only, $6; Fry's (J.) "Illustrations of Early English Literature," $6 75; Greswell's "Annals of Parisian Typography, $4 50; the same author's "Early Parisian Greek Press," $4 25; Horner's (T. H.) Introduction to the Study of Bibliography," &c., $7 75; Johnson's (John) "Typographia," in two volumes, large paper copy, $4 50 per volume; Martin's (John) "Bibliographical Catalogue of Privately Printed Books," including the Beaunatyne, Maitland, Roxburghe and Bannatyne Clubs, $3 50; "Pursuits of Literature," large thick paper copy, folio, $3 25; Middleton's (Conyers) "Dissertation Concerning the Origin of Printing in England," (Cambridge, 1736,) $3 50. Not a little rivalry took place over the sale of Wynne's work on the private libraries of New-York. This work, printed in 1860, was composed of gossiping and critical notes on the libraries of such distinguished collectors as Richard Grant White, Rev. Dr. Chapin, Hon. George Bancroft, William Menzies, R. L. Stuart, &c. It was secured for Princeton College for the modest sum of $6.

A batch of catalogues of a remarkably miscellaneous sort, numbering in all about 10,000 volumes, and weighing 30 pounds, was put up in one lot, and purchased by Mr. Ball for the Boston Mercantile Library for $36. The works in the department of art and sciences sold wonderfully cheap. To-morrow the strange, and, in the estimation of some book collectors, valuable lot of quaint and rare works which cannot with propriety be classed as belonging to any department of literature, will be sold.

MISSING STEAM-SHIPS.

THE GEORGE CROMWELL NINE DAYS OVERDUE AT ST. JOHN'S—THE GEORGE WASHINGTON OVERDUE—NO TIDINGS OF THE COLOMBO.

Messrs. Seaman & Clark, agents of the Halifax Line of steam-ships, had heard nothing yesterday of the steam-ship George Cromwell, now 11 days out from Halifax on her voyage to St. John's. The trip usually occupies three days, the distance being but 600 miles. The sea has been reported as free from ice on the route, and the icebergs do not usually begin to make their appearance in that latitude until the 1st of February. The vessel was commanded by Capt. Bacon, of Brooklyn. The first officer is Mr. Calkins, a seaman of 20 years experience; the second officer is a brother of Capt. Bacon, and the engineer is Mr. Wade. The officers and crew were 24 in number. The passengers from New-York to St. John's were William Skinner, of New-Haven, and Frank Archibald, of Brooklyn, both in steerage; W. H. Roper, F. H. Jordan, Charles E. Taylor were taken on as cabin passengers at Halifax for St. John's, and E. Kent and John Dooling in the steerage. The vessel was loaded with flour, breadstuffs, fresh and salt beef, so that were she driven out of her course and detained for an unusual time the crew would be in no danger of starvation. The steam-ship George Washington, of the same line, which left Halifax on the 18th of January for St. John's, has not yet been reported at her port of destination, and fears have already been expressed that she too has met with an accident.

Messrs. C. L. Wright & Sons have no information concerning the Colombo later than that furnished by the Americus. The only passenger on the Colombo was a Mr. Salt, and he was working his passage to New-York.

FINANCIAL REPORT OF COOPER UNION.

The annual report of the Trustees of the Cooper Union for the Advancement of Science and Art has just been presented to the Legislature, and shows the receipts for the past year from all sources to have been $50,603 30; expenditures, $50,299 64. The list of expenditures includes the following items: free night classes in science and art, $12,877 58; free art school for women, $7,901 38; free reading room, $3,411 12; free library, $4,136 06; lecture expenses, $1,056 64; legal expenses, $665 09; and other rewarding employés, $358. The current assets of the institution include a balance in the treasury at the beginning of the year of $3,220 21; rents due, $1,410 39; interest due from the Township of Pompton, in litigation, $26,000, forming a total of $30,630 60. The current indebtedness includes loans amounting to $19,016 66; and, accounts audited, $4,968 83; total, $23,984 99.

EXPLOSION IN BRONXVILLE.

An explosion occurred yesterday afternoon at Bronxville, Westchester County, in a tank or vat adjoining a factory in which rags are cleansed preparatory to their being made into paper. At the time of the explosion there were four men, all employés, engaged at work in the factory, near the vat which exploded. One of them, Thomas Wilson, was badly burned, and will probably die. His two sons were also seriously burned. The other man escaped without serious injury.

ARRIVALS AT THE HOTELS.

Lieut. E. L. Amory, United States Navy, is at the Brevoort House.

Senator John P. Jones, of Nevada, is at the St. James Hotel.

Ex-Congressman William Loughridge, of Iowa, is at the Grand Central Hotel.

Congressman-elect E. Kirk Hart, of Albion, N. Y., is at the Metropolitan Hotel.

D. O. Mills, President of the Bank of California, and Charles B. Hall, of Boston, are at the Windsor Hotel.

United States Circuit Judge Hugh L. Bond, of Baltimore; Gen. B. F. Butler, of Massachusetts; Commander Brown, of the British Navy; and Gen. William Sooy Smith, of Illinois, are at the Fifth Avenue Hotel.

JOHN STREET REVIVALISTS.

THE SORT OF MEN WHO ATTEND THE MEETINGS—BANKERS AND BROKERS CONSPICUOUS BY THEIR ABSENCE—PRAYERS FOR ALL SORTS AND CONDITIONS OF MEN.

The revival prayer-meetings which were begun a week ago in the hall No. 156 Broadway, and were afterward transferred to the old John Street Methodist Church, are kept up with a steadily increasing attendance. On Monday next the Widow Van Cott will lead the services, and, anticipating an unusual crowd, the committee conducting the business of the meetings have decided to hold the meeting in the church instead of the Sunday-school room where the meetings are usually held. Yesterday Rev. Dr. Sondder, Pastor of the John Street Church, led the meeting. He prayed, announced a hymn, read a passage from Scripture, and made an exhortation, in all consuming half an hour of time, at the end of which he said he would not use up their brief hour alone, and explained that he was there not to speak, but merely to "take off the brake and let you run the machine." Some reference had been made to ungodly men. For his part he considered all men ungodly who are unregenerate and unrenewed by the Holy Ghost. The congregation was an ordinary revival or camp-meeting one. There were many young men in the hundred or more present, and many working men, some with sachels and bags of tools under their arms and their work-a-day clothes on. They all sang, or so many sang that there seemed little real occasion for the exhortation that was made. It was not a body of "unconverted" men, if it could be judged by the heartiness of the musical services. As the verses of the hymn were sung there was a steady beating of feet in time, with the music, and a few high voices rose above the strong male chorus at the ends of the lines, where one note was carried over to the beginning of the next stave in true camp-meeting fashion. One speaker reminded the meeting that the press was recording all that was said and done, and prophesied that business prosperity would not return until a revival had visited the people. A young man who said he had 12 months ago been a skeptic and a scoffer, avowed himself saved by grace. Another speaker told about two young men who put off their consecration to go to the Brooklyn Theatre, and how both were burned in the fire that destroyed it. A woman spoke in a high voice about her conversion, and then knelt on the floor, leading in prayer. Rev. Mr. Sondder asked that requests might be made for prayers. Then followed from all parts of the room invitations to pray—for three friends, for a family almost starving, for a son, for a brother, for a sister-in-law, for those who use intoxicating drinks, for sailors, for rum-sellers and rum-drinkers, for the merchants of New-York, for a prominent lawyer who is a most inveterate drinker, for a woman in Brooklyn, for a poor drunkard who interrupted a prayer-meeting, and for the moral man. An old man of 80 years said he had been preserved to his great age without the aid of drink or tobacco Upon the request of the leader that those should stand up who desired the prayers of the meeting, a half-dozen persons stood up and immediately sank again into their seats. After singing "Coronation" the meeting broke up.

THE NORTH SIDE ASSOCIATION.

IMPROVEMENT OF THE HARLEM RIVER—THE NECESSITY OF CONNECTING THE WATERS OF THE HUDSON WITH LONG ISLAND SOUND.

The North Side Association held its annual meeting yesterday afternoon at One Hundred and Thirty-eighth street and Third avenue, Mr. John J. Crane in the chair. The report of the Harlem River Committee was read and approved. The report referred to the work done during the past year toward the improvement of Harlem River and Spuyten Duyvil Creek, and said that some advance had been made in dredging and removing rocks from the river-bed below the Third Avenue bridge. Also, that great advantage had already been experienced by the removal of obstructions on Hallet's Reef, at Hell Gate, by Gen. Newton. The following resolutions were then read and handed over to the various committees for further action.

Resolved, That the Harlem River Improvement Committee be requested to continue to urge upon Congress the great necessity of making an appropriation to commence the important work of connecting the waters of the Hudson River with Long Island Sound, thus affording a much-needed channel for the commerce in coal, lumber, and Western produce, which has to pass entirely around Manhattan Island to reach the water front of this city.

Resolved, That while this improvement would be of inestimable benefit to New-York and the surrounding cities, the Eastern States would also greatly profit by its early completion, and this committee is further requested to present the necessity for this work to the members of Congress from those States.

Resolved, That this committee be further requested to apply to the Chamber of Commerce and the Produce Exchange for the assistance of those associations in securing action by the National Government.

Mr. J. W. York offered a resolution setting forth the great necessity of communication between the old and new wards, and urged that the association request the Department of Public Parks to immediately construct a bridge from One Hundred and Thirty-eighth street across the Harlem River to the head of Madison avenue, on the plan already adopted. The resolution was adopted.

Mr. H. B. Dawson also offered a resolution, which was referred to the Law Committee, suggesting the propriety of the Law Committee inquiring into the mode by which streets have been opened by the Supreme Court in opposition to the wishes of those who own property fronting on them. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Samuel R. Filley; Vice Presidents, Jordan L. Mott, Hiram Barney; Secretary, Fordham Morris; Treasurer, Richard M. Hoe.

CITY WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

AN IMPORTANT NOTIFICATION TO MERCHANTS—THE QUESTION AS TO THE LEGAL INSPECTORS SETTLED.

The annoyance to which merchants have for several years been subjected by different persons claiming to be the properly appointed and legally constituted Inspectors of Weights and Measures, have undoubtedly come to an end. The annoyance began when four Inspectors were appointed at a time when the law only allowed two. Two of the four were illegally removed, and an uncalled for and equally illegal appointment of two others made in their places. From time to time the Mayor has been visited by persons asking to be informed who were the proper persons to whom they should submit their scales, and a dispute arising between the rival inspectors, their claims were brought before the General Term of the Supreme Court. A decision in favor of Jacob J. Banta and Theodore S. Kent was rendered. Yesterday Corporation Counsel Whitney gave notice of the decision to Mayor Ely. In his opinion he says: "The decision was concurred in by all three of the Judges holding the General Term. I am informed that no appeal has been taken from the judgment entered pursuant to such decision. But even if such appeal has been or should hereafter be taken to the Court of Appeals, it could have no effect upon the decision of the question submitted by you, unless the appellant should secure a stay of proceedings. This decision of the General Term, so long as it remains unreversed, must be regarded as settling the law in this matter, and I therefore advise you that Jacob J. Banta and Theodore S. Kent are at the present time the lawful Inspectors of Weights and Measures, and that said Banta and Kent are the only persons who are authorized to exercise in this City the powers and functions of those offices.

THE THIRD DISTRICT COURT-HOUSE.

The Aldermanic Committee on the Third District Court-house, consisting of Messrs. Purroy, Howland, and Keenan, met yesterday and resumed their investigation of the charges preferred by Mr. Robert Cushing against the architects of the building. Mr. Wheeler H. Peckham, who appeared for the defense, cross-examined Mr. Cushing at great length. In reply to the censure the witness deposed that he paid $10 for a bill of quantities, and signed an agreement to pay three-quarters of 1 per cent. commission on the amount of a contract he sought, if it should be awarded to him. Mr. Oswell, who was in the office, handed him the paper, but he did not read it. The witness said that he had bills against the City amounting to $17,205, that the architects did not certify to but opposed his b

CURRENT LITERATURE.

A DUTCH PICTURE.

Simon Danz has come home again,
From cruising about with his buccaneers;
He has singed the beard of the King of Spain,
And carried away the Dean of Jaen
And sold him in Algiers.

In his house by the Maese, with its roof of tiles,
And weather-cocks flying aloft in air,
There are silver tankards of antique styles,
Plunder of convent and castle, and piles
Of carpets rich and rare.

In his tulip-garden there by the town,
Overlooking the sluggish stream,
With his Moorish cap and dressing-gown
The old sea Captain, bale and brown,
Walks in a waking dream.

A smile in his gray mustachio lurks
Whenever he thinks of the King of Spain,
And the listed tulips look like Turks,
And the silent gardener as he works
Is changed to the Dean of Jaen.

The windmills on the outermost
Verge of the landscape in the haze,
To him are towers on the Spanish coast,
With whiskered sentinels at their post,
Though this is the River Maese.

But when the Winter rains begin,
He sits and smokes by the blazing brands,
And old sea-faring men come in,
Goat-bearded, gray, and with double chin,
And rings upon their hands.

They sit there in the shadow and shine
Of the flickering fire of the Winter night;
Figures in color and design
Like those by Rembrandt of the Rhine,
Half darkness and half light.

And they talk of their ventures lost or won,
And their talk is ever and ever the same,
While they drink the red wine of Tarragon,
From the cellars of some Spanish Don,
Or convent set on flame.

Restless at times with heavy strides
He paces his parlor to and fro;
He is like a ship that at anchor rides,
And swings with the rising and falling tides,
And tugs at her anchor-tow.

Voices mysterious far and near,
Sound of the wind and sound of the sea,
Are calling and whispering in his ear,
"Simon Danz! Why stayest thou here?
Come forth and follow me!"

So he thinks he shall take to the sea again
For one more cruise with his buccaneers,
To singe the beard of the King of Spain,
And capture another Dean of Jaen
And sell him in Algiers.

HENRY W. LONGFELLOW.

—Atlantic Monthly.

A STRANGE WITNESS.

On Saturday, the 26th of April, 1856, the usually rather over-quiet town of Eisenach was suddenly roused to wild excitement by the report of a dreadful murder, committed a few miles off on the road to Meiningen. Three inhabitants of a neighboring village, accompanied by a pointer, had, on their way to town in the early morning, taken a short cut through a wood skirting the high-road. They had to cross a but little frequented narrow foot-path, leading to a by-road to some out-of-the-way small villages in the hills about half way between Eisenach and Meiningen. When they came to this crossing, the dog, which had for a few minutes past shown signs of restlessness, suddenly tore away along the foot-path, and refused to come back at his master's call. A minute after loud barking and dismal howling were heard in the direction in which the animal had run off. Following the sound, the three men came to a clearing by the side of the path, and here they found the dog and the dead body of a man.

After a brief consultation it was settled that two of the three should stay on the spot of the sad discovery, while the third should proceed in all haste to the town to give information to the authorities.

A few hours after a posse of officers of justice and policemen arrived on the spot to make an official examination.

The dead body was that of a man about 30, rather tall and slender, yet strongly built. It was dressed in a blue-cloth jacket, gray-linen trousers, high boots, blue-woolen stockings, and a blue-and-white check cotton shirt. A few yards off a yellow-straw hat was lying on the ground. A black-leather knapsack, buckled to a strap slung over the right shoulder, was lying across the chest. It was unlocked. It had in it a couple of shirts, a vest, a few pairs of stockings, comb and brush, and some other necessaries.

The body was lying on its back. A cursory examination showed that a bullet had passed through the left eye into the brain. Death must have been instantaneous.

No firearm was found. The right hand of the dead man held a formidable dagger-knife firmly clutched.

It was quite clear, then, that the supposition of suicide must be discarded altogether. It was obviously a case of murder. In the breast pocket of the jacket a purse was found containing about twenty thalers (£3) in silver and Prussian notes, and some small change.

Upon closer inspection a pocket-book was discovered in the lining of the knapsack. There were only two papers in this, an American passport and a letter.

The passport, delivered by the authorities of New-York, simply stated that the bearer, Joseph Maria Sprenger, a native of Austria, was on his way home to his own country. The personal description of the bearer tallied exactly with the appearance of the body.

The letter bore date, London, the 18th of April, 1856. There was no envelope to it. It was evidently addressed to a sweetheart of the writer. It stated in substance that the writer had long hesitated ere he had made up his mind to pen this present matter, and that even now he was not quite sure whether he should send it off. However, most likely he would do so next day. He was on his way home, after six years' absence. He was returning a rich man, with something like 30,000 florins in his pocket in American notes. Now, if she had kept faithful to him, he was coming home to marry her. And what would they all say who had called him a good-for-nothing ne'er-do-well? It had been his intention to come home quite unexpected, so as to take them all by surprise. But he now thought it would, after all, be best to let her at least know all about it, that she might not fret—if she was indeed fretting, which he thought might be the case, as she had not heard from him for three years. But she must let nobody know. He had no envelope at hand; so he must go out to get one, and he would post the letter next morning. Then there were the usual asseverations of love, &c., with chuckling anticipations of how Peter and John, and Mary and Lizzy, and Karl and Konrad, and a number of others would feel, and what they would say, when they saw Joseph Maria come home a top-sawyer.

It was evident that for some reason or other the deceased had after all not posted this letter; most likely he had come back to his expressed original intention to take everybody by surprise. However, as affairs had turned out, the letter that was found in his pocket-book became a most important piece of evidence, as it clearly indicated that the unhappy writer had been basely murdered for his money.

Orders were given to have the body removed to the town for the necessary post-mortem examination. The scanty information gathered on the spot of the crime had been largely supplemented meanwhile by a most important statement made to the authorities by Baron Rosen von Lilienfeld, a rich landed proprietor, whose estate, Lilienfeld, extended down to the high-road near the wood in which the murder had been committed.

This gentleman stated that in the afternoon of Friday, the 25th, he was enjoying his usual after-dinner cigar in his pavilion looking on the high-road. He was leaning out of the window, gazing up and down the road, when his attention was attracted to two wayfarers coming up toward him from the direction of the town. The two were dressed very nearly alike—blue cloth jackets, wide gray linen trousers, high boots, and low yellow straw hats, with black leather knapsacks buckled to straps slung over the right shoulder. The one wore a red and white, the other a blue and white check cotton shirt. This was the only difference in their attire.

The one with the blue and white shirt looked tall and slender, and had sharp features, with a yellow complexion; the other looked several years younger than his companion, and was not so tall by something like two inches, but he was vigorously built and broad-shouldered, and had a fresh, healthy complexion. The two looked very much like foreign sailors, and the baron wondered how they came to be traveling about so far inland.

When they were passing near the window the Baron remarked that they were engaged in a lively discussion, which seemingly engrossed their attention so entirely that they looked neither to the right nor to the left and clearly did not see him. His glance followed them up the road. Some sixty yards further on they came to a sudden stop, and the discussion between them was apparently growing more eager, seemingly assuming an angry character. Shortly after, however, they evidently calmed down. They had stopped at the very spot where a narrow footpath led across the wood to a by-road to some small villages in the mountain. This footpath was barely ever trod by the general public; it was only known to the inhabitants of the mountain villages in question, who had not much occasion to make use of it.

The Baron was somewhat astonished, then, to see the two wayfarers take this path, where they soon disappeared from his sight. Now, what puzzled him was how two outlandish-looking strangers should enter a path barely known to the natives around, and what made this still more remarkable to him was that about ten minutes before another stranger had taken the same path.

This was a tall gentlemanly looking man of some 45 years of age, dressed in a long blue surtout, and wearing elegant morocco shoes with black gaiters, and a low-crowned gray-felt hat. He had slung over his shoulder a small traveling-bag of morocco leather, and bore a stout cudgel in his hand. He had a most intelligent, not to say crafty, face, and remarkably sharp dark piercing eyes, which seemed to be restlessly roving about, yet would certainly settle upon the face of an interlocutor with a strange fixity of stare, and an apparent power of penetration deep and intense enough to search and read the inmost thoughts of the soul.

Such, at least, was the Baron's impression. For the gentleman in question had, when on the point of passing the window, suddenly stopped, taken his hat off to the Baron with perfect courtesy, and coming close up to him, and looking him straight in the face, in the manner stated, said:

"I beg your pardon, Sir. May I venture to ask you whether this is the road to Gerstorff?"

To which query the Baron had replied in the affirmative.

"How far have I to go before I reach it?"

"It will take you about an hour's quick walking."

"Then I shall not be there before dark."

"No; the sun will set in a quarter of an hour."

"I am greatly obliged to you, Sir. Good evening."

"Good evening."

"And," added the Baron, "I felt very much relieved indeed when the gentleman had left me. His searching look had something so strange about it that it almost frightened me. I followed him with my eyes, and to my very great surprise, I saw him stop at the identical footpath which is known even to so very few people hereabout, and, after some short hesitation, enter it. It struck me as very extraordinary that a stranger in these parts, who apparently did not know the road to Gerstorff, should take an unknown bypath, which certainly would lead him far away from the locality to which he was professedly bound. Why should he near nightfall seek the darkness of the woods? It was while I was debating this puzzling question that the two wayfarers of whom I have just spoken came up, and when I saw them take the same path I was still more puzzled. I wondered whether any of the three would return to the road, but for more than a quarter of an hour I waited in vain.

Then I suddenly heard a shot fired in the wood in the direction which the three travelers had taken, which astonished me still more, as I knew that there was no hunting, and poaching is entirely unknown hereabout. It was clear to me that the three strangers, or some one of them, must be quite near the place where the shot had been fired, and I waited to see whether any of them would come back.

After a few minutes I was just on the point of leaving the window and returning to the house, to send some of my servants into the wood to see whether anything extraordinary had occurred, when I saw the stranger in the blue surtout, who had asked me the way to Gerstorff, issue again from the footpath; and, instead of pursuing the road to his professed destination, come up to me at the window.

By this time twilight was deepening, and it required sharp sight to clearly distinguish things about. The stranger's eyes were again fixed on my face; they shone with a strange lustre, though his face remained perfectly calm to all outward appearance, in so far as I could distinguish in the uncertain twilight.

I had a notion that something serious had happened in the wood, and that he had come up to me to give information of it. I at once asked him:

'You come from the wood?'

'Yes,' he replied, with perfect calmness.

'What has taken place there?'

'Have you heard anything?' he asked in return, coming up quite close to the window, and sending his phosphorescent glances right through me, as it seemed to me.

I must confess I did not at all like the appearance of things. It is at least five minutes' walk from my pavilion to the house. I was quite alone with the mysterious stranger; not a soul was to be seen on the road. A shot had been fired in the wood, where this man had been at the time. I was afraid a crime had been committed, and the stranger, with his very peculiar eyes and his unpleasantly close personal approach to me, made me feel quite uncomfortable. 'Good God!' I thought, 'if this man has committed a murder, and has come back here, perchance to rid himself of an inconvenient witness!' So I almost involuntarily shrank back from the window, retreated to the other end of the room.

'Why, a shot was fired just now in the wood,' I said, 'just in the direction where you have come from. What does it mean? You surely can tell me.'

But instead of replying to my question, he simply shouted to me to come back to the window, as he wished to speak to me. I naturally told him that we might just as easily converse as we were.

'Will you have the kindness to come here, Sir,' he repeated once more. 'I wish to tell you something.'

Of course I declined to respond to this invitation, as I felt fully convinced now that I had either a criminal or a madman before me.

He waited a minute or so longer, then he went away in the direction of the town muttering to himself,

'The man is a fool! How can I talk to him if he will not come to the window? Besides, it is getting too dark for conversation, and I must haste back to the railway, that I may not miss the train.'"

This was the Baron Lilienfield's statement. Orders were accordingly given to the Gendarmerie to scour the country in search of the gentleman in the blue coat, and the companion of the murdered man.

All search after the former proved unavailing, however. Nobody remembered having seen him, except the keeper of the inn in one of the villages on the road to Meiningen, who stated that he had remarked in his guest-room both the man in the blue surtout and the two foreign sailor-looking chaps. He also identified the dead body as the one of the two latter. He had paid no particular attention to the man in the blue surtout; he had observed only that he sat far away from the two others, and that he left some ten minutes before them. He should say that the two parties were unknown to each other.

On Sunday morning, the 27th of April, one of the gendarmes, named Kretschmar, came to the mountain village of Fichtenhain, where he rode up to the inn to inquire of the landlord whether any strangers had been seen there the last few days. He told the innkeeper all about the discovery of the murder, and gave a description of the man in the blue surtout and of the murdered man's companion.

"Why, then, Kretschmar," said the innkeeper, with signs of the most lively astonishment, "you surprise me indeed! I knew nothing whatever of your friend in the blue coat; but the other chap, in the blue cloth jacket, wide gray-linen trousers, high boots, white and red check cotton shirt, and low yellow straw hat, is ever now here in this very place, in which he was indeed born. His name is Conrad Tuchmann; he is the only son of the village tailor. He left the place when he was barely fifteen. Some four years ago he returned, but only for a few days. He had learned the trade of a blacksmith, and had saved money enough, he said, to take him to America, where he was determined to try his luck. Yesterday morning he came back, as I hear, with a well-filled purse. Why, if what I hear is true, he is worth some twenty thousand Prussian thalers! Only think! And he suspected of murdering his companion! Why, it is awful! Oh, the greed for money is a fearful thing!"

Yes, it was as the innkeeper said. On Friday night, at about midnight, a loud knocking at the tailor Tuchmann's door had startled the inmates—the tailor and his wife, and a widow, who rented a room in the cottage—from their first sleep. Mrs. Tuchmann had got up and opened the window to ask who was there. "Conrad!" a voice had answered, which the mother, overjoyed, knew for her son's. Upon this the father had jumped out of bed to open the door to his beloved boy. Even the widow lodger had left her couch to witness and share the joy and happiness of the two old people and their child, restored to their arms after four years' absence from home. No going to bed again that night. Father and mother must take their fill of looking at their handsome son, a young man now of about twenty-five, with a fine open face and a vigorous frame; in stature a little above the middle size. He had, of course, to tell all about his travels, to which the old people listened with rapt attention. But when he came to relate how he had been in the golden land of California, and had there picked up the precious metal to the tune of some 20,000 Prussian thalers, the mere mention of such a sum fairly took the old people's breath away. And when he produced a large oilskin parcel and took from it a lot of engraved papers, which he declared to be American notes to the amount named, father Tuchmann suddenly took his wife by the hand on one side, and the widow Lehmann, who was a first cousin of his, on the other, and danced with them, who were quite equally elated, up and down the room, out into the passage, and up and down staire, back again into the room, until the three had to sit down thoroughly tired out.

When the first enthusiastic burst was over, however, the mother could not help perceiving that her Conrad did not seem altogeter at his ease. He would suddenly start up from his seat and listen with fixed attention to some fancied noise outside. Then, again, he would be absent-minded, lost in thought apparantly, so much so indeed, occasionally, that his father had to repeat the same question twice over before an answer to it could be got from him.

He attributed this strange behavior to the fatigue of his journey and to over-excitement. He told his parents he would soon get over that. He said he would have to go to town the first thing on Monday morning to make a statement to the authorities, which might perhaps cause some temporary trouble; but it would be all right in the end, he was quite sure. When his parents pressed him to be more explicit, he told them not to trouble about it; it was all right. He would tell them on Monday morning before leaving for town.

So the Saturday passed and the Sunday morning. The mother went to church with the widow Lehmann, the father and Conrad stayed at home. After church the dinner was put on the table. It was again remarked that Conrad partook only sparingly of it, and that he was showing signs of increasing uneasiness.

Suddenly the door opened and there appeared the gendarme Kretschmar, accompanied by the Mayor and two village Constables.

Conrad Tuchmann turned white as chalk, and trembled violently. He made an effort to rise from his chair, but he could not. He seemed to have suddenly lost all power over his limbs.

His mother was also frightened at this visit of the authorities; she rose tottering from her chair; but when she cast her eyes upon her son, her heart failed her altogether, and she fell with a low wailing moan into her husband's arms, who, pale as death, could with difficulty keep his own legs.

"Great God in heaven! My son, my unhappy son!" he cried, bursting into a flood of tears.

Kretschmar stepped up to Conrad.

"Your name is Conrad Tuchmann?" he said, with official brevity.

"Yes," replied the unhappy young man, in a scarcely audible voice.

"You have returned here a few days ago?"

"Yes," in the same low tone.

"When did you come here?"

"In the night from Friday to Saturday."

He made a supreme effort to recover his composure. He succeeded to some extent at least. He addressed the gendarme ere the latter had time to ask him the next question.

"You want me about Joseph Maria Sprenger?" he asked, in a firm and steady voice.

"Yes; it is about him that we are here. Can you give any information about him?"

His courage seemed again to have fallen. With a fresh effort he recovered himself sufficiently to reply firmly,

"Yes, I can—unhappily."

"Well," continued Kretschmar, "what have you to say?"

"The body has been found then?" queried the young man in reply.

"It has," said the gendarme, fixing his eyes sharply on the ashen pale face before him. "Well?"

"I have killed him!" It was with unspeakable difficulty that he forced the ominous words through his bloodless lips. Then he added more freely, and with a certain natural dignity which almost impressed the habitually rather unimpressionable gendarme with a vague notion that there might be some mystery in the matter, "I have killed him, indeed; but I have not murdered him."

When Conrad uttered the words "I have killed him," his poor mother slid from her trembling husband's feebly-supporting arms, and fainted away on the ground.

Father Tuchmann sank torturing down into a seat, with scalding, blinding tears coursing down his sallow cheeks. "O, my God," he moaned; "and I had prayed You so fervently to preserve his life, and to send him back to us safe. And now! O, my merciful Creator! I wish he had died long ere this. A murderer and a thief! Curse the money which tempted him! Curse—no, I will not curse him. His fate is hard indeed to bear without a father's curse."

"No, oh, no, father, do not curse me!" cried Conrad passionately. "I am innocent! I swear it! Look at me, father. Do I look like a murderer?"

It was very true, indeed, he did not look like a murderer. Yet he had even just confessed that he had killed a man, and his conduct ever since he had returned to his home had been so inexplicably strange, that the wild hope which his asseveration of innocence was conjuring up in his sorely-stricken father's mind soon died away again in deeper despair.

Conrad turned to the gendarme: "I am innocent, Mr. Gendarme," he said pleadingly, "innocent in intention. On my soul, I am. Let me explain the whole affair, I entreat you."

"No," returned Kretschmar with stern decision of voice and manner; "no. I am not a Judge of Instruction or an examining magistrate. My duty is simple, however painful. I have only to arrest you on a charge of wilful murder, and to call upon you now to produce all your effects—everything, in fact, belonging to you here."

So, while Tuchmann, the father, assisted by the widow Lehmann, who was also most painfully affected by this dire calamity which had so suddenly befallen the wretched family, endeavored to restore his poor wife to miserable consciousness, the gendarme, attended by the three village officials, who, simple good fellows, could with difficulty keep back their sympathizing tears and sobs, proceeded to search every nook and corner of the house.

The result of the search was a pocket-book, with a few unimportant letters and a few occasional notes, which clearly did not refer to the crime the prisoner was accused of; a small highly-finished six-barreled revolver, with one out of the six chambers discharged; about a hundred thalers in gold and silver coin and Prussian notes, and an oilskin parcel with some twenty thousand thalers, or three thousand pounds sterling in American notes.

When the search was ended, the gendarme sternly intimated to his prisoner that he should remove him at once to the assize town, there to await in the jail his trial for the wilfull murder of Joseph Maria Sprenger and the robbery commited on the dead body. He told him to get ready at once.

The prisoner meekly declared that he was prepared to go; he made a passionate appeal to Kretschmar and the Mayor to allow him once more to embrace his parents. Officials in Thuringia are not very hard-hearted as a rule. So, after a brief demur on the part of Kretschmar, who objected that the regulations of the service were dead against such an indulgence under the circumstances, but gave way cheerfully when the Mayor promised to take the responsibility on his own shoulders, Conrad was permitted to take leave of his unhappy family.

To this end he was taken back to the parlor, where he found his mother utterly prostrated, weeping and wringing her hands, and his father gazing vacantly through the window-panes with a dull glare of despair.

When Conrad went up to his mother to embrace her she waved him off and turned her face away. He looked at her with unspeakable sadness. He uttered only one word, "Mother!" but with an accent of such passionate entreaty that it went straight to the mother's heart. The old woman started up, to throw her arms lovingly round her boy, and sobbed spasmodically as if the strings of her heart were giving way.

The son then went up to the father, who was still vacantly gazing through the window-panes. "Father," he said, softly, "shake hands—you may indeed—mine are not stained with innocent blood."

The father turned round sharply, and looked fixedly into his son's eyes.

"You are innocent, then, Conrad?"

"I am, father, as God is my witness! I slew that wretched man in self-defense. He would have taken my life. I sought not to take his. God, who searches the heart, and before whom no falsehood can stand, He knoweth that I am speaking the truth."

"I believe it, Conrad, I believe it. God will bring it all to light in His own good time." The old man seized his son's hand, and held it for a moment clutched in a spasmodic grip; then he dropped it, and turning again to the window, said, in a broken voice, "Go, my son, go! God be with you!"

One of the Constables had meanwhile fetched the vehicle for the prisoner's removal to town. Conrad and the two Constables guarding him got in, and the cart then drove off, Kretschmar riding behind.

The two old people, left alone in their dread and misery, naturally turned them to the great universal Source of all consolation. In their simple piety and childlike faith in an all-ruling Providence, they knelt to the Almighty Disposer of events, breathing their fervent, trusting prayer up to His throne; and behold they were comforted, and peace and hope came to their souls.

It was about four months after the scene just described. The assize was on, and the court sitting.

The case appointed for trial was a charge of willful murder, with robbery from the person, preferred by the Attorney General, Dr. Mertens, against Conrad Tuchmann, of Fichtenhain.

The court was composed of Councillor Ortloff of the High Court of Appeal, President or Chairman, and Councillors Franke, Weruecke, and Rodbertus, Assessors or Judges.

The court was crowded in every part.

All eyes were turned on the prisoner, who, in the opinion of the great majority of the audience, certainly did not look much like a ruthless murderer that would atrociously take away any human life for the sake of plunder. He looked a fine young man, with an open countenance, albeit the stamp of deep mental depression and acute moral suffering was unmistakably set upon his features.

After the act of accusation had been read, the President of the court, Councillor Ortloff, put the customary question to the prisoner whether he pleaded guilty or not guilty.

Upon this the accused rose from his seat. "Not guilty," he answered, in a firm voice. The President was proceeding to the examination of the prisoner in the usual way of Continental criminal courts, when the accused's advocate rose to request the court to concede to his client the legal right of declining to answer any questions until the depositions of all the witnesses had been heard. In compliance with this demand the President abstained from his intended examination of the accused, and proceeded instead to the examination of the witnesses.

The witnesses deposed to the facts already detailed. The only additional piece of evidence was a small conical bullet found in the dead man's brain, which was exactly of the same shape and size as the five bullets extracted from the undischarged chambers of the revolver found among the effects of the prisoner.

Among the witnesses heard for the prosecution were, of course, the Mayor and Constables of Fichtenhain, Kretschmar, and the widow Lehmann. The Attorney General abstained from calling the poor parents for the prosecution, leaving it free to the defense to call them.

The charge against the accused was supported by the clear facts of the case, his own partial admission, the depositions of the witnesses heard, and, more especially, also the damning statement in the letter found in the murdered man's pocket-book, which mentioned the identical sum of money in American notes which he [deceased] was bringing home with him, and which was afterward found upon the prisoner.

The theory of the prosecution, based upon these facts and the almost inevitable corollaries deducible therefrom, was extremely simple. Deceased and accused had been together in search after gold in the land of California; they had been successful; they had divided the produce of their labor; they had left America and returned to Germany in company. The prisoner would seem to have lost by some means or other the whole or the greater part of his share; or, upon the assumption even—which would stand altogether unsupported, however—of some exaggeration in the figure stated in the letter found in the murdered man's pocket-book, he, (the prisoner,) not satisfied with his own fair share, would seem to have coveted his partner's also. So it appeared quite clear that, knowing his trusting companion to be an entire stranger in these parts, and believing therefore that his disappearance would pass unnoticed, he had, with malice prepense, led him through a part of the wood which he, a child of the land, knew to be rarely trodden by man, and had there foully assassinated him, and appropriated his wealth. There could barely be a doubt that he had confidently expected that the body would not be found for weeks or even months, when its ultimate discovery might, indeed, be a nine days' wonder, which would soon be forgotten. But it had fallen out otherwise than the murderer had sanguinely hoped. Providence had almost immediately brought the crime to the glaring light of day; and so here the prisoner was at the bar of the court to be tried for his life, a warning example, it was to be hoped, for all evil doers.

There was one point more particularly insisted upon as an aggravating circumstance telling fearfully against the accused, to wit: that he had obstinately refused to aid the authorities in their official endeavor to ascertain something of the origin and antecedents of the murdered man. He had malignantly taken refuge, it was averred, behind his pretended total ignorance of the former life of his late companion. The New-York passport simply stated Austria to be Sprenger's native land, and in the letter found in the pocket-book there was not even one family name mentioned or one locality alluded to that might put the authorities upon the right scent. All efforts, then, to know something of the victim had unhappily proved ineffectual. The pretense put forward by the accused that he knew no more than the name of the man with whom he had lived for several years in the closest intimacy must be held to be barefacedly false upon the face of it.

When the examination of the witnesses for the prosecution had come to an end, the President addressed the prisoner.

"Accused," he said, "in the course of the preliminary proceedings against you, you have given your version of this most fatal affair. It rests with you now to decide whether you will repeat your own statement here, or whether you wish me to read your deposition to the jury."

The prisoner held a brief consultation with his counsel, when the latter intimated that his client claimed the court's leave to make his statement to the jury.

Leave being granted, the prisoner rose to speak.

His voice, uncertain and trembling at first, gained confidence and firmness as he proceeded.

"Sir President and honorable court and gentlemen of the jury," he said, "I am a native of these parts, as you all know. I left the place of my birth very early in life—at the age of 15. I went first to Weimar, afterward to Erfurt, to learn the handicraft of a locksmith. The criminal Judge, [the examining magistrate,] before whom I have had to appear so often, has kindly told me that all the inquiries made about my conduct in Fichtenhain, Weimar, and Erfurt have shown that I was not a lad of evil life. I had saved a little money—I was always dreaming of the marvelous land beyond the great ocean; I wanted to try my luck there. So, about four years ago, I went to see my dear parents, after an absence of six years, to take leave of them. In due course of time I reached New-York, not in search of fortune, but to gain a decent living by hard honest work in my trade. Well, I did not find there what I was seeking. At this time marvelous tales came to me from the gold land of California. Finding that in New-York I could barely succeed in securing a hand-to-mouth subsistence, I made up my mind to try my chance in California as a gold seeker. I had been told by some who had returned from there with comparative wealth that it always takes two stout, honest fellow-workers, that will stick to one another, to succeed in the gold-seeking business. So I was looking out for a partner. On my way to California I came across a chap who, it seemed to me, would suit. This was Joseph Sprenger. He was a few years older than I, but to all appearance a light-hearted, devil-may-care fellow. He told me he had been long wandering about in search of fortune, and had found a slice of it several times, but had always somehow thrown it away again. He was much taken with him, and we easily struck a bargain between us. We reached the gold lands all right, and after a time we fell in luck's way. We worked hard for something like three years, after which we returned to New-York with the produce of our labor. When we had realized, we found ourselves in possession of above thirty thousand American dollars, to be equally shared between the two. We resolved to go back to our native land. We purchased cash for fifteen thousand dollars American notes; the remainder of our store was to pay our traveling expenses.

I had even in California found that Sprenger was far from steady. He was overfond of the company of topers and gamblers, it appeared to me; still, he was easily led, and I had great influence over him, so no great harm was done till we reached New-York.

Here I found it no easy work to keep my partner away from the liquor bar and the cards and the dice. I saw, to my sorrow, that Sprenger was a passionate gambler; and from the hints and remarks he would occasionally drop I had good reason to believe that he had more than once or twice willfully thrown away the fairest chances, and I therefore had great cause to fear that he might be tempted to do the same thing again. However, by dint of careful watching and friendly remonstrance, I managed to keep him pretty straight until we reached London at last.

Naturally wanting to see the sights of that wonderful city, we agreed to stay there a short time. One day, when we were visiting the great Museum, we got accidentally separated, alas! for from that unlucky hour dates the fatal chain of misfortunes, leading ultimately to the sad death of my late companion and friend, and to my appearance here in peril of my own life. Sprenger did not return to our lodgings till late next morning. He had been drinking hard; he was full of boisterous mirth; he met an old New-York friend, he told me—a jolly fellow—and they were going in for a little London life new. I remonstrated with him as a friend; I warned him to distrust his New-York acquaintance. He took a handful of gold and silver from his pocket, telling me, with great glee, that he could take care of himself, and that he had won this little lot of the New-Yorker, and was determined to have another sky at him that very night. Well, I warmly argued the case with him, and I thought I had got him all right. He promised to follow my counsel, and agreed to stay at home that day. In the afternoon—it was the 18th of April—he sat down to write a letter. He wanted an envelope—there was none; I told him we could get one on our way to supper, and he might post his letter next day. He finished his letter then, and put it into his pocket-book. Just then the landlord of the house came into our room, to ask me to look at a lock up stairs which had got jammed, as he understood that I was a locksmith.

went. When I returned, five minutes after, I found Sprenger gone. I did not see him again till 3 o'clock next morning. He looked as pale as death. 'My money is gone!' he exclaimed frantically; 'gone—every note of it, every dollar, every cent! I am cleaned out! I am a beggar!' He was fearful to look at in his frantic despair. I tried to calm him. At last I got out of him, bit by bit, that he had taken advantage of my short absence to go away to meet his New-York acquaintance; that they had had supper together, with lots of wine and spirits; that he had then been taken by his vile tempter to a 'sang' gaming hell, among a lot of strangers, who had been playing recklessly for hundred and thousand pound notes, as he was told and believed. The demon of gambling had then come over him, and he had ultimately been stripped of every cent. In his despair he had shown fight, when he was knocked down senseless; and on recovering he found himself lying at the foot of the Nelson Monument in Trafalgar square. He was altogether unable to point out the house, the street, or even the part of London where he had lost his all.

We were total strangers in London. There was nothing left for us, then, but to put up with things as they unfortunately had turned out, and to get away as quickly as we could. I clearly understood now that Sprenger had not the least control over his passions when once excited. His wretchedness and despair touched me deeply, however. I offered him five hundred dollars of my share to enable him to go back to California. He frankly told me it would be no use, unless he could find another companion to watch over him as I had done. No, he would rather go home to his native place in Austria; and if I would give him the five hundred dollars he might begin life once more there with a fair chance.

So it was settled. He was to come along with me to Fichtenhain, where I would hand him the money. I would meanwhile pay all expenses; and I gave him a score of thalers or so to put in his pocket.

We came over by steamer to Hamburg, thence by railway to Eisenach. The rest of our journey to Fichtenhain we were to make on foot. On our road we went into an inn for refreshment. After dinner there we set out again. Ever since our arrival at Eisenach station Sprenger had seemed rather strange. Soon after we had started on our walk he asked me quite abruptly whether I really meant to give him five hundred dollars, and then again whether I meant five hundred dollars and no more. I told him that I meant to give him the five hundred dollars promised, and the remainder of the cash in my purse, which might come to sixty thalers or so. When we had passed Lilienfeld, and reached the little footpath in the wood, so well known to me from my childhood, he suddenly stopped, and told me that he would rather not go along with me to Fichtenhain, and would take his money there and then. This he said in a blustering, half-threatening way, giving me an ugly look which really disconcerted me not a little. We were seemingly alone in the wood; not a soul was to be seen on the road. Indeed, I had known Sprenger as an apparently good-natured fellow; but as I had found by sad experience that he could so easily let the passion of gambling master him, it naturally occurred to me that he might give way with equal facility to other passions, and that it would be the height of imprudence to give him a chance to strip me, perhaps, of all I possessed.

I therefore firmly declined to let him have the money then. I told him he must come along with me to Fichtenhain. He consented at last with a very bad grace. When we had been walking some ten minutes, he suddenly said he felt so tired that he must rest a little. I consented, and we seated ourselves on the trunk of a fallen tree. He seemed to make it a point to keep away from me as far as he could. I did not like his face at all.

'Look here,' he said, 'Conrad, you had better give me the money here: I can walk back. I will not go along with you to your village; and you had better make it five thousand dollars instead of five hundred. You know we made the money together. You could not have done it alone—as little as I could. I have had bad luck, true; but I mean to turn over a new leaf, and to do this I must have five thousand dollars. I might even ask you to give me the half of the money, but I will be satisfied with a third—hand it over, then!'

I was fairly startled. But I tried to keep my composure. I stared at him; his face looked as if meditating mischief.

'Joseph,' I said at last, after a few moments' thought, 'I have been a good friend and companion to you, and I mean to be so now. You have foolishly, nay wickedly, gambled away your share of our earnings; I am afraid you will do the same over again if you have another chance. Still, I will consent to give you two thousand dollars instead of five hundred when we reach Fichtenhain; and if you can hereafter show me that you have turned over a new leaf, you shall have the other three thousand you demand. There! Mind, this is my last word; so we had better be off, for you see evening is closing in.'

As I was talking I glanced at Sprenger's face sideways. It cleared, and for a brief time he looked the old good-natured fellow again.

'All right, old boy,' he said, 'that will do; I will trust you. Let us be moving.'

At this moment we heard a rustling noise, and immediately after a stranger stood before us; a middle-aged man, dressed in a long, blue surtout—the same, in fact, who has been described by the Baron Lilienfeld.

We had met this gentleman before, I recollected, at the inn where we had dined. He sat far away from us in a corner. I should have taken no notice of him had he not stared at me and Sprenger in a most extraordinary fashion, his eyes traveling restlessly from one to the other. He made me feel somewhat uncomfortable, indeed, and I called Joseph's attention to his strange ways; but Joseph clearly was on other thoughts intent and took no notice. The strange gentleman, however, left the inn before we did, and I had forgotten all about him when he so suddenly made his appearance before us.

He stared at us with his weird eyes, which made me feel quite uneasy.

'Good evening, gentlemen,' he said politely. Then fixing his eyes intently upon Joseph, he said to him, in sharp, incisive tones, almost threatening, 'Look you, Sir! there has been a witness to what you have been saying. So you had better beware, and mind what you are about.'

He turned round sharply, and had disappeared in the wood before either of us had recovered from our surprise. I observed that Joseph looked greatly troubled, and kept his eyes fixed in the ground.

We rose to go. Joseph walked before me with long rapid strides. Something was working in his mind clearly; for he was jerking his arms about in a strange fashion. All at once he turned round to me, his face once more wearing the old ugly look.

'Conrad,' he cried, 'give me the two thousand dollars here, and let me go back. I will not go to Fichtenhain with you. I am sure you want to do me. You will not keep your promise when we get there. Give me the money at once.'

I firmly replied, 'No; you get nothing until we reach Fichtenhain, when I promise you, on my soul, you shall have the two thousand dollars, but not a cent till then.'

He sulkily went on. I saw, to my horror, that he put his hand into the right pocket of his trousers. I knew that he carried a large spring dagger-knife there. I instinctively felt for my revolver in my breast-pocket. I drew it, to be prepared for all contingencies. He suddenly turned upon me, trying to lay hold of me with his left hand, brandishing the open knife in his right. 'Dog!' he cried, his face distorted with evil passion, 'your money—and your life!'

I sprang sidewaya to avoid the desperate clutch of his left hand. He followed me. I cocked my revolver. 'For God's sake, Joseph,' I cried, 'mind what you are about; remember there is a witness against you.'

He laughed a fiendish laugh, and continued his efforts to reach me with his knife.

'I fire, Joseph,' I cried desperately, 'if you do not keep off.'

He made another fierce plunge at me, I was distracted, half with fear, half with anger, I must confess—anger that this vile murderous wretch should want to kill me, in return for my kindness to him. He was upon me. I fired. He fell with a deep groan. I recovered my senses. I bent over him. He was stone dead. I assure you, on my soul's salvation, gentlemen of the jury, that I was in a most pitiable state. I hoped at first the stranger in the blue coat would return. He could not have gone very far; he must have heard the shot fired. I waited in vain; he did not come back. I remained alone with the dead. At last I recovered sufficient composure to think of continuing my way home. The rest you know.

And now, Sir President and honorable court and gentlemen of the jury, you know all. God Almighty is my witness that I have spoken the truth. It has been a most fatal affair to me throughout. I killed Joseph Sprenger in self-defense; I repeat it. Yet his death lies heavy at my heart. I could almost wish it had been the other way, and he had stabbed me. As my evil star will have it, that stranger, who could testify in my favor, has not been found. He has disappeared without leaving a trace behind. I can, then, only once more solemnly appeal to the Almighty Creator of the world to be my witness. I have been brought up religiously, gentlemen of the jury. I would never take the name of the Lord in vain. Believe me, then, gentlemen, I implore you—believe that I speak the truth. May God guide you!"

Here the prisoner, who had spoken throughout in a calm, firm, clear voice, broke down, and sank back on his seat.

Although his statement had appeared clear and consistent in every part, and the manner of his delivery had, in its very simplicity, borne the impress of truth upon it, yet it was evident that it had not carried conviction to the minds of even the audience in court, and still less to the jury and the Judges.

"Conrad Tuchmann," said the President, "it is not my wish to weaken the impression which your statement may have made upon the jury. I will add that it agrees in detail with everything you have said before the examining criminal Judge in the preliminary proceedings. I will not even call it simply plausible, lest I should thereby injure your case and weaken the force of the defense which your counsel will, in due time, plead before the court and jury. Nay, I will even go so far as to admit that there is no inherently wild improbability in any part of it. But, after making this large measure of concession, I deem it still my imperative duty to point out to you certain weak and doubtful parts of your statement, and to ask you to explain them if you can. First and foremost, I have to inquire of you how it happens that you profess to know nothing whatever of the deceased Sprenger except that his Christian name was Joseph Maria, and that he was an Austrian?"

"His passport says no more, Sir President," meekly objected the accused.

"True, but then we all know that they are not particular about passports in the New World. However, you were the man's friend and companion for years. It is barely credible that you should never have conversed together of your birthplaces, families, school-years, and many other subjects in which people, more particularly far away from their native lands, are apt to take a lively interest. How is this? Can you account for it in any way?"

"I can only repeat, Sir President, that we never talked about such matters. I am not inquisitive by nature and temperament, Sir President, and I assure you it never occurred to me to ask Joseph about his home and his family. I thought I knew the man, which was sufficient for me to know subtlety of his analytical mind, and his unrivaled power of proving almost anything he has set his mind on to prove. Where is this mysterious witness who is so passionately adjured to step forth in support of the" (with a sneer) "ingenious romance of the defense? I have a shrewd notion, gentlemen of the jury, that if the witness were to appear he would turn the tables upon the prisoner; he would irrefragably show that the prisoner has fitted his own story, his own character, his own acts and deeds, upon his now dumb-mouthed victim. Do we not know that almost anything may be safely put upon the dead?—they cannot contradict; they cannot disprove. No matter. I ask again, Where is this mysterious witness? Where is he? where? Alas, echo answers —"

"Here!" said a tall blue-coated gentleman blandly, stepping into the witness-box, to which a young barrister had led him.

The surprise in court was intense and universal. It was a coup de théâtre on a real stage.

"The stranger! The mad stranger!" exclaimed Baron Rosen von Lilienfeld, involuntarily.

"My witness! Gracious, merciful Lord in heaven, my witness!" cried the prisoner, with an hysterical sob; then, throwing himself on his knees, with his hands folded in thankful prayer, he ejaculated, in accents which all in court felt came from the depths of his heart: "In Thee have I put my trust, O Lord! To Thee have I called in my sore tribulation; and, behold, Thou hast mercifully heard me! Praised be Thy holy name!"

This made a deep impression upon all, except upon the new witness in the box, who took no heed of it, nor showed any sign of irritation at being called mad in open court. Since his appearance on the scene his eyes had hung on the Attorney General's lips. Now they were intently fixed upon the President's face, of which they seemed to be taking possession and stock at the same time.

The President had risen to request the Attorney General to suspend his address, as a highly-important witness in the case had unexpectedly turned up. He [the President] had just this moment been informed of this by Counselor Göckel, (the elder of the two barristers who had brought the witness to court.)

"Your name, witness?" asked the President.

"Martin Hessler, Sir President. A native of Elberfeld, in Rhineland-Westphalia, passing through here on my way to Hamburg. Here," handing a folded paper to the usher, "is my legitimation."

The paper was found to be a passport, in perfect order, with several leaves attached to it covered with a wilderness of visas, showing the bearer to be a frequent and extensive traveler.

"Your station, profession, or business?"

"I have a moderate independence, Sir President, and follow no profession or business."

"Are you aware of the subject of these proceedings?"

"Yes, Sir President. Having accidentally gone to dine in the Schwarzen Mohren, I gathered the subject and nature of these proceedings from the conversation of the gentlemen at table."

"Have you any evidence to give in this case?"

"Yes, Sir President."

"Are you ready to give such evidence, and to affirm the truth of it upon your solemn oath?"

"I am, Sir President."

"Look at the accused. Do you know him? When and where have you seen him before?"

The witness looked at the prisoner, who had meanwhile partly recovered his composure. He then fixed the President again with his magnetic eye, and replied:

"I recognize the accused, Sir President. In April last I passed through here on my way to Italy. As my train would not start till late in the evening, I took a walk along the road to Meiningen. I went into a roadside inn for refreshment. I saw the accused there, seated at a small table along with a companion. Both men were dressed alike. The accused's companion was a few inches taller. His face looked haggard and yellow. They were having their dinner. They sat side by side. They clearly were having a confidential chat together. I am a physiognomist. There was a marked contrast between the two faces, which attracted my attention. The accused's looked open, ingenuous, and candid—the same as it does now, save that it was quite free then from the cloud of acute mental suffering which is clearly discernible on it now. The other man's face looked weak and wicked, to express it briefly. There was not a trace of moral restraint in it. I mentally summed it up as that of a man who would under but slight temptation give way to evil passions, not stopping short of even the most heinous crime to work his wicked will, if once he could screw up his rather defective courage to the sticking-point; for his eyes showed to me malignity contending with cowardice. It was this marked contrast between the two faces which caused me to give my undivided attention to their talk and their doings.

'Shall we have to walk far,' the other asked the accused, 'to get to the wood?'

'Only a few miles,' was the reply.

'Do you think you will find the footpath you talk of?'

'Yes, of course. It branches off the road to Gerstorff on the left, some hundred strides or so from Lilienfeld Manor House, which we have to pass.'

'And is it such a lonely wood as you say?'

'Quite lonely—that part of it, at least, through which the path runs. Except on Sundays, there is hardly ever a soul to be met there.'

'Suppose a man were to hang himself thereabout; how soon do you think they'd find the body?'

'What queer questions you ask!' replied the accused, laughing. 'Why, it might be months, if he did it a few yards away from the path. But that cannot matter to us. I, for one, am not a-going to jump from a tree with a rope tied one end round a high branch, the other round my neck. And I do not think, Joseph, you are a likely sort of chap to do such a foolish thing.'

'Very true,' returned the other; 'it was only an idle question to pass the time. We had better be moving, though; it is getting on for evening. - I say, Conrad, you just let me pay the bill here—will you?'

'Why?' said the accused, with some signs of surprise.

'Simply that I may not always look the beggar. Let me settle here for once. You know I have all the money you gave me in my pocket. And,' he added, with a light laugh, 'as you will give me the balance of the traveling cash in yours, it will not cost me a cent, after all.'

'All right, Joseph, have your will; pay away if it makes you happy.'

"It all comes back to me; it comes all back to my memory!"

The prisoner, starting up from his bench, burst out, upon the uncontrollable impulse of the moment, "Yes, Sir President, so it was. He asked me to let him pay, and I let him. I had clean forgotten all about it. I remember it all now. This gentleman has given our conversation almost word for word. Sir President—"

Here the accused, who had been running on impetuously, was stopped and severely reproved for his unseemly interruption of the proceedings. He humbly apologized to the court and sat down on his bench.

The President asked the witness to wait a moment before proceeding with his evidence. He then bent over his notes, in search of something apparently. Without raising his head he asked the witness, "Were you seated quite close to the two travelers?"

The President looked up again, awaiting the reply, which did not come, however. In fact, the witness took no notice of the query.

"Why do you not answer my question, Sir?" said the President somewhat sternly.

"Have you asked me a question, Sir President?" queried the witness in return, to the intense amazement of all in court, including the President, who exclaimed, somewhat impatiently, and with a trifle of anger,

"Have I asked you a question? You know I have. I spoke loud enough, I am sure."

A smile flitted over Hessler's intelligent face.

"I humbly beg your pardon, Sir President. May I venture to pray you to repeat your question?"

The President looked at the witness for a moment almost as intently as the latter was looking at him. Then he repeated the question sternly and emphatically, altering it, however, to,

"Where were you seated, witness, when this conversation took place?"

"I sat in one corner of the room, Sir President; they at the corner opposite."

"Then you were not quite close to them?"

"By no means. It was a large room. There were some eighteen or twenty feet between us."

"And yet you profess to repeat every word they were saying to one another?"

"Yes, Sir President, not word for word, of course, but the general purport of their talk. I have a retentive memory."

The President again looked long and steadily at the witness, who remained perfectly unconcerned, however.

"Go on with your statement, witness," said the President at last.

"The queer question put to the accused by his companion—clearly, to my mind at least, with a view to ascertain whether the wood, whither they were taking their way, was very lonely—and the strange request about the settlement of the bill, made me suspect the intentions of the taller of the two travelers. The accused looked so absolutely unsuspecting, that I made up my mind to warn him somehow, or rather to caution the other to take care what he was doing, which seemed to me the safer course of the two. So I left the inn precipitately, and walked briskly onward in the direction which I knew the two were going to take. I soon came to a kind of garden-house or pavilion by the roadside. A gentleman was leaning out of the window. I asked him—"

"Stop!" said the President. "Look at that gentleman," pointing to the Baron Lilienfeld. "Do you know him?"

The witness looked steadily at the Baron for a minute or so. Then he turned again to the President, and said,

"I perfectly recollect that gentleman. It was he who was leaning out of the pavilion on the road. I asked him the road to Gerstorff. He directed me. I walked until I came to the foot-path on the left, alluded to by the accused in his companion. I hid among the trees. Some ten minutes or a quarter of an hour after, the two came up. I followed them cautiously along the path, watching them closely all the time. They stopped, and sat down on the trunk of a fallen tree. They sat in line, the one at the one end, the other at the end opposite, both right in face of me, as I was watching them from behind my hiding-place among the trees. I understood the companion of the accused to ask the latter to hand over, there and then, the money which he had promised him, and to make it five thousand dollars instead of five hundred. His face looked wicked and threatening. He said, to the best of my recollection, 'Conrad, you know you ought to share with me. You could no more have made the money by yourself than I could. I have had bad luck, and dropped my share. I do not want you to go halves with me again; I want only one-third—five thousand dollars, leaving you ten thousand. I mean to turn over a new leaf, and become steady. But for this I must have the five thousand dollars. So you had better hand them over.' To which the accused replied, 'I have been a good companion and friend to you, Joseph, and I mean to be so still. I tell you what I'll do; I will give you two thousand dollars down when we reach Fichtenham,' or Fichtenstein—it was some such name, Sir President, which the accused mentioned, I am not positive which—'and if you turn over a new leaf and prove that you are a steady man, I will give you the other three thousand. There!'

"I keenly watched the face of the man addressed as Joseph. I thought I saw the evil intention fade from his eyes and features. This, then, was the proper moment for me to give him my caution. I stepped suddenly forth to confront him. I impressively warned him to beware, as there had been a witness to the conversation which he had just had with his companion. I then left the two to make my way back to the rail way station as fast as I could, as I did not want to miss my train. Still, when again passing the same pavilion on the road, I stopped to speak to the gentleman at the window. I wished to communicate to him my suspicions, and the course I had thought fit to pursue. I wanted to ask him to send his servants into the wood, to make assurance doubly sure. But he gave me no chance to speak to him. He withdrew himself to the remotest and darkest corner of the room, and obstinately kept there, despite of my earnest entreaty to come back to the window that I might have speech with him. So I was compelled to leave him. I was just in time for the evening train. I have been in Italy ever since, and it is only to-day that I quite accidentally learned the sad sequel of the affair. This is my evidence, Sir President."

The witness had throughout spoken with the most perfect self-possession; every word had been uttered by him without hesitation, in a calm, clear voice. His evidence had obviously made a profound impression upon all in court, including the Judges, the jury, and—the Attorney General. If this man was speaking the truth there was an end or the case, for, strange to say perhaps, in Germany counsel for the prosecution does not hold it to be incumbent upon him to do his best, or rather his worst, to send an accused man to the scaffold, when there may be a fair presumption of his innocence.

A loud buzz of conversation went through the hall for several minutes, while the President was consulting with the other members of the court.

The witness paid no attention whatever to this buzz of conversation; his eyes were fixed steadily in the direction of the President.

The latter at last turned again to the witness to ask a few questions.

"Witness Hessler," he said, "you heard nothing more after you had left the two in the wood?"

"No, Sir President, nothing whatever. I—"

"Stop," said the President, interrupting him. "Listen to me attentively. Did you not hear a shot fired?"

"No, Sir President. Was there a shot fired?"

"Why, Sir, you must have heard it fired." The witness Lilienfeld heard it quite distinctly; and you, who profess to have such acute hearing that you can distinctly catch whispered conversations at twenty feet distance—you mean to tell the court that you did not hear this shot fired?"

"No, Sir President, indeed I did not hear the shot fired; and for a most sufficient reason—I am absolutely deaf, Sir President!"

This cool statement was too much for the court, the jury, the bar, and the public. "Did you ever hear such impudence?" every one asked his neighbor.

"Yet you near every word I am saying to you! What do you mean, witness? I must caution you that you will have to swear to the truth of your deposition."

"I have spoken the pure truth, Sir President," said the witness, solemnly, "and I am ready to take my oath on it. Allow me to explain. I repeat to you that I am absolutely deaf, unfortunately for me. I could not hear the discharge of a park of artillery. Here," handing to the usher another folded paper, "is a medical certificate of exemption from military service on account of incurable total deafness. It is signed, as you will see, Sir President, by the Surgeon General of the staff of the Prussian Army and by three chief staff Surgeons. The fact is, Sir President, that I had a very severe attack of brain fever at the age of nineteen. When I recovered my hearing was totally gone. All the doctors whom I consulted gave it as their opinion that I should never recover the lost sense. They have turned out to be right. I felt this to be a fearful affliction, I was so very young; still I saw a ray of hope. My studies, desultory though they had been, had taught me the great beneficent law of compensation and substitution which pervades all creation. As the blind strive to find in the sense of touch a second sense of sight, so I resolved to hear, as it were, through my eyes. For hours and hours together I used to stand before the looking-glass talking at my reflected image, in German, French, and Italian—for I had passed several years in France and Italy. I also engaged people to talk to me in either of the three languages, and closely watched the changing expression of their eyes and features, and the motions of their lips. Some five years passed unremittingly in this eager and arduous pursuit after a substituted sense of hearing by sight more than fully realized my most sanguine hopes. Ever since then this acquired substituted sense has gone on improving, and I may truthfully say now that I hear indeed through the sense of sight."

While the witness Hessler was delivering this statement in the simplest manner, as if he were discussing the details of an every-day occurrence, and in truthful accents calculated to carry conviction to most minds, the deepest silence reigned in the hall of justice. The same silence continued to be kept even after the witness had done speaking, all eyes turning in eager expectation to the court.

The President was observed to address some words to his learned brother on his right, who was seen to reply to his chief's remarks. Both were looking curiously at the witness. The words were whispered in a low scarcely audible key, so that not a sound could possibly travel beyond the Judges' bench.

The witness, with the same smile flitting over his features which had been remarked several times before, addressed the President.

"May I venture, Sir President, to ask your kind permission to make another brief statement to the court?"

Permission being granted, the witness proceeded with his habitual calm: "I have just now seen you say to the gentleman on your right, 'It is not altogether impossible—what he says. It is not even quite improbable;' but it sounds so strange that it requires a good deal of somewhat credulous faith to let it pass current.' The gentleman on your right replied, 'I should be sorry to believe it without better proof than we have had as yet. The man looks honest enough, and speaks with singular apparent truthfulness; but then he may, after all, be a rogue and cheat, and his evidence not worth a pin.' You, Sir President, returned, 'What object could he have in view?' to which the other gentleman replied, 'Why, they may have been companions together in California; they may have planned the murder between them, and the accomplice come forward now to get his partner acquitted, that they may share the plunder together: or'"—here the witness hesitated an instant, then proceeded rather diffidently—"I do not know whether to go on, but still I think it better to do so, that you may gain the most entire conviction of the truth of my statement—'or it may be one of old Wolff's knavish dodges.'"

A general titter ran through the court. Counselor Wolff looked daggers at the Judge who had thus disrespectfully taken his name in vain, and who, as well as the President, showed signs of the utmost amazement and of some vexation at the indiscreet revelation.

"I must fully admit the perfect correctness of your report of our whispered conversation, Mr. Hessler," the President said at last courteously, "and I will add that I feel much inclined to join in the apparent general belief in the truth of your evidence. But why did you not inform the court at once of your—infirmity?"

"I was not asked, Sir President; and my experience in life has taught me the wisdom of always keeping strictly within the record, as you gentlemen of the law have it."

This caused another laugh in court.

The Attorney General then rose, and addressing the court, begged in a few simple words to absolutely withdraw the accusation against Conrad Tuchmann, and on the part of the Crown to sanction his immediate release from cus ody.

General applause, which was not suppressed by order of the court, followed this announcement. Conrad Tuchmann had fainted clean away. His parents, who had, with indescribable anxiety, been "waiting for the verdict" outside the court, were speedily fetched in by the widow Lehmann, to have their "boy" handed over to them as if "new-born into the world," and—we may as well drop the curtain. —Tinsley's Magazine.

A WISE PEACOCK.—This, being a long-lived bird, and therefore dowered with a richer experience than other domestic fowls, ought to be wiser in proportion; yet I have never heard of the peacock being cited as an example of either intelligence or moral sense. The bird is vain, it is true; but if vanity indicates lack of intelligence, what will become of men and women? I have often watched "John" (the name we gave him and which he always recognized) spreading his tail before a few guinea-fowl, who were so provokingly indifferent to the rayed splendor that he invariably ended by driving them angrily away. On the other hand, can I ever forget the simple, untiring attachment of the gorgeous creature? The table at which I wrote stood near a bay-window, so that I had the true left-hand side-light, with a window at my back. As soon as I took my place there, after breakfast, the peacock flew upon the window-sill, and whenever I failed to notice him the sharp taps of his bill upon the glass reminded me of his presence. Then I turned and, as in duty bound, said, "Good morning, John!" after which he continued to sit there, silent and content, for two or three hours longer. The peacock is ordinarily a shy fowl, but John was bold enough to eat out of our hands. As often as Spring came, however, it was impossible to prevent his depredations in the garden. He had a morbid taste for young cabbage and lettuce plants, especially when they were just rooted after being set out, and he would sometimes pick a whole bed to pieces while the gardener's back was turned. For a while I amused myself by testing his powers of dissimulation. I waited behind a clump of bushes until he was fairly on his way to the garden, making long, swift strides, with depressed neck and tail, and then I suddenly stepped forth. In the twinkling of an eye John stood upright, walked leisurely in the opposite direction, and seemed quite absorbed in the examination of some trifling object. His air and manner, to the tips of his feathers, expressed the completest ignorance of a garden. He would spread his tail, call to the other fowls, peer under the hedge, and in similar ways attempt to beguile me out of sight of his secret aim. If I humored him for a few moments, he was always found a good many yards nearer the garden when I turned again. I have never seen a more hypocritical assumption of innocence and indifference in any human being. There came a season when even the patience of old friendship was too severely tried. The peacock was presented to a friend who lived two or three miles away, and was the possessor of a couple of hens. I missed the morning tap at my window, the evening perch on the walnut tree, the mournful cries which used so terrific a din around the city, but consoled myself with thinking that our loss was his gain, for we had never replaced his lost spouse. He had been gone about a week, when one evening the familiar cry was heard from a grove on the farm, nearly half a mile from the house. Next day John was seen in a weedy field, but slipped out of sight on finding he was detected. We let him alone, and in the course of a fortnight he had advanced as near as the obstinate tree which I proudly exhibit to strangers as one of the antiquities of America, for it was growing when Charlemagne reigned in Aix-la-Chapelle and Haroun-al-Raschid in Bagdad. He now allowed himself to be seen, but utterly refused to recognize any member of the family. When we called him by name he instantly walked away; when we threw him food he refused to touch it. Little by little, however, he forgave us the offense; in another fortnight he roosted on the walnut tree, and at the end of the second month I heard his tap of complete reconciliation on the window. But the exile and mortification had chastened his nature. From that day the young plants were safe from his bill; he lived with us three or four years longer, but was never once guilty of the same fault. No one denies that an animal is easily made to understand that certain things are forbidden. Discipline, alone, may accomplish thus much. But when two creatures so far removed as a horse and a peacock assimilate the knowledge to such an extent that the one gives up a habit and the other resists a tempting taste, we must admit either the germ of a moral sense or an intellect capable of positive deduction.—Atlantic Monthly.

BALZAC AS A COLLECTOR.—At Les Jardies the pictures and divans and tapestries had mostly been nominal—had been present only in grand names, chalked grotesquely upon the empty walls. But during the last years of his life Balzac appears to have been a great collector. He bought many pictures and other objects of value; in particular, there figures in these letters a certain set of Florentine furniture which he was willing to sell again, but to sell only to a royal purchaser. The King of Holland appears to have been in treaty for it. Readers of the Comédie Humaine have no need to be reminded of the author's passion for furniture; nowhere else are there such loving or such invidious descriptions of it. "Decidedly," he writes once to Mme. Manska, "I will send to Tours for the Louis XVI. secretary and bureau; the room will then be complete. It's a matter of a thousand francs; but for a thousand francs what can one get in modern furniture? Des platitude bourgeoises, des misères sans valeur et sans goût."—Galaxy.

CHARLES KINGSLEY'S LIFE AT EVERSLEY.—His life at Eversley at first was full of hardship; he was only curate, there were no gentry in the parish, he lived in a cottage, working hard, faring hard, chopping wood for exercise, one might almost say for recreation, reading historical and unhistorical lives of saints, and famishing for intellectual intercourse. For part of the time he had the further trial of being cut off from all communication with his future wife, and nothing in the whole narrative of his life becomes him better than this passage in it: all the letters to his betrothed, including the letter of farewell on the eve of a parting—which for all that either knew might last for life—are full of obstinate thanksgiving, he is so far from claiming pity that he will not even give it. With him, love is enough, for eternity will make amends for time. Nor was there anything in his faith to depreciate this life and its duties; his very ground for believing that the law of perfection was binding here was his immovable confidence in its transcendental fulfillment there, and although his love to the law doubtless sustained the confidence, the confidence deepened the love; it is a common experience which deserves more attention than it has received, that most men abandon their wishes when the beliefs which those wishes have suggested appear to break down. As the period of separation to which Kingsley had assented drew to a close, the prospects of the lovers brightened. He received the offer of a more desirable curacy, and their engagement was sanctioned. Before he went to Pimperne, the rector of Eversley had absconded, and the parishioners wisely exerted themselves to secure Kingsley as his successor. His brief stay at Pimperne brought him into contact with S. G. O., who was deep in statistics and abuses, and the condition of the Dorsetshire farm-laborer, not cheerful now, was more than disheartening then, as Kingsley wrote: "'What is the use of my talking to hungry paupers about heaven? Sir,' as my clerk said to me yesterday; 'there is a weight on their hearts, and they care for no hope and no change, for they know they can be no worse off than they are.'" At Eversley the task was less overwhelming. "He found a kindly people, civil and grateful for notice, and as yet wholly uninjured by indiscriminate almsgiving." His regular house-to-house visiting conquered them. "If a man or woman were suffering or dying, he would go to them five or six times a day, and night as well as day, for his own heart's sake as well as for their soul's sake. His only recreation was fishing; he would not shoot because the population were poachers; he could not afford to hunt, though latterly he sometimes followed the hounds on an old hack, but from the beginning his knowledge and love of horses and dogs won the hearts of the stablemen and whippers-in of Sir John Cope's hounds. "When the first confirmation after his induction was given out in church, and he invited all who wished to be confirmed to come down to the rectory for weekly instruction, the stud groom, a respectable man of five-and-thirty, was among the first to come, bringing a message from the whips and stablemen to say that they had all been confirmed once, but if Mr. Kingsley wished it they would all be happy to come again."—Fortnightly Review.

PRAYER.

Not with the few who dwell upon the heights
Where morn and evening in a golden flood
Pour out their earliest and latest lights—
Give me to walk the path of life, my God!

With those in lowly valleys, where the day,
The dawn, and dusk, or half their splendors shorn,
Are slow to come and swift to pass away,
And the long-lingering shades of night are born.

Not where rich Summer and glad Spring, in all
Their flowery pomp,, strew treasures far and wide—
Where the white Winter and brown, mournful Fall,
With wilted leaf and chilly snows, abide.

Not among those who at proud feasts are found,
On silken couches of luxurious ease,
Their brows with shimmering pearl and roses bound,
Draining the cup of pleasure to the lees—

But in those barren huts, at whose scant board
Sit want and care, a pale, perpetual guest,
Where ceaseless labor is the cruel lord
Of weary life, that knows not joy nor rest.

Not among those who dance upon the plain,
With laughing lips, and looks the breezes toss—
With those, who, foot-sore, up the hill-side strain,
Bearing the aching burden of some cross.

Not with the happy wife, whose gladdened eyes
Feed on her rosy children's merry swarm—
In that dark chamber close beneath the skies,
Where the poor mother strives in vain to warm

Her dying babe, crying in agony
To God; and questioning wherefore he should wrest,
In his most sore, inscrutable decree,
Her one small lambkin from her bleeding breast.

Not among those whose unbent souls rejoice
In freedom's strength; where through the starless night
The broken-hearted slave lifts up his voice,
To plead with Heaven for his immortal right.

Amid the toiling millions who for aye,
Have drenched the earth with sweat, and tears, and blood,
Among the lone, the lost, the castaway,
Give me to walk the path of life, my God!

So shall my heart close to that stricken earth,
Remembering ever in humility,
If, too, from this dark bosom took its birth,
Be swift to throb with tender sympathy.

So shall my soul dwell nearest unto Him
Who had not where to lay his thorn-crowned head;
Yet whose supernal power has burst the dim
Sealed sepulchres of the long-slumberlog dead.

Whose love, of yore upon the Sacred Mount,
In all its passing sweetness first set free;
Streams on and on, a gushing, charméd fount,
That makes life joy, and death a victory.

S. STERNE.

CULTIVATION OF RICE IN INDIA.—People unacquainted with the East are apt to imagine that rice is the prevalent cultivation and food of the population, but this is far from being the case. Rice is rather what white bread is in Scotland and Ireland, not the general food, but rather an occasional luxury; although the same perverse fashion which makes the whitest bread at home preferred to the more nutritious brown, leads all classes in Asia to esteem rice more highly than any other cereal, though containing much the least nutriment of all. When, too, it is considered that rice can grow only on water, and therefore on levels where water can be supplied with certainty for some months, it will be obvious that in a country of very irregular surface the area capable of being so irrigated must be very limited. Thus in the district of Coimbatore, for instance, out of nearly a million and a half acres of cultivated land there are little more than 70,000 acres producing rice; necessarily then the latter must be the food of a minority. In a delta region, like Tanjore, or a great river valley, such as that of the Ganges, the proportions are different, yet insignificant in the total area of the country. Still, poor food though it be, rice supports its millions, more probably than any other grain, and albeit such races are ever deficient in pith and manhood, and "wet" villages in India ever the abode of Brahmans, and centres of intrigue and roguery, as revenue officials well know, most beautiful, delightful, and refreshing to look upon is a wide stretch of rice cultivation—how refreshing none can tell who have not seen the network of tender green plots, separated by ridges of darker grass, lying set amid brown or yellow sunburnt uplands, with troops of snow-white paddy-birds flying about or standing knee-deep in the grain.—Fraser's Magazine.

A MISAPPLIED QUOTATION.—By a strange compensating chance "Troilus and Cressida" furnishes the most often quoted line; a line which not one in a million of those who use it ever saw where Shakespeare wrote it, or if they had any brains behind their eyes, they would not use it as they do. For by another strange chance, it happens that this line is entirely perverted from the meaning which Shakespeare gave it. As it is constantly quoted, it is not Shakespeare's. The line is:

"One touch of nature makes the whole world kin."

This has come to be always quoted with the meaning implied in the following indication of emphasis: "One touch of nature makes the whole world kin." Shakespeare wrote no such sentimental twaddle. Least of all did he write it in this play, in which his pen "pierces to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart." The line which has been thus perverted into an exposition of sentimental brotherhood among all mankind, is on the contrary one of the most cynical utterances of an undisputable moral truth, disparaging to the nature of all mankind, that ever came from Shakespeare's pen. Achilles keeps himself aloof from his fellow Greeks, and takes no part in the war, sure that his fame for valor will be untarnished. Ulysses contrives to provoke him into a discussion, and tells him that his great deeds will be forgotten, and his fame fade into mere shadow, and that some new man will take his place, unless he does something from time to time to keep his glory bright. For men forget the great thing that was done, in favor of the less that is done now.

For time is like a fashionable host
That slightly shakes his parting guest by the hand,
And with his arms outstretched as he would fly,
Grasps in the comer. Welcome ever smiles,
And farewell goes out sighing. O let not virtue seek Remuneration for the thing it was;
For beauty, wit,
High birth, vigor of bone, desert in service,
Love, friendship, charity, are subjects all
To envious and calumniating time.

And then he immediately adds that there is one point on which all men are alike, one touch of human nature which shows the kindred of all mankind—that they slight familiar merit and prefer trivial novelty. The next lines to those quoted above are:

One touch of nature makes the whole world kin,
That all with one consent praise new-born gauds,
Though they are made and moided of things past;
And give to dust that is a little gilt
More laud than gilt o'erdusted.

The meaning is too manifest to need, or, indeed, to admit a word of comment, and it is brought out by this emphasis: "One touch of nature makes the whole world kin"—that one touch of their common failing being an uneasy love of novelty. Was ever poet's or sage's meaning so perverted.

ANECDOTE OF BRILLAT-SAVARIN.—Brillat-Savarin was wont to spend his evenings at Little's, a famous tavern of Old Gotham, where, with the Vicomte de la Massue and M. Febr, he loved to enjoy a modest supper of Welsh rarebits and cider. Occasionally he was joined by Mr. Wilkinson, a Jamaica planter, a good fellow and thorough gentleman, as his French friend takes care to inform us. Still, manners were rough in those days, and Mr. Wilkinson probably thought it would be a capital joke to see three "frogs" under the table. With this amiable intention, he asked the enemies of his native land to dinner; and they frankly accepted his invitation. Fortunately for Brillat-Savarin, as he was leaving Little's that evening, the waiter drew him aside and warned him that the invitation was in reality a challenge to a hard drinking bout. He was exceedingly annoyed, being too much of a gourmet to relish such orgies; still the instinct of combat would not allow him to withdraw, and moreover he was confident of his own strength, and only uneasy for his compatriots. "I desired," he says, "the triumph of the nation, and not that of the individual." Accordingly he addressed a "severe allocution" to Febr and Massue, and warned them to drink slowly, and to try and throw away some of their wine while he distracted the attention of Mr. Wilkinson and the other Englishman who was to be present. Also to eat gently, but constantly. Finally, before setting out for Little's, on the following day, he made his friends share with him a plateful of bitter almonds, which are said to be a prophylactic against intoxication. The dinner, we are assured, consisted of a "rotsbeef," a turkey cooked in its gravy, boiled "roots" (?), a salad of raw cabbage, and a jam tart. The wine was claret, for which, by and by, was substituted port, while to port succeeded Madeira. Dessert was now on the table. It consisted of biscuits, butter, and nuts, aliments which encourage the consumer to drink. It was beginning to be warm work for all concerned; but Brillat-Savarin observed, with pleasure, that his friends had followed his advice, and that Febr, in particular, had contrived to empty a good many glasses of wine into a beer-jug which stood neglected at his end of the table. The three Frenchmen looked still fresh when Mr. Wilkinson called for spirits—an order which made Brillat-Savarin, for the first time that evening, feel nervous. He dexterously avoided the grosser forms of drinking spirits, by asking in his turn for a bowl of punch. Little brought it in himself. It would have sufficed for forty persons, but was happily accompanied by a supply of buttered toast. After one or two glasses had been drunk, Brillat-Savarin observed, with pleasure, that Mr. Wilkinson's face had turned to a crimson-purple, and that his eyes looked haggard, while his friend's head was steaming like a kettle. Febr and Massue, on the other hand, were still cool. The catastrophe came much sooner than Brillat-Savarin had expected. Mr. Wilkinson suddenly sprang to his feet, as if seized by a happy inspiration, and began, in trumpet tones, to thunder forth "Rule Britannia;" then, quite as suddenly, dived under the table, where he preferred to remain. His friend, laughing loudly, stooped forward to pick him up; then he, too, lay extended on the floor. The Frenchmen were victorious, and drank a final glass of punch with Little, to the health of the vanquished.—Cornhill Magazine.

BALZAC AT WORK.—Meanwhile, however, at this period, business was increasing with him. He agrees to write three novels for $820. Here begins the inextricable mystery of Balzac's literary promises, pledges, projects, and contracts. His letters form a swarming register of schemes and bargains through which he passes like a hero of the circus, riding half a dozen piebald coursers at once. We confess that in this matter we have been able to keep no sort of account; the wonder is that Balzac should have accomplished the feat himself. After the first year or two of his career, we never see him working upon a single tale; his productions dovetail and overlap, and dance attendance upon each other in the most bewildering fashion. As soon as one novel is fairly on the stocks he plunges into another, and while he is rummaging in this with one hand, he stretches out a heroic arm and breaks ground in a third. His plans are always vastly in advance of his performance; his pages swarm with titles of books that were never to be written. The title circulates with such an assurance that we are amazed to find, 50 pages later, that there is no more of it than the three words heading. With this, Balzac was constantly paid in advance by his publishers—paid for works not begun, or barely begun; and the money was as constantly spent before the equivalent had been delivered. Meanwhile more money was needed, and new novels were laid out to obtain it; but prior promises had first to be kept. Keeping them, under these circumstances, was not an exhilarating process; and readers familiar with Balzac will reflect with wonder that these were yet the circumstances in which some of his best tales are written. They were written, as it were, in the fading light, by a man who saw night coming on, and yet couldn't afford to buy candles. He could only hurry. But Balzac's way of hurrying was all his own; it was a sternly methodical haste, and might have been mistaken, in an imperfectly-weighted genius, for deliberate trifling. The close tissue of his work never relaxed; he went on doggedly and insistently, pressing it down and packing it together, multiplying erasures, alterations, repetitions, transforming proof-sheets, quarreling with editors, inclosing subject within subject, accumulating notes upon notes.

In 1831 he tells one of his correspondents that he is working fifteen or sixteen hours a day. Later, in 1837, he describes himself repeatedly as working eighteen hours out of the twenty-four. In the midst of all this, (it seems singular,) he found time for visions of public life, of political distinction.—Galaxy.

CHARLES KINGSLEY'S CONSTITUTION.—Kingsley's muscles and senses were far more vigorous than the rest of his constitution: looking only to his strength, he was fit for an athlete; looking only at his temperament, he was fitter for a monk. His brain, or his personality, as we may choose to phrase it, was steadily on the side of the robust and active element, but was never impervious to the other. Hence all who were really intimate with him were struck by the union of the most exquisite tenderness with a manliness that often seemed aggressive. Hence, too, his personal predilection for mystical writers, even when he felt bound to protest against what he thought their demoralizing quietism. Hence, too, one is tempted to guess, an impulse to complete his conversion by renouncing his love, an impulse which may have been the stronger because the sense of unworthiness, which is to be found in all true lovers, was very strong in him. It is hard not to suspect some personal animosity in this reprobation of the dedication of wedded love which fer him was the one damning sin of asceticism. Another consequence of Kingsley's constitution was extreme intellectual impatience. The importunate muscular energy which made mental application in itself a penance, became comparatively manageable by the help of tobacco, which he learned to prize at Cambridge, though we find that when he had long been a hard-working country parson he could not work at writing when the weather interfered with energetic exercise. But the exuberant vitality asserted itself in another way—he threw himself readily into a combative attitude, and condemned before he understood. After reading ten lines of Palmer on the Church, he was sure that the book was too sophistical and dangerous for his correspondent to read until she could read it with him, and was ready to convict the citations of the "tract writers" of bad faith on the strength of the counter citations of Dean Goode. This, of course, was in his salad days, when he was green in judgment, and though Salisbury Cathedral a monument of elegant soul-crushing austerity; but years after he seriously maintained that the successful activity of the clergy promised nothing for the permanence or prosperity of the establishment, unless the Church comprehended the necessity of an alliance with Arnoldism, because, "as we who know history know," the last fifty years before the Reformation were full of just the same superficial activity and improvement, the proof being, that during those years the fashion of founding colleges of priests instead of monasteries, came in, and that many churches were built in Somersetshire.—Fortnightly Review.

INSTANCES OF MORAL SENSE IN A HORSE.—I have a horse who is now not less than forty-one years old, and it is possible that he is a year or two older; for thirty-eight years ago he was broken to use. He is at present on the retired list, only occasionally being called upon to lend a helping shoulder to his younger colleague; but his intellect is as fresh and as full of expedients as ever. No horse ever knew better how to save himself, to spare effort, and prolong his powers; no one was ever so cunning to slip his halter, open the feed-box, and supply the phosphates, the necessity of which to him he knew as well as any "scientist." I have seen him, through a crack in a board shanty, used while the stable was building, lift and lay aside with his teeth six boxes which were piled atop of one another, until he found the oats at the bottom. Then, when my head appeared at the window, he instantly gave up his leisurely, luxurious munching of the grain, opened his jaws to their fullest extent, thrust his muzzle deep into the box, and gravely walked back to his stall with at least a quart of oats in his mouth. This horse had a playful habit of snapping at my arm when he was harnessed for a drive. (I always talk to a horse before starting, as a matter of common politeness.) Of course I never flinched, and his teeth often grazed my sleeve as he struck them together. One day, more than a dozen years ago, he was in rather reckless spirits and snapped a little too vigorously, catching my arm actually in his jaws. I scarcely felt the bite, but I was very much surprised. The horse, however, showed such unmistakable signs of regret and distress that I simply said, "Never do that again!" And he never did! From that moment he gave up the habit of years; he laid back his ears or feigned anger in other ways, but he never again made believe to bite. This, certainly, goes far beyond the temporary sorrow for an unintentional injury which may be referred to an animal's affection. What else is conscience than knowledge of wrong made permanent by a memory which forbids the repetition of the wrong? The same horse once revealed to me the latter quality in a surprising way. On telling the story privately I find that it is sometimes incredulously received; yet I am sure that no one who cherishes the proper respect for animals will refuse it credence. In the company of a friend I was driving along a country road in a light, open buggy. I paid no attention to the horse, for he could turn, back, or execute any other manœuvre in harness as well without as with a driver. Halting at a house where my friend wished to call, I waited for him outside. Presently the horse looked back at me, twisting his body between the thills in a singular fashion. I perceived that he had some communication to make, and said, "What is the matter now, Ben?" Thereupon, by twisting a little more, he managed to hold up his right hind foot, and I saw that the shoe had been lost. "That's right," said I; "you shall have a new shoe as soon as we get to the village." He set down his foot, and for a moment seemed satisfied. Then the same turning of the head and twisting of the body were repeated. "What, Ben! is anything else the matter?" I asked. He now lifted up the left hind foot, which was still shod. I was quite at a loss to understand him, and remained silent. He looked back at me out of the corner of his eye, and evidently saw that I was puzzled, whereupon he set down his foot and seemed to think. Almost immediately he lifted it up and shook it vigorously. The loose shoe rattled. There was a positive process of reasoning in this act, and it is too simple and clear to be interpreted in any other way.—Atlantic Monthly.

LAND-OWNERS IN GREAT BRITAIN.—The total number of land-owners in the United Kingdom has already been shown to be under 200,000. Of these, 523 peers own between them one-fifth of the total area of the three countries, exclusive of manorial wastes and woods, of which they may be possessed; 5,000 persons own about two-thirds of the whole area, averaging 10,000 acres each; and 10,000 persons own about three-fourths, averaging 5,000 acres each. Dividing the owners of land into four classes, there are 5,000 large proprietors, averaging 10,000 acres each; 12,000 medium-sized proprietors or squires, with from 500 to 2,000 acres each; 52,000 persons owning from 50 to 500 acres each; and 130,000

AFFAIRS IN FRANCE.

GOSSIP FROM THE FRENCH CAPITAL.

THE WEATHER AT PARIS—A MILD WINTER—COLD IN RUSSIA—LITERARY MEN AND POLITICIANS—BOGUS PAINTINGS—HOW THE "OLD MASTERS" ARE REPRODUCED—THE EXPOSITION OF 1878.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Monday, Jan. 8, 1877.

Within the memory of the oldest inhabitant, I may say without exaggeration, there has never been a Winter like this. Since the end of Autumn we have had Springlike weather, with no cold, no frost, and very little rain. To-day it is scarcely cold enough for an overcoat, and a light Summer shower is falling, with intervals of sunshine, which makes one look with wonder upon the trees that still remain stark and bare. No one would be surprised to see them budding out, for May bugs have been signaled in various localities, and flies are reappearing in our apartments. It is really wonderful, and, as usual, people are predicting the worst, taking the blessings of fine weather for things of evil omen. It is possible, probable even, that we shall have bad weather later on, but there are no reasons for supposing that the frosts which must naturally arrive will come late enough to kill the fruit-tree buds and injure the sprouting vines. The meteorological records inform us that there were two Winters in the early part of the last century which showed no signs of Winter. The trees budded in February and hannetons came out in January. But both years appear to have been extremely fruitful and noted for the quantity and quality of the wines. Hence we must not necessarily look to see the crops destroyed because there are no frosts during the Winter months, and may reasonably hope that the evils of such weather are with us at present; for there are many serious evils attending such a state of things, if we can believe the doctors. They tell us that Summer maladies are prevalent, and that they see none of the diseases peculiar to Winter. There is a great deal of typhus and typhoid fever, particularly in the different garrisons, and the death rate is comparatively large. No one here feels like complaining of such weather, however, except the Auvergnats and the hotel-keepers of Nice. The former are all dealers in wood and coal, and hence find their yearly harvest during the Winter months. A spell of intensely cold weather delights their honest hearts. The Summer is their morte saison, and, alas! they have had two Summers in a single year. At Nice they are complaining bitterly. None of the hotels are yet filled, and the town is still impatiently waiting for the arrival of the rich strangers who are annually driven southward by the cold weather of higher latitudes.

But, while we are enjoying exceptionally warm weather here, the Russians are having an exceptionally rigorous Winter. The cold at Moscow has been intense, and at St. Petersburg it has interfered largely with the pleasures of the Nevskoi-Perspectif. To city people, accustomed to months of snow and ice, this makes no great difference, but to an army, taken from its usual garrisons and sent suddenly into the field, it makes all the difference in the world. An officer informs me that the Russian Army upon the frontier is suffering terribly. It was sent down there just at the beginning of Winter, and has to lie idle in a low, marshy district, where the winds from the Black Sea, and from the ravines of the ice-bound Caucassus, sweep in by turns with great violence. I cannot vouch for the truth of the report, but it is said that the Grand Duke Nicholas found his Army in so bad a condition that he would not take the responsibility of commanding it. The men were dying like sheep with the murrain, and the Grand Duke feigned illness in order to get recalled to St. Petersburg, to remain until war was declared, for he could not bear the idea of seeing an inactive army melt away day by day without obtaining any good result. Gen. Kauffmann has been put in command, and he will have to respond one of these days to the old question, "Varus, what have you done with the legions confided to your care?" The Turks, who have as fine positions as any commander could desire, rub their hands with glee at the terrible reports that come from the enemy.

"Bauchaumont," one of the ablest of our spiritual chroniclers, asks why it is that writers are judged rather by the subjects they treat than by the talent they employ or the genius they possess. In order to be considered, to-day, a writer must treat of politics, of State affairs, the budget, the Government, or the administration. All other authors are regarded as délassés, and are treated as inferior beings. The author of a popular romance or a philosophical work of merit is not invited into society for that reason, but when a man of less merit publishes a political pamphlet he is sought after by several circles and talked about in all. In order to get out of the rut of pure literature, one must have the genius of Victor Hugo. The author who shows great erudition, taste, and talent in poesy or in romance is looked down upon by the nobility, who run after the author of a political satire which scarcely reaches mediocrity. As a general thing the journalists of France are finer gentlemen and have more of the politeness and of the good manners of the ancient régime than the nobility, yet they are only considered when they play some sort of a political rôle. Hence Bachaumont concludes that it is necessary for an author to make himself feared by other men, and to be first classed as dangerous before being classed as a man of talent. In proof he cites such eminent names as those of Disraeli, Thiers, Guizot, who had to leave the realms of pure literature before they arrived at success. This is all true, and while Bachaumont does not try to find out the secret, I have a fancy that it is one of the simplest in the world. The nobility cherish their traditions, and among them is one which obliges them, in their opinion, to protect and encourage authors. The Roi-Soleil did it; their ancestors followed the example, and they want to do the same thing. Nothing is more agreeable than the rôle of Mecænas. But unfortunately the literary men of our day refuse to be protected, and will not take the money that rich nobles would be only too glad to give them, because its acceptance would be an acknowledgment of inferiority. They claim that the only real nobility is one of intellect, and that, therefore, they are the equal of Princes; but the Princes refuse to accept the theory, and will not admit into their society the man who has such pretensions. With the political writer it is different, for he makes himself feared in the first place, and, secondly, he can arrive at office and sit in Parliament as the equals of the nobles. There is here a simple question of pride, of amour propre, that will gradually wear away, probably, but for the time being the men who devote themselves to pure literature are not regarded as the equals of the authors of third or fourth rate political pamphlets.

M. Waddington, Minister of Public Instruction, is now engaged upon a very curious report, and one that is destined to create a certain sensation in the artistic world. It is a bill to regulate the relations between artists, picture-buyers, and picture-dealers. Every year Americans and other foreigners come to France with the intention of picking up some good pictures by modern masters, and on looking about are astonished to find the number that are offered for sale. It is very easy to find a Murillo, Velasquez, or Raphael in almost any bric-a-brac shop, which can be purchased for a song, because "its value is unknown to the dealer." The fortunate buyer sees an old canvas lying negligently in one corner with a number of other objects, and on examining it he discovers the signature dimly visible. His first idea is not to attract particular attention to it, and after demanding the price of several other pictures he negligently asks what the old thing is worth. The brocanteur knows that the bait has taken, and he names a figure eight or 10 times the real value. The sum is paid; the buyer goes away happy in the possession of an old master, (generally purchased at the sale of some old château,) and the dealer goes off to order another from the artist, who makes them at $5 per copy. But the discoveries of old masters are growing rare, though "old masters" of the sort can be found everywhere, and the present purchasers look for pictures by modern painters of fame. And every dealer in Paris has his Corots and Rousseaus, and will procure you a Diaz, Jérome, or Fortuny in a few days' time, if he has none in his shop. In every window one sees Corots because they are the fashion, and the worst of daubs are palmed off upon strangers, the picture they purchase being boldly signed with the familiar signatures of the noted artists. M. Waddington wants to make a law which will prohibit dealers from selling pictures as genuine which are copies or imitations made to order, and to punish an artist for using the signature made famous by another. It is a difficult task, and the subject is one of great delicacy. There is a painter named Rousseau whose pictures are sold as the works of Theo. Rousseau, and the daughter of Gudin paints marine views signed "Gudin." If they were by the father, they would be worth more than their weight in gold, and hence many an amateur feels happy when he picks up a sketch signed Gudin for a thousand francs. But it is always dangerous to bring in the law in such cases, for once started off in this way there is no telling where to stop. If M. Waddington should get his law punishing men for selling counterfeit Corots and Gudins, there is no reason why he should not make another to punish the men who sell a sort of mixture, at 10 francs the bottle, under the name of Château-Lafitte. The preparatory work for the Exposition of 1878 is going on rapidly, and the Trocadero has been completely transformed already. This part of the work is to be permanent, and the President intends to leave it as a monument of his reign. The demolitions for the Avenue de l'Opera are nearly completed, and before the end of the present month this magnificent thoroughfare will be cleared.

IN SESSION AFTER THE HOLIDAYS.

AN ORGANIZATION PERFECTED IN BOTH HOUSES—THE SAME PRESIDING OFFICERS RE-ELECTED—BUT LITTLE WORK TO DO.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Friday, Jan. 12, 1877.

The Legislature is once more in session after the holiday vacation, and politics are again the order of the day. On Tuesday the Assembly met and perfected its organization, electing M. Grévy its presiding officer, and chosing the same Vice President and Secretaries who were on duty last year. The Senate, however, could not form its bureau without discussion, though there was no question about the Presidency of Duc d'Audiffret-Pasquier, and the question was adjourned in order to admit of a conference between the different factions. The chair was temporarily occupied by the dean of the Senate, M. Gaulther de Rumilly, who made a speech in which he used some words extremely disagreeable for the Bonapartists. Now that the Chamber is once more in working order, every one is asking what it intends to do. The budget was voted last year; all necessary laws were passed; the docket was cleared of everything but the political questions; and now we are at a loss to know how the legislators are going to employ their valuable time. They, themselves, were considerably embarrassed upon this point, and a proposal was entertained to adjourn for a time in order to give the committees time to prepare some sort of work. But the Extreme Left would not consent, for the Radicals are so conscientious in the performance of their duties that they want a permanent session of the Assembly. Here they get paid by the day and not by the session. It is true that there are some political questions of moment, the chief of them being the question of a general amnesty; but that was thrown out last session, and, according to the Constitution, three full months must elapse before the subject can be brought up again. Finally, the Left fell back upon the press laws of 1852, as the topic which promised to be most fertile in political incidents, and an effort will be made to bring it under consideration.

As I have remarked, the legislators themselves are embarrassed to know what to do. All the necessary work was completed last session, but the idea of the Left is to make a political session for the purpose of advancing the affairs of the Republic. Unfortunately, they mean by this to force the Government further and further toward the Left, and to make it adopt, little by little, the ideas of the first Revolution. At present there is no desire to attack M. Jules Simon, mainly because it would be extremely difficult to form another Cabinet. M. Gambetta expresses himself as satisfied for the moment, and even M. Floquet asserts "that the Republican Party ought to support M. Jules Simon so long as he continues to adopt a progressive policy." He has been decidedly "progressive" thus far, having turned out nearly a hundred Prefects and employes of the Administration, and he has revoked the commissions of some who claim to have the promise of President MacMahon that they should not be disturbed. All this is satisfactory to the Left, and so long as M. Simon continues, he will be applauded and sustained; but one of these days his friends will try to force him too far, and another crisis will result. We are to have a purely political session, and it will be one fertile in scenes and incidents.

The Senate reassembled yesterday, and perfected an organization by re-electing Duc d'Audiffret-Pasquier as its presiding officer The Duke made a little speech upon the occasion, employing the usual terms of congratulation, and said that he was proud of the honor conferred upon him. It gave him great pleasure to preside over such a distinguished body; for, although the Senate was less than a year old, it had already shown so much wisdom and moderation that it had conquered the esteem and confidence of the country. The Duke then paid a passing compliment to the Dean of the Senate, M. Gaulthier de Rumilly, now over 80 years of age, who was the oldest representative of the French Parliamentary régime, of its liberties, and of its traditions, "that we intend to preserve," added M. D'Audiffret after a slight pause, scarcely perceptible, perhaps, but enough to underline his words. One would hardly believe that the Republicans see belligerency, opposition, antagonism, almost a menace, in this simple phrase. To them it is the sound of the trumpet which precedes the attack. They have had one battle already with the Senate, and came out vanquished. But, nevertheless, they do not mean to give up the fight, and will make fresh assaults upon the Senate's positions whenever an occasion offers. I fancy that it must be war between these two branches of the Government so long as the Chamber is controlled by a majority of the Left, for the French cannot admit our system of checks, and fail to see the advantages to be drawn from three branches of the Government mutually checking and controlling each other. I say the French, but I mean, of course, French Republicans, their ideal being a single Legislative Assembly exercising supreme power in the name of the people, like the Constitutional Chamber of 1793. Naturally this is the idea of the "Reds," but not of the more moderate Republicans, and it would be a sorry day for France if it were again to prevail.

When the organization of the Senate was completed, the question came up as to what was next to be done. Work is growing scarcer and scarcer, and even law-makers have their periods of dullness. The docket was pretty thoroughly cleared before the holiday vacation, and there was no important question pressing for discussion—no political problems demanding immediate solution. But some sort of an order of the day had to be made out, and there were only four propositions at hand. One was relative to the restoration of the Tuileries Palace, which was postponed; another concerned the city taxes, or their assessment, which was admitted and urgency voted to avoid debate; and the other two were of so little consequence that no notice was taken of them. After looking about in every direction for some sort of work to do without finding it, the President of the Senate frankly admitted the fact, and adjourned sine die, or until further orders. It is thought that the Senate will not be again called together before the end of the month. Meanwhile the Chamber was perfecting its organization and also seeking for work. M. Grèvy was re-elected, and delivered the traditional felicitous speech, and after an attempt to tamper with the Army it was thought best to adjourn also, and leave the committees to prepare some bills for future sittings. Probably this is a thoroughly useless session, or, at least, one that could be dispensed with without prejudice to the interests of the country and with economy to the nation.

FORTY-FOURTH CONGRESS.

SECOND SESSION....Jan. 27.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

In the Senate the Senate bill to extend for two years the act establishing the Board of Commissioners of Southern Claims was taken up, and, after a slight amendment, was read a third time and passed, as was the Military Academy Appropriation bill. The Electoral Count bill was signed by Mr. Ferry, two or three other bills were passed, and, after a short debate on the bill relative to a Pacific Railroad sinking fund, the Senate adjourned.

In the House the most of the day was taken up with the contempt case, so-called, of the Louisiana Returning Board. The four members—Messrs. Wells, Anderson, Casanave, and Kenner—were presented at the bar of the House, and the Speaker demanded to know what excuse they had to make. After a brief interval of consultation the board made reply, which answer appears to have disagreed with the Democratic members. Accordingly, two resolutions were adopted by a strict party vote—one that "they be adjudged to be in contempt for violation of the privileges of the House," and the other, that "they be ordered to appear before the Morrison committee, to produce all statements of votes and tally-sheets of every polling place in Louisiana," after which they were remanded to the custody of the Sergeant at Arms.

SENATE.

Mr. WRIGHT, of Iowa, called up the Senate bill to extend for two years from the 10th of March next the act establishing the Board of Commissioners of Southern Claims. In explanation of the bill Mr. Wright said that there were a large number of cases before the Commissioners in which testimony had been taken, and they were now awaiting adjudication. If the time of the commission should be extended he had no doubt that all claims could be disposed of. In answer to a question of Mr. Thurman, he said it was not proposed to allow any new claims to be filed. The time of the commission was only to be extended to adjudicate claims now before it. Mr. Wright then submitted an amendment providing that nothing in the bill shall be so construed as to extend the time for filing claims before said commission or to enlarge its jurisdiction or authorize the filing of new claims. Agreed to.

Mr. THURMAN opposed any extension of the duration of the commission. It had already been in operation six years, and should have disposed of all its business by this time.

Mr. WRIGHT said the whole number of claims filed before the commission was 22,298; of these 11,210 were yet undecided, and in 1,850 of them evidence had been taken.

Mr. JOHNSTON, of Virginia, submitted an amendment providing that no new evidence on the part of the claimant shall be received, and all cases in which no evidence has been filed shall be stricken from the docket. Rejected. The bill was then read a third time and passed.

THE COMPROMISE BILL.

At 11:20 o'clock, Mr. Adams, the Clerk of the House of Representatives, appeared at the bar of the Senate with the Electoral Count bill, and announced its passage by the House. Subsequently a second message was received from the House, announcing that the Speaker had signed the bill, and it was presented to the President of the Senate for his signature. Mr. Ferry immediately signed it, and it was handed to the Committee on Enrolled Bills to be delivered to the President of the United States.

THE SUPPORT OF THE MILITARY ACADEMY.

Mr. ALLISON, of Iowa, called up the House bill making appropriations for the support of the Military Academy during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878. Amendments reported by the Committee on Appropriations were agreed to as follows: Restoring the longevity pay of professors and instructors; increasing the appropriation for the band from $6,336 to $11,000; increasing the appropriation for repairs, improvements, &c., from $12,000 to $15,000; appropriating $1,200 for a clerk to Adjutant, and the same amount for a clerk to the Treasurer; also, striking out the second and third sections of the bill reducing the number of musicians in the band and reducing their pay. The bill was then read a third time and passed.

MONEY FOR FORTIFICATIONS.

Mr. WINDOM, of Minnesota, called up the House bill making appropriations for fortifications and for other works of defense, and for the armament thereof during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878. Amendments proposed by the Committee on Appropriations were agreed to as follows: Striking out Gatling guns for the armament of seacoast fortifications, and inserting in lieu thereof mauzine guns, and increasing the appropriation for that purpose from $100,000 to $200,000. The bill was then read a third time and passed.

THE INDIANS.

The morning hour having expired, the Chair laid before the Senate the unfinished business—being the bill reported by the Committee on the Judiciary at the last session, to create a sinking fund for the liquidation of indebtedness due the Government by Pacific railroad companies. On motion of Mr. ALLISON, the bill was laid aside informally, with the understanding that it might be called up at any time, and the Senate took up the bill to ratify an agreement with certain bands of the Sioux nation of Indians; and also with the Northern Arraphoe and Cheyenne Indians, which were discussed briefly and passed.

PACIFIC RAILROAD SINKING FUND.

The Senate then resumed consideration of the unfinished business, being the bill in regard to a Pacific Railroad sinking fund.

Mr. THURMAN, of Ohio, called for a reading of the bill and the report of the committee, and said he understood the Chairman of the Committee on Railroads [Mr. West] would submit as a substitute for the bill reported by the Judiciary Committee that reported by the Committee on Railroads—both bills being for the creation of a sinking fund, but differing as to details.

Mr. WEST said as soon as the bill and report of the Judiciary Committee should be read he would call for the reading of the bill and report of the Committee on Railroads, that both bills might be before the Senate at the same time.

The bill of the Judiciary Committee having been read, Mr. THURMAN said he would not press the matter further to-day. The Senate then, at 1:20, went into executive session, and when the doors were reopened adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Mr. WOOD, of New-York, presented the memorial of the New-York Chamber of Commerce and 1,500 bankers and merchants of New-York City, asking the repeal of all special taxes on national banks. Referred to the Committee on Ways and Means.

THE REPRESENTATIVE FROM COLORADO.

Mr. KNOTT, of Kentucky, from the Judiciary Committee, made a report in the case of Belford, claiming to be the Representative from the State of Colorado. He gave notice that he would call it up for consideration and action next Tuesday. The report is in favor of the admission of the Representative.

INDIAN APPROPRIATIONS.

The House then, at 12:25, went into Committee of the Whole [Mr. Hatcher, of Missouri, in the chair] on the Indian Appropriation bill. After some time spent in considering the bill in the committee, without having adopted any important amendments, rose and reported it to the House, and it was then passed.

THE LOUISIANA RETURNING BOARD.

At 2:30 o'clock the four members of the Louisiana Returning Board who had refused to produce the original returns as called for by the investigating committee at New-Orleans—Messrs. Wells, Anderson, Casanave, and Kenner—were presented at the bar of the House in custody of the Sergeant at Arms. The Speaker put the formal question, first to Mr. Wells, what excuse he had to make.

Mr. Wells replied that two of the members of the board had just arrived in the city, and that himself and Mr. Anderson had not had time to confer with them in order to frame their answer. They therefore asked to be given an opportunity of conference and time to fill such answer as they desire to the House. The same question was put separately to each of the other witnesses, and the answer of each was to the same effect.

Mr. LYNDE, of Wisconsin, thereupon offered two resolutions, one adjudging the witnesses to be in contempt, and the other ordering them to appear before the Investigating Committee and produce the papers called for, and in the meantime that they be kept in the close custody of the Sergeant at Arms.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia, suggested as an amendment, that—as in the Irwin case—the witnesses be confined in the common jail. [Murmurs of disapprobation on the Republican side of the House.]

Mr. PAGE, of California, [sarcastically]—Better move to have them taken out and hanged right away. [Laughter.]

Mr. HOAR, of Massachusetts—I ask whether the first two witnesses arrested [Wells and Anderson] an opportunity of conferring with their associates?

Mr. LYNDE—I understand that they have. They have been together since 11:30 o'clock this morning.

Mr. Wells (without rising from his seat)—We have not.

Mr. Anderson (rising and addressing the Speaker)—We have not.

THE SPEAKER—The witness will be seated.

Mr. PAGE—I move that the witnesses have the right to speak through somebody else.

Mr. CLYMER, of Pennsylvania—The previous question has been called, and all debate is out of order.

Mr. GARFIELD, of Ohio—These witnesses have been kept in duress and separated from each other. [Calls of "order."] There can be no vote on the previous question without a hearing.

Mr. CLYMER to Mr. Garfield—You have been heard quite enough; we propose to dispose of this matter at once.

Mr. JOHNSTON, of Virginia, submitted an amendment providing that no new evidence on the part of the claimant shall be received, and all cases in which no evidence has been filed shall be stricken from the docket. Rejected. The bill was then read a third time and passed.

THE COMPROMISE BILL.

At 11:20 o'clock, Mr. Adams, the Clerk of the House of Representatives, appeared at the bar of the Senate with the Electoral Count bill, and announced its passage by the House. Subsequently a second message was received from the House, announcing that the Speaker had signed the bill, and it was presented to the President of the Senate for his signature. Mr. Ferry immediately signed it, and it was handed to the Committee on Enrolled Bills to be delivered to the President of the United States.

THE SUPPORT OF THE MILITARY ACADEMY.

Mr. ALLISON, of Iowa, called up the House bill making appropriations for the support of the Military Academy during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878. Amendments reported by the Committee on Appropriations were agreed to as follows: Restoring the longevity pay of professors and instructors; increasing the appropriation for the band from $6,336 to $11,000; increasing the appropriation for repairs, improvements, &c., from $12,000 to $15,000; appropriating $1,200 for a clerk to Adjutant, and the same amount for a clerk to the Treasurer; also, striking out the second and third sections of the bill reducing the number of musicians in the band and reducing their pay. The bill was then read a third time and passed.

MONEY FOR FORTIFICATIONS.

Mr. WINDOM, of Minnesota, called up the House bill making appropriations for fortifications and for other works of defense, and for the armament thereof during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878. Amendments proposed by the Committee on Appropriations were agreed to as follows: Striking out Gatling guns for the armament of seacoast fortifications, and inserting in lieu thereof mauzine guns, and increasing the appropriation for that purpose from $100,000 to $200,000. The bill was then read a third time and passed.

THE INDIANS.

The morning hour having expired, the Chair laid before the Senate the unfinished business—being the bill reported by the Committee on the Judiciary at the last session, to create a sinking fund for the liquidation of indebtedness due the Government by Pacific railroad companies. On motion of Mr. ALLISON, the bill was laid aside informally, with the understanding that it might be called up at any time, and the Senate took up the bill to ratify an agreement with certain bands of the Sioux nation of Indians; and also with the Northern Arraphoe and Cheyenne Indians, which were discussed briefly and passed.

PACIFIC RAILROAD SINKING FUND.

The Senate then resumed consideration of the unfinished business, being the bill in regard to a Pacific Railroad sinking fund.

Mr. THURMAN, of Ohio, called for a reading of the bill and the report of the committee, and said he understood the Chairman of the Committee on Railroads [Mr. West] would submit as a substitute for the bill reported by the Judiciary Committee that reported by the Committee on Railroads—both bills being for the creation of a sinking fund, but differing as to details.

Mr. WEST said as soon as the bill and report of the Judiciary Committee should be read he would call for the reading of the bill and report of the Committee on Railroads, that both bills might be before the Senate at the same time.

The bill of the Judiciary Committee having been read, Mr. THURMAN said he would not press the matter further to-day. The Senate then, at 1:20, went into executive session, and when the doors were reopened adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Mr. WOOD, of New-York, presented the memorial of the New-York Chamber of Commerce and 1,500 bankers and merchants of New-York City, asking the repeal of all special taxes on national banks. Referred to the Committee on Ways and Means.

THE REPRESENTATIVE FROM COLORADO.

Mr. KNOTT, of Kentucky, from the Judiciary Committee, made a report in the case of Belford, claiming to be the Representative from the State of Colorado. He gave notice that he would call it up for consideration and action next Tuesday. The report is in favor of the admission of the Representative.

INDIAN APPROPRIATIONS.

The House then, at 12:25, went into Committee of the Whole [Mr. Hatcher, of Missouri, in the chair] on the Indian Appropriation bill. After some time spent in considering the bill in the committee, without having adopted any important amendments, rose and reported it to the House, and it was then passed.

THE LOUISIANA RETURNING BOARD.

At 2:30 o'clock the four members of the Louisiana Returning Board who had refused to produce the original returns as called for by the investigating committee at New-Orleans—Messrs. Wells, Anderson, Casanave, and Kenner—were presented at the bar of the House in custody of the Sergeant at Arms. The Speaker put the formal question, first to Mr. Wells, what excuse he had to make.

Mr. Wells replied that two of the members of the board had just arrived in the city, and that himself and Mr. Anderson had not had time to confer with them in order to frame their answer. They therefore asked to be given an opportunity of conference and time to fill such answer as they desire to the House. The same question was put separately to each of the other witnesses, and the answer of each was to the same effect.

Mr. LYNDE, of Wisconsin, thereupon offered two resolutions, one adjudging the witnesses to be in contempt, and the other ordering them to appear before the Investigating Committee and produce the papers called for, and in the meantime that they be kept in the close custody of the Sergeant at Arms.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia, suggested as an amendment, that—as in the Irwin case—the witnesses be confined in the common jail. [Murmurs of disapprobation on the Republican side of the House.]

Mr. PAGE, of California, [sarcastically]—Better move to have them taken out and hanged right away. [Laughter.]

Mr. HOAR, of Massachusetts—I ask whether the first two witnesses arrested [Wells and Anderson] an opportunity of conferring with their associates?

Mr. LYNDE—I understand that they have. They have been together since 11:30 o'clock this morning.

Mr. Wells (without rising from his seat)—We have not.

Mr. Anderson (rising and addressing the Speaker)—We have not.

THE SPEAKER—The witness will be seated.

Mr. PAGE—I move that the witnesses have the right to speak through somebody else.

Mr. CLYMER, of Pennsylvania—The previous question has been called, and all debate is out of order.

Mr. GARFIELD, of Ohio—These witnesses have been kept in duress and separated from each other. [Calls of "order."] There can be no vote on the previous question without a hearing.

Mr. CLYMER to Mr. Garfield—You have been heard quite enough; we propose to dispose of this matter at once.

Mr. JOHNSTON, of Iowa—I move that the House adjourn unless gentlemen are allowed to have at least conversation on the subject.

Mr. PAGE—I move that when the House adjourns it be to meet on Tuesday.

Mr. GARFIELD—The House has not even heard the answers of these witnesses; they have them written in their hands and have not been heard.

Mr. COX, of New-York—This is an attempt to defeat the will of the people of Louisiana and the United States.

ANSWER OF THE BOARD.

After one vote by yeas and nays, and a dilatory motion, Mr. HANCOCK, of Texas, proposed that the previous question be withdrawn, and that the witnesses have half an hour to confer and to prepare their answer. That arrangement was assented to, and the four witnesses retired to a committee-room to confer together. The gentlemen soon returned and were again presented at the bar of the House. They sent up to the Clerk's desk an answer which was read. They declare that in every one of their acts they acted with the most sincere respect and deference to the dignity and authority of the House and its committee, and with the desire and purpose of submitting in all good faith to every lawful requirement of the House and its committee, and that, if any act of theirs was a breach of the just privileges of the House, it was not so intended, but was without any purpose of fraud or of disobedience to lawful authority, and was solely in the honest purpose to discharge their official duty faithfully. They submit that they have not in law or in fact violated any privilege of the House, or rendered themselves in any way justly amenable to be treated as in contempt of its authority. The answer then proceeds to detail the provisions of the law of Louisiana governing the action of the Returning Board in regard to elections. They state that until the full canvass of the election in the State was completed, the continuous control of the papers was absolutely indispensable, and that the moment those duties are ended all such papers are required to be deposited with the Secretary of State. This was done on or about the 5th of January, 1877, and the papers have ever since remained there, without these witnesses having any control over them. The answer then proceeds with a long argument against the right of the House or of Congress to go behind the report of the Returning Board as to the election of Presidential Electors, and characterizing the attempt of the committee to possess itself of the papers as an act of usurpation which the committee or the House, after mature deliberation, would not persist in. They declare that neither of them know of any fraudulent or false return on which they based their action, but that, on the contrary, in every act and conclusion of theirs they acted to the best of their knowledge and according to law and right. They say it is not in their power to surrender the papers called for, and they submit that, if they are to be punished by the House, the guarantees of the Constitution are a most cruel mockery or unalleviated folly. In conclusion they state that they submit their rights as officers and their liberties as citizens to the protection of the laws of the land.

THE RESOLUTION ADOPTED.

Mr. LYNDE, of Wisconsin, inquired whether the answer was sworn to.

The SPEAKER, after examining it, said it was not.

Mr. LYNDE suggested that as a usual thing such answers were under oath, and that that was parliamentary law.

The SPEAKER remarked that that had recently been the practice, and that former Speakers had intimated that it was better to have answers sworn to.

Mr. HALE, of Maine—But only in a suggestive way.

The SPEAKER—Of course. There is no rule to govern the case. The witnesses can be sworn now.

Mr. LYNDE—I do not care about their being sworn. I move the previous question on the first resolution.

Mr. CASSON suggested that the resolution should define what the contempt consisted of.

Mr. LYNDE replied that the record showed what offenses the witnesses had been guilty of, and that it was not necessary in every order of the House that that should be repeated.

Mr. KASSON—This is the first time that the House has been asked to give a judgment of contempt. How can they purge themselves unless the contempt is defined?

Mr. LYNDE—Suppose appearing before the committee and producing the papers.

Mr. KASSON—Why not say so in the resolution?

Mr. LYNDE—Because it is not necessary.

The resolution was again read. It simply reads that "they be adjudged to be in contempt for violation of the privileges of this House."

Mr. CASSON—They can afford to go to jail on this principle.

The resolution was adopted; yeas, 145; nays, 87; a party vote with the exception of Mr. Carr, of Indiana, who voted "no."

The question then recurred on the second resolution ordering the witnesses to appear before the special committee, of which Mr. William R. Morrison is Chairman, to produce all statements of votes and tally-sheets of every polling-place in Louisiana, together with affidavits, &c., and remanding them to the custody of the Sergeant at Arms. The resolution was adopted—yeas, 138; nays, 76.

The House then resumed the consideration of the bill authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to pay $500,000 to James B. Eades, but without action adjourned.

THE OLD MAN WHO SMILED.

From the Detroit Free Press.

One time there was a good old man living in Detroit. His back was bent, his step was slow, and men who gazed upon his snowy locks and wrinkled face whispered to each other: "He is a good old man who has not long to live."

The old man had been well off in his day, but when he found himself on the shady side of life, wife dead and home broken up, he said to his only son: "Here William, take all I have, and let your home be my home until I die."

The son took the papers—you bet he did!—and the father was given a corner, a big chair, and a corn-cob pipe. All went well for a year or so, and then the son and the son's wife began to make it uncomfortable for the nice old man in the corner. They threw out hints, deprived him of his comforts, and one cold day in Winter he was told that he had better go to Nova Scotia.

The old man's heart was sore as he went out into the world to battle against hunger and cold, and when night came he cowered in a door-way, and wept like a child.

"Who is making that chin-music up there?" called a reporter, whose steps had been arrested by the sobs, and he went up the steps, patted the old man on the head, and by and by the story was told.

"Come down to the station with me," said the reporter, taking the old man's arm. "Your son is first cousin to the man who preferred buzzard to lamb, and I'll help you fix him!"

Next morning one of the daily papers contained an item to the effect that the old gentleman named Goodheart had been found wandering the streets at night, and that when taken to the station $10,000 worth of United States bonds were found on him. The old man read it over three times, slapped his leg as he saw the point, and a beautiful smile covered his face and climbed up through his hair. In about an hour the son William rushed into the station and called out:

"Father, dear father, come home! All of us were crying all night long, and my wife is now lying in a comatose state on your account!"

The old man went home with him, winking at the lamp-posts and smiling as he turned the corners. He had all his comforts back, and the son bought him a costly pipe and a pair of box-toed boots that very day.

Well, as time went on the son ventured to suggest that the bonds had better be turned over to him, and every time he said "bonds" the old man would smile and turn the subject. The other day the father went to bed to die, and he smiled oftener than before as he lay waiting for the summons. The son said his heart was breaking, and then went through the old man's clothes to find the bonds. He didn't find any. He searched the barn and the garret and the cellar, and finally when he saw that death was very near he leaned over the bed and whispered: "Father, do you know me?"

"Oh, yes; I know you like a book," replied the dying man.

"And, father, don't you see this thing is almost killing me?"

"Yes, William, I see it."

"And, father—those—those—bonds, you know. I suppose you want them used to purchase you a monument?"

"Correct, William," whispered the father, winking a ghastly wink, and as that same old smile covered his face death came to take him to a better home.

When evening fell the son and the son's wife were wildly searching the straw bed, to get their hands on those bonds.

A VERSATILE MAGISTRATE.

A London paper says: James Williams, a deaf and dumb man, who at the last meeting of the Guildford County Bench was charged with unlawfully soliciting alms by the presentation of a cleverly written appeal, and with whom it will be recollected that Lord Midleton, the Chairman of the Bench, held a conversation by means of the digital alphabet, which ended in the discharge of the prisoner, was again brought before the Bench on Saturday, charged with a similar offense. The evidence was communicated to the prisoner with great promptness by Lord Midleton. In reply, the prisoner said he had broken no law, and he relied upon the legal knowledge of the Bench to do him justice by discharging him. Lord Midleton told the prisoner that he feared he was a professional mendicant. The prisoner with great alacrity replied on his fingers, "In that you are mistaken; I am an object of sympathy, and kind hearts take compassion upon me." Lord Midleton with equal dexterity replied, "My former leniency to you was misplaced. You will go to prison for a month." The prisoner with great animation, replied, "You are an accomplished magistrate, but you have no compassion for an afflicted fellow-creature." He then bowed his acknowledgments to the Bench, and was removed in custody.

THE UNIVERSITY OF DUBLIN.

The Senate of the University of Dublin, at a special meeting, discussed and adopted a scheme for the retirement of fellows incapacitated by age or infirmity from discharging their duties. It provides that such retirements are not to be compulsory, and that to each fellow so retiring there shall be given annually out of the sum paid to Trinity College under the Church Disestablishment act, as compensation for loss of the right of presentation to the livings formerly in its gift, a sum equal to the emoluments of his fellowship, not including those of any professorship or other collegiate office he may hold. Arrangements are also made for the retirement of incapacitated professors on two-thirds of their salary. The retirements are to be in all cases voluntary, and to be approved by the visitors. The Senate also adopted a congratulatory address to the Duke of Marlborough on his assuming the Viceroyalty of Ireland, as to one paragraph of which Dr. Shaw recorded a protest, because he considered it represented the condition of Ireland in too glowing colors.

LAW REPORTS.

UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—In the United States Supreme Court yesterday the following business was transacted:

No. 180.—Jerome and Beaman, Assignees in Bankruptcy of the Lake Superior Ship Canal Railroad and Iron Company, vs. McCarter.—This is an appeal from a decree of foreclosure made by the Circuit Court for the Eastern District of Michigan, under a mortgage of the lands of the road obtained by a grant of the State. The lands were originally granted to the State by act of Congress of 1865. At the time of the foreclosure proceedings in bankruptcy were pending against the company, and other and prior mortgages were outstanding. The argument here is that where a bill is brought by the junior mortgagee, the parties to the prior mortgages are necessary parties, it there is substantial doubt as to the amounts due on the property covered by their liens, and that, as such parties were not joined in the action, the decree of foreclosure was erroneous and should be reversed. It is also contended that the Bankrupt Court had at the time jurisdiction of the property, and that as the Circuit Court has concurrent jurisdiction in bankruptcy, the very court in which the decree was made held the property for the benefit of all the creditors at the same time it rendered the decree in this case, giving an undue preference by the sale of the bonds of the company. It is said that the estate is worth many millions, and that if a proper administration of it had been made in the Bankruptcy Court it would not have paid the lien holders, but the unsecured creditors, and left a handsome fund for the shareholders. And this is urged as a strong reason why the Circuit Court should have retained jurisdiction of the estate as a Court of Bankruptcy, and as such have adjusted the various liabilities against it. Charles P. Crosby and George North appear for the appellants, and Alfred Russell and Senator Edmunds for the appellees.

THE STATE TREASURY DEFALCATION.

The case of the People of the State of New-York against Frank R. Sherwin, which recalls the circumstances attending the defalcations in 1873 of Charles H. Phelps, then Cashier of the State Treasury, was brought before Judge Donohue in the Supreme Court yesterday. Sherwin was charged with being an accomplice of Phelps. The suit was then begun by the Attorney General, to recover the amount of drafts belonging to the State, but negotiated, as was alleged, by Sherwin for Phelps. Sherwin was arrested on Oct. 18, 1873, on affidavits charging him with fraud. His bail was fixed at $30,000. Failing to furnish this he was locked up in Ludlow Street Jail. On Dec. 4, 1873, a motion to vacate the order of arrest was made, but the motion was denied after argument. Sherwin furnished the necessary bail, and was released. A few days ago, however, one of Sherwin's sureties surrendered him to the Sheriff, and the other surety also became released. She'in this case for the second time came into the hands of the Sheriff. He tendered the latter the requisite amount of bail, with new sureties, but the Sheriff refused to accept it, though no objection was made to the sufficiency of the sureties. The Sheriff maintained that he had not the authority, under the code, to accept the new bail, the accused having been surrendered by his first bail. Sherwin's counsel then applied to Judge Donohue in Supreme Court, Chambers, and obtained a writ of habeas corpus in order to test the question.

The New York Times

TRIPLE SHEET.

NEW-YORK, SUNDAY, JAN. 28, 1877.

THE NEW-YORK TIMES.

THE NEW-YORK TIMES is the best family paper published; it contains the latest news and correspondence. It is free from all objectionable advertisements and reports, and may be safely admitted to every domestic circle. The disgraceful announcements of quacks and medical pretenders, which pollute so many newspapers of the day, are not admitted into the columns of THE TIMES on any terms.

Terms, cash in advance.

TERMS TO MAIL SUBSCRIBERS.

Postage will be prepaid by the Publishers on all Editions of THE TIMES sent to Subscribers in the United States.

The DAILY TIMES, per annum, including the Sunday Edition.....$12 00
The DAILY TIMES, per annum, exclusive of the Sunday Edition.....10 00
The Sunday Edition, per annum.....2 00
The SEMI-WEEKLY TIMES, per annum.....3 00
The WEEKLY TIMES, per annum.....1 20

These prices are invariable. We have no travelling agents. Remit in drafts on New-York or Post Office Money Orders, if possible, and where neither of these can be procured send the money in a registered letter.

Address THE NEW-YORK TIMES,
New-York City

This morning THE DAILY TIMES consists of TWELVE PAGES. Every news-dealer is bound to deliver the paper in its complete form, and any failure to do so should be reported at the publication office.

The Republicans in the House have selected in caucus, Messrs. GARFIELD and HOAR as their representatives on the Joint Commission for counting the Electoral votes. Mr. GARFIELD was chosen by acclamation, and Mr. HOAR by a bare majority. The latter gentleman took occasion to declare his conviction that HAYES had been honestly elected, and promised to use all proper means to convince his Democratic associates of that fact. This is a satisfactory assurance, and one whose repetition ought to be insisted on by the Senatorial caucus from the three members which it devolves on them to choose. The Democrats will certainly put forward no one who is not convinced, honestly or otherwise, that TILDEN has been elected, and if the Republican Party must reopen the entire question of the choice of the States before a mixed commission, it has at least the right to insist that it shall be as faithfully represented as its opponents.

It is amusing as well as instructive to note the difference of tone among the Democratic newspapers in regard to the passage of the counting bill. The Sun has never been able to make up its mind about the merits of the measure, and hinted yesterday that the plan may yet come to naught in default of an agreement among the four Judges as to the selection of a fifth. The Sun evidently believes that the Judges will act strictly in their partisan capacity, and as all the three Associate Judges eligible for the position are Republicans, that none of them will be acceptable to Judges CLIFFORD and FIELD. But as the Sun has taken so little interest in the bill as to have overlooked the fact that the Chief Justice cannot act on the commission, its utterances on this subject are probably not official. The World expresses its satisfaction in a somewhat subdued fashion, as one who should give reasons under compulsion, but who still desires to retain the opportunity of saying, in case of the failure of the plan to count in TILDEN, "I told you so." On the other hand, the country Democratic press and the great army of Democratic "statesmen" are jubilant. One of the latter class, much quoted in the World, telegraphed from Washington yesterday to a well-known house in this City: "You may assure all your customers of the certainty of TILDEN'S inauguration." Speculation about the composition of the Cabinet of the Gramercy Park President would thus appear to be in order.

We have had several specimens communicated to us of the kind of mischievous gossip about the personal leanings of the members of the Supreme Court, who in their character as political partisans are to be plunged, for the first time in our history, into the arena of partisan conflict. One of these was published in an evening paper yesterday, and related to the intimacy of Judge SWAYNE with ex-Gov. TILDEN. This was based upon the following passage to be found on pages 42 and 43 of Mr. TILDEN'S pamphlet about "the New-York City Ring": "Besides Mr. HAVEMEYER and Mr. GREEN, the only human being who had any intimation of the purpose [to appoint Mr. GREEN as CONNOLLY'S deputy] was Judge SWAYNE, of the Supreme Court of the United States, who passed the evening with me, to whom I confided the matter, with whom I discussed the question of the right of the State to sue in such case under the general rules of jurisprudence, and in the intervals of conversation with whom I prepared some of the papers." Mr. TILDEN'S long intimacy and occasional association in railroad speculation with Judge SWAYNE are tolerably well-known facts, and although constituting a very slender peg on which to hang any distrust of the judicial impartiality of the able and pure-minded Judge from Ohio, the present allusion to them indicates the reality of the danger to the influence of the Supreme Court which we have all along maintained to be one of the gravest objections to the so-called "compromise" plan of counting the votes.

How very little questions of principle have had to do with the support given to the scheme from either section of its advocates is shown by the rather indecorous satisfaction expressed by some of its Republican advocates over the fact that Judge DAVIS has passed out of the category of available arbitrators. So able and respectable a paper as the Buffalo Commercial Advertiser makes the following foolish comment on that presumably happy chance for the party to "come out all right":

"There, dear but uneasy brethren, you have the obstacle which you at first thought was dead against us. Be content. All is working well."

If "coming out all right" means that the defeated party will have the chance not only of heaping reproaches on the acts and motives of their opponents, but also of calling in question the fairness of certain members of the Supreme Court, then indeed "all is working well." But, it will hardly be left for posterity to find out that the authors of the unconstitutional compromise have builded much worse than they knew.

Controller KELLY has refused to comply with the illegal demand of the Police Commissioners to be put in possession of the February installment of the street-cleaning appropriation for use in January. Mr. KELLY could hardly have done less, and his refusal will probably not interrupt the cordial understanding which is believed to exist between KELLY and his appointees—Republican as well as Democrat—on the Police Board. We have no particular desire to see the powers of the present Controller enlarged, but as he is supposed to be somewhat ambitious to distinguish himself, we might suggest the propriety of his applying to the Legislature for power to audit the bills of the Police Board, in the same manner as those of any other department. As Mr. KELLY'S notions of the legal significance of the word "audit" are probably as loose as those of some of his Tammany predecessors, the charge might not matter a great deal either to the Commissioners or the public, but it would be in the direction of administrative harmony and concentrated responsibility. There can be no possible reason why the Police Board should enjoy the luxury of an independent Treasury any more than the Department of Public Works, and of all the City departments, they are probably the most likely to abuse any such privilege.

SOUTHERN SUBSIDIES.

Whether success or failure attend the effort which Mr. LAMAR proposes to make to strengthen the chances of the Texas and Pacific Railroad, both the scheme itself and the ground upon which it is advocated should have the serious attention of the country. The scheme is a gigantic job, projected in the interest of the greediest and most unscrupulous railroad "rings." The reasons assigned in its favor by Mr. LAMAR and the majority of the House Committee reopen the whole subsidy question, and may hereafter be cited by the South in support of endless claims upon the national Treasury.

Although the Holman resolution, adopted last session, was at the time regarded as an expression of the feeling that prevails in both parties in regard to subsidies, Southern Democrats are now candid enough to say that, so far as their party is concerned, the purpose simply was to avert the hostility which a supposed affiliation with the subsidy system would have excited throughout the North and West. They confess, in fact, that on the side of the Democrats the resolution was designed merely to produce a certain political effect. The Southern press is singularly frank in its avowals on the subject. The New Orleans Times speaks of the resolution as "a dodge," and insists that, the election being over, no more artifices are necessary to stave off the claims of the South "for a just proportion of the national aid and encouragement." The New-Orleans journalist declares that, when the Holman proposition passed, the Northern Democrats conceded the equity and expediency of granting the aid sought by the South, and that they agreed, until after the election, "to say that we are not in favor of it." We do not profess to have positive knowledge on this point. Our authority, however, is a stanch adherent of the Democracy, and its statement is in harmony with the policy of fraud and falsehood with which the party went into the election. "We were told to forego our claims for a time," says the Times, "that after a while we could have all we wanted." In pursuance of this understanding, the consideration and passage of the Levee bill and the Texas Pacific bill during the present session are demanded as part of the consideration to be paid by the Northern Democrats for the unfaltering help accorded them by the South.

It will not be Mr. LAMAR'S fault if the terms of the bargain thus shamelessly proclaimed be not complied with strictly. His report in favor of the Texas Pacific bill is sufficiently sweeping in its propositions to encourage extravagant demands. Its discussions of the question whether "Congress has the constitutional power to grant such aid," is too evidently a pretense to be worthy of serious notice. When was a Democrat of Mr. LAMAR'S stamp known not to have "constitutional scruples" about everything beyond ordinary routine? And when were such scruples known to stand permanently in the way of any sectional project in which politicians of the Lamar school have a direct and tangible interest? The next question is answered with equal positiveness by the report—"whether it is the interest of the whole country that this aid should be granted." The argument is concise: Congress lavished benefits upon the constructors of a central road west of the Missouri; therefore Congress must lavish other benefits upon a Southern road. The gravity with which this non sequitur is elaborated is matched by the comprehensiveness of the illustration appended. "The committee think," we are told, "that the great commerce between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts is scarcely to be considered as an inter-State commerce merely, but rather assimilated to that vast ocean commerce in the care and protection of which Congress has never hesitated to aid ocean steamers, to make ocean surveys, and establish light-houses." If Mr. LAMAR were not a prodigious genius, and a great statesman to boot, we should consider this turgid sentence stuff. One might infer from it that the promoters of the Texas Pacific were explorers of an unknown world, and that the road they ask the nation to build for their aggrandizement would occupy the same relation to trans-continental traffic that light-houses on a dangerous coast bear to the traffic of the ocean. It is clear that this statement of the case would also justify the managers of the Northern Pacific in making a raid upon the Treasury, instead of confining themselves to a modest request for an extension of time. More nearly allied to Mr. LAMAR'S purpose would be the acquisition of aid for the various projects which the South regards as of national importance, and the report lays the foundation for any number of schemes in the interest of Southern communities. If Congress listens to the song of this Texas Pacific charmer, subsidy will follow subsidy until the South gets all it wants, and the Government finds itself bankrupt. Now is the time for resisting decisively the revival of the subsidy system in forms more ruinous and demoralizing than land grants.

Mr. LAMAR'S effort is rendered especially odious by the character of the scheme with which it is associated. We can conceive of enterprises in themselves and in their management meritorious, from which national help should be withheld only because of the impolicy of subsidies, or the exceptionally unfavorable condition of the national Treasury. The Texas Pacific is not of this sort. The fact that two such schemers as Mr. SCOTT and Mr. HUNTINGTON, and the combinations of schemers which they respectively represent, are united in its support, should alone be sufficient to insure its condemnation. Their connection with large railroad monopolies, and the prospect of making the Texas Pacific tributary to them, only needs to be understood by those honestly interested in the country traversed to excite an opposition that would arouse Mr. LAMAR from his delightful dream. And, in truth, Texas papers which have reached us within the last few days show that the Grangers of that State denounce the bill before Congress as antagonistic to Texan interests. The tacking on of the branch roads which the promoters have relied upon as a means of winning local support, is assailed by the Texans as gross jobbery. What connection exists between the branches for which aid is sought and the plans of the Pennsylvania Road is only material because of its bearing upon the general question of railroad monopoly. What is really pertinent to the matters involved in the Texas Pacific bill is the facilities for plundering the Treasury which would be afforded by the plan of aid to the main line, and by the aid to be rendered to the various branches. They are all urged upon Congress as likely to promote Southern development, and the North is appealed to to sanction the proposed method of helping the Southern people. If they really had this tendency, the faithful guardian of the public credit would still say No. In reality, however, they have a very slight connection with influences that touch directly the Southern welfare. Mr. LAMAR'S pretentious purity cannot hide the speculative objects of Messrs. SCOTT and HUNTINGTON, or the mercenary motives of those whom they have retained to operate upon Congress. By these men the Texas Pacific may be judged.

PRINCIPLE VS. EXPEDIENCY.

Two serious dangers at this juncture threaten the integrity of the Republican Party. These dangers are the treachery and the cowardice of some of its unrecognized leaders. There are scores of sincere Republicans in and out of Congress who conscientiously believe that the Compromise Commission will open the best way out of the difficulties of the present. We do not refer wholly or even mainly to this conditional surrender, when we say that the danger of betrayal in certain quarters has existed since the day of Gov. HAYES'S narrow election. The causes of political treachery, open or concealed, are various. Disappointed hopes weaken the ties that bind an ambitious man to his party in proportion as those expectations or hopes are high. Affronted pride becomes more exacting and more difficult to satisfy the less its pretensions are recognized.

No political party has yet been able to meet the expectations of its great men in the direction of public office. The supply of the highest offices is never equal to the demand. Parties are often ungrateful to its leaders, not from a lack of inclination, but of ability, to be gracious. A politician who feels at one time that he has the two most exalted positions in the Republic within his reach, and a thousand lower offices at his disposal, will hardly surrender his claims or abdicate his power without an inward struggle. A party that would contemplate such personal abnegation as possible may expect overtures to the enemy as proper manifestations of his disgust. Another cause of treachery is supposed self-interest. There are two or three candidates for the Presidency in the Republican Party who are persuaded that the success of TILDEN at the present time will further their own ambition four years hence. These prospective candidates argue that if the Tildenites are now given the fruits of a victory which they did not win, the sweeping reaction which follows will carry the Republicans into power in 1880. They prefer that the party shall suffer present defeat under Gov. HAYES, if thereby the way is paved for future success under themselves. In short, they are willing to sell out the Republican Party, provided the consideration for the sale shall be the candidacy for the Presidency when the prospect is good for success. This is not the first instance in human history where ambition has made vain men believe that the attainment of their own ends and interests was more important than the prosperity of a party or even of a race.

Cowardice in public men in times of political peril is due to a variety of causes. Some are afflicted with a constitutional timidity. They flinch at every flash of powder in the pan. A vague terror of rebellion, which in 1861 caused timid souls to fall on their knees and beg forgiveness for having elected LINCOLN President, now influences some to crave a thousand pardons for having elected HAYES. Some are compromisers by birth; they begin life with wabbling steps and go through it with an inability to do anything in a direct way. They have a painful dread of taking the responsibility of any affirmative action. The fear of being called radical or partisan, and the love of being termed conservative, in times that are critical, influence others who have an eye to the greatest good of the greatest number, which in their case is number one. This accounts for the itching after the praises of the so-called independent press and the no-party business men. There are some who think that the end of human existence is attained if they can secure the commendation of the organs and oracles of the opposite party, forgetting that this approval is measured by the degree of their own weakness and depth of their self-abasement. When bitterly partisan Democratic journals begin to call declining Republican leaders "liberal," "conciliatory," and "broad-minded," it is time to inquire what treachery is meditated or what cowardice has manifested itself in their action that has filled the enemy with satisfaction. The worst and weakest Generals in the Union Army always received a hundred times more praise from Democratic and Confederate sources than firm, faithful, soldiers like THOMAS and MEADE. And so in the struggle which is now upon us, the Republicans who favor abandoning the contest, or, which is the same thing, leaving its decision to a fifth judicial Commissioner, will win "golden" opinions from the hostile forces and will be held in fragrant remembrance by the antagonists of the cause they professed in their weakness and blindness to serve.

STREET CARS AND ABSOLUTISM.

It has been generally supposed that the recent radical changes in Turkey are due to external pressure. The party of radicals (as if there were radicals in Turkey!) known as Young Turkey may have had some influence in forcing these political innovations. It is even possible that a desire to anticipate the further complaints of civilized Europe has hastened the promulgation of the new Constitution, so-called. But the real explanation of the revolution in Turkey is to be found in an humbler plane of life—street cars. Modestly, yet firmly, we advance the proposition that absolutism cannot exist where there are street cars. All modern history proves it. Ancient history also would prove it if there were street cars in ancient history. But Dr. SCHLIEMANN found neither rails nor bell-punches in the grave of AGAMEMNON. And as that illustrious hero had thriftily accumulated in his last resting place samples of all the movable property of the period, we must accept the theory that horse railroads, antiquated though they are, did not afflict humanity in the time of the Heraclidæ. This being admitted, we have sufficient explanation of the fact that absolutism flourished in the earlier days of the race, and that republicanism is a plant of modern growth. It may be added that if the street car had been contemporaneous with JUNIUS BRUTUS or LYCURGUS, the Roman Republic would have lasted to this day, and Sparta would at this moment be debating whether it should choose its President by lot or by a game of euchre.

Your street car is the true leveler of all social and political distinctions. It may be granted that the corporation which administers this modern street nuisance is itself absolute; but it is not the cause of absolutism in others. When aristocrats, whether crowned or otherwise, enter the street car, they abdicate all superior pretensions. The most bloated of bondholders has no more rights than the shabbiest and dirtiest beggar. And if the beggar who rides be a female, the masculine bondholder is compelled by public opinion to give up his seat and hang himself to a strap from the roof. A few pennies is the entrance fee to this engine of torture. Once in, each passenger is on a level with every other passenger. It would be superfluous to say how very low this level is. In common misery the load of humanity is shaken together, and every atom is reduced to a minimum of meanness. One who thinks very highly of himself may airily hail a street car. He surrenders half of his manhood when he is obliged to run and jump before he can get into it. If there is anything left of the other half, it is taken from him by the unhappy company within, and by the conductor who kicks him off when he is ready to disembark. In a street car assumptions collapse, fine feathers drop, rank is wiped out, and every grade of society may be said to be "tarred with the same brush." The street car is an American institution. Therefore there is no chance here for Cæsarism.

Street railways were introduced into Constantinople, two or three years ago. From that day the doom of the Ottoman dynasty was sealed. It is evident that ABDUL AZIZ had studied the newspapers to very little purpose. He should have known that he was harboring a viper that would sting him to death. He should have seen that street cars in Madrid had overthrown the Bourbons and had compelled the adoption of a constitution. DOM PEDRO could have told him that the same infernal invention introduced in Buenos Ayres a necessity for the abolition of slavery, and compelled the proud Braganza to wear a wide-awake hat, and eat his dinner in twenty minutes like a born democrat. We read that there have been attempts to disguise the street car in Constantinople, and to make it conform to usages of the country which existed when ACHMET and BADROUL-BADOUR rode on a flying carpet, and the good Caliph took his walks abroad accompanied only by his Vizier and a horn lantern. There is a separate compartment for the veiled women, and the only man permitted therein is the Nubian conductor, who is pock-marked and presumably a eunuch. But the passengers wear turbans, swear by the Prophet when an emeer treads on their corns, and, like Christians, look another way when the bell-punch stops before them for their fare. To be sure, there are no fair Fatimas to frown upon the Turk who keeps his seat in defiance of the plaintive attitude of a big market-woman with a basket of corned beef; the bejeweled dignitaries hang on to the leather straps, and, we doubt not, the line from the Serai Humayun to the aqueducts of HADRIAN resound with the delirious jingle of "When the conductor collects a fare, he must punch," &c.

It was bad enough when the Commander of the Faithful put himself into French pantaloons, and gave up his araba for a Brewster phaeton. But when softas, dervishes, mollahs, emeers, and pashas took to riding in street cars, the shade of the great OTHMAN must have remarked, in the language of the worldly, "the jig is up," and so have turned his back on the Osmanli forever. It is idle to say that a city which tolerates street cars can retain its oriental characteristics. It is oriental to be never in a hurry. To be sure, the street cars are never in a hurry, except where they are run to "make schedule time." But this is never true of those who would be passengers. It is not necessary to ask what must be the effect on a Turkish population which daily trots madly after a retreating street car. Infuse the element of haste into an oriental, and he becomes feverish, querulous, dissatisfied, revolutionary. Make him a frequent passenger in these machines, and he is transformed into a grumbler, a cynic, a democrat. There is no longer any safety to aristocratical institutions where he is. It is not possible for a man who beholds authority clothed with a bell-punch to regard with equanimity any absolute power whatever. Therefore, the Sublime Porte (sublime no longer) has reluctantly conceded a constitution to its dissatisfied subjects. It is too late. The spirit of discontent and democracy has gone abroad on the line of the street railway. The Grand Caliph may as well go back to Bagdad. He and the street car cannot exist together in Constantinople.

VIENNA BREAD.

One remarkable result of the Centennial Exhibition is the very striking and altogether admirable fact that Vienna bread is now to be bought all over New-York. Indeed, we are not quite sure that the genuine Vienna article is not more easily procurable in this City than in the Austrian capital. You will find it in the Bowery, and in the streets crossing that elegant avenue; nay, you shall not enter a little baker's shop in Mackerelville without finding at least Vienna rolls upon the counter. There is something very impressive in this manifestation. We had all heard of the excellence of the bread of Vienna, if, indeed, we had not eaten thereof; and we supposed it, or the like of it, could be obtained nowhere else. Was not the Queen of Great Britain, desiring to regale herself upon this farinaceous dainty, obliged to import a baker and his staff from Vienna? And yet no sooner was it generally known that the Vienna bakery of the Centennial Fair was to be transferred to New-York, than immediately, long in advance of the elegant bakers and the opening of their gorgeous shop, announcements broke out all over town, in windows where the humblest preparations of wheat had before been seen, diversified only with those of the native pumpkin, that Vienna bread might be had, not only without going to Vienna, but without waiting for Vienna to come to us; to wit, at those very numerous places aforesaid. To assume or to suspect that this new dispensation of dough was the result of a shrewd attempt to forestall the Viennoise, and to take advantage of their high repute, would be very uncharitable. That is not to be thought of for a moment. We must believe that the knowledge of this art and mystery had been for a long time widely diffused over Manhattan Island, and that only fitting occasion was required for its manifestation in act and deed. Perfect candor compels us to declare, however, that, except for the name of the thing, and perhaps the shape of it, the Vienna bread to be found at most of these places might just as well be called anything else, and that it is in fact only our old vile New-York bread, the worst in the world, with perhaps the addition of a little molasses and a little lard for difference.

It would, indeed, be a great benefit to the whole country, and particularly to the people of this City, if the advent of the Vienna bakers should improve, even in a moderate degree, the bread that most of us are compelled to eat, which, as we have just said, is probably the worst in the civilized world. The peasantry of England live poorly, and bread, like the old woman's victuals and drink in the nursery rhyme, is the chief of their diet; but there is not a peasant in England who does not, or who may not if he will, eat more wholesome and more palatable bread than most of the people in New-York do who spend more on their living in a week than he does in a year. How it was that the type of New-York bread was developed it would puzzle a college of savans to discover. Certainly, not upon the principle of the survival of the fittest. But here it is, a type peculiar to us; and inference, from such facts general and particular as are within reach of ordinary observation, leads to the conclusion that it is an ingenious contrivance, the result of traditionary art, perfected through generations, to make a small quantity of bad flour assume the form and color of a loaf compounded of good, sweet, wheaten grist. Take a loaf of New-York bread, particularly that hideous thing the traditionary split-loaf, weigh it, cut it in two, and examine it, and you will find that it has the least possible real substance consistent with the maintenance of the loaf form. It is slightly more substantial than whipped syllabub, and is much like baked fog, or slightly compressed white smoke. A man could squeeze the whole crumb of a ten-penny loaf into a little lump of half-baked putty-like dough, that would lie in the hollow of his hand. Taste it, and if, not having been born and bred in New-York, you know the flavor of wheat, you will see that this tastes rather more like the results of carefully-manipulated saw-dust. Not that it is made of saw-dust; but it is made of bad flour, "doctored" and salted out of bad taste into tastelessness, and so over-raised that it is a mere puff of dampish, nondescript substance. Whatever one's taste as to eating bread fresh or stale, the test of good bread is its appearance and condition twenty-four hours after it comes out of the oven, when it is "ripe." Cut a loaf of New-York bread open at that period of its brief existence, and see how gray and dingy it has become, how dry and dusty it is; smell it, and you will not want to taste it. If it were good bread, it would then be sweeter than when first baked, white, tender, and moist enough for pleasant mastication. But most New-York bread a day old is not fit to be eaten; although, for that matter, it is not really fit to be eaten at any time.

New-York fashions spread widely, and the New-York baker's loaf may be found all over the country. It is a standing and a daily witness to the supineness with which we as a people submit to imposition. That we should allow our bakers to impose such stuff upon us, giving us, even of that, not a known quantity, but just what weight they please for our ten cents, shows that we are a mere flock of geese, made to be plucked. No other people would endure it; no other people do endure it; for bakers know better than to try such experiments in Europe. It may be said that we have no government inspection of bread here, and that the effort to obtain one would be hopeless, because such a thing would be "foreign to the spirit of our institutions"—whatever that may mean in such a connection. Granting this, although without admitting it, we still have the power of protest and resistance. We still might let our bakers hear that we know that their bread is the vile stuff that it is, and by our grumbling, we might, if we could not convert them from the error of their ways, let other bakers see that a good stroke in the way of business was to be done by making good bread, and selling loaves of known weight at a reasonable price. But no; we quietly submit, and, indeed, not a few of us, having been brought up on the stuff from childhood, and told that it was bread, really believe that it is what is meant when we read about the staff of life. Like people who have lived in mines until light has become offensive to them, many of us really like this flimsy half-sodden sponge that forms a paste when it is chewed, and prefer it because it is "so light," to real bread, which, although tender, has substance, and which never becomes pasty in the mouth. There is now, however, a hope for us, although a very slight one. The presence of the Vienna bread, although it is yet absurdly dear, may make it necessary for bakers to change their style. But it is to be feared that the lucre of gain will work the other way, and that the Vienna bread will deteriorate here into such a likeness to our native product that the Centennial might as well not have been.

THE CORROSIVE NATURE OF TIPS.

When the waiter rushes forward to take your coat, hang it up, drag out your chair, and, with many unexplainable motions of arms and feet, provide you with the necessary and unnecessary articles that comprise a waiter's idea of comfort—when he flies to fulfill your order as if wings had been applied to his heels, like a modern statue of Mercury—even then you begin to feel that he has you at a disadvantage. If you combine in your nature the qualities of sensitiveness and stern rectitude, pleasure in your meal has already vanished. For this wonderful galvanization of the waiter, what does it mean? Merely that he considers it possible, probable, nay certain, that some of the silver change in your pocket will be transferred to his. Of that your sensitiveness has made you painfully aware. But a keen judgment has long since settled in your mind that tips are wrong—morally wrong, and moreover, of such a nature as to exercise their baleful influence upon the giver as well as the receiver. For you do not give out of charity, under an impression that the waiter is a poor man, or because you have any outgoing of the heart to him on the general score of humanity. You pay him on compulsion, not compulsion of a gross material kind, to be sure, but of a subtle, pervasive, undermining, variety. In fact, you are a hypocrite and coward combined. But how is it with him? By tipping him in this way you are corrupting his honesty, and harming his manliness, for he will be sure in the end to keep his good serving for those who pay, and turn a cold shoulder to the economical. So you are not only a coward and hypocrite, but a corrupter of a citizen of the United States. This is a gulf, indeed, for a strictly just and sensitive frequenter of a restaurant to find himself in. But there is an abyss beyond. After a little study of the question you begin to see that your deleterious influence on the waiter is even greater than you imagined. For behind the waiter stands the proprietor of the hotel. Is he, the quintessence of a sharp business man, going to let slip a chance to beat down the wages of a waiter, think you? On the contrary, do not perquisites of this kind furnish him with an excuse to pay small wages, and thus levy two tolls on your pocket, one in the price of food, the other in the salary of his unfortunate employé?

It is stated somewhere in a foot-note that in a certain Eastern county of England the gentlemen came to a conclusion on the subject of tips. Whether it was at a meeting of the hounds or a political dinner is not stated; the result of this decision appeared in placards throughout the county, wherein they one and severally pledged themselves to give no more tips, drink-moneys, or perquisites, on or after a certain specified date. This was in 1805, or thereabouts. It would be curious to travel in that county now, and from some hoary-headed butler learn the rise, decline, and fall of this heroic local rebellion against the empire of tips.

There can be no question that tips are utterly opposed to the spirit of the New World and modern civilization. Indeed, nothing is easier than to prove its origin in the darkest ages of feudality. The man who receives a tip is in so far forth a retainer, a vassal of the giver, and his individual pedigree—strictly on the tipping basis—at once goes back to the venal brawlers and banditti any rich man could assemble and keep about him during the Middle Ages, just so long as his store of rings, drinking-cups, and broadcloth held out. Wages or salaries were not in vogue, but an expedition or a war was begun by tipping the bravoes into good nature and devotion. We perceive, then, how violently the custom clashes with American ideas of the dignity of the voter. We may go so far as to say that the waiters who receive tips, and more particularly the hotel proprietor who speculates on tips in order to lower the waiters' wages, should be deprived of their votes until they promise to amend. Just how this end may be reached we cannot now stop to explain. At present it is sufficient to agree upon its necessity.

With thoughts of this painful nature crossing your mind, your dinner is apt to be as short as it is unenjoyable. Now has arrived the moment of agony. The waiter brings you a small salver with your bill, and you know that salver has its edges turned up in order to keep your small change—the waiter's small change—from rolling off, when, with a flourish and an unmeaning affectation of returning it to you, he sweeps it down to the side of your plate. You may procrastinate. You may wonder how it is that while the emigrant is always sure to understand, and to give you to understand, moreover, that in America all men are equal, this particular species of emigrant seems oblivious to the fact. You may pity him, and, especially if a lady is of your party, you may wish that you were alone with him in order to remind him of the undermining, corrosive nature of a tip. But now there is no help for it. You are at the celebrated Forked Ways. On this side are cowardice, hypocrisy, corruption of voters, and salvation of appearances in the eyes of the waiter and the world; on that, courage, truth, frankness, and—martyrdom. Think of it, reader, think of it deanly—and choose.

DISPLAY OF WATER-COLORS.

AT THE ACADEMY OF DESIGN.

A LOOK INTO THE WEST AND THE NORTH-WEST ROOMS.

The West Room contains a good many interesting sketches, and shares with the East Room the enviable distinction of excluding, for the most part, these large water-colors whose size affects one with a sense of toil in the artist. There are more light and sprightly pictures in the West Room, little sheets of paper that have caught a passing mood happily, and so fulfilled the legitimate raison d'être of water-color drawing. The only example of Detaille is here, in the figure of a cavalry soldier reading on horseback, a subject uninteresting enough in it self. The background appears to have been untouched by paint, whether transparent or opaque; only a little foreground has been washed in to give something for the horse to stand upon. We suppose this would be called in France half gouache, because the paper shows through uncovered by paint. The paper is, perhaps, delicately tinted; at any rate, it makes a soft impression on the eye. LOUIS C. TIFFANY has one of his best contributions in No. 222, "A Street in Geneva," noticeable for a quiet sentiment, and absence of the quality to be found in more than one of his sketches in this collection, an appearance, namely, as if everything had been arranged for the picture like studio properties. No. 223, "Washerwomen on the River Seine," D. R. KNIGHT, attracts much attention. It is somewhat altered from an oil painting by the same hand. A wonderful smoothness and a peculiarity of modeling in the figures attract the eye at once. The contours seem to have been first brushed in smoothly in black and white, with special attention to shadows, and then the colors applied with extreme care and finish. Perhaps the smoothness of the paper alone will account for this appearance. No. 252, "Noonday Rest," is also by D. R. KNIGHT, and shows the same effects. At first both of these aquarelles are very captivating, but after a little while a disagreeable suggestion of pictures on prune-boxes forces itself upon the memory and will not be shaken off.

In No. 230, "Gate of the Lions, Mycenæ," we have an object of interest in the field of archæology, to say nothing of its being the work of a well-known author, Mr. BAYARD TAYLOR. It represents the scene of Dr. SCHLIEMANN'S discoveries, which have been recently reported with flourish of trumpets. Examples of the pleasure which can be extracted from water-colors by persons of taste and artistic experience are found in Nos. 231, "Sunset," and No. 288, "Wood Scene," both by S. T. DARRACH. They seem to have been done in the simplest way, with wet colors only, on rough paper, but they possess exquisite sentiment. The painter has known what to choose, and renders very well the dark strip of land anchored between light sky and light water, or, again, the interior of a wood such as we all must have seen. Nos. 234 and 273—"Cherry Blossoms" and "Anemone"—give good promise to the work of Miss Ellen Robbins, although the backgrounds are in each of these pictures colored after a system we have not yet understood. They look as if colored for luck, as one might say, with possibly an idea of complementary colors, but no apparent reference to anything in nature. W. F. MACY has a pretty, unambitious bit in No. 236, "Sketch from Nature," and R. SWAIN GIFFORD shows his growing strength in a slight affair under No. 248, "Study at Nonquitt, Mass." Mr. SAMUEL COLMAN is treading in a path worn hard by the two GIFFORDS, to say nothing of others, when he spends valuable time on Venetian Fishing Boats, (No. 256.) Mr. E. W. PERRY has one of his handsome country girls in No. 260, "The Milk-maid." He shows himself always a most careful workman; for example, the milk-pail has a fine effect of actual tin, but we wish he would give more outline and human shape to his figures. The girl's dress might press a little against the legs, so that we should be sure that she is human below as well as above. It cannot be want of knowledge or a desire to shirk work which prevents this popular artist from giving the necessary lines that will take the stiffness out of his figures' petticoats. A pretty little fancy, not ill treated, will be found in No. 264, "What O'clock Is It?" by T. HOVENDEN.

A foreigner who is represented in the North Room—Villegas—is guilty of a feeble joke in No. 275, "Japanese at Prayer." The Japanese, of a diabolical cast of countenance, stands looking down at strange figures scrawled on the floor, which turn out to be the name and address of the artist, written upside down. A large sword runs diagonally across the figure, so that at first sight he appears to have run himself through and just about to commit hari-kari. The coloring is harmonious, but it is a study in studio properties trying hard to be fused into a meaning. No. 279 presents some of Mr. JOHN THORPE'S good points in cattle, while No. 280 is a hasty sketch by Mr. WINSLOW HOMER, having all of his brusqueness. There is a tiresome, smirking Italian woman near by, from the easel of INDONI, (?) while the solitary MEISSONIER appears under No. 283, "Republican Sentinel." This, like so many of MEISSONIER'S pictures, is nothing but a study of old clothes, notwithstanding that an earthwork has been painted in very light colors about him, the sea let into the distance, and a gun given him to hold at "porte arms." He is supposed to be of the Army of the Var, but he is doing nothing—perhaps that may be the point. As a human figure he is characteristic, leaning back emphatically on one leg in a manner that MEISSONIER has long used. He stands in a negligent attitude, like a real soldier of a Republic. L. LELOIR has another of the same variety, but a different age, a soldier cleaning a sword, the merest catchpenny picture, without an idea, but well painted. VIBERT, on the other hand, does say something in No. 291, "Matador," for the man stands in an ecstasy of gratified vanity, while the arena applauds some feat of his in the bull-ring. No. 292, "Fruit Piece," by SHERRIN, should not have been allowed admission. It represents nothing that has ever grown. No. 295, "Morning Fog," by J. C. NICOLL, is inferior work to several others by him in this collection. They have some grace and thought; this shows how dangerous it is to see much of the porcelain skies and glass waves of W. T. RICHARDS.

THE NORTH-WEST ROOM.

This is the lumber-room of the exhibition, where things that do not come under the title of water-colors are gathered in a not unpleasing variety. One often gets more satisfaction out of odds and ends which the grave Philistines on committees have passed with a frown, than from rows of fair pictures which have received their approving academical smiles. Of this kind is not, however, we regret to say, No. 315, "Consuelo," a full-length picture by Mr. EASTMAN JOHNSON. The sentiment of this figure is little short of mawkish and the drawing most commonplace. It can only do harm to the reputation of a painter who deserves well of the public for many charming oil pictures. No. 310, "Etchings," show, if not the hand of a master, at least a hand that has been in wonderfully good company. The etchings have great fire in execution, and may represent a certain school of French art, but their spirit represents an individuality of the strongest kind in the etcher himself. He is JAMES MCN. WHISTLER, of London, formerly of Baltimore. No. 301, "Etchings," have a remarkable similarity in handiwork, as if the two artists had worked in the same studio. These latter are by SEYMOUR HAYDEN, of London, the brother-in-law of WHISTLER, and most probably his pupil, directly or by a natural influence. Mr. R. SWAIN GIFFORD does not show to advantage when without the aid of color. No. 320, "Study for a Painting," is very unsatisfactory standing by itself. As a picture, there is no visible excellence about it; while as a sketch, it by no means enters the category of such hasty drafts as the masters have left us. No. 325, "Head," by HELENA DE KAY, is a strong sketch in charcoal, which is very pleasing by its repose, being treated in a large, composed manner. No. 325, "Proof of Woodcuts," by the same hand, shows the illustrations used in Mr. R. W. GILDER'S book of poems called The New Day. They have a peculiar union of grace and power which may be rendered by the word intensity. Although slight in themselves, they are full of promise. No. 311, "Zélie," by M. R. OAKEY, shows a charcoal portrait by a bold and clever hand. It is calculated for a great distance; near by the hat is too overpowering and the expression uneasy. Less happy is No. 350, "The Spider," where the drawing is very hazardous, and the young woman's head unreasonably small. On the north wall hangs a drawing by a nephew of KAULBACH, (No. 340, "Meditation,") Fritz August Kaulbach by name, which has much of the finish usual in German art, but no especial evidence of the uncle's force. It is a graceful and pleasing figure, however. SARONY has a gigantic "Love Scene from Henry V.," (No. 343,) which takes up a great deal of room, and may be art—from the point of view of a photographer. No. 346

"Moth," by Riordan, is a skillful copy of a difficult study which has been rendered of less value than it possesses by a gold mat. The exquisitely delicate coloring of a Luna moth requires a dark contrast to bring out the values. Mr. Riordan has also an odd little still life painting in the North Room. There are some curious drawings in smoke on China plates here which have a fantastic effect. No. 373 gives some etchings from nature by L. M. Yale, some of which are of decided excellence. No. 332, "The Ostrich Dance," by F. S. Church, ought not to be allowed an entrance into an academy of art. Such weak jokes may be in place where they will draw a crowd to the window of a tobacconist, but not here. There is nothing ludicrous in caricatures of a peor bird that does not pretend to beauty or grace.

CORRIDOR.

The corridor has always been the most amusing part of the rooms on Fourth avenue, because there contrasts were always sure to be most vivid. The good things that hanging committees could not or would not appreciate were apt to be there; there also were the things which, although accepted, were so outrageously bad that the question was, where can we find the shadiest and most retired spot to thrust them into? Only half this can be said to be the case at present; there is a surprising lack of the gloriously-absurd variety of picture. Under No. 396 we find a sketch by Mr. Winslow Homer, where his natural audacity has counseled the absence of any background or foreground whatever. Like Japanese fan figures, or like the most primitive Indian outlines, his two young persons sit on a stiff sofa, which rests like Mohammed's tomb—on nothing. The backgammon player on the left has Mr. Homer's good points, however, and the picture tells them in its way. No. 408, "Close of Day," shows Mr. Reinhart's good drawing, and occasional lapses into very bad color. Instead of being forcible it is violent, a fault that will doubtless disappear in time. No. 411 is by Pianchi, and would be very good, were it not that we are informed that it represents Galileo. As a modern genre picture with a tinge of the comic, it is a success; as a historical painting of a great man, it is a travesty. No. 412 is a large sheet by Alfred Kappes, which has the same mixture of good thought and faulty execution we noticed in other works by him. He has promise in him, if he can only work through. Nos. 414 and 415—"A Song of Other Days," and "The Melancholy Jaques"—are by Voltaire Combe. Jaques has a leg like a ham packed for shipping, and he sits on rocks for all the world like the cast-iron ornaments of the gardens of villas in the suburbs. His melancholy is feigned, just as the gayety of the man who is singing is feigned. In color they are equally wretched. With No. 422 we come upon a Russian painter, Ivan Pranishnikoff, who seems to find plenty of color, and that of a vivid variety, in his native land. This picture shows us one of the Russian passions, sleigh racing. The horses are delicately and firmly drawn, the pictures joyous, and affecting the eye very much as a bright Oriental cloak or Roman scarf. The same may be said of No. 455, "Greeting in Circassia," while No. 499, "Cossack Advanced Guard in Khiva," also by Pranishnikoff, is a picture of other values, larger in sentiment, less scrupulously finished. No. 443, "Flat Rock," by Francis Silva, is another one of the many hard, unfeeling paintings we are compelled to see and even asked to admire, but Nos. 444, 446, and 451, by John Thorpe, are something different. The cattle in the two latter are good in tone, but somewhat spongy—that is, not solid as cattle really are. No. 466, "Sicily," is one of those jokes which are good only if they are unconscious. The bare leg of the woman's figure suggests false calves, while other portions of the anatomy mean either feather pillows or nothing. Arthur Quartly has one picture here that deviates from the prevailing hard finish very pleasantly. It will be found at No. 507, "Sunset—Fisherboats Homeward Bound." But no one should leave the building without noting No. 486, "French Seaport," by G. Gassier, for this little picture ought to leave a good taste in the mouth. It is light, fresh, delicate, firm. It is one of a number serving to repeat certain truisms about art which this collection once more exemplifies. One is that neither size of picture nor time of work on a picture is a measure of its value. Another is that a man may do finely in oils and fail signally in watercolors. A third is that a painter's individuality, whether cultivated or inherited, must tell in his pictures.

A SAD FAMILY HISTORY.

JAMES H. ELMORE'S RAPID DESCENT FROM AFFLUENCE TO WANT—HIS DEATH IN THE POUGHKEEPSIE LUNATIC ASYLUM.

James H. Elmore died on Friday morning last in the lunatic asylum at Poughkeepsie, having been driven insane by a series of misfortunes which are seldom crowded into the life of one man. Fifteen years ago Mr. Elmore was a widely-known New-York business man. He had been an extensive flour merchant for years, but left the business to engage in the manufacture of gas-fixtures. At the time of the excitement over the Pennsylvania oil wells he became interested in the celebrated Noble well. It yielded vast quantities of oil and enriched several people. Ten years ago Mr. Elmore retired from business worth $250,000. He purchased a country seat at Jamaica, Long Island. A large mansion was built and broad acres surrounded it. His family consisted of his wife and three children. They kept liveried servants, and their society was sought by all the aristocratic people of the town. Aaron A. Degrauw was one of the aristocratic residents. Between him and Elmore there grew up a strong intimacy. They engaged in oil and coal speculations, and built a horse railroad from Jamaica to East New-York. Elmore lost thousands of dollars in it. Elmore and Degrauw quarreled. Claims of fraud were made by both sides, and they went to law. Brooklyn Courthouse was always the battle-ground, and lawyers will readily recall the bitter contests. Elmore became known as the "Man up the river." The cases went from one court to another, first one and then the other having the best of it, and the Court of Appeals was invariably reached. The majority of the suits terminated in favor of Degrauw. Elmore was unfortunate in being stricken by disease during the height of the battle, and for nearly a year his life wavered in the balance. Judgment after judgment rolled up against him, and in the midst of the trouble, which preyed heavily upon his wife and daughter, the latter died. It was a severe blow. Elmore finally rallied, but was a cripple for life. His finances had been gradually wasting away. He renewed the struggle, however, but his health and the advantages gained during his illness had great weight against him. Overexertion and excitement brought him again to a sick bed. An important case was before the Court of Appeals. Trouble, care and bereavement had reduced Mrs. Elmore to a skeleton. She took the decision came. It was adverse to Elmore, and at the mention of the fact Mrs. Elmore dropped dead on the parlor floor. The mansion and lands were her's in fee simple. She had made no will. The judgments that had been obtained against Elmore were waiting satisfaction. He was well nigh penniless, and now soon to be made homeless. He had two sons, the oldest an assistant clerk in the Court of Appeals. Elmore's life-interest in his wife's estate was sold by the Sheriff. The personal chattels were sacrificed. The mansion and grounds were bid off to a man named Scott. Elmore and his children were driven into the streets, virtually paupers. An interest he had in some hotel property in Jamaica was sold under another execution, and a gentleman who had indorsed his appeal bonds was compelled to purchase at the price of $26,000 to save himself. Elmore traveled from one place to another, a cripple, subsisting on the benevolence of old time sympathetic friends. On Christmas night, a year ago, his eldest son, Charles, was killed on the Pennsylvania Railroad. The tottering intellect of the infirm old man gave way entirely under this dreadful blow, and his emaciated body was borne to the Poughkeepsie Asylum, from whence he never walked forth again.

His death directly affects a case now pending before the Supreme Court. He had one son living, a minor, named James. Scott brought suit in partition to sell the mansion, but Judge Pratt decided in the child's favor. The ruin pending was not thus to be averted. Scott transferred a half-interest in the property to George Durland, and another partition suit was instituted. This was carried through successfully, and the premises were advertised to be sold by the Sheriff. They are worth, in the depreciated condition of the market of to-day, regardless of the inflation there has been done them, $20,000. At the time Elmore had been consigned to the asylum. Out of the $250,000 with which he retired from business, but the premises remained as a legacy to his only child. The sale of them would have made him penniless. Friends who sympathized with the father in his troubles turned their attention to aiding his child. The law firm of Brown, Hall & Vanderpoel, who had done business for the boy's father, took his interests under their charge, and the sale of the premises was enjoined, pending the decision of law points on appeal. The death of Mr. Elmore ends the interest of Scott and Durland in the premises, which will now revert to the heir.

A MISSING YOUTH.

Inspector Dilks sent out from the Central office, last night, a general alarm to all stations instructing the Police to search for Frank Carpenter, a youth, who was missing from the Everett House. The missing youth came to this City with his father from Highland, N. Y., and visited the Aquarium. They returned to the Everett House, where the youth strayed away from his father, and since that time has not been seen. He is 13 years of age, and wore a light overcoat peal-skin cap, and kid gloves.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

MR. GLADSTONE SPEAKS AGAIN.

THE EX-PREMIER AT TAUNTON—HIS LETTER FROM EUGENE SCHUYLER—THE ENGLISH NATION MADE RIDICULOUS—THE TURKISH CONSTITUTION AN IMPOSTURE.

LONDON, Jan 27.—Mr. Gladstone made a speech at Taunton to-day. In the course of his remarks he said: "We ought to mind our own business, and why we should mind the Eastern Question is because we have chosen to make it our own question. It was made our business under circumstances which no true-hearted Englishman will disown. I have had, within a few days, the honor of a letter from Mr. Schuyler, United States Secretary of Legation and Consul General at Constantinople, in which he says he is about to make a further report on the trials and executions in and on the State of Bulgaria. 'I think you will find in it,' he writes, 'abundant confirmation of the remark at which Selim Effendi took offense.' I quote this because those who wish to lull the people of England into ignoble slumber are fond of saying there has been exaggeration on this subject. There has been no exaggeration, except the exaggeration that the Turks had in them the capacity and the desire for reform. Do not listen to that for a moment. But, as to the black deeds done in Bulgaria, the whole vocabulary of human language is insufficient to paint them as they deserve.

The people of England are bound to resist the seductive language of those who tell them, now the conference has met and failed, there is no more to be done. It is you—the people of England—whose resources and actions have maintained Turkey in the position of power she has so abominably misused. After the Crimean war the European powers took the engagement of Turkey to do her part. They declared by the Treaty of Paris they would not interfere with her in the fulfillment of that engagement. The result is, that the Treaty of Kainardji, concluded a century ago, which gave Russia the right to interfere for the protection of Turkey's Christian subjects, was discussed, and we, in conjunction with France, destroyed that right. Can anything be more plain than if we destroyed that right we cannot divest ourselves of the obligation to put in its place something equivalent or better? Therefore, to say our responsibilities are discharged by having sent an honorable man to Constantinople to give the Porte good advice, and then come away with nothing but the refusal of that advice in his recollection, is nothing more or less than mockery. Doubtless you have read on various occasions the speeches of the Prime Minister. I have not sought to make this speech an attack on the Government. I think we are justified in attacking them, and it is just possible at the proper time I may be taking a share in doing so. But the settling of past accounts is of secondary consequence. The Prime Minister has repeatedly dwelt upon the importance of maintaining what he calls the faith of treaties. Now the vital question for us is this: Are the treaties of 1856 in force or not?" Mr. Gladstone then contended that Turkey had not fulfilled her obligations, and therefore the treaties were not in force. "I hold it," he said, "to be ridiculous. I hold it to be monstrous to say they are in force as between Turkey and us. If the treaties are in force I hardly know what liberties you possess. You are in a disgraceful position. You become accessories in the maintenance of a power marked with, perhaps, the deepest disgrace recorded in the whole history of mankind." Mr. Gladstone contended that the Turkish Constitution was worse than imposture, because it committed the Christian minority to the tender mercies of the Mohammedan majority in the council to which we are invited to leave the task of doing justice to the Porte's subjects.

In conclusion, Mr. Gladstone said: "The good fame of England was never more completely at stake. If the incessant dinning into our ears of the maintenance of British interests; if the infusion of every word of suspicion against the policy of Russia; if the abuse of those unhappy Turkish Christians, who, having been an enslaved people, are necessarily in such respects open to the demoralizing influence of slavery; if the recent invention of a Turkish Constitution, made to order, and intended to act as a bar to the propositions of the conference; if by these, or any other like device—for I must say the imagination of the Turkish press of this country is fertile beyond everything in manufacturing them—if by these things you are going to be drawn aside from the great purpose you have in view, then we shall leave to posterity the melancholy lesson that the people of England having long dwelt in the apathy which was due to ignorance that we all labored under, and having been once awakened to a gallant and noble effort in favor of the principles of humanity, justice and freedom, were content to be lulled to sleep again. They found the task of duty too heavy for them. It was more convenient for every man to go about his own pursuits, his own money-making, his own pleasures, and dismiss from his mind these painful and harrowing subjects. It may be so; but if that be true these are marks of a degenerate nation. This is conduct that emphatically confutes the doctrine of human progress. But, gentlemen, if you really wish to be worthy of the forefathers from whom you are descended, of the civil and religious liberty you possess, and of the religion which it is your greatest privilege and blessing to possess, for heaven's sake do not allow yourselves to be corrupted—for corruption it is—by these debasing insinuations, but grapple with this great duty which is given you, and leave to these who come after you a lesson and example which I will venture to say will neither be less noble, nor less beneficial to mankind than the noblest of all lessons which you have received from a long line of ancestors." [Great cheering.]

FOREIGN BUSINESS AFFAIRS.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL—THE LONDON STOCK EXCHANGE AND MINCING LANE MARKETS.

LONDON, Jan. 27.—On the Stock Exchange during the week business has been very inactive, except in a few securities, but with a tendency toward firmness, and prices generally advanced. Consols advanced 11-16 in consequence of the scarcity of available stock and the closing of accounts by operators for a fall in view of the monthly settlement next week. The last transactions in bar silver were at 58d. Quotations now are uncertain, and nominally about 57 3-4d. to 58d. Entre Rios securities advanced 8 1-2; Santa Fé, 9 2-3; Argentine and Buenos Ayres, 2 to 5; Russian, Hungarian, and Turkish, 1 1-2 to 2 3-2; French, 3-4 to 7-8, and Italian, 7-8, but Spanish are 1-4 worse. Canadian railways were flat, receding 1-4 to 1. American Governments and railways improved in some cases. Illinois fell 1 1-2.

Business in Mincing Lane has been dull, which cannot readily be explained, and quotations generally close under last Friday's prices. Some holders of low sugar have accepted a further decline, making a fall of 5 shillings per cwt. on the rates paid two months ago. This led to more inquiry, causing a recovery of a shilling. Other kinds at the public sales gave way a shilling to 2 shillings per cwt. The Glasgow sugar market closes with a steady tone and fair business doing. Coffee is unsettled and prices lower. New crop Ceylon is down 7 to 8 shillings per cwt. compared with the corresponding last month. Foreign shows the same depreciation, at which a cargo of Rio was sold for the American market. New Burmah Rice was once rather dearer, but afterward sold at barely last week's rates. Spice is quiet. In saltpetre a few sales to arrive were made at last week's prices, but parcels on the spot are below previous value.

MISCELLANEOUS FOREIGN NOTES.

LONDON, Jan. 27.—A telegram from Teheran says: "In view of England's neutrality, Persia is likely to observe a pacific policy toward Turkey, unless great pressure is exercised by Russia."

ROME, Jan. 27.—The Pope, who has been indisposed since Thursday last, left his bed to-day for an hour. His Holiness will endeavor to give audience on Sunday.

A STRANGE STORY.

A YOUNG GIRL, AS ALLEGED, LIVES SIX MONTHS WITHOUT FOOD—CURIOUS CIRCUMSTANCES OF THE CASE.

From the Pittsburg (Pa.) Telegraph, Jan. 26.

The patient in this case is a young lady, of fine form, and great beauty of face, whose home is in the vicinity of Greensburg. Her story is of such an extraordinary character as to appear incredible, were it not vouched for by professional gentlemen of unimpeachable veracity. Dr. Cote, of Penn avenue, above Ninth street, was the first physician here whose attention was directed to the case. For obvious reasons the name of the young lady cannot be mentioned. She is, however, described as being about 22 years of age, the picture of health, and weighing about 150 pounds. The exceptional character of this veritable description will be appreciated when it has been said that for three months before the time that an opportunity was presented to describe her she had not eaten a morsel of food. This startling abstinence seemed to have no external effect. The girl's complexion was bright and clear, and her splendid physique carried with it the irresistable impression that no insidious disease could have a lodgment in that fair tenement. But the fair external was a terrible illusion. She was so weak that it was a work of the most painful character for her to drag her weary limbs after her. Her story was calculated to intensify, rather than to clear away, the mystery of her rare affliction. She did not have the slightest idea of a probable cause for her suffering. She was not sick. She had neither pains nor aches. She did not suffer from hunger. She had not the slightest desire to eat. The cessation of appetite had been sudden and absolute. No premonitory symptoms of disease were manifested before the strange ailment seized her. It was in July last that she first passed a whole day without eating. The day before her appetite, so far as she could remember, was as usual. She did not eat for a week, and her family became alarmed.

All known specifics to provoke an appetite were tried without effect, and so the second week passed. In this early stage of the disease, the young lady lost little of her virality, and this fact seemed to reassure her anxious friends. But when the weeks extended into months, and there was no apparent change in the young girl's condition, except that she daily grew weaker, the most serious apprehensions were aroused. As may well be conceived, things were not permitted to get to this pass without directing the attention of a physician to the case. Extreme measures were not resorted to until the girl had been a month without eating. Without intending to cast the slightest reflection upon the skill of the practitioner who up to that time had charge of the case, it may be said that it was quite beyond his grasp. Experiments, almost without number, were unavailingly resorted to, and as a sort of forlorn hope electricity was called into service. While all these experiments were useless for good, they were productive of much suffering to the despairing patient. Finally she refused to longer subject herself to torture, and resigned herself to her fate.

A change of scene was recommended, and a short trip to the home of a relative at Irwin Station was projected. When it was that the train passed through this city. She was on her way home again when her relatives took her to see Dr. Cote. Her experience with physicians had aroused a feeling of distrust and aversion of the profession, and she was very loathe to again put herself under treatment. At that time—it was in September last—she had not eaten anything but a few morsels of candy, since the July before. Her case excited the Doctor's greatest interest. He at once made a diagnosis, and after much persuasion induced her to agree to remain in the City, under his care, for a few weeks, so that he might have an opportunity of fairly testing his way of restoration. This she agreed to do, and that was the last the physician ever saw of her. When he called at the house where she had been stopping, on the following day, the family had gone.

Reasoning from the examination that he had time to make, Dr. Cote has arrived at the conclusion that the seat of the girl's trouble is in her nervous system. The diagnosis was sufficiently thorough to convince him of that, though the particular cause of the derangement of the nerves he did not have an opportunity to determine. Her existence for so long a period, despite the suspension of the vital functions of her humanity, was of course a matter demanding careful investigation, and the sudden departure of the girl was a source of painful disappointment to the physician. The popular impression that a person, so situated, existed upon his or her fatty tissue, the Doctor said was a mistaken one. Life was preserved by absorption through the cellular tissues.

It has transpired that after leaving this City the girl put herself in care of Dr. Martin, of Philadelphia, but it is said that there has been little improvement in her condition. Now, here is the most astounding fact in the whole case. The girl is still alive, and her appetite has not been restored. Her external appearance has undergone little perceptible change, out she has become so weak as to be confined to her house.

THE WEATHER.

INDICATIONS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28—1 A. M.—In the Middle and Eastern States, rising and higher, followed by falling barometer, easterly to northerly winds, colder, partly cloudy weather, succeeded in the former by easterly to southerly winds, and possibly in the southern portion rain areas.

IN THIS CITY.

The following record shows the changes in the temperature for the past 24 hours, in comparison with the corresponding date of last year, as indicated by the thermometer at Hudnut's pharmacy:

1876.	1877.		1876.	1877.
3 A. M.	32°	28°	3:30 P. M.	40°	44°
6 A. M.	34°	28°	6 P. M.	40°	42°
9 A. M.	37°	32°	9 P. M.	40°	36°
12 M.	39°	40°	12 P. M.	41°	36°

Average temperature yesterday.....36 1-2°
Average temperature for corresponding date last year.....37 3-4°

1876.	1877.
Weekly average.....32 4-7°	26°

J. B. FORD & CO. AGAIN IN BANKRUPTCY.

J. B. Ford & Co., publishers at No. 27 Park place, and No. 46 Murray street, having failed to meet their obligations in their first compromise with their creditors, approved a year ago, have gone into bankruptcy again, and now offer 30 cents on the dollar, payable in 16 monthly instalments. At a meeting of their creditors before Register Fitch, yesterday, the schedules and proofs of debt were filed, and an adjournment for one week was taken to let Mr. Wetmore, one of the creditors, examine the books of the firm. Their total liabilities are $95,000, of which amount $50,000 is contingent, being a claim now in court for a printing machine. The principal creditors are the Christian Union Publishing Company, $8,318 41; George Merriam, $5,480; Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe, $2,300; Welch, Fellow & Co. $2,052; National Bank of the Metropolis, $2,072; A. W. Gleason, $2,375. The nominal assets are $34,000. Included in the assets is the contract with Henry Ward Beecher to write a life of Christ. It is endorsed "value uncertain."

UNEARTHING HUMAN BONES.

Workmen employed in excavating in the yard of No. 47 Lafayette place, unearthed yesterday four human skulls and numerous fragments of human skeletons, which were buried about four feet below the surface. It is not definitely known under what circumstances they were deposited there, but the mystery is partially explained by persons professing to be intimately acquainted with the remote history of the neighborhood, who assert that the ground was many years ago used as a grave-yard. Dr. Miller, Coroner Flanagan's Deputy, gave an order for the removal of the bones to the Morgue.

THE WESTFIELD CHUROH CASE.

In Westfield, N. J., the friends of Rev. Mr. McKelvey have just published a large edition of "The Westfield Church Case," so-called, being a review of the action of the General Assembly and the various proceedings of the minority before the higher judicatories of the church. It memorializes the Presbytery of Elizabeth with great earnestness that Mr. McKelvey is not in contempt while acting as supply for the Westfield Church, and urges that several of the most prominent members of the Presbytery of Elizabeth assured his friends that he should be kept as stated supply notwithstanding the dissolution.

LOW CANAL TOLLS.

Mr. John S. Brown, Mr. William Clarke, Mr. James Wadsworth, and Mr. William Preston, a committee appointed at the meeting held by the canal-boat owners a few days ago, have been making arrangements for a mass meeting to be held for the purpose of advocating a lower rate of tolls on the canals. It was at first thought desirable by the committee to hold a meeting in the Produce Exchange, and it is possible that such a preliminary meeting may yet be held. But the main meeting, to be held in the Cooper Institute, will undoubtedly be called for Monday, Feb. 5

AMUSEMENTS.

MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC.

THE ENGLISH OPERA.

After the extended reviews of the week's representations of English opera which have appeared in these columns, it is almost unnecessary to make a fresh mention of the fact that the season at the Academy of Music has been uncommonly successful. Yesterday, when the fourth performance of the series occurred, the house was crowded, and the prospects for the present week indicate that the audiences are likely to be quite as numerous. Yesterday afternoon, "The Flying Dutchman," which had its first rendering in this City on Friday, was heard anew. The improvement in the ensemble was notable, and Miss Kellogg's portrayal of Senta was quite as suggestive and as dramatic as it was on the previous night; more than this need not to be conceded. The fine second act lost no particle of its impressiveness thanks to Miss Kellogg, Mr. Carleton, and Mr. Conly, and it was clear that the beauty and power of the music were in no degree mistaken. A third representation of the English version of "Der Fliegende Holländer" will, we are sure, be as largely attended as its predecessors; as two or three hearings of an achievement of this sort are indispensable to its thorough appreciation, the repetition of the opera ought to attract, indeed, a still mightier assemblage. "The Flying Dutchman" will be sung again on Friday evening; to-morrow, "Martha" will be given, and, for Wednesday, "The Star of the North," with Miss Kellogg in one of her most brilliant personations, is announced.

THE OPERA BOUFFE.

A series of opera bouffe representations, under the direction of Mr. Maurice Grau, will be entered upon at the Eagle Theatre to-morrow evening. Mlle. Aimée will be the bright particular star of the entertainments, which address themselves with much eloquence to a large class of the play-going community. Mlle. Aimée will first appear in "La Jolie Parfumeuse," which merry and tuneful work is to be performed to-morrow and Tuesday evenings, and on Saturday afternoon. "La Vie Parisienne," and "La Fille de Mme. Angot" are to follow during the week, and later on in the season, several new works will be made known. Audiences of a more fashionable stamp than have yet been seen within the walls of the Eagle Theatre are likely henceforward to grace that house—at least under Mr. Grau's administration.

GENERAL MENTION.

Mr. H. J. Montague will appear at the Boston Museum on Feb. 19.

"The Two Orphans" will be produced at the Grand Opera-house on Feb. 19.

Mr. Boscovitz will give a piano recital at Steinway Hall on Tuesday evening next.

A new theatre, called the Teatro Payret, was opened to the Havana public on Friday evening.

Mr. John McCullough will act at Booth's Theatre two weeks, beginning on Easter Monday.

Mr. Heller announces a continuance of his delightful entertainments at the Broadway Wonder Theatre.

The representation for the benefit of the late Miss Western's mother occurs at Niblo's on Thursday afternoon next.

Mme. Palmieri has been engaged as prima donna at the Teatro Tacon, in Havana, and has already departed to fulfill her engagement.

Mr. Booth's engagement at the Lyceum Theatre terminated last evening. To-morrow the tragedian acts at the Brooklyn Academy of Music.

The San Francisco Minstrels maintain "The Happy Moke" upon their programme, which is always rich in minstrel-music and laughable scenes.

Mr. Daly's comedy of "Lemons" still attracts overflowing audiences to the Fifth Avenue Theatre, and is announced for repetition there for an indefinite period.

Representations of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" may still be witnessed at the New Broadway Theatre, and a concert by the Georgia Jubilee Singers occurs there this evening.

"Around the World in Eighty Days" has proved exceedingly successful at Niblo's Theatre, and performances of the spectacle are accordingly announced there until further notice.

Gilmore's Garden is to be open throughout this week, and the novel entertainments of polo matches and races will be continued there nightly. "Scenes of Indian Life" will also be partof the programme.

The staple attractions of the New-York Aquarium are now supplemented by performances by Capt. Quigley, the well-known diver. Free lectures are also delivered in the library of the place by Prof. Adrian J. Ebell.

The Olympic Theatre will be reopened to the public on Tuesday evening with "The Big Bonanza." One of Mr. Daly's traveling companies will interpret this well-known play. The Olympic has been much changed and improved during the recess.

The sale of seats for the first representation of Mr. Rowe's drama called "Fifth Avenue," at Booth's Theatre, will begin to-morrow. The principal characters in the play will be assigned to Messrs. Rignold and J. H. Taylor, and Miss Maud Granger.

At the next concert of the Philharmonic Society, Mendelssohn's "Melusine" overture; Beethoven's Seventh Symphony, and a new serenade in five movements, for stringed orchestra, by R. Fuchs, of Vienna, will be the principal numbers of the programme.

The first of a series of entertainments in aid of the proposed Hospital for the Cure of Chronic Diseases occurs at Steinway Hall to-morrow evening, when a concert will be given in which Miss Emma Thursby, Mr. Fritsch, and other well-known artists will take part.

"All for Her" will be represented throughout this week at Wallack's Theatre. Mr. Wallack's admirable performance of Hugh Trevor has produced a profound impression, and is likely to prolong the success of the play beyond the term its actual merits would assign to its existence.

The German Liederkranz Society will give their second concert this season at their club-house, this evening. Reinthaler's prize composition, "The Bismarck Hymn," will be made known on this occasion; a suite by Raff will also be played by Mr. Thomas' orchestra, and Mr. Jacobsohn is to interpret Beethoven's violin-concerto.

Mr. Grover's new "American comedy of American life" called "Our Boarding-house," will be presented at the Park Theatre, to-morrow evening. The piece has been acted with considerable success in San Francisco and in Chicago, and the engagement of many excellent artists, among whom are Messrs. Stuart Robson, W. H. Crane, J. W. Carroll, and W. E. Sheridan, is an earnest that its performance here will convey a most satisfactory idea of its merits.

Mr. J. R. Brown, known as the "Mind-Reader," will give a public exhibition at Chickering Hall on Thursday evening next. Among other surprising feats which he proposes to accomplish, Mr. Brown offers to name to any person in the audience his birthplace and place of residence; to tell him how much money he has in his pocket, and to discover any subject he may choose to think about. He also intends to tell any inquisitive lady her age. It has been conclusively proved that what Mr. Brown does in the way of reading one's thoughts and discovering hidden subjects, is not accomplished by collusion.

OBITUARY NOTES.

J. W. Hannewinckel, German and Austrian Consul at Richmond, Va., reported on Friday as stricken with paralysis, died yesterday morning. He was 56 years old.

Ralph B. Little, Esq., one of the oldest and most prominent lawyers of Montrose, Penn., died suddenly on Thursday night. He was one of the ablest lawyers in Northern Pennsylvania.

A private dispatch from Williamsport, Penn., announces the death of Rev. Seymour Coleman, for many years a prominent clergyman in the M. E. Church, and a member of the Troy Conference, in the State of New-York. He was 83 years of age.

John C. Baxter, who died suddenly on Friday last at his residence in this City, was widely known in business and religious circles. He was born in Lansingburg, Rensselear County, N. Y., May 11, 1807. For 48 years he was engaged in the ship chandlery business in West street. He was for 30 years one of the most active and prominent men in the Sunday-school cause in the State, and as a Sunday-school Superintendent had no superior. His funeral services, which were of a very impressive character, took place on Monday from the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church, and were conducted by Rev. Dr. Armitage, assisted by Rev. Drs. Dowling and Perkins and Rev. P. F. Jones.

RACING ON THE ICE.

FIRST OFFICIAL REGATTA OF THE POUGHKEEPSIE ICE-YACHT ASSOCIATION—AN EXCITING EIGHT-MILE RACE — THE PRIZE WON BY THE RESTLESS.

From Our Own Correspondent.

POUGHKEEPSIE Saturday, Jan. 27, 1877.

Within four days the ice-yachtsmen of the Hudson have evinced a spirit of enthusiasm that has not been witnessed before in years, and the first vent given to it was in the pretty scrub race of the New-Hamburg Association yesterday, when Mr. Grinnell's Flying Cloud beat the Zephyr by only two seconds in a 12-mile race. This race was followed to-day by the first official regatta of the season, under the auspices of the Poughkeepsie Ice-yacht Association, of which Mr. John A. Roosevelt is Commodore. The prize was the club pennant and burgee, a set of colors that were presented to the association in the Winter of 1872 by Commodore Kidd, of the Brooklyn Yacht Club. The rule governing their retention is, that if the person winning them shall hold them after three successive contests, he or his boat shall thereafter hold them as sole owner, no other boat or person having any right to challenge for them. This prize made to-day's race an interesting one. The ice-yachts entered for the contest were Mr. Aaron Innis' Haze, Ex-Commodore O. H. Booth's Restless, Mr. John A. Roosevelt's Icicle, Mr. Theodore V. Johnston's Ella, Mr. Jacob Buckhout's Gracie, and Mr. Aaron Innis' Hail. The course for the race was four miles south, turn flag off Roe's Glenwood House at Milton Dock, and return, or eight miles in all. The judges or Regatta Committee were Hudson Taylor, Henry Frost and William C. Arnold. The judge at the Milton flag was Theodore Van Kleeck, of the ice-yacht Flying Dutchman. The timer was Peter Hulme. Sailing masters were notified that yachts were to turn the Milton flag from east to west, and on the finish must cross the line west of the home flag.

It was announced that the yachts would be started at 10 A. M., and by that time nearly 1,000 persons had assembled upon the ice and adjacent piers to to witness the novel scene. Several ice-yachts of all sizes, not belonging to the association, were flying about in every direction, and there was a whistling wind blowing from the south-west. There was much delay in getting the yachts ready, because of accidents that had occurred during yesterday's heavy wind. The starting flag was placed near the eastern shore, opposite Reynolds' coal dock, and Mr. Philip Hamilton drew for positions, the Ella winning first choice, taking nearest to the flag; the Hail, second; Restless, third; Icicle, fourth; Gracie, fifth; and Haze, sixth. As the wind was nearly south-west it was evident that the Haze had the best place, because she could make the longest first stretch to the south-east. At 11:30 o'clock the yachts were all in line awaiting the word. The Ella was sailed by Capt. James Martin, the Hail by Frank Smith, the Restless by ex-Commodore Booth, the Icicle by Commodore Roosevelt, the Gracie by Jacob Buckhout, and the Haze by Richard Knight. All the yachts but the Haze carried a runner-plank man. At 11:52 A. M. Judge Arnold notified Capt. Martin, of the Ella, to look for the word, and at 11:53 shouted "Go!" Capt. Martin shoved his helm a-port and the little Ella sped away to the south-east merrily, amid the cheers of the spectators, and got nearly a quarter of a mile away before the Haze started. The latter shot off to the south-east, lifting one foot a little as she flashed by the Knal Rock, and then the third boat, the Restless, was sent away in the height of a heavy flaw, fairly humming as she made her way almost straight down the river, for that particular flaw was almost direct from the west. The Icicle and Hail and Haze followed, and then the flyers were all off, and making fast time on the first tack. Off the lower dock Mr. Knight, of the Haze, did not seem to like the looks of a canal where icemen had been at work, and he let his boat up a little to clear it, when Mr. Roosevelt, being a little more venturesome, sent the big Icicle across it like a flash, and thus went ahead of the Haze. Soon after, however, the Icicle came to grief, for, when tacking to make a stretch to the westward, the wind suddenly left her, and she stuck just long enough to allow the Haze to go to the front again. Off Blue Point the Hail, Gracie, and Restless had a hot race, and again, when the big Icicle across it like a flash, and thus went ahead of the Haze. Soon after, however, the Icicle came to grief, for, when tacking to make a stretch to the westward, the wind suddenly left her, and she stuck just long enough to allow the Haze to go to the front again. Off Blue Point the Hail, Gracie, and Restless had a hot race, and again, when heavy flaws struck them, they were lifted high in air, and the men on the runner-planks had as much as they could do to hold on. On nearing the Milton flag the Hail and Gracie drew away from the Restless, the Haze still leading the Icicle, and the Ella, the first to start, had dropped back to last position. The Milton flag was turned in the following order:

	H.	M.	S.		H.	M.	S.
Hail	12	25	30	Haze	12	31	00
Gracie	12	28	45	Icicle	12	31	15
Restless	12	30	05	Ella	12	36	10

The only boat that went around the flag without being pushed was the Hail. She skimmed about it like a flash. The Haze and Icicle rounded and came to a dead stand, the wind having left them, and the surface of the ice was very bad. In fact the entire course was in bad condition for speed, the ice being rough and soft. All the yachts after turning the flag bore away to the eastward, making a stretch almost to Hyde Park, and then, taking advantage of the south-west wind, laid their course directly up the river, and then there was a hot race for the finish. The Hail was still leading, with the Restless and Haze pressing her, but she held her own as the leading boat, with a time allowance being considered, and rushed across the line only five seconds ahead of the Restless, amid great cheering, the Icicle third, 26 seconds ahead of the Haze, Gracie fifth, and Ella sixth. Following is a summary of the race:

Boat.	Owner.	Start. H. M. S.	Finish. H. M. S.	Time of Race. H. M. S.
Ella	T. V. Johnston	11 53 00	12 58 45	1 05 45
Hail	Aaron Innis	11 53 15	12 51 15	57 45
Restless	O. H. Booth	11 53 30	12 51 15	57 45
Icicle	J. A. Roosevelt	11 53 45	12 53 20	59 35
Gracie	J. Buckhout	11 54 00	12 57 35	1 03 35
Haze	Aaron Innis	11 54 15	12 53 46	59 31

ACCIDENT ON THE HARLEM EXTENSION.

The Burlington (Vt.) Free Press of the 25th inst. says: "The night train on the Central Vermont, (Harlem Extension Division,) coming north, met with an accident just north of Dorset about 5 A. M. Wednesday. The train was behind time, but was not running more than 15 miles an hour, when a rail broke under the engine, as it is thought. One of the cars, however, left the track except the rear sleeping-car, which ran off and instantly upset. There were in it four passengers only—Mr. J. G. Hindes, of Vergennes; Mr. John Fair, of Montreal; W. Kane, of New-York, and B. L. Benedict, of Brooklyn. None were seriously injured. Mr. Hindes got a bruised shoulder, Mr. Fair a black eye, and the porter a scratch on his face. One end of the car was torn open and everything inside was thrown into a heap. As was remarked by one of the train men afterward: 'It seemed little less than a miracle to have six men crawl out of such a heap unhurt.' That the smash-up was no worse was due to the fact that the couplings broke instantly and that the car struck in a bank of snow, so that it was not dragged far; two rails were torn up by it, and the broken one was found in a number of pieces. Conductor Parris was standing at the door of the passenger car in front of the sleeper, and says the upsetting of the sleeper was almost instantaneous. He rushed back with the brakeman, not expecting to find a person alive; and with commendable forethought put out the fire in the stove with snow. Only two boots could be found in the wreck; but the train-men and other passengers furnished some shoe coverings for the bare-footed ones; and on arriving at Isriland, new shoes were provided by the railroad officials."

A DISORDERLY HOUSE BROKEN UP.

Sergt. Haggerty and a section of the Police from the Sixth Precinct, raided, last night, on the the "free and easy" known as Oxford Music Hall, at No. 122 Chatham street. Forty men and six women were arrested and locked up at the Franklin Street Police Station. The complaint against the place was made by Patrolman Brown, of the Sixth Precinct, who charged John Brundage, the proprietor, with violating the Excise law and keeping a disorderly house.

Herring's Safes
AGAIN AND AGAIN
PROVED TRUSTWORTHY.
FIRE AT SCRANTON, PENN.,
Jan. 15, 1877.
We had two of your Champion Safes in the fire. Contents saved intact. HAND & POST.

ANOTHER.
Our books and papers are perfect—saved in one of your safes. MOOSIC POWDER COMPANY.

TIMELY TOPICS DISCUSSED.

THE COMING NAVY.

FAVORABLE COMMENTS OF NAVAL OFFICERS ON THE REPORT OF THE BUREAU OF EQUIPMENT AND CONSTRUCTION—THE ATTENTION GIVEN TO THE CONDITION AND TREATMENT OF THE SEAMEN.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Such honest and outspoken convictions as those found in the "Report of the Chief of the Bureau of Equipment and Recruiting" meets with the most favorable comments of naval officers. The clear and vigorously expressed views of the accomplished head of this important office point to a long-needed reform in the naval branch of the public service. We are made to feel at the opening of the report that the writer is thoroughly at home on the subject of ships. His statements regarding steel-wire hawsers, galleys, and chain-irons smack of practical knowledge, and his declaration that it is time to recognize the fact that war ships must be full-powered steamers, and that sails are auxiliary, shows that in his convictions he is abreast of the times.

The main thing in the report, and that which is entitled to most consideration, is the full and careful attention given to the condition and treatment of the sailors on a man-of-war. It condemns unsparingly the disposition in the Navy to fit up ships exclusively in the interest of the officers, leaving the health and comfort of the men to take care of themselves. It calls for more allotment of space for the comfort of the crew, and better means of ventilation than are now provided on the ships.

On the subject of courts-martial the report points out that sentences are almost uniformly found to be not only too severe on the men, but injurious to the service. The disposition of such courts to inflict loss of pay for trivial offenses is condemned. "Loss of pay should be limited to the period for which the offender's services are lost to the country." An intelligent revision of the code is called for to "harmonize it with the spirit of the age; at present its spirit is inconsistent with modern ideas of right and justice, and its letter is too severe for practice."

Attention is called to the gratifying fact that desertions are becoming less frequent. This is attributed to the growing belief among seamen of the Navy that a more liberal system of discipline is about to prevail in the service—a discipline which will enforce the law by encouraging men with rewards for doing their duty rather than punishing them for its neglect. The recommendations concerning "honorable discharges" and "continuous service certificates," and also about the "appointment of permanent petty officers," are worthy of adoption. It is to be regretted that the report does not go further and urge the adoption of some method for the advancement of seamen, by which they might aspire to the position of commissioned officers. The presence in the Navy of one person out of 500 who had been made an Ensign or a Lieutenant for good conduct and efficiency as seamen, petty officer, and warrant officer would go far to give a higher tone to all our man-of-wars men. It is probable that the efforts now making to improve the character of the men composing the crews of our national ships, will, for some time find heartless support among the officers who came into the regular service from the volunteer forces of the war. In the report the special object of the bureau's care is the system of training men for the Navy. The number of ships now engaged in this duty is two, viz: the Minnesota at this station, and the Monongahela, at Baltimore. Boys are regularly enlisted in the Navy and placed on board these ships for a year or more, to become accustomed to ship life and receive instruction in their new calling. When found sufficiently prepared, they are distributed among the sea-going vessels of the Navy. By the system of weeding out the bad and improving the good it is hoped to gradually elevate the character of the crews of our war ships. The success thus far has justified the most sanguine expectations. The accomplished officers in command of the vessels named, and the able and devoted juniors who serve under them, have already turned out a large number of embryo sailors who are found to be better men and more valuable on shipboard than the landsmen whom they have replaced. It is to be hoped that the legislation asked for in the report, in order that the methods of the bureau may have the permanent sanction of law, will not be refused. The chief of the bureau again asks for an outfit of clothing for enlisted men. This is quite in keeping with the solicitude shown throughout for the well-being of this important but much neglected class of our citizens. So, too, is the further recommendation that the act of Congress approved May 15, 1872, "allowing interest at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum on the savings of soldiers deposited with Paymasters, be extended to apply to the amounts due enlisted men in the Navy." This last recommendation especially should meet with hearty approval. It is thought unfair that men in the Navy should neither receive their pay after earning it nor be allowed interest on it when it is withheld. There is no other class of men who have to wait one, two, or three years for their wages; and if there are reasons why this should not be pronounced a hardship and gross injustice, there can be no reasons why the refusal to allow interest for the time it is kept from them should not be thus characterized. The plea that the men will waste or misuse their money if paid to them monthly has no more force when applied to sailors or soldiers than to any other persons. The argument that it is necessary to retain a sailor's pay for fear he will desert if not held by the knowledge that he will lose his hard-earned wages is considered by naval officers themselves as the most emphatic condemnation of the prevailing system of regarding and treating men in the Navy. It is claimed that it is not necessary to retain men's services elsewhere by any such method. They would not want to desert, say the officers, they could hardly be driven away, if the service was what it ought to be. That there is occasion for radical changes proposed in the report is evidenced by the fact that men do now desert and forfeit the pay due them. The chief excellence in the bureau's recommendations is found in the proposition to make the naval service such that men will no more think of leaving it than a mechanic thinks of leaving the shop where he has steady and remunerative employment, and where he receives the consideration that he is entitled to as a man and a citizen. On the whole, the report is admirable, and leads to the hope that a new era is opening for sailors in our Navy. R.

WEIDERMANN AGAINST TILDEN.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Noticing your reference to the case of Weidermann against Tilden in to-day's issue, and knowing that while you like to make a point against your adversary you like to have it a fair one, I call your attention to a few items of interest that I trust you will add to your statement of the case. First—Mr. Tilden paid Weidermann $225, as he admits, for a little advice to the men who were laying out the back yard at his house in Twentieth street. Second—It was done in April, 1874, and was not discovered to be insufficient till seven days before the election, when his complaint was served. Third—When he came to his bill of particulars he charged $43 for superintending the building of 44 feet of tight board fence between the two lots, and $450 for superintending the workmen in laying out the back-yard and selecting a few plants for it.

W. W. NILES, Counsel for Defendant.
NEW-YORK, Saturday, Jan. 27, 1877.

THE SOLDIER IN "LEMONS."

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I attended the theatre a few nights since to witness this new play of "Lemons." As an old soldier, I must protest against the travesty of the United States Army as represented there. The privates of the regular Army are not in the habit of lolling around on the sofas and chairs in the parlor used by the commanding officer. They do not wear their forage caps in the house, and do not receive his commands in a sprawling position. They stand at an attention when spoken to, take off their caps, and do not whistle on such occasions. They are not on terms of gross familiarity with the officer aforesaid, or with the ladies and gentlemen who are visiting the house, and do not join in their conversation as an equal. It is true, the soldier is represented as rambling around the room constantly drunk, but in the real Army he would be sent to the guard-house for a month were he to appear in the room in such a condition. Such men are considered a small matter, but great numbers of young people who know nothing of the Army, or the discipline maintained there, will fancy it to be a true picture.

OLD SOLDIER.

CARRIER-PIGEONS.

INFORMATION FROM AN ANTWERP FANCIER —HOW CARRIER-BIRDS BROUGHT NEWS FROM A BESIEGED CITY—A FLIGHT OF 150 MILES IN TWO AND ONE-HALF HOURS.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Your paper of the 16th of this month contains an article about carrier-pigeons, entitled "A Valuable Suggestion to Steam-ship Companies—A Rapid and Sure Means of Communication Between a Ship at Sea and the Shore—The Power of Carrier-pigeons." As I am a fancier of the Antwerp carrier-pigeon, and besides a native of the City of Antwerp, (in Belgium,) where I have also been in the same business, I would respectfully request you to give my answer to your article a place in your valuable paper.

The suggestion made in your paper, of using the carrier-pigeons as messengers between disabled or distressed steamers and the shore is an excellent idea, and could be adopted at a small expense, and no doubt if it was tried and put into operation it would be the means of saving hundreds of lives and millions of dollars' worth of property. However the idea of using these means of communication had a start last year, and this is what the Belgian newspaper L'Epervier says about it:

"The use of the Antwerp carrier-pigeons, which our colombophile fanciers propagate with so much zeal, may take before long an unforeseen development. The steamer La France, which left Havre for New-York the day before yesterday, (July 14,) has taken on board a great many Antwerp carriers. The Transatlantic Steam-ship Company wants to make experiments, certainly very interesting, upon the disposition and the strength of the pigeons on long sea voyages. Last year the company bought at Antwerp 40 pairs of the best breed of Antwerp carriers, and these birds will be divided between New-York, Port-de-France, St. Thomas, and St. Nazaire, in which last-named place the central loft will be established. These birds will stay where they have been put from the commencement; it will only be the young birds which will be used to establish the communications. When a steamer is 600 miles from France, a couple of pigeons will be let loose, which, at the rate of 50 to 60 miles an hour will bring to St. Nazaire the news that all on board goes well; at 600 miles from Port-de-France they will signal the near arrival of the steamer. If it was possible to have stations at every 600 miles, regular communications could be established. These experiments are going to show us what distance a carrier-pigeon can travel, and the length of time which it can fly without taking nourishment. We will also know by these means what is the exact influence of the wind upon the flight, both in respect of its swiftness and its direction."

Your article also says that since the invention of the magnetic telegraph the use of the carrier-pigeons has passed into desuetude, to a certain extent. This is partly true; but since the events of the Prussian-Franco war of 1871, there never was so much use for the carrier-pigeon as there is now, whether for sport or useful employment. Everybody knows that it was only by having good carrier-pigeons in Paris that the news from the outside world was received in that city. In fact Paris was so closely besieged by the Prussian Army that it was impossible to send any news into the city, and if it had not been for the carrier-pigeons, which were sent out of the city by balloons, no news could have been received in Paris. The Prussians did all in their power to annihilate these birds, but without success.

The German Government, having seen the great advantages which could be derived in time of war from the carrier-pigeons, were not slow to profit by the occasion, and great quantities of birds were bought in Belgium for account of the German Government. A great columbary was established at Berlin, and the young birds raised there were distributed all over the fortified places of Germany. By these means an aerial telegraph is established now, and regular communication kept up. Russia, Italy, and France have also erected columbaries, and the Garden of Acclimatation at Paris has a Government pigeon-loft containing several hundred carrier-pigeons, the young ones of which have been sent to the several fortresses.

In regard to sport with the Antwerp carriers, this was never followed to such an extent as it is now, and particularly in Belgium, where from the highest class of people to the humblest workmen this sport is indulged in with the greatest enthusiasm. In fact, it is well known that in Belgium there are more carrier-pigeons than there are inhabitants, and that at least one out of every three male persons is a carrier-pigeon fancier. The breeding, training, and racing of the carriers is a national sport, and there is not a community, whether a city of 100,000 to 200,000 inhabitants or a village of 1,000, that has not its flying pigeon societies. The King, the Government, and the Common Council of the principal cities are giving annually premiums to the societies to be won by the pigeons at public competition.

A French paper also says: "The Department of War, in remembrance of the services rendered by the pigeon voyagers during the siege of Paris, has decreed it self-liable to encourage the sports of the flying of pigeons. Therefore it has ordered that 26 gold medals should be struck. The Common Council of Paris has also shown their sympathy for an undertaking which has rendered such eminent services to the city, and has voted the sum of 1,000 francs. The gold medals and the money to be distributed among the fanciers who won prizes from the Concourse of Vitry-le-Francais."

You say that the carrier-pigeon is larger than the ordinary pigeon, and that its plumage is generally dun or black. This is true in regard to the English show carrier; but, permit me to say, not so in regard to the Antwerp carriers, of which your article speaks. The regular color of the Antwerp carrier is plain blue, blue-checkered, silver or red-checkered. Duns and blacks are very scarce. In size they are not heavier than the common pigeon.

Here in the United States the sport of racing the Antwerp carriers has also taken a sudden development. Several flying societies have been established in the large cities, and some of my pigeons flew last Summer from New-Brunswick, Trenton, Philadelphia, Easton, Tobyhanna, Scranton, Tamaqua, Danville, and Lock Haven, Penn. The time used to fly a mile is, as you say, about a minute, or from 30 to 60 miles an hour, according to the condition of the atmosphere or the wind. From Scranton, which is 150 miles from New-York, one of my pigeons flew with clear weather and favorable wind, in 2 hours 27 minutes, and from Lock Haven, which is 240 miles, it took the same pigeon 7 hours, which was only at the rate of about 30 miles an hour. The wind in this last fly was not so favorable. This Summer we intend to fly our pigeons either from Pittsburg, Penn., or Baltimore, Md. JOHN VAN OPSTAL.

NEW-YORK, Saturday, Jan. 20, 1877.

HOW TO EARN A HOME.

AN ANECDOTE OF A REVEREND GENTLEMAN—THE STATEN ISLAND BUILDING ASSOCIATION RECOMMENDED.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In reading an editorial in THE SUNDAY TIMES of the 21st instant entitled "How to Earn a Home," my sentiments are akin to Rev. Thomas K. Beecher. An anecdote is related of him thus: In a company where the praises of his brother, Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, were on every lip, he compared himself to the following of a diminutive squaw whom he pictured in the following manner: At Niagara Falls were two squaws vending their trinkets, one following the other, the forward large and swarthy, the other diminutive in size; the one soliciting purchasers for her wares in a stentorian voice, the other, in a squeaking tone, crying, "Me too, me too." As a Director of the Staten Island Building, Loan, and Savings Association, after reading your article I, too, would cry, "Me too, me too," as Rev. Thomas K. Beecher felt, and as the diminutive squaw did. Your reference to the Artisans' Building Association of Philadelphia, and its success is true of hundreds of other building associations in Philadelphia and other cities. Your desire that they, or their workings, may be transferred and become institutions of New-York City, or its suburbs, is truly praiseworthy. And in your mention of Long Island, Westchester, and New-Jersey as suburbs where they could be advantageously instituted, you singularly forget that Staten Island is one of its suburbs. And as a new-gatherer from these suburbs you ought to know that one of these "Philadelphia institutions" is working admirably, and from the report for the first 11 months of its working, will compare favorably with the "artisans" of Philadelphia having made a gain of about 10½ per cent. on the capital paid in. Here is an opportunity for the homeless to procure homes on this beautiful north shore of Staten Island by taking stock in the Staten Island Building Association. We are within easy reach of New-York, and for salubrity will compare favorably with any of its suburbs, and for beauty of scenery it is not surpassed. I write this to show that we are not blind to the advantages of this great "economical movement." Our success has been a surprise to many of the business men of this community. The accumulation of such a fund as we already have, and by an association that a little more than a year ago was first explained to a public meeting of our citizens, is a wonder. But it is done in great part by working men, and wonderful, too, who monthly bring their little savings to pay their monthly dues. And, already, houses are the funds thus accumulated. And, already, its moral influence is being felt. I hope that others, from reading your editorial, may be enlightened and set at work the machinery, and may really find the way to earn a home. A DIRECTOR of the Staten Island Building, Loan and Savings Association,

WEST NEW BRIGHTON, STATEN ISLAND, Tuesday, Jan. 23 1877.

THE USURY LAW.

ITS PROPOSED REPEAL—STRONG ARGUMENT IN FAVOR OF THE BILL—HISTORY OF THE PRACTICAL REPEAL OF USURY.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Your Albany letter in to-day's TIMES, containing the petition of prominent New-York merchants and business men for the repeal of the Usury law, and giving the substance of a proposed bill for the regulation of interest on money, which bill was promptly introduced in the Assembly by Mr. Gowdin, gives hope that the time has now come when the repeal of this "relic of barbarism," attempted now for so many years past, may be realized.

The strongest argument for its repeal, and an entirely new one in the discussion, is this, that the laws of this State now accord to banks, national and State, the special privilege of loaning money without fear of the penalties of usury. To them there is no longer forfeiture of principal or the penalties of a misdemeanor. And it may be very properly asked, shall there be two laws in the State on this subject, one for banks, the great money-lending corporations, and one for individuals? Shall there be discrimination in our statute books in favor of these corporations over the individual citizen? Is there any reason, or sense, or justice in such a discrimination?

It is a well-known maxim in civilized countries that all men are equal before the law. How, then, can the same privileges and exemptions be withheld longer from the individual which are now given to the banking associations, without violation of an elemental principle of civilized government, and making and perpetuating odious class legislation? Such, then, is the ground of the belief that the present Legislature will remove from our statutes the Usury law. Our legislators cannot longer delay action for its repeal without violation of their duty to a higher law than their own enactments. The Constitution guarantees to every citizen this elemental principle of civilized government, equality with every other citizen. (Cons. 1846, Art. 1, Sec. 1.)

The history of the practical repeal of usury as to State banks is very interesting by reason of the indirect and unexpected manner in which it was accomplished. Upon a writ of error from the Court of Appeals of this State in the case of the Farmers' and Mechanics' National Bank of Buffalo against Dearing, the United States Supreme Court has quite recently rendered an important and interesting decision. And from its results it is not of interest to national banks alone. The thirtieth section of the National Bank act of 1864 (U. S. Rev. Statu., Sec. 5,198,) establishes certain penalties for usury. It was determined in the case above named that the penalties thus declared were the only ones for usury to which national banks were subject, and that the States could exercise no control over them, and could not impose upon them any other penalties. This overruled the decision of our Court of Appeals, which it had made in the case of the First National Bank of Whitehall against Lamb, (50 N. Y., 95.)

The penalty for usury fixed by the National Bank act extends only to a forfeiture of the interest, if unpaid, or the recovery of double the interest if paid, in an action to recover the same, if brought within two years. This practically removes all penalty and fear of loss in the case of national banks. But, in the language of the American Law Review, it still shows how far our legislation is behind the age, and even behind our institutions, that any such antiquated and foolish restraint on the freedom of contract should still be imposed by the laws of the United States.

Now, in the case of State banks, the above named decision is of the same interest and importance, and works out the same result, so that only the light penalty above described in the case of national banks for usury, rests on them. For, in 1870 the Legislature of this State passed an act to place the banking associations organized under the laws of this State, on an equality with the national banks organized under the act of Congress. (Chap. 163, Laws 1870.)

This act has recently received interpretation in the Court of Appeals in the case of The Farmers' Bank of Fayetteville against Hale (59 N. Y., page 53,) wherein it is decided "that the statute of 1870 (chap. 163) was enacted with a view to put banking associations of the State on the same footing as to the national banks doing business within the State in the matter of discounts, and the rate of interest or discount they might by law receive, and the penalty for exacting or reserving usurious interest."

Thus, fortuitously almost, it would seem, first by an act of Congress; second, by a decision of the Supreme Court; third, by an act of the Legislature to put State banks on the same footing with national; and fourth, by a decision of the Court of Appeals upon such act, the position is assured and established in law to State banks as well as to national, that they may take in this State any interest above seven per cent., and risk only the forfeiture of the interest, if not paid, and double the interest, if paid, provided it be sued for it within two years. It is also among the curiosities of this result so reached, that that portion of the State lying out of the great cities, and which has always opposed the repeal of the Usury law, should have unwittingly brought about this result to State banks, by contributing the two Farmers' Bank cases above cited.

DAVID JUDSON NEWLAND.

NEW-YORK, Thursday, Jan. 25, 1877.

MISTAKEN PHILOLOGY.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Your argument on the derivation of the New-England phrase "I swan," is ingenious, but your conclusion is incorrect. The original form of the oath was, "I swear unto man." This has been changed on the Carroll principle into "I swan to man," a phrase often heard in New-England at the present day, but frequently abbreviated to "I swan." "Gosh" and "golly" are not, as you suppose, of Chinese origin, but are easily traceable to Anglo-Saxon profanity. The writer is not a philologist, but a New-Englander, who dislikes to see the public erroneously informed in regard to his native tongue. You will please make the correction. S. O.

NEW-YORK, Wednesday, Jan. 24, 1877.

"CROWDED TO DEATH."

Some writer in the Virginia City (Nev.) Enterprise tells the following story: "He was a middle-aged man when in 1838 he settled near where Portland, Oregon, now is. He had tried civilization and was wearied with it. He had sold his little property in the East, and with a few horses, cows, and dogs had threaded the dangerous way from the Missouri River to Oregon, and there, under the shadow of the Cascades, and beside the beautiful Willamette, paused at last and said to himself, 'I shall have no more trouble; I can stay here with my dogs, my rifle, and my own soul for company, and none will molest me.' For a while he was entirely happy, but at length one stranger after another made his appearance, and one morning the man who had journeyed so far to be alone woke up to find that a town was being laid out near his cabin. He called his dogs, and, remembering a beautiful spot that he passed over on his journey West, he retraced his steps, threaded the mighty cañon of the Columbia, and built another cabin where The Dalles now is. Here he felt secure. The disturbers who broke up his home on the Willamette had reached him from the sea. He said now to himself: 'I will be ten years and years before they find me here.' For a good many years he enjoyed his dream. Game was plenty, the scenery was glorious, the soil was rich, and the man, now grown old, was happy. But one morning as he sat in his hut a strange sound broke the stillness, and looking out of the door he saw on the river a steam-boat was puffing against the current, and in a few days another-town was in course of construction around him. Again he moved, and this time did not pause until he reached the Umpeua country. This was an utter wilderness, and he told his dogs that at last they were safe. He built another cabin and settled down for life. For a year or two he was undisturbed, but one day some strange men, with strange instruments, crossed his ground, stopping every few rods looking through their instruments and taking notes. He disturbed the old man a little, but at last he said they were but Government surveyors—he should see them no more for years. But before many weeks a gang of workmen came right across his favorite field; they threw up an evenly-graded road, and within a fortnight a locomotive came screaming by. Then the old man gave up. His dogs, too, seemed to understand that there was no more use in trying. One after the other died, the game was driven away, and one morning as the cabin-door of the old man was pushed open he was found dead, and on the smoky wall, written with charcoal, was found this sentence: 'They crowded me to death.' This coast is full of these men. They tried at first the fiery competitions of business and failed, and then, turning to nature as their only friend, tried to hide from mankind. We presume that all new lands are full of such histories of gentle, kindly lives, which, wearying of and chafing at the strictures of civilized life, at last stole away to live alone for a little while and then go to sleep."

TRICHINÆ IN NEW-HAVEN.

The New-Haven Journal of Wednesday says: "About a week ago the family of Gustave J. Hardee, at No. 17 George street, found themselves suffering from illness. They had sickness at the stomach, dizziness, and other distressing symptoms, and called in Dr. Bailokaidt, who came to the opinion that the trouble was caused by trichinæ in some ham, of which all had partaken in an uncooked state a day or two previously. In a piece of the ham no larger than would lie on the point of a penknife the Doctor, aided by his microscope, found eight of these parasites. Dr. Ruickoldt says that unless the trichinæ are expelled from the stomach and bowels within five days it is almost impossible to eradicate them from the system. There is no danger from eating ham if it is properly cooked."

SITUATIONS WANTED.

FEMALES.

THE UP-TOWN OFFICE OF THE TIMES.

The up-town office of THE TIMES is located at No. 1,257 Broadway, bet. 31st and 32d sts. Open daily, Sundays included, from 4 A. M. to 9 P. M. Subscriptions received, and copies of THE TIMES for sale.

ADVERTISEMENTS RECEIVED UNTIL 9 P. M.

COMPANION.—BY A YOUNG LADY, AN ORPHAN, aged 20, to go to San Francisco as lady's companion; a home more desirable than wages; can furnish best testimonials. Call on or address for one week Dunlap, No. 523 West 46th st.

COMPANION.—BY A YOUNG FRENCH LADY OF experience and ability, speaks three languages, as companion or governess with a family who intend to travel; references. Address A. C., Box No. 287 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

CHAR-WOMAN.—BY A RESPECTABLE YOUNG colored woman to go out by the day to wash, iron, and do house-cleaning; good reference. Call at No. 106 West 27th st.

COOK, &c.—BY A FIRST-CLASS FRENCH WOMan as cook in a private family, with her husband as first-class butler; good City references. Address M. T., No. 102 West 24th st.

COOK—LAUNDRESS.—BY TWO RESPECTABLE girls; one as cook and the other as laundress; both highly recommended. Can be seen at present employer's, No. 39 West 54th st.

COOK AND LAUNDRESS.—BY AN ENGLISH Protestant woman; first-class cook and excellent washer and ironer; best references. Call for R. S., No. 221 East 21st st., first floor.

COOK.—BY A FIRST-CLASS FAMILY COOK WITH good City reference; either City or country. Address Cook, Box No. 308 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

DRESS-MAKER.—BY AN ENGLISH WOMAN; perfect cutter of family clothing; works all maddest; $1 per day; 15 years' reference. Address K. Box No. 274 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

DRESS-MAKER.—BY A FIRST-CLASS DRESSmaker to go out by the day, $1 50, or $7 a week. Call at No. 87 4th av., in the store.

DRESS-MAKER.—MISS BARBER WILL MAKE dresses in the latest style reasonably, at home or otherwise. Call at No. 745 6th av.

GOVERNESS AND HOUSEKEEPING.—BY an American woman to take care of and instruct young children, assist in housekeeping, &c.; undoubted reference as to character and capacity; wages no object; country town preferred. Address B. W., Box No. 149 Times Office.

HOUSEKEEPER.—BY A YOUNG WIDOW OF culture, being a thorough housekeeper, desires a position as such, or anything not menial; can teach children; country preferred; highest references; wages no object. Address L. M., Box No. 266 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

NURSERY GOVERNESS, &c.—BY A LADY as nursery governess or housekeeper; teaches English, French, music; is a good housekeeper and manager; understands all kinds of dress-making and family sewing; any one requiring a reliable, luvaluable person in their family, with the very best references, address Housekeeper, Box No. 175 Times Office.

NURSE.—BY AN EXPERIENCED AMERICAN PERson as nurse and seamstress; understands taking care of an infant; is a good operator. Address Experience, Box No. 285 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

NURSE.—BY A HIGHLY-RECOMMENDED PROTestant infant's nurse and good seamstress, with City reference. Address Nurse, Box No. 307 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

SEAMSTRESS.—BY A GOOD FAMILY SEAMstress, either by week or month; operates on Wheeler & Wilson's machine; good City reference. Call or address Seamstress, No. 102 West 18th st.

OPERATOR.—BY A COMPETENT OPERATOR ON Wheeler & Wilson machine, a few engagements to go out by the day. Address R. T., Box No. 253 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

WASHING.—BY A FIRST-CLASS LAUNDRESS TO go out by the day; understands all kinds of plain fishing, fluting, and fineries; best City reference. Address A. D., Box No. 287 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

WASHING.—I SHOULD BE GLAD TO RECOMmend a deserving woman who is anxious to secure the washing for a family or a few gentlemen; her work will speak for itself. St. John, Post Office Box No. 3,035.

WASHING.—BY A RESPECTABLE COLORED woman; families and gentlemen's washing by the week or month; 50 cents to $1 per dozen. Call at No. 118 West 26th st.

WASHING.—BY A PROTESTANT WIDOW, GENtlemen's or families' washing, or would go out by the day. Address No. 342 West 39th st., Room No. 6.

WASHING.—A FEW FAMILIES OR GENTLEmen's washing by a competent person; terms moderate. Mrs. Carpenter, No. 138 West 29th st.

WASHING.—BY A COLORED WOMAN, FAMILY washing. Address L. Johnson, No. 217 West 35th st., rear.

WASHING.—A LAUNDRESS WISHES WORK BY the day, week, or month. Call at 137 West 33d st.

CLERKS AND SALESMEN.

WANTED.—BY A YOUNG LADY, A POSITION AS cashier, assistant bookkeeper, or saleswoman in any respectable business; is accustomed with the bakery, confectionery, and restaurant business; reference first-class. Call or address No. 342 West 32d st.

MALES.

A YOUNG MAN WITH A SMALL CAPITAL to invest in my Anti-bilious Calisthenical Bitters. Apply to Dr. MATTHIAS SHOUTER, at "Our Boarding-house." No. 930 Broadway, Monday, between 7 and 8 o'clock.

BUTLER.—BY A RESPECTABLE SWISS MAN AS Butler; thoroughly understands his business; has excellent City reference. Call at No. 14 West 38th st.

CASHIER, &c.—A YOUNG GERMAN GENTLEman, of fifteen years position in some mercantile business or hotel, as cashier, assistant book-keeper, or night clerk, at a moderate salary. Address for three days J. A. WINTER, No. 52 West 4th st.

CASHIER, &c.—WANTED—POSITION OF CASHier, book-keeper, or assistant; best of recommendations and guaranty. Address P. M. S., Box No. 303 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

CARPENTER, &c.—BY A FRENCHMAN, SPEAKing a little English, formerly employed at St. Marcotte & Co.'s, Union square, over six years as finisher, with first-class references, in a private family, hotel, or factory, as carpenter and cabinet-maker, to do all repairings and make himself useful. Address Leon Gordon, No. 28 West 4th st.

COACHMAN.—BY A THOROUGHLY COMPETENT single young man of long experience and capability; can be highly recommended by his last employer. Address J. D., Box No. 289 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

COACHMAN AND GROOM.—BY A MARRIED man; experienced, capable, and trust worthy; willing to make himself generally useful; City reference. Call or address Coachman, No. 441 West 45th st., for three days.

COACHMAN.—BY A YOUNG COLORED MAN AS Coachman; is a good horseman and driver; can give good reference from last employers. Call at No. 149 East 35th st.

COACHMAN.—BY A SINGLE YOUNG MAN; THOROughly understands his business; willing and obliging; good reference. Call or address C. P., No. 153 West 31st st.

COACHMAN.—BY A YOUNG COLORED MAN; married; good reference. Address J. P., Box No. 288 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, 1,257 BROADWAY.

GARDENER.—BY A FIRST-CLASS MAN OF LONG and practical experience; understands fruits, flowers, greenhouses, and graperies; thoroughly competent to take charge of a first-class place; best City reference. Address Gardener and Florist, Dinsmore's real estate office, 136th st., Mott Haven.

GARDENER.—BY A COMPETENT MARRIED man; understands care of greenhouses, graperies, and the management of a gentleman's place; best of references. Address Gardener, Post-office Box No. 198, Stapleton, Staten Island.

VALET.—BY A YOUNG FRENCHMAN AS SERvant to a gentleman or second waiter in a private family; speaks a little English; good City reference. Call for two days at No. 361 West 23d st.

WANTED—BY AN ENERGETIC YOUNG MAN IN some wholesale house; is a fair penman, and has some knowledge of book-keeping; used to collecting; has finish like highest testimonials. Address E. S. W., Station C, New-York Post Office.

WAITER AND BUTLER.—BY A SINGLE COLored man in a private family or boarding-house; City reference last family. Address Wallace, Box No. 277 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, 1,257 BROADWAY.

WAITER.—BY A COMPETENT COLORED MAN to take charge of dining-room of any kind; reference. Call or address No. 114 West 26th st., in saloon.

WAITER.—BY A FIRST-CLASS ENGLISHMAN IN a private family or hotel. Call on G. F., No. 315 East 37th st.

WAITER.—BY A FIRST-CLASS WAITER; SIX years' City references. Address L. D., No. 107 Clinton place.

DWELLINGS TO LET.

FURNISHED AND UNFURNISHED HOUSES TO LET OR FOR SALE.—Am now revising February list. Owners please call and leave particulars, with NELSON LUCKEY, 23d st., corner 4th av., Young Men's Christian Association Building.

CORNER FLAT.—FIRST FLOOR; ALL LIGHT Rooms; every improvement; private street entrance; first-class neighborhood; possession immediately. YATES, No. 388 6th av., corner 50th st.

FIRST-CLASS ACCOMMODATION FOR couples and single persons at "Our Boarding-house," No. 930 Broadway; terms moderate, according to location.

TO LET—FOUR-STORY HIGH-STOOP 25-FOOT-front brick-house, No. 338 West 20th st. Apply to S. LORD, No. 111 8th av.

HANDSOMELY FURNISHED CHOICE FLAT, $100 a month. DERING & COMPANY, Broadway, corner 51st st.

TO LET—BUILDING NO. 116 WARREN ST. APPLY to JOHN B. HILLYER, owner, No. 13 New st.

DRY GOODS.

James McCreery & Co.,

Broadway and 11th st.

IMPORTANT TO HOUSEKEEPERS.

WE WILL OFFER ON MONDAY, JAN. 29, AND DURING THE WEEK, A FULL LINE OF

SPECIAL BARGAINS IN HOUSEKEEPING LINENS, including 300 dozen HUCKABACK TOWELS, 40 inches long, at $2 25; worth $3.

250 dozen ¾ and ⅞ Napkins at $2; worth $3.

ALSO, TABLE LINEN, SHEETING, AND PILLOW LINEN at equally low prices.

DOMESTIC SHEETINGS AND SHIRTINGS AT LESS THAN MANUFACTURERS' RATES.

WE SOLICIT THE ATTENTION OF THE PUBLIC TO THESE BARGAINS.

KEEP'S PATENT partly made DRESS SHIRTS; the very best; six for $6; can be finished as easily as hemming a handkerchief. No. 571 Broadway.

R. H. MACY & CO.

BLACK DRESS SILKS

A SPECIALTY.

UNLIKE any other establishment in the country.

FOREIGN DRY GOODS, FANCY GOODS, and NOVELTIES by every EUROPEAN STEAMER.

ORDERS BY MAIL RECEIVE SPECIAL CARE.

CATALOGUES FREE.

14TH ST. AND 6TH AVENUE, N. Y.

KEEP'S SHIRTS, 571 BROADWAY, very best quality; very lowest prices. Send your address and get samples free. Half the usual cost saved.

CITY REAL ESTATE.

THE UP-TOWN OFFICE OF THE TIMES.

The up-town office of THE TIMES is located at No. 1,257 Broadway, bet. 31st and 32d sts. Open daily, Sundays included, from 4 A. M. to 9 P. M. Subscriptions received, and copies of THE TIMES for sale.

ADVERTISEMENTS RECEIVED UNTIL 9 P. M.

OFFICE OF JOSIAH JEX, NO. 1,235 BROADWAY.

Real Estate in all its branches, including loans on bond and mortgage, and the collection of rents will be assumed if of a desirable character. All parties wishing to sell, purchase, or hire will have their business promptly attended to by a thoroughly responsible and experienced agent, and if both purchasers and sellers will let their wants be known to Mr. JEX their confidence and interests in his hands will not be misplaced. Houses and lots, flats and stores, of all sizes and locations, which are for sale or to let, will be received at this office.

FOR SALE—AN OLD-STYLE HOUSE IN 36TH st., between 5th and 6th avs.; has been put in complete order and has Mansard roof.

ALSO,

In 19th st., near 5th av., a full-width three-story house, with furniture complete.

ALSO,

On Madison av., west side, near 84th st., a full-size four-story house.

The above are among the cheapest and most desirable now offered for sale. Apply to

E. H. LUDLOW & CO., No. 3 Pine st.

A PROFITABLE INVESTMENT.—$8,000 cash, $17,000 permanent institution, mortgage to prompt buyer, for 33½ acres, (over 400 City lots,) fine land; residence, stable, &c., on boundary between cities of New-York and Yonkers; forty minutes to City Hall by Rapid Transit; magnificent views, Palisades and Sound, and fronting Boulevard; only $550 an acre; adjoining selling for $4,000. Address GREAT OPPORTUNITY, Box No. 149 Times Office.

FORTY-EIGHTH STREET, SOUTH SIDE, just west of 5th av. For sale—A beautiful four-story house, Philadelphia brick front, 25 by 50 feet, with dining-room extension, dumb-waiter, back stairs; lot 100.5, Columbia College ground; rent $350. Further particulars of E. H. LUDLOW & CO., No. 3 Pine st.

THE NEW, BEAUTIFUL HOUSES, NOS. 345, 555, and 561 Madison av., 20 to 32 feet front, $30,000 to $38,000; also fine new houses, No. 22 West 40th st., No. 103 West 57th st., No. 39 West 58th st., at low prices. W. P. SEYMOUR, No. 171 Broadway.

FOR SALE—WEST 45TH ST., NEAR 5TH AV.—four-story brown-stone house; price, $25,000; $15,000 can remain on bond and mortgage if desired; inquire of owner, No. 148 East 34th st., or HOMER MORGAN, No. 2 Pine st.

ELEGANT HOUSES, WITH OR WITHOUT extensions, for sale, on 39th, 45th, 48th, 51st, 52d, 53d, 55th, 57th, and 58th sts., close to 5th av.; bargains. Apply to ISAAC HONIG, No. 111 Broadway, rooms G and H., basement.

AN ELEGANT HOUSE FOR SALE VERY low; 21-ft. st., near Trinity Chapel; 27 feet wide, very deep; butler's pantry, and well arranged. GODEN & CLARK, Broadway, corner 17th st.

FOR SALE.—HANDSOME, MEDIUM-SIZED HOUSE, on 5th av., Murray Hill; price, $55,000. Address LENOX, Box No. 252 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

A FOUR-STORY HOUSE WITH BROWNstone trimmings and lot, genteelly located, for sale cheap. Address OWNER, No. 144 East 33d st.

NO. 54 KING ST.—FOR SALE—THREE-STORY brick house with 12 rooms, and with modern improvements. Apply between 7 and 10 P. M.

COUNTRY REAL ESTATE.

ORANGE, N. J.—COUNTRY HOUSES, LANDS, and village lots for sale; a great variety. Also, furnished and unfurnished houses to let for season or year, by WALTER E. SMITH, formerly Blackwell & Smith, Orange, corner of Main and Cross sts.

WANTED—TO BUY OR HIRE ON THE HUDSON, forty to sixty miles from New-York, house and about ten acres, at moderate cost. Address E. H. VANINGEN, No. 490

THE HOUSEHOLD.

FEATURES OF THE MARKETS.

Good bargains are not now easily obtained in the meat departments of the markets. Beef and pork—fresh, salted, or smoked—are selling at about the same rates as they were last week, but really choice cuts of mutton, lamb, and veal are a little higher. Poultry is cheaper than the best qualities of meat. The supply is excessive and dealers are glad to get rid of it. Game is abundant and sells at low rates. People with moderate incomes can indulge themselves freely with a diet of quail, grouse, and partridge. Wild pigeons are also to be found, and are inexpensive. Venison is just now very cheap, but lovers of that kind of game will be deprived of their luxury in a few days, as the game laws go into effect on Feb. 1, and prohibit the sale of it after that date. Choice apples are a little dearer, and cranberries are selling at the same prices. Catawba grapes are becoming scarcer, but are not very dear. Pears of good quality are arriving from California, and considering the fact that the fruit is out of season in this locality, prices are reasonable. Vegetables of every description, excepting tomatoes, mushrooms, and cucumbers—grown in hot-house—and Irish potatoes are low-priced. Butter of good quality is not dear, and choice qualities of cheese are high-priced. The supply of eggs is more than sufficient to meet the general demand, and prices for them have a tendency to decline.

RECEIPTS FOR THE TABLE.

BILL OF FARE FOR SIX PERSONS—COST $2 50 TO $3.

Soup.—Rice à la condé.
Fish.—Coteletes of base—Potato croquettes.
Entrée.—Escalloppes of beef an fines herbes—purée of spinach.
Roast.—Prairie fowls, with currant jelly—salad à la romaine—peaches à la savarin.

Rice Soup.—Reduce two quarts of good broth to one and one-half pints, with a bunch parsley, one bade mace and two shallots, then strain; add one-half cupful of blanched rice; as soon as the rice is tender add to the soup two cupfuls of white beans that have been steeped in water one and one-half hours and then cooked in broth, care being exercised that while they are tender yet they are not broken. When after simmering a few minutes ascertain if the seasoning is correct; add a glassful of madeira and serve.

Cotelettes of Base.—Nicely clean a base about three pounds weight, cut it right through the body into slices half an inch thick, remove skin, and lay the slices in a deep dish, with a gill of oil, the juice of one lemon, little chopped parsley, white pepper, and salt. When about to cook remove, and well saturate as many pieces of paper as there are pieces of fish; then wrap the fish in the paper and boil over a clear fire fifteen minutes. Dish them up on a folded napkin, and serve potato croquettes separately in a dish. Potato Croquettes.—Peel, boil, and mash two pounds of potatoes, with two ounces of butter, the yolks of two eggs, cayenne white pepper and salt, and just a grate of nutmeg. While yet hot form into the shape of pears, roll in bread-crumbs, then into one egg with half a cupful milk, two tablespoonfuls chopped parsley, then into bread-crumbs again; fry in plenty of lard or beef dripplugs of a fine brown color; insert a bit of parsley in the small end to imitate the stem of a pear.

Escalloppes of Beef with fine Herbs.—Cut very small one onion, one shallot, three or four large sprigs of parsley and thyme; fry light brown in two ounces of butter, then add one ounce flour; stir a moment, then add one pint of good beef gravy, white pepper, salt, a tablespoonful chopped capers, and four large mushrooms, if at hand; boil a few minutes, then add some slices of cold roast beef; permit the sauce to simmer only, until the slices of beef are very hot, when remove from the fire. Dish them up in close circular order, alternately with heart-shaped croute, fried in butter; pour over the sauce and send to table.

Purée of Spinach.—Pick and wash in several waters one quart spinach, put it on the fire in three quarts boiling water, containing two tablespoonfuls salt and as much bicarbonate of soda as will stand on a three-cent silverpiece; boil very rapidly for four minutes; when free it of water, chop it very finely, and rub it through the colander; return it to the fire with two ounces butter, white pepper, and salt, if needed, and one gill of any sort of white sauce; when thoroughly hot dish it in pyramid; stick round the base a border of triangular croutes, and serve.

Prairie Fowls.—Carefully divest two prairie fowls of their feathers that the skin does not get broken, singe and draw them gently, wipe them inside and outside with a warm wet cloth, set them to roast before a hot clear fire, wrapped in well buttered papers, for 30 minutes; then remove, take off the paper; baste very well with the drippings; dredge over them a little flour and salt; baste again, and when of a fine brown take them up and dish on two large, square pieces of bread, fried in butter; pour the contents of the roast-pan in a stew-pan, and wash it out with a little broth; add it also to the stew-pan, with half pint of consommé; set it by the side of the fire a few minutes to clarify itself by throwing up the grease, which must be carefully cleaned off; then add to the sauce two glasses of white wine, the juice of a Seville orange; strain, pour a little in the bottom of the dish; send the rest to table in a tureen.

Salade à la Romaine.—Freshen two heads of lettuce in plenty of cold water. When about to serve mix in a bowl three tablespoonfuls of oil, one of lemon juice, one-third of a small onion grated, pinch of cayenne, white pepper and salt to taste, and a small pinch of powdered sugar; break the lettuces into the bowl; well mix, turn into the salatière, garnish with hard-boiled eggs, and serve.

Peaches à la Savarin.—Beat to a white cream six ounces butter and six ounces of sifted sugar; then add three whole eggs, one at a time, beating a few minutes between each; then add 10 ounces of sifted flour, a glass of brandy, and a level teaspoonful of powdered cinnamon. Bake this mixture in a plain oval mold; turn out when ready, inverted on its dish and pile over its top canned peaches made hot. Pour over the whole about half the syrup contained in the can, and send the rest to table in a bowl.

BREAKFAST OR LUNCH DISH.—An excellent way of using up the odds and ends of steaks, roasts, chops, or any bits of cold meat, is to cut the meat from the bone, omitting the gristle and fat if desired. Chop as fine as if for mince-meat; place in pan; cover with water, adding irequently if it dries; let it simmer or gently boil for two hours; season with salt and pepper; toast to a delicate brown any bread you may have, stale or fresh, and when spread in single layers over your meat tray, pour meat and gravy over the toast, not wetting it, and lay down the plate and dish with the prepared meat and apple three-quarters of an inch in thickness; cut a strip an inch wide from the under crust and lay round the edge before covering, for the upper crust; cut from the roll of paste enough to cover the pie a quarter of an inch in thickness; put a handful of flour on your board, and lay down the paste; then more flour on the rolled meat and apple until feathers in the crust, fold together in the middle, and lay upon the pie; fold one-half back and lightly press down the edge, but make no finger-marks. This will make a handsome and delicious mince-pie when baked, for half or three-quarters of an hour in a hot oven. Never put pastry in a moderate oven. Do not pare the upper crust from the top, but hold the plate in the hand and cut from the under side.—NEW-ENGLAND HOUSEKEEPER.

INDIAN LOAF CAKE.—One pound of Indian meal, one-fourth pound of butter, three eggs, half a pound of sugar, quarter pound each of raisins and currants; cut up the butter in the meal, pour over it as much boiling milk as will make a stiff batter, beat the eggs very light, and when the batter cools work them into it; add the sugar, dredge the fruit with flour and stir into the batter; bake in a moderate oven two hours.

SPICE CAKES.—One cupful butter or mixed lard and butter, two cupfuls sugar, one cupful milk or water, three cupfuls flour, two eggs, two teaspoonfuls cream tartar, one of soda, one teaspoonful cloves, one of cinnamon, raisins if wished; bake slowly.—AMANDA C.

POUND CAKE.—One cupful butter, one cupful sugar, one cupful prepared flour, four eggs beaten separately, and a little nutmeg.—AMANDA C.

CORN CAKES.—One pint half of flour and half of yellow meal, one teaspoonful lard, salt, five teaspoonfuls of royal baking powder, one and one-half cupfuls milk; mix soft, and bake one-half hour. These are splendid.—SALLY.

GRAHAM BREAD.—Two cupfuls sweet milk, two teaspoonfuls cream tartar, one teaspoonful soda, two tablespoonfuls molasses; stir this hard with unsifted Graham flour. (No yeast used.)—E. W. B.

FRENCH PAN-CAKES.—Eight ounces of flour, and one ounce of melted butter, two eggs, one teaspoonful pulverized sugar, pinch of salt, grated rind of one lemon, enough milk to form a batter; fry and sprinkle sugar and jelly on and roll up.—SALLY.

MUFFINS.—One pint of milk, sufficient flour to make a stiff batter, a little salt; raised over night with compressed yeast. Bake in rings dipped in melted butter.—AUNT ADDIE.

RUSK.—Mix a sponge at night with one quart of flour, half a cupful butter, one cupful sugar, four eggs, half a pint of warmed milk, and a quarter of a cake of compressed yeast dissolved in a little warm water. In the morning knead it with flour but not too stiff; keep it warm till about 3 o'clock in the afternoon, when make it into cakes for baking, and let it rise again till tea time. They do not require a very hot oven, and bake in about 20 minutes.—AMANDA C.

HARD GINGERBREAD OR RAILROADS.—Half pint molasses, half pint sugar, one cupful butter or shortening, one egg, two tablespoonfuls ginger; one teaspoonful soda; add flour slowly, enough to roll; roll thin; cut in stripes; mash with small roller.—GILMANTON.

GINGER SNAPS.—One pint of molasses, three-fourths of a cupful butter, one-half cupful water, one teaspoonful soda, five teaspoonfuls ginger, flour to make it stiff enough to roll out.—SIBYL.

JUMBLES.—One cupful butter, two of sugar, one of milk, six of flour, five eggs, half a nutmeg, one teaspoonful of soda; roll them out, cut with a tumbler or wine-glass to form a ring, brush them over with the white of an egg, and sift sugar on before baking.

HOME-MADE YEAST.—Put in one quart of boiling water one very large handful of hops; boil until the liquid is very strong; have in a dish one pint of flour, five large spoonfuls of brown sugar, and three spoonfuls of salt; strain the water from the hops and stir boiling into the flour; if very thin add flour enough to make a stiff batter; when at blood heat stir into it a cake of compressed yeast dissolved in a little water; set in a warm place to rise; put into the jar or bottle you intend keeping your yeast in three raisins and a lump of soda the size of a hazel-nut; keep in a cool place.—AUNT ADDIE.

TAPIOCA PUDDING.—Four tablespoonfuls tapioca soaked all night in one quart of milk; stir it over the fire until it boils; add a little salt, and when cool add the grated rind of one lemon, and a tumblerful of cream, which can be made by using half a tumblerful condensed milk filled up with water; half a tumblerful of water will do; place to be filled up with sugar; four eggs beaten separately and added just before baking. Bake five minutes in a hot oven, and eat it cold.—AMANDA C.

A CHEAP PUDDING.—One cupful sugar, one tablespoonful melted butter, one egg, one cupful milk, one pint of flour, one teaspoonful of baking-powder; bake in a square tin, like cake, and eat hot, with liquid sance.—AMANDA C.

COLLEGE PUDDING.—Half-pound of bread crumbs, quarter of a pound of beef suet, quarter of a pound of raisins, two ounces of citron, half nutmeg, half of one lemon rind cut thin, two eggs, quarter of a pint of milk, quarter of pound of sugar; one and one-half hours to steam in a well buttered tin mold; serve with sauce.—SALLY.

ORANGE PUDDING.—Stew six large apples and rub through a sieve; rub together one-quarter pound butter and one-half pound sugar; stir in the apple while hot; after taking the skin and white pith from two large oranges, chop very fine and add to the other ingredients; beat the yolks of six eggs (four will do) very light and add; reserve the whites for meringue. Bake in a rich puff paste; flavor the meringue with orange juice and a little of the yellow rind grated.—AUNT ADDIE.

ORANGE CAKE.—Two cupfuls flour, two cupfuls sugar, half a cupful boiling water, a little salt, one teaspoonful cream tartar, half a teaspoonful soda, yolks of five eggs and whites of four beaten separately, grated rind and juice of one orange; bake as jelly cake and spread between a frosting made of the whites of five eggs stiffened with powdered sugar; rind grated and juice of one orange; if the orange is very large do not add all the juice, as it makes the frosting too thin; do not put any on the top of the cake.—AMANDA C.

ORANGE SAUCE.—Quarter of a pound of sugar, half a pint of water, juice of one large orange, and rind cut thin; boil five minutes, strain; add one glass wine.

APPLE SNOW.—Pare and core six good-sized apples or quinces, steam them in two tablespoonfuls of water, with a little lemon-peel if apples are used, and orange-peel for quinces; add one-fourth pound of white sugar and the white of one fresh egg; beat for three-quarters of an hour without stopping; serve in custard glasses, heaped up.

SYRUP OUT OF SUGAR.—Take seven pounds of good brown sugar and seven pints of water; let it boil two or three hours; when done it should be about the thickness and color of maple sugar.—GILMANTON.

A HINT ABOUT PIES.—If "Good Housekeeper" will wet the bottom crust of her pie where the top crust comes in contact with it, she will have no trouble about the juice running out.—OLD HOUSEKEEPER.

LIQUID PUDDING SAUCE.—For every teacupful of white sugar add one egg; beat the egg well, and stir in the sugar; add flavoring; just before serving pour on four tablespoonfuls of boiling milk, and beat all together thoroughly.—GILMANTON.

USEFUL FAMILY HINTS.

BLACK DYE FOR WOOL.—Extract of logwood, 1½ ounce; blue vitriol one ounce, copperas one ounce, to each pound of goods; add the blue vitriol and the copperas to sufficient water to cover the goods; and boil the cloth or yarn half an hour; then add the extract of logwood, and boil one hour more, with frequent airing. Then put in a strong solution of salt, made boiling hot, and let it remain 15 minutes; then rinse thoroughly in clear water. The copperas alone will set logwood dye.—PALMYRA.

TO CLEANSE COLORED HANDKERCHIEFS.—If Sibyl's handkerchiefs are made of silk, she can make a good suds of warm water and rub them between the hands, but not wring them, but change the water until clear. Then hold up by two corners until drained a little, and roll up separately in a cloth to squeeze out the remaining dampness, and iron them at once; put but one in the water at a time. Hot water turns white silk yellow.

HANDKERCHIEFS WITH COLORED BORDERS.—To wash such articles put in a pail of water one teaspoonful of sugar of lead or one teaspoonful of spirits of turpentine; let them soak in this solution one-quarter of an hour before washing.—AUNT ADDIE.

TO POLISH BRASS, I.—Let Sibyl rub her brass knobs with oxalic acid and polish with silicon silver powder. Put one ounce oxalic acid in a bottle and cover with cold water: shake before using.

TO POLISH BRASS. II.—Oil of vitriol, one ounce; sweet-oil, one-half gill; pulverized rottenstone, one gill; rain water, one and one-half pints. Mix and shake when used. Apply with a rag, and polish with old woolen.—TROTWOOD.

MUSTARD PLASTER.—Take a tablespoonful molasses, sugar or less as desired; stir thick with mustard, and having spread it on a cloth, apply it directly to the skin; it will not blister even if kept on for an hour.—PAULINE.

SICK-ROOM SUGGESTION.—Frozen beef tea will be often taken by invalids, when they could not be induced to take it if warm.—JEWEL.

CURE FOR CHILBLAINS.—Soak the feet in strong alum water as hot as can be borne.—MARIAN.

TO DRIVE OFF RATS.—Place a quantity of red pepper in cotton and stuff the wad into the holes also, exchange your cat for a better one.—M. S. E.

INFORMATION WANTED.

A bill of fare that will come within the means of a person whose income is $600 a year above rent and clothing, for a family of nine persons.

The best way to boil white potatoes so that they will be dry and mealy.

"Pauline" asks how to make light biscuit, to be mixed with snow.

The full particulars for making rye bread.

How "Aunt Addie" makes a perfect cup of coffee in the English fashion, without filters or other Frenchified fixings.

How to make red cocoa-nut cake.

Whether or not pudding is sometimes made in England to keep from Christmas to Christmas, and if it is not considered better for the keeping.

How to cook brains plainly, other than by frying.

How to make sweet breads.

How to burn sugar to color fancy jellies.

How to make cream candy.

How to make orange marmalade, the full particulars, how long to boil, &c.

How to prepare tripe so as to have a plain though palatable dish.

How to make a good dressing for "chipped" dried beef, to be eaten cold.

How to make curry powder.

How to make skeleton leaves.

How to dye a black ostrich feather.

How to restore to their original whiteness straw table mats.

How to prevent a profuse weeping of the eyes when exposed to cold air.

How to make leather flowers, what kind of leather to use, how to prepare it, how to cut and vein it.—ELLA.

How to make fancy picture-frames for small chromos.

How to make a neat paste to use with a scrap-book.

MILITARY GOSSIP.

The second annual reunion of the "Gen. J. V. Meserole" Staff Association, will take place tomorrow evening at the Brooklyn Club.

Joseph E. Lord, of this City, has been appointed Military Secretary to the Commander in Chief of the National Guard of this State.

Lieut. Col. Willard B. Farwell, Inspector of Rifle Practice of the First Division, has resigned, owing to his continued absence from the City.

The following rifle clubs have affiliated with the National Rifle Association for the coming shooting season: Seventh Regiment Rifle Club; Middleton Rifle Association, of Connecticut; Washington Gray Cavalry Rifle Club, and Amateur Rifle Club, of this City.

Company H, Seventy-first Regiment, Capt Amos L. See commanding, will give a vocal and instrumental concert at the regimental armory, corner of Thirty-fifth street and Broadway, next Tuesday evening. Among the artists who are announced to participate on that occasion are Mlle. Maria Salvotti, Mlle. Louise Epps, Prof. T. J. Eben, and the Idlewild Quartet Club.

A grand decoration ball will be given by Company I, "Buffalo Guards," Second Regiment, Pennsylvania, on Thursday evening next. Representatives of the Seventy-First Regiment of this City, the United Train of Artillery of Philadelphia, and a number of Pennsylvania military organizations have been invited to be present on that occasion. Clement R. See, a private of Company I, the military editor of the Sunday Republic and Press of Philadelphia, is Chairman of the Committee of Arrangements.

Col. G. W. Wingate, General Inspector of Rifle Practice of this State, in his annual report to the Adjutant General, states that the aggregate number of men in the National Guard of whose practice he has reported was 10,687, against 7,670 in 1875. Of this number 5,260 qualified in the third class, (at 100 and 150 yards,) against 3,285 in 1875; and 2,881 qualified in the second class, (300 and 400 yards,) against 802 in 1875. The total number of marksmen reported was 907, against 533 in 1875, showing a gain of 8.48 per cent. in the whole number of qualified marksmen.

Second Lieut. Albert Wilkinson, of Company C, Twenty-third Regiment, has been presented with a dress sword and equipments by the members of his company. At a recent rifle contest for the "Chartres" medal by Company B, of this command, at the armory range, Private Willis S. Merriam won the trophy upon the score of 21 out of a possible 25 points. Companies G and C, of the same command, are about to contest a rifle match at the armory range. The adjutant general meeting of the Veteran Association, of this command, will be held at the regimental armory to-morrow evening.

Brig. Gen. Frederick Vilmar, commanding the Second Brigade, and his staff attended the annual meeting of the Military Association at Albany last week, and the reception given by Adjutant General Franklin Townsend. At the weekly contest at rifle practice held by Gen. Vilmar and staff, at the State Arsenal Rifle Range, last Saturday evening, Capt. William Webb scored 47 out of a possible 50; Capt. Hall made a score of 42, and Lieut. Gilsey made a score of 40 possible 50. Lieut. Gilsey has positively declined to accept the office of Captain in the Twenty-second Regiment, to which he was elected last week.

Company G, Seventh Regiment, will be governed by the following civil officers during the current year: President, Capt. James C. Abrams; Secretary, Edward K. Hayt; Treasurer, Sergt. George W. Harlan; Recruiting Committee, Corporal George A. Weber, C. W. Fisher, and H. B. Lockwood; Finance Committee, First Sergt. John McSweeny, Sergts. Edmund B. Horton, Jr., and Charles F. Bennett; Armory Committee, Corporals Charles E. Snevily, Charles H. Tully, F. S. Gardner, and W. H. Benedict; Court-martial, Capt. James C. Abrams, Corporal Charles H. Tully, Privates J. P. M. Richards, George L. Ross, and W. H. Benedict.

In the case of Private John Rothermel, of the Separate Troop Cavalry, who appealed from the decision of the division court-martial imposing upon him a fine of $78, one-half of that sum has been remitted upon the recommendation of Major Karl Klein, commander of the troop. The appeals of Privates Frank Fetsch, Philip H. Krauth, and John Wagner were dismissed, on the ground that the excuses offered were trivial. During the past week Major Klein enlisted two recruits, one of whom was ex-Capt. Charles F. Schulze, of the Ninety-sixth Regiment. It is understood that the troop will soon be assigned to an armory in the First Division. "Rendezvous," No. 9 West Thirteenth street. The matter will come before the Board of Aldermen this week.

Upon the recommendation of Inspector General John B. Woodward, the following battalions of Infantry have been disbanded: Second Battalion, of Troy, Lieut. Col. Michael Timpane, commanding; Nineteenth Battalion, Newburg, Daniel Torbush commanding, and One Hundred and Forty-sixth Battalion, of Steuben County, Col. Henry Baldwin, commanding. The commissioned officers of these organizations will be rendered supernumerary. Brig. Gen. Alonzo Alden, commanding the Tenth Brigade, has been charged with the execution of the details of the order relating to the Second Battalion; Brig. Gen. James R. Hitchcock, of the Seventh Brigade, with the details relating to the Nineteenth Battalion, and Brig. Gen. Jacob H. Lansing, commanding the Twentieth Brigade, in so far as the order relates to the One Hundred and Sixth Battalion.

Lieut. Col. F. W. Obermier, commanding the Twenty-eighth Regiment, Brooklyn, is evidently going to infuse some life into that organization, and that there need be no mistake on the part of the executive officers of the several companies in the manner of conducting business, he has published in orders the more salient portions of the revised Military Code of this State. This is a wise measure, and Col. Obernier's example should be emulated by the Colonel of every regiment whose copies of the Code have not been plentifully distributed. The following changes have been made in this command: Drummer Martin Schottler, of Company G, Drum Major, vice Opperman, discharged; Private John M. Auder, Quartermaster Sergeant of Company G, vice Hoepfer, promoted; Private George Hammel, Sergeant, Company G, vice Petrie, discharged; Privates Charles Reintz and William Heintz, Corporals, Company G, vice Schroeder, removed from the State, and Krantz, reduced to the ranks.

The Twelfth Regiment, Col. John Ward commanding, will parade by wings at the State Arsenal as follows: Companies A, B, F, and K to-morrow evening, under command of Major William G. Wilson, and Companies E, G, H, and I on Tuesday evening next, under command of Lieut. Col. S. Van Rensselaer Cruger. The entire regiment is under orders to parade for battalion drill at the State Arsenal on Wednesday, Feb. 7. Assembly on each occasion at 8 P. M. The commandants of companies B and F have been directed to detail one half file to-morrow evening, Companies G and H on Tuesday evening, and Companies E and K on Feb. 7, to perform guard duty. The commissioned officers of this command are directed to assemble in undress uniform, at the regimental armory, on Friday evening next at 8 o'clock, for theoretical instruction in rifle practice. Col. Ward has directed the command, in orders, to abandon the leather leggings heretofore worn with the fatigue uniforms.

A movement is on foot among a number of prominent and wealthy young gentlemen of this City to organize a Gatling battery of artillery. Capt. Wetmore, formerly of the Sixth Regiment, United States Cavalry, has been appointed Captain, and the project has received the sanction of Col. C. B. Mitchell, Chief of Artillery of the First Division. The personnel of the command will be very select, as the members will all be mounted, and an effort will be made to enlist only such men as own their horses. The lowest non-commissioned officer—a Corporal—will be in command of a caisson, drawn by four horses, so that his position will be equal in line to that of a Captain of a company of infantry. Some of the first young men of the City have signified their intention of becoming members of the organization. The idea is a good one, as nothing could conduce more to the splendor of a military pageant than a battery of Gatling guns, drawn by fine horses, and officered by capable officers, who are also accomplished riders.

The Ninth Regiment, Col. James R. Hitchcock, commanding, held its second concert and hop at the regimental armory last Thursday evening. The entertainment was for the benefit of the fund for providing a new uniform for the regimental band. The commodious drill-room was thronged with well-dressed people as early as 9 o'clock, and was as satisfactory as the entertainments given by this command always are. A court-martial for the trial of delinquent members of this command convened at the regimental armory last Friday evening. Major Pryer presided. An election was held in Company H, last Friday evening, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Capt. Isaac E. Hoagland. The successful candidate was Sergt. George W. Homans, of Company C, who was unanimously elected. A meeting of the Board of Officers of this command will take place at the regimental armory next Thursday evening to consider the feasibility of holding another concert and hop this season.

Battery B, Artillery, Major John Keim, commanding, is under orders to drill at its armory, corner of White and Elm streets, as follows: Wednesdays, Jan. 31, Feb. 21, March 14, April 18 and 28. The right wing, comprising sections 1, 2, and 3, will drill under command of Lieut. Edward L. Weebber, as follows: Wednesdays, Feb. 7 and 28, March 21, and April 4. Sections 4, 5, and 6, Lieut. E. Foeller, commanding, will drill on Wednesday evenings, Feb. 14, March 7 and 28, and April 11. Roll will be called on each occasion, at 7:30 P. M. The funeral of the late Lieut. Fabian July, an old and esteemed member of this command, took place, from his former residence, last Wednesday afternoon, and the remains were conveyed to Calvary Cemetery for interment. The members of his former command paraded in full uniform at his funeral on that occasion, accompanied by the officers and one section of Battery K, Artillery, under command of Lieut. A. Hoelzle. At a subsequent meeting of the members of Battery B, a vote of thanks was passed to the officers and members of Battery K, for their active sympathy on that occasion.

Major Daniel D. Wylie, Inspector of the Third Brigade, has been appointed Commissary General and Chief of Ordnance, vice Brig. Gen. Kilburn Knox, and has also been appointed Acting Assistant Quartermaster General. For the present, he will discharge all the duties of the Quartermaster General's department. This places the responsibility for the proper custody of the stores of both departments under one head, and will simplify matters to some extent. Gen. Wylie possesses an advantage over many appointees, in having had some previous knowledge of the business of the department. Gen. Wylie has been a member of the National Guard continuously for nearly 20 years. He enlisted as a private in the Washington Grey Troop Cavalry, on June 20, 1858. At that time the troop was attached to the Eighth Regiment Infantry, and was designated as Company I. Gen. Wylie passed successively from the position of private to Corporal and Sergeant, and was elected Second Lieutenant in 1864. Two years later he was promoted to be First Lieutenant, and in 1868 he was elected Captain. He held this office until the year 1874, when he was appointed Inspector of Rifle Practice of the 3d Third Brigade, by Brig. Gen. Varian. He filled this position with satisfaction to his commander, and with success to the various regiments under his supervision. In October, 1876, he was appointed Brigade Inspector of the same command in the place of the late Col. Obed Wentworth. He accomplished the duty of inspecting the several regiments in his brigade with the ease and thoroughness of a more experienced officer. Gen. Wylie has made no change in the staff of subordinate officers, and it is understood that he will make none excepting where the present incumbents are incompetent to fill their positions.

An election has been ordered to be held in the Twenty-second Regiment, on Friday, Feb. 9, at 8 P. M., to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Major W. J. A. McGrath. There are two candidates in the field, Capt. John H. Horsfall, of Company F, and Capt. S. M. Smith, of Company D. A court-martial has been appointed in this command, for the trial of non-commissioned officers and musicians and privates, to convene at the armory on Monday, Feb. 19, at 8 P. M. Capt. Henry M. Knapp, of Company C, has been detailed as the Court. The left wing of this command, comprising Companies F, C, I, K, and B, had a battalion drill at the regimental armory last Friday evening. Line was formed with an equalization of five companies of 16 files front. Lieut. Col. John T. Camp was in command, and drilled the regiment pretty steadily for upward of two hours. Battalion movements and evolutions in the manual of arms comprised the drill, and there were very few errors committed by either officers or men. It was observed that the men have received careful instruction in the manual of arms in their company drill, for the movements "support arms" and "right shoulder arms" were performed in a uniform manner, so that in glancing along the line after the execution of either of these commands, one was not reminded of a "hawk-trap," or a porcupine, from the various modes of holding the pieces. Company E held a reception at the Lexington Avenue-house, last Monday evening, which was a fine affair, and fully equaled the expectations of the invited guests, and of the members themselves, in the manner in which it was conducted. A number of military officers from out of town were present, including a fair representation of the First Regiment, Pennsylvania National Guard. The assembly room was charmingly decorated, flags were suspended in festoons, and butterflies at various points, while the atmosphere was redolent with the perfume of the exotic plants and flowers which surrounded the band provided by Mr. Gilmore for the occasion. The coat of arms of the regiment was emblazoned in gas-jets at one end of the hall, while at the other end was the word "welcome," equally prominent. Mr. Gilmore conducted the band in person. The members of the orchestra wore their old uniform, owing to the action of the Chairman of the Music Committee, who, it is said, refused to allow the band to wear their full-dress uniforms. Considering that there were many visitors from other cities present at the entertainment, it was due to the company that it should have received the support of all the members of the regiment, even though that company did perform the labor, and receive the credit, for whatever success might result from its energy. The conduct of the Chairman of the Music Committee is, therefore, deserving of contempt, and should be remembered to his discredit. Among the guests present were Col. Josiah Porter and staff, Lieut. Col. John T. Camp, District Attorney Phelps and Mrs. Phelps; Sergt. Harry W. Carey and Miss Ransom, Commissary Gen. D. D. Wylie, Dr. T. H. Burchard, Dr. Lewis, Dr. Fuller Walker, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Bolton, B. W. Williams, Jr., and Miss Cole, Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Bates, Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Markham, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Brosseau, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Worcester, Miss Conant, Miss Ida Williams, D. C. Link, Miss Carey, Horace Secor, Mr. and Mrs. George G. Rockwood, Mr. and Mrs. Randel, and a large number of officers and members of other companies in this command. A full dress parade, promenade concert, and reception will be given by this regiment at its armory, in West Fourteenth street, next Wednesday evening. The event will be an interesting one, as it involves a review of the regiment by Brig. Gen. Ward, the performance of an excellent programme of music by Gilmore's Band, and a hop, commencing at 10 o'clock and terminating at the pleasure of the participants.

"SOCIETY" IN BOSTON.

The Boston Saturday Evening Gazette says: "Society has not been so dull in this city for many years as it has been this Winter. Economy has been the watchword, and consequently parties, balls, and other similar affairs where the stars of swelldom usually shine with mid-winter effulgence, and provide conversational topics for the more plebian world, have been few and far between. Now and then there is a little flutter caused by the sporadic appearance of private theatricals; and the monotony of fashionable life is occasionally stirred by dancing parties, quiet little receptions, and an exceptional engagement or marriage; but they are only ripples on the surface, and do not agitate the depths. The grim propriety of the Back Bay remains undisturbed by any social excitement, and it is likely to remain so through the Winter. The annual instalment of opera will not be had this year, and therefore no relief is to be looked for from that quarter. The announcement a week ago that we were to hear 'Fidelio,' 'The Flying Dutchman,' and several of the hackneyed stand-bys of Italian opera, did cause the blood of society to move somewhat quicker, and there was much of joy and of relief at the promised opportunity for showing those new and gorgeous costumes in public; but there was trouble somewhere, and the enterprise fell through, to the unutterable anguish of high life. Even concerts, in which our Winters have hitherto been embarrassingly prolific, have failed this year to come to the general relief. We doubt, however, if they would have been patronized had they been given. Essipoff was a case in point. Society, which is vulgarly supposed to take high art under its protecting wing, could not afford the luxury, and the result was scanty audiences. The only concerts that have been largely attended have been those which have cost their audiences nothing. The Boylston, the Apollo, and the Cecilia Clubs drew fashionable society forth from its seclusion in large numbers, and kindly provided material for the languid gossip of high life. But these clubs cannot be expected to come to the aid of society on all occasions, and there is a lull again, unbroken by any prospect of future excitement. The theatres also have been unable to draw society out of its economical shell. It might have been reasonably expected that Mrs. Lauder, after having been taken under the wing of our literati and patted encouragingly on the back by some of the leading lights of society, would have brought fashionable life into a state of undemonstrative, high-bred enthusiasm; but the results did not realize expectations. We must therefore give up the Winter in its society aspect as a failure. Even the sleighing cannot save it from that ignominy."

AN ELEPHANT STAMPEDE.

A correspondent writing to a London paper of the display at Delhi says: "The batteries on the right first fired 34 salvos of three guns each; then the infantry fired a feu de joie. The batteries on the left then took up the salute, and so on till 101 salvos and three feuz de joie had been fired. It is said that Lord Lytton viewed that the salvos should be of six guns each, but the artillery officers pointed out difficulties. As it was, this portion of the salute was rather disappointing. The guns were small, and, as a general rule, the three did not go off simultaneously. The feu de joie, however, amply compensated; the effect as it rolled down one line, then doubled back and rattled up the other was really magnificent and worthy of the occasion, only the elephants and horses seemed not to appreciate it. The former after each discharge turned tail in wild stampede, and were with difficulty brought back to their places. It is said that some people in the crowd were killed and hurt by the sudden rush of the huge and frightened beasts. I have not been able to ascertain the extent of the mischief, but it could hardly fail to be considerable.

A STOVE EXPLODES.

The Worcester (Mass.) Gazette of Tuesday describes this startling kitchen episode: "This forenoon a cooking-stove exploded in one of the tenements in Tuttle's Block, Lincoln street, in a mysterious manner. Without any warning its doors and covers were blown off, the kettles and flat-irons were thrown across the room, and the whole establishment reduced to a wreck. Two persons were in the room at the time, but fortunately they were not seriously injured by the flying fragments. The stove was a new one, put in last November, and had no water-attachment. A torpedo in the coal seems the most reasonable explanation of the occurrence."

FINANCIAL AFFAIRS.

SALES AT THE STOCK EXCHANGE—JAN. 27.

SALES BEFORE THE CALL—10 A. M.

$2,000 St. P. C. & P..	78½	500 Lake Shore	56⅜
2,000 N. J. Cl. 1st, con.	72	2000 do	56⅝
200 Del. & Hudson	66	1000 do	56¼
100 Pac. Mail	25⅝	500 do	56¼
400 do	25⅝	1000 do	56⅜
100 do	25¾	100 do	56⅝
400 Erie Railway	10	100 do	56
100 do	10	2000 do	56
100 do	9⅞	3000 do	55⅞
500 West. Un.	77⅛	2000 do	55¾
700 do	77⅝	600 do	55¾
300 do	77¼	3100 do	55⅞
200 do	77⅜	1600 do	55¾
100 do	77	600 do	55⅝
800 do	77	100 do	55⅝
805 do	76⅞	3800 do	55½
1500 do	76¾	100 do	55⅞
900 do	76⅝	1100 do	55½
700 do	76¾	100 Atl. & Pac. Tel.	14½
700 do	76⅝	100 D., L. & W	72¼
700 do	76¾	300 do	72⅜
400 N. Y. C. & Hud	102⅜	200 do	72¼
100 do	102½	400 Northwest. Pref.	52
100 Mich. Cen.	49	800 Cen. of N. J	32⅝
100 do	49⅛	5 do	32¾
100 do	48⅞	610 do	32½
100 do	48¾	100 do	31¾
100 do	48⅞	100 do	32⅜
100 do	49	400 do	32¼
600 do	48⅝	100 do	32⅜
200 do	48¾	200 do	32¼
100 do	48¼	100 do	32⅜
100 do	48⅜	400 do	32
40 Rock Island	102	100 do	32
200 do	101⅞	500 St. Paul Pref	47⅜
200 do	101⅝	100 do	47¼
500 do	101½	400 do	47⅛
500 do	101⅜	200 do	47¼
200 do	101⅝	200 do	47¼
100 do	101⅝	200 Ohio & M.	7
300 do	101⅝	100 St. L., K. C. & N.	5
40 Harlem	141

GOVERNMENT STOCKS—10:15 AND 11:30 A. M.

$6,000 U. S. 6s, '81, R	12.114	$1,000 U. S. 5-20 C., '68	117½
600 U. S. 6s, '81	114	10,000 U. S. 5s, 10-40	114⅛
10,000 U. S. 5-20 C., '65 N	12.109	17,000 do	12.114⅛
5,000 U. S. 5-20 C., '65 N	110¾	15,000 do	b.c.b3.114⅛
10,000 U. S. 5-20 C., '67	113⅞	19,000 U. S. 5s, 10-40 C	b.c. 114½
10,000 do	s3.113⅞	2,000 U. S. 5s, '81, R	12.111

FIRST BOARD—10:30 A. M.

$2,000 Georgia 7s, N.	105⅜	700 L. S. & M. S.	b.c.	55½
10,000 Va. 6s, con., 10 series	38	1500 do	s3.	55⅜
500 Brooklyn 6s, Water L'n	106	100 do	10	55

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

A SCRIPTURE COMMENTARY.

COMMENTARY ON THE HOLY SCRIPTURES; Critical, Doctrinal, and Homiletical, with special reference to Ministers and Students. By JOHN PETER LANGE, D. D., in connection with a number of eminent European Divines. Translated from the German, and Edited, with additions, Original and Selected, by PHILIP SCHAFF, D. D., in connection with American Scholars of various Evangelical Denominations. Vol. VII. of the Old Testament; containing Chronicles, Ezra, Nehemiah, and Esther. New-York: SCRIBNER, ARMSTRONG & Co.

The four commentaries in this volume have a certain unity as belonging to the close of the old Hebrew canon, and as illustrating the age of the restoration of the Jewish Temple and people under the protection of the Persians, about 520 B. C. In fact, the Books of Chronicles, Ezra, and Nehemiah have been regarded as virtually one work, and the scholars who have been reluctant to ascribe them to one author have been quite ready to recognize in them the hand of one editor. The Book of Esther deals with events of a later date in the reign of Xerxes, whom the commentator regards with confidence as the Ahasuerus of Scripture, (485-465 B. C.;) yet it turns essentially upon the same historical movement, and illustrates the success of the Jews in preserving their nationality in Persia after it had been so signally vindicated by the return of a portion of them to Judæa and the rebuilding of their temple under the auspices of the founder of the Persian Empire, Cyrus the Great, (559-529 B. C.)

The two Books of Chronicles are ascribed to a writer who belonged to the last 10 years of the Persian dynasty, (340-330 B. C.,) and who apparently edited the Books of Ezra and Nehemiah. Only this is established in regard to him: that he must have belonged to the Levites of the Sacred Temple, and in particular to the singers, or song masters, in whom he takes a particular interest. While the position of the older Israelites of Samuel and Kings is that of the prophet, the author of the Chronicles occupies that of the priest and the Levite. Moreover, while the former historians appear to think comparatively little of the externals of worship, and to dwell upon the moral and spiritual degradation of the people as the cause of their misery and their exile, the Chronicler insists much upon external institutions, puts those gloomy views into the shade, and delights in glorifying the nation and in throwing all possible light from past experience upon the rising hopes of his people. Thus we have the important distinction between the prophetic form of history, as presented in the older Books of Kings, and the hagiographic form, as presented in the later Books of Chronicles, or what may be called the Sacerdoto-Levitical—a distinction which is easily understood by thoughtful readers, who will contrast the first enthusiastic age of any great modern religious movement and its subsequent stage of formation, retrospection, and apology, as in the second age of the Protestant Reformation.

In fact, the books of Chronicles, Ezra, and Nehemiah are the annals of the Jewish restoration, with the distinct purpose of making out the best case for the restored nationality and worship; and they have great historical importance as being the foundation documents of distinctively modern Judaism as differing from the ancient Israel. Canon Westcott well sets forth the importance of the period of history which they illustrate in his careful article on Cyrus the Great and the influence of his edict upon the beginning of Judaism, and upon the transformation of the nation into a church; (1,) by completing the lesson of the captivity, humbling the pride of the Kings, and lifting the people from secular to religious aspirations; (2,) by securing the results of their discipline of suffering in captivity, opening their eyes to the spiritual worth of their religion, enlarging their notions of the unseen world, and preparing them for the coming of the true Messiah; (3,) by organizing their Church and worship, collecting their Scriptures, and providing synagogues and schools for the people and their children; (4,) by leading the Jews to regard the bond between themselves as religious and not merely local, and by presenting them as one people, even after they were incorporated into different nations.

Another aspect of this historical period, which is more fully brought out in the Book of Esther, is the new relation between the Jews and the great Aryan race, by close connection with the Persians, who are of the Aryan family, and who thus represented our modern times 2,500 years ago. In the large acceptation of the words, modern history rests upon the union of the Semitic faith with the Greek culture, and this union virtually began when Persia became the protector of Judæa, and opened the way for the coming of Alexander and the Greek civilization by the conquest of Persia, when Xerxes, the husband of Esther, was driven back by the Greeks. In a somewhat clumsy way, Prof. Schultz, the commentator upon the Book of Esther speaks of this new relation between Judæa and the Pagan culture as alarming the old theocratic spirit, from fear of losing the Hebrew idea of the transcendent God over all in nature and man after the manner of the Greeks and Persians. "It is doubtless true that such a tendency had its great dangers. While the Old Testament theism, being faith in a living God, active in the development of the world and of mankind, held the proper middle rank between pantheism and deism, by believing in an ever-present divine spirit, it gradually and unmistakably leaned over to deism, in strong contrast with panthistic heathendom. Of this we have an example in later Judaism as opposed to Christianity. This also characterizes Mohammedanism."

He uses this fact of the tendency to withdraw the idea of God from nature and life also, to explain the utter absence of the name of God from the Book of Esther, although this book is evidently written in the interest of the Jewish religion. Most readers will probably be more ready to accept his suggestion that the name of God was omitted by the author from motives of literary and artistic policy, that readers of all kinds might go through the romantic narrative of the Jewish maiden's conquest of the King's heart for the redemption of her people and the triumph of her religion, without any formal reference to her faith, and that they might thus accept the lesson in its own beauty and power without harm from the local prejudices or national wrongs which the Jews of the Dispersion had to encounter. At least, however, it is a startling fact that the divine name is not once found in this romantic and eminently Jewish portion of the Old Testament. It may be that the author chose to take his religion for granted, as among the things that "go without saying." This book has peculiar interest from its connection with the feast of Purim or the Lots, the annual festival instituted to commemorate the preservation of the Jews in Persia from massacre through the intrigues of Haman, and which is every year so heartily celebrated among our Jewish citizens. The American reviser gives an interesting excursus on the liturgical use of the book which is called "The Roll," and on the peculiar usages of the feast of Purim, which as long ago as the time of Josephus was said to have been kept by all the Jews on the habitable earth. Whenever the Reader comes to the name of Haman the congregation stamp on the floor and cry out: "Let his name be blotted out! The name of the wicked shall rot!" At the same time, in some places, the boys who are present make a great noise with their hands, with mallets, with rattles, and with pieces of wood and stone, on which they have written the name of Haman, and which they rub together so as to obliterate the writing. So roughly is poor Haman's name handled ages after he and his sons were hanged upon the gallows. Probably milder treatment from their neighbors will make Esther's race less vindictive to her enemy.

We notice with satisfaction Dr. Howard Crosby's contribution to this volume, and the terseness and point of the 62 pages that are given by him to the Book of Nehemiah, including Dr. Schultz's homiletical sections. He avoids the diffuseness which abound often in Lange's good and noble work, and which sometimes is more ready to exhaust the catalogue of conflicting opinions than to come directly to the point and to tell us what are the author's own decisions and the best result of his studies. The hand of another of our own scholars, Rev. Dr. Charles A. Briggs, is seen in the commentary on Ezra.

A RIDE TO KHIVA.

A RIDE TO KHIVA. By FREDERIC BURNABY, Captain Royal Horse Guards. CASSELL, PETTER & GALPIN. London: 1876. Fourth edition.

Here is a work which has run through four editions in as many months, for Capt. Burnaby had the good fortune not only to write an entertaining and instructive work, but to produce it precisely when the public mind, in his country, was prepared to appreciate it. The Burnabys, a very ancient stock, seated for centuries in Leicestershire, appear to be a traveling family, for a century ago Dr. Burnaby's work on this country was regarded as a standard authority on the subject. Our author today is one of that stamp of soldiers of whom the British Army may be justly proud. Although a member of the household brigade, he is most assuredly no carpet knight, but exposes himself in peace to toils as arduous, and perils as imminent, as any which could overtake him in a military campaign.

Capt. Burnaby had long cherished a desire to satisfy himself by personal inquiry as to Russian doings in Central Asia, and would have prosecuted his travels in that direction before, but for his desire to watch the progress of the Carlist war in Spain. What acted on his mind as a special charm and stimulus was the extreme difficulty of the excursion, for he is clearly of the Napoleonic opinion that impossible should be erased from a man's dictionary, and the obstacles placed by the Russian Government in the path of a traveler to Khiva only served to satisfy him that there must be something worth going for, and to whet his appetite intensely. So a year ago last December, when he got his long leave, he resolved to be off. Physically and intellectually he seems singularly suited for such adventures. He can endure great fatigue, has tact, resource, and indomitable persistence in gaining his ends, and enjoys a most remarkable gift for languages, being probably about the only man in his profession in England who possesses a really competent knowledge of the Russian tongue. The present Russian Ambassador in London is Count Schouvaloff, formerly chief of the secret political Police of the Empire, and entirely in the confidence of his imperial master. The Count declared himself unable to say whether his Government would furnish Capt. Burnaby with passports for the contemplated journey, and the Russian Minister of War, Gen. Milutin, while providing him with a permit through Russian territories, professed himself unable to assist him further, and from what the said Capt. Burnaby deduced that the more he kept out of Central Asia the better the Imperial Minister would be pleased. Capt. Burnaby happened to be forewarned by the fate of a would-be traveler in the same route, Major Wood, who in the previous year had been refused by the Russian General of the district permission to visit Khiva, and so anticipating that if he pursued the regular route he should in some wily way be thwarted, he "dodged" the last military station, and thus adroitly reached his goal.

Probably many of those who have read thus far find themselves asking where Khiva is. It is, then, a country of Central Asia, some 200 miles in length from north to south, and half as much from east to west, extending along both banks of the Oxus up to where its course is lost among the vast thickets of reeds and rushes which precede its entrance into the Sea of Aral. It is bounded north-west and north by Russia, north-east and east by Bokhara, south by Persia and Afghanistan, and west by the Caspian Sea, and has a population supposed to be about 1,500,000. On all sides it is enveloped by deserts; that of Kara-koom, or "the Black Sand," extends from the western border to the Caspian, and the Kizil-koom, or "Red Sand," covers the eastern frontier, forming also the Bokhara territory, and reaching in that direction as far as the confines of Kokan or Terghena.

The first recorded intercourse between Russia and Khiva dates back to the days of Peter the Great, who sent an ambassador there on pretexts which the Khan thought "too thin," particularly as the envoy was accompanied by an armed suite of 2,000 men, and consequently when this formidable body was imprudently dispersed to go into Winter quarters, they were surprised, cut off, and the hapless ambassador severed limb from limb. Peter, being probably too much engrossed with other interests, does not appear to have made any effort to avenge his ambassador, and for nearly 100 years Khiva remained unmolested by Russia and without direct communication with that tremendous neighbor, although caravans passed through Khivan territory from Bokhara. In 1819-20 a new attempt at relations with Khiva was made by Russia, Capt. Mouravier being deputed to interview the Khan, but his propositions were rejected or evaded. Mouravier wrote an account of his mission, and it is evident that thenceforward Khiva became an important object with the Russian Government.

"If," says he, "we possessed Khiva, the conquest of which would not be difficult, the nomad tribes of Central Asia would dread our power, and a route for commerce would be established by the Indus and Oxus to Russia. All the riches of Asia would then flow into our country, and we should see the brilliant projects of Peter the Great realized. Once master of Khiva, many other States would become dependent on us. In a word, Khiva is at this moment an advanced post, opposed to the commerce of Russia with Bokhara and Northern India; but, if subject to us, the Khivan territory would become a stronghold, which would defend this commerce against the attacks of the tribes dispersed over Southern Asia. This oasis, situated in the midst of an ocean of sand, would become the point of reunion of all the commerce of Asia, and would shake, even to the centre of India, the enormous commercial preponderance of the dominators of the sea—the English."

Ever since then there has been in England a certain influential class with Russia on the brain, who see in every move that country makes in Asia a step toward a bitter conflict with England. Of their number is Capt. Burnaby, the value of whose book, admirable in many respects, is impaired by the intensely anti-Russian animus which pervades its every page. The events of the past five years have served to fan the fears of the Russo-phobists. In 1872 Russia was active in Central Asia, and among other operations sent an expedition to punish the Khan of Khiva, ostensibly for the killing of certain Russian citizens and other misconduct; but Mr. Schuyler (see his recent work) thinks that there was in the mind of Gen. Kaufmann, (the Governor General of Turkistan,) whose administration, more especially on financial grounds, had been violently and in a telling manner assailed, "a feeling that a successful Khivan expedition, while being in itself an achievement of considerable merit, would in a satisfactory way round off his official career."

After most desperate difficulties—it seemed at one time as if the army would be entirely lost in one of those deserts which have formed so effective a protection to Khiva—the Russians took the city and became altogether masters of the situation. In 1875 there was fresh food for the alarmists in an expedition which started in May of that year, ostensibly to explore the old bed of the Oxus from Kraanovodk, on the shore of the Caspian Sea, to the Khivan frontier. The expedition was suspected of political objects, but does not seem to have achieved anything. Capt. Burnaby risked his life to find out what had really happened to the Khivans since Gen. Kaufmann's occupation. And this, to a certain extent, he discovered; but a stay of five days only in the capital was scarcely sufficient to accomplish his task very thoroughly. He was prevented doing that he desired by a telegram from the Duke of Cambridge, his Commander-in-Chief, reaching him at Khiva, summoning him home, although his regular leave had not expired, and this telegram he attributes to remonstrances made by Count Schouvaloff to Lord Derby.

Capt. Burnaby gives a capital account of his journey. He is terse but lively. No travelers' tales are dragged in to pad his volume. All is to the point. No skipping is needed. He went by Mr. Schuyler's route to Orenburg, the last place of importance in European Russia, and a curious mixture of Europe and Asia. A railroad is now being constructed thence to Samara, which is expected to add greatly to Orenburg's importance. From Orenburg he went (like Mr. Schuyler) to Kazala and Orsk, and no one on reading his narrative need be surprised that Khiva has been left so much to itself. The only wonder is that anybody should have approached it at all from Russia. At Kazala he was hospitably entertained at the garrison, but he formed a most unfavorable impression of officers generally. Mr. Jewell, when Russian Minister at St. Petersburg, wrote that Russians have no morality as we understand the word, and Capt. Burnaby seems to have been quite of that opinion as to the officers.

"D' you mean to say that the officers in your Army do not get drunk?" said one, as he tossed off a glass of spirits. "Why, liquor's the only thing worth living for."

Perhaps if there is an excuse for getting drunk it is in being quartered at such a place as Kazala. There are other things which they deem worth caring for besides liquor. These the author delicately veils in the appropriate language of Ovid. Capt. Burnaby says:

"Nothing would be so popular with the officers in Central Asia, or, indeed, for that matter, in European Russia also, as a war with England about India; and as the only public opinion which can be said to exist in the Czar's Empire is represented by the military class, which will in a few years absorb all the male population of the nation, we ought to be thoroughly prepared for the emergency."

Again, he records the following conversation:

"I have remarked, that England was not likely to declare war without having an ally. 'But what if Germany or Austria were to join?' 'As for those pigs of Germans, we must fight them some day or other,' replied the previous speaker, 'and when the Czarovitch is Emperor, please God, we will beat them well, and drive every German brute out of Russia; they fatten on our land at the expense of our brothers.' 'But, suppose they get the best of it?' 'Well, that can they don't. They cannot seize in Russia, even if they should be able to assail us. We can play the old game, keep on retiring. Russia is large, and there is plenty of country at our back.' 'They might take the Baltic provinces,' I remarked. 'Take them; I hope Gortschakoff will give them to Bismarck before long, and arrange that Germany does not interfere with us when we march upon Constantinople,' said another of the travelers.

'Arrange with Bismarck; you might as well arrange with the devil,' said the first speaker; 'he will take everything that he can, and give us nothing. He is the greatest enemy we have, except, perhaps, the people at Vienna. However, they do not count for much, as with the Czecks and Hungarians they have plenty on their hands; but we must give those Austrians a beating before long.' 'Which would be most popular, a war with Austria or one with Germany?' I inquired. 'With Austria, it was the unanimous reply, because we know that we can march to Vienna without any difficulty. We are not prepared for Germany. * * * When the Czarowitch is on the throne we shall have a war. Bismarck, too, does not want to fight at present. He would like to see Russia fight England, Austria, and Turkey. The old fox would sit still himself and do nothing, but if we got the best of Austria, he would take Vienna and Holland as his share of the spoil, and as a reward for his exertions; while, if we were beaten, he would take the Baltic provinces.' 'But perhaps you are a German,' said one of the travelers. 'No, I am an Englishman, and am very much obliged to you for this interesting conversation.'"

At Khiva the English are popular because the Russians are hated, and he was warmly received by the Khan, "a cheery sort of fellow." "Well," said that Prince, "the Russians will now advance to Kashgar—about 100 miles north of British territory—then to Bokhara and Balkh, and so on to Merv and Herat; you will have to fight some day whether your Government likes it or not. I am informed that India is very rich, and that Russia has got plenty of soldiers, but little with which to pay them. I am paying for some of them now." It appears from Capt. Burnaby's statement that there is no Russian garrison in the town of Khiva, and that in a portion of his territories the Khan exercises his sway as before, but that in the remainder Russian authority is dominant, that a portion of his country has been actually annexed to Russia, and that he is now practically a vassal of that empire; moreover, that certain agreements made between Lord Granville, when Foreign Secretary, and Count Schouvaloff, have not been maintained—notably that Russian forts had been erected on Khivan soil.

Mr. Schuyler does not, nor do we, share in Capt. Burnaby's opinions as to Russia's designs on India. "It is impossible," says the former, "to believe that there is any settled intention on the part of the Russian Government of making an attack on India, or even of preparing the way for it, nor is there any desire for the possession of India. Young men in the army of Turkistan, whose only thought is for advancement and decoration—the St. Anne's fever, (alluding to the cross of St. Anne,) is very prevalent in Turkistan. Many, indeed, talk loudly, but the men who control the policy have no such thought." He adds that in case of war between England and Russia, there might be danger to England by way of Persia, but the assent of that power must be gained, and she would not be likely to gain by Russian ascendancy. Mr. Seward astutely observed that he learned when in India the secret of the submission of the people of that country to English rule, viz., that they would be ten times worse off under the native Princes. So as to Russia, the people of India would gain nothing by exchanging England's sway for hers, and would not fail, with perhaps some rare exceptions, to side with England. Mouravier's views are natural enough in a Russian, but could his country, even if she desired to carry them out, do so? Most assuredly not at present with her already unwieldy territory, and depleted treasury.

Capt. Burnaby attaches an importance to chance acquaintances of travel and the opinions of subalterns which results those works on Ireland, which, in fact, give the profound views of the car-drivers who drove the authors. It is curious to read anent this very subject—Russian designs on Khiva—in Blackwood, thirty-seven years ago:

"The British press is under a 'craze,' a strong maniacal delusion, in regard to Russia. All assume the Czar to be the general enemy of liberty and the special enemy of Great Britain. No plausible indications have ever been assigned to color this assumption with likelihood; but with willing hearers no proofs are required. The result of this craze is that we shall actually force Russia to become our enemy by the rancorous pertinacity with which we suppose her to be such."

The truth is that soldiers are soldiers all the world over, and to enter a profession and then have no opportunity of displaying your prowess in it, is to active, adventurous spirits deeply depressing—how depressing to Capt. Burnaby his ride to Khiva sufficiently attests. It proves that if Russian officers have the St. Anne's fever, the maladies of the Victoria Cross and the Bath are not unknown in England, and we can well believe that Capt. Burnaby's day dreams include a vision of a certain gazette which contains the name of Sir Frederick Burnaby, V. C., K. C. B., &c., highly distinguished in the Russo-Indian campaign, as we doubt not he will be should one ever take place.

A SCRAP OF INDIAN STORY.

"SITTING BULL" AND THE SIOUX.

THEIR ANTECEDENTS AND HISTORY—FRENCHIFIED NAMES OF THE RIVER TRIBES—AMERICAN COSSACKS—SOMETHING NEW ABOUT THE NADOUESSIOCS AND THEIR PRESENT LEADER, WRACHFEALUTA.

One would think it would be rather hard to say anything new on the subject of our Indian tribes, and that, in fact, it would be only "the same old story." And yet there is something in the records of the native American tribes which has not been sufficiently noticed, chiefly in their thoughts and traditions, and especially in their dialects, which seem destined to give light to the new science of language, and in this way help all students of the past ages to understand with more clearness the old histories and migrations of the human race. It will probably be found that our poor and scattered American languages have grown in a wild way from the root and origin of our own and every other speech we know; and this truth will be found the mother of a thousand other truths.

The Sioux (as they are named) were first discovered about 200 years ago by Frenchmen, who showed themselves much more forward than the English in the business of exploring. A number of missionaries, Jesuits and others, sent by Louis XIV., made their way by the tracks opened by Cartier and Champlain, along the St. Lawrence to the great lakes; and Le Jeune, Jogues, Allouez, Marquette, Hennepin, Le Sueur, Charlevoix, and others, have left many interesting notices of their progress, together with their peculiar fashions of orthography in the names of places and persons. Standing on the western edges of Lake Conde (Superior) Le Jeune, Jogues and Rymbault heard loud noises of war away along the sunset prairies, and first became aware of the formidable vicinity of the Nadonessioes, or, as they wrote them down in their own way, the Nadonessioux.

Some of the most daring "fathers" went to look for those warrior tribes, carrying with them a number of axes and looking-glasses, for traffic, along with their breviaries and rosaries. They first met the Poulacs, or Assiniboins, of Winnipeg Lake. In 1669, Father Marquette said that the Nadoussioes were "the Iroquois of the North-west"—alluding to the Eastern Confederacy of the lakes, then rising truculently into power, which they upheld till 1783. One day, in 1678, Hennepin saw a troop of Nadoussioes bringing back to Niagara Falls a few Tetons as captives, taken in a foray against the dreaded race of Mille Lac from the great stream first written Misicipa. Then the good father ventured among them, and was the first to describe them distinctly. He exaggerates his risk; but the Sioux treated him fairly enough. They did not rob him of any of his wares, though they contrived to look so grimly on him and them that he gave them five axes, 15 skins, and six fathoms of tobacco as a matter of self-preservation. The great Chief, Wazekuta, protected him, and when he was sick, the wise men put him into a vapor-bath made of hot stones and buffalo skins, shampooed him with tears in their eyes, and so brought him round in a week. He probably remembered, though he does not state, that this was a very old piece of pharmacy practiced by the Kelts of the British Isles and France. Meantime the French carried on a great trade in furs, and tried to intercept one great current of it which ran upward to the English of Hudson Bay.

In 1700 Le Sueur made a voyage to the Sioux head-quarters of Mule Lac, 40 leagues westward from Lake Superior, and also made a treaty that lasted for a long time. In 1763, when all Canada had been transferred to England, the New-England colonists began to move in that direction. In 1767 Jonathan Carver, of Connecticut, made a "prospecting" tour among the Sioux of what is now the State of Minnesota. He seems to have "palavered" in their council about the power of the King of England; and he subsequently asserted that the chiefs had made him a grant of land on the St. Croix River—a grant which the outbreak of the Revolution obstructed, and which Congress in 1823 refused to recognize. Our General, Zebulon Pike, was more successful in 1805. He made a treaty with the Sioux, under which he obtained for $2,000 a tract of land nine miles square along the Mississippi. Subsequently other concessions were made. In 1837 the ground between the Mississippi and the Upper Lake was acquired by the United States. In 1849 the Territory of Minnesota became a State. In 1850 the last scalp was taken by the Chippeway "Hole in the Day" at St. Paul, and in 1852 the last grand Olympic game of "shinny" was played at the same place by the bands of three of the Dakota chiefs. When the Sioux went west into Dakota they found it a Territory organized on ground obtained from the aforesaid chiefs by treaty. It was the exodus of nearly a whole people, giving origin to the State seal of Minnesota, which represents an aboriginal warrior riding away toward the setting sun, and looking backward as he goes.

The present ground of the Sioux is mainly that occupied, along the Missouri and its affluents, by the Territories of Dakota, Wyoming, Montana, and the prospective Huron, where they seem confused as to their whereabouts, and protest in a scattering way against the advance of the Isantankas. But it is to little purpose. Old times are changed, old manners gone. The Sioux formerly hunted and hoed on the thousand streams between Lake Superior and the Mississippi, and cultivated their wild oats (folle avoine as they termed it) on the swamps and bottom-lands. Now they ride on horses like Bedouin Arabs, use breech-loaders with metal cartridges, and hunt the buffalo for a subsistence. In Dakota they have been mainly divided into the so-called Yanktos, Sisseton, and Wapeton tribes, which have also their own subdivisions, with names which only a Government agent can pretend to distinguish. The Yanktons, about 2,000 in number, have a reservation of 400,000 acres to the eastward of the Missouri; the Sissetons (1,500 persons) have another of 1,240,000 on Lake Traverse; the Wapetons (about 1,000 persons) have 345,000 acres on Devil's Lake. Along with these, in the south-west of the Territory, is the Mountain Reservation of 25,000,000 acres set apart by treaty in 1868 for Ogallallas, Minneconjous, Brules, and other families, numbering about 25,000 persons, under five agencies. Up in Montana, on the Milk River, near the British frontier, is a reserve of 17,000,000 acres for the Yankton and other Sioux. The entire number of the Sioux, including the tribes in Nebraska and Montana, is reckoned at 44,000 persons—the great majority being connected with reservations, which may be termed the hospitals in which we treat our "sick men" of the North-western Territories.

The discontents and outbreaks of our patients have been frequent for several decades, and will be generally remembered. In 1867-8 those of the Missouri broke out in protest against the Central Railroad. Following this flurry came the treaty of 1868, which gave them the above-mentioned Black Hills Reservation. In 1874 the military excursion of Gen. Custer among those hills caused a further exasperation. He found it to be a land "worth fighting for," rich in grasses, fruits, flowers, forestry, grouse, ducks, deer, elk, and other kinds of game, together with iron ore, gypsum, and good stone for building. In that rude region not to foresee the fate which awaited them in June, 1876, at the hands of the mountaineers—a fate which some of them may have considered a retribution ordained by their gods, Oyankatahee and Heyoka.

In their wars, and especially the present, the Sioux have proved themselves good fighters and strategists—especially the latter—knowing that a cunning science must be employed to meet the great military odds against them. Among their devices of natural soldiership is the notable one of making the prairie itself wage a war of fire against the invaders, while hardly less effective are those palavers which they interpose when they find themselves pushed too hard. They have no headlong rashness, and make no Balaklava charges, believing, with the late Marshal St. Arnaud, that such things "are not war." As cavalry soldiers they are as good as our own. Gen. Crook allows their merit in that respect, though he calls Sitting Bull a renegade and an outlaw. "The Sioux," he says, "is a cavalry soldier from the time he is able to ride a horse or fire a gun. If he wishes to dismount, his pony will graze around near where he is left, ready when his master remounts to move forward or escape. Even with their lodges and families they can move 50 miles a day." It is well that enemies find it politic to do justice to their opponents, otherwise the acts of the Juguruthas, Schamyls, and Abd el Kaders would not have received such illustrious mention. But no courage can arrest the fate of the Sioux. They will pass away like the Iroquois, of whom only a remnant of about 7,000 persons still survives in this State.

But the interest attached to these Sioux does not so much belong to their courage and agility in war as to the tokens of intelligence which are to be found in their traditions, manners, and customs. They had tents, fishing-boats, and tackle, when first noticed, and a language which led Hennepin, Carver, and others to think they must have had an Asiatic origin. Others have suspected that they came from the West. Their neighbors of kindred race, the Mandans, living all along the Missouri for 1,800 miles, had a language that sounded like the Welsh. The Sioux had the habit of making houses in the earth like the old Troglodytes, and in their wars with other tribes would dig trenches on a field of battle to shoot from; facts that suggest the origin of the mounds of the Mississippi Valley, constructions which show something above the common order of savagery. Superstition is also a test of civilization; since even the lowest savages have no ideas of gods, or spirits of the air, beings that always grew in time from the inevitable double meanings of original speech. The Nadouessioes have their supernaturals, identified with a great number of natural objects. They had the calumet, an object never yet recognized as one of the oldest symbols of the world, Semitic, classic, or Gentile; the cross—a fact or suggestion which seems to bring the human traditions of the old and new continents very closely together, but which will meet with small credence just now.

The Dakotas have several gods or makers of things, and the names of these, such as Oanktayhee, Heyoka, and the rest, are attached to many things named somewhat like those divinities, for the savage loves a rebus or pun as well as the civilized man. They have their "medicine men," who practice their art with jugglery, as was the fashion among our own ancestors. They have, or had, their order of knighthood, which, as a preparation for war, resembled in some points the old European rites of soldiership. Their civilized condition was also indicated by the existence of a national burial-ground. This was situated in the fertile Valley of the St. Croix River, where may be found several of those mounds which have so puzzled our antiquarians. One of these, called the Wakan-tepe, is situated at Dayton's Bluff, near the Falls of St. Anthony, having a cave in which some ancient writing, marks, or hieroglyphics have been discovered. It may be noticed that the American word tebe was an ancient Egyptian term, meaning cave, temple, or house.

But the chief sign of old civilization—or comparative civilization—among the Sioux is their language, which was certainly the basis of those other traits and tokens. When they shall have vanished, like the Lenni-lenape, the Algonquins, and the rest, their language will be their monument in the fourth volume of the Smithsonian Contributions to Knowledge, which, in 1852, presented a Dakota vocabulary collected by Rev. S. R. Riggs of Lac-qui-parle. Such a language would naturally be employed in the way of oratory and poetry; and the Sioux highly respected the character of their public speakers and their makers of songs. They had songs of triumph for their scalp-dances, and dirges and coronachs for the dead. One of these last was paraphrased by the poet Schiller, and Goethe said it was one of the best things his brother bard had ever composed. This German version had subsequently the honor of being translated at different times by Sir E. B. Lytton and Sir John Herschel. Other Sioux laments of a similar sort have been recorded, all indicating the intellectual capacities of that powerful family.

The above-mentioned Dakota vocabulary tends to show what some of our best philologers have asserted, that the American languages have grown from the roots of all human speech. They especially swarm with words found on the eastern shores of the Atlantic. Our aboriginal names of persons and places can prove this in a great number of instances; and the few which shall be noticed belong to the subject of the Sioux. Socrates says, in the "Kratylus," that "the learning connected with names is by no means a slight matter;" and this may probably interest the reader in these concluding paragraphs.

The Nadouessiocs or Nadowessioucs—as the word was pronounced 200 years ago—meant the "Lake Tribes," or the "Water Tribes." The French took the last clause of the term and wrote it Sioux. Nadue or nde is the Dakota word for water, found also in the Old World. The Tibetan word for the Indus is Nudi. The ancient Italians wrote it unda. It was the old name of Lake Superior, called Conde by the Sioux—a little fact unnoticed by Gallatin, Schoolcraft, and the rest. It was also the name of another great lake—Lake Erie—the Frenchmen in this case writing it Conty. It is found in yet another lake—Ontario—which holds along with it the American term erigo or erie, meaning lake or water, as in the word "irrigate." Coming now to the other clause of Nadouessioc (sioc) we find it written in all old languages with the meaning of "people," or tribe. It is the Irish casach (progeny,) and the Tartar cosack (tribe.) It is the old English segge (a man,) which is the Breton osach. Asc was the Norse name for the first man; and the Hebrew-British tsc or ish is found in the words Spanish, Danish, &c. It may be added that the Coptic sce (a man,) terminated by the feminine vowel, gives the word scea or squaw. The Nadouessioes, no doubt, meant "People of the Lakes or Rivers," and the term was a very appropriate one. The country north and west of Lake Conde is a land of lakes and waters. The Minnesota historian, Mr. Neil, says, that to one looking down from a balloon, it would show like a great cluster of diamonds strung loosely together by a white silken thread. It may be noted that the term Nadoue is the word Canada (the lakes.) Canada is, therefore, one of the finest and truest of territorial names on the map of the world.

Having considered the true meaning of those Sioux or Soues, we may venture—though not without an interpreter—to approach their chief, termed an outlaw and renegade by some of our people, and more grotesquely named "Sitting Bull" by all the rest. His true name, let it be recorded with all philological respect, is pronounced Wrach-felula, and this name may probably be found as curious and significant in its own way as anything recently dug up from the masonry of Etruria, or traced on the gypsum slabs or baked cylinders of Knorsabad and Babylon.

Wrach-feluta is actually an old Keltic title of sovereign dignity. Wrach, in all human speech, meant "ruler." It is the Chaldean rug, (a king,) the Persian rook, the Circassian work, the Greek arch-os. The Norsemen spelled it krake, and in Old Virginia and Peru it was pronounced verwoc and curac. Coming now to feluta, we find that fallath or fuath in the Irish (polat in Cornish) meant prince and judge—both these familiar terms signifying pronouncer" originally. The compound term Reck-falluth was the title of the old King-judges who governed the races of the Keltic world, as may be seen in those ancient Irish manuscripts lately published, in tardy justice to Ireland, by the British Government. It may be further observed, with respect to felula or fallath, that the name of the King-arbiter of Hades was written or pronounced Pauto (Plouton) by the Greeks and Etruscans.

The general reader is not prepared to admit that "Sitting Bull" bears a title of old Keltic renown; he will "take the papers and reserve his decision," very naturally. Even the philologers at Yale, Bonn, or Oxford would probably reject the idea, or laugh at it. But it is, nevertheless, a matter worth studying; and there are some little side-facts that throw further light upon it. In one of his scarcely noticed foot-notes Charlevoix, writing in 1721, observes that the Sioux word for king sounded curiously like that used by the French for the same. He does not give the native term. But we now have it, and can see that the word wrach, in his ears, must have been very like the French roch or roi. Gallatin indirect proof is even better than all the direct ones. But there is another which will perhaps be considered still more curious. Wrach, however spelled, was long preserved in the memory of the Irish peasantry with the meaning of commander and leader. In the last century when they waged a sort of desultory war on their landlords, chiefly in the night time, they gave that name to those chosen to be their leaders. Everywhere their leader was Rock—or Captain Rock. The landlords thought the name a foolish one, and the people, who knew better, never cared to explain it. Thomas Moore, who wrote the history of that agrarian leader, never suspected the purport of his name. In every land and language of the world it has had the meaning of chieftainship.

If Wrach-feluta, then, be a relic of Old World antiquity it will be a very interesting matter for the philologists and ethnologists to decide how or when it could have been wafted across oceans to the riverine valleys of the Missouri and Mississippi, and other parts of this Fousang or America of the pre-historic ages. Their investigations on the subject of the ancient migrations and languages of this Continent are only just begun in a groping and guessing way; but they will have a clearer light by and by—a light derivable from the study of the American dialects. At present these are regarded as barbarous and quite unconnected with those forms of speech which all Europeans have been accustomed to venerate. People will refuse to believe that the Keltic Rock-fallath can be the Wrach-feluta of the Missouri region. But the proofs derived from speech will yet be found too strong for the doubts, and these proofs offer themselves in hundreds. One or two of them may be mentioned. The Sioux lois (the sun) is the Latin lux and the Greek elios, as well as the Keltic los, (blaze.) Again, the American word totem (tribe) is actually English, holding the ancient theu (a man) and the word team or teem, a birth or family. It is the tedeame (pregant) of the Lycian inscriptions, and it is partly visible in the Greek demos, people. A hundred such instances could be set down here, did space permit, all showing that the American and the Old World languages have had the same roots; and thus lessening the strangeness of the assertion that the old Rock-fellath again lives in the region of the Black Hills, borne bravely by the present Chief of our Sioux or Siouxs. These last (the Siouxs) as has been shown, bear a name of old historic significance when found on the fields of the Ukraine and the banks of the Don. Our Dakotas have been called the "Arabs of the West," for their restless horsemanship; but they may with a still greater propriety be termed the Cossacks of the Missouri and the Yellowstone.

THE KING AND THE PRIMA DONNA.

HOW FREDERICK THE GREAT DEALT WITH A CELEBRATED OPERA SINGER—HER HOARSENESS QUICKLY CURED.

From the Pall Mall Gazette.

There is, by the way, a curious story told of the manner in which Frederick the Great could deal where other men had failed, with a prima donna of the period who was inclined to set too little store by the public. This great artist seemed to catch a cold, which had the effect of rendering her hoarse, and consequently unable to sing whenever any body or thing had displeased her. One day a certain opera was to be performed at Berlin before the King himself. At the appointed hour the manager came forward and said, "Ladies and gentlemen, we grieve to inform you that our prima donna has a sore throat, and the representation announced cannot therefore take place." The stolid Teutonic audience seemed no whit surprised, and was moving out tranquilly, when the King rose and commanded the musicians to keep their places. The audience sat down again and waited patiently on events. In less than a quarter of an hour the manager reappeared, and spoke as follows: "Ladies and gentlemen, I have the most unfeigned pleasure in informing you that our prima donna is completely cured of her sore throat and will have the honor to sing before you to-night." Sure enough the famous singer soon appeared, and never had she sung better. Her triumph was complete. The King's prescription had been a very simple one. The prima donna, having dismissed the unhappy manager, was sitting comfortably before the fire in her own room, and rather pleased at the idea of having spoiled the pleasure of several hundreds of persons, when the door was violently thrown open, and there entered an officer, followed by four dragoons. "Mademoiselle," quoth the officer, "the King, my master, has sent me to ask after your health." "The King is very good; I have a bad sore throat." "His Majesty knows it, and has charged me to take you at once to the military hospital, where you will be cured in a few days." Mademoiselle turned pale. "You are jesting," she simpered; but Prussian officers, she was informed, never jested. The Lieutenant gave the order to his men, who seized Mademoiselle and carried her out of the theatre. A coach was in attendance; the lady was deposited therein; the officer took his place beside her, after shouting the address to the driver—"The military hospital," and off they went, the dragoons riding alongside. In a few seconds. "Stay," said the lady; "I think I feel better." "The King is anxious, Mademoiselle, that you should feel quite restored, and even that you should sing to-night." "I will try," murmured the prisoner. "Back to the theatre," cried the officer to the coachman. Arrived there, Mademoiselle began to think she had yielded too easily. "I will sing, since his Majesty commands me," she said, "but God knows how." "You will sing," replied the officer, "like the great artist you are." "I shall sing like an artist with a bad cold." "I think not." "And why?" "Because a couple of dragoons will be in attendance behind the scenes, and at the least couac they have orders to arrest you and carry you off again to the military hospital." The hoarseness was now completely gone.

A CLERGYMAN'S LAST FAREWELL.

WHY REV. J. APPLE

SHIPPING.

WHITE STAR LINE.
FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL CARRYING UNITED STATES MAIL.

The steamers of this line take the same routes recommended by Lieut. Maury, U. S. N., going south of the Banks on the passage to Queenstown all the year round.

CELTIC.....SATURDAY, Feb. 3, 8:30 A. M.
ADRIATIC.....SATURDAY, Feb. 10, at 9 P. M.
BRITANNIC.....SATURDAY, Feb. 24, 2 P. M.
CELTIC.....SATURDAY, March 10, at 2 P. M.

From White Star Dock, Pier No. 52 North River.

These steamers are uniform in size and unsurpassed in appointments. The saloon, staterooms, smoking and bath rooms are amidships, where the noise and motion are least felt, affording a degree of comfort hitherto unattainable at sea.

Rates—Saloon $80 and $100, gold; return tickets on favorable terms; steerage, $28.

For inspection of plans and other information apply at the Company's offices, No. 37 Broadway, New-York.

J. J. DIDERIK, Agent.

CUNARD LINE B. & N. A. R. M. S. P. CO.
NOTICE.

With the view of diminishing the chances of collision the steamers of this line take a specified course for all seasons of the year.

On the outward passage from Queenstown to New-York or Boston, crossing meridian of 50 at 42 latitude, or nothing to the north of 43.

On the homeward passage, crossing the meridian of 0 at 42, or nothing to the north of 43.

FROM NEW-YORK FOR LIVERPOOL AND QUEENSTOWN.
ABYSSINIA...WED., Jan. 31 PARTHIA...WED., Feb. 14
ALGERIA...WED., Feb. 7 CHINA...WED., Feb. 21

Steamers marked * do not carry steerage passengers. Cabin passage, $80, $100, and $130, gold, according to accommodation. Return tickets on favorable terms. Steerage tickets to and from all parts of Europe at very low rates. Freight and passage office, No. 4 Bowling Green. CHAS. G. FRANCKLYN, Agent.

GREAT SOUTHERN
FREIGHT AND PASSENGER LINE.
SAILING FROM PIER NO. 29 NORTH RIVER.

WEDNESDAYS and SATURDAYS at 3 P. M.

FOR CHARLESTON, S. C., FLORIDA, THE SOUTH, AND SOUTH-WEST.

CITY OF ATLANTA.....SATURDAY.....Jan. 27
GEO. W. CLYDE.....WEDNESDAY.....Jan. 31

SUPERIOR PASSENGER ACCOMMODATIONS.

Insurance to destination one-half of one per cent.

Goods forwarded free of commission. Passenger tickets and bills of lading issued and attended at the office of

JAMES W. QUINTARD & CO., Agents,
No. 177 West st., corner Warren.
Or W. P. CLYDE & CO., No. 6 Bowling Green.
Or BENTLEY & HASELL, General Agent
Great Southern Freight Line, 317 Broadway.

STATE LINE.
NEW-YORK TO GLASGOW, LIVERPOOL, DUBLIN, BELFAST AND LONDONDERRY.

These first-class full-powered steamers will sail from Pier No. 42 North River, foot of Canal st.

STATE OF GEORGIA.....Thursday, Jan. 25
STATE OF INDIANA.....Thursday, Feb. 1
STATE OF PENNSYLVANIA.....Thursday, Feb. 8
STATE OF VIRGINIA.....Thursday, Feb. 22

First cabin, $60, $75, and $70, according to accommodations; return tickets, $110 and $125. Second cabin, $45; return tickets, $80. Steerage at lowest rates. Apply to

AUSTIN BALDWIN & CO., Agents,
No. 72 Broadway, New-York.

STEERAGE tickets at No. 45 Broadway, and at the company's pier, foot of Canal st., North River.

LIVERPOOL AND GREAT WESTERN STEAM COMPANY. (LIMITED)
LIVERPOOL (Via Queenstown)
CARRYING THE UNITED STATES MAILS.

TUESDAY.

Leaving Pier No. 48 North River as follows:

WISCONSIN.....Jan. 30, at 3 P. M.
WYOMING.....Feb. 6, at noon
DAKOTA.....Feb. 13, at 3 P. M.
NEVADA.....Feb. 20, at 10 A. M.
IDAHO.....Feb. 27, at 3 P. M.
MONTANA.....March 6, at 10 A. M.

RATES OF PASSENGERS REDUCED.

Steerage, $26; intermediate, $40; cabin, $65 to $80, according to state-room. Offices, No. 29 Broadway.

WILLIAMS & GUION.

ATLAN MAIL LINE.
BI-MONTHLY SERVICE TO JAMAICA, HAYTI, COLOMBIA, and ASPINWALL, and to PANAMA and SOUTH PACIFIC PORTS (via Aspinwall.) First-class full-powered iron screw steamers, from Pier No. 51 North River:

For HAYTI, COLOMBIA, ISTHMUS OF PANAMA, and SOUTH PACIFIC PORTS (via Aspinwall.)

ALPS.....Jan. 18
ETNA.....Jan. 27

For KINGSTON (Jam.) and HAYTI.

ATLAS.....Feb. 8

Superior first-class passenger accommodations. PIM, FORWOOD & CO., Agents, No. 56 Wall st.

NORTH GERMAN LLOYD.
STEAM-SHIP LINE BETWEEN NEW-YORK SOUTHAMPTON, AND BREMEN.

Company's Pier, foot of First st., Hoboken.

AMERICA....Sat., Jan. 27 | RHEIN.....Sat. Feb. 10
WESER.....Sat., Feb. 3 | ODER.....Sat., Feb. 17

RATES OF PASSAGE FROM NEW-YORK TO SOUTHAMPTON, HAVRE, OR BREMEN.

First cabin.....$100 gold
Second cabin.....60 gold
Steerage.....30 currency

Return tickets at reduced rates. Prepaid steerage certificates, $32 currency. For freight or passage apply to OELRICHS & CO., No. 2 Bowling Green.

INMAN LINE.—MAIL STEAMERS.
FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.

CITY OF BERLIN, Saturday, Jan. 27, at 2 P. M.
CITY OF CHESTER, Saturday, Feb. 17, at 7:30 A. M.
CITY OF RICHMOND, Saturday, March 3, at 8 A. M.

From Pier 45 North River.

CABIN, $80 and $100, Gold. Return tickets on favorable terms. STEERAGE, $24, Currency. Drafts at lowest rates.

Saloons, State-rooms, Smoking, and Bath-rooms amidships.

JOHN G. DALE, Agent,
Nos. 15 and 33 Broadway, N. Y.

ONLY DIRECT LINE TO FRANCE.
THE GENERAL TRANSATLANTIC COMPANY'S MAIL STEAMERS BETWEEN NEW-YORK AND HAVRE.
Calling at PLYMOUTH (G. B.) for the landing of Passengers.

Will sail from Pier No. 42 North River, foot of Morton st., every alternate Saturday, beginning with:

FRANCE, Trudelle.....Saturday, Jan. 27, at 3 P. M.

For particulars address
LOUIS DE BEBIAN, Agent, No. 55 Broadway.

NATIONAL LINE—Piers 44 and 51 North River.
FOR LONDON.
HOLLAND.....SATURDAY, Jan. 27, 2:30 P. M.
FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.
Spain...Jan. 27, 2:30 P. M. | Egypt....Feb. 3, at 9 A. M.

Cabin and steerage passage, and drafts from £1 upward, issued at very low rates. Company's offices No. 69 Broadway. F. W. J. HURST, Manager.

FOR SAVANNAH GA.,
THE FLORIDA PORTS,
AND THE SOUTH AND SOUTH-WEST.

GREAT SOUTHERN FREIGHT AND PASSENGER LINE, CENTRAL RAILROAD OF GEORGIA, AND ATLANTIC AND GULF RAILROAD.

WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY.

H. LIVINGSTON, Capt. MALLORY, WEDNESDAY, Jan. 31, Pier No. 43 North River, 3 P. M. GEO. YONGE, Agent, No. 409 Broadway.

SAM R. STARKS, Capt. NICKERSON, SATURDAY, Feb. 3, Pier 43 North River, 3 P. M. GEO. YONGE, Agt., 409 Broadway.

GENERAL BARNES, Capt. CRESSWAY, WEDNESDAY, Feb. 7, Pier 16 East River, 3 P. M. MURRAY, FERRIS & CO., Agts., 62 South st.

SAN JACINTO, Capt. HAZARD, SATURDAY, Feb. 10, Pier 43 North River, 3 P. M. GEO. YONGE, Agt., 409 Broadway.

Insurance ONE-HALF PER CENT. Superior accommodations for passengers. Through rates and bills of lading in connection with Central R. R. of Georgia, Atlantic and Gulf Railroad, and Florida steamers City Point and Dictator; also, with the steamer J. B. SCOTLER, which has been placed on the inside route from Savannah to Florida, and offers unsurpassed accommodations.

C. D. OWENS, Agent A. & G. R. R. No. 315 Broadway.
GEORGE YONGE, Agent C. R. R. of Ga., No. 409 Broadway.

FLORIDA.

Caution to travelers! Great reduction in fare via the inland route, from Savannah to all Florida ports. Only $2 to Jacksonville. Meals and state-rooms extra. The elegant steamer J. B. SCHUYLER makes close connection with all Savannah steamers, thus forming the quickest and most agreeable route as well as the lowest in fare. Accommodations for passengers unsurpassed. Travelers are cautioned against purchasing through tickets via any other route.

PACIFIC MAIL AND PANAMA TRANSIT STEAM-SHIP LINES.

FOR CALIFORNIA, JAPAN, CHINA, AUSTRALIA, NEW-ZEALAND, BRITISH COLUMBIA, OREGON, &c.

Sailing from Pier No. 42 North River.

For SAN FRANCISCO, via ISTHMUS OF PANAMA.

Steam-ship ACAPULCO.....Wednesday, Jan. 31

connecting for Central America and South Pacific ports.

From SAN FRANCISCO to JAPAN and CHINA.

Steam-ship ALASKA.....Thursday, Feb. 1

From San Francisco to Sandwich Islands, Australia, New-Zealand.

Steam-ship ZEALANDIA.....Wednesday, Jan. 31

For freight or passage apply to
WM. P. CLYDE & CO., or H. J. BULLAY, Superintendent, No. 6 Bowling Green, Pier No. 42 N. R., foot Canal st.

NEW-YORK AND HAVANA DIRECT MAIL LINE.

These first-class steamships sail regularly at 3 P. M., from Pier No. 13 North River as follows:

CLYDE.....SATURDAY, Feb. 3
CUBA.....SATURDAY.....Feb. 10

Accommodations unsurpassed. For freight or passage apply to WM. P. CLYDE & CO., No. 6 Bowling Green., McKELLER, LULING & CO., Agents in Havana.

NEW-YORK, HAVANA AND MEXICAN MAIL S. S. LINE.
Steamers leave Pier No. 3 North River at 3 P. M.

FOR HAVANA DIRECT.

CITY OF MERIDA.....Saturday, Jan. 27
CITY OF VERA CRUZ.....Wednesday, Jan. 31
CITY OF NEW-YORK.....Wednesday, Feb. 7

FOR VERA CRUZ AND NEW-ORLEANS.
Via Havana, Progreso, Campeachy, Tuxpan, and Tampico.

CITY OF MERIDA.....Saturday, Jan. 27

Steamers will leave New-Orleans Feb. 2 and Feb. 23 for Vera Cruz and all the above ports.

For freight or passage apply to
MALLORY BROS. & SONS, Nos. 31 and 33 Broadway.

HAMBURG American Packet Company's line, for PLYMOUTH, CHERBOURG and HAMBURG.
WIELAND.....Feb. 1 | GELLERT.....Feb. 15
FRISIA.....Feb. 8 | POMMERANIA.....Feb. 22

Rates of passage to Plymouth, London, Cherbourg, Hamburg, and all points in England, First Cabin, $100 gold; Second Cabin, $60 gold. Steerage, $30, currency

KUNHARDT & CO., C. B. RICHARD & BRO.,
General Agents, 61 Broadway, N. Y. Assistant Passenger Agents, Broadway, N. Y.

SHIPPING.

ANCHOR LINE U. S. MAIL STEAMERS.
NEW-YORK AND GLASGOW

Ethiopia...Jan. 27, 2 P. M. | Bolivia...Feb. 10, 2 P. M.
Victoria...Feb. 3, 2 A. M. | Alsatia...Feb. 17, 2 A. M.

TO GLASGOW, LIVERPOOL, OR DERRY.

Cabins $65 to $80, according to accommodations; intermediate, $35; Steerage $26.

NEW-YORK AND LONDON.

Elysia...Jan. 27, 2 P. M. | Italia...Feb. 10, 2 P. M.

Cabins, $55 to $70. Steerage, $28. Cabin excursion tickets at reduced rates. Drafts issued for any amount at current rates. Company's Pier Nos. 20 and 21, North River, N. Y.

HENDERSON BROTHERS,
Agents, No. 7 Bowling Green.

RAILROADS.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.
GREAT TRUNK LINE
AND UNITED STATES MAIL ROUTE.

Trains leave New-York, via Desbrosses and Cortlandt Streets Ferries, as follows:

Express for Harrisburg, Pittsburg, the West and South, with Sleeping Cars attached, 8:30 A. M., 6 and 8:30 P. M., daily.

For Williamsport, Lock Haven, Corry, and Erie, at 8:30 P. M., connecting at Corry for Titusville, Petroleum Centre, and the Oil Regions. For Williamsport and Lock Haven, 8:30 A. M.

For Baltimore, Washington, and the South, "Limited Washington Express" of Pullman Parlor Cars only, 9:30 A. M.; arrive Washington 4:10 P. M. Regular at 8:40 A. M., 1, 6, and 9 P. M. Sunday, 6 and 9 P. M.

Express for Philadelphia, 7: 30, 8:30, 8:40, (9:30 Limited,) 10:30 A. M., 4:10, 5:10, and 10:20 P. M. Sunday, 8:30 A. M., 5, 9, 7, 8:30, and 9 P. M.

Emigrant and second-class, 7 P. M.

Accommodation for Trenton, 7 A. M., 2 and 4:10 P. M.

For trains to Newark, Elizabeth, Rahway, Princeton, Trenton, Perth Amboy, Flemington, Belvidere, and other points, see local schedules at all Ticket Offices.

Trains arrive: From Pittsburg, 6:20 and 10:30 A. M., and 10:20 P. M. daily; 10:10 A. M. and 6:50 P. M. daily, except Monday. From Washington and Baltimore, 6:30, 9:50 A. M., 4:10, 5:10, and 10:20 P. M. Sunday, 6:30, 9:50 A. M. From Philadelphia, 3:05, 6:20, 6:30, 9:50, 10:10, 11:50 A. M., 2:10, 4:10, 5:10, 6:50, 8:40, 10:10, and 10:20 P. M. Sunday 5:05, 6:20, 6:30, 9:50, 11:50, A. M., 6:50, 10:10, and 10:20 P. M.

Ticket Offices, Nos. 526 and 944 Broadway, No. 1 Astor House, and foot of Desbrosses and Cortlandt streets; No. 4 Court street, Brooklyn; Nos. 114, 116, and 118 Hudson street, Hoboken; Depot, Jersey City. Emigrant Ticket Office, No. 3 Battery place.

FRANK THOMSON, Gen'l Manager. D. M. BOYD, Jr., General Passenger Agent.

TO PHILADELPHIA
via
PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.
THE OLD-ESTABLISHED ROUTE AND SHORT LINE

NEW-YORK AND PHILADELPHIA.

14 Through Trains each way daily; 3 Depots in Philadelphia, 2 in New-York.

4 Tracks, the most Improved Equipment, and the Fastest Time consistent with absolute safety.

Express Trains leave New-York, via Desbrosses and Cortlandt streets Ferries, as follows:

7:30, 8:30, 8:40, (9:30 Limited,) 10:30 A. M., 1, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8:30, 9 P. M., and 12 Midnight. Sunday, 8:30 A. M., 5, 6, 7, 8:30, and 9 P. M.

Returning, trains leave Philadelphia 3:20, 3:30, 7, 7:30, 8:30, and 11 A. M., (Limited Express, 1:35 P. M.,) 1:40, 4, 5:30, 7, and 7:35 P. M., and 12 Midnight. On Sundays, 3:20, 8:30, A. M., 4, 7, 7:35 P. M., and 12 Midnight.

Ticket Offices, Nos. 526 and 944 Broadway, No. 1 Astor House, and foot of Desbrosses and Cortlandt sts.; No. 4 Court st., Brooklyn; Nos. 114, 116, and 118 Hudson st., Hoboken; Depot, Jersey City. Emigrant Ticket Office, No. 3 Battery place.

FRANK THOMSON, D. M. BOYD, Jr., General Manager. General Passenger Agent.

NEW-YORK CENTRAL AND HUDSON RIVER RAILROAD.—Commencing Dec. 26, 1876, through trains will leave Grand Central Depot:

7:15 A. M., Western and Northern Express, with drawing-room cars to Canandaigua.

8:30 A. M., special Chicago and St. Louis Express, with drawing-room cars to Rochester and Buffalo. Also, through cars to St. Louis.

11:00 A. M., North-rn and Western Express.

3:30 P. M., special Albany, Troy and Western Express arrives at Buffalo 7:10 A. M.

5:00 P. M., Express, with sleeping cars, for Watertown and Canandaigua. Also for Montreal via Plattsburg.

8:30 P. M., Pacific Express, daily, with sleeping cars, for Rochester, Niagara Falls, Buffalo, Cleveland, Indianapolis, and Louisville. Also for Chicago, via both L. S. and M. C. Railroads, and to Montreal via St. Albans.

11:00 P. M., Express, with sleeping cars, for Albany and Troy, trains as per New Times Tables.

Tickets for sale at Nos. 252, 261, and 413 Broadway, and at Westcott Express Company's offices, Nos. 7 Park place, 785 and 942 Broadway New-York, and 333 Washington st., Brooklyn.

C. B. MEEKER, General Passenger Agent.

ERIE RAILWAY.
Winter Arrangement of through trains. From Chambers Street Depot. (For 23d st. see note below.)

9:00 A. M., daily, except Sundays, Cincinnati and Chicago Day Express. Drawing-room coaches to Buffalo.

10:45 A. M., daily, except Sundays, Express Mail for Buffalo and Intermediate Stations. Sleeping coach to Buffalo.

7:00 P. M., daily, Pacific Express to the West. Sleeping coaches through to Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Cincinnati, and Chicago without change. Hotel dining-coaches to Chicago.

7:00 P. M., except Sundays, Western Emigrant train. Above trains leave Twenty-third Street Ferry at 8:45 and 10:45 A. M., and 6:45 P. M.

For local trains see time-tables and cards in hotels and depots.

JNO. N. ABBOTT, General Passenger Agent.

NEW-YORK, NEW-HAVEN, AND HARTFORD RAILROAD.

After Dec. 10, 1876, trains leave Grand Central Depot (42d st.) for New-Canaan Railroad at 8:05 A. M., 1, 4:40 P. M.; Danbury and Norwalk Railroad at 8:05 A. M., 1, and 4:40 P. M.; Naugatuck Railroad at 8:05 A. M. and 1 P. M.; Housatonic Railroad at 8:05 A. M., and 3 P. M.; New-Haven and Northampton Railroad at 8:05 A. M., and 3 P. M.; for Newport at 8:05 A. M. and 1 P. M.; Boston and Albany Railroad at 8:05 and 11 A. M., 3 and 8 P. M. (9 P. M. on Sunday;) Boston, (via Shore Line,) at 1 and 10 P. M., (10 P. M. on Sundays.) Boston and New-York Air Line, 8 A. M., 1 and 11:35 P. M.

Way trains as per local time-tables.

LEHIGH VALLEY RAILROAD.
ARRANGEMENT. PASSENGER TRAINS. JAN. 1, 1877.

Leave depots foot of Cortlandt and Debrosses sts., at 6:30 P. M.—Night Express, daily, for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Wilkesbarre, Pittston, Sayre, Elmira, Ithaca, Auburn, Rochester, Buffalo, Niagara Falls, and the West. Pullman's sleeping coaches attached.

General Eastern office corner Church and Cortlandt sts. CHARLES H. CUMMINGS, Agent.
ROBERT H. SAYER, Superintendent and Engineer.

WICKFORD RAILROAD ROUTE TO NEWPORT, R. I.—Passengers for this line take 8:05 A. M. and 1 P. M. express trains from Grand Central Depot, arriving at 4:18 and 8 P. M. at Newport.

THEODORE WARREN, Superintendent.

STEAMBOATS.

STONINGTON LINE
FOR BOSTON AND ALL POINTS EAST.
REDUCED FARE.

Elegant steamers leave Pier No. 33 North River, foot of Jay st., at 4:30 P. M.

Tickets for sale at all principal ticket offices. State-rooms secured at offices of Westcott Express Company and at No. 363 Broadway.

PROVIDENCE LINE.

Freight only, steamers leave Pier No. 27 North River, foot of Park place, at 4 P. M. Freights via either line taken at lowest rates.

D. S. BROOKS, Pres. L. W. FILKINS, G. P. Agent

NEW-HAVEN, HARTFORD AND THE NORTH.—Steamer leaves Peck slip for New-Haven at 3 P. M., (except Sundays,) connecting with road.

FOR BRIDGEPORT AND ALL POINTS ON Housatonic and Naugatuck Railroad.—Fare $1. Steamers leave Catharine slip at 11:30 A. M.

ELECTIONS.

MISSOURI PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY,
OFFICE, No. 6 BOWLING GREEN,
NEW-YORK, Jan. 25, 1877.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THE annual meeting of the stockholders of the Missouri Pacific Railway Company will be held at the office of the company, in St. Louis, Mo., on TUESDAY, the 6th day of March, 1877, at 12 o'clock M., for the election of thirteen Directors for the ensuing year, and for the transaction of any other business that may come before the meeting.

The annual meeting of the Board of Directors will be held at the same office on WEDNESDAY, the 7th day of March, 1877, at 12 o'clock M.

The transfer-books will be closed on the afternoon of the 3d day of February, and will be reopened on the morning of the 8th day of March, 1877.

C. K. GARRISON, President.

C. L. WHITE, Secretary.

DELAWARE, LACKAWANNA AND WESTERN RAILROAD COMPANY, No. 26 EXCHANGE PLACE,
NEW-YORK, Jan. 26, 1877.

THE ANNUAL ELECTION OF OFFICERS and managers of this company will be held at this office, on TUESDAY, the 20th day of February, prox., at 10 o'clock A. M.

Polls will be open between 10 and 11 o'clock.

Transfer-books will be closed from 31st January until 21st February.

A. J. ODELL, Secretary.

THE ANNUAL MEETING OF STOCKHOLDERS of the Maryland Coal Company for the election of a President and ten Directors, and for such other business as may come before the meeting, will be held at the company's office, No. 111 Broadway, Feb. 6, at 11 A. M. Polls open from 12 M. till 1 P. M.

S. T. ROBB, Secretary.

DANCING.

ALLEN DODWORTH'S DANCING SCHOOL REMOVED TO NO. 681 5TH AVENUE.

Now open for the reception of pupils.

For particulars send for circular.

Private lessons every day.

DE GARMO'S
PRIVATE DANCING ACADEMY,
No. 7 West 52d st., two doors from 5th av.

DIAMOND'S DANCING SCHOOL, ADELPHI BUILDING, BROADWAY AND 52D ST.—Private lessons every day given FREE to all joining the classes.

WATCHES, JEWELRY, &C.

MONEY ON DIAMONDS, WATCHES, &c.—Diamonds, Watches, Jewelry, Silverware, Camels' Hair Shawls, Silks, Cloths, &c., bought and sold; cash at a very small advance. Great bargains: one Camels' Hair shawl, $100; one Seal-skin Sacque, $40; one Seal Cap, $5. GEORGE C. ALLEN, Jeweler, No. 1,190 Broadway, near 29th st.

WATCHES AND JEWELRY REPAIRED by first-class workmen. GEORGE C. ALLEN, No. 1,190 Broadway, near 29th st.

MONEY IN ANY AMOUNT, LARGE OR small, loans. G. C. ALLEN, jeweler, No. 1,190 Broadway, near 29th st.

FINANCIAL.

VERMILYE & CO.
BANKERS
16 and 18 Nassau st., New-York.

DEALERS IN ALL ISSUES OF GOVERNMENT SECURITIES,
NEW-YORK CITY
AND BROOKLYN BONDS.
BUY AND SELL ON COMMISSION
RAILWAY STOCKS, BONDS, AND GOLD.

INTEREST ON DEPOSITS.

JAS. A. TROWBRIDGE, DONALD MACKAY
LATHAM A. FISH

Choice and Safe Investments.
7, 8, AND 10 PER CENT.
CITY AND COUNTY MUNICIPAL BONDS.
FIRST MORTGAGE RAILROAD BONDS.
CITY RAILROAD STOCKS AND BONDS.
INSURANCE AND BANK STOCKS.
GAS-LIGHT STOCKS AND BONDS.
STRICTLY FIRST-CLASS SECURITIES.
PAYING 10 TO 15 PER CENT.
INTEREST ALWAYS PROMPTLY PAID.
For sale at desirable prices by

Albert H. Nicolay & Co.,
NO. 43 PINE ST., NEW-YORK.

N. B.—INVESTMENT SECURITIES OUR SPECIALTY 26 YEARS.

WABASH RAILWAY COMPANY.
NOTICE TO BONDHOLDERS.

The holders of the following First Mortgage Divisional Bonds of the Wabash Railway, viz:

Toledo and Illinois Railroad Company.
Lake Erie, Wabash and St. Louis Railroad Company.
Great Western Railroad Company.
Illinois and Southern Iowa Railroad Company.

On presentation, on Feb. 1, of the past due and current coupons to the Metropolitan National Bank, will receive therefor cash for the coupons due Feb. 1, 1877, and a certificate of deposit bearing interest for those past due.

For further information and particulars in regard to all classes of bonds, inquiry may be made of JAMES A. ROOSEVELT, President Wabash Railway Company, No. 32 Pine st., or of the Purchasing Committee, No. 52 William st., New-York.

New-York, Jan. 26, 1877.

CINCINNATI 7 3/10 PER CENT
MUNICIPAL BONDS, DUE 1906. A LIMITED AMOUNT FOR SALE BY

KUHN, LOEB & CO., NO. 31 NASSAU ST.

WANTED,
North Carolina Bonds issued to North Carolina Railroad Company,
South Carolina Consols,
Louisiana Consols,
New-Orleans and Jackson first mortgage bonds,
Mississippi Central first and second mortgage bonds,
Greenville and Columbia guaranteed bonds,
Arkansas Levee bonds,
Mobile and Ohio sterling bonds,
Mobile and Ohio interest bonds,
by ARENTS & YOUNG,
No. 9 New st.

THE GOLD MORTGAGE BONDHOLDERS' Committee are now prepared to purchase all or any portion of the outstanding thirty-two Gold Mortgage Bonds of the Toledo, Wabash and Western Railway Company, for the sum of $580 68 per bond, which is the amount of the dividend in cash arising from the sale under the foreclosure proceedings. All of the holders of any of these bonds wish to join the other condho ders and share in the sale made to the new parties, they may do so, provided they notify us by the 15th day of February. Apply to W. J. POST, Secretary of the Foreclosure Committee, at the office of Perkins, Livingston, Post & Co., No. 23 Nassau st.

NEW-YORK, Jan. 27, 1877.

HOTCHKISS & BURNHAM,
(Members New-York Stock Exchange,)
COMMISSION STOCK BROKERS,
No. 36 Broad st., New-York. Stocks, bonds, and gold bought and sold on margin or for cash. Branch offices in Fifth Avenue Hotel and Windsor Hotels connected by our private telegraph lines. Accounts solicited.

AN EXPERIENCED STOCK BROKER will conduct operations at the New York Stock Exchange for others, (For 23d st. see note below.) who are unable to watch the market; no commission charged unless profit is shown. For particulars address CAUTION, Box No. 321 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

UNITED STATES EXPRESS COMPANY,
TREASURER'S OFFICE, No. 32 BROADWAY,
NEW-YORK, Jan. 27, 1877.

THE TRANSFER-BOOKS OF THIS COMpany will be closed Feb. 3, at 2 P. M., and reopened Feb. 16. THEO. F. WOOD, Treasurer.

A. C. BURNHAM, NO. 33 PINE ST., NEW-YORK. Sells at highest securities paying eight per cent. for sale. Western mortgages a specialty for sixteen years. References in New-York, Boston, Hartford, and Philadelphia. Send for lists.

BROWN BROTHERS & CO.,
NO. 59 WALL ST.,
ISSUE COMMERCIAL AND TRAVELLERS' CREDITS AVAILABLE IN all PARTS of the WORLD.

AT REASONABLE RATES—MONEY ON LIFE and endowment insurance policies and mortgages; same bought; insurances of all kinds effected with best companies. J. J. HABBICH & CO., 119 Broadway.

WANTED—$7,500, AMPLY SECURED, FOR THREE years; 12 per cent., payable monthly; in a lucrative, established business. Address SECURITY, Box No. 111 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, 1,257 BROADWAY.

KOUNTZE BROTHERS, BANKERS, NO. 12 Wall st., issue letters of credit on the Union Bank of London, available in all parts of the world.

DIVIDENDS.

DIVIDEND.
OFFICE OF THE

Brewers' and Maltsters' Insurance Co.

No. 139 Broadway, New-York, Jan. 24, 1877.

The Board of Directors have this day declared a semi-annual dividend of

FIVE (5) PER CENT.,

payable Feb. 1. WM. B. OGDEN, Secretary.

Fiftieth Dividend.

CLINTON
FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY,
NO. 156 BROADWAY.
NEW-YORK, Jan. 4, 1877.

The usual semi-annual Dividend of TEN PER CENT. is payable on demand. G. T. PATTERSON, Jr., Secretary.

OFFICE OF THE NEW-YORK, PROVIDENCE AND BOSTON RAILROAD COMPANY, (STONINGTON RAILROAD.)
NEW-YORK, Jan. 25, 1877.

A QUARTERLY DIVIDEND OF TWO AND one-half per cent., out of the earnings of the past three months, will be paid at the office of Messrs. M. Morgan's Sons, No. 39 William st., New-York, on the 15th day of February.

The transfer-books will be closed from the 1st to the 10th, both inclusive. F. B. NOYES, Secretary.

CAPITAL, $200,000.
ST. NICHOLAS INSURANCE COMPANY,
No. 166 BROADWAY,
NEW-YORK, Jan. 26, 1877.

THE USUAL SEMI-ANNUAL DIVIDEND of Five per Cent. has been declared, payable on and after the 1st day of February, 1877.

JACOB DU BOIS, Secretary.

MISSOURI PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY,
OFFICE No. 6 BOWLING GREEN,
NEW-YORK, Jan. 25, 1877.

THE COUPONS DUE FEB. 1, 1877, ON THE first mortgage bonds of the Pacific Railroad Company (of Missouri) will be paid on and after that date, at the office of this company.

C. K. GARRISON, President.

BOSTON AND NEW-YORK AIR-LINE RAILROAD COMPANY,
TREASURER'S OFFICE, No. 12 WALL ST.,
NEW-YORK, Jan. 25, 1877.

THE INTEREST DUE FEB. 1, 1877, ON the First Mortgage Bonds of the Boston and New-York Air-line Railroad Company will be paid at the office of Hatch & Foote, No. 12 Wall st.

D. B. HATCH, Treasurer.

NEW-YORK, Jan. 22, 1877.

COUPONS.—THE COUPONS OF THE FIRST mortgage bonds of the Columbus and Toledo Railroad Company, due on the 1st day of February next, will be paid on and after that date at the 8t. Nicholas National Bank. M. M. GREENE, President.

THE FEBRUARY COUPONS OF THE REAL Estate First Mortgage Bonds, guaranteed by the Mercantile Trust Company, will be paid at the office of the company, Equitable Building, No. 120 Broadway, on the 1st day of February next.

E. T. MONTGOMERY, Treasurer.

CORN EXCHANGE BANK, NEW-YORK, Jan. 24, 1877.

THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS HAVE DEclared a dividend of Five per Cent., payable Feb. 1, 1877. The transfer-books will be closed from the 24th inst. to 1st proximo. By order

WM. A. NASH, Cashier.

SAVINGS BANKS.

SIX-PENNY SAVINGS BANK,
BROADWAY AND ASTOR PLACE.

FORTY-SEVENTH SEMI-ANNUAL DIVIDEND.

The Trustees have ordered a dividend at the rate of FIVE PER CENT. per annum, out of the earnings of the last six months, to be credited to the accounts of all depositors entitled thereto, subject to draft on and after the 20th February. If not called for, the same will be entitled to interest from the 1st February.

Money deposited up to the 10th February will also draw interest from the 1st of said month.

WM. MILES, President.

A. C. COLLINS, Secretary.
E. G. MATURIN, Assistant Secretary.

ICE-CREAM.
HORTON'S ICE-CREAM.

Made from PURE ORANGE COUNTY CREAM, appreciated for its purity, richness, and certainty of being delivered in good order.

Charlotte Russe and Jelly, delicious and cheap.

Nos. 305 4th av., 1,264 Broadway, and 56 Cheetham st.

BOARDING AND LODGING.

THE UP-TOWN OFFICE OF THE TIMES is located at No. 1,257 Broadway, bet. 31st and 32d sts. Open daily, Sundays included, from 4 A. M. to 9 P. M. Subscriptions received, and copies of THE TIMES for sale.

ADVERTISEMENTS RECEIVED UNTIL 9 P. M.

A PRIVATE FAMILY WILL LET A PARLOR and bedroom on second floor, front; handsomely furnished; everything first-class; private breakfast if desired; convenient to Belmont's, Madison square. Address HOME, Box No. 269 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

FORTY-SECOND ST., NEAR BROADWAY.—Two front rooms on third floor and large front room on fourth, with board; private family; no other boarders; terms moderate. Address AJAX, Box No. 152 Times Office.

NOS. 51 AND 53 WEST 25TH ST., NEAR MADISON SQUARE.—Handsomely furnished rooms on second floor; private table if required; bath, large closets, &c.; also pleasant room for gentlemen; table and house strictly first class.

FORTY-THIRD ST., NEAR BROADWAY.—Two elegantly-furnished rooms, with board, to gentlemen and wives, or single gentlemen; references. Address Private Family, Box No. 279 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

PRIVATE FAMILY CAN ACCOMMODATE one or two first-class families willing to pay fairly for superior board in an elegant house and appointments. Address AVENUE, Box No. 260 TIMES UPTOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

NO. 930 BROADWAY.—MRS. MARIA COLVILLE begs to inform her friends that she has opened "Our Boarding-house," No. 930 Broadway; first-class accommodation; select company.

FIFTH AV., NO. 309.—TWO SUNNY BACK rooms, third floor, for single gentlemen or family; also, rooms on fourth floor; table and location unexceptionable.

NO. 434 5TH AV.

A choice suite of apartments for a small family, or two or three gentlemen, with private table, bath, &c.

FIFTH AV., NO. 208.—CHESTERFIELD HOUSE, MADISON SQUARE.—Parlor and bedroom; private bath, closet, &c.; house, board, and appointments strictly first class. JOHN P. WORSTELL.

NO. 147 WEST 22D ST.—TO LET TO A PHYsician or small family, a suite of three rooms on first floor, with or without board; also, a handsome front room, with alcove.

NO. 6 EAST 34TH ST.—ROOMS WITH BOARD; house newly furnished and painted throughout; prices moderate.

FIFTH AV., NO. 45, BETWEEN 11TH AND 12TH STS.—Spacious suite of well-furnished apartments on parlor floor, with or without private table.

NO. 30 WAVERLEY PLACE.—PLEASANT rooms; with or without board; good board; terms reasonable; single or in suite; references.

THIRTY-FOURTH ST., NO. 236, WEST.—Handsomely-furnished rooms for families or gentlemen, with board; references.

FIFTH AV., NO. 351.—PARLOR FLOOR, BEAUtifully furnished, piano, private bath, &c.; excellent table; liberal terms.

NO. 48 WEST 15TH ST.—VERY DESIRABLE rooms, with good table, to responsible parties; terms moderate; highest references given.

NO. 21 5TH AV.—PLEASANT THIRD-STORY front room and bedroom to let, with first-class board; also, large room on parlor floor; reference.

THIRTY-EIGHTH ST., NO. 207 WEST.—Rooms, with board; house and location unexceptionable; references.

FIFTH AV., NO. 511, CORNER 43D ST.—A furnished apartment will be vacated; French table d'hôte; appointments strictly first class.

NO. 7 GRAMERCY PARK.—TWO DESIRABLE rooms, furnished or unfurnished, and with or without board.

NO. 46 WEST 32D ST.—DESIRABLE SECOND and third story front rooms, with board, at moderate prices.

FOURTH AV., NO. 435, NEAR 30TH ST.—English family have second floor to let; good board served in rooms; references.

GRAMERCY PARK, NO. 137 EAST 21ST ST.—An elegantly furnished suite of rooms; parlor floor; with or without private table; best references.

NO. 40 IRVING PLACE.—BACK PARLOR AND extension, also other rooms; board if desired; private family; references.

HANDSOMELY-FURNISHED ROOMS, WITH first-class board, in a private family; references. Apply at No. 51 East 23d st.

NO. 3 WEST 42D ST.—DESIRABLE ROOMS, with superior board; references exchanged.

TWENTY-THIRD ST., NO. 36, EAST.—Large and small rooms; good board; references.

NO. 23 WEST 33D ST.—PLEASANT ROOMS for gentlemen, with superior board.

NO. 29 WEST 21ST ST.—A DESIR

LOCAL MISCELLANY.

A REMARKABLE DIAMOND ROBBERY.

HOW CHARLES V. HAND WAS ROBBED OF A LARGE AMOUNT OF DIAMOND JEWELRY —THE ALLEGED THIEF ARRESTED AND HELD FOR EXAMINATION—A REMARKABLE CASE.

Capt. Murray, of the Fourth Precinct, yesterday reported to Superintendent Walling the particulars of what is apparently one of the most daring thefts that has occured in this City for many months. From the report of the Captain it appears that Charles V. Hand, having an office at No. 315 Broadway, and residing at No. 330 West Thirtieth street, the man who gained considerable notoriety last Fall by the management of the mustang races at Fleetwood Park, being in want of ready money desired to raise $12,000 on $25,000 worth of diamond jewelry which he owned. In this dilemma, Hand several days ago applied to a young man named William F. C. McCarthy, who resides at No. 20 East Thirteenth street. McCarthy said he had no doubt that he could arrange the matter. Yesterday he informed Hand that he could raise the money from a lady in Judge Sutherland's office, and requested him to accompany him to the Judge's office, in the Bennett Building, and bring the valuables with him. Hand consented, and putting the jewelry in his pocket, got into a coupé with McCarthy. On arriving in front of the Bennett Building on Nassau street, McCarthy took the jewelry from Hand, and telling the latter to wait a few minutes for him, he entered the building. Hand walked up and down the sidewalk in front of the building for a few moments, and as he reached the corner of Fulton and Nassau streets, he saw McCarthy and another man passing out of the Fulton street door of the Bennett Building, and noticed that they turned toward Broadway. Hand went toward them, and they then entered the bar-room of the Belmont Hotel. As Hand followed them through the main door the men passed out of the private entrance, and jumping into a coupé that was standing in front of the door, told the driver to drive like —— to Broadway. The driver whipped up his horse, but, owing to the blocked condition of the thoroughfare, made little progress, and Hand overtook the coupé and tore open the door. He seized McCarthy by the collar, and attempted to drag him out of the conpé. Capt. Murray and Detective Carr, who happened to be in the neighborhood, hastened to the spot, and asked what was the matter. Hand pointed out McCarthy as the man who had robbed him of the diamonds, and Capt. Murray arrested him. He was at once taken to the Oak Street Police Station and thoroughly searched, but not the slightest trace of the missing diamonds was found. McCarthy's companion is supposed to have carried them off. When Hand opened the door and seized McCarthy, the latter's companion opened the opposite door and jumped out. In the confusion and excitement this man mingled with the crowd and made his escape.

McCarthy was subsequently arraigned at the Tombs Police Court. Hand stated, in addition to the facts given above, that the jewelry in question consisted of 16 pieces, set with diamonds, sapphires, and pearls, which he would not swear to be of the value of more than $10,000. It was the property of a lady named Mattie S. Whitney, and had been intrusted by her to him for safe keeping, and he had in the office of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, No. 315 Broadway, where he had a desk. McCarthy, with whom he had been acquainted about a week, induced him to enter into a partnership with him in the cattle and stock business, and agreed to obtain a loan upon the jewelry in order to enable Hand to enter into such partnership. On the 26th inst. McCarthy induced him to visit No. 52 Wall street, where he said he expected to find a man whom he represented as the attorney of the person he expected to get the loan from, and McCarthy went into the building with the jewelry, and returned in a few minutes saying the attorney had examined the jewelry, and was delighted with it, and was willing to make a loan upon it. Hand then agreed to meet McCarthy and the attorney at the Baltimore and Ohio office yesterday morning. Hand met them according to agreement, and the attorney requested Hand and McCarthy to go to Judge Josiah Sutherland's office, at No. 93 Nassau Street, in the Bennett Building. They went there, and McCarthy, to whom Hand had given the jewelry, went into an office that had the name "Sutherland" on the door, and almost immediately came out and said that a person he expected to find was not there, and he returned the jewelry to Hand. When Hand and McCarthy reached the sidewalk, they found the attorney standing there, and he said he wanted something to eat, and invited Hand and McCarthy to go with him. They all went to a restaurant in Fulton street, and all drank, but the attorney did not eat anything. He requested McCarthy to get a coupé, and they all got in and were driven back to the Bennett Building, where the attorney asked McCarthy to go with him to Judge Sutherland's office, and they entered the building, McCarthy taking the jewelry with him, leaving Hand in the street as they returned. When McCarthy was captured he asked Hand to keep still and the jewelry would be returned to him, but this was not done, and Hand returned to the Belmont Hotel from which the men had fled, and found a paper which had contained the jewelry lying on a table.

The charge made against McCarthy was larceny by trick and device. McCarthy is a handsome, well-dressed young man of about 25 years of age, having regular features, curly black hair, and a dark moustache. He was represented by ex-Judge George M. Curtis and James Oliver, by whose advice he refused to make any statement in reference to the matter for the present. It was arranged to waive the question of bail, and the case was set down for examination at 3 o'clock to-morrow afternoon, to which time McCarthy was remanded.

THE STREET-CLEANING FUND.

REFUSAL OF THE CONTROLLER TO COMPLY WITH A REQUISITION FOR AN ADVANCE OF ONE-TWELFTH OF THE APPROPRIATION.

President Smith, of the Police Board, received yesterday the subjoined communication from Controller Kelly, in reply to the recent letter of the Police Board, requesting an advance of one-twelfth of the street-cleaning appropriation:

FINANCE DEPARTMENT, CONTROLLER'S OFFICE, Jan. 25, 1877.

Hon. William F. Smith, President Board of Police.

SIR: Yours of Jan. 22, 1877, making requisition for $59,791 66, one-twelfth of the appropriation for the Bureau of Street-cleaning for the year 1877, together with a copy of the resolution of the Board of Police authorizing such requisition, has duly reached this department. Upon an examination of the statutes in force relative to the payment of the expenses incurred by authority of the Board of Police, I find that the Controller is limited in his payments to the Treasurer of Police to such sums as shall be required, not exceeding one-twelfth part of the total annual amount in "any one month." A requisition for one-twelfth of the amount appropriated for street-cleaning in 1877 having been already paid by this department to the Treasurer of Police for the month of January, 1877, I do not see how I can lawfully make another payment before the month of February. The month for which the requisition of one-twelfth part of the appropriation is made should be stated in the resolution ordering the requisition, and I request that the requisition for February be so amended, and all future requisitions shall specify the month to which they apply respectively. I regret exceedingly that I cannot respond to your requisition at this time, but the provisions of the act are imperative, and should not be disregarded. Very respectfully, JOHN KELLY, Controller.

THE NEW-YORK PRESS CLUB.

An entertainment will be given in Steinway Hall, on Tuesday evening, Feb. 6, by the New-York Press Club, which will offer an unusually attractive programme to be carried out by popular musical and literary celebrities. Miss Clara Louise Kellogg and Madame Pappenheim are announced to sing, and the assistance of Mr. William Castle and George Werfenrath, tenors; Mr. Boscovitz, pianist; the New-York Glee and Madrigal Club, under the direction of Mr. George G. Rockwood; the Young Apollo Club, directed by Mr. William Francis Williams, and other musicians, promise an entertainment of exceptional variety and excellence. Mark Twain will read a humorous story in his own peculiar, laugh-provoking, and inimitable way, and Mr. Charles A. Burbank and Mr. Charles P. Roberts, both elocutionists, who are well-known and accepted favorites, will give recitations. The list of attractions is not yet complete, but enough may be gathered from this announcement to give assurance that the entertainment will be a brilliant and every way enjoyable one. Until Feb. 6 tickets may be had of members of the club, and they will be sold at the box-office at Steinway Hall on the 5th and 6th.

THE NEW-YORK YACHT CLUB.

The election of the New-York Yacht Club for officers for the year 1877 will be held in the clubhouse, at the annual meeting to be held on Thursday night, the 18th of February, and a ticket has already been prepared, and will probably be elected without opposition. The nominations are as follows: For Commodore, S. Nicholson Kane; for Vice Commodore, James Stillman; for Rear Commodore, J. J. Alexandre; for Secretary, Charles A. Minton; for Treasurer, Sheppard Homans; for Measurer, A. Cary Smith; for Fleet Surgeon, G. S. Winslow, M. D., for Regatta Committee, Philip Schuyler, William Krebs, G. L. Haight, for House Committee, Fletcher Westrey, N. D. White, D. T. Worden, J. O. Ferodilla, George L. Jordon, H. N. Allen; for Committee on Admissions, A. S. Hatch, William N. Thomas, R. Center, John H. Draper, Charles H. Stebbins.

NEW-YORK'S GREAT BRIDGE.

FIVE CRADLES SUCCESSFULLY PLACED IN POSITION—PERILOUS WORK IN MID-AIR.

The placing of the "cradles," or platforms upon which the workmen are to stand while laying the great cables of the East River bridge, was begun on Friday and was continued yesterday, and five of the ten cradles that are to be used were successfully placed in position. There are now three cradle cables, two foot-bridge cables, and four "traveler" cables stretched across the river and running over the tops of the towers. Besides these, there are two storm cables, intended to keep the foot-bridge cables in position, also running across the river, and made fast to the towers on each side, at a point about 20 feet below the roadway. The cradles spoken of, above are 48 feet long and about 5 feet wide, and are placed on the cables transversely, that is to say parallel with the river. Of the five now in position, three are over the river, one in the centre, and the others at equidistant points between the centre and the towers. The other two are placed at points between the anchorages and the towers. Should the weather be favorable, the remaining five cradles will be put in their places within the next week. Access to these will be obtained by the foot-bridge, which will extend from anchorage to anchorage. The construction of this bridge has already been begun on both sides of the river, and about 350 feet have been completed at each anchorage. When built over the river the bridge will be made perfectly steady by means of the storm cables, with which it will be connected by wire ropes about three-eighths of an inch in diameter.

Besides the cables already mentioned there are now three "pendant" cables (to which will be added a fourth) which will hang directly over the centres of the great cable. When the work of laying the great cable is begun, small iron rods, with leaden weights at the ends, will be suspended immediately above the cradles, and will be used to keep the wires apart while being laid in the strands. The great cable will be composed of 19 of these strands, which will contain about 330 wires each. When all the strands are completed, the temporary fastenings will be removed and they will all be placed together to form the great cable, which will then contain about 6,000 wires. The wires, which will be of galvanized steel, will be a little over one-eighth of an inch in diameter, and will receive two coatings of linseed-oil before being used for the cables.

The operation of placing the cradles in position was a hazardous one, and was watched with great interest by crowds of persons on both sides of the river and on the ferry-boats, and much admiration was expressed at the skill and daring of the workmen. They, however, did not seem to think that they were in any peril, and did their work as quietly and unconcernedly as if they had been on the ground, and not standing on a rope at the height of 200 feet above its surface. Some of the cradles are now slightly deflected to the right, as seen from the New-York side, but Mr. Farrington, the master mechanic in charge, says that when the foot-bridge is completed its weight will draw the cables to the proper position, and the platforms will then be on a level.

FIVE SKYE TERRIERS.

CAPT. BRACKETT'S SEIZURE OF DOGS—A CHECK TO THE FREE IMPORTATION OF FASHIONABLE CANINES.

There is good reason to suppose that there will be a sudden rise in the quotations for skye terriers in this market. The heavy hand of the Government has been laid upon one of the offenders against the revenue laws who have for many years practiced, undisturbed, the business of importing dogs of various breeds to meet the demand for such pets. It seems that it has been a common thing for officers and stewards of vessels to bring with them, from the other side, one or two dogs, which became sufficiently acquainted with their temporary masters on the voyage thither to follow them affectionately from the steamer and off of the dock to the shop of the dog-fancier, when they were delivered without the formality of acknowledging such an officer as the Inspector of Customs or the Collector of the Port. It is estimated by one of these dog dealers himself that this business has amounted to not less than 1,000 dogs per annum imported and sold without payment of duty. A day or two ago the steamer Wisconsin arrived here, having on board as part of her cargo "not marked" in the invoice, five skye terriers. The number was ambitiously large, and although the dogs were small, there was such a family of them that Capt. Brackett's men on the steamer were suspicious of their honesty—or the honesty of their owner—and the five were seized, hurried away to the Custom-house, and on Friday night were imprisoned in the Seizure Room. Gov. Noble and his assistants were exceedingly hospitable and sociable to these unfortunate immigrants, and spent a part of Friday afternoon and yesterday in cultivating their acquaintance and endeavoring to ascertain the color of their eyes. They were a homely quintet, as shaggy as so many soiled door-mats, with great locks of tangled hair hanging down over their little black noses. Great solicitude was felt lest they should escape, and a constant watch was kept upon them lest they should take an opportunity when a door was opened to run into the street and escape. Visitors who passed by the Seizure Room dropped to take a look at the ugly little pets, who made themselves as comfortable as they possibly could anywhere but in a properly appointed dog-kennel. The dogs were intended, it appears, for a dealer in West Broadway. He came to Capt. Brackett yesterday to "explain himself." From his story it was gathered that he had been in the habit of buying dogs in England, and depending upon the good offices of friends on board the steam-ships to deliver them free of duty. The dealer had paid $135 for his five dogs, and after an explanation to the Inspector, and an avowal on his part that he was willing to pay the appraised value of the dogs, the Collector imposed that sum as a fine, and consented that they should be given up. Just before 3 o'clock the dog fancier paid up his fine and claimed his property, much to the relief of their temporary custodians, who had become afraid that the five little monsters were to be left to their care over Sunday, and would need to be looked after all that time.

ARRESTED ON SUSPICION.

Yesterday afternoon four sharp-looking individuals visited several banks in Newark, and finally bringing up at the City Bank questioned the little son of Ray, the janitor, as to the habits of his father. Two of them then went over to the Merchants' Bank, where their mysterious movements first attracted the attention and then aroused the suspicions of Teller Baldwin. The Teller dispatched a messenger to the police station, and Chief of Police Mills and Detectives McManus and Fisher arrived in time to take them all into custody. One of them when arrested tore up a check for a large amount, which had evidently been forged, and which the party were probably making arrangements to utter. It has been intimated that they had succeeded in passing a valueless check, but the Police know nothing of it. The fragments of the check which was destroyed were gathered up, and the quartet were taken to the Station-house, Before they said that they were either brokers or merchants, and gave their names and residences as follows: James Barclay, Wilkesbarre, Penn.; George Crawford, Brooklyn; James Spaulding, Boston, and Charles Dunning, New-York. They were locked up for examination.

ST. JOHN'S GUILD.

The following contributions were received yesterday and will furnish only a partial supply for Monday's work:

Sheldon Collins	$25 00	Cash	2 00
A. V. D.	5 00	E. B.	1 00
R. S. C.	5 00	Topham, Weld & Co.	10 00
Paris Allen & Co.	50 00	A. Richard	10 00
William K. Iselin	50 00	John G. Nerser	25 00
John H. Iselin	25 00	H. C. O.	10 00
X. X.	5 00	Employees of Amer-
D.	2 00	ican Clock Co.	101 00
Miss K. W.	1 00	George D. Farrar	25 00
Wm. A. Drown & Co.	10 00	Eaton, Cole, &
Cash	5 00	Burnham Co.	10 00
Mrs. K. G. Bassett	25 00	L. F.	15 00
Mrs. B. M.	5 00	Daisy	1 00
Lulu Solmson	10 00	J. N. S.	5 00
Little Jeanie	25	Little Annie	25
M. W. B.	10 00	Cash	1 00
Ed. Simpson, Jr.	2 00
Total			$541 50

By reason of yesterday's contributions falling short of $1,000, the amount required, the Guild will be compelled to issue only a limited supply on Monday. Contributions are earnestly solicited, and should be sent to Andrew W. Leggat, Treasurer, &c., No. 41 East Fourteenth street.

SUDDEN DEATHS IN BROOKLYN.

While riding in a Broadway car to East New-York last evening, Mrs. Rohme, aged 45 years, of Canarsie, Long Island, dropped dead. The cause of death was heart disease. David Fisher, aged 3 years, died suddenly yesterday at the residence of his parents, No. 12 Orchard street, Brooklyn. Catherine Flanley, aged 37, was seized with convulsions yesterday at her residence, No. 196 Church street, Brooklyn, and died in a few moments.

RAID ON A GAMING DEN.

A squad of Central Office Detectives, assisted by a section of patrolmen from the Eighth Precinct, made a raid last night on the gaming den No. 338½ Hudson street, where the "envelope game" was in full blast. Thomas Gage, the reputed proprietor of the establishment, and William Anderson, the dealer, together with 30 players, were captured and locked up at the Central Office.

THE GREAT FORGERY CASE.

CHADWICK'S EXAMINATION CLOSED.

FURTHER TESTIMONY BY THE PRISONER HORACE E. BROWN—A STRANGE STORY BY JULIUS KELTER—HE TELLS HOW HE GOT THE $9,500 GOLD CHECK—JUSTICE DUFFY HOLDS CHADWICK IN DEFAULT OF $50,000 BAIL.

The examination of George W. Chadwick on the charge of complicity in the check forgery case was resumed yesterday morning at the Tombs Police Court, before Justice Duffy, Mr. Wheeler H. Peckham appearing for the prosecution, and Gen. Benjamin F. Tracy for Chadwick. Thomas R. Dennis, a telegraph operator at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, testified that a telegram which Horace E. Brown had said was sent by him to Chadwick, making an appointment to meet the latter at the Park Hotel, was received at the telegraph office and sent. Theodore M. Banta, the Cashier of the New-York Life Insurance Company, was recalled by Gen. Tracy for further cross-examination, and testified as follows: I keep my check-book in a rack under my desk, and have entire control of it; I fill out some checks, and my assistant others; I don't recognize the handwriting of the body of the forged check; the letter-paper on which the orders for the purchase of gold were written appears to be the genuine letter-paper of the company; a check for $23,000 was issued by the company on Dec. 30, 1876, and the next one issued was on the 4th of January for the sum of $185,000; the forged check has the same general appearance as the genuine checks of the company, but is a trifle shorter and rather lighter in color, and the water-mark of the name of the company is not as distinct as in the genuine; I don't recognize the handwriting of the letters or orders to Maxwell; I can't tell whether Beers' name on the letters and check is in the same handwriting; in some respects it is similar, and in others different; I never saw Chadwick at our office to my knowledge.

George H. Bangs, Superintendent of Pinkerton's Detective Office, testified: I saw Chadwick at the office of the Union Trust Company on the morning of his arrest, and heard him say to Mr. Peckham at first that he had not met Brown at the Park Hotel, and afterward say that he had.

Horace E. Brown, called for further cross-examination by Gen. Tracy, said: On one or two occasions when I had interviews with Chadwick another person was present; the other person was L. A. Brown; he was present at my first conversation with Chadwick about getting depreciated securities from a broker, and he joined with Chadwick in asserting that the business was one that could not involve any of us in any trouble; my next conversation with Chadwick, when Brown was present, was on the 4th or 5th of January, at Chadwick's office; Brown was there when I went in; Chadwick talked about the money that had been received; Brown said nothing except that he had received only $100 so far, and that he wanted more money; I don't think any reply was made to him; Brown and I went out together, and Brown asked me how much money Chadwick had received, and I told him he would have to find out from Chadwick; the next time when we three were together was on the 15th of January, at a billiard room in Chatham street, where Chadwick and I had some conversation, and where I also had a separate conversation with Brown; I never saw the forged check in the hands of Chadwick; I saw a check, which I think is the one in this case, in the hands of Maxwell; I did not see it in the hands of any other person; I don't think I ever saw either of the letters or orders to Maxwell; I was told by Maxwell that the check came in a letter delivered by a messenger; I don't recognize the handwriting of the letters or orders to Maxwell or the check; Brown, Chadwick, and Maxwell are the only persons that I know of who were connected with this check transaction; they never disclosed to me in any manner anything connected with the issuing of the check, except the statement that it had emanated from the New-York Life Insurance Company; Chadwick told me so; he told me that the check came to him through a friend who had direct access to the company.

Mr. Peckham said that he should offer no witnesses on the examination, and would also rest.

Gen. Tracy said that he should offer no witnesses in the defense, and would also rest.

Justice Duffy said that there was sufficient evidence on the part of the prosecution to warrant him in holding Chadwick for the action of the Grand Jury, but that, before fixing on the amount of bail, he would hear the evidence of Julius Kelter, who had deposited in the New-York Exchange Bank a $9,500 gold check, part of the proceeds of the forged check, and who was held at the House of Detention as a witness.

Kelter testified as follows, in response to questions put by Mr. Peckham: I am a glass manufacturer, but have not been engaged in that business during the past two years; when I was in the business I had no office and saw my customers at the Exchange, No. 111 Broadway; I attempted to open an account at the New-York Exchange Bank, corner of College place and Park row, in the name of Julius Kelter & Co.; I was introduced there by Max Mankel on Tuesday, the 16th of this month; I had not prior to that time had more than $600 in my possession at one time during two years; I live at No. 1,257 Third avenue, where I occupy a French flat; I deposited on the day I was introduced a gold check for $9,500; I deposited it with the understanding that it was to be converted into greenbacks, to be credited to my account; I got this gold check from a Mr. Baumann, whom I have known for five or six years; he lived in Chicago about six years ago, and I kept a liquor saloon there; he has no saloon in Chicago, no play, or any gambling game was connected with my saloon; I have known Baumann in this City about five or six months; he told me that he lived in Second place, Brooklyn; I saw Baumann almost every day during the past five or six months; when the check was brought to me by Baumann, we had been talking about starting a glass factory; I had no capital, and he had told me the day before that he had raised it; that was on the 15th of January; we met that day in Mr. Mark's office, in Broad street, and Baumann agreed to put $5,000 in the business, with the understanding that it should be carried on in my name, and that he be a silent partner; he gave me the check to deposit, and on the following day I went to Frankel and told him I wanted to be introduced at the bank; I deposited the check on that day, and the next day Frankel told me that there was some trouble about the indorsement on the check, and I saw the President of the bank and learned that the indorsement must be guaranteed; I took the check to Baumann on the 18th of January, and he said he would get it cashed in greenbacks; just afterward the forgery came out and I did not see Baumann afterward; the check was by Hatch & Son on the Bank of New-York, and was indorsed by Blood, and one or two others; I gave Baumann a receipt for the gold bond, and that was the only security he had, except his confidence in me; Baumann was a strong-built man, about 5 feet 8 inches high, between 45 and 50 years old, fair complexion, and had brown hair and beard, sprinkled with gray.

At the conclusion of Kelter's testimony, he was remanded to appear as a witness again, if needed, and the question of bail was then considered.

Mr. Peckham asked that it be fixed at $50,000.

Gen. Tracy said that Maxwell's bail was only $10,000.

Mr. Peckham said that he would never have consented to its being fixed at so low a figure if he had been in the case.

Judge Duffy fixed the bail at $50,000, and said that he would require two sureties to justify in $50,000 each. He thought that amount of bail would be sufficient to insure Chadwick's appearance for trial.

Gen. Tracy (smiling)—"No doubt it will be, when he gets it."

Maxwell's examination had been set down for yesterday afternoon. Commissioner De Forest, a friend of Maxwell, who was present, said that Maxwell would not be able to leave his house for some days, and his case was set down for 10 o'clock on next Thursday morning. The testimony taken at the first hearing of Chadwick's case was read to Maxwell and his counsel, Mr. Clarence A. Seward, at Maxwell's house on the day following the hearing.

Mrs. Margaret P. Smith, the partner of Chadwick at his place of business, No. 35 Dey street, came to the Tombs yesterday and had a long interview with Chadwick in his cell.

Mr. W. Wirt Hewett, counsel of Horace E. Brown, who appeared as a witness for the prosecution, said yesterday, in response to questions: "Brown has been used as a tool by Maxwell and the gang back of him. He did not know that the check was a forgery. He merely went to Maxwell, at the request of Chadwick, and arranged with Maxwell to do business, as he supposed, for a savings bank, the business to be the buying, selling, and exchanging of securities, gold, &c., and he did not find out until Maxwell said that he had received the check from the New-York Life Insurance Company that the institution which he had supposed was a savings bank was the insurance company; Brown never saw the check until he saw it in Maxwell's hands, and he appeared voluntarily as a witness for the prosecution.

INSURANCE TROUBLES.

Mr. Charles E. Appleby, of Glen Cove, Long Island, President of the Firemen's Fund Insurance Company, who was on Friday appointed Receiver of the Metropolitan Fire Insurance Company, yesterday went to the office of that institution at Broadway and Pine street, and took formal possession. The Receiver yesterday gave it as his opinion that every one of the company's outstanding risks would be reinsured at an early day in good companies. Offers have been made to reinsure these risks for $30,000, and it is believed that they can be insured for much less. Inasmuch as the reinsurance reserve amounts to about $36,000, this will be a great saving to the stockholders. All of the liabilities, excepting the capital stock, will be paid, and it is thought that the loss on this will be comparatively small.

The report of the Receiver of the Continental Life Insurance Company is not yet ready, but will no doubt be filed to-morrow.

CAPTURE OF A NOTORIOUS FORGER.

STEPHEN RAYMOND, ONE OF THE ROBERTS-GLEASON GANG, FOUND IN A PENNSYLVANIA PRISON—HIS CHECKERED CAREER DURING THE PAST TWO YEARS.

The notorious Stephen Raymond, who was an active member of the Roberts-Gleason gang of forgers, was brought to this City yesterday by Detectives O'Connor and Field, of the District Attorney's office, and Robert Pinkerton, of Pinkerton's Agency. The career of Raymond has been a checkered one, and his wanderings extensive but by no means pleasant. At the time the members of the Roberts-Gleason gang were engaged in placing upon the market somewhere in the neighborhood of $400,000 worth of faultlessly-executed counterfeit railroad bonds, Raymond, who was a person of good address and a valuable agent on the street, succeeded in selling Mr. S. V. White, the broker, forged securities to the amount of $45,000. He retained $25,000 of this amount, and divided the remainder with his confederates. His ill-gotten gains brought him little comfort, however, for after lavishing a portion of it in extravagant living, he was robbed of the remainder in a saloon on the Fort Hamilton road while on a drunken spree with his companions. He was without a cent when the discovery of the gigantic forgeries startled Wall street to its centre, and scattered the members of the gang in every direction. It was necessary to get him out of the way, and he was accordingly furnished with funds, and directed to sail for Europe, there to remain until the storm should have blown over. He was accompanied by a Mrs. Bowden, with whom he had been intimate in the days of his prosperity, and who volunteered to share his banishment withhim. On arriving in England, Raymond seems to have engaged again in questionable pursuits, and frequented the Derby and other public resorts. This information was communicated to the Pinkertons, and after the necessary extradition papers had been procured, William Pinkerton sailed for London, and found his man. Raymond appealed to the courts, and made a determined resistance, but was finally handed over to the custody of Pinkerton, who brought him to this City. While awaiting trial at the Tombs with his confederates—Ralston, Williamson, Roberts, and Gleason—Raymond was taken to Elmira, in this State, on habeas corpus proceedings, to be examined as a witness in some case, and while there succeeded in making his escape from the Sheriff. The detectives in this and adjoining States were on the lookout for him for months, and finally the Pinkertons traced him to the Eastern Penitentiary at Cherry Hill, Penn. The man supposed to be Raymond had undergone an extraordinary change for the worse; but Robert Pinkerton identified him beyond doubt by a glass eye. He had passed for two months under the name of Charles Seymour, for an imprudent pocket-book swindle, by means of which he had victimized hundreds of persons in Pennsylvania and other States. Arrangements were immediately made for securing the return of the wanderer to New-York as soon as he should have finished his term of imprisonment in Philadelphia, and when he was released, at 10 A. M. yesterday, he found himself confronted by Detectives O'Connor, Field, and Pinkerton. The necessary extradition papers having been served upon the prison authorities, Raymond was handed over to the custody of the detectives, and arrived in this City at 3 P. M. He was taken before District Attorney Phelps, and committed to the City Prison to await trial on the old charge of bond forging. Just two years had elapsed since Raymond had last passed through the portals of the Tombs, and since that time he has become so changed in his appearance as to be almost unrecognizable.

CHARGES AGAINST A CASHIER.

AN ATTEMPT TO DEFRAUD THE IMPORTERS' AND TRADERS' NATIONAL BANK—A FORGED CHECK FOR $10,000 DETECTED.

Nathan L. Lenheim is engaged in the banking business in Montrose, Penn., with his father, L. S. Lenheim, under the firm name of L. S. Lenheim & Son, and is the Cashier of the house. Stephen Kistler & Co. is a firm doing business at No. 480 Classon avenue, Brooklyn, and East Stroudsburg, Penn. They had considerable dealings with the Lenheim banking house, so that the members of the latter firm were familiar with the signature of Stephen Kistler, which appeared on a good deal of paper which passed through their hands. Mr. Kistler resides in East Stroudsburg, and a partner in the firm, Mr. Thomas W. Hall, lives in Brooklyn. On last Friday Mr. Nathan L. Lenheim left a promissory note at the Importers' and Traders' National Bank, No. 247 Broadway, to be discounted, with the understanding that he would call yesterday to get the money. The note was in the following form:

GREAT BEND, Jan. 22, 1877.

Three months after date I promise to pay to the order of Stephen Kistler $10,000, at the National Park Bank of New-York. Value received.

No. 1. STEPHENS.

The note was indorsed "Stephen Kistler."

The indorsement was suspected at the bank, and a telegram was sent to Mr. Kistler after Mr. Lenheim had left the note by Mr. Hall, Mr. Kistler's partner, who received the following response:

To Stephen Kistler & Co., No. 480 Classon avenue:

The indorsement is a forgery. Have man arrested. Answer in morning. STEPHEN KISTLER.

Mr. Lenheim called at the bank yesterday to get his money, and was immediately arrested and arraigned before Justice Kilbreth, at the Tombs Police Court, in the afternoon. Mr. Hall deposed that Lenheim uttered the note knowing it to be forged, and for the purpose of defrauding the Importers' and Traders' Bank of $10,000.

Mr. Lenheim said that he simply left the note to see whether it was genuine, and that he was not aware that it was forged. He was held for an examination at 10 o'clock to-morrow morning.

SINGULAR SHIPWRECK AT SEA.

THE BRITISH SHIP ADA IREDALE BURNED AT SEA—HER CARGO OF COAL ON FIRE—EXPLOSION OF GAS—PERILOUS VOYAGE OF THE CAPTAIN AND CREW—FINAL RESCUE OF A PART OF THE NUMBER.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 26.—The schooner John Bright arrived this evening from Tahiti, having on board Capt. Stewart, of the British ship Ada Iredale, and three apprentice boys, William Lightfoot, William Denwood, and Frederick Joyce. The Captain reports that the ship left Ardrossan, Scotland, on June 20 with coal for this port. On Oct. 13, latitude 15° south, longitude 108° west, a fire was discovered in the lower hold. Every effort was made to extinguish it, but it was soon evident that the whole body of coal was ignited. The crew dug down into the cargo until the gas and heat drove them from the hold. Water was pumped down, but to no effect. In 36 hours from the time the fire was discovered the gas generated exploded and blew up the deck. Finding further attempts to save the ship useless, the boats, three in number, were lowered, and the ship's company, consisting of the Captain, two mates, carpenter, cook, steward, five boys, and twelve able seamen, entered them. The Captain took with him the ship's papers, nautical instruments, charts, and such an amount of bread and water as could be stowed, and shaped a course for the Galapagos Islands, about 1,200 miles distant. Soon after leaving the ship the Captain's boat capsized in a heavy sea and all the instruments were lost except a sextant, and also the provisions on board. The boat was righted again and the men picked up. In a few days, finding the winds and currents setting him back, the Captain abandoned the design of reaching the Galapagos, and steered for the Marquesas Islands, 2,400 miles distant. On Nov. 3 one of the boats capsized, and the carpenter, William Denuer, was drowned. The rest of the crew were taken on board the other boats. All the food and water on the capsized boat were lost, and from that time until Nov. 9, when they reached Island Dominick, of the Marquesas group, all hands were restricted to three wine-glasses of water per day, and throughout the time in the boats to two biscuits per day. The weather was very rough portions of the time, and the men suffered severely. At night the boats were made fast to each other and kept together. The schooner John Bright was found at Marquesas, and all hands took passage in her for Tahiti, arriving there Dec. 12. Here the Captain paid off the officers and crew in bills on England and discharged them, except the apprentice boys, two of whom deserted. The others, with the Captain, left Tahiti Dec. 20. The mates, cook and steward, and eight seamen shipped at Tahiti on the New-Bedford whaler Coral. The rest sought other vessels.

The Ada Iredale was an iron ship, and owing to delay in her arrival had been dropped a few days ago from the list of vessels expected to arrive.

OTHER MARINE DISASTERS.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 27.—The schooner John Bright, from Tahiti, brings intelligence of the total loss of the British bark Beulah. She struck on the way out from Tahiti. Mr. J. G. Boss, of Quebec, is owner of the Beulah.

CITY AND SUBURBAN NEWS.

NEW-YORK.

The Police arrests during the past week numbered 1,455.

Rev. Dr. Bridgman, of Albany, has declined the call of the Madison Avenue Baptist Church, of this City.

The sale of postal stamps at the New-York Post Office for the week ending yesterday at noon amounted to $52,400.

Louis Raab, aged 18, died yesterday at Bellevue Hospital of pyæmia, resulting from a laceration of his left hand by a pistol-shot.

Tickets for the Charity Ball, at the Academy of Music next Thursday night, can be procured at the Union Square Hotel, also at the Astor House, at $5 each.

The funeral of Rev. Dr. Charles H. Payson, who died on Wednesday last, took place at Memorial Chapel yesterday morning. The services were conducted by Rev. Drs. Adams and Tucker.

A meeting of the conference from the commercial bodies on the dock system and improvements of the City will be held at the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

A grand charity ball, for the benefit of the deserving poor, will be given on Tuesday evening next, at Terrace Garden. Grafula's band will furnish the music, and an elegant supper will be served.

There were reported at the Bureau of Vital Statistics during last week 441 deaths, 464 births, and 116 marriages, showing an increase of 25 deaths, and a decrease of 16 births and 6 marriages as compared with the preceding week.

Richard Hannagan, aged 40, of Seventy-seventh street and Second avenue, had his left thigh fractured by a log falling on him while at work yesterday on a pile driver, at One Hundred and Second street and Third avenue.

Rev. C. D. Foss, D. D., President of the Wesleyan University, Middletown, will preach this morning in the Eighty-sixth Street M. E. Church, and will deliver an address at 4 P. M., at the Hall of the Yorkville Young Men's Christian Association.

An attempt was made by burglars on Friday night to enter the hardware store of Harrison Bros. & Hanslin. They had gained access to the roof of the building through the adjoining house, when they were discovered by the watchman, who gave an alarm, and the burglars decamped.

Custom-house Inspectors Hagan and Van Cott on Friday seized 9,000 cigars on board the Havana steam-ship City of Vera Cruz. Yesterday morning they seized about 3,000 more, and in the afternoon Officers Van Cott, Hagan, and Horn made a third seizure of 3,000 cigars, making in all 15,000 seized on the same steamer.

At the New-York Academy of Sciences School of Mines, Forty-ninth street and Fourth avenue, Mr. A. A. Julien will deliver an address to-morrow evening on Col. Prideaux's "Preparation of Objects for Microscopic Examination." Mr. L. H. Landy will shew projections of slides by means of the gas microscope, and Dr. P. Townsend Austen will read a report on laboratory manipulation.

Chief Justice Davis, in the Supreme Court, yesterday granted a writ of certiorari to review the decision of Judge Donohue in the case of Andrew J. Mellen, whose extradition to Philadelphia was recently desired. Mellen was, however, held by the Sheriff of this County under a civil process, and Judge Donohue upheld the Sheriff in his refusal to surrender Mellen to the Philadelphia authorities.

A marriage ceremony was celebrated on Friday evening at the Greek Russian Chapel in Second avenue, Father Bjerring officiating. The bridegroom was Mr. Lucas Nicholsky, of the Russian Centennial Commission, and the bride Miss Rosalie H. Smith, of Philadelphia. Mr. Boutcheff, Consul General of Russia in this City, and M. Botassi, Consul General of Greece, served as witnesses.

The West-side Relief Association have made arrangements with Slavin's original Georgia cabin singers to give a series of concerts for the benefit of the destitute poor of all denominations. The programme as far as arranged is to give a New-York series lasting from two to three weeks, and thereafter to visit various cities, giving concerts to raise the funds necessary to carry on the work of aiding the unemployed.

The arrivals of emigrants are usually very light at Castle Garden during the Winter months of the year, but thus far since the 1st of January the present month has shown the smallest number of arrivals recorded in one month since the year 1863, but 1,432 steerage passengers being the whole number by all vessels. Yesterday there were 183 arrivals, hailing as follows: From Hamburg, in the Wieland, 55; from London, in the Holland, 33; from Liverpool, in the Abyssinia, 43; from London, in the Elysia, 32.

BROOKLYN.

The policy-shop of Theodore Fuller, at No. 553 Fifth avenue, was closed by the Police yesterday and the proprietor arrested.

Oswald Miller, who failed in his attempt some days ago to get a divorce from his wife, has suddenly disappeared from his home.

At a meeting of the Board of Assessors yesterday the assessment for grading and paving Fourth street, from North Tenth to Orchard, amounting to $33,440 04, was confirmed.

During the week Mayor Schroeder received for the Brooklyn Theatre Fire Relief Fund $50 from Surrogate Livingston, and $131, the proceeds of an entertainment, from the Alpha Beta Gamma Society.

The Court of Sessions Grand Jury, which was discharged yesterday, found indictments against 30 liquor dealers against whom charges of violating the Excise Law had been preferred by the Temperance Brotherhood of Christian Churches.

At a meeting of the Board of City Works yesterday the Engineer was directed to prepare plans, specifications, and estimates for the work of enlarging the Ridgewood Reservoir, recommended by the Mayor in his annual message to the Common Council.

The Democratic Aldermen held a caucus last evening for the purpose of arranging some plan by which the dead-lock in the Common Council can be broken. No definite result was reached, and the caucus adjourned to meet on Monday before the meeting of the board.

The New-York Times.

VOL. XXVI.....NO. 7918. NEW-YORK, MONDAY, JANUARY 29, 1877. PRICE FOUR CENTS.

WASHINGTON.

THE COUNTING TRIBUNAL.

COMPOSITION OF THE PROPOSED COMMISSION—DEMOCRATS ENDEAVORING TO CONTROL THE CHOICE OF THE REPUBLICAN REPRESENTATIVES—OPPOSITION TO GEN. GARFIELD—ALLEGED OBJECTS OF THE DEMOCRATS—OTHER DIFFICULTIES IN THE CONSTRUCTION OF THE COURT—THE PROBABLE COUNSEL ON BOTH SIDES.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—The great non-partisan, patriotic measure, which Mr. Edmunds persists is not a compromise, is already producing partisan wrangles of a very indecent kind. The House Republicans, in caucus, chose Mr. Garfield unanimously as a member of the commission, and now Democrats are endeavoring to secure his defeat. The affair needs a word of preliminary explanation. The bill provides for the selection of five members of the grand commission by the House, and five by the Senate. Without some further provision, the House would naturally choose five Democrats and the Senate five Republicans, but it was desirable that the minority in each House have a representation. The committee of statesmen did not wish to have anything partisan in the face of the bill, so instead of embodying a provision which would compel a fair party recognition on the commission, they made a private trade and pledged themselves as statesmen and patriots to stand by it. In the House two Republican members of the commission should be designated in a caucus of Republican members, and they should be voted for on a list with three Democrats which their caucus might choose. In the same manner the Republican majority of the Senate were bound to elect two Democrats. For this arrangement being carried out in good faith there was only the pledge of the individual members of the joint committee of 14. The bill having been passed, certain Democrats propose to carry the business of "bull-dozing" still further, and the question will probably be raised in their caucus to-morrow as to the election of Mr. Garfield. Mr. Lamar is said to be one of the objectors, and there are many more. They say Garfield is unfitted to be a member of the commission, because he went to Louisiana, and his mind is made up on the questions concerning that State. They object to him because he spoke and voted against the bill and regards it unconstitutional. They want the commission made up of men who are not committed, particularly the Republican portion of it. There are a few Democrats who are not willing to break faith or have the question raised in caucus, and Mr. Payne tells his colleagues that his word is pledged, and some others are endeavoring to have the matter suppressed. The proposition has been to pass a resolution in Democratic caucus to inform the Republicans that Mr. Garfield was not an acceptable selection to the Democrats, and request them to present another name. It is said that some of the Democrats who opposed the bill are engaged in the attempt to defeat Gen. Garfield in the hope that his defeat may break up the formation of any commission and nullify the bill. It is probable that the managers may control the caucus and prevent any attempt to break the agreement, but the Senate will not elect till the choice in the House has been heard from, and any bad faith there will be met by the election of five Republican Senators. In the House some of the Democrats would have to wash their hands of the proceeding, and Mr. Hoar would decline to serve unless Garfield were also elected. There were some private warnings given as to the loose arrangement about the selection of the Congressional part of the commission, but the advocates of the bill, in a state of good feeling, were willing to take oath that the dwelling-place of honor was among the Democrats in the House.

The Democratic objections to Garfield are, of course, absurd. The purpose of the bill, and the agreement in committee, was to make certain the appointment of five Democrats who would never waver on any question affecting the election of Tilden, and five Republicans, who have perfect faith in the rightful and legal choice of Hayes. This would throw the responsibility of deciding the legal questions upon the Justices of the Supreme Court, where it is placed by the theory of the bill. The Democrats in the House will make choice of their three members of the commission to-morrow. If they object to Mr. Garfield, they should not select Hewitt or David Dudley Field or Payne or Proctor Knott or Tucker or Lamar, or, indeed, any of their members that one can think of, for they are all committed. Indeed, the Democrats in the Senate are objecting to Bayard, and there will be a contest against him as a member of the commission, because he is not partisan enough, and Mr. Thurman is sure to be one of those chosen. The Republicans will select Mr. Morton. Mr. Edmunds, and probably Mr. Howe. There is a report about, whether well or ill founded, that Mr. Edmunds does not wish to serve. If he should decline, Mr. Sargent or Mr. Frelinhuysen would perhaps be chosen. There may be a controversy about Mr. Conkling, though it is not supposed he will be presented as a candidate. The troubles of forming the commission are not yet over, and may prove to be serious, as there is some fear that the four Justices will not be able to agree upon the selection of the fifth.

The members of the Republican Executive Committee now in Washington held a meeting to-day, and determined to secure the services of three lawyers to represent the cause of Hayes and Wheeler before the Electoral Commission. William M. Evarts, of New-York, and Stanley Matthews, of Ohio, were selected as two of the three. The third counsel will be selected within a few days. The Democrats have also determined upon having the cause of Tilden and Hendricks represented before the commission by counsel, and have selected Jeremiah S. Black, of Pennsylvania; Matthew H. Carpenter, of Wisconsin, and Richard T. Merrick, of Washington.

THE TILDEN PLOT AGAINST OREGON.

SECRET MOVEMENTS OF HIS AGENT PATRICK WITH THE $8,000 CORRUPTING FUND.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—A letter has been received here from a trustworthy gentleman at San Francisco who is cognizant of the facts, stating that when J. N. Patrick, one of Tilden's Western agents, arrived at San Francisco, he did not register his name at any hotel, desiring to keep his presence in San Francisco unknown. The following morning he called at the banking-house of Wells, Fargo & Co. before business hours, and presented a telegram from Donnell, Lawson & Co., of New-York, authorizing him to draw $8,000 at sight. The money was paid him in coin and coin notes by Wells, Fargo & Co.'s Treasurer, who, of course, was furnished with satisfactory evidence that the bank was secure in paying out so large a sum in this unusual manner. Patrick was not seen in San Francisco after drawing the money, and it is reasonably certain that he immediately proceeded to Oregon to carry out the programme adopted in New-York for stealing one Electoral vote from Hayes in that State.

PELTON AND HIS DISPATCHES.

THE DIFFERENT TALES TOLD BY HIM UNDER OATH AND OVER HIS SIGNATURE—HIS MANAGEMENT OF THE TILDEN CAMPAIGN NOW IN PROGRESS IN THE CAPITAL.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—Col. William T. Pelton, the nephew of the defeated candidate for the Presidency, and the Secretary of the National Democratic Committee, was summoned here some two weeks ago to testify as to what means had been employed by Tilden and his friends to secure the Electoral vote of Oregon and the contested Southern States. He was before the Senate Committee for a few moments, and swore, in substance, that he knew nothing about the campaign tactics of his uncle, and that he had sent only one or two telegrams to Oregon. It has since been discovered that at least a dozen dispatches in cipher and signed by him were sent to the State named. Mr. Pelton is still in Washington, and has not yet been discharged by the committee. He still receives his witness fees, and it might be well for him to be recalled and re-examined and discharged without delay. Just now, in company with his friend and fellow agent, Mr. Smith M. Weed, he is conducting the Tilden campaign in Washington with that shrewdness for which he has long been noted, and is in daily consultation with all the leading Democrats and one or two gentlemen who call themselves Republicans. These facts are generally commented upon here, and it has been suggested that it is not just the thing for the Government to pay Mr. Pelton's hotel expenses while he is scheming to place a man in the Presidential chair who has about as much right to the seat as has Tim Campbell, or the notorious Eddie Apgar.

THE ELECTORAL VOTE BILL.

THE MEASURE TO BE SIGNED TO-DAY, AND SENT TO THE SENATE WITH A MESSAGE GIVING THE PRESIDENT'S REASONS FOR SIGNING IT.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—There was no delay, but, on the contrary, the utmost haste, on Saturday in taking the Electoral Vote bill to the Executive Mansion, as, by an old joint rule, all bills, after their passage through the two houses, are first signed by the Speaker and then the presiding officer of the Senate. It was probably 12:30 o'clock when it was conveyed thither, the House not meeting till noon. The President just previous to the last-named time left the city for Baltimore in company with Secretary Robeson, and did not return till 10 o'clock last night. Senator Conover, of the Committee on Enrolled Bills, will deliver the Electoral Vote bill to the President early to-morrow morning. The President, however, has already examined the bill as it appears in print, and therefore is fully acquainted with its provisions, as is also Attorney General Taft. The President this evening said he would sign the bill, and accompany the notification of its approval with a special Message giving his reasons for doing so. The character of the Message may be inferred from the President's recent frequent private utterances to the effect that he was desirous of the Presidential question being peaceably adjusted, and would recognize him who should be legally declared elected as his successor. Considering the important and responsible duties devolving on the President, it was essential that he should have the confidence of the country, and this he could not secure if there were a suspicion, or any good reason to believe, that his election was tainted with fraud. In a feverish condition of parties, with no previously agreed plan of adjustment of controverted questions, the disputes which would arise in counting the Electoral vote might occasion serious damage to the country, and hence it was a patriotic duty to unite upon some plan to secure the end desired, namely, a peaceful solution of the difficulty. The objections which might be urged to the details of the bill could be waived in view of the high character of those who framed it, and the unanimity with which the plan was framed—prominent gentlemen on both sides having composed the Joint Committee—besides, business interests everywhere demanded and required action in the interests of peace. The Message is not yet prepared, but will be sent early in the afternoon to the Senate, in which body the bill first passed.

THE PACIFIC RAILROAD DEBT.

THE PROPOSED PLAN OF ESTABLISHING A SINKING FUND—POINTS OF DIFFERENCE IN THE BILLS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—The principal points of difference between the bills to create a sinking fund for the liquidation of the indebtedness due the Government by the Pacific Railway Companies are as follows: The bill which has been taken up in the Senate was reported by the Judiciary Committee, and provides that there shall be placed to the credit of such sinking fund annually, an amount equal to 25 per cent. of the net earnings of the roads; the amount earned by the roads in performing service for the Government, and the 5 per cent. of their net earnings spoken of in the original acts to be taken as part of the 25 per cent. The other bill reported by the Committee on Railroads will be submitted as a substitute for that of the Judiciary Committee. It refers only to the Central and Union Pacific roads, and provides that the amounts due them for services rendered the Government up to Dec. 31, 1876, shall be placed to the credit of the sinking fund; but in case it does not amount to $1,000,000 at that date, the deficiency to make up that sum shall be paid by the respective companies. Each company shall then pay into the Treasury, to the credit of such sinking fund, $750,000 per annum in equal semi-annual installments on the 1st of April and October in each year, until such sums shall, with interest thereon, be sufficient when added to the other sums to the credit of said sinking fund, to pay off and extinguish the Government bonds advanced to the companies. The bill reported by the Judiciary Committee refers to the Central Pacific, Union Pacific, Central branch of the Union Pacific, and the Kansas Pacific companies.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—The Convention of the Fifth District B'nai B'rith elected the following officers to-day: Aaron Haas, of Atlanta, Ga., President; M. Hutsler, of Richmond, Va., First Vice President; W. H. Strauss, of Baltimore, Second Vice President; A. Goodman, Treasurer; Dr. S. B. Wolfe, Secretary; A. Fisher, of Washington, Sergeant at Arms.

Representative Elijah Ward last night generously entertained many Democratic members of Congress at his residence. It was an exclusively social affair.

The investigation by the Committee on the Powers, Privileges, and Duties of the House in Counting the Electoral Vote is likely to continue for several weeks, as the Sergeant at Arms has sent special deputies to Ohio and elsewhere for witnesses.

A friend of Associate Justice Davis furnishes the following: Judge Davis is so much occupied now, and will be for the next six weeks, in preparing opinions upon cases assigned to him by his associate Justices, that an immediate resignation could not take place without injustice to his present duties, which preclude him from any decision regarding his acceptance of the United States Senatorship.

Representative Alexander H. Stephens, of Georgia, has been confined to his bed by severe prostration for several days. His physicians say there is no immediate danger of his death, although the patient is of different opinion.

This afternoon, while Attorney General Taft and his family were driving down Thirteenth street, their horses took fright and ran away. On turning the corner of F street one of the horses fell, and a wheel broke, stopping the vehicle. The inmates of the carriage were uninjured.

It is reported here to-night that a number of the troops that have been stationed here for some time will be ordered to stations in other portions of the country; some of them to Fortress Monroe and Governor's Island, and others to points in the West, where their services may be demanded in the Spring campaign against the Indians.

THE LATEST MEXICAN REVOLUTION.

UNSCRUPULOUS CONDUCT OF CHIEF JUSTICE IGLESIAS IN FOMENTING THE REVOLUTION—CONGRESS AND THE SUPREME COURT AGAINST HIM—ITS EFFECT THE SUCCESS OF THE PROFESSIONAL REVOLUTIONIST DIAZ.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—There is a growing apprehension here that the present unfortunate condition of affairs in Mexico may result in complications which will seriously involve the United States. It is therefore considered important that the facts regarding the situation in that country should be correctly known. The following information has been derived from thoroughly trustworthy sources. The statement telegraphed from San Francisco in support of the pretensions of the revolutionary leader, ex-Chief Justice Iglesias, that the Constitution of Mexico prohibits the election of a President for a second term, is shown by direct reference to a copy of the Constitution to be incorrect. This is also evident from the fact that President Juarez was elected not only for a second, but a third term. President Lerdo was elected in 1872 for the term of four years, ending Nov. 30, 1876. This election is characterized by a leading historian of Mexico as having been "the most pacific and spontaneous of all that have ever taken place in the Republic." It was before the expiration of this uncontested term of office of President Lerdo that Iglesias commenced his revolutionary proceedings by issuing at Salamanca, in the State of Guanajuato, on the 28th of October last, a revolutionary "plan," assuming the title of Provisional President and setting up a so-called Government. The pretext assigned for this revolutionary proceeding was that the House of Representatives, on the 26th of October had declared that at the election held in July last Lerdo had been re-elected for the ensuing term of four years from Dec. 1, 1876.

The Constitution of Mexico makes the House of Representatives the sole judge of the returns of the election—not only of President, but of magistrates of the Supreme Court. The result of the election was declared by a vote of 125 to 46, or more than two-thirds. This action of the House was indorsed by a vote of confidence in the Executive by the Senate, of more than two-thirds, and on an appeal made by Iglesias to the Supreme Court, of which he was President, that tribunal sustained the validity of the election by a vote of 6 to 3; yet in the face of this, ignoring the obligation which that vote imposed upon him as a member of the tribunal, and without warrant whatever in the Constitution or of law, either as a magistrate or a citizen, Iglesias not only assumed the right to declare the re-election of President Lerdo invalid, but in violation of the Constitution he had sworn to protect, attempted by revolutionary means to establish himself and his partisans in power, not when the succession had legally or in any case of doubt devolved upon him, but more than a month before the expiration of President Lerdo's uncontested term of office. The overthow of the constitutional order in Mexico has been effected, not by the strength of the professional revolutionists led by Gen. Diaz, but through the treason to republican principles of those who have been engaged in the Iglesias conspiracy which has again introduced demoralization into the Army and has deluded public sentiment by the attempt to cover revolutionary proceedings with the pretext of legality. The only difference in point of legality between Signor Iglesias and Gen. Diaz is that the latter issued his revolutionary "plan" in March last, and the former in October. Whether priority in such proceedings gives a better or a worse title, it appears that, as between the two factions which have appealed to revolution, the balance in point of material force has rested with Gen. Diaz, for within less than three months from the date when, in Salamanca, Iglesias issued his revolutionary "plan," he has been driven from his country and landed a fugitive upon a foreign shore, while the result of his misguided proceedings has been to place success, which could not have otherwise been reached, within the grasp of the professional revolutionist Diaz, and to postpone, it is to be feared for an indefinite period, all possibility of good government, of order, and of progress in Mexico. It is this conspiracy against the constitutional order, and resort to revolutionary means by those who have heretofore been prominent leaders in the republican cause, and have held the highest positions in the State and the Army, which now awaken the most serious doubts and apprehensions with regard to the future of the neighboring republic.

ATTEMPT AT ARSON AND MURDER.

THE CONSPIRACY AT CATSKILL—A PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

HUDSON, Jan. 28.—The preliminary examination of John N. Hover, who was arrested Friday last on a charge of attempt at arson and murder, the particulars of which have heretofore been made public, commenced before Justice Overhiser yesterday morning. Ward, who was employed, with a confederate, by the prisoner to burn the house of Mr. Post, of Catskill, and murder his family, was the first witness examined. His testimony was of a very interesting character, and was listened to by a large crowd of spectators. Ward said he was to have been liberally paid for doing the work proposed by Hover, but becoming conscience-stricken at the enormity of the crime proposed, he disclosed the conspiracy to the detectives. The examination will be resumed to-morrow morning.

FATAL EFFECTS OF HYDROPHOBIA.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 28.—Charles P. Wetmore, aged 26 years, died at 5 o'clock this morning of hydrophobia, after suffering fearfully from the attack since Thursday last. Deceased was bitten last Summer three times by one dog and once by another. The symptoms first manifested themselves on Thursday, but a physician was not summoned until Friday, and he did not fully comprehend the case. The case developed more fully Friday night, and the physician was called, but the patient at this time could only be relieved by hypodermic injections. Mr. Wetmore was a native of St. John, N. B., and had relatives in San Francisco.

THE STEAMER NEWPORT AFLOAT AGAIN.

NEW-HAVEN, Jan. 28.—At high water to-day the steamer Newport, of the Old Colony Line, got off the beach in this harbor without difficulty, it being perigee tide. The steamer Continental assisted her. She lay in the channel during the day, but will go on the dry-dock at once for repairs, as she is sprung a little forward, which is believed to be the only injury she has received. She went aground at noon of Tuesday, Jan. 2, and has been on the beach almost 26 days.

GOSSIP FROM FRANCE.

MISCELLANEOUS AFFAIRS IN THE FRENCH CAPITAL.

THE WEATHER IN PARIS—A PRIMA DONNA'S SUCCESS—THE MASK BALLS AT THE OPERA-HOUSE—HOW PARISIAN MUSICIANS COMBINED TO INJURE JOHAN STRAUSS — THE CONSPIRATORS CONDEMNED BY THE CRITICS—AN ASSASSIN'S TERRIBLE CONFESSION—THE LIBERTY OF THE PRESS.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Friday, Jan. 12, 1877.

The weather here continues to be the most remarkable known at this season since the beginning of the century. To-day the temperature is that of Spring. The trees are showing signs of budding; flies are coming out; and we are having a series of real Summer showers. The weather has been particularly favorable to the baraques upon the boulevards, all of them doing an exceptionally fine business this year. They have been cleared away at length, the last of them having disappeared yesterday. As a consequence of the fine weather the boulevards are thronged with promenaders from morning until night.

The sensation of the day is Mlle. Albani at the Théâtre Italiens. Last night this young cantatrice had a real success in "Lucia di Lammermoor," and before as critical an audience as one can find in the world. It was but a few years ago that I heard a young girl sing in the saloons of Mr. Downing, and noted then that she had a remarkable voice and talent. That young lady, Mlle. Lajeunesse, now appears as a prima donna under the name of Albani, and there is predicted for her a grand success.

A decided sensation has been caused here by an event which is likely to cause no small amount of gossip in the artistic world. Every American who has visited Paris during the Winter has heard of or attended the famous mask balls of the Opera. During the reign of Louis Philippe they were frequented by the highest classes, and in the time of Torquin they were superb. Napoleon III. gave every possible encouragement to these balls, not on account of the pleasure they afforded, but because they set in movement fabulous sums of money, and directly benefited the working and trading classes of Paris. It is estimated that each ball necessitates the expenditure of at least 5,000,000 francs. Of this sum, the cabmen get about 50,000 francs, glovemakers and dealers 100,000 francs, flowersellers 40,000 francs, and so on through a number of trades and occupations. After each ball the working classes find themselves more at ease, and money appears to be plentiful. The importance of this species of trade can hardly be appreciated except by those familiar with Paris, or those who know how large a proportion of the population is dependent upon the indulgence in luxuries on the part of the rich. For two years after the war Paris suffered for the want of fêtes. M. Halanzier was appointed Director of the Opera, but money was not so plentiful with him then, and he would not undertake the large outlay required for these balls. More than 300,000 francs have to be invested in preparations, and M. Halanzier demanded an additional subvention from the Government for the purpose. It was short of money also, and had hard work to maintain the equilibrium of the budget. But France is the most astonishing country in the world in the matter of finance. Although the times have been hard, the vines injured by the phyloxera, the harvests barely middling, and the taxes crushing, the Government found its revenues largely in excess of its expenditures, and it was resolved to scatter some of this money about among the people. The Marshal-President is carrying out the policy of Napoleon III. to a certain extent, and it is for the benefit of the people that he is erecting those costly works upon the Trocadero, and preparing for 1878. He asked M. Halanzier to give a series of balls, and the Minister promised to come to his assistance with a certain sum of money.

M. Halanzier determined to do the thing handsomely, and he has spared no expense in his preparations. The first ball is fixed for to-morrow night. Two maestros have been engaged to lead the orchestra, and Johan Strauss and O. Métra will wield the bâton by turns, each giving his own music. Johan Strauss arrived here the other day, and it is here that the incident of which I speak came in. Naturally the orchestra was already familiar with the music, and he took the bâton for a trial. Strauss was thunderstruck at the result. It is true that they played the notes of his music correctly, but in a humdrum sort of way, giving no life or animation to these soul-inspiring strains. The idea that a week of rehearsals would be necessary with an orchestra composed of first-class artists had not entered his head. And the next night—yesterday—M. Halanzier had invited the press and the Opera subscribers to a general rehearsal. Yet Johan hoped for the best, and when the house was filled with an elegant and critical audience, Métra presented Strauss, and the latter stepped forward to his stand. M. Halanzier had given a glorious dinner before the rehearsal, during which the two composers shook hands between the courses, and both arrived upon the stage in the best of form and condition. When all was ready, Strauss came forward and gave the signal for the commencement of "Love, Drink, and Sing." Upright and stiff as usual when beginning, Johan started the musicians off, but he soon showed signs of agitation. Turning toward the orchestra, he swung his arms, beat the cadence with his foot, grew excited, and turned and twisted about like a madman, making the most violent gesticulations, and all the time the musicians droned along in a somnolent way, striking every note, it is true, but giving no life or expression to it. All of Johan's efforts were in vain, and he stared in amazement when the piece came to an end. Métra then came forward, and the scene was instantly transformed. "La Vague" was given in a superior way, and with a vim which carried away the audience. When Strauss again came forward the orchestra relapsed into its somnolent state. The master took up his violin and played himself in a way that would seem to have been irresistible, but the musicians could not be moved, and it was evident that there was a conspiracy against the Austrian composer.

There is nothing political in this affair, and the motive is not, probably, the nationality of the composer. The musicians of the Opera are very jealous of strangers of any nationality, and when Verdi came to Paris they refused to play unless their own leader was allowed to wield the bâton. They would not allow even Verdi to direct his own music. And now they resent the interference of Johan Strauss, and mean to make his visit a failure if they can. The press takes sides with Strauss, and condemns in strong terms the unworthy and unjustifiable conduct of the orchestra. Some of the papers recommend him to go back to Vienna at once and bring out his own orchestra, for it is evident that the musicians of the Opera have organized a cabal against him, and mean to make him out inferior to Métra on the night of the ball. The persons present at the rehearsal were not a little disturbed by this unexpected incident, and since Johan had been especially invited to Paris, they desired to show some marks of their sympathy. Hence they called for "The Beautiful Blue Danube"—which was executed in the same villainous manner—and then for other pieces. It is just possible that the condemnations of the critics may bring these recalcitrant musicians to reason before to-morrow night.

Billoir, the confessed assassin, has changed his story with regard to the manner of the murder of Marie le Manach. His first story was that she came home tipsy on the day of her death, the 3d of November, and broke a gilded glass, which he prized as a souvenir. While stooping to pick up the pieces he gave her a kick, in his momentary passion, which caused her death. The French have a way of extorting confessions from prisoners unknown in legal procedure elsewhere. In the first place, Billoir was confined in the same room with another "assassin," that is, a man employed to catch every word let fall by the accused. The latter had some trifling notes to add to the results of the examination of Billoir's story, and when all was ready the Commissaire again appeared before his "patient." He demonstrated to Billoir as clearly as A B C, that his statement was impossible, since the appearance of the woman's face after death was not that of a person knocked insensible by a blow or a kick. There were certain marks or lines in the face which showed that the victim was conscious of her doom a moment before death. She must have seen grim death before her eyes and been terrified by it. "Look, M. Billoir," the Commissaire bluntly remarked, "see the drawings of Lavater! Remark the lines about the mouth, where the sentiment of terror is depicted; and will you be kind enough to compare those lines with these—you see the difference? Now, M. Billoir, it must be clear to a man of your intelligence that the unfortunate Mme. Le Manach was conscious an instant before her death, and that terror made her muscles contract as in this drawing." That is the way the thing was done. Billoir could not dispute the authority of Lavater, and finally confessed that he struck his mistress with a sharp instrument, a sort of awl—and one was found in his room. And proof has also been found that the woman was not dead on the 4th of November, and the neighbors heard the noise of a dispute in Billoir's room on the nights of the 5th and 6th. It was the evening of the 7th that the body was found, and the doctors swore at first that it could not have been over 48 hours in the water. The authorities are now trying to prove premeditation.

It appears that the press in France is not free; that thought is gagged and speech muzzled; for, the Droits de l'Homme asserts, the men condemned for participation in the acts of the Commune are not allowed to publish their prose in any journal. If public report can be credited the "X—y" of that journal is no other than M. Le Comte Henri de Rochfort, Marquis de Lucay, but that Radical Red Republican nobleman is forbidden to sign "Henri Rochfort." It may astonish people to learn that this notorious person is a noble with two titles, but there is a family history connected with his birth into which I do not care to enter. His father was legally married to a servant in his employ, and, according to the French law, which allows a man to repair his faults at any time, M. de Rochfort is the legal heir to the title and property of the late Marquis de Lucay. As for the latter, not much can be said, for Henri Rochfort is accused of leaving his old father in the deepest poverty while he himself was rolling in riches. He himself has daughters, born before his marriage, but I believe that he repaired his faults by marrying late the mother of his children, thus giving them a legal status. His eldest daughter was married the other day at Geneva.

LARGE FIRE AT HARTFORD.

MERRIMAN'S BLOCK IN FORD STREET TOTALLY DESTROYED—LOSS OVER $200,000.

Merriman's block on Ford street, Hartford, Conn., in which were located the Plimpton Manufacturing Company, Seidler & May, furniture manufacturers, and George D. Bartlett, clothier, was totally burned yesterday morning between 5 and 7 o'clock. The total loss is $223,000, and the insurance $144,250. The loss of the Plimpton Company was $120,000, and the insurance $70,000, in a large number of companies, in policies of $5,000 and $2,500. Seidler & May's loss is $30,000, and insurance $24,250, in 12 companies, including the Atlantic, of New-York, $2,000; the Liverpool, London and Globe, $2,000; Lancashire, $2,250; Merchants', of Newark, $3,000; Home, of Newark, $2,500; Ætna, of Hartford, $2,500. The loss on the block, which is owned by J. Merriman, is $45,000 and the insurance $30,000, including the Imperial and Northern, $10,000 each; the Phœnix, of Hartford, $5,000; Howard, of New-York, $2,500; North America, of Philadelphia, $5,000; Franklin, of Philadelphia, $2,500; German-American, of New-York, $2,500. George D. Bartlett's loss is $30,000, and insurance $5,000 each in the Royal, of Liverpool, Connecticut, Hartford, and National, of Hartford, and Continental, of New-York.

OTHER FIRES.

The loss by the Academy of Music fire at Indianapolis will probably not exceed from $100,000 to $125,000. The building was insured for $50,000. Smith & Potts', grocers, loss is about $4,500; insurance, $2,000. J. H. Lyons', stoves, stock was partially destroyed; valued at $3,500 and insured for $2,500. C. Held's, liquor saloon, loss is $1,000; no insurance. H. H. Lee's loss is $10,000; covered by insurance. Dickson & Lossy's, lessees of theatre, loss is $3,000; no insurance.

A dispatch from Connellsville, Penn., says Porter, Tennants, Boyts & Co.'s foundry was destroyed by fire yesterday morning at 5 o'clock. The loss is estimated at $15,000, and is covered by insurance. The Baltimore House, adjoining, was also destroyed. Loss $3,000; fully covered by insurance.

The boarding-house of J. G. Cummings, on Second street, Hallowell, Me., was burned last night. Loss, $3,000; insurance, $2,000. While the furniture was being removed an explosion occurred in one of the rooms, supposed from gunpowder, seriously injuring four persons.

Adam's Block, in Biddeford, Me., was burned yesterday. Loss, $15,000; insurance about $7,000.

THE EVANGELISTS IN BOSTON.

BOSTON, Jan. 28.—Messrs. Moody and Sankey began their revival meeting at the new tabernacle on Tremont street, this afternoon. Large numbers were present from adjoining towns, and 10 minutes after the doors were opened the building, which seats 6,000 persons, was filled in every portion, hundreds being unable to obtain seats. It is estimated that 10,000 people went away, being unable to gain admission. At the services this evening, also, thousands of people thronged the various entrances, vainly seeking admission.

SENATOR CONKLING'S REPUTATION ABROAD.

The London Standard of Jan. 16, referring to the report in that city that a scheme of settlement of the Presidential election had been outlined, says: "The scheme is said to have been devised by Senator Conkling, one of the least respectable and most violent professional politicians in the Republican ranks. His suggestion is alleged to have been accepted by the Democrats, and it is affirmed that two of his Republican Senatorial colleagues on the committee, among the most influential and reputable of the Republican leaders, have very reluctantly assented to it. Now it is, to say the least of it, difficult to understand how Mr. Conkling could devise anything which the Democrats could accept. The mere fact that a suggestion emanated from such a quarter would seem to render it justly open to Democratic suspicion. But it is within the bounds of possibility that the Senator has done what a would-be Senator from Louisiana is said to have done at the same moment; that is to say, he may have arranged with the Democrats some personal compromise favorable to him, and to a few of his immediate friends, and certain in the estimation of those who have accepted it to result in the installation of Mr. Tilden."

WOODIN "CATCHES A TRAIN."

HARRIS' RESOLUTIONS — WHOSE VICTORY WAS IT?—HOW SIX REPUBLICAN SENATORS MADE HASTE TO GET IN ACCORD WITH THE "SAGE OF ONEIDA"—SENATOR WOODIN'S REMARKABLE ANXIETY TO "CATCH A TRAIN."

From Our Own Correspondent.

ALBANY, Saturday, Jan. 27, 1877.

The passage through the Senate yesterday of Senator Harris' resolution containing a quasi indorsement of the Congressional device for raffling off the Presidency appears to be variously interpreted. The Democrats are disposed to claim it as a victory for them, inasmuch as their side voted unanimously for it, while the more abject followers of Roscoe Conkling are trying to make people believe that it was a triumph for the "Sage of Oneida." The truth is, it was not a triumph for anybody, for the very good reason that it was not in any sense an expression of the opinion of the Senate. The resolution got 15 votes out of 32, or less than one-half of the Senate. Of these votes nine were Democratic and six Republican. It remains for the six Republicans to explain their votes as best they can to their constituents. When Woodin's resolutions were submitted to the caucus, they were heartily indorsed by every Republican present. The only fault Harris found with them was that they were not strong enough in upholding the position which the Republican Party had taken with regard to the count of the Electoral vote. This, however, was before the Congressional Committee had made a report. Had the question been put at that time to the New-York Senate whether any compromise was advisable, or ought to be reported by the committee, every one of the 19 Republican Senators would have voted in the negative. But after the compromise had been reported and had passed the United States Senate, and was certain to pass the House of Representatives, Harris sprang to the front with his "Cheap John" proposition to "indorse" the inevitable. It is not very creditable to their independence or good sense that he found five Republican Senators ready to follow him. Whether their object was to put themselves in accord with the "Sage of Oneida," or whether they had honestly changed their opinions since they indorsed Woodin's resolutions in caucus, they did not vouchsafe to explain. It cannot be very flattering to them, however, to have Conkling's friends running around boasting that they were "whipped into the traces." They will find before they get through with this business that their constituents—the people—have opinions about the compromise as well as Senator Conkling, and that, although he may dispense Custom-house patronage, he cannot dispose of the votes nor trade away the principles of the Republican Party. From all parts of the country comes the emphatic dissent of the Republican Party from the whole scheme concocted by Congress for declaring the result of the Presidential election, and the six Senators who made such haste to indorse a compromise after it had become an accomplished fact, will probably see occasion before the end of another month to wish they had stuck to their original opinions. Senator Woodin's remarkable performance in connection with this matter is severely censured. It is well known he did not remain to vote against Harris' resolutions. It is claimed for him that he had announced long before the vote was taken that he would have to leave at the time he did in order to "catch the train," and "it is said" he had begged Harris to postpone the vote till Tuesday in order that there might be a full Senate. But Harris, it seems, was bent on "getting in accord with the Sage of Oneida," and couldn't wait. The result was he got six of the 19 Republican Senators to vote for his resolutions, and proposes to call that a victory for Conkling. It may turn out to be a victory that is worse than a defeat to Senator Conkling and other Republicans who followed his lead.

The names of the supple Senators who so suddenly turned a somersault at the dictation of the "Sage of Onsida," are Prince, Vedder, Emerson, McCarthy, Baaden, and Harris. The Senators who had the courage to stand by their convictions, even though they might differ from the "Sage," were Judge Robertson, President pro tem. of the Senate; Mr. Carpenter, of Dutchess; Mr. Cole, of Orleans; Mr. Coleman, of Rensselaer; Mr. Moore, of St. Lawrence, and Mr. Sayre, of Oneida. The absentees among the Republicans were Sprague, Woodin, Selkreg, Wellman, Wagner, Tobey, and Doolittle.

POST OFFICE CHANGES.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—The following were the Post Office changes during the week ending Jan. 27, 1877:

New-England.—Postmasters Appointed—F. Caswell, Embden, Somerset County, Me.; A. S. Hudson, East Newark, Caledonia County, Vt.; Cary Knight, South Walden, Caledonia County, Vt.; Franklin N. Folles, Dunstable, Middlesex County, Mass.; Theodore F. Bassett, Hyannis, Barnstable County, Mass.; James H. Barnum, Lime Rock, Litchfield County, Conn.; George B. Cogswell, North Easton, Bristol County, Mass.

New-York.—Offices Established—Barkers, Niagara County, H. E. Briggs, Postmaster. Offices Discontinued—Seneca, Schuyler County. Postmasters Appointed—Henry C. Johnson, Astoria, Queens County; Delia Pasco, Athol, Warren County; A. E. Lobdell, Brewster's Station, Putnam County; Norman T. Andrews, Greenwich, Washington County; Harvey B. Goodemote, Perth, Fulton County; Royal K. Smith, Pleasant Ridge, Dutchess County.

New-Jersey.—Postmasters Appointed—Charles Keeler, Hightstown, Mercer County; Abram V. Sunger, Sunny Side, Hunterdon County.

Pennsylvania.—Offices Established—Beech wood, Cameron County, W. C. Clark, Postmaster; East Greenville, Montgomery County, H. S. Kreible, Postmaster. Names Changed—Blair City, Clearfield County, to Rumey; West Grove Station, Chester County, to West Grove. Postmasters Appointed—Catherine A. Hicks, Coalmount, Huntingdon County; Leonard Sens, Hammett, Erie County; William W. Sprowls, Locust Hill, Washington County; C. C. W. Hazzard, Monongahela City, Washington County; George W. Cummings, Mount Vernon, Chester County; William T. Knight, Ramer, Delaware County; W. W. Cole, Sabula, Clearfield County.

Maryland.—Postmasters Appointed—Charles W. Armingdale, Cordova, Talbot County; Harry O. Jessop, Hereford, Baltimore County; Sarah Bonsal, Waverly, Baltimore County.

BURGLARY IN PROVIDENCE.

BOSTON, Jan. 28.—G. & S. Owens' jewelry establishment, on Snow street, Providence, was entered by burglars this morning; the safe blown open, and $2,000 worth of jewelry stolen.

SUICIDE THROUGH BUSINESS DIFFICULTIES.

LAWRENCE, Mass., Jan. 28.—Col. William B. Coan committed suicide by taking laudanum, this morning. The act is attributed to depression arising from business embarrassments.

MURDER OF A SALOON-KEEPER.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 28.—Charles Dodsworth, while on a drunken spree, to-day shot and instantly killed Henry Sasse, a saloon-keeper of Cumminsville, in the suburbs of this ci-

NOTES FROM ENGLAND.

MISCELLANEOUS AFFAIRS ABROAD.

THE CONSTANTINOPLE CONFERENCE STILL UNDER DISCUSSION—A FEW CORRESPONDENTS MENTIONED FAVORABLY AND OTHERWISE—AN ACHING TOOTH IN RELIGIOUS CIRCLES—THE EFFECTS OF RITUALISM—THE CONTEMPORARY REVIEW—GENERAL NOTES.

From Our Own Correspondent.

LONDON, Saturday, Jan. 13, 1877.

Scarcely any authentic news has been received as to the proceedings at the conference at Constantinople; but much that has already been published, and, indeed, all the more important parts, is known to be little better than inventions by newspaper correspondents and persons concerned in financial speculations. What is obvious, and it has been obvious from the first, is that though various European Governments may have contrived to come to a formal verbal agreement on the points at issue, as soon as there is a question of the precise form of practical action, differences at once arise. It was, no doubt, natural and convenient that the Plenipotentiaries should take evidence and discuss their respective plans in a private conference, from which Turkey was excluded, but this could only be as a preliminary to a real and decisive conference which was to follow. Turkey had a right to be heard in its own defense just the same as any accused person at the bar. The Sultan's life is personally at stake for the maintenance of the honor and interests of his country; and he has to consider not only what concessions can be made for the sake of peace, but what would be the effect of concessions on the Turkish populace, and on his own safety. He is bound, therefore, to make at least a good show of resistance to propositions which strike at the integ proprietary, as it involves an entire change in the management and character of the periodical. The Contemporary was originally started on the model of the Fortnightly, for the free and independent expression of current thought by writers who attached their names to their articles, and were at liberty to take any side and to express their opinions with the utmost latitude on the questions which they discussed. It is obvious that a magazine of this kind afforded a valuable opportunity for outspoken criticism, and though the contributors were not all men of note, there was a fair proportion of the latter among them, such as Mr. Gladstone, Prof. Tyndall, Prof. Huxley, Mr. Matthew Arnold, &c. It could not be said that the Contemporary was a free-thinking or infidel organ, because it occasionally published contributions which savored of such views, because articles for the orthodox point of view were also admitted, and the Contemporary itself did not make any profession of opinion on its own account. It was, in fact, an arena provided for controversial encounters, and all that the editor had to do was to see that the disputants were of competent abilities, and had something to say which was worth hearing. The Contemporary, as an open periodical of this kind, may now be considered as at an end. It will continue to exist, but its nature will be entirely different. Mr. Samuel Morley (who must not be confounded with Mr. John Morley, the editor of the Fortnightly, who is a Radical of quite another type) is the head of the political dissenters. He is their mouthpiece in the House of Commons, and being a very wealthy man—he is in the linen and hosiery trade—does not grudge a large expenditure to keep bands of working-class and other professional agitators, who are paraded under the names of various societies and associations, as representing public opinion. He also gives his support to several newspapers on the side of Dissent, such as the Beehive, now called the Industrial Review, the Daily News, and others. It may be assumed, therefore, that the Contemporary will henceforth be elevated to this sort of work, and will be filled with attacks on the Church of England, and proposals for disestablishment. Some amazement has been caused by a statement that the new proprietors have laid it down that the editors must believe in the Atonement. It will continue to be published by Strahan & Co., but Mr. Knowles, who had practically the editing in his hands, has retired, and intends to establish another magazine after the fashion of the one he formerly conducted, to be called The Nineteenth Century. Mr. Knowles is an architect as well as a man of letters, and is an intimate friend of Mr. Tennyson, Prof. Tyndall, and others, from whom he will probably obtain assistance in his new enterprise.

The rage for publishing weekly papers still continues. The Times has come out with its two-penny Saturday paper, which has, of course, a respectable appearance—as anything emanating from Printing-house square is sure to have—but whether it will command a large sale, so as to make it worth the while of such a journal to go on with it, remains to be seen. It was at first intended to be a penny sheet, but the editor protested against going so low. The Weekly Times does not give any original matter, but only a reproduction of the principal articles of the week, with a large proportion of reviews. Another weekly, at a shilling, has been projected under the name of the Portrait, in order to "illustrate the time we live in by means of photographs and memoirs of those who adorn or disgrace it." Writers of "ability and known modesty" are to be allowed to write their own biographies, and among others, Mr. W. Black, the author of Mad Cap Violet, is mentioned as having promised an account of himself, which, however, is not very likely. The early numbers will contain portraits of Lord Beaconsfield, Gen. Tchernayeff, Mr. Swinborne, and Mr. W. E. Forster, M. P. Another new publication, which, after a brief experiment as a quarterly, has "struggled into politics," as it says, to become monthly, is The Cosmopolitan Critic and Controversialist. The January number contains articles on "The Utility of Controversy," "Is Cosmopolitanism Preferable to Patriotism?" "Modern Society," "Temperance Legislation," "Sunday Observance," and other lively subjects, with a note appended, "Laconical replies to these articles are invited."

Among the more important of the new books now being got ready for publication may be mentioned another volume of selections from the civil and political correspondence of the Duke of Wellington, bearing on the Eastern question, in 1828-9; a life of the late Mr. George Moore, written by a personal friend; and Dr. Schleimann's book about his discoveries in the ancient City of Mycenæ.

J. H. F.

LITERATURE ABOUT THE EAST.

"A RESIDENCE IN BULGARIA" REVISED INTO "TWELVE YEARS' STUDY OF THE EASTERN QUESTION"—ANOTHER BOOK UNDER WAY.

From an Occasional Correspondent.

LONDON, Saturday, Jan. 13, 1877.

Two more new books on the Eastern Question. One published this week; another in the press. That under immediate notice is favorable to the Turk; the one to come is to be against him. Twelve Years' Study of the Eastern Question in Bulgaria, by S. G. B. St. Clair and Charles A. Brophy, is a revised edition of A Residence in Bulgaria, which was published in 1866-7, and was left to the oblivion of the book-shelves of a few public libraries. We were not thinking much about Bulgaria just then; some of us would have been puzzled for the moment to say where Bulgaria was. The authors add some interesting notes, but the general character of the book remains unaltered. It is one of the brightest and best written books of travel I have read for some time. The writers are not only keen observers, but they know how to describe what they have seen. Their general impression of the Bulgarian is not flattering to the so-called Christianity of this now much-talked of people. They give plenty of evidence to prove that the Bulgarian is a loafer, a thief, a murderer, and a beast. While they found the Bulgarian all this and more, including in his faults a disregard of all religious influence—his only faith being in witchcraft and charms—they were impressed with the honesty, liberality, and general good conduct of the Turk. They say that Russian influence in European Turkey has been and is the curse of the dependent States of the Sultan, and they think that Russia not only would be beaten in a war with the Turk, but further, that she deserves to be beaten. Rev. Malcolm MacColl is pushing his book on the Eastern Question through the press with all speed. He is going to demonstrate the rule of the Porte to be bad, immoral, and incurable. He is going to show that to help to maintain the independence of Turkey is to be responsible for the misdeeds of a vicious Government. Further, he is going to attack her Majesty's Ministers for taking part with the infidel and the polygamist. One is almost inclined to pity the sick man, both on account of the way in which he is condemned and defended. We are gradually getting up sides in England, and if war does not come soon to end the difficulty, we shall be as bitter in our partisan factions as we were during your great war of North and South. Just as we had begun to speculate upon the new prospects of peace, Prince Bismarck puts his spoke in the Eastern wheel. Germany's game is war, whoever wins, whoever loses. One day she affects to be with Turkey, the next with Russia; but it is clear that she is on the side of mischief, and Russia mistrusts her friendship almost as much as she fears her opposition. The Telegraph is the only paper able to publish this news of the interference of Germany, and in answer to some sneers that this paper is subsidized by Turkey, the Telegraph draws attention to the remarkable and exclusive character of its news from the East. Monday next is to decide whether the conference is a failure or not. Meanwhile, society bristles with rumors of all kinds. "One who knows" tells you that there is a coldness between Lord Derby and the Marquis of Salisbury. Another, who knows better, says the statement is utterly false. Then some gossip, livelier than his friends, says Lady Salisbury is in favor of polygamy, and that the noble Viscount will probably bring home half a dozen Circassian beauties. They would certainly create a sensation in Mayfair. When Parliament opens there is to be a big discussion on the Eastern Question, and the Liberal Party is to be formally divided. The Radicals have determined to separate themselves from the Whigs, and they have chosen Mr. Gladstone to lead them. Lord Hartington will take command of the old party. Mr. Gathorne Hardy, it is said, will be made a Peer, and Lord Derby will take a more than usually active part in the ministerial oratory of the session. Mr. Gladstone has a new book in the press on music—above all things in the world. He has not faced the music of disappointment so well as his political supporters could have wished, but we shall have some lively scenes in the Spring. St. Stephen's will be worth a visit when the session is in full swing again.

OIL EXPLOSION IN BOSTON.

HOW THE HUB WAS STARTLED ON FRIDAY EVENING.

From the Boston Advertiser, Jan. 27.

There was an explosion at the oil-works of Stephen Jenney & Co., in South Boston, at 7:55 o'clock last evening, by which one person is supposed to have been killed. The buildings were entirely destroyed, and a large amount of oil was consumed by fire. The explosion came without the slightest warning and with terrible effect. The buildings appeared to be lifted almost bodily from their foundations, and a blazing mass was shot up into the air, seemingly, hundreds of feet. The shock was felt over the whole city, was especially severe in Chelsea, and was generally noticed in the whole country between Cambridge and Quincy. The sky was for a moment illuminated with a glare like that of calcium light. In a moment the city was alive with excitement, and, before the fire-alarm bells struck, a hurrying crowd had turned toward South Boston, soon filling every car and the sidewalks on every street leading to the scene of the explosion. It is almost incredible how suddenly the crowd formed. The most intense excitement prevailed, for the Lagrange street and the Federal street bridge disasters were fresh in the minds of every one, and the force of the explosion foreboded a terrible loss of life. The event was the topic of conversation all through the evening, and many wild rumors as to the extent of the disaster prevailed in the city and in the suburbs. The noise produced was a dull, heavy thud, similar to that produced by an earthquake, and the glass in buildings in the vicinity was shattered to a considerable extent. People ran into the streets in terror, thinking that their houses were coming down about their heads.

The scene at the fire was wild and weird beyond description. The buildings had been leveled by the shock, and nothing but the smoking chimneys stood. The principal volume of flame came from an underground tank, containing about 300 barrels of oil, which burned furiously, the flames rolling up 20 or 30 feet high, the white blaze mingling with a dense black smoke. Several other tanks were also burning, and the whole resembled a sea of bubbling, blazing fire, which was reflected by the church spires and the tops of the houses in all directions. While the streets surrounding the square in which the buildings were situated were soon crowded with thousands of spectators. The rumor spread among them that the ground beneath them was honeycombed with tanks filled with oil, which might at any moment explode; but so enchanting was the fascination of the terrible flames, that many would not fall back until the mounted police actually rode upon them. Fortunately, however, there was no further explosion, though there were numerous alarms and sudden stampedes. The firemen could do no better service than to keep the tanks that were above ground cool. The frozen earth protected the subterranean ones, and the burning oil in the open tanks was left to consume. It burned fiercely all through the night, and the locality was marked by the dense cloud of black smoke which hung above it.

A gentleman who was crossing the West Boston Bridge at the time of the explosion says that he first saw a flash of light, and then this curious phenomenon was observed: A cone-shaped solid cloud of smoke, with an immense base, was slowly lifted up into the air, apparently several hundred feet, by a pillar of fire, in which could be seen black specks like pieces of wood and blazing brands. The whole structure rested in mid air for a moment, then seemed to fall with a crash that could be distinctly heard, and immediately afterward the whole heavens were brightly illuminated. A curious fact was that "the pillar of fire," as he expressed it, did not give out a brilliant light, although the mass looked as if it was in a white heat.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

The Watertown Times of Wednesday has the following: "One of the most singular accidents on record occurred to Charles Williams this morning, on Factory street in this city, and how Williams survived the perils of the moment is a mystery that cannot be solved. The facts are as follows: Mr. Williams works at the Davis Sewing-machine shops on Sewall's Island, and was on his way to work. When he was going up Factory street, and at the foot of Mechanic street, the train going north came along, and Williams concluded he would get on and ride as far as the shops. In attempting to get on the forward platform of the rear car, his foot slipped and he fell down in front of the wheels. Mace Hanchett, engineer of the train, had just 'pulled out,' and was therefore making good time; Mr. Will Richey was on the rear platform of the train and saw Williams when he went to get on. He supposed he had got on all right, but soon saw him under the platform, when he immediately sprang the patent brakes and pulled the bell-cord. The train ran about 20 rods before it was stopped. During all this time, till just before the train stopped, Williams lay in front of the forward trucks, across the rails, and was rolled over and over and shoved along in some manner entirely unknown. Just before the train had stopped, the forward trucks shoved him around and passed him, when he was overtaken by the rear trucks and again rolled and shoved till finally they passed him, and when the train was stopped he lay across the rails, about 10 or 15 feet in the rear of the train. Richey ran back and asked him how badly he was injured. He said 'I am killed.' His legs and arms, but when he was picked up he screamed and said his back was broken. He was placed in a sleigh and taken to his residence on Moulton street. Dr. H. G. P. Spencer was called and ascertained that there were no external injuries of any consequence, but as to the internal injuries he could not fully determine, but was of the opinion that, if any, they were slight. Afterward Dr. H. W. Streeter was called, and his opinion is the same as Dr. Spencer's."

A PERILOUS CEREMONY.

The Norristown (Penn.) Herald says: "Five converts were baptized in the Schuylkill, near Green Tree, on Sunday last by Rev. Jacob Gotwals, Dunkard minister at the Green Tree Church. At the point where the ceremony was performed the current in the river runs so swiftly that no ice had formed. The water, as may well be imagined, was extremely cold, and there came near being a serious accident. The Dunkard ceremonial differs in some respects from that of the Baptists. The convert enters a comparatively shallow portion of the water, and kneels down. He or she is dipped three times, being immersed once in the name of the Father, once in the name of the Son, and once in the name of the Holy Ghost. After each immersion the convert is given time to recover his breath, so that the whole process is of some duration. One of the novitiates in this case was a rather stout lady who is not a light weight. When she entered the water the current was so strong that it took her off her feet. Mr. Gotwals is not very strong, and was thoroughly chilled, and when he caught her he too was carried away. A thrill of horror ran through the crowd as the Pastor and the lady were about to be swept swiftly under the solid ice. Two gentlemen on the bank plunged bodily in, caught them and brought them from their peril. Another lady, when she emerged from the water, came near fainting from the cold and exposure."

WHAT THE ORGAN CONTAINED.

The St. Louis Republican says: "Mr. Dudley Thomas, a worthy gentleman, living near Miami station, Carroll County, has a fine organ which has been furnishing his family with music in a rather mysterious manner for a few weeks past. During the stillness of night it would strike up and play a few tunes, apparently of its own accord, without anyone being near, and at other times it would seem as though a dozen children were trying to play on it all at the same time. Finally the mystery was solved by one of the young ladies, who, while practicing one day, happened to press a key down most too hard upon a little fellow's back, who let the secret out in an instant, and upon examination being made it was found that mice had taken charge of the whole instrument. They had carried an immense quantity of old newspapers and carpet rags into it and deposited them immediately under the keys, and had raised a litter of young there."

EARTHQUAKE IN PENNSYLVANIA.

The Lancaster (Penn.) Examiner of the 22d inst. says: "Some people are clearly of the opinion that this section of the country felt the shock of an earthquake yesterday afternoon about 1:30 o'clock. It was distinctly felt in different sections of the city, particularly in the southern portion and on low ground, such as Water street. People living in the vicinity of the gas-works felt the shock so sensibly that they were alarmed. The stove-plates rattled, and the sound was of that rumbling character sometimes made by thunder. A gentleman from the country, in the direction of Lampeter, assures us that he heard it distinctly. We have as yet heard no explanation of the cause of it."

POLITICS FROM THE PEOPLE

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

THE TEMPER OF THE SOUTH.

THE SEEMING CONSERVATISM OF THE SOUTHERN PEOPLE ONLY A MEASURE OF PRUDENCE—IT DOES NOT SPRING FROM ANY ATTACHMENT TO THE GOVERNMENT—WOOD AND HEWITT ONLY PULLING THE CHESTNUTS OUT OF THE FIRE FOR GORDON, HILL, AND LAMAR.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In your issue of Friday last, discussing the much-talked-of conservative element in the Southern Democracy, it is gratifying to observe that not quite all the Republicans of the North are blind to the danger that menaces the country from the too confident reliance upon the nationality of feeling and peaceful intentions of the South. Even THE TIMES, however, is, to some extent, misled by the skill with which certain leaders of public opinion in the South manage to impose themselves upon the North as national men. While owning to little confidence in the element referred to, or the influence it will exert upon the future of parties, THE TIMES refers to a recent incident to show the value of this element as a check upon partisan violence. I quote:

"For example, the resistance offered in the party caucuses to the insane demand for the impeachment of the President, and to the revolutionary programme laid down by persons who are understood to enjoy Mr. Tilden's confidence, had a double value. It directed attention to the danger incident to the policy of the Tilden managers, and it proved that for whatever lawlessness may be manifested, either in connection with the counting of the Presidential vote or the inauguration of Mr. Hayes, men like Messrs. Hewitt and Wood must bear the responsibility. Again, the South has held aloof from the demonstrations which have taken place within the last few days in support of the avowed purpose to inaugurate Tilden at all hazards."

Undoubtedly it is the policy of the South in this great emergency to keep in the shade, while the country is being worked up to the fighting point by and through those who are not supposed to have any designs upon the country. Wood and Hewitt are only pulling the chestnuts out of the fire for Gordon, Hill, and Lamar. These gentlemen care but little what responsibility may rest upon their tools after their work shall have been accomplished. This seeming conservatism is only a measure of prudence, and does not spring from any attachment to the National Government. Southern men have, more than once within the past 10 years, had occasion to realize how disastrous to their schemes it had been to take the initiatory in elections and measures looking to their former ascendency in the administration of the Government. And since the memorable debate in the House of Representatives last Winter on the Amnesty bill, the indiscreet members of the section have had locks upon their lips, that they might not inadvertently or otherwise excite alarm in the minds of the conservative portion of the nation by premature disclosures as to their ultimate designs. While temporarily seeming to hold in check the war Democrats of the North, care is taken at the same time that the belligerent Hewitt and still more bloody Wood shall not only be sustained in the prosecution of the enterprise, but stimulated and even goaded where there is any appearance of lagging in the march of events in which the destiny of the South is believed to be wrapped up.

The Southern leaders are just now apprehensive that they may have gone too far in their simulated opposition to extreme measures touching the counting of the Electoral vote. There is a slight suspicion that the thing may have been overdone, just as Mr. Hill, of Georgia, is supposed by some to have done, in his endeavor to emulate Mr. Lamar in the difficult feat of riding two horses going in opposite directions. It is not certain, by any means, that Mr. Hill has made any mistake. His constituents probably understand his motives, and are making pretended war upon him for the purpose of giving assurance of his nationality of feeling, while it is certain that many of the organs of public opinion in the South have latterly thought it necessary to define the true position of their countrymen, so that the Democracy of the North and West may not be driven from their avowed purpose of placing Mr. Tilden in the Executive chair.

The South has been preparing for 10 years for another struggle with their enemies of the North, either for the mastery in the Government or separation. The latter is their ultimate design, because they are wise enough to see that they cannot administer the Government more than a single Presidential term from their standpoint. Still their success on this occasion in seating their candidate in the Executive chair peaceably is of the first importance, because it would give them a safe if not a peaceable exit out of the Union at the end of Mr. Tilden's term. Failing in the requisite number of Electoral votes, however, the case, in their judgment, will do to go to the country on with an appeal to arms. They are impatient of delay, and besides, a better chance to measure their strength with the radicals of the North may never again occur. Their opportunity is at hand, and they do not mean to let the occasion pass without a struggle to regain what they lost in the late civil war, provided their friends in the North and West will stand by them. The times are propitious, business is depressed, a considerable portion of the population restless and embarrassed, while hundreds of thousands are idle and ready to engage in any enterprise, however hazardous, which promises meat and bread.

While the great body of the people, Democrats as well as Republicans, throughout the North and West may be and doubtless are averse to placing any one in the Executive office by violence, yet they are inert and unorganized, and therefore utterly helpless in such an emergency as now seems probable within the next 30 days. It will be too late to arm and organize after the first hostile demonstrations shall have been made. And such a calamity may be precipitated upon the country without an apparent design on the part of any one. Let a large gathering of idle and reckless men be found in Washington on the 14th of February or the 4th of March, and they will be made to open the campaign, whether that shall have been their design in visiting the place or not. Southern men understand the art of firing the hearts of Democrats. Once put a mob to work, and the people and the country will speedily divide, and possibly the Army and Navy as well, with the advantage decidedly on the side of the South. I say the South, because no one can fail to see that it will be but a renewal of the rebellion by the defeated rebels, after lying upon their arms 12 years right under the nose of everybody. It is the attitude of the solid South that puts people's thoughts in motion just now. There would be no serious trouble growing out of a Presidential election, even on a disputed vote as in the present case, but for the great number and compact body of States in the Union whose people are hostile to its perpetuity. It is this condition of things that menaces the country, and the menace is abiding. These States nor the people inhabiting them have provoked the threatened contest without preparation. It will be found upon the breaking out of hostilities at the National Capital that troops will reach the scene of conflict in less than 10 hours after the first shot shall have been fired, and by the close of the first week they will be coming in from the remotest States on the Gulf. They are already armed and organized, and are ready to march at the shortest notice. To be sure, their commissariat may be somewhat defective, but they will forage upon the country. The struggle will be to get possession of the seal and Treasury of the Government, and to accomplish that object they will march in double-quick time upon the capital. They have been for 12 years keeping their powder dry and biding their time, in the mean time making their approaches slowly but surely. They have captured State after State south of the Potomac since the reconstruction of those States, until they now have possession of all but two, and are just in the act of taking forcible possession of these. They sat down deliberately, even after the surrender, to undermine the integrity of the Union, and have made steady progress. They now have all the territory south of Pennsylvania, thus environing the capital of the nation, and are in position to cut off by rail all communication with the North and West. Washington may be found on the 4th of March or earlier in the pitiable and beleaguered condition of the Statehouse in Louisiana to-day.

Let no one be deceived by the suggestion that the old Whig element of the South will serve as a clog upon the march of the Democrats to the field. That party has disappeared totally. It was merged bodily into the Democratic Party during the rebellion, and has never been heard of since. Mr. Stephens, of Georgia, was the last great Whig chief of the South, and he is now as rank a State rights Democrat as Toombs. Nor need any one calculate upon the negroes throwing any obstacle in the way of their old masters. They will, on the contrary, do precisely what they did during the late rebellion, that is, make corn, pork, and cotton, while the white men are in the Army, and not unlikely may be made useful in the Army, not too far to the front. They are a placable, kind-hearted, and long-suffering people, and if otherwise they are helpless, and would be speedily swept from the face of the earth if they should evince any intention or desire to take up arms against their "best friends." In fact, they will go into slavery again in the event of another rupture between the North and South, immediately upon its commencement, where it seems pretty certain they will go in any event before many years roll around. It is not so certain that it would not be a happy change for the poor creatures. They are now without protection in life or property, and with no future open to them. Their doom is sealed—no matter who may be inaugurated President on the 5th of March. The Republican Party practically abandoned them to any fate their old masters might subject them to long ago, and even now they give but a feeble support to the President in his efforts to save them from brutal butchery in South Carolina and Louisiana. The fruits of such abandonment will come home to the nation yet, sooner or later. If the suffrage could be taken away from the negro it would be a great boon to him, and at the same time relieve the country from the constant menace of civil war. There would be no excuse or occasion for political murders or intimidation, when the negro has ceased to be a voter. But inasmuch as he can now be made to vote the Democratic ticket everywhere in Democratic States, giving that party some 40 additional members of Congress and as many Electoral votes more than they would otherwise be entitled to; and inasmuch as great stress is now laid upon the fact that Mr. Tilden has a large majority of the popular vote, we need not be surprised hereafter, if the present trouble blows over, to find the Democracy insisting upon electing their candidate upon the popular vote. The negro would then be a power in their hands, and he would probably be intimidated and even murdered in the future as he has been in the past, to swell the popular majority for the Democratic candidate. It is idle, then, to count upon the old Whigs or the negro in any contest hereafter with the Southern people; and as to white Republicans, they have ceased to be a nucleus, even, in most of the States. Republicanism dies wherever the Democracy gets control of a State, so that there is an open field for the South whenever she shall consider it expedient to measure her strength against the nation. And the people of that section are in better condition for the experiment than they were in 1860. Their earnings, since the war, have been invested in active stocks, or put to interest, instead of being invested in negroes, as before the war, while they have largely increased the production of breadstuffs, horses, horned cattle, hogs, and sheep, and also their manufacturing establishments.

This is not a bright prospect for the future of the United States, but it is well enough to look the situation in the face, and see whether there can be any remedy. UNION.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, Jan. 14, 1877.

OVER ONE MILLION FRAUDULENT VOTES FOR TILDEN.

HOW THEY ARE LOCATED—TABULATED STATEMENT OF TOTAL VOTE CAST—THE STATES GOV. HAYES WAS DEFRAUDED OF.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I have prepared a table, omitting fractions of a thousand, in regard to the late Presidential Election. By comparison of population and the votes cast we locate the positive fraudulent votes which amount to over 1,000,000 in number. The intimidated or negative fraudulent votes suppressed, amounting to 300,000 in number, your Southern correspondents have already sufficiently established. The following table gives our data:

STATES.	Population by United States Census, 1870.	One Vote to Each Six Inhabitants.	Legal Vote that Could Be Cast, Allowing One Voter to Each Six Inhabitants.	Total Vote Actually Cast in 1876.	Persons to Each Vote.
Alabama	907,000	166,000	170,000	..	..
Arkansas	484,000	81,000	97,000	..	..
California	560,000	93,000	155,000	..	..
Colorado	40,000	7,000	27,000	..	..
Connecticut	537,000	90,000	122,000	121,000	4.4
Delaware	125,000	21,000	24,000	..	..
Florida	188,000	32,000	47,000	..	..
Georgia	1,184,000	197,000	180,000	..	..
Illinois	2,540,000	422,000	654,000	..	..
Indiana	1,681,000	280,000	431,000	439,000	3.9
Iowa	1,191,000	199,000	292,000	..	..
Kansas	364,000	61,000	124,000	..	..
Kentucky	1,321,000	220,000	360,000	..	..
Louisiana	727,000	121,000	145,000	..	..
Maine	627,000	105,000	116,000	..	..
Maryland	781,000	130,000	164,000	164,000	4.7
Massachusetts	1,457,000	243,000	260,000	..	..
Michigan	1,184,000	198,000	317,000	..	..
Minnesota	440,000	73,000	124,000	..	..
Mississippi	828,000	136,000	165,000	..	..
Missouri	1,721,000	287,000	352,000	..	..
Nebraska	123,000	21,000	53,000	..	..
Nevada	42,000	7,000	20,000	..	..
New-Hampshire	318,000	53,000	80,000	..	..
New-Jersey	906,000	151,000	220,000	521,000	4.1
New-York	4,383,000	730,000	1,015,000	1,015,000	4.3
North Carolina	1,071 000	178,000	232,000	..	..
Ohio	2,665,000	444,000	660,000	660,000	4
Oregon	91,000	15,000	30,000	..	..
Pennsylvania	3,522,000	587,000	769,000	749,000	4.7
Rhode Island	217,000	36,000	27,000	..	..
South Carolina	706,000	118,000	181,000	..	..
Tennessee	1,259,000	210,000	222,000	..	..
Texas	819,000	136,000	150,000	..	..
Vermont	331,000	55,000	64,000	..	..
Virginia	1,225,000	204,000	235,000	..	..
West Virginia	442,000	73,000	101,000	101,000	4.3
Wisconsin	1,055,000	176,000	252,000	..	..
Total	38,135,000	6,356,000	8,427,000	3,427,000	4.5

Louisiana shows only a normal increase in vote on the above, which is the Returning Board count, but by the Democratic count would show an undue increase of 15,000 votes.

Georgia shows a deficiency of 17,000 votes, accounted for on the basis of intimidation and also on account of loss of negro population emigrated to South Carolina and Florida. Rhode Island shows a deficiency of 9,000 votes, or 25 per cent., on the basis that one vote to six of population is a fair count—but which by Horace Greeley was deemed too liberal a basis; if he was correct, Rhode Island cast a vote that was absolutely without suspicion of fraud.

As to South Carolina, a writer in the Atlantic Monthly shows that there was fraud on both sides, principally on the Democratic. Florida has had a large influx of Northern settlers, and also a large influx of negroes from Georgia since 1871, so that her vote is reasonable.

As to the trans-Mississippi States of Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, Arkansas, Texas, Nebraska, Colorado, Oregon, Nevada, and California, together with the States of Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota, and Illinois, the tide of population has been so rapid and great that a large increase in their vote does not seem suspicious.

The table shows no excessive votes in the following States: Alabama, Delaware, Kentucky, Maine, Massachusetts, Mississippi, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Vermont, and Virginia. We have therefore eliminated 30 States in which the election appears fair on its face of the returns, with the exception of South Carolina, where fraud appears to have been principally Democratic, but not sufficient to overturn the real Republican majority in that State.

We have left the following eight States, Connecticut, New-York, New-Jersey, Ohio, Indiana, Maryland, New-Hampshire, and West Virginia in which to locate over 850,000 fraudulent votes of the positive cast.

The eight States last above mentioned I retabulate here:

STATES.	Population by U. S. Census, 1870.	One Vote to Each Six Inhab'ts.	Vote Cast 1876.*
Indiana	1,681,000	280,000	431,000
Connecticut	537,000	90,000	122,000
New-York	4,383,000	730,000	1,015,000
New-Jersey	906,000	151,000	220,000
New-Hampshire	318,000	53,000	80,000
Ohio	2,665,000	440,000	660,000
Maryland	781,000	130,000	164,000
West Virginia	442,000	73,000	101,000
Total	12,813,000	1,947,000	2,803,000

* Or one vote to each four inhabitants on the average.

Six of these States were carried for Samuel J. Tilden by huge frauds; two were carried for Rutherford B. Hayes in spite of fraud. As this article has already engrossed much of your valuable space, I leave the latter subject to be concluded in another letter. On the basis of 2,000,000 of population, and on the basis of one voter—real, bona fide, unintimidated voters—to each six of total population, I propose in another letter to show that Hayes and Wheeler were defrauded of the following States, at least: Connecticut, New-York, Indiana, and probably of New-Jersey and Maryland. I trust the Legislatures of New-York, Indiana, and Connecticut will pass bills to thoroughly investigate the sources of these frauds.

JOSEPH L. TOPHAM.

CAMDEN, Thursday, Jan. 25, 1877.

RITUALISM IN ENGLAND.

LATER SCENES AT MR. TOOTH'S CHURCH, HATCHAM.

THE CONTUMACIOUS RECTOR DECLARED IN CONTEMPT — PROBABILITY THAT HE WILL BE IMPRISONED—EARLY SERVICES IN ST. JAMES' CHURCH—THE CROWD OUTSIDE—A PETITION PREPARED—SYMPATHY FROM A NEIGHBORING CLERGYMAN.

The London papers of Monday, Jan. 15, contain the decision of Lord Penzance against Rev. Arthur Tooth, Rector of St. James' Church, Hatcham, as well as reports of an out-door meeting held near the church, and of the services on Sunday, the 14th inst. On Saturday the Dean of the Arches (Lord Penzance) held a court in the public library of Lambeth Palace. Dr. Stephens, Q. C., and Mr. Benjamin Shaw, appeared for the promoters of the suit against Mr. Tooth. The reverend gentleman was not represented, nor did he deign to put in an appearance. Lord Penzance, after hearing argument, gave a lengthy decision, in which he pronounced Mr. Tooth contumacious, and in contempt for disobeying the injunction issued by the court, and directed the judgment to be signified to the Court of Chancery, with a view to his imprisonment. The decision concluded as follows:

"Mr. Tooth, therefore, denies the authority of the only existing courts in the Kingdom who, subject to appeal, have any power to review and correct his proceedings, and I cannot, consequently, regard his claim to immunity from the judgments and orders of this court as anything short of a claim to be himself the judge of the ritual which the prayer-book has prescribed. If so, there is nothing that I know of to prevent him from a still further approach to the ritual of the unreformed Church of Rome, if he can persuade himself that the language of the prayer-book admits of it. With regard to the supposed libels on the court, to which Dr. Stephens has referred, the court would, I think, be hypercritical if it saw in anything that he said a libel upon itself. I should not be over zealous in vindicating itself against improper language or unjust charges. The true protection of all courts lies in the general estimation and respect in which they are held, and that estimation is not, I think, imperiled by anything which has fallen from Mr. Tooth. I have only to add that Mr. Tooth must pay the costs of this motion."

THE ADOPTION OF A PETITION.

The same day some thousands of persons assembled in St. James' road at about 5 o'clock, at the instigation of the protestant Working Men's Protestant League, (Hatcham, Newcross, and Peckham branch,) and which meeting is thus reported in the Telegraph: "Mr. Storer opened the proceedings by announcing that a petition had been drawn up for the signature of all such Protestants as desired to put a stop to the defilement of the Church by Ritualistic practices. The petition (addressed to the Bishop of Rochester) was then read by Mr. McClure. It prayed his Lordship, who had the power to provide for the due performance of the duties of a vicar, to take such measures as might be necessary to secure the proper observance of ecclesiastical functions at St. James' until Rev. A. Tooth either should submit himself to the law or should be altogether deprived of his office as vicar. The decision of the Court of Arches, delivered that morning, was then made known to the crowd, and received with tremendous cheering and enthusiastic uproar, and cries of 'Hurrah! no more Popery,' were heard on all sides. Mr. W. Smith moved the adoption of the petition, and referring to the service at St. James', said it was of such a character that it was impossible for any Protestant to attend it. A resolution warmly denounced the Popish antics he had seen within the church, and deplored Mr. Tooth's description of the Virgin Mary as the mother of God. Other speeches followed, all more or less interrupted by the loud noise made by the crowd, who kept continually calling out 'No Popery,' and similar expressions. An individual, evidently belonging to the opposite faction, began to harangue the people on the outskirts of the crowd, but no sooner had he opened his mouth, than he was surrounded and hustled into silence. His vehement partisanship of Mr. Tooth might have caused him to be very severely handled but for the timely interference of the Police, who, under the leadership of Mr. Superintendent Gernon, did much to limit the extent of the horseplay indulged in by the young roughs, of whom there were large numbers present. The adoption of the petition being put to the meeting, some hundreds of hands were held up in favor, two individuals only being venturesome enough to signify a contrary opinion by holding up theirs, which were at once seized and forcibly lowered, their possessors being at the same time excitedly accused of habitually participating in the choral services of the church. The petition was extensively signed."

INSIDE THE CHURCH ON SUNDAY.

The Standard says: "As might have been anticipated from the action in the Court of Arches on Saturday, the usual Episcopal means were taken yesterday in the services in this now notorious church; not, however, soon enough to prevent Rev. Arthur Tooth and his sympathizers from a further violation of a law. It is said at Hatcham, that a notice was served on the Church Wardens on Saturday night by the Bishop of the diocese, in the usual form, requiring a suspension of all services at the church yesterday. However this may be, it is certain that a circular was issued by the Vicar on Saturday night to members of the congregation living within easy distance of the church, informing them of three services to be held at an unusually early hour in the morning, and stating that there would be no further service during the day. The vicarage account of the situation, prepared apparently to communicate to the newspapers for publication this morning, was as follows: 'Three usual morning services at St. James', Hatcham, were duly performed in the church yesterday. There was a celebration of Holy Communion followed by morning prayer, and then a second celebration of Holy Communion. To avoid inconvenient crowding there was an alteration of the hours of service which completely secured the intention of the Vicar and Church Wardens. The most perfect order prevailed. There was nothing like a disturbance, or any inconvenience to the congregation. Persons attending this church observe the rule of communicating at early celebration. On the present occasion there was a slight increase on the usual number of persons who communicated.' The reverend gentleman who read this document said, in addition, that the Vicar would be rather pleased than otherwise to have it known that he himself 'celebrated,' and he wished it also to be known that the following placard was posted on the north door of the church—the only one which has been opened since the tumultuous assemblages about the sacred edifice: 'No service this morning at 11 o'clock.' This placard was an ordinary printed bill, unsigned and undated. We were informed that the church doors were opened at 5 A. M., and that at 5:30 A. M., when the first celebration began, a congregation of about 40 persons—principally women—were present.

This being what is termed a 'low' celebration, was quite plain, unaccompanied with either music or incense. The Vicar, Rev. Arthur Tooth, was the celebrant, and it being what is termed a 'feria,' the rich white silk chasuble was not worn, but a green one of equally costly material was used. Of course, it being quite dark, the church was lighted, and the candles on the altar also. After a short pause a second service was held, consisting of Morning Prayer, said quite plainly. After another pause, a second celebration of the Holy Communion was held, and this was also a 'low' celebration, quite plain, the celebrant being a London incumbent, a friend of Mr. Tooth's. The Bishop of Rochester had inhibited Rev. W. Crouch, who has for a short time been assisting Mr. Tooth in the work of his parish, from officiating in his diocese, on the presence of the Police and the members of the congregation, there was no one near the church, and, of course, no disturbance or interruption. The services terminated, the congregation returned to their homes, and the placard was fixed to the closed church-doors very soon after 8 A. M."

THE CROWD OUTSIDE.

The Telegraph says: "As early as 5 o'clock yesterday morning Rev. A. Tooth, Vicar of St. James,' Hatcham, assisted by Father Crouch, one of the Cowley fraternity of monks from Oxford, performed matins in the church, and the service was followed by two celebrations of the Holy Communion. So complete a secret was this kept on the part of the ritualists of the parish, and, it may be added on the part of the Dean of Arches and of the Bishop, that the persons who assembled at 9 o'clock, and who saw the prohibitory notice which, 10 or 15 minutes before that hour, had been posted on the west door, were fully impressed with the belief that the church had been opened early on Saturday night, and consequently that no service whatever had been held within its walls. Persons in the habit of attending St. James' Church usually observe, to a greater or less degree, the rule of communicating at

EMPEROR AND SOLDIER.

IMPERIAL ANNIVERSARY AT BERLIN

SEVENTY YEARS AN OFFICER IN THE ARMY—NOW EMPEROR, KING, AND COMMANDER IN CHIEF—HOW WILLIAM AND HIS EMPRESS WERE HONORED—AN OLD GERMAN SWORD—AN ADDRESS OF COSTLY EXECUTION—REVIEW OF HIS MAJESTY'S MILITARY CAREER.

The Berlin correspondent of the London Standard writes Jan. 2, as follows: "To-day's papers contain many columns full of accounts of the splendid festivites that took place at Court yesterday, in honor of the seventieth anniversary of the Emperor's entrance on his career as a soldier. This event perhaps stands alone in history. The old hero Emperor celebrated this jubilee with almost the freshness of youth. Whenever an opportunity offers itself to the German people, and especially the Berliners, the ties of sympathy which joy and sorrow have been weaving for centuries between the Hohenzollerns and the people come spontaneously and cordially to light, and so it was that yesterday's celebration assembled a numerous and ever freshly-recruited crowd between the palace of the Emperor and the castle, who gave expression to their joytul sympathy by loud shouts. Especially on his drive to and from the old palace the Emperor received the most cordial marks of homage. He had wished to spend the day in still retirement, but the desire of the German Army to congratulate its supreme commander on this anniversary induced him to grant permission for the public celebration of the day.

At 9:30 A. M. the congratulations began in the palace. After the commanders had delivered their speech, appeared a deputation from the First Infantry Regiment of the Guard, the regiment which the Emperor entered 70 years ago at Königsberg, and whose Colonel he was for some time. It is in this regiment that all Prussian Princes begin their military career. The deputation presented the Emperor with a letter-weight in the form of a pyramid composed of stones from the battle-fields on which the regiment has gathered its laurels since the day of Gross-Gröschen.

The Emperor and Empress then drove to the old palace, and received the congratulations of the royal family and other Princes in the Brandenburg Chamber at 10 o'clock, and those of the royal household in the Knights' Hall at 10:30. There was a divine service in the chapel of the old palace at 11, and there was a brilliant assembly present. Prince Bismarck was not present either at the congratulation or at service; he had excused himself on the ground of indisposition. The sermon was delivered by Dr. Kögel, one of the Court Chaplains and preacher in the cathedral. He chose for his text Hebrews xiii., 8, and the sermon was a New Year's meditation, at the close of which he alluded to the event of the day. As, in conclusion, he implored God's blessing on the Emperor's beloved head the eyes of all turned joyfully on the illustrious gentleman with the silver hair, and all lips repeated the pious prayer. After service the Emperor left the chapel, bowing on all hands. The congratulations were then continued. First of all the good wishes of the Ministers were received in the red Drap d'Or Chamber, the Minister of Interior and Vice President of the Prussian Ministry, Camphausen, acting as spokesman. At 12:30 the Princes who are Colonels of regiments, the Field Marshals, the Generals, the Colonels, and commanders of regiments of the Guard, and the Life Guards, and of the King's Grenadiers and the King's Hussars, assembled in the Knights' Hall. When the Emperor appeared in the midst of his renowned Generals, the Crown Prince stepped forward a few paces, and addressed to his Majesty the words which have already been telegraphed by Reuter, to which the Emperor answered in words of deep emotion, which also have been already communicated to you.

His Majesty then repaired to the Black Eagle Hall, in which the deputations of discharged soldiers, of the Wendish Sorbian and Landwehr Union, and of the German Soldiers' Union had taken their places. As the signatures of the address show, every rank in the army and navy, from General of infantry down to corporal, genadier, and common sailor, were represented in the deputation. The composition of the deputation of discharged soldiers, and the present they gave the Emperor, as a committee appointed by the class they represented, were especially significant of the relation between Army and people, and of the love felt by all classes of the latter for their leader in peace and war. In answer to the request of this committee, dated 18th of October, 1876, large contributions were sent from all parts of the country, so that it became possible to make a present to the Emperor yesterday. King Frederick William IV. had once received a sword on a similar occasion, and soon after a helmet and a shield had been presented to the then Prince of Prussia, (the present Emperor,) with the words: 'The King took the sword, take thou the shield; our hearths are safe, though storms rage without.' In 1867 King William received a laurel wreath composed of 60 golden leaves, on the sixtieth anniversary of his entrance into the Army, and yesterday an Old-German sword of gold was the gift. Field Marshal Herwarth von Bittenfeld had the honor to be the spokesman of this deputation, and addressed the following words to his Majesty:

'Your Majesty will most graciously permit that we, as representatives of many thousands of retired soldiers and sailors, reverently lay our most obedient congratulations at your feet on this glorious anniversary. We further entreat your Majesty most graciously to accept this old German sword, accompanied by our address, as a visible token of our love and loyalty. The surplus of the contributions of our comrades we lay in your Majesty's gracious hand, to be expended on some foundation as your Majesty may please to direct. God bless and preserve your Majesty! This is the burden of our warmest wishes and our devout prayer.'

The Emperor then addressed a few especially gracious words to Gen. von Bittenfeld, whose breast bears, among other orders and marks of honor, a star with a golden '50' on it, in token of half a century's faithful service under three Kings of Prussia. His Majesty then turned to the other members of the deputation, and then examined the old German sword in detail, made by the court goldsmiths, Lv & Wagner, whose reputation is high for works of this sort. It is a masterpiece of art, matching in plan and execution that shield which was presented to the Emperor as Prince of Prussia on the fiftieth anniversary of his entrance into the Army. The ornaments of the hilt and sheath are in the old German style of the end of the thirteenth century. On both sides of the knot is represented the eye of God, surmounting the figures of Prussia and Germany on the two sides of the hilt. In the medallions at the ends of the parrying bar sit the four cardinal virtues—Strength with club and ball, Justice with balance and sword, Perseverance with the wall, and Magnanimity with a lion. The Prussian eagle is enamel, and rich filigree laurel ornaments on red velvet adorn the sheath. The blade bears, in gilt letters, the names of the battles and skirmishes at which his Majesty has been present. They are as follows: The crossing of the Rhine, Jan. 1, 1814; Brienne, Feb. 1; Rosbay, Feb. 2; Arcisur-Aube, March 20 and 21; La Fére Champenoise, March 25; Paris, March 30; entrance into Paris, March 31; Kirchheim-Bolanden, June 14, 1849; relief of Landau, June 16; crossing the Rhine at Germersheim, June 20; Lippstadt, June 23; Duzlaon, June 25; Bischweiler, June 29; Kuppenheim, June 30; siege and capitulation of Rastatt, July 19 to 23; Gudenhoin, July 2, 1866; Königgrätz, July 3; Vionville and Rezonville, Aug. 16, 1870; Gravelotte, Aug. 18; Beaumont, Aug. 30; Sedan, Sept. 1; Malmaison, Oct. 8; Villiers and Champigny, Nov. 30; Garches la Maimaison, Jan. 19, 1871; St. Cloud and Bougival, Jan. 19; entrance into Paris, March 2. The hilt and scabbard are of gold, also the broad chain belt, on which are represented George and the Dragon, the latter pierced by the knight's spear. All the figures are in bright pride, the beams of God's eye in brilliants. The background for the figures is of blue enamel. Besides this sword, the same deputation presented his Majesty with an address of costly execution, which, resting on purple velvet cushions, was read by the 83-years old retired Sub-lieutenant Bork, a volunteer in the Rifles of the First Infantry Regiment of Guards, Privy Court Councilor, and retired First Crown Treasurer. The address was as follows:

"Most illustrious, most mighty Emperor! Most gracious Emperor, King and Lord! On this day of the high celebration of an unexampled 70 years' career of military honor, we reverently approach your imperial and royal Majesty, as representatives of the old and invalided, and of the many hundreds of thousand of soldiers and sailors whose pride it is to have served your Majesty. We come with the prayer that your Majesty will be graciously pleased to accept the congratulations and blessings of those whom we represent. As our predecessors 20 and 10 years ago were permitted to present helmet and laurel as remembrances of the glorious fiftieth and sixtieth anniversaries, so your Majesty, with the like graciousness, permits us to present an imperial sword as a speaking witness of great deeds. In its steel we have engraved, along with earlier days of renown, the glorious days of the last ten years, the glory of which will shine bright and clear forever. And as your Majesty has borne the sword these 70 years as symbol of holy right and iron duty, so may our most reverent presentation of a sword to your Majesty testify that we, your Majesty's faithful and grateful subjects, while enjoying the blessings of peace that have been won after hard but joyiuly-waged conflicts, are animated by the conviction that your Majesty, true as friend and feared as foe, will strongly maintain what has been won by the sword for the good and honor of Prussia and Germany, by God's gracious help and under your Majesty's high leadership. With all the faithful subjects whose messengers we are, and with millions of loyal Prussian and German hearts, we the most obediently undersigned, pray to God for the preservation of your Majesty."

After receiving the congratulations of this deputation, his Majesty stepped to the representatives of the Westphalian Soldiers' and Landwehr Union and of the German Soldiers' Union, to receive their congratulations also, and to reply in words of thanks. It was about 1 o'clock when the Emperor left the castle to return to the palace in which he resides, where the Empress had arrived half an hour before. At 1:30 his Majesty received the congratulations of the Princes of Germany and their consorts, and at two those of the Embassadors. At 2:15 he gave an audience to the Swedish Ambassador, Baron von Bildt, who delivered an autograph letter from the King of Sweden. On his last visit here King Oscar repeatedly expressed his high respect for our Emperor, and yesterday's act of courtesy was a fruit of this feeling.

At 4:30 there was a grand gala dinner at the palace, covers in the White Hall of the old palace and the adjoining rooms. Toward the end of the dinner the Crown Prince rose, and said with a loud voice: "In the name of the German people and Army I drink! The Health of our Most Gracious Emperor, King, and Commander in Chief." God bless and preserve your Majesty." The Emperor answered: "Gentlemen, I call upon you to take your glasses; we drink! The Health of the People from which the Army has proseeded.'" An enthusiastic triple "Hoch!" followed both toasts, while the band played the National Hymn. It was an interesting sight when, during dinner, the yearly New Year's deputation from Halle on the Saale entered the hall, congratulated the Emperor, the Empress, and the highest guests, and brought baskets full of eggs and sausages. Dinner was over at 6 o'clock. In the evening the Emperor and Empress went to the opera-house. The opera was Glück's "Armide." When the Emperor, with the Empress on his arm, entered the royal box at the beginning of the second act, the whole audience rose and greeted their beloved monarch with a triple "Hoch!" the orchestra at the same time adapting the shouting of the assembled people. Thus, wherever his Majesty appeared, he was greeted with heart-elevating marks of the love and loyalty of his people. I add a short review of his Majesty's military career.

The Emperor received his first instructions in drill as a boy of 7 from Corp. Bennatsen, of the Guard Battalion, and Sergt. Geory, of the Regiment Moltendorf, and exactly 70 years ago, at the New Year's congratulation in Königsberg, when the whole royal family was gathered round his sorely tried father, Prince William, then a boy of not quite 10 years, was appointed Ensign, (there being no opportunity on his birthday of investing him in the Princely rank,) though he did not receive his commission till his tenth birthday, which he spent on a sick bed in Memel. On the 3d of October, 1807, the new Ensign first performed the duties of his office in the regiment which is now the First of the Guard, and received his commission as Sub-lieutenant under the Christmas tree in Memel. In the following winter the Company of the Prince was intrusted to Major Von Pirch. A redoubt which was restored thirteen years ago in the grounds of Babelsberg Palace, near Potsdam, still calls the Emperor's military aporenticeship to mind. At that time Queen Louisa wrote to her father: "If I am not much mistaken, our William will be simple, honest, and intelligent, like his father." In 1813 the royal family removed to Breslau, and when, on the 30th of March, the King and the Crown Prince went to the war, Prince William had to be left behind because of his delicate health, and was intrusted to the care of Major Von Natzmer, tutor to his brother Prince Charles. When, on the 15th of June, 1813, he was raised to the rank of Lieutenant, his request to be permitted to go to the war was refused, and was not granted till after the battle of Lutzig, when Frederick William III. was visiting his family in Breslau during the armistice. At the same time the Prince was raised to the rank of Captain. In the urgency of that time the drawing up of his commission as Captain was forgotten, and hence it is that on the tablets in the garrison church here bearing the list of Knights of the Iron Cross Prince William is mentioned with the rank of Lieutenant. On the 9th of November, 1813, he first saw a battle-field, that of Leipzig, and was in his first battle on the 1st January, 1814, at the crossing of the Rhine at Mannheim, and took part in all the actions in which the main Army was engaged. On the 27th of February, 1814, in the battle of Bar-sur-Aube, during which he was sent to make inquiries on the Regiment of Kalnga, which was under the huttest fire, he showed so much courage that on the 5th of March the Emperor Alexander gave him the Order of St. George of the fourth class, and on the 10th (his mother, Queen Louisa's birthday) his father gave him the Iron Cross. In the fighting before Paris the Prince again remained at his father's side, and entered Paris as a young twice decorated Captain in the Guards. In Paris he stayed at the Hotel de la Légion d'Honneur. On the 30th of May of the same year he was raised to the rank of Major, and entered Berlin on the 7th of August with the King, Bincher, Tanentzien, Bülow, &c. At that time Col. Von Brause was appointed his tutor. On the 8:h of June, 1815, he was confirmed a Charlottenburg by the Court Chaplain, Dr. Ehrenberg. In the campaign of 1815 Prince William commanded the Fusilier Battalion of the first regiment of Guards, re-entered Paris (Hotel d'Avray) on the 13th of July, and celebrated the Festival of Victory in Berlin on the 21st of October. In the long period of peace that followed, during which he made many journeys, to St. Petersburg, (to the marriage of his sister Charlotte,) to Holland, to Weimar, (to his own marriage,) &c., he was promoted to the rank of Lieutenant General. On the 13th of March, 1838, he was made Commander in Chief of the Guards. After the death of Frederick William III. he was appointed Governor of Pomerania with the title of Prince of Prussia on the 12th of June, 1840, and on the 10th of September following he was raised to the rank of General of Infantry. During his royal brother's journeys to England and Italy he conducted the affairs of the country, and was appointed Governor General of Westphalia and the Rhine Province on the 10th of March, 1848. After the storms of the year 1848 he led the Army in Baden, received the Order Pour le Merite after the capitulation of Rastatt on the 31st of July, 1849, and marched into Berlin on the 15th of October at the head of the Landwehr Guard. In the following years he went to Warsaw, St. Petersburg, and England, and on the 20th of March, 1854, was appointed Colonel General of the Infantry with the title of Field Marshal. From 1857 till 1861 he ruled Prussia as Prince Regent, during which time the Army was reorganized, and when Frederick William IV. died, on the 2d of January, 1861, King William ascended to the throne of his fathers, with the promise "to strengthen Prussia in that position which, with her glorious history and her highly-organized Army, she must take among the German States for the good of all." The events of the last 15 years, which also comprise the most brilliant period of his military career, testify how faithfully he has kept that promise. I need not rehearse the mighty historical exploits which are still fresh in the memories of all.

SCENE IN A SCOTCH COURT.

A WOMAN WITH A MISTLETOE IN HER BELT—HOW SHE EXAMINED THE WITNESSES—AN EXTRAORDINARY SCENE.

About 20 years ago Mrs. Betsy Mustard, or Ferguson, sued Col. Ferguson, of Raith, near Kirkcaldy, to have it declared that she had been married to him. That action was settled by Col. Ferguson paying to the pursuer the sum of £2,000. The money was lodged in the Royal Bank of Scotland in the joint names of the pursuer and her brother, Dr. Henderson. She alleges that Dr. Henderson drew £1,000 of that money without her consent, and applied it to his own purposes, and she brought an action against the bank for payment of the £1,000. Recently the case came up in the Edinburgh Court of Session, before Lord Curriehill, for proof on a remit from the Second Division. When the pursuer was called she appeared at the bar gayly dressed, and with a bunch of mistletoe stuck in her belt. She said she would examine the witnesses herself, but as she was not a lawyer, and did not understand technicalities, and was not a learned gentleman—[great laughter]—she presumed the court would allow her counsel, Mr. Nevay, to watch the case. After a good deal of discussion the Lord Ordinary was obliged to allow Betsy to have her own way. William Turnbull, accountant of the Royal Bank, was called. Betsy—Will you be able to hear me? No answer. Betsy—You must speak. Lord Ordinary—We will take your age, Mr. Turnbull. Betsy—Oh, Mr. Turnbull is of age, what's the good of that? [Laughter.] Did Mr. Henderson come to the bank by himself, or did anybody accompany him, on the 11th May was the check made in your room, or where? It was not made in my office. Betsy—Did you affix stamps to the checks? Witness did not seem to understand the question. Betsy—The stamps, God bless me, don't you know that? [Laughter.] Can you tell me what was on did anybody? I don't know. Was there anything on the stamps? I cannot tell. Any initials?—I cannot tell. Why were they not indorsed on the bank? A check is not worth a straw unless it is indorsed on the bank. Lord Curriehill—Put your questions, and do not indulge in these remarks. Betsy—Why did you pay on the 11th of May £500 without any initial or any stamp, any name or any anything, or any discharge on the deposit receipt? It is not requisite; that is not our custom. Betsy—You are a queer Royal Bank. I would advise you after this to make it your custom. Witness—You are not entitled to control the deposit receipt. Betsy—If we cannot control our means we are nothing—a mere community. [Laughter.] Lord Curriehill—You must not take up the time of the court in this way. Betsy—You must allow me to have my own way; that is what the court is here for. Lord Curriehill—You must not make speeches. Betsy—I am not making a speech, but God bless me, I must say something. Lord Curriehill—I will not have the time of the court taken up in this way. Betsy—Oh! but you must have the time of the court takes up in this way. That is what the court is for, and from the newspapers I see that your lordship sits some days only at 10 o'clock, and those on the royal household in the Knights' Hall at 10:30. There was a divine service in the chapel of the old palace at 11, and there was a brilliant assembly present. Prince Bismarck was not present either at the congratulation or at service; he had excused himself on the ground of indisposition. The sermon was delivered by Dr. Kögel, one of the Court Chaplains and preacher in the cathedral. He chose for his text Hebrews xiii., 8, and the sermon was a New Year's meditation, at the close of which he alluded to the event of the day. As, in conclusion, he implored God's blessing on the Emperor's beloved head the eyes of all turned joyfully on the illustrious gentleman with the silver hair, and all lips repeated the pious prayer. After service the Emperor left the chapel, bowing on all hands. The congratulations were then continued. First of all the good wishes of the Ministers were received in the red Drap d'Or Chamber, the Minister of Interior and Vice President of the Prussian Ministry, Camphausen, acting as spokesman. At 12:30 the Princes who are Colonels of regiments, the Field Marshals, the Generals, the Colonels, and commanders of regiments of the Guard, and the Life Guards, and of the King's Grenadiers and the King's Hussars, assembled in the Knights' Hall. When the Emperor appeared in the midst of his renowned Generals, the Crown Prince stepped forward a few paces, and addressed to his Majesty the words which have already been telegraphed by Reuter, to which the Emperor answered in words of deep emotion, which also have been already communicated to you.

His Majesty then repaired to the Black Eagle Hall, in which the deputations of discharged soldiers, of the Wendish Sorbian and Landwehr Union, and of the German Soldiers' Union had taken their places. As the signatures of the address show, every rank in the army and navy, from General of infantry down to corporal, genadier, and common sailor, were represented in the deputation. The composition of the deputation of discharged soldiers, and the present they gave the Emperor, as a committee appointed by the class they represented, were especially significant of the relation between Army and people, and of the love felt by all classes of the latter for their leader in peace and war. In answer to the request of this committee, dated 18th of October, 1876, large contributions were sent from all parts of the country, so that it became possible to make a present to the Emperor yesterday. King Frederick William IV. had once received a sword on a similar occasion, and soon after a helmet and a shield had been presented to the then Prince of Prussia, (the present Emperor,) with the words: 'The King took the sword, take thou the shield; our hearths are safe, though storms rage without.' In 1867 King William received a laurel wreath composed of 60 golden leaves, on the sixtieth anniversary of his entrance into the Army, and yesterday an Old-German sword of gold was the gift. Field Marshal Herwarth von Bittenfeld had the honor to be the spokesman of this deputation, and addressed the following words to his Majesty:

'Your Majesty will most graciously permit that we, as representatives of many thousands of retired soldiers and sailors, reverently lay our most obedient congratulations at your feet on this glorious anniversary. We further entreat your Majesty most graciously to accept this old German sword, accompanied by our address, as a visible token of our love and loyalty. The surplus of the contributions of our comrades we lay in your Majesty's gracious hand, to be expended on some foundation as your Majesty may please to direct. God bless and preserve your Majesty! This is the burden of our warmest wishes and our devout prayer.'

The Emperor then addressed a few especially gracious words to Gen. von Bittenfeld, whose breast bears, among other orders and marks of honor, a star with a golden '50' on it, in token of half a century's faithful service under three Kings of Prussia. His Majesty then turned to the other members of the deputation, and then examined the old German sword in detail, made by the court goldsmiths, Lv & Wagner, whose reputation is high for works of this sort. It is a masterpiece of art, matching in plan and execution that shield which was presented to the Emperor as Prince of Prussia on the fiftieth anniversary of his entrance into the Army. The ornaments of the hilt and sheath are in the old German style of the end of the thirteenth century. On both sides of the knot is represented the eye of God, surmounting the figures of Prussia and Germany on the two sides of the hilt. In the medallions at the ends of the parrying bar sit the four cardinal virtues—Strength with club and ball, Justice with balance and sword, Perseverance with the wall, and Magnanimity with a lion. The Prussian eagle is enamel, and rich filigree laurel ornaments on red velvet adorn the sheath. The blade bears, in gilt letters, the names of the battles and skirmishes at which his Majesty has been present. They are as follows: The crossing of the Rhine, Jan. 1, 1814; Brienne, Feb. 1; Rosbay, Feb. 2; Arcisur-Aube, March 20 and 21; La Fére Champenoise, March 25; Paris, March 30; entrance into Paris, March 31; Kirchheim-Bolanden, June 14, 1849; relief of Landau, June 16; crossing the Rhine at Germersheim, June 20; Lippstadt, June 23; Duzlaon, June 25; Bischweiler, June 29; Kuppenheim, June 30; siege and capitulation of Rastatt, July 19 to 23; Gudenhoin, July 2, 1866; Königgrätz, July 3; Vionville and Rezonville, Aug. 16, 1870; Gravelotte, Aug. 18; Beaumont, Aug. 30; Sedan, Sept. 1; Malmaison, Oct. 8; Villiers and Champigny, Nov. 30; Garches la Maimaison, Jan. 19, 1871; St. Cloud and Bougival, Jan. 19; entrance into Paris, March 2. The hilt and scabbard are of gold, also the broad chain belt, on which are represented George and the Dragon, the latter pierced by the knight's spear. All the figures are in bright pride, the beams of God's eye in brilliants. The background for the figures is of blue enamel. Besides this sword, the same deputation presented his Majesty with an address of costly execution, which, resting on purple velvet cushions, was read by the 83-years old retired Sub-lieutenant Bork, a volunteer in the Rifles of the First Infantry Regiment of Guards, Privy Court Councilor, and retired First Crown Treasurer. The address was as follows:

"Most illustrious, most mighty Emperor! Most gracious Emperor, King and Lord! On this day of the high celebration of an unexampled 70 years' career of military honor, we reverently approach your imperial and royal Majesty, as representatives of the old and invalided, and of the many hundreds of thousand of soldiers and sailors whose pride it is to have served your Majesty. We come with the prayer that your Majesty will be graciously pleased to accept the congratulations and blessings of those whom we represent. As our predecessors 20 and 10 years ago were permitted to present helmet and laurel as remembrances of the glorious fiftieth and sixtieth anniversaries, so your Majesty, with the like graciousness, permits us to present an imperial sword as a speaking witness of great deeds. In its steel we have engraved, along with earlier days of renown, the glorious days of the last ten years, the glory of which will shine bright and clear forever. And as your Majesty has borne the sword these 70 years as symbol of holy right and iron duty, so may our most reverent presentation of a sword to your Majesty testify that we, your Majesty's faithful and grateful subjects, while enjoying the blessings of peace that have been won after hard but joyiuly-waged conflicts, are animated by the conviction that your Majesty, true as friend and feared as foe, will strongly maintain what has been won by the sword for the good and honor of Prussia and Germany, by God's gracious help and under your Majesty's high leadership. With all the faithful subjects whose messengers we are, and with millions of loyal Prussian and German hearts, we the most obediently undersigned, pray to God for the preservation of your Majesty."

After receiving the congratulations of this deputation, his Majesty stepped to the representatives of the Westphalian Soldiers' and Landwehr Union and of the German Soldiers' Union, to receive their congratulations also, and to reply in words of thanks. It was about 1 o'clock when the Emperor left the castle to return to the palace in which he resides, where the Empress had arrived half an hour before. At 1:30 his Majesty received the congratulations of the Princes of Germany and their consorts, and at two those of the Embassadors. At 2:15 he gave an audience to the Swedish Ambassador, Baron von Bildt, who delivered an autograph letter from the King of Sweden. On his last visit here King Oscar repeatedly expressed his high respect for our Emperor, and yesterday's act of courtesy was a fruit of this feeling.

At 4:30 there was a grand gala dinner at the palace, [illegible]

GREAT GUNS IN ITALY.

RECENT ARTILLERY EXPERIMENTS.

FIRING THE 100-TON GUN—TARGET PRACTICE ON A GIGANTIC SCALE—2,000-POUND SHELL USED—TERRIBLE HAIL OF IRON—HEAVY PLATES SPLIT FROM TOP TO BOTTOM—THE RESISTING FORCE TO BE OVERCOME—THE VALUE OF BIG GUNS.

From the London Times.

The experiments at Spezia, which, as described in our columns at the time by a correspondent at Spezia, attracted much attention from artillerists of all countries, were temporarily suspended because some of the targets had not arrived. The series has since been continued and brought to an end by the complete destruction one after another of all targets opposed to the 100 ton gun. This was only to be expected after the proofs given during the early trials that gun and carriage were more than equal to the task set before them. But the later series of experiments has been so interesting on account of the variety of the targets and the use of reduced charges in some cases, that we are glad to have the opportunity of presenting the results to our readers.

It will be remembered that during the first series of rounds had been fired with various charges, but all exceeding the guarantee of the manufacturers, and that in some cases the guarantee was so overpassed that the Italian Government declared themselves satisfied, and accepted the gun, so that they might make the best use of the experiments by trying different charges and different kinds of powder. The powder used throughout the second series was that manufactured expressly by the Italians, and called "progressive powder of Fossano." The result has been highly satisfactory to the scientific designers of the powder, for, though more of it has to be used to give a certain velocity than in the case of English powder, high velocities can be obtained with a very moderate pressure on the interior of the gun. The manufacture of the Fossano powder is peculiar. After passing through the first stages of manufacture and being brought to the condition of "meal-powder," it is pressed into cakes which have a density of 1.70. The cake is then broken up into irregular grains of about an eighth to a quarter of an inch in thickness. The grains are then mixed with a certain quantity of fine grain powder, and the whole mass is pressed into a cake which has a density of 1.775. This second cake is then broken up into tolerably regular pieces about 2½ inches square by 1¾ thick. These grains, if they can so be called, are therefore composed of a number of small pieces with a higher density, placed like the raising in a plum pudding in a sort of conglomerated powder material of a lower density. The intention of the inventors of this powder was to bring about a condition of affairs in which more gas would be produced in a given time, when the powder has been partly burned, than at the commencement of its ignition.

On the 14th of December the first round of the new series of forty-third round from the 100-ton gun was fired with a charge of 396 kilos (240 pounds) of Fossano progressive powder, and the usual 2,000-pound Palliser shell against the Cammell Sandwich target, which presents a front 12-inch plate, then 12 inches of wood, with iron stringers, and behind that a 10-inch plate. This charge was a very small one, and gave a velocity of only 1,550 feet per second. The object of the experiment was to find the actual penetration in different forms of targets under conditions which would prevent the complete penetration of the structure, for the previous experiments had shown that to fire the full charges would in every case be to ruin the target and prevent anything like judgment of comparative results as far as penetration was concerned. The shell struck the target with the first plate and cracked it through from top to bottom, passed through the wooden interior, and entered 6.8 inches into the second plate. The base of the shell broke up and the remainder was starred. Judging from past experiments with gun-cotton shells, the Italian committee consider that had this shell been loaded it would have completely blown off the front plate. As it was, the skin of the ship was cracked, and a vertical iron beam behind was considerably doubled up.

The gun was then loaded for the 44th round, the charge and projectile being precisely similar to those used in the preceding round. This time the target was one of the same construction as that used in the old experiments, but with a Brown's solid plate 22 inches thick. The sea was rough and the pontoon moved visibly after the gun was laid, so that the shell, instead of striking the point aimed at, hit the plate on its lower edge and split into several pieces, which were deflected downward and made a hole in the ground about six or eight feet deep in a slanting direction under the target. Though lost for the immediate object of the experiment, this round was of great interest, for it showed that a shell striking the edge of the narrow belt of armor, which in the case of ships can afford but room to carry, will tear through the bottom of the vessel with force enough to pierce engine-rooms and boilers and pass out below the water line on the other side.

Round 45 had been looked forward to with great interest. Previous experiments with guns of smaller calibre had given reason to believe that a plate of chilled cast-iron, by presenting an extremely hard surface to the point of the projectile, might break it, and so prevent its penetration. The charge was 400 pounds of Fossano powder, and gave a velocity of 1,494 feet to the 2,000-pound shell, just equal to the eff-ct of a charge of 341 pounds English powder. The target had an 8-inch plate in front, then a strong layer of wood, and behind this a 14-inch plate of chilled iron from the Gregorini works, near Como.

This Gregorini cast-iron deserves a word of praise. It is really of splendid quality, being very hard, with a tensile strength of from 16 to 17 tons per inch. Ordinary cast-iron usually fails at about half that strain, and very rarely rises as high as 10 or 12 tons. Indeed, so good is it that the Italian Artillery of the Land Service have succeeded in producing heavy cast-iron rifled guns far superior in strength to anything that has ever been known in England. But it was not able to resist the shell from the 100-ton gun, which penetrated the target completely and caused a more terrible ruin behind than had occurred in any previous experiment. The shell was broken up into many pieces, which dashed through into the interior of the ship, carrying with them a great number of ragged fragments of broken plate, and causing such a hail of iron that nothing could have lived between decks. The sand-bags behind were deeply pitted with many hundreds of pieces, and the experiment clearly proved that the old fault of cast metal still exists—namely, that when it breaks under the influence of a heavy blow it is dashed to atoms.

In round 46 the shell broke up in the gun, but round 47 was fired under the same conditions as No. 45, and the iron plates were similar in kind and dimensions—only in this case the front wrought-iron plate was placed immediately upon the cast-iron in rear, the wood coming behind both; again the target was completely penetrated and ruined, a large portion of the front plate being at the same time torn off. In these two remarkable rounds (45 and 47) not only were the fragments of the cast-iron plate driven forward, but also out of the sides of the targets. Again nothing could have lived behind the target, so terrible was the hail of iron fragments caused in round 47, the velocity of the shot being 1,502 feet.

After the failure of striking the right spot which occurred in round 44, on account of the motion of the ponton, and therefore of the gun, the apparatus for firing was transferred to the deck of the ponton and an arrangement made by which the officer whose duty it was to touch the button which by the action of electricity carried flame to the powder could himself run the piece and discharge it at the right moment. This was a near approach to what would actually happen on board ship, and the result was that in every succeeding round the white mark painted on the target was obliterated by the shot, which always struck on the right place.

The combinations of iron and wood, wherein the iron was in two layers, having been thus destroyed, the target carrying the 22-inch solid Brown's plate was again subjected to attack. Round 48 was fired with a reduced charge of 340 pounds, similar to that used in round 43. The velocity was 1,062 feet, and the point aimed at was near the left of the target. The shell broke up the front part, remaining in the hole, having penetrated about 15.6 inches. If we compare this effect with round 43 against the Sandwich target, we shall see that the solid Brown's plate had by far the best of it; for while the projectile fired at the Sandwich target with a velocity of 1,050 feet, penetrated nearly 31 inches, of which nearly 19 inches was through iron, that fired at the Brown's plate penetrated only 15.6 inches of iron and no wood. Taken in conjunction with the possible use of gun-cotton shells, this round would appear to establish conclusively the value of targets composed of moderately thick iron plates placed in layers alternating with wood, such as that now under trial at Shoeburyness, do not at all approach in strength the same thickness of iron disposed in one solid plate on the front of the structure. Round 49 was fired with 180 kilogrammes (400 pounds) of progressive powder, representing what is for the present the full service charge of the 100-ton gun. The velocity of the projectile was 1,499 feet, and it was aimed at a part of the target near the right of the plate. A large portion of the plate was torn off, the target was completely penetrated, and the rear of it so ruined as to be incapable of repair; but the hail of fragments behind was not so terrible as in the case of the target backed by cast-iron.

Once more the gun was loaded for round No. 50, but with a charge calculated just to penetrate the Brown's solid plate—namely, 264 pounds of English powder. The velocity given to the projectile was 1,399 feet, and it was aimed full in the centre of the Brown plate. The effect was as anticipated. The shell just passed through the plate, of which it tore off a large fragment, splitting the plate from top to bottom. The backing was not pierced. The vacuo of every one was that Brown's wrought-iron plate had proved itself to be of magnificent quality, as it gave a high resistance to penetration with a minimum of brittleness, but it could not be expected to keep out a 2,000-pound shell fired with a velocity of 1,500 feet.

The idea seems to prevail in some quarters that smaller guns might do all that is requisite by putting in sufficient powder to increase greatly the velocity of the shot. To this we have to reply that to raise the velocity of a shot beyond a certain point requires an expenditure of force out of proportion to the effect produced, just as in the case of the speed of steam-ships. Every one knows that to raise the speed of a steamer from 12 to 16 knots an hour requires an expenditure of something like double the amount of coal. Moreover, this effect could only be produced at the expense of an immense strain both upon gun and carriage. Again, the passage of a projectile through the air is delayed by the resistance of that elastic fluid. We think little of the pressure of the air when a calm prevails or even an ordinary breeze, yet we know how terrible is its force in a storm. Wind moving at the rate of 60 miles an hour constitutes a heavy storm, and we soon feel how powerful it is to resist progression. But a shot fired with a velocity of 1,500 feet per second has, in passing through every inch of space a resisting force equal to that of a wind blowing at the rate of more than 1,000 miles an hour. This resistence or pressure is exerted on the head of the shot, and therefore acts on a space which only increases in proportion to the square of the diameter of the projectile. The power of the shot to overcome this resistance depends in great measure on its weight, which increases in a much higher proportion. Therefore, of two projectiles fired from different guns with the same velocity, and being themselves of the same shape, only differing in size, the heavier shot will overcome the resistance of the air more easily, be less delayed on its course, range further, and strike a proportionately harder blow. Exactly the same effect occurs in the resistance of a target. Everybody can understand that the heavier shot strikes a heavier blow, but everybody does not understand that it will penetrate further into the target if it has the same velocity, and in proportioned like the smaller projectile. Yet this is undoubtedly the case, and forms a strong argument in favor of big guns. Of course, the large projectile will make a large hole and destroy more of the target, leaving it incapable of repair, whereas a small shot fired with an extremely high velocity, if it has the same momentum, would make a small, clean hole, easily plugged up by the crew of the vessel. The destructive effect to the interior of the ship would be almost nil, while that upon the gun and its carriage would be great.

There are persons who object to very large guns on the score that they cannot be worked quickly or without great difficulty. Granted, if only the same means are used; but science and practical ability can overcome this difficulty, and no one can deny that little remains to be desired when a gun of 100 tons weight can be worked by three or four men, and sponged, loaded, and fired in less than a minute.

THE BRITISH ARMY.

OVER 7,000 DESERTIONS IN 1876—RECRUITING SERGEANTS—THE COST OF PROMOTION.

Mr. J. Holmes, M. P., addressed his constituents at Shoreditch. Among other things, he said: Last year an addition was made to the pay of a certain portion of the soldiers, and he was told it would be found that the measures then being taken would diminish desertions. He had warned the War Office that the very reverse would occur, because their measures did not go to the root of the evil. Yesterday they might have seen it stated in the Army and Navy Intelligence of the Times that the state of the recruiting was not unsatisfactory, and that the desertions were not so very bad. The actual figures, however, were anything but satisfactory. With regard to desertions he found that the number advertised for in 1875 were 6,510, and in 1876, 7,610 being an increase of 1,100. Taking the Regular Army and the Militia together, the numbers advertised for were from the Regulars 6,510, and the Militia 10,809 in 1875; and 7,610 and 11,469 respectively in 1876, being a total of 17,319 advertised for in 1875, and of 19,079 in 1876. This was an increase of 1,760 in both services in a single year. In the month of October alone the desertions in the Regular Army were 820, and in the Militia 1,600. It could not be regarded as a satisfactory state of things when all last year, Sundays included, 55 men a day were running away from us, and when in one of the months of the year 80 men a day were deserting. The result would be that the nation would demand a change, first, in the manner in which we got our men, and next in the manner in which they were treated when they were obtained. He complained that the War Office continued to maintain the competition between the Recruiting Sergeants of the line and the Militia, and contended that that competition cannot be established. After quoting a speech delivered by Mr. Windham in June, 1803, in support of this view, he added that when Mr. Windham was Minister of War in 1806 he tried his scheme with the greatest possible success. By a rational system of treating the soldiers after they were recruited the Army would soon be twice as strength would be much greater. On Jan. 1, 1875, for example, there were in the United Kingdom 93,000 soldiers in barracks. Of these 32,000 were over 30 years of age, and had been in the Army from 10 to 14 years. Now, if the War Office had sent home 30,000 and had taken 10,000 more recruits, it was clear that we should have had 10,000 more new men. As, moreover, there would have been 20,000 fewer men to lodge, clothe, and feed, the saving would have been very great—at least £800,000. Adding next to the redundancy of officers in the British Army, he contended that there were too many by a third, and especially in the higher grades. In England, to 100 Lieutenants there were 50 Captains and 25 field officers, while in Germany to 100 Lieutenants there were only 25 Captains and 15 field officers. After adverting to the competition to get commissions in the Army, Mr. Holmes said he feared that a scheme would be proposed next session which would cost the country something like £1,000,000 sterling. The War Office had appointed a royal commission, who had been asked how to create the necessary promotion in existing circumstances. They had certainly hit on the best scheme possible, namely, a flow of money. He feared that an

The New York Times.

NEW-YORK, MONDAY, JAN. 29, 1877.

AMUSEMENTS THIS EVENING.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—MARTHA, (English Opera)—Miss C. L. Kellogg, Mrs. Zelda Seguin, Mr. Maas, Mr. Carleton.

PARK THEATRE.—OUR BOARDING HOUSE—Mr. Stuart Robson, Mr. W. H. Crane, Mrs. A. F. Baker, Miss Maude Harrison.

EAGLE THEATRE.—LA JOLIE PARFUMEUSE, (Opera Bouffe)—Mlle. Marie Aimie.

WALLACK'S THEATRE.—ALL FOR HER—Mr. Lester Wallack, Mr. S. Mackaye, Miss Ada Dyas.

FIFTH AVENUE THEATRE.—LEMONS; OR, WEDLOCK FOR SEVEN—Mr. C. F. Coghlan, Miss F. Davenport.

UNION SQUARE THEATRE.—Miss MULTON—Miss Clara Morris, Mr. James O'Neil, Mr. J. H. Stoddart.

NIBLO'S GARDEN.—AROUND THE WORLD IN EIGHTY DAYS (Spectacular)—Kiralfy Brothers.

BROADWAY THEATRE.—UNCLE TOM'S CABIN—Mrs. G. C. Howard and Georgia Jubilee Singers.

STEINWAY HALL.—GRAND CONCERT—Miss Thursby, Mr. Fritsch, Mr. Arbuckle.

NEW-YORK AQUARIUM.—RARE AND CURIOUS FISH AND MAMMALIA, STATUARY, &c.—Day and evening.

HELLER'S WONDER THEATRE.—PRESTIDIGITATION, MUSIC, AND HUMOR—Mr. Robert Heller, Miss Heller.

SAN FRANCISCO MINSTRELS.—MINSTRELSY, FARCES and NEGRO COMICALITIES.

GILMORE'S GARDEN.—EQUESTRIAN GAMES AND FIELD SPORTS.

GRAND OPERA-HOUSE.—MAN AND WIFE.

NATIONAL academy OF DESIGN.—EXHIBITION OF WATER COLORS. Day and evening.

THE NEW-YORK TIMES.

THE NEW-YORK TIMES is the best family paper published; it contains the latest news and correspondence. It is free from all objectionable advertisements and reports, and may be safely admitted to every domestic circle. The disgraceful announcements of quacks and medical pretenders, which pollute so many newspapers of the day, are not admitted into the columns of THE TIMES on any terms.

Terms, cash in advance.

TERMS TO MAIL SUBSCRIBERS.

Postage will be prepaid by the Publishers on all Editions of THE TIMES sent to Subscribers in the United States.

The DAILY TIMES, per annum, including the Sunday Edition	$12 00
The DAILY TIMES, per annum, exclusive of the Sunday Edition	10 00
The Sunday Edition, per annum	2 00
The SEMI-WEEKLY TIMES, per annum	3 00
The WEEKLY TIMES, per annum	1 20

These prices are invariable. We have no traveling agents. Remit in drafts on New-York or Post Office Money Orders, if possible, and where neither of these can be procured send the money in a registered letter.

Address THE NEW-YORK TIMES, New-York City

NOTICE.

We cannot notice anonymous communications. In all cases we require the writer's name and address, not for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

We cannot, under any circumstances, return rejected communications, nor can we undertake to preserve manuscripts.

It is a fact, which the Democratic papers do not seem in any haste to recognize, that the passage of the compromise has had no appreciable effect on the sensitive money market of New-York. We were told, before this remarkable panacea was concocted and advertised, that the uncertainty which hung over the Presidential election was paralyzing business, and that patriotism could have no higher task than to bring new life to commerce by support of that measure. But the fact is that the country had made up its mind that Mr. HAYES was to be inaugurated; that the Democratic bluster did not amount to anything, and that the "disputed succession" was not an element to bring into business calculations. The depression from which the country has long been suffering, and from which it is likely to recover only slowly, is due to causes with which the recent political situation had very little to do. The violent talk of the Democrats just after election made some disturbance, and interfered somewhat with Fall trade, but that influence, whatever it was, had passed away. The reported stagnation due to politics was mainly a bugaboo used to frighten timid Republicans.

Although there was a slight decline in the average amount of specie held last week by the associated banks, the total remained at above $40,000,000, and was nearly $18,000,000 more than at the same date in 1875. The currency average was increased by $2,032,400, with a marked tendency toward ease in current rates. Everything thus continues to point toward the feasibility of some practical measure for resumption at the time fixed by law. It is now as plain as anything can be in the future that an act authorizing the funding of legal tenders in a four per cent. long bond, payable, principal and interest, in gold, would gradually and surely bring our paper to par and make the operation of the law of 1875 certain. We are not sanguine enough to assume that this step would bring about a sudden and rapid revival of trade; but we are entirely confident that it would remove an important obstacle to such revival as it is reasonable to expect at all. Until the uncertainty now surrounding our currency is wholly done away with, prosperity will not "come to stay."

It is Mr. EVARTS' fortune to be connected with great political cases. His selection as counsel before the Electoral Commission will lay upon him duties scarcely less important than those which he performed at Geneva. The powers of the commission are vague. They are defined as those which Congress has, "if any." The question whether these include the power to go behind the declaration of the votes of the States, as made by the authorized officers of the States, was expressly dodged by the committees which framed the law, and had there been any distinct determination of this question, the measure would not, in the language of Senator THURMAN, have received a single Democratic vote. The whole field of the relation of Congress to the States in the matter of Presidential elections is thus opened, and no man, we presume, is better able to enter upon it than Mr. EVARTS. The association with him of Mr. STANLEY MATTHEWS, of Ohio, is a judicious step. Mr. MATTHEWS can give specific information concerning Louisiana affairs which will be valuable.

The account given in our Albany letter this morning, of the adoption of the Harris resolutions in the New-York Senate is not likely to add to public respect for the gentlemen who took part in it. The people are not fond of trimmers, and the present is a case in which they will not be apt to be unusually indulgent. From hundreds of letters received at this office, and from all other accessible evidence, it is plain that the gentlemen in Congress who forced through the Compromise bill in such haste do not represent the mass of the Republican Party. We venture to say that the reports, of which so much was made during the few days the act was before the public, tending to show that there was considerable Republican support for the measure, had very little foundation. There was a certain degree of hasty indorsement of it, as there would have been of any plan which promised to settle the pending dispute, but the more the provisions of the bill and its probable effect are examined, the less it is approved.

Mr. GLADSTONE has put the present aspect of the Turkish question very forcibly and clearly before the English people. It is the fashion of the Tory newspapers to represent the ex-Premier as a passionate sentimentalist, who is engaged in an attempt to destroy "British interests in the East." His Taunton speech is a vigorous and manly refutation of the idea that Great Britain has any interests the maintenance of which is inconsistent with national honor and common humanity. He indirectly attacks the Ministry for its apparent acquiescence in the opinion that, now that the conference is over, England has nothing more to do. Lord SALISBURY went to Constantinople to give the Porte good advice. He comes away with nothing but the refusal of that advice in his recollection. England is supposed to fall back on the treaties of 1856. But Mr. GLADSTONE urges that these treaties are no longer in force, and that it is monstrous to maintain that they are, as between Turkey and England. There is the key of the whole situation. English influence and resources have sustained Turkey. Therefore England has a moral right to insist upon her good advice being accepted. A failure to insist is cowardly; and it does not meet the case to declare that treaties bar England from any such intervention.

The New-York Sun is doing its best to throw light on the recent past and probable future of Senator CONKLING. It thus assumes to trace the connection between his support of the compromise and certain events of the last year:

"ROSCOE CONKLING was overslaughed at Cincinnati and snubbed at Saratoga, but still he has made the greatest speech for many years spoken in the United States Senate."

And it also assumes to trace the probable effect of the Senator's course:

"Whether TILDEN or HAYES be inaugurated, ROSCOE CONKLING will be stronger in his State and in the country for the part he has taken in effecting an equitable and peaceful adjustment of this difficulty. Moreover, his public career of usefulness will outlive the Republican Party, as at present organized."

The Sun's prediction is made for present use and not for future remembrance. The cruelest thing any friend of Mr. CONKLING could do would be to remind him of it four years hence.

VETO POWER OVER STATES.

The Commission of Fifteen will be compelled to meet at the very threshold of their investigations the vital question whether a President is elected in the first instance through the action of the separate States or through the action of officers of the United States. Are Electors appointed by States in such manner as State Legislatures may direct, or are they to be appointed by the United States in such manner as Congress may see fit? This is the question, fairly stated, that must be met at the outset by the commission. It will be observed by all careful students that whatever is done in the election of a President, under our system, from the first step or act to the last, is done by States as States. Each State appoints its own Electors in its own way. Ohio has no more to do with the appointment of Electors in Indiana or New-York than has Thibet or Siam. Each State may authorize its Governor to appoint Electors, and such Electors may vote for a citizen of their own State for President, so that there may be as many candidates voted for as there are States, and no constitutional objection can be raised by any single State, or by the United States. The appointment of an Elector is a State act, not a national act, and votes of Electors are transmitted and are opened and counted as by States. When the House of Representatives constitutionally elects a President, the vote is given by States. Each State, however large or however small, casts one vote. New-York has no more power in the House in the election of a President than Colorado. The Senate, when the duty devolves upon it, votes to elect a Vice President by States, for whether great and small States alike are allowed two votes or one, the result is practically the same.

The President of the Senate, who becomes the Chief Magistrate on the death or other disability of the President and Vice President, is virtually elected by States, each State casting two votes. The act, then, of choosing the Executive of the nation, whether in the first, second, or, we may say, the third instance, is the act of States, or is by State action. Whether the President or his successor, apparent or presumptive, is chosen by Electors, or by the House of Representatives, or by the Senate, the voting unit, factor, or agent is that political division we call the State.

From this pregnant fact several inferences are to be drawn. One is that the Constitution having commanded that the whole procedure of electing a President, whether by the people or their representatives, shall be conducted through the agency of the State as the political unit, such election cannot be brought about or prevented through a per capita vote of individual members of Congress. Hence it follows that all attempts to reject or cast aside the Presidential votes of States by a viva voce vote of the lower house of Congress, thereby attempting to prevent or control the election of a President, is a clearly unconstitutional mode of compassing such a result. The Constitution recognizes no act, step, or procedure in the choice of a President, from the beginning of the process to the end, except those through States, of States, and by States. Another inevitable inference from what we have shown is that when a State has appointed and accredited its Electors in such manner as to it seems best, no other State, nor all the other States united, can call it to account for the "manner" in which it has performed its State duty. When its chosen Electors have voted for President, it has voted as an independent State; and if all the other States in the Union, or every member of both houses of Congress, do not like the way or "manner" in which it voted, they have no power to prevent that State vote from being counted and recorded.

The Commissioners appointed by Congress, who, we must assume, will eagerly and profoundly investigate this vital issue, will find then that the question is not one of going behind returns but going behind and overturning States. The supreme law says the Legislature of a State shall direct and judge of the manner in which it shall cast its Electoral vote for President, but the Potter-Field Democracy says the House of Representatives shall direct in what manner a State shall discharge a purely State duty. We have been hearing unceasingly about "sovereign and independent States," and about the vastness of their implied powers and reserved rights, from the days of JEFFERSON to those of JEFFERSON DAVIS but it has remained for the present day to hear about a veto power being possessed by a Federal Congress over "sovereign States" when such States are acting within the limits of powers expressly granted. The old Democratic theory was that the State is sovereign or supreme and the nation powerless or subordinate. The nation was not thought to have even the right of self-defense or the constitutional right to maintain its existence. The new Democratic doctrine is that the Federal Government, or rather one department or third of it, can annihilate States, veto or put a negative upon all their acts in connection with the State duty of appointing Electors, in short, rob a State of the expressly granted rights for the exercise of which in its own way it has the incontestible authority of the Constitution. This doctrine of State destruction has not yet received recognition from any member of the Supreme Court, and will probably fare no better with the supreme commission.

A KNAVISH PIECE OF WORK.

Last week a burglar was tried and convicted in this City, and sentenced to Sing Sing for twenty years. One of the pieces of evidence against him was a letter to him, written by one of his "pals," or comrades, who is still at large. To the uninitiated this letter would appear like unintelligible gibberish. The writer refers to "Juggy" and "Fatty," and to a certain request to see if the District Attorney would "let-up" on the thief "if the stuff is turned up." And the writer declares that he can "turn up everything except the things destroyed," and so on. If the reader owns a copy of Mr. MATSELL'S celebrated dictionary of thieves' slang, he will find sufficient explanation and translation of this curious epistle. "Stuff" is the generic name for all sorts of plunder, or swag, and to "turn up" anything, according to the same high authority, is to restore or produce stolen goods. It has been the too common practice in New-York for prosecutions to be abandoned and thieves let loose again on society, provided they "turn up" their booty, or so much of it as they may be willing to disgorge. In this case, one of the thieves expressed his willingness to negotiate with the District Attorney for a restoration of part of the stolen goods, because his imprisoned pal had "always been a good friend" to the writer. Nevertheless, the good fellow got twenty years.

One cannot fail to notice how much like the burglar's letter is one of the Oregon dispatches to Hon. SAMUEL J. TILDEN, Democratic candidate for the Presidency. Exactly what this dispatch was intended to convey to Mr. TILDEN we have no means of knowing. MATSELL'S dictionary of thieves' argot throws no light upon the matter. The Democratic newspapers judiciously suppress the dispatch, and decline to make any reference to it, although it was produced before one of the Congressional investigating committees, and was sent out by the Associated Press from Washington. The dispatch runs thus:

PORTLAND, Oregon, Dec. 1, 1876.

Hon. S. J. Tilden, No. 15 Gramercy Park, New-York:

Head, scantiness, cramp emerge, peroration, hothouse, survivor, browze, of piameter, dottish, hothouse, exactness, of, services, highest, cunning, dottish, of, a, galvanic, survivor. By, accordingly, respectful, merciless. Of. Senator, inconsequent, coalesce. GOBBLE.

This is provokingly obscure. Who is "Gobble," and what can he possibly mean by "head scantiness," "highest cunning," and "inconsequent coalesce?" Of course, the Senator referred to is Senator KELLY, as that honest and exceedingly able person was in California and Oregon engaged in the attempt to steal an Electoral vote for TILDEN and Reform. Then there is "dottish," which appears twice in the mysterious dispatch, once in connection with "hot-house," and once as "dottish of a galvanic survivor." Possibly, since KELLY'S mission was to gobble that Electoral vote, he is the "highest cunning" sender of the dispatch. At any rate, whoever the writer may have been, he was one of TILDEN'S "pals," (see MATSELL on pals,) and he communicated directly with the head conspirator. Observe that the message is not sent to PELTON, HEWITT, or any of the small fellows, but to Hon. SAMUEL J. TILDEN, No. 15 Gramercy Park, New-York.

Argot like this is designed to conceal a crime. When "L. M." desired to communicate with his comrade in the Tombs, he sent him an almost similar message. Unfortunately, no Matsell has yet produced a dictionary of political slang, and we are unable to apply to the communication that test which may unravel the oracular communications of "Fatty" and "Juggy." It is fair, however, to conclude that "dottish," "cramp emerge," and all the rest of the jargon relate to deviltry of some kind. When one of the House Committees, last season, got hold of a dispatch from a Cabinet Minister to his wife saying "the baby is sick," they announced that they held a clue to some great wickedness. They considered it an incredible thing that a Cabinet Minister could unbend himself so far as to telegraph in good faith about a sick baby. It was a "cipher dispatch," fraught with deep turpitude; and when they demanded a key to this cipher, and were met with the statement that the baby was sick, and that the Minister had been in search of a nurse for it, they shrugged their shoulders. But when a man who wants to be President of the United States, and who even thinks that he has been elected, receives telegrams from "Gobble," couched in the same obscure terms in which one burglar addresses another, the Democratic newspapers are struck dumb. They are so much astonished that they forget to print the news.

One of the unwilling Democratic witnesses in the Oregon bribery case testifies that $15,000 was placed to the credit of his firm for use in this electoral matter. And it appears that PATRICK, "TILDEN'S extreme Western agent," collected $8,000 in gold, in San Francisco, on a check which was paid at Wells, Fargo & Co.'s agency at an unusually early hour in the morning. There were messengers flying to and fro; mysterious and secret messages, filled with dark hints about money and an impending crisis, were exchanged between the burglars—we mean the Democratic managers. At best it was a dirty and scandalous business. The evidence shows that the Democratic candidate for President was in it up to his elbows. He employed men who did not dare to trust to the wires anything that might drop a clue to the plot. These fellows were spending money like water, and reporting progress to each other by means of concerted signals which suggest only a burglarious operation. The Chairman of the National Democratic Committee parades himself in a dispatch, arguing that GROVER'S action is designed to force Congress to go behind the returns. But the New-York organ of the Democracy, from that time until now, has been engaged with fine-spun arguments to prove that CRONIN was honestly and fairly commissioned, and that TILDEN ought to keep the Oregon vote. We do not know what honest Democrats think of this latest exposure of their candidate's trickery, but it is a most discreditable revelation.

THE CIVIL SERVICE AS A POLITICAL PRIZE.

It is patent to every thoughtful observer of the present condition of affairs that one of the greatest obstacles to a fair and amicable settlement of the difficulties that environ us is the fact that the public offices are at stake. This unquestionably increases the rancor and bitterness of the contest, and obscures the judgment of those personally interested in the result. There are nearly sixty thousand office-holders who have been trembling with fear lest their means of support should be taken away, and not less than ten times sixty thousand expectants who hoped to get places if a change occurred, all of whom have a deep personal interest in the result. They measure the importance to the country of the inauguration of their favorite by its bearings upon their own personal fortunes. The effect of these selfish influences is incalculable. Every second ward politician throughout the land either holds or expects an office. His bread and butter are directly dependent upon the result, and it is no wonder that he regards it of much less importance that the issue shall be just and peaceful than that it shall secure him an office. A large portion of the country press, too, is controlled by either actual or expectant office-holders, who urge their views with a violence which is born of their anxiety concerning their own fortunes. In this way a fair expression of the views of the industrious, sober-minded masses of the people is interfered with. The impression was, at one time, created that the country was on the brink of civil war, when, as a matter of fact, the apprehension of such a calamity existed only in the brains of a handful of bummers and braggarts.

It is natural, too, that under such a system, the "outs" should be more clamorous and turbulent than the "ins." The latter have their official duties to attend to and are kept in bounds by the restraints of their position. The former have everything to gain and nothing to lose by a change, whether secured by fair means or foul, and are subject to no restraint of either character or position. The threats of violence and war which have been so freely uttered were, in nine cases out of ten, the breathings of out-at-elbows loafers, ravenous for a chance at the public crib. The insane plan of mustering 100,000 "unarmed Democrats" at the capital to witness the counting of the votes, was a fruit of the same tree. Had it been carried out, there would have been such a gathering of corner loafers, adventurers, and jail-birds in Washington as has not been seen since Falstaff mustered his recruits. No one but a lunatic would expect that any industrious, self-respecting tradesman or artisan would leave his home and neglect his business to become an actor in such a farce.

The setting up of the entire civil service, with all its patronage and perquisites, as a prize to be fought for at every election, is one of the most demoralizing influences in our political system. It too often degrades the contest into a mere scramble for the spoils of office, obscures the real issues of the hour, and demoralizes the service itself. There is no more appropriate time than the present to draw the moral from these notorious facts. So far as the minor offices are concerned, the civil service should be permanent during good behavior and free from political changes. This means, of course, that it should be non-partisan. There is no escape from this conclusion. If any permanent reform is to be effected, the party that inaugurates it must rigidly exclude partisan considerations in the selection of the rank and file of the service. Otherwise—no matter how wise its methods of selection, or how competent its appointees—the good accomplished would be entirely overthrown upon a change in the political complexion of the Administration. Not the least of the dangers to be apprehended from putting the Government into the hands of the opposition is the complete overturning of the civil service for which it would be the signal. Neither experience, nor competency, nor length of service, nor fidelity to the public interests would avail against the whirlwind of influences which would be directed against the public service. The worst of it is that for every case of arbitrary removal a precedent, drawn from Republican practices, could be quoted. It is a disgrace to the age in which we live—a blot upon republican institutions—that such a danger should even threaten us. Had the Republican Party six or eight years ago adopted a liberal and enlighted policy toward the civil service, and steadily adhered to it, the system would have become so firmly rooted and so popular that no political convulsion could overthrow it.

COLUMBIA COLLEGE.

There has been of late a good deal of discussion, and some complaint, of Columbia College. The complaint seems only to be the expression of an indefinite and general notion that the college is not accomplishing in this community what it ought to accomplish. It is said that not a sufficient number of the youth of the neighborhood benefit by its instructions. Now, this cannot be on account of any want of liberality on the part of the college in extending the benefits of its endowment, for it has has been very generous. The college might increase the number of its students by lowering its standard of introductory requirements; but surely nobody would advise a change in that direction. Is there anything, then, in the character of the instruction itself which hinders the usefulness of the institution? This question at once opens up the great subject of university reform. The whole matter of university education seems about to undergo a general revision; and there is no telling to what results the reflection and the experiment of the coming years may lead us. For the present, however, the special feature of the American college system—a fixed course of instruction—is still in existence in all our institutions, with possibly one exception. So that the practical question before any student, or before any parent or guardian, is not as to the plan of university education to be preferred, but as to the college at which the common plan is best pursued. We do not hesitate to express our belief that there is no college in the country at which better instruction is to be had than at Columbia. The teachers have been eminent; the teaching has been, of course, highly competent; but it has been much more than that—it has been earnest, enthusiastic, and effective. The Professors have applied themselves to their tasks with zest, and have been eager in devising the most effective methods for bringing their several subjects before the minds of the young men. That zeal and ardor are not qualities very common among college Professors most American university men will be ready to admit.

The objection that Columbia College cannot offer to its students the attractions of a university life is, no doubt, much the strongest which can be brought against it in the minds of most young men. Most young men do get, at any rate, a "good time" out of the social life of our colleges; hence, they will usually prefer a university which offers a distinct society. But it does not therefore follow that the four years of university life cannot be put to a better use. It is, moreover, not necessary for any father in deciding upon the relative advantages of various places of education, to consult the preferences of a boy of 17, except so far as they indicate the natural directions of his mind—directions which he himself cannot judge of, and of which most often he is not aware. It must not be forgotten that it is an open question whether the social life of the colleges is an unmixed good. Whether or not a university society is of advantage to its members depends upon the nature of the society itself. No doubt some such association of scholars as we now and then hear of, having their little renaissance somewhere among the hills, is a most beneficent accident for those fortunate enough to come within its influence. No doubt, too, those little sets at great universities, of which we read fifty years later in the biographies of eminent men, have had most happy effects upon the lives of those who formed them and upon the world. But those college societies the effects of which have been evil, or not obviously good, do not find historians. There are such, of course, and any father would do well to consider that there are two sides to the question of college social life. Suppose a society which, instead of being sensitive to scholastic and artistic ideas, should be hard and worldly in tone. Suppose a society in which those notions of policy, certain at the best to be acquired too soon in life, were preciously learned at the expense of better things. What is called "college politics" is, in our view, a most unfortunate peculiarity of the colleges of the country. The college should be the one place in the community devoted to truth, unadulterated by notions of expediency. Men learn soon enough to compromise, soon enough to mark out their course with an eye to interest and policy. In the university, at any rate, thoughts should be formed and expressed with sole reference to their truth. It is a pity to see young fellows who had better be studying or even playing, keeping the cautious watch of politicians over their words and actions, and struggling for the mimic honors of their little world with the wary assiduity we expect of men in pursuit of bread. With a thought like this in mind, Gray, in his ode on the installation of a new Chancellor for the University of Cambridge, wrote:

"Nor Envy base, nor creeping Gain,
Dare the Muse's walk to stain
While bright-eyed Science watches round.
Hence! away! 'tis holy ground."

No doubt the existence of college politics is due to a fact of university life which is, perhaps, inevitable. With most young men the practical bias is stronger than the literary bias. The disposition to exercise the natural bent is only healthy; and it is often a pity that it cannot be exercised in some real business. It is true also that in some of the universities of the country in which the social character is very prominent there is to be found a certain tone of manly good taste which can hardly be spoken of too highly; it is likely that young men of a bright, social, active temperament will derive special advantages from residence at these universities. But even these advantages are in no way due to the existence of "college politics," which we believe to be always an evil. It sets a hard stamp upon the minds of the young men; it baffles and diverts from its true ends the course of university life. A boy with a strong natural bent for study finds himself in a society which, no matter how hard he works or how well he does, will think less of him than of some impudent young puller of the social wires. A boy of this kind, we believe, had perhaps as well remain in a home in which such matters as knowledge and thought are deemed of some account. If, besides, he may profit by the instructions of teachers as able and zealous as those of any university of the land, he appears indeed to be very well placed.

A MISTAKEN POLICY.

On Friday last three respectable Skye terriers, who had just arrived in this city on board a Liverpool steam-ship, were arrested on the charge of evading the payment of duty, and were committed without bail to the Custom-house, where they are still imprisoned. This incident has apprised the public for the first time of the extraordinary fact that no Skye terrier is permitted to land in the United States without first paying a duty of twenty per cent. ad valorem.

It is generally conceded that this country has been built up by immigrants from Europe, and it has been our boast that here a free asylum is offered to the oppressed and downtrodden of all nations. When the Pilgrim Fathers landed here, they were not met with a demand for the payment of an ad valorem duty of twenty per cent. per pilgrim; neither were the early settlers of New-York, Baltimore, and the more Southern colonies compelled to pay duty. Until within a few years the policy of free trade in immigrants has been supported even by our most violent protectionists. Persons landing on our shores have been searched for concealed diamonds, wines, or cigars; but no man has ever been arrested for an attempt to smuggle an Irishman, and no woman has ever been charged with having a small Frenchman concealed about her person. Any one who so desired could land a cargo of a thousand Germans, or other emigrants, without paying a single cent of duty, and the result of this wise policy was that millions of foreigners hastened to America, and were received with gladness—especially if an election was close at hand. That this policy has now been abandoned is apparent from the fact of the arrest of the three Skye terriers just mentioned. It remains to be seen what will be the result of the reversal of a policy under which the Republic has grown and prospered.

Among all the foreign dogs who from time to time cast in their lot with us, there is none more thoroughly reputable than the Skye terrier. He is not as refined a gentleman as the English mastiff, but he is the embodiment of sturdy honesty. He is not only extremely intelligent, but he has the good sense to be content in that station of life to which he has been called, and to avoid a snobbish imitation of the manners of those who outrank him in the social scale. He is always cheerful, active, and anxious to do his whole duty. In his own peculiar field of industry he is without a rival. The combined breadth and subtlety of his views in regard to rats command the admiration of every man who respects thoroughness and skill. There are other dogs who profess to be expert in rats, and occasionally a Scotch or an English terrier is capable of doing good plain rat-killing in a workmanlike way, but in a perfect mastery of all the niceties of ratting, the Skye is unrivaled. As a remedy for burglars he is also exceptionally safe and efficacious. Unlike other small house-dogs, who will bark with the utmost violence when the master of the house returns at 2 A. M. from protracted labor at the office or store, and who will stupidly accept the midnight burglar's impudent assertion that he is the local clergyman, who ought not to be barked at, the Skye disdains to create dissension between man and wife by untimely barking, but refuses to listen to the slightest word of explanation from a burglar. Perhaps his highest merit is his sunny temper, which nothing can disturb. He is never vicious and never mad. Physicians tell us that there is not on record a single case of hydrophobia which can be traced to a Skye terrier's bite. When he has been disappointed in regard to bones, or ill-treated by a cowardly master, he simply goes out and relieves his mind with stray cats. Sincere, good-tempered, honest, conscientious, and efficient in the discharge of his duty, and withal modest and unassuming, the Skye terrier has all the virtues of the Scotch Lowlander, without the latter's occasional faults.

It is this admirable dog who is forbidden to enter without the payment of a heavy duty a country in which the loathsome and degraded Spitz is permitted to reside, and to pursue his nefarious business of inoculating mankind with hydrophobia. Doubtless, the old plea that our native dogs must be protected against the competition of the pauper dogs of Europe has been used to procure the establishment of this duty upon Skyes; but the Skye is in no sense a pauper, but, on the contrary, is precisely the sort of dog whose presence among us should be encouraged in every practicable way. If the Skye is made to pay duty, there is no immigrant who can consistently be admitted free, and we are forced to the conclusion that the "Custom-house gang"—an organization of abandoned ruffians constantly discovered by the Democratir press—has determined to check immigration to the United States by the imposition of a heavy duty.

Before very long we shall find out that Irishmen, in bulk or in packages, and both crude and refined, are burdened with a duty of at least twenty per cent. ad valorem, and we shall constantly read of the attempted smuggling a large packing-box full of graduates of Trinity College, Dublin, who have been falsely represented to the Custom-house officials as works of Grecian art. India-rubber bags full of Germans will be thrown overboard in the Lower Bay, to be picked up by smugglers in small boats, and fashionable ladies returning from Paris will conceal French counts in their hand-bags, and will insist when discovered that the articles in question were mere adjuncts of the toilet. We shall have interminable quarrels over the valuation of foreigners, and the question whether the duty upon an invoice of Irishmen imported for the use of the Herald is to be assessed upon their value as estimated by themselves, or as expressed in the invoice made out by the Herald's agent at Dublin, will lead to constant litigation. Immigration will gradually cease, and the fleet of steam-ships that now carry their thousands of European immigrants will lie idle at the wharves. Patriotic men should make their stand now, before it is too late, and should demand that the shameful duty upon Skye terriers should be instantly removed, and that a suitable compensation in bones, together with a full apology, should be made to the three respectable terriers who, in the place of hospitality, have been received with insult and subjected to imprisonment.

AFTER THE BATTLE IN NEW-JERSEY.

THE REAL WORK OF THE LEGISLATURE TO BEGIN TO-NIGHT—THE NEW BILL FOR THE GOVERNMENT OF JERSEY CITY—HUNGRY DEMOCRATS LOOKING FOR OFFICES—EFFORTS TO LEGISLATE REPUBLICANS OUT AND DEMOCRATS IN—THE PASSAIC WATER WORKS.

From Our Own Correspondent.

TRENTON, Sunday, Jan. 28, 1877.

The reconvening of the two houses of the Legislature to-morrow night will mark the beginning of the real work of the session. The election of a United States Senator, which engrossed all the attention and commanded all the energies of members for three weeks, was a diversion for the politicians, and nothing else has been accomplished, save the passage in the Assembly of a single unimportant bill. The House will this week, and during all the succeeding weeks of the session, address themselves to the shaping of such legislation as the interests of the State may demand.

The new Constitution devolved upon the Legislature of last year the maturing and passage of general laws in certain specified cases. A number of bills were prepared by the Joint Conference Committee of the two houses last year, but most of them failed of passage. Some of these bills have already been presented to the Senate, and others will probably follow in their wake. The bill for the government of the several counties in the State has found its way, through Senator Magie, into the Senate again. The bill classifies the counties and regulates representation in the boards of chosen freeholders by population. Most of the smaller counties of the State are now afflicted with unwieldy county boards, and the bill suggests radical and salutary changes. In the Counties of Essex and Hudson, the largest in the State, matters are left substantially as they are now. Additional legislation may be asked for Hudson, with a view to ridding the county of that anomaly known as Director at Large. The powers with which he is intrusted are so great and final, and his exercise of them has been so capricious, that Director at Large Halstead, the present incumbent, has won for himself the title of Dictator at Large. He has, too, so antagonized public sentiment by his action in connection with the purchase of the new Courthouse site, that efforts will be made, not only to clip his wings, but to abolish him altogether. The bill for the equalization of assessments, enacting a reform much needed throughout the State, and which was defeated last year, has also been reintroduced by Senator Magie.

The joint committee were unable last year to draft a bill for the government of cities, and the whole matter was referred to a commission appointed by Gov. Bedle. When the members of the Legislature gathered this year, almost the first piece of information which greeted their ears was the fact that the commission will not be ready to report till next year. This was rather a severe disappointment to the local Democratic politicians of Jersey City, who have been for years struggling to wrest her local government from the hands of the politicians who now control it. Last week Mr. Drohan, of the First Assembly District of Jersey City, introduced a bill into the House abolishing commissions and transferring all the powers now exercised by the several legislative boards to the Board of Aldermen. Heretofore the resolutions and ordinances of the Aldermen have required the approval of the Mayor. The present incumbent is a Republican, and Drohan's bill consequently seeks to divest him of his veto power, and transfer it to the Board of Finance, which is Democratic. It may not be out of place to say just here that Mr. Drohan is himself the President of the Finance Board, and that that board is filled by appointees of the Board of Aldermen. The crudeness of any system of local government which compels any public board to submit its action for approval to its own creatures needs no comment. In addition to this is the fact that if the bill was to pass as it now stands it would leave Jersey City to an interregnum of anarchy. It terminates the service, immediately upon its passage, not only of all the Commissioners, but all of the employes appointed by them. Its effect would be to leave the city without a Police or Fire Department till the Aldermen filled the offices; and in the meantime crime and disaster would run riot in the city. It has been made the special order for to-morrow evening, when, it is said, an amendment will be offered authorizing the Board of Finance to fill the offices, in case the Board of Aldermen, in which there is a tie just now, fails to do so at once. Jersey City is full of hungry Democratic politicians, and Mr. Drohan's bill is designed to secure a "sure thing" for them. But it cannot be accomplished. It will probably be put off the Speaker's calendar to-morrow evening by a vote of 30 to 30.

Another important bill is pending before the State Senate. It is that of Senator Hobart, practically authorizing the purchase by the City of Paterson of the water-works which supply the city, now owned by the Passaic Water-works Company. The bill, general in its terms, authorizes the issue of $1,000,000 in bonds by the city to make the purchase. The Water Company fix $1,064,000 as the lowest figure at which they can part with their property, though it is thought that an offer of $1,000,000 will be finally accepted.

The politicians are already busy with their manipulations for the other offices in the gift of the Legislature. Among the principal of these are the offices of Clerk of the Supreme Court, who is appointed by the Governor and confirmed by the Senate, and Controller of the State Treasury, who is appointed in joint meeting. Ex-Senator John Hopper, of Passaic, expects to get the Clerkship, but it is likely that Benjamin F. Lee, the present incumbent, will be appointed. The Controllership is filled at present by a Republican, who is very capable and popular, and it may be a difficult matter to get the House to agree to go into joint meeting to displace him. The Democratic aspirants are, nevertheless, very numerous. William J. Lyons, a young lawyer, of Hudson County, ex-Senator Lydecker, of Bergen, Charles Dessler, of Middlesex, Col. Andrew Van Syckle, of Hunterdon, William P. McMichael, of Burlington, Gen. Robert Stockton, brother to the ex-Senator, of Mercer, Edwin Teel, of Warren, ex-Senator Smith, of Sussex, and Josephus Shann, editor of a weekly in Hoboken, comprise about half the list of candidates. The chances are divided between McMichael, Stockton, and Deshler.

THE SURPLUS GENEVA AWARD.

From the London Spectator.

The Americans are puzzled to know what to do with the money paid under the Geneva Award. They have paid up all claims, and the Alabama Commission ceased to exist at the end of the year, but there is a surplus of £1,800,000 remaining undistributed. Part of this has accrued from interest, but the whole sum now lies at the disposal of Congress and the President. It is said that there is a strong feeling in the United States in favor of returning the balance to Great Britain, and we can only hope that it may be influential enough to affect the action of Congress. Such an act of political honesty would do more to make future arbitrations possible, and to restore the confidence of Great Britain in the American people, than a dozen treaties, and we are not without hope that it may be performed. There is sometimes a deficiency of justice over there, especially about boundary claims, but there is never a deficiency of generosity. This country does not want the money, but it does want evidence that the Americans, in pressing the Alabama claims so sharply sought only justice.

THE MURDOCH TESTIMONIAL IN BOSTON.

The Boston Traveller of Tuesday says:

"The Executive Committee of the Murdoch Testimonial held a meeting this morning at the Boston Theatre, to take final action concerning the Murdoch testimonial. The meeting was enthusiastic, and the members of the committee congratulated each other on the handsome results attained by the testimonial. Those who had so generously given their services were gratefully remembered, and the feeling that the concert and union which had been shown had had a fitting issue was fittingly exhibited. The report of the Treasurer, Mr. John M. Ward, was listened to with peculiar interest. It was shown that the gross receipts have been $3,421 65, as follows: "From sale of seats, $3,213; from cash donations and auction sale of tickets, 15 various sums ranging from $50 to $1 50, $166 50; from sale of photographs, $42 15. The expenditures from necessary and unavoidable outlay amounted to $115 50, leaving a net sum of $3,306 15 to be invested for the benefit of the mother and sister of the lamented comedian. The committee appointed a sub-committee, consisting of Messrs. Williams, Keist, and Ward, with full power, to attend to the disposition of the amount realized, so that those intended to be benefited should receive their due.

LATEST NEWS BY CABLE.

THE EASTERN COMPLICATIONS.

PRINCE MILAN'S REPLY TO THE PORTE—FRIENDLY ADVICE OF FRANCE AND AUSTRIA—DEPARTURE OF THE AMBASSADORS—A COUNCIL OF WAR.

LONDON, Jan. 28.—The following telegram has been received from Constantinople: "It is said that Prince Milan, in reply to Midhat Pasha's dispatch proposing direct negotiations for peace, has expressed his desire for the commencement of the negotiations."

The Independence Belge says the Czar, being asked by Milan for advice, replied that peace was desirable and should be accepted from whatever quarter it was offered.

Another dispatch from Constantinople states that the Porte, in accordance with the friendly advices of France and Austria, has requested Servia and Montenegro to send delegates there to arrange for peace. It is thought the proposal will be accepted.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 28.—Gen. Ignatieff sailed for the Piræus instead of Odessa on account of stormy weather in the Black Sea. Baron Von Werther, the German Ambassador, and Count Zichy, the Austrian Ambassador, embarked for Trieste on Saturday. Midhat Pasha has notified Turkish representatives abroad that an Imperial irade has been issued throwing open the military schools to Christians, in accordance with the Constitution.

VIENNA, Jan. 28.—An important council of war will be held at Kisheneff on Tuesday. All the divisional commanders and chiefs of staff will attend it.

LONDON, Jan. 29.—A dispatch from Semlin reports that the Servian Cabinet met on Saturday, and decided to accept Midhat Pasha's proposals. Immediate steps will be taken to open regular negotiations with the Porte. Should there be no outside influence we may expect that peace will be finally concluded, although the discussion will probably be protracted, as M. Ristics is likely to avail himself of the opportunity to invite the sympathy of Europe. The Servian Peace Party is jubilant, although the result is, of course, still far from being decided.

The Russian Telegraphic Agency announces that the basis of peace proposed by Turkey to Montenegro and Servia is moderate and very conciliatory. A Vienna dispatch says Turkey seems disposed to settle her differences with Roumania amicably. As nothing more is heard about excitement in Roumania, it is tolerably certain that the Roumanian Government considers the incident as more or less settled. The Austrian Plenipotentiary, Count Calice, embarked at Constantinople for Trieste, and M. De Bourgoing, the French Plenipotentiary, for Marseilles, on Saturday. It is thought that Gen. Ignatieff went to the Piræus because he wished to withdraw at the same time as the other Northern representatives, according to the prearranged programme. He will remain at Athens a few days, until the Black Sea is calmer, when he will pass through the Dardanelles and land at Odessa.

A dispatch to the Cologne Gazette, dated Saturday, says the whole Turkish Army in Bulgaria and on the Servian border, is not much over 100,000 strong. It comprises 133 infantry battalions and seven regiments of cavalry, and has 200 field-pieces. The main body is at Widdin. The sanitary condition of the army is not satisfactory, and the artillery lacks munitions and horses. The spirit of the men, however, is excellent, and the work on the fortifications is going on with great activity.

A special from Pera announces that the first Turkish Parliament will meet on the 1st of March. Midhat Pasha has issued an edict ordering the disarmament of the population. A Turkish envoy has been commissioned to conclude peace with Servia on the basis of the statu quo ante bellum. Turkey is willing to grant some territory to Montenegro.

THE WEATHER.

SYNOPSIS AND INDICATIONS.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29—1 A. M.—The pressure is highest in the Southern States; a minor depression has advanced south-eastward to the lake region, producing fresh and brisk southerly to westerly winds; a high-pressure area advanced south-eastward last night over New-England and Eastern New-York, with northerly winds and decided cold weather; the temperature has very generally risen from the North-west and lakes to Tennessee; a disturbance is approaching the Pacific States, and rainy weather has prevailed along the California coast. The Ohio, Cumberland, and Savannah Rivers have continued to fall, and the Mississippi, at and below Memphis, to rise slowly.

INDICATIONS.

During Monday, in the South Atlantic States, stationary or lower barometer, southerly to westerly winds, warmer and generally clear weather will prevail.

In the Gulf States, stationary or falling barometer, variable winds, mostly easterly and southerly, warmer and generally clear weather.

In Tennessee and the Ohio Valley, rising, followed by falling barometer, westerly and southerly winds, generally warmer and clear weather.

In the upper lake region, Upper Mississippi and Lower Missouri Valleys, rising and stationary, followed by falling barometer, westerly and northerly winds, generally warmer, and clear or partly cloudy weather.

In the lower lake region, rising barometer, variable winds, warmer, followed by colder, partly cloudy weather, and possibly occasional rain or snow.

In the Middle and Eastern States, falling barometer, increasing south-west to south-east winds, probably to brisk along the coast, warmer, partly cloudy weather, and in the latter and northern portion of the former, probably snow or rain, followed by rising barometer and winds shifting to colder westerly or northerly.

The Savannah, Cumberland, and Lower Ohio Rivers continue to fall slowly, and the Mississippi, at and below Memphis, to rise slowly.

Cautionary signals are ordered for the New-England coast.

VIRGINIA OYSTERS.

THE ANNUAL PRODUCT ESTIMATED AT $20,000,000 IN VALUE—THE STATE WISHES A REVENUE OF $100,000 FROM IT.

Gov. Kemper has sent a Message to the Legislature of Virginia, in response to a resolution asking for information of the best method of deriving an income from the oyster interest. He says:

"I have the honor to respond to a resolution of the House of Delegates requesting the Executive to state what legislation will, in his opinion, produce a revenue of $100,000 from the oyster interests of the Commonwealth. In my last annual Message the opinion was confidently expressed that the amount of revenue named could be raised from this source without injustice to any section of the State, or any class of the people. That opinion was the result of a careful investigation, and it was based upon the understood and conceded value of the oyster fisheries. I stated, what is undeniably true, that the oyster grounds are part of the ingrained domain—the immediate, and absolute property—of the Commonwealth; and that if their products were treated as any other subject to revenue, and were subjected to the existing uniform rate of taxation, they would necessarily yield to the Treasury the yearly sum which I indicated.

It has been ascertained that in the year 1869 3,502 vessels of all kinds and sizes, with an aggregate carrying capacity of 18,876 tons, were engaged in taking and transporting the oysters of Virginia to market. In 1875 the facts were derived from local observation and published that 500,000 bushels of oysters were annually sent to market from Chincoteague Island alone; that they were sold at from 65 to 90 cents per bushel, and that the cost of planting, gathering, and marketing each bushel did not exceed an average of 30 cents. It would be a needless consumption of time to cite other facts going to show that the annual value of all the oyster fisheries of the State is not less than $20,000,000. No law can be said to be wanting in leniency or in liberality which treats the products of the oyster grounds owned by the State as any other legitimate subject of revenue, and which subjects them to the same taxation which is borne by the private estates of the people. In view of the known actual value of these fisheries, it is manifest that if subjected efficiently to the same rate of taxation which is uniformly applied to almost all other subjects, they must, of necessity, produce the amount of revenue which is claimed to be due from this source. * * * I transmit herewith the plan for taxing the oyster interests as matured and reported by the commission, and I recommend its enactment with such improvements as our wisdom may devise in the light of subsequent experience. I respectfully suggest that the members of the commission be called on for such explanations of its details as may be deemed desirable. While the employment of armed police-boats is indispensable to the enforcement of the proposed plan, it is confidently believed that a single armed steamer, assisted with two or three sloops, will suffice for accomplishing that object. The employment of such a police force is as necessary to prevent the destruction of the oyster-beds by non-resident marauders as for the production of revenue."

OBITUARY.

SIGNOR ANTONIO BLITZ.

Antonio Blitz, the magician, better known as Signor Blitz, died at his residence, No. 1,831 Wallace street, Philadelphia, at 9:30 o'clock yesterday morning. He had been in declining health for the past four years, being troubled with a severe cough, which finally ended in consumption. Signor Blitz had been confined to his house for the past six weeks, and his death was not unexpected. He was in the 67th year of his age, and leaves a wife and four children. Antonio Blitz was born in Deal, Kent County, England, on the coast, June 21, 1810. When about the age of 12 he learned something of legerdemain. In September, 1823, his father sent him in the care of a special attendant to Hamburg, where he made his first appearance in public. His first appearance in his native country was in Dover in December, 1823. After traveling through England, Ireland, and Scotland, he started for America, leaving Liverpool on the 1st of August, 1834, and arrived in New-York in the early part of September, making his initial bow before an American audience at Niblo's Garden some weeks later. After a visit to Boston he went to Philadelphia, (which he afterward made his home,) and established himself in a large hall at Eighth and Chestnut streets. The Quaker City seemed to suit the artist so well that after making an extended tour of the country he returned, and permanently established himself in the Assembly Buildings, where, during the later years of his life, he performed to large audiences. He was a great favorite, being very affable in his manners, and it will be a long while before the pleasant memories of Signor Blitz, and his wonderful boy "Bobby," are effaced from the minds of the residents of Philadelphia. About 14 years ago, his first wife having died, he married a Miss Eaton, of Groton, Mass. This lady survives him, but the children are those of his first wife. He was the father of the celebrated opera singer Mme. Van Zandt, who is now in England, and also of Mrs. Metz, residing in this City. During the later years of his life he performed only for the benefit of charitable institutions, having amassed a large fortune for himself and family by his previous efforts. The automaton trumpeter, the never-failing egg-sack, and the Sphinx were the results of his creative fancy. During his life he performed before many of the reigning sovereigns of Europe.

HORACE DRESSER.

Horace Dresser, a prominent and highly respected member of the New-York Bar, died last Saturday at his residence, No. 210 York street, Jersey City, at the age of 73 years. For many years he was an invalid and unable to pursue his profession actively, although his mind remained clear and his interest in the current legal and constitutional topics of the day was unimpaired. He was one of the earliest abolitionists in the country, and his efforts in behalf of the negro in the New-York courts, years ago, were the first legal steps openly and fearlessly taken in behalf of the race. At a time when it was exceedingly unpopular to espouse the cause of the slave he fought his battles in the courts and did more than any one else toward making popular efforts in his behalf. His success in advocating the cause soon led others to join in the work, but to him belongs the credit of being the very first lawyer to plead the cause of the slave in the New-York courts. His characteristics were great strength of will, rigor of mind, and distinguished legal and literary ability. As a constitutional lawyer, in his days of health, he had few equals. As a writer on legal and literary topics he was widely and favorably known, and his advice and criticism on literary matters were sought by those who knew him best. His funeral will take place to-morrow at 10 A. M.

PRESENTIMENT.

REMARKABLE EXPERIENCES CLAIMED BY AN OHIO MAN.

From the Sandusky (Ohio) Register, Jan. 26.

We have come into possession of some very singular facts in relation to the escape of a Bellevue man in two railroad accidents—one of them that of Ashtabula. The gentleman is a Mr. Freese, and the truth of his story is vouched for by some of the best people in Huron and Sandusky Counties. It is said by those who know him that his reputation for veracity is unquestioned. Several years ago Mr. Freese and his entire family—wife and two children—went from Bellevue to a village in Pennsylvania to visit some relatives. After staying at their relatives' homes for a few days, Mr. Freese and his family started one evening to return to Bellevue. They took the cars at Erie. Mr. Freese says that the moment he stepped aboard the train he felt a strange and unaccountable disinclination to commence the journey. There was something that seemed to oppress his mind and he felt an impulse to turn back and take some later train. But he snook off the feeling as best he could, and tried to laugh at himself for entertaining what he considered a wild and foolish notion, of which he was even ashamed to speak to his wife. As the train moved on he held one of his children on his lap, and fell into a doze. While thus half asleep he had a dream in which he saw, with startling distinctness, his wife and children lying in coffins, and all the preparations being made for a funeral service. Such a sight was well calculated to carry terror even to the stoutest heart. But the worst was yet to come—the awful realization of the dream. In a few moments there was a jar and a jerk of the train, a shiver seemed to run through every timber of the coaches, there was a crash, a fall, and the cars plunged into the water. A bridge had given away. Mr. Freese found himself held down in the water by a piece of timber; but he succeeded in releasing himself and crawled out of the car. He saw a train employe with a lantern passing along on a log beside the train, and the man helped him out of the wreck and put him on his feet. Mr. Freese found that he had suffered no special injury, but he felt completely unnerved. The terrible reality of the presentiment flashed upon his mind, and his brain reeled as he thought that he should see his wife and children lying in the Ravenna morgue, as they appeared in his dream. A search resulted in discovering Mrs. Freese in the wrecked car dead. The dead bodies of the children were found near by. The remains were taken to Bellevue for interment.

Some time thereafter Mr. Freese married again, and a while prior to the Ashtabula accident he and his family went east. They determined upon a day to start home, but when the time arrived Mr. Freese felt a strong disinclination to start. A strange impulse again seized him and he felt that if he were to go then something terrible would happen on the way. He had disregarded this feeling once, but he had resolved never to do so again, consequently he decided to start one day earlier and to go a part of the way by a different route than he had anticipated taking. It was at first his intention to reach Cleveland on Friday night, Dec. 29, and the train which he and his family would have been compelled to take to do so would have been the ill-fated one that went into the terrible abyss at Ashtabula. The change which he made in time and trains kept him and his family out of one of the most terrible accidents in the history of railways.

JEFF. DAVIS INTERESTED IN A SUIT.

The Memphis (Tenn.) Avalanche of Wednesday contains the following: "A bill recently filed in chancery raised an interesting point. The house of Boyle & Chapman, booksellers, binders, &c., several months ago was changed into the house of Boyle & Co., Mr. Chapman retiring. Not long since it became public that the house of Boyle & Co. had failed. Then J. A. Hayes, Jr., Trustee, for the benefit of Jefferson Davis, advertised the sale of various parts of the tools, type, machinery, &c., of Boyle & Co. To prevent this sale, and other similar sales, Messrs. Chatfield & Woods, of Cincinnati, et al., creditors of the latter firm, filed a bill setting forth their claims, and praying for an injunction against sale by these Trustees. This injunction Chancellor Morgan ordered served. Messrs. Chatfield & Woods, in their plea, state that Mr. Boyle arranged with them for the extension of credit by the agreement that Mr. Jefferson Davis had on July 1, 1874, invested $25,000 in the house of Boyle & Chapman, in consideration of which loan he was to receive one-third of the profits of the concern. The complainants further assert that for the year between July 1, 1874, and July 1, 1875, Mr. Davis received as that one-third of the profits $6,000, and that since July 1, 1875, he has received nothing, there having been no profits. All of which they hold to be proof of Mr. Davis' partnership in the firm. They say that he also made his headquarters there, and received his mail at that point. The object of the plea is to break a trust deed in which Boyle conveys to Mr. Davis property to cover his 'debt' of $25,000, the question being whether Mr. Davis was a partner or creditor."

THE TOMB OF AGAMEMNON.

LETTER FROM DR. SCHLIEMANN.

THE GROUNDS FOR IDENTIFYING THE EXCAVATED SEPULCHRES DISCUSSED BY DR. SCHLIEMANN.

Dr. Henry Schliemann, the distinguished American citizen, writes to the London Times, under date Mycenæ, Dec. 5, as follows:

"The Trojan war has for a long time past, by many eminent scholars, been regarded as a myth, of which, however, they vainly endeavored to find the origin in the Rigveda. But in all antiquity the siege and conquest of Ilium by the Greek Army under Agamemnon has been considered as an undoubted historical fact, and as such it is also accepted by the great authority of Thucydides. (I., 8—10.) The tradition has even retained the memory of many details of that war which have been omitted by Homer. For my part, I have always firmly believed in the Trojan war; my firm faith in Homer and in the tradition has never been shaken by modern criticism, and to this my faith I am indebted for the discovery of Troy and its treasure. However, the want of ornamentation on the Trojan jewels, the hand-made, uncolored pottery, with impressed or engraved ornamentation, and, finally, the want of iron and glass, convince me that the ruins of Troy belong to such a remote antiquity as to precede by ages the ruins of Mycenæ, the date of which I thought I could fix by the result of the 34 shafts which I sank in the Acropolis in February, 1874. I therefore believed that Homer had only known by an ancient tradition, commemorated by preceding poets, the siege and destruction of Troy, and that for favors received he put in his contemporaries as actors in his great tragedy. But I never doubted that a King of Mycenæ, by name Agamemnon, his charioteer Eurymedon, a Princess Cassandra, and their followers had been treacherously murdered either at dinner by Ægisthus, as Homer (Odyssey iv., 530, and xi., 409, 411) says, or in the bath by Clytemnestra, as the later tragic poets (Æsch., Agamemnon, 1,438; Euripid., Orest., 25) pretend, and I firmly believed in the statement of Pausanias (ii., 147) that the murdered persons had been interred in the Acropolis, differing in this respect from W. M. Leake, 'Travels in the Morea,' (ii., page 365;) W. Mure, 'Journal of a Tour in Greece;' Edward Dodwell, 'Tour in Greece,' (ii., page 326;) Otfried Muller, Dorier; Ernest Curtius, 'Peloponnes, (ii., 411, 413;) W. Gell, 'Argolis;' Prokesch, 'Denkwurdigkeiten und Erinnerungen,' (ii., 276;) who all had misunderstood the statement of Pausanias, and thought that he meant the murdered persons had been buried in the lower town.

My first faith in the traditions made me undertake my late excavations in the Acropolis, and led to the discovery of the five tombs with their immense treasures. Although I found in these tombs, in a technical point of view, a very high civilization, yet, as in Ilium, I found there only hand-made pottery, and no trace of glass or of iron. Further, writing was known in Troy, for I found there a number of short Greek inscriptions in very ancient Cypriote characters (see my 'Troy and its Remains,' pp. 363-372;) whereas we have the certainty now that the alphabet was unknown in Mycenæ. Had it been known the Mycenæan goldsmiths, who were always endeavoring to invent some new ornamentation, would joyfully have availed themselves of the novelty to interweave the strange characters in their decoration. Besides, in that remote antiquity to which the Homeric rhapsodies and the tradition of the Mycenæan tombs refer, there was as yet no commercial intercourse, and bloody travels except on warlike or piratical expeditions. Thus there may have been a very high civilization at Mycenæ, while at the very same time the arts were only in their first dawn in Troy, and writing with Cypriote characters may have been in use in Troy more than 1,000 years before any alphabet was known in Greece. I have not the slightest objection to admit that the tradition which assigns the tombs in the Acropolis to Agamemnon and his companions, who, on their return from Ilium were treacherously murdered by Clytemnestra or her paramour Ægisthus, may be perfectly correct, and that I am not entitled to this so much the more as we have the certainty that, to say the least, all the bodies of each tomb had been burned simultaneously. The calcined pebbles below each of them, the marks of the fire to the right and left on the internal walls of the tomb, the undisturbed state of the ashes and the charred wood which I found on them, all give us the most unmistakable proofs in this respect. Owing to the enormous depth of these sepulchres, and the close proximity of the bodies to each other, it is quite impossible that three, or even five, funeral pites could have been dressed at different intervals of time to the same tomb. The identity of the mode of burial, the great similarity of the tombs in their close proximity, the impossibility of admitting that three or five royal personages of immeasurable wealth, who had died a natural death at long intervals of time, should have been huddled together in the same tomb; and, finally, the great resemblance of all the ornaments, which are of the same style of art and the same epoch—all these facts are so many proofs that all the 12 men and three women had been murdered simultaneously and burned at the same time. The veracity of the tradition seems further to be confirmed by the deep veneration which the Mycenæans, in later times, the inhabitants of the whole Argolis, have always shown for these due mausoleums. The funeral pyres were not yet extinguished when they were covered with a layer of clay and then with a layer of pebbles, on which the earth was thrown at once. To this circumstance are we chiefly indebted for the conservation of so large a quantity of wood and of comparatively good preservation of the bodies, for in no instance were the bones consumed by fire, and on several bodies, which were covered with golden masks and thick breast-plates, even much of the flesh had remained. The site of each tomb was marked by tumbstones, and when these had fallen in, covered by the ages and had disappeared, fresh tumbstones were erected on the new level, but precisely on the spot where the ancient memorials lay buried. Only on the large fourth sepulchre, with the five bodies, instead of new tombstones, a sacrificial altar of almost circular form was built.

As I explained in my last letter of the 11th of November, the first tomb had, according to all appearance, primitively been decorated with a large monument, from which came the three tombstones with the bas-reliefs, and the latter must have been extracted and erected on the new level. I at first thought that every one of the large slabs of the circular double parallel row was a tombstone and marked a grave; but this is not the case. There are no real tombs either between the two parallel rows or on either side of them, except on the north side, where we see above ground, and on a level with the double circle, 12 quadrangular recesses of irregular size, composed of large slabs and resembling sepulchres. It is by no means certain, however, that they have ever served as such. They were filled with household remains and bones of animals. At all events the great double circle of parallel slabs can only have been erected in honor of those who were buried in the five sepulchres, but evidently at a much later period, though undoubtedly long before the capture of Mycenæ by the Argives. I conclude this from the irregular and careless architecture of the Cyclopean wall which supports the double parallel row in the lower part of the Acropolis and from the number of slabs of monuments that are buried in the ruins. As a further proof I may mention that between the stones of this wall, as well as between the two double circular rows of slabs and in the tomb-shaped recesses, I find only fragments of the usual Mycenæan pottery, and no trace of that ancient hand-made pottery which we found in the tombs. I think it, therefore, highly probable that the erection of the circular double row of slabs coincides with the renewal of the tombstones on four tombs and the erection of the sacrificial altar on the fifth tomb, and that this renewal was occasioned by the immense enthusiasm which the Panhellenists, who went from Rome to house chanting the Homeric hymns, roused among the people for the heroes of the Iliad and the Odyssey. Very likely the whole space within the circular double row was converted into a garden, where the glorious acts of the king of kings, Agamemnon, and his companions were chanted on their sepulchres. At all events, while the whole Acropolis is covered with remnants of Cyclopean house walls, I found no trace whatever of any pre-historic building within the sacred precincts of the great circle. But, nevertheless, the accumulation of rubish continued, and in the course of time the new tombstones, as well as the double circular row of slabs, were buried and disappeared, while the site of the tombs remained always fresh in the memory of the inhabitants. When, in 468 B. C., Mycenæ was captured by the Argives, and the people were forced to emigrate, the city remained for more than 60 years deserted. Another city was built on its ruins, about 400 B. C., when all the tombstones, the sacrificial altar, and the circular double row of slabs had for ages been buried in the rubbish. Nevertheless, the precise site of each tomb was perfectly remembered by the inhabitants of the Argolid. After an existence of about 200 years, the new city was, for some cause or other, again abandoned. Its site remained deserted; but still the tradition remained so fresh, that nearly 400 years after the destruction of the new town, the exact place of each tomb was shown to Pausanias. Nay, the interest the inhabitants of the Peloponnesus felt in the sepulchres was still so great 16 or 18 centuries after the tragic event, that, as Pausanias states, the Lacedæmonians of Amyclæ disputed with Mycenæ the honor of possessing Cassandra's tomb, which they thought they possessed in their own city. At all events, Pausanias (ii., 19, 6) says that the Amyclæans had in their village the sanctuary and the statue of Alexandra, whom they identified with Cassandra.

The five tombs of Mycenæ, or at least three of them, contained such enormous treasures that they cannot but be considered as those of the royal family. But the period of the Kings of Mycenæ belongs to a very remote antiquity. Royalty ceased there at the Dorian invasion, the chronology of which has always been fixed at 1104 B. C. Thucydides says it was 80 years after the war of Troy, which was hitherto supposed to have ended in 1174 B. C. But, in agreement with all archæologists, I hold to the conclusion that, on the evidence of the monuments of Troy, the capture and destruction of that city, and consequently also the Dorian invasion, must have occurred at a much earlier date."

PLAYING CHESS WITH HUMAN MEN.

Most persons who have any acquaintance with the literature of chess have heard of the games said to have been played in the Middle Ages with living chessmen. According to a newsletter in the Pioneer Lord Lytton has recently revived this amusement in India. During his visit to Mooltan last month his Lordship, after receiving and replying to an address from the municipality of the city engaged, we are told, "in a novel game of chess with Col. Millett. The chess-board, if such a term may be allowed to a carpet of red and white calico, with checkers a yard square, having been spread in front of the hall, chessmen, men and boys, dressed in opposing red and white uniform appropriate to the various pieces, were marshaled in and took their places. Then, by word of command, each piece moved to the square indicated, and a very lively game ensued, ending in an easy victory for the Viceroy." An Emperor of Morocco who once indulged in a similar amusement is said to have added a terrible realism to the game by causing all the pieces taken during its progress to be beheaded.

THE MURDERED HOTEL CLERK.

PARTICULARS OF THE AFFRAY IN THE WILLARD HOUSE AT LOUISVILLE BETWEEN ITS PROPRIETOR AND BUSINESS MANAGER.

A telegram from Lonisville, 26th inst., to the Cincinnati Enquirer gives the following account of the shooting affray on the morning of that day between W. C. D. Whipps, proprietor of the Willard Hotel, one of the principal hotels in Louisville, and Joseph W. Stockton, his manager: "When Mr. Stockton came down to the office this morning he found Mr. Whipps there before him, and was reproved by him for coming to his duties at so late an hour. Other words passed, each growing excited. They were standing behind the desk of the hotel at the time, as was also Mr. Ingram, a clerk. Mr. Whipps claimed that it was Stockton's duty to give his personal attention to the 5 o'clock railroad breakfast. Mr. Stockton replied that the condition of his health would not permit him to get up so early. Passionate words followed, when Mr. Stockton withdrew for a moment. When he returned he accused Whipps of insulting him. The quarrel was renewed, and Stockton placed his hand in his bosom and drew a revolver. Ingram, the clerk, being between them, caught his arm and pushed him out into the hall, taking the pistol away from him. Stockton walked back toward the reading-room, and a minute or two later returned. Mr. Whipps, in the meantime, took a large pistol, carrying a half-ounce ball, and walked out into the hall. He walked with a crutch on one side and a large cane on the other, one of his legs being broken. As he hobbled out he carried the pistol by the side of his crutch, exposed fully to view. When he reached the foot of the stairway he confronted Mr. Stockton, and asked him why he drew a pistol on him. The reply was, because he had been insulted. Whipps called him a liar. Stockton struck him two blows in the face with his fist, causing him to recoil and drop his cane. As quickly as he recovered his footing Whipps raised his pistol and fired three times in rapid succession. After the first shot he stooped to pick up his cane to defend himself; and when the other two shots were fired he fell to the floor. One shot took effect on the left side of Stockton's neck, passing around the windpipe and lodging under the skin on the other side of the neck. The passage of the ball around the windpipe has inflamed it so much as to seriously impede breathing, and may result in death. Another ball entered the abdomen, and, like the other, has not been removed. The third shot missed him. Mr. Whipps has long been connected with the Willard, and besides has long held public stations of honor and profit. Mr. Stockton was for years with the old United States Hotel in this city, afterward with Mr. Whipps at the Willard, leaving which house he took charge of the St. Nicholas at Lexington, and had only quite recently returned to his old place in the Willard. The wounds received are supposed to be necessarily fatal."

GROWTH OF POPULATION IN ENGLAND.

In the current weekly mortality returns for London and the chief provincial towns, the Registar General alludes to the means adopted by him for estimating the populations of the various towns in order to obtain a basis for his calculations of the death rates. The estimates simply start on the assumption that the rates of increase seen on comparing the census returns for 1871 with those of 1861 are undisturbed, the following steps being merely questions in arithmetic in compound interest. Thus, in the case of London, the decennial rate of increase per cent. was 16.1 by the last census, and, accordingly, the population of the metropolis shows an increase from 3,254,260 in 1871 to 3,335,484 in 167.7 during to the middle of the year. In the same way the population of Brighton, which was 77,693 in 1861, and 90,011 in 1871, is now 102 264, taking the municipal boundaries in this and the following cases. Portsmouth in 1861 stood at 94 799, and at 113,569 in 1871, a rate of population of 4127,144. Hull has similarly has increased from 74,891 and 80,386 to 84,023; Bristol, from 154 093 and 182,552 to 202,950; Plymouth, from 62,599 and 68,758 to 729,111; Wolverhampton, from 60,860 and 68 291 to 73,389; Birmingham, from 296 076 and 343,787 to 377,436; Leicester, from 95,220 to 117,461; Nottingham, from 74,693 and 86,621 to 95,025; Liverpool, from 443,938 and 493,405 to 527,683; Manchester, from 338 722 and 351,189 to 3 9,213; Salford, from 102,449 and 124,801 to 141,184; Oldham, from 72,333 and 82,629 to 89,796; Bradford, from 106,218 and 145,830 to 179,315; Leeds, from 207,165 and 259 212 to 298 189; Sheffield, from 185,172 and 239 946 to 282,133; Hull, from 97,661 and 121,692 to 140,002; and Newcastle, from 109,108 in 1861, and 128,443 in 1871, to 142,231. In other words, the population of these towns in 1861 was 5,430,515; it is now 6,945,230—an increase of 1,514,715. We do not necessarily look for great excess of births over deaths, but also to a considerable extent to immigration. London alone has increased in the past 16 years by 729,495 souls. The next formidable rise is in Sheffield, where the increase is equal to 96,958; Leeds follows, with an addition of 91,024, Liverpool with 83,145, Birmingham with 81,360, and Bradford with 73,097. The 16 years' increase in Plymouth is 10,312; Brighton, 24,571; Portsmouth, 32,345; Norwich, 9,132; Bristol, 48,857; Wolverhampton, 12,529; Leicester, 49,405; Nottingham, 20,332; Manchester, 21,491; Salford, 38,735; Oldham, 17,463; Hull, 42,341; and Newcastle, 33,123.

VIEWS OF HON. ISRAEL WASHBURN, JR.

A letter from Hon. Israel Washburn, Jr., of Maine, is published, in which he says: "I dare not ask your space to show at large wherein I regard Mr. Edmunds' bill as unwise and unconstitutional. But my impression, upon considerable reflection, is that not only is the authority to count the votes, as the law now stands, with the President of the Senate, but also that this is a power which Congress can no more take away than it can take away the power of the States to elect United States Senators. Congress may regulate the exercise of the power in both cases, but can destroy it in neither. Again, I do not believe that the House of Representatives ought to have or does have any authority over the question except as a part of the law-making power. The power to elect the President has been lodged in a certain contingency in the House; but when this was done it was also provided, quite as clearly, I think, that in no manner whatever should the same body have the power to create the contingency, as it would have if by its negative it could exclude the count of a State. I have, therefore, little doubt that the power was placed most safely and wisely with the Vice President. It was necessary to place it somewhere, and where should it be placed if not in the hands of one who, from his disinterested position, his station, and presumed high character, might fairly be supposed to be on the whole the best and fittest man for the office? And to-day, after all our experience, where is to be found an officer who it may be presumed, one time with another, and in all the future, would be a safer depositary of this power than the Vice President of the United States? Will a Judge of the Supreme Court (no such known or but one at any rate who will be most acceptable to the smartest and dirtiest of the political thimble-riggers in the country,) be safer? I doubt it. In 1857, when the question was mooted, the decision of the President of the Senate, Mason, of Virginia—who must have been familiar with the views of the framers of the Constitution—to the effect that neither house could object to its count, was acquiesced in and confirmed by the action of both houses. With a general law, governing the proceedings before the Vice President, and in presence of both houses, and making needful rules, every subject of which subject is capable will be secured, Congress will be kept from usurping the rights of the States, and the provisions of the Constitution will be respected."

THE PENSYLVANIA COAL TRADE.

The Pottsville Miners' Journal gives the following statistics: "The quantity of coal shipped from the Schuylkill region for the week ending Jan. 20 was 64,420 tons, against 39,794 tons for the same week of last year; increase, 24,626 tons. For the year, 462,637 tons, against 327,792 tons for the corresponding period of last year; increase, 134 845 tons. The quantity sent from all the regions for the week was: Anthracite, 268,463 tons; bituminous, 40,501 tons; total, 308,964 tons, against 262,124 tons anthracite, and 50,163 tons bituminous—total, 312,287 tons—for the same week of last year; increase of anthracite, 6,339 tons; decrease of bituminous, 9,662 tons. The quantity sent from all the regions for the year was: Anthracite, 1,304,984 tons; bituminous, 142,947 tons; total, 1,447,931 tons, against 1,311,021 tons anthracite, and 168,390 tons bituminous—total, 1,479,411 tons—for the corresponding period of last year. Decrease of anthracite, 6,037 tons; decrease of bituminous, 25,443 tons; total decrease, 31,480 tons."

JUDGE CARPENTER'S DECISION.

A telegram from Washington, 26th inst., to the Baltimore Gazette, says: "Judge Carpenter, of the Circuit Court of Columbia, S. C., before whom Peter Smith's habeas corpus case was brought, involving the question of the Governorship of South Carolina, and who has been here some time preparing his decision, has concluded his labors and returned to South Carolina. He will deliver a decision to the effect that neither Gov. Chamberlain nor Gov. Hampton is the legal Governor of South Carolina, owing to the irregularities in the inauguration of Gov. Hampton, and irregularities in the election of Gov. Chamberlain, and that the latter is Governor de facto, and will hold over under the Constitution until his successor is installed."

AMUSEMENTS.

MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC.

GENERAL MENTION.

Mlle. Aimée appears in "La Jolie Parfumeuse" at the Eagle Theatre, this evening.

"Martha" will be sung at the Academy of Music, this evening, by Miss Kellogg and the English opera troupe.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Feininger will give the third of their series of concerts at Chickering Hall, on Wednesday evening.

A concert given in aid of the proposed hospital for the treatment of chronic diseases occurs at Steinway Hall to-night.

"Our Boarding House," by Mr. Leonard Grover, will be represented at the Park Theatre, for the first time in this City, this evening.

At the second concert given by the Liederkranz Society, this evening, a new and powerfully written "Bismarck Hymn," by Carl Rheinthaler, was sung. A violin performance, by Mr. Jacobsohn; a remarkably fine choral performance of the prayer from Méhul's "Joseph," and an excellent orchestral rendering of a Suite, by Raff, were the other numbers on the programme.

Mr. Thomas' fourth symphony concert takes place at Steinway Hall on Saturday evening, and on Thursday afternoon the usual public rehearsal may be attended. The programme is as follows: Suite No. 3, in D—Bach; "Pastoral" symphony—Beethoven; "Siegfried's Death" and "Finale," from "Götterdämmerung,"—Wagner. Mme. Pappenhoim is to be the vocalist.

A PSYCHOLOGICAL STUDY.

A Chicago physician has sent to the Chicago Times a brief essay on Miss Kellogg's performance of Senta, in "The Flying Dutchman," from a psychological standpoint. We append a few extracts from this not uninteresting article. The writer says:

"Miss Kellogg evidently starts out with the belief that Senta was mad, and in this she is right, for a more insane woman never occupied a mad-house. What caused this insanity? I reply unhesitatingly—religious exaltation. Her insanity is the same that in the seventeenth century raged all over Catholic Europe, but especially in France. It was found principally in convents and other religious institutions. It is narrated by historians that the female devotees of the Church often became so enamored of the pictures of Christ and the saints that they spent days and nights before them, and finally ended their lives by suicide, in order to meet the sooner their supernatural lovers.

In the case of Senta, the first impulse to insanity was doubtless the presence of the picture of Vanderdecken, which hung in her room. This picture probably represented the artistic idea of the mythical appearance of the sad, unhappy man whose story had been so often sung to her by her nurse. This phase of insanity was excellently represented by Miss Kellogg, when, in Act II., she sits in rapt reverie, looking fixedly upon the picture, heeding not the hum of the spinning-wheels, nor the song of the spinners. Her face could not at first be seen, but when, after being rudely aroused by the chorus around, it is into the face of Miss Kellogg, but that of a girl hopelessly insane. This peculiar expression, so well known to medical men, is one that once familiar with can never be forgotten. You can see no 'speculation' in her eyes. Their expression is far away. She is not of the world, but lives in a world of ideal fancies and unearthly dreams.

What appears to me most astonishing is the complete knowledge possessed by Miss Kellogg of the exact physical condition in which such cases of insanity place the victim. It will be noted that although Senta is young and beautiful, and must have been charming and graceful, yet no appearance of natural grace was at any time manifested. Her motions were all constrained, almost painful to look upon. The insane are rarely graceful; their gait, the methods they take to express their emotions, are nearly always stiff and unnatural. Her eyes had no look of tenderness in them; her mouth no smile of sweetness. Even in her meeting with her father and her lover, Eric, there was no semblance of love or affection. More than this, her meeting with the ideal of her ecstatic reveries—the sad man who possesses her soul—is not attended by the slightest demonstration of earthly passion. Nowhere you see her clasped in his arms it seems not as the embrace of lovers, but the meeting of two souls in the shadowy land.

It must be remembered that no version of this legend represented the ship, the crew, or even the master of the ship with blood-red sails and black mast. It was a spectral phantom. There was nothing tangible or real about them. They were possessed of a charmed existence. They appeared to mortal eyes, and disappeared in a strange, unearthly manner. Senta then loved no being of flesh and blood. Her lover was as ghostly a myth as the Flying Dutchman. Here was not love—it was purely a self sacrifice; as much so as that of the Christian martyrs who died at the stake. In fact, in her ecstatic condition, Senta would have burned slowly at the stake without feeling for a moment a pang of pain. Her physical system was so separated from the mental by her peculiar morbid condition that all connection physical sensations were abolished. At no time did the mortal womanly attributes show themselves, except one fraction of a moment—when Eric was singing:

'Wilt thou no longer that fair day remember
When to thy side thou call'st me in the vale?'

But the gleam of sanity disappeared as quickly as it came, hastened, doubtless, by the sudden appearance of the phantom being which possessed her brain. Modern psychologists would class this species of insanity as a 'monomania,' complicated with a rare form of hysteria and ecstacy—not a rare combination in women isolated as Senta was, and placed under a mixed superstitious and religious influence.

In closing this imperfect (because too brief) analysis or the mental state of the heroine of this opera, I cannot refrain from expressing the opinion that Miss Kellogg's characterization of Senta will confer upon her more lasting popularity, especially among students of psychology, than any other she has undertaken."

FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

M. Duterire, a well-known French dramatic author, is dead.

M'lle Albani is singing with great success at the Paris Italiens.

Mme. Fursch-Madier has made a successful appearance in Brussels, in "Alia."

At the Palais Royal Théâtre, a comedy in

COMMERCIAL AFFAIRS.

NEW-YORK, Saturday, Jan. 27, 1877.

The receipts of the principal kinds of Produce since our last have been as follows:

Ashes, pks.	1	Spirits Turp., bbls.	276
Beeswax, pks.	7	Tar, bbls.	330
Bones, tons	257	Resin, bbls.	355
Cotton, bales	5,379	Oil-cake, pks.	190
U. S. Cake, bags	314	Pork, pks.	373
Copper, bbls.	25	Beef, pks.	35
Dried Fruit, pks.	25	Cut-meats, pks.	6,959
Eggs, bbls.	356	Grease, pks.	105
Flour, bbls.	8,349	Lard, pks.	1,384
Wheat, bushels	6,000	Lard, kegs	245
Corn, bushels	20,000	Stearine, pks.	41
Oats, bushels	23,933	Butter, pks.	3,245
Rye, bushels	1,456	Cheese, pks.	659
Malt, bushels	2,100	Tallow, pks.	437
Barley, bushels	2,000	Tallow-oil, bbls.	50
Grass-seed, bags	1,892	Dressed Hogs, No.	760
Corn-meal, bbls.	520	Pea-nuts bags	185
Pkwy Flour, pks.	75	Rice, tcs. pks.	70
Hemp, bales	5	Starch, bxs.	1,280
Hops, bales	229	Sponge, bales	5
Hides, No.	30	Teas, half-chests	285
Hides, bales	269	Tobacco, hhds	44
Leather, sides	9,603	Tobacco, pcs.	204
Lead, pigs	2,184	Whisky, bbls.	1,096
Molasses, (N.O.) bbls	22	Wool, bales	195

COFFEE—Rio declined ¼c. ₱ lb., with sales reported of 8,141 bags by the Hipparchus, part at 19¾c., gold. Other kinds dull and irregular.

COTTON—Has been quiet for early delivery at former quotations....Ordinary quoted here to-day at 11⅝c.@11¾c.; Low Middling 12 13-16c.@12 15-16c.; Middling, 13 3-16c.@13 5-16c. Sales were officially reported, for prompt delivery, of 896 bales, (of which 800 bales were on last evening,) all to spinners.....And for forward delivery a moderate business has been reported as follows:—Sales have been reported since our last of 12,900 bales, of which 1,000 bales were on last evening, and 21,900 bales to-day, with 1,500 bales on the call, on the basis of Middling, with January options, closing at 11 5-32c.@13 3-16c.; February, 13 5-16c.@13 7-32c.; March, 13 13-32c.@13 7-16c.; April, 13⅝c.; May, 13 29-32c.@13 13-16c.; June, 13 15-16c.; July, 14 1-32c.@14 1-16c.; August, 14 3-32c.@14⅜c.; September, 14 9-32c.@14 5-16c.; October, 13 7-16c.@13 15-32c.; November, 13 7-32c.@13 9-32c.; December, 13 3-16c.@13¼c. ₱ lb., showing a decline of ⅛c @3-16c. ₱ lb., closing weak....The receipts at the ports to-day were 5,379 bales, and at the shipping ports 25,187 bales, against 17,101 bales same day last week. The week's exports hence have been 9,207 bales, including 8,912 bales to Liverpool, 193 bales to the Continent, and 102 bales to Mexico. The exports from all the ports since Sept. 1, 1876, have been 1,731,792 bales, of which 1,152,922 bales were sent to the British ports, and 578,870 bales to the Continent.

Closing Prices of Cotton in New-York.

	Uplands.	Alabama.	N. O.	Texas.
Ordinary	11⅝	11⅝	11¾	11¾
Strict Ordinary	12	12	12⅛	12⅛
Good Ordinary	12⅜	12⅜	12½	12½
Strict Good Ord.	12⅝	12⅝	12¾	12¾
Low Middling	13 13-16	13 13-16	12 15-16	12 15-16
Strict Low Mid.	13 1-16	13 1-16	13 1-16	13 1-16
Middling	13 5-16	13 5-16	13 7-16	13 7-16
Good Middling	13 9-16	13 9-16	13 11-16	13 11-16
Strict Good Mid.	13 13-16	13 13-16	13 15-16	13 15-16
Middling Fair	14 1-16	14 1-16	14 3-16	14 3-16
Fair	14 15-16	14 15-16	15 1-16	15 1-16

Stained.

Good Ordinary	11⅛	Low Middling	12 3-16
Strict Good Ord.	11⅞	Middling	12 11-16

FLOUR AND MEAL—State and Western Flour was depressed and irregular as to values, on a very light trade for home use and shipment, the actual dealings indicating a partial decline of 10c.@15c. ₱ bbl., with more liberal offerings, partly of supplies purchased some time since by speculative operators....Sales have been reported since our last of 7,400 bbls. of all grades, including unsound Flour at $3 50@$7; Sour to Fancy at $4 50@$6 50; very poor to choice No. 2 at $4 50@$5 25, (of which odd lots of very poor, from dock, at $4 50;) poor to choice Superfine Western, $5 70@$6, mainly at $5 85@$6; (of which 600 bbls. fair State, at $6;) fair to good Extra State, $6@$6 20; good to choice do. at $6 20@$6 50; City Mills Extra, shipping grades, $6 @$7 20, mainly at from $6 90 @$7 25 for Trade and Family brands, (of which 600 bbls. sold and quoted at $8 25@$8 50 for choice to fancy for the South American trade, and $6@$6 05 for brands suited to the English trade, (400 bbls. sold at mill at $6;) Inferior to good Shipping Extra Western, $6@ $6 20; good to very choice do., $6 20@$6 90; and other grades at proportionately modified rates....Included in the sales have been 2,350 bbls. shipping Extra at mill, (1,150 bbls. Ohio; 1,200 bbls. Ohio; Minnesota clear and straight Extras;) (of which 700 bbls. at $7 20;) 475 bbls. do. Patent do., 425 bbls. Winter Wheat Extras, (for shipment, these mostly at $6 65@$7 75;) 425 bbls. Superfine, and 425 bbls. No. 2 at the quoted rates.... Southern Flour inactive at drooping rates....Sales, 500 bbls., mainly Extras, within the range of $7@ $8 50....Of Rye Flour, 100 bbls. sold, in lots, chiefly at $4 75@$5 for fair to very good Superfine Rye, and up to $5 10@$5 20 for choice to very choice; $4 65@ $5 for Pennsylvania; market unchanged....Of Cornmeal, 1,425 bbls. sold, including 1,300 bbls. Yellow Western at $3, and 125 bbls. Brandywine, in lots, at $3 60; market more active. Other sales to the amount of 4,000 to 5,000 bbls., to arrive, rumored, on private terms.....Corn-meal, in bags, in fair demand within the range of $1 07½@$1 45, as to excellence, ₱ 100 lb....Of the sales were 2,100 bbls. coarse, mostly on the basis of $1 14@$1 15 for City Mills; $1 07 for Baltimore, (700 bags, on rack sold at this rate,) and $1 45 for bolted Yellow from Baltimore....Buckwheat Flour continued very scarce; quoted up to $4 50@$5 for ordinary to fancy state and Pennsylvania ₱ 100 lb. Supplies yet wanted. A small lot of inferior State sold at $4 25.

GRAIN—Wheat dull and almost wholly nominal as to values, with very little demand noted from any source. Offerings of Spring rather more urgent, but not at prices satisfactory to buyers. Sales were confined to 1,000 bush. 1,200 bushels extra choice White Michigan, in store, at $1 65, and 800 bushels ungraded Spring at $1 35, both to a Brooklyn miller. No better bid was reported for any important amount of No. 2 Chicago Spring, of prime quality, than $1 47, with holders asking up to $1 43@$1 45, and most, if not all, of this grade here represented as under speculative control. ....Corn was quoted a fraction lower in price, on a more liberal offering, leader to rather more activity, partly on export account. ....Sales have been reported since our last of 69,000 bushels, including New-York steamer Mixed at 60c.@ 60¾c., closing at 60¾c.; for new and 59¾c., for old; New-York steamer Yellow at 61c.; New-York No. 2 grade at 59c.@60c., nearly all at 60c.; new crop Mixed Western car lots at 59c.@60c.; ungraded sailing-vessel Mixed Western, old crop, ordinary to choice, (nominal,) within the range of 58c.@62¾c.; and No. 2 Chicago, in store and afloat, (nominal,) at 60c.@62c. as asking rates, (with 16,000 bushels rumored sold on private terms;) damaged old Mixed Western, in store, 1,500 bushels at 55c. And for forward delivery 10,000 bushels Mixed Western, reported on private terms.....Rye about as last quoted; sales about 250 bushels Pennsylvania at 86c., and 1,300 bushels Western at 84c.@84½c....Malt, Peas, and Buckwheat as last quoted....Of Barley, sales were reported of 6,700 bushels feeding stock at 54c.; market dull and weak. ....Oats have been moderately dealt in, prime lots attracting most attention, other kinds depressed and lower....Sales reported of 24,000 bushels, including White Western at 42c.@42½c., as to quality, of which 750 bushels fair at 42½c. from track; White State fair ordinary to prime at 42½c.@43c.; No. 2 at 40c.@ 41c.; Mixed State at 42c.@42½c. for fair ordinary to very good; Mixed Western at 40c.@41c., as to quality, the latter for choice New-York. Of these, 750 bushels, at 55c.; New-York No. 1 White, at 53½c.@54c.; New-York Extra, 750 bushels, at 54½c; New-York No. 2 at 46c.@46½c., of which 3,000 bushels at 46½c.; New-York No. 3 at 45½c.; New-York Mixed at 40c.@ 41c.; Mixed State at 42c.@42½c. for fair to choice....A moderate call has been noted for most kinds of Feed, with prices quoted steady. The offerings of 40 and 60-lb. stock are somewhat freer; of 100-lb. yet comparatively limited, and of Sharps and Rye Feed very light....We quote: 40-lb. at $19@$20; 60-lb. at $19 50@$20 50; 100-lb. at $21@$22½, the latter for choice; Rye Feed at $22@$23; Sharps at $24@$26. Of the sales were 2,400 bags 40-lb. stock, chiefly from mill, at $19.... Bale Hay has been held with firmness, in view of the comparatively meagre supplies available, but the demand has not been quite so urgent....We quote shipping qualities within the range, 70c.@80c., and retailing qualities at 80c.@$1 10, the extreme figures for strictly choice, ₱ 100 lb.: Clover, 70c.@90c.; Salt Hay, 50c.@60c.....Straw has been in pretty fair request, including Rye straw within the range of 65c.@ 85c.; Oat, 55c.@65c. ₱ 100 lb.....Clover-seed has been fairly active, and held quite firmly, with prime Western quoted at 12½c.; choice do., 12¾c.; good to choice State at 12½c.@13c.; good to choice State at 13c.@13½c.; fair to prime Western, part to arrive, at 13c., and 300 bags about prime to choice State at 13¾c.@13¾c. Choice Canada, in bond, in more demand at 13¾c.; Prime to choice Timothy wanted and quoted at $1 70@$1 75; fancy nominal, quoted at $2 25@$2 50 ₱ bush. Flaxseed dull and quoted at $2 25@$2 50 for cooker to fancy for the South American trade, and $6@$6 05 for brands suited to the English trade, (400 bbls. sold at mill at $6;) Linseed to good Shipping Extra, $5@ $5 20; good to very choice do., $6 20@$6 90; and other grades at proportionately modified rates....Included in the sales have been 2,350 bbls. shipping Extra at mill, (1,150 bbls. Ohio; 1,200 bbls. Ohio; Minnesota clear and straight Extras;) (of which 700 bbls. at $7 20;) 475 bbls. do. Patent do., 425 bbls. Winter Wheat Extras, (for shipment, these mostly at $6 65@$7 75;) 425 bbls. Superfine, and 425 bbls. No. 2 at the quoted rates....

Southern Flour inactive at drooping rates....Sales, 500 bbls., mainly Extras, within the range of $7@ $8 50....Of Rye Flour, 100 bbls. sold, in lots, chiefly at $4 75@$5 for fair to very good Superfine Rye, and up to $5 10@$5 20 for choice to very choice; $4 65@ $5 for Pennsylvania; market unchanged....Of Cornmeal, 1,425 bbls. sold, including 1,300 bbls. Yellow Western at $3, and 125 bbls. Brandywine, in lots, at $3 60; market more active. Other sales to the amount of 4,000 to 5,000 bbls., to arrive, rumored, on private terms.....Corn-meal, in bags, in fair demand within the range of $1 07½@$1 45, as to excellence, ₱ 100 lb.....Of the sales were 2,100 bbls. coarse, mostly on the basis of $1 14@$1 15 for City Mills; $1 07 for Baltimore, (700 bags, on rack sold at this rate,) and $1 45 for bolted Yellow from Baltimore....Buckwheat Flour continued very scarce; quoted up to $4 50@$5 for ordinary to fancy state and Pennsylvania ₱ 100 lb. Supplies yet wanted. A small lot of inferior State sold at $4 25.

GRAIN—Wheat dull and almost wholly nominal as to values, with very little demand noted from any source. Offerings of Spring rather more urgent, but not at prices satisfactory to buyers. Sales were confined to 1,000 bush. 1,200 bushels extra choice White Michigan, in store, at $1 65, and 800 bushels ungraded Spring at $1 35, both to a Brooklyn miller. No better bid was reported for any important amount of No. 2 Chicago Spring, of prime quality, than $1 47, with holders asking up to $1 43@$1 45, and most, if not all, of this grade here represented as under speculative control. ....Corn was quoted a fraction lower in price, on a more liberal offering, leader to rather more activity, partly on export account. ....Sales have been reported since our last of 69,000 bushels, including New-York steamer Mixed at 60c.@ 60¾c., closing at 60¾c.; for new and 59¾c., for old; New-York steamer Yellow at 61c.; New-York No. 2 grade at 59c.@60c., nearly all at 60c.; new crop Mixed Western car lots at 59c.@60c.; ungraded sailing-vessel Mixed Western, old crop, ordinary to choice, (nominal,) within the range of 58c.@62¾c.; and No. 2 Chicago, in store and afloat, (nominal,) at 60c.@62c. as asking rates, (with 16,000 bushels rumored sold on private terms;) damaged old Mixed Western, in store, 1,500 bushels at 55c. And for forward delivery 10,000 bushels Mixed Western, reported on private terms.....Rye about as last quoted; sales about 250 bushels Pennsylvania at 86c., and 1,300 bushels Western at 84c.@84½c....Malt, Peas, and Buckwheat as last quoted....Of Barley, sales were reported of 6,700 bushels feeding stock at 54c.; market dull and weak. ....Oats have been moderately dealt in, prime lots attracting most attention, other kinds depressed and lower....Sales reported of 24,000 bushels, including White Western at 42c.@42½c., as to quality, of which 750 bushels fair at 42½c. from track; White State fair ordinary to prime at 42½c.@43c.; No. 2 at 40c.@ 41c.; Mixed State at 42c.@42½c. for fair ordinary to very good; Mixed Western at 40c.@41c., as to quality, the latter for choice New-York. Of these, 750 bushels, at 55c.; New-York No. 1 White, at 53½c.@54c.; New-York Extra, 750 bushels, at 54½c; New-York No. 2 at 46c.@46½c., of which 3,000 bushels at 46½c.; New-York No. 3 at 45½c.; New-York Mixed at 40c.@ 41c.; Mixed State at 42c.@42½c. for fair to choice....A moderate call has been noted for most kinds of Feed, with prices quoted steady. The offerings of 40 and 60-lb. stock are somewhat freer; of 100-lb. yet comparatively limited, and of Sharps and Rye Feed very light....We quote: 40-lb. at $19@$20; 60-lb. at $19 50@$20 50; 100-lb. at $21@$22½, the latter for choice; Rye Feed at $22@$23; Sharps at $24@$26. Of the sales were 2,400 bags 40-lb. stock, chiefly from mill, at $19.... Bale Hay has been held with firmness, in view of the comparatively meagre supplies available, but the demand has not been quite so urgent....We quote shipping qualities within the range, 70c.@80c., and retailing qualities at 80c.@$1 10, the extreme figures for strictly choice, ₱ 100 lb.: Clover, 70c.@90c.; Salt Hay, 50c.@60c.....Straw has been in pretty fair request, including Rye straw within the range of 65c.@ 85c.; Oat, 55c.@65c. ₱ 100 lb.....Clover-seed has been fairly active, and held quite firmly, with prime Western quoted at 12½c.; choice do., 12¾c.; good to choice State at 12½c.@13c.; good to choice State at 13c.@13½c.; fair to prime Western, part to arrive, at 13c., and 300 bags about prime to choice State at 13¾c.@13¾c. Choice Canada, in bond, in more demand at 13¾c.; Prime to choice Timothy wanted and quoted at $1 70@$1 75; fancy nominal, quoted at $2 25@$2 50 ₱ bush. Flaxseed dull and quoted at $2 25@$2 50 for cooker to fancy for the South American trade, and $6@$6 05 for brands suited to the English trade, (400 bbls. sold at mill at $6;) Linseed to good Shipping Extra, $5@ $5 20; good to very choice do., $6 20@$6 90; and other grades at proportionately modified rates....Included in the sales have been 2,350 bbls. shipping Extra at mill, (1,150 bbls. Ohio; 1,200 bbls. Ohio; Minnesota clear and straight Extras;) (of which 700 bbls. at $7 20;) 475 bbls. do. Patent do., 425 bbls. Winter Wheat Extras, (for shipment, these mostly at $6 65@$7 75;) 425 bbls. Superfine, and 425 bbls. No. 2 at the quoted rates....

Southern Flour inactive at drooping rates....Sales, 500 bbls., mainly Extras, within the range of $7@ $8 50....Of Rye Flour, 100 bbls. sold, in lots, chiefly at $4 75@$5 for fair to very good Superfine Rye, and up to $5 10@$5 20 for choice to very choice; $4 65@ $5 for Pennsylvania; market unchanged....Of Cornmeal, 1,425 bbls. sold, including 1,300 bbls. Yellow Western at $3, and 125 bbls. Brandywine, in lots, at $3 60; market more active. Other sales to the amount of 4,000 to 5,000 bbls., to arrive, rumored, on private terms.....Corn-meal, in bags, in fair demand within the range of $1 07½@$1 45, as to excellence, ₱ 100 lb.....Of the sales were 2,100 bbls. coarse, mostly on the basis of $1 14@$1 15 for City Mills; $1 07 for Baltimore, (700 bags, on rack sold at this rate,) and $1 45 for bolted Yellow from Baltimore....Buckwheat Flour continued very scarce; quoted up to $4 50@$5 for ordinary to fancy state and Pennsylvania ₱ 100 lb. Supplies yet wanted. A small lot of inferior State sold at $4 25.

GRAIN—Wheat dull and almost wholly nominal as to values, with very little demand noted from any source. Offerings of Spring rather more urgent, but not at prices satisfactory to buyers. Sales were confined to 1,000 bush. 1,200 bushels extra choice White Michigan, in store, at $1 65, and 800 bushels ungraded Spring at $1 35, both to a Brooklyn miller. No better bid was reported for any important amount of No. 2 Chicago Spring, of prime quality, than $1 47, with holders asking up to $1 43@$1 45, and most, if not all, of this grade here represented as under speculative control. ....Corn was quoted a fraction lower in price, on a more liberal offering, leader to rather more activity, partly on export account. ....Sales have been reported since our last of 69,000 bushels, including New-York steamer Mixed at 60c.@ 60¾c., closing at 60¾c.; for new and 59¾c., for old; New-York steamer Yellow at 61c.; New-York No. 2 grade at 59c.@60c., nearly all at 60c.; new crop Mixed Western car lots at 59c.@60c.; ungraded sailing-vessel Mixed Western, old crop, ordinary to choice, (nominal,) within the range of 58c.@62¾c.; and No. 2 Chicago, in store and afloat, (nominal,) at 60c.@62c. as asking rates, (with 16,000 bushels rumored sold on private terms;) damaged old Mixed Western, in store, 1,500 bushels at 55c. And for forward delivery 10,000 bushels Mixed Western, reported on private terms.....Rye about as last quoted; sales about 250 bushels Pennsylvania at 86c., and 1,300 bushels Western at 84c.@84½c....Malt, Peas, and Buckwheat as last quoted....Of Barley, sales were reported of 6,700 bushels feeding stock at 54c.; market dull and weak. ....Oats have been moderately dealt in, prime lots attracting most attention, other kinds depressed and lower....Sales reported of 24,000 bushels, including White Western at 42c.@42½c., as to quality, of which 750 bushels fair at 42½c. from track; White State fair ordinary to prime at 42½c.@43c.; No. 2 at 40c.@ 41c.; Mixed State at 42c.@42½c. for fair ordinary to very good; Mixed Western at 40c.@41c., as to quality, the latter for choice New-York. Of these, 750 bushels, at 55c.; New-York No. 1 White, at 53½c.@54c.; New-York Extra, 750 bushels, at 54½c; New-York No. 2 at 46c.@46½c., of which 3,000 bushels at 46½c.; New-York No. 3 at 45½c.; New-York Mixed at 40c.@ 41c.; Mixed State at 42c.@42½c. for fair to choice....A moderate call has been noted for most kinds of Feed, with prices quoted steady. The offerings of 40 and 60-lb. stock are somewhat freer; of 100-lb. yet comparatively limited, and of Sharps and Rye Feed very light....We quote: 40-lb. at $19@$20; 60-lb. at $19 50@$20 50; 100-lb. at $21@$22½, the latter for choice; Rye Feed at $22@$23; Sharps at $24@$26. Of the sales were 2,400 bags 40-lb. stock, chiefly from mill, at $19.... Bale Hay has been held with firmness, in view of the comparatively meagre supplies available, but the demand has not been quite so urgent....We quote shipping qualities within the range, 70c.@80c., and retailing qualities at 80c.@$1 10, the extreme figures for strictly choice, ₱ 100 lb.: Clover, 70c.@90c.; Salt Hay, 50c.@60c.....Straw has been in pretty fair request, including Rye straw within the range of 65c.@ 85c.; Oat, 55c.@65c. ₱ 100 lb.....Clover-seed has been fairly active, and held quite firmly, with prime Western quoted at 12½c.; choice do., 12¾c.; good to choice State at 12½c.@13c.; good to choice State at 13c.@13½c.; fair to prime Western, part to arrive, at 13c., and 300 bags about prime to choice State at 13¾c.@13¾c. Choice Canada, in bond, in more demand at 13¾c.; Prime to choice Timothy wanted and quoted at $1 70@$1 75; fancy nominal, quoted at $2 25@$2 50 ₱ bush. Flaxseed dull and quoted at $2 25@$2 50 for cooker to fancy for the South American trade, and $6@$6 05 for brands suited to the English trade, (400 bbls. sold at mill at $6;) Linseed to good Shipping Extra, $5@ $5 20; good to very choice do., $6 20@$6 90; and other grades at proportionately modified rates....Included

SHIPPING.

WHITE STAR LINE.
FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL, CARRYING UNITED STATES Mails.

The steamers of this line have the Lane Route recommended by Lieut. Maury, U. S. N., going south of the Banks on the passage to Queenstown at all the year round.

CELTIC.....SATURDAY, Feb. 3, 8:30 A. M.
ADRIATIC.....SATURDAY, Feb. 10, at 3 P. M.
BRITANNIC.....SATURDAY, Feb. 24, 2 P. M.
CELTIC.....SATURDAY, March 10, at 2 P. M.

From White Star Dock, Pier No. 52 North River.

These steamers are uniform in size and unsurpassed in appointments. The saloon, staterooms, smoking and bath rooms are amidships, where the noise and motion are least felt, affording a degree of comfort hitherto unattainable at sea.

Rates—Saloon $80 and $100, gold; return tickets on favorable terms. Steerage, $30.

For inspection of plans and other information apply at the Company's offices, No. 37 Broadway, New-York.
S. J. SORTIS, Agent.

CUNARD LINE B. & N. A. R. M. S. P. CO.

With the view of diminishing the chances of collision the steamers of this line take a specified course for all seasons of the year.

On the outward passage from Queenstown to New-York or Boston, crossing meridian of 50 at 43 latitude, something to the north of 43.

On the homeward passage, crossing the meridian of 50 at 42, or nothing to the north of 42.

FROM NEW-YORK FOR LIVERPOOL, via Queenstown.
ABYSSINIA...Wed., Jan. 31 PARTHIA...Wed., Feb. 14
ALGERIA...Wed., Feb. 7 CHINA...Wed., Feb. 21

Steamers marked * do not carry steerage passengers.

Cabin passage, $80, $100, and $130, gold, according to accommodation. Return tickets on favorable terms.

Steerage tickets to and from all parts of Europe at very low rates. Freight and passage offices, No. 4 Bowling Green.
CHAS. G. FRANCKLYN, Agent.

LIVERPOOL AND GREAT WESTERN STEAM COMPANY. (LIMITED)
LIVERPOOL (via Queenstown,)
CARRYING THE UNITED STATES MAILS.

TUESDAY.

Leaving Pier No. 46 North River as follows:

WISCONSIN.....Jan. 30, at 3 P. M.
WYOMING.....Feb. 6, at noon
DAKOTA.....Feb. 13, at 3 P. M.
NEVADA.....Feb. 20, at 10 A. M.
IDAHO.....Feb. 27, at 3 P. M.
MONTANA.....March 6, at 10 A. M.

RATES OF PASSENGERS REDUCED.

Steerage, $26; intermediate, $40; cabin, $85 to $80, according to state-room. Offices, No. 29 Broadway.
WILLIAMS & GUION.

ATLAS MAIL LINE.

SEMI-MONTHLY SERVICE TO JAMAICA, HAYTI, COLOMBIA, and ASPINWALL, and to PANAMA and SOUTH PACIFIC PORTS (via Aspinwall.) First-class full-powered iron screw steamers, from Pier No. 51 North River:

For KINGSTON (Jam.) and HAYTI.
ATLAS.....Feb. 8
For HAYTI, COLOMBIA, ISTHMUS OF PANAMA, and SOUTH PACIFIC PORTS (via Aspinwall.)
ANDES.....Feb. 14
ALPS.....Feb. 28

Superior first-class passenger accommodation.
PIM, FORWOOD & CO., agents.
No. 56 Wall st.

GREAT SOUTHERN FREIGHT AND PASSENGER LINE.

SAILING FROM PIER NO. 29 NORTH RIVER.
WEDNESDAYS and SATURDAYS at 3 P. M.

FOR CHARLESTON, S. C., FLORIDA, THE SOUTH, AND SOUTH-WEST.

GEO. W. CLYDE.....WEDNESDAY.....Jan. 31
CHAMPION.....SATURDAY.....Feb. 3

SUPERIOR PASSENGER ACCOMMODATIONS.

Insurance to destination one-half of one per cent.
Goods forwarded free of commissions.
Passenger lists of cargo sloo.
Stand bills of lading issued and signed at the office of
JAMES W. QUINTARD & CO., Agents,
No. 177 West-st., corner Warren.
Or W. P. CLYDE & CO., No. 6 Bowling Green.
Or BENTLEY O. HASELL, General Agent for the Southern Freight Line, 317 Broadway.

STATE LINE.

NEW-YORK TO GLASGOW, LIVERPOOL, DUBLIN, BELFAST, AND LONDONDERRY.

These first-class full-powered steamers will sail from Pier No. 42 North River, foot of Canal st.

STATE OF INDIANA.....Thursday, Feb. 1
STATE OF PENNSYLVANIA.....Thursday, Feb. 8
STATE OF VIRGINIA.....Thursday, Feb. 22
STATE OF NEBRASKA.....Thursday, March 1

First cabin, $60, $65, and $70, according to accommodations; return tickets, $110, $125. Second cabin, $45; return tickets, $80. Steerage at lowest rates. Apply to
AUSTIN BALDWIN & CO., Agents,
No. 72 Broadway, New-York.

STEERAGE tickets at No. 45 Broadway, and at the company's pier, foot of Daniels., North River.

NORTH GERMAN LLOYD.
STEAM-SHIP LINE BETWEEN NEW-YORK, SOUTHAMPTON AND BREMEN.

Company's Pier, foot of 20th st., Hoboken.
WESER.....Sat., Feb. 3 | ODER.....Sat., Feb. 17
RHEIN.....Sat., Feb. 10 | HERMANN.....Sat., Feb. 24

RATES OF PASSAGE FROM NEW-YORK TO SOUTHAMPTON, HAVRE OR BREMEN:

First cabin.....$100 gold
Second cabin.....60 gold
Steerage.....30 currency

Return tickets at reduced rates. Prepaid steerage certificates, $32 currency. For freight or passage apply to OELRICHS & CO., No. 2 Bowling Green.

INMAN LINE.—MAIL STEAMERS.
FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.

CITY OF CHESTER, Saturday, Feb. 17, at 7:30 A. M.
CITY OF RICHMOND, Saturday, March 3, at 8 A. M.
CITY OF BRISTOL, Saturday, March 17, 8:30 A. M.

From Pier 45 North River.

CABIN, $80 and $100, Gold. Return tickets on favorable terms. STEERAGE, $24 Currency. Drafts at lowest rates.

Saloons, State-rooms, Smoking, and Bath-rooms amidships.
JOHN G. DALE, Agent,
Nos. 15 and 33 Broadway, N. Y.

ONLY DIRECT LINE TO FRANCE.
THE GENERAL TRANSATLANTIC COMPANY'S MAIL STEAMERS BETWEEN NEW-YORK AND HAVRE,
Calling at PLYMOUTH (G. B.) for the landing of Passengers.

Will sail from Pier No. 42 North River, foot of Morton st., every alternate Saturday, beginning with:

LABRADOR, Sanglier.....Saturday, Feb. 10, 3 P. M.

For particulars address
LOUIS DE SEBIAN, Agent, No. 55 Broadway.

NATIONAL LINE—Piers 44 and 51 North River.
FOR LONDON.
HOLLAND.....THURSDAY, Feb. 1, 8 A. M.
FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.
ERIN.....Feb. 3, at 9 A. M. | Helvetia...Feb. 10, 2 P. M.

Cabin, first and second passage, and drafts from £1 upward, issued at very low rates. Company's offices No. 69 Broadway. F. W. J. HURST, Manager.

FOR SAVANNAH GA.,
THE FLORIDA PORTS,
AND THE SOUTH AND SOUTH-WEST.

GREAT SOUTHERN FREIGHT AND PASSENGER LINE, CENTRAL RAILROAD OF GEORGIA, AND ATLANTIC AND GULF RAILROAD.

WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY.

B. LIVINGSTON, Capt. MALLORY, WEDNESDAY, Jan. 31, Pier No. 43 North River. 3 P. M. GEO. YONGE, Agent, No. 409 Broadway.

SAN SALVADOR, Capt. NICKERSON, SATURDAY, Feb. 3, Pier 43 North River, 3 P. M. GEO. YONGE, Agt., 409 Broadway.

GENERAL BARNES, Capt. CHEESMAN, WEDNESDAY, Feb. 7. Pier 16 East River, 3 P. M. MURRAY, FERRIS & CO., Agts., 62 South st.

SAN JACINTO, Capt. HAZARD, SATURDAY, Feb. 10, Pier 43 North River, 3 P. M. GEO. YONGE, Agt., 409 Broadway.

Insurance ONE-HALF PER CENT. Superior accommodations for passengers. Through rates and bills of lading in connection with Central R. R. of Georgia, Atlantic and Gulf Railroad, and Florida steamers City Point and Enterprise. Passengers for Fernandina, B. SCUYLER, which has been placed on the inside route from Savannah to Florida, and offers unsurpassed accommodations.

A. G. OWENS, GEORGE YONGE,
Agent A. & G. R. R. Agent C. R. R. of Ga.,
No. 315 Broadway. No. 409 Broadway.

FLORIDA.

Caution to travelers! Great reduction in fare via the inland route from Savannah to all Florida ports. Only $2 to Jacksonville. Meals and state-rooms extra. The elegant steamer J. S. SCHUYLER makes close connection with all Savannah steamers, thus forming the smoothest and most agreeable route as well as the lowest in fare. Accommodations for passengers unsurpassed. Travelers are cautioned against purchasing through tickets via any other route.

PACIFIC MAIL AND PANAMA TRANSIT
STEAM-SHIP LINES.

FOR CALIFORNIA, JAPAN, CHINA, AUSTRALIA, NEW-ZEALAND, BRITISH COLUMBIA, OREGON, &c.

Sailing from Pier No. 42 North River,
NEAR CANAL-ST., via ISTHMUS OF PANAMA.

Steam-ship ACAPULCO.....Wednesday, Jan. 31
connecting for Central America and South Pacific ports.

From SAN FRANCISCO to JAPAN and CHINA.
Steam-ship ALASKA.....Thursday, Feb. 1
From San Francisco to Sandwich Islands, Australia, and New-Zealand.
Steam-ship ZEALANDIA.....Wednesday, Jan. 31

For freight or passage apply to
WM. P. CLYDE & CO., or H. J. BULLAY, Superintendent, No. 6 Bowling Green, Pier No. 42 N. R., foot Canal st.

NEW-YORK AND HAVANA
DIRECT MAIL LINE.

These first-class steamships sail regularly at 3 P. M., from Pier No. 13 North River as follows:

CLYDE.....SATURDAY, Feb. 3
CUBA.....SATURDAY.....Feb. 10

Accommodations unsurpassed. For freight or passage apply to WM. P. CLYDE & CO., No. 6 Bowling Green. McKELLER, LULING & CO., Agents in Havana.

NEW-YORK HAVANA AND MEXICAN MAIL S. S. LINE.
Steamers leave Pier No. 3 North River at 3 P. M.
FOR HAVANA DIRECT.
CITY OF MERIDA.....Saturday, Jan. 27
CITY OF VERA CRUZ.....Wednesday, Jan. 31
CITY OF NEW-YORK.....Wednesday, Feb. 7
FOR VERA CRUZ AND NEW-ORLEANS,
Via Havana, Progreso, Campeachy, Tuxpan, and Tampico.
CITY OF MERIDA.....Saturday, Jan. 27
Steamers will leave New-Orleans Feb. 9 and Feb. 23 for Vera Cruz and all the above ports.
For freight or passage apply to
F. ALEXANDER & SONS, Nos. 31 and 33 Broadway.

HAMBURG American Packet Company's Line, for PLYMOUTH, CHERBOURG and HAMBURG.
WIELAND.....Feb. 1 | GELLERT.....Feb. 15
FRISIA.....Feb. 8 | SUDERMANN.....Feb. 22

Rates of passage to Plymouth, London, Cherbourg, Hamburg, and all points in Switzerland. First Cabin, $100 gold. Second Cabin, $60 gold. Steerage, $30, currency.
KUNHARDT & CO. C. H. RICHARD & BONS,
General Agents, General Passenger Agents,
61 Broadst., N. Y. 61 Broadway, N. Y.

SHIPPING.

ANCHOR LINE U. S. MAIL STEAMERS.
NEW-YORK AND GLASGOW

Victoria....Feb. 3, 2 A. M. | Alsatia....Feb. 17, 8 A. M.
Bolivia....Feb. 10, 2 P. M. | Anchoria....Feb. 24, 2 P. M.

TO GLASGOW, LIVERPOOL, OR DERRY.

Cabins $65 to $80, according to accommodations: Intermediate, $35; Steerage $28.

NEW-YORK AND LONDON.

Elysia....Jan. 31, 3 P. M. | Italia....Feb. 10, 2 P. M.

Cabins, $55 to $70. Steerage, $28. Cabin excursion tickets at reduced rates. Drafts issued for any amount at current rates. Company's Pier Nos. 20 and 21, North River, N. Y.

HENDERSON BROTHERS,
Agents, No. 7 Bowling Green.

RAILROADS.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.
GREAT TRUNK LINE
AND UNITED STATES MAIL ROUTE.

Trains leave New-York, via Desbrosses and Cortlandt Streets Ferries, as follows:

Express for Harrisburg, Pittsburg, the West and South, with Pullman Palace Cars attached, 8:30 A. M. and 8:30 P. M., daily.

For Williamsport, Lock Haven, Corry, and Erie, at 8:30 P. M., connecting at Corry for Titusville, Petroleum Centre, and the Oil Regions. For Williamsport and Rochester, 8:30 A. M.

For Baltimore, Washington, and the South, "Limited Washington Express" of Pullman Parlor Cars daily, except Sunday, 9:30 A. M.; arrive Washington 4:10 P. M. Regular, at 8:40 A. M., 1, 6, and 9 P. M. Sunday, 6 and 9 P. M.

Express for Philadelphia, 7:30, 8:30, 8:40, (9:30 Limited,) 10:30 A. M., 1, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8:30, 9 P. M., and 12 night. Sunday, 8:30 A. M., 5, 8, 7, 8:30, and 9 P. M.

Emigrant and second-class, 7 P. M.

Accommodation for Trenton, 7 A. M., 2 and 4:10 P. M.

For trains to Newark, Elizabeth, Rahway, Princeton, Trenton, Perth Amboy, Flemington, Belvidere, and other points, see local schedules at all Ticket Offices.

Trains arrive: From Pittsburg, 6:20 and 10:30 A. M., and 10:20 P. M. daily; 10:10 A. M. and 6:50 P. M. daily, except Monday. From Washington and Baltimore, 6:30, 9:50 A. M., 4:10, 5:10, and 10:20 P. M. Sunday 6:30, 9:50 A. M. From Philadelphia, 5:05, 6:20, 6:30, 9:50, 10:10, 11:50 A. M., 2:10, 4:10, 5:10, 6:50, 8:40, 10:00, and 10:20 P. M. Sunday 5:05, 6:20, 6:30, 9:50, 11:50, A. M., 6:50, 10:10, and 10:20 P. M.

Ticket Offices, Nos. 526 and 944 Broadway, No. 1 Astor House, and foot of Desbrosses and Cortlandt streets; No. 4 Court street, Brooklyn; Nos. 114, 116, and 118 Hudson street, Hoboken: Depot, Jersey City. Emigrant Ticket Office, No. 8 Battery place.

FRANK THOMSON, D. M. BOYD, Jr.,
General Manager. General Passenger Agent.

TO PHILADELPHIA

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

THE OLD-ESTABLISHED ROUTE AND SHORT LINE between
NEW-YORK AND PHILADELPHIA.

14 Through Trains each way daily; 3 Depots in Philadelphia, 2 in New-York.

4 Tracks, the most Improved Equipment, and the Fastest Time consistent with absolute safety.

Express Trains leave New-York, via Desbrosses and Cortlandt Streets Ferries, as follows:

7:30, 8:30, 8:40, (9:30 Limited,) 10:30 A. M., 1, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8:30, 9 P. M., and 12 Midnight. Sunday, 8:30 A. M., 5, 6, 7, 8:30, and 9 P. M.

Returning, Express Trains leave Philadelphia 3:20, 3:30, 7, 7:30, 8:30, and 11 A. M., (Limited Express, 1:35 P. M.,) 1:40, 4, 5:30, 7, and 7:35 P. M., and 12 Midnight. On Sunday, 3:20, 3:30, 7, 8:30 A. M., 4, 7, 7:35 P. M., and 12 Midnight.

Ticket Offices, Nos. 526 and 944 Broadway, No. 1 Astor House, and foot of Desbrosses and Cortlandt sts.; No. 4 Court st., Brooklyn: Nos. 114, 116, and 118 Hudson st., Hoboken; Depot, Jersey City. Emigrant Ticket Office, No. 8 Battery place.

FRANK THOMSON, D. M. BOYD, Jr.,
General Manager. General Passenger Agent.

NEW-YORK CENTRAL AND HUDSON RIVER RAILROAD.—Commencing Dec. 26, 1876, through trains will leave Grand Central Depot:

7:15 A. M., special Western and Northern Express, with drawing-room cars to Canandaigua.

8:30 A. M., special Chicago and St. Louis Express, with drawing-room cars to Rochester and Buffalo. Also, through cars to St. Louis.

11:00 A. M., North-west and Western Express.

3:30 P. M., special Albany, Troy and Western Express arrives at Buffalo 7:10 A. M.

5:00 P. M., Express, with sleeping cars, for Watertown and Ogdensburg. Also for Montreal via Plattsburg.

8:30 P. M., Pacific Express, daily, with sleeping cars, for Watertown, Niagara Falls, Buffalo, Cleveland, Indianapolis, and Louisville. Also for Chicago, via both L. S. and M. C. Railroads, and to Montreal via St. Albans.

11:00 P. M., Express, with sleeping cars, for Albany and Troy. Way trains as per local Time Tables.

Tickets for sale at Nos. 252, 261, and 418 Broadway, and at Westcott Express Company's offices, Nos. 7 Park place, 785 and 942 Broadway New-York, and 333 Washington st., Brooklyn.

C. E. MEEKER, General Passenger Agent.

ERIE RAILWAY.

Winter Arrangement of through trains. From Chambers Street Depot. (For 23d st. see note below.)

9:00 A. M., daily, except Sundays, Cincinnati and Chicago Day Express. Drawing-room coaches to Buffalo.

10:45 A. M., daily, except Sundays, Express Mail for Buffalo and the West. Sleeping coach to Buffalo.

7:00 P. M., daily, Pacific Express to the West. Sleeping coaches through to Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Cincinnati, and Chicago without change. Hotel dining-coaches to Chicago.

7:00 P. M., except Sundays, Western Emigrant train. Above trains leave Twenty-third Street Ferry at 8:45 and 10:45 A. M., and 6:45 P. M.

For local trains see time-tables and cards in hotels and depots.

JNO. N. ABBOTT, General Passenger Agent.

NEW-YORK, NEW-HAVEN, AND HARTFORD RAILROAD.

After Dec. 10, 1876, trains leave Grand Central Depot (42d st.) for New-Canaan Railroad at 8:05 A. M., 1, 4:40 P. M.; Danbury and Norwalk Railroad at 8:05 A. M., 1, and 4:40 P. M.; Naugatuck Railroad at 8:05 A. M., and 3 P. M.; Housatonic Railroad at 8:05 A. M. and 3 P. M.; New-Haven and Northampton Railroad at 8:05 A. M., and 3 P. M.; for Newport at 8:05 A. M. and 1 P. M.; Boston and Albany Railroad at 8:05 and 11 A. M., 2 and 9 P. M. (9 P. M. on Sunday.) Boston (via Shore Line) at 1 and 10 P. M., (10 P. M. on Sundays.) Boston and New-York Air Line, 8 A. M., 1 and 11:30 P. M.

Way trains as per local time-tables.

LEHIGH VALLEY RAILROAD.
ARRANGEMENT. PASSENGER TRAINS. JAN. 1, 1877.

Leave depots foot of Cortlandt and Desbrosses sts., at 6:30 P. M.—Night Express, daily, for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Manch Chunk, Wilkesbarre, Pittston, Sayre, Elmira, Ithaca, Auburn, Rochester, Buffalo, Niagara Falls, and the West. Pullman's sleeping coaches attached.

General Eastern office corner Church and Cortlandt sts., CHARLES H. CUMMINGS, Agent.
ROBERT H. SAYRE, Superintendent and Engineer.

WICKFORD RAILROAD ROUTE TO NEWPORT, R. I.—Passengers for this line take 8:05 A. M. and 1 P. M. express trains from Grand Central Depot, arriving at 4:18 and 9 P. M. at Newport.

THEODORE WARREN, Superintendent.

STEAMBOATS.

STONINGTON LINE
FOR BOSTON AND ALL POINTS EAST.
REDUCED FARE.

Elegant steamers leave Pier No. 33 North River, foot of Jay st., at 4:30 P. M.

Tickets for sale at all principal ticket offices. Stateroom secured at office of Westcott Express Company and at No. 863 Broadway.

PROVIDENCE LINE.

Freight only, steamers leave Pier No. 27 North River, foot of Fulton place, at 4 P. M. Freights via either line taken at lowest rates.

D. S. BABCOCK, Pres. L. W. PERKINS, G. P. Agent.

FALL RIVER LINE
FOR
BOSTON AND THE EAST.
FARES REDUCED).

Leave New-York daily, (Sunday excepted,) from Pier No. 28 North River, foot of Murray st., 4:30 P. M.
BORDEN & LOVELL, Agents.
GEO. L. CONNOR, General Passenger Agent.

NEW-HAVEN, HARTFORD AND THE NORTH.—Steamers leave Peck slip for New-Haven at 3 P. M., (except Sundays,) connecting with road.

FOR BRIDGEPORT AND ALL POINTS ON Housatonic and Naugatuck Railroad.—Fare $1. Steamers leave Catharine slip at 11:30 A. M.

ELECTIONS.

MISSOURI PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY,
OFFICE, No. 6 BOWLING GREEN,
NEW-YORK, Jan. 25, 1877.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THE annual meeting of the stockholders of the Missouri Pacific Railway Company will be held at the office of the company, in St. Louis, Mo., on TUESDAY, the 6th day of March, 1877, at 12 o'clock M., for the election of thirteen Directors for the ensuing year, and for the transaction of any other business that may come before the meeting.

The annual meeting of the Board of Directors will be held at the same office on WEDNESDAY, the 7th day of March, 1877, at 12 o'clock M.

The transfer-books will be closed on the afternoon of the 3d day of February, and will be reopened on the morning of the 8th day of March, 1877.

C. K. GARRISON, President.
C. L. WEITS, Secretary.

DELAWARE, LACKAWANNA AND WESTERN RAILROAD COMPANY, NO. 28 EXCHANGE PLACE,
NEW-YORK, Jan. 26, 1877.

THE ANNUAL ELECTION OF OFFICERS and managers of this company will be held at this office, on TUESDAY, the 20th day of February, prox., at 10 o'clock A. M.

Polls will be open between 10 and 11 o'clock.

Transfer-books will be closed from 31st January until 21st February.

A. J. ODELL, Secretary.

THE ANNUAL MEETING OF STOCKHOLDERS of the Maryland Coal Company for the election of a President and ten Directors, and for such other business as may come before the meeting, will be held at the company's office, No. 111 Broadway, Feb. 6, at 11 A. M. Polls open from 12 M. till 1 P. M.

S. T. ROSS, Secretary.

HORSES AND CARRIAGES.

THE UP-TOWN OFFICE OF THE TIMES.

The up-town office of THE TIMES is located at
No. 1,257 Broadway, bet. 31st and 32d sts.
Open daily, Sundays included, from 4 A. M. to 9 P. M.
Subscriptions received, and copies of THE TIMES for sale.

ADVERTISEMENTS RECEIVED UNTIL 9 P. M.

A——ONE CLARENCE, NEARLY NEW, MADE by Brewster & Co.; one coupe, one park phaeton, one doctor's phaeton, and one side-bar top wagon at a sacrifice, to settle up an estate. To be seen at McCUELLY'S, No. 109 East 13th st., near 4th av.

FINANCIAL.

VERMILYE & CO.
BANKERS

16 and 18 Nassau st., New-York.

DEALERS IN ALL ISSUES OF GOVERNMENT SECURITIES,
NEW-YORK CITY
AND BROOKLYN BONDS,
BUY AND SELL ON COMMISSION
RAILWAY STOCKS, BONDS, AND GOLD.

INTEREST ON DEPOSITS.

JAS. A. TROWBRIDGE. DONALD MACKAY
LATHAM A. FISH

FISK & HATCH,
BANKERS,
No. 5 NASSAU ST., NEW-YORK.

We give particular attention to DIRECT DEALINGS IN GOVERNMENT BONDS AT CURRENT MARKET RATES, and are prepared, at all times, to buy or sell in larger or small amounts, to suit all classes of investors. Orders by mail or telegraph will receive careful attention.

We shall be pleased to furnish information in reference to all matters connected with investments in Government Bonds.

We also buy and sell GOLD and GOLD COUPONS, COLLECT DIVIDENDS and TOWN, COUNTY, and STATE COUPONS, &c., and buy and sell, ON COMMISSION, all MARKETABLE STOCKS AND BONDS.

In our BANKING DEPARTMENT we receive deposits and remittances subject to draft, and allow interest, to be credited monthly, on balances averaging, for the month, from $1,000 to $5,000, at the rate of three per cent. per annum, and on balances averaging over $5,000, at the rate of four per cent.

FISK & HATCH.

OFFICE OF THE ATLANTIC MUTUAL INSURANCE COMPANY, NEW-YORK, Jan. 24, 1877.

THE TRUSTEES, IN CONFORMITY TO the charter of the company submits the following statement of its affairs on the 31st December, 1876:

Premiums received on marine risks from 1st January, 1876, to 31st December, 1876.....$4,929,197 66
Premiums on Policies not marked off 1st January, 1876.....2,172,280 07

Total amount of marine premiums...$7,101,437 73

No policies have been issued upon life risks; nor upon fire disconnected with marine risks.

Premiums marked off from 1st January, 1876, to 31st December, 1876.....$5,061,095 12
Losses paid during the same period.....$1,865,193 49
Returns of premiums and expenses...$1,038,410 35

The company has the following assets, viz.:

United States and State of New-York stock, City, bank, and other stocks..$11,008,700 00
Loans secured by stocks and otherwise.....1,779,300 00
Real estate and bonds and mortgages.....207,000 00
Interest, and sundry notes and claims due the company, estimated to be good.....402,350 19
Premium notes and bills receivable.....1,812,504 38
Cash in bank.....385,012 74

Total amount of assets.....$15,594,867 31

Six per cent. interest on the outstanding certificates of profits will be paid to the holders thereof, or their legal representatives, on and after Tuesday, the 6th of February next.

The outstanding certificates of the issue of 1873 will be redeemed and paid to the holders thereof, or their legal representatives, on and after Tuesday, the 6th of February next, from which date all interest thereon will cease. The certificates to be produced at the time of payment, and canceled. Upon certificates which were issued for gold premiums, the payment of interest and redemption will be in gold.

A dividend of Forty per Cent. is declared on the net earned premiums of the company for the year ending 31st December, 1876, for which certificates will be issued on and after Tuesday, the 3d of April next.

By order of the Board,
J. H. CHAPMAN, Secretary.

TRUSTEES.

J. D. JONES, ROYAL PHELPS,
CHARLES DENNIS, THOMAS F. YOUNGS,
W. H. H. MOORE, C. A. HAND,
LEWIS CURTIS, JOHN D. HEWLETT,
CHARLES H. RUSSELL, WILLIAM H. WEBB,
JAMES LOW, CHARLES P. BURDETT,
DAVID LANE, FRANCIS SKIDDY,
GORDON W. BURNHAM, ALEXANDER V. BLAKE,
DANIEL S. MILLER, ADOLPH LEMOINE,
WM. STURGIS, ROBT. B. MINTURN,
JOSIAH O. LOW, CHARLES A. MARSHALL,
WILLIAM E. DODGE, GEORGE W. LANE,
ROBT. L. STUART, HORACE GRAY,
JAMES B. DE FOREST, WM. H. H. MORLES,
FREDERICK CHAUNCEY, JOHN ELLIOTT,
CHAS. D. LEVERICH, WILLIAM BRYCE,
ADAM T. SACKETT, WILLIAM H. FOGG.

PETER V. KING,
J. D. JONES, President.
CHARLES DENNIS, Vice President.
W. H. H. MOORE, Second Vice President.
A. A. RAVEN, Third Vice President.

CHASE & ATKINS,
BANKERS AND BROKERS,
NO. 18 BROAD STREET, NEW-YORK.

INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS SUBJECT TO DRAFT AT SIGHT.

GOLD, GOVERNMENT, STATE, MUNICIPAL AND RAILROAD SECURITIES BOUGHT AND SOLD ON COMMISSION FOR CASH OR UPON MARGIN.

WABASH RAILWAY COMPANY.
NOTICE TO BONDHOLDERS.

The holders of the following First Mortgage Divisional Bonds of the Wabash Railway, viz:

Toledo and Illinois Railroad Company.
Lake Erie, Wabash and St. Louis Railroad Company.
Great Western Railroad Company.
Illinois and Southern Iowa Railroad Company.

On presentation, on Feb. 1, of the past due and current coupons to the Metropolitan National Bank, will receive therefor cash for the coupons due Feb. 1, 1877, and a certificate of deposit bearing interest for those past due.

For further information and particulars in regard to all classes of bonds, inquiry may be made of JAMES A. ROOSEVELT, President Wabash Railway Company, No. 32 Pine st., or of the Purchasing Committee, No. 52 William st., New-York.

NEW-YORK, Jan. 26, 1877.

CINCINNATI 7 3/10 PER CENT
MUNICIPAL BONDS, DUE 1900. A LIMITED AMOUNT FOR SALE BY
KUHN, LOEB & CO., NO. 31 NASSAU ST.

OCEAN NATIONAL BANK.
ASSETS AT AUCTION,
MARCH 27, 1877.

For catalogue apply to ADRIAN H. MULLER & CO., No. 7 Pine st., or to the Receiver, No. 21 Nassau st.

THEODORE M. DAVIS, Receiver.

WANTED.

North Carolina Bonds issued to North Carolina Railroad Company,
North Carolina Consols,
Louisiana Consols,
New-Orleans and Jackson first mortgage bonds,
Mississippi Central first and second mortgage bonds,
Greenville and Columbia guaranteed bonds,
Arkansas Levee bonds,
Mobile and Ohio sterling bonds,
Mobile and Ohio interest bonds,
by ABENTS & YOUNG,
No. 9 New st.

UNITED STATES EXPRESS COMPANY,
TREASURER'S OFFICE, No. 32 BROADWAY,
NEW-YORK, Jan. 27, 1877.

THE TRANSFER-BOOKS OF THIS COMpany will be closed FRIDAY, Feb. 2, at 2 P. M., and reopened Feb. 16. THEO. F. WOOD, Treasurer.

A. C. BURNHAM, NO. 33 PINE ST., NEW-YORK.—Investment securities paying eight to ten per cent. for sale. Western mortgages a specialty for sixteen years. References in New-York, Boston, Hartford, and Philadelphia. Send for lists.

BROWN BROTHERS & CO.,
ISSUE COMMERCIAL and TRAVELLERS' CREDITS AVAILABLE in all PARTS of the WORLD.

WANTED—$7,500, AMPLY SECURED, FOR THREE years; 12 per cent., payable monthly; in a lucrative, established business. Address SECURITY, Box No. 111 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, 1,257 BROADWAY.

SAVINGS BANKS.

SIX-PENNY SAVINGS BANK,
BROADWAY AND ASTOR PLACE.

FORTY-SEVENTH SEMI-ANNUAL DIVIDEND.

The Trustees have ordered a dividend at the rate of FIVE PER CENT. per annum, out of the earnings of the last six months, to be credited to the accounts of all depositors entitled thereto, subject to draft on and after the 20th February. If not called for, the same will be entitled to interest from the 1st February.

Money deposited up to the 10th February will also draw interest from the 1st of said month.

WM. MILES, President.
A. C. COLLINS, Secretary.
E. G. MATURIN, Assistant Secretary.

RELIGIOUS NOTICES.

CHURCH OF THE HOLY TRINITY, MADIson av. and 42d st.—Open every evening, except Saturday. Rev. Joseph Odell, of Brooklyn, will preach this evening at 7:45 P. M. All are invited.

DIVIDENDS.

DIVIDEND.
OFFICE OF THE
Brewers' and Maltsters' Insurance Co.
No. 189 Broadway, New-York, Jan. 24, 1877.

The Board of Directors have this day declared a semi-annual dividend of

FIVE (5) PER CENT.,

payable Feb. 1. WM. B. OGDEN, Secretary.

THE LAKE SHORE AND MICHIGAN SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY, TREASURER'S OFFICE, NEW-YORK, Dec. 29, 1876.

THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF THIS Company have this day declared a dividend of one and one quarter (1¼) per cent. upon the capital stock thereof, out of the earnings for the six months which will end with the present month, payable on the 1st day of February next at the office of MESSRS. CHASE & ATKINS, NO. 18 BROAD ST., NEW-YORK.

The transfer books will be closed at 3 o'clock P. M. on SATURDAY the 6th day of January next, and will reopen on the morning of FRIDAY the 2d day of February next. E. D. WORCESTER, Treasurer.

OFFICE OF THE NEW-YORK, PROVIDENCE AND BOSTON RAILROAD COMPANY, (STONINGTON RAILROAD.)
NEW-YORK, Jan. 25, 1877.

A QUARTERLY DIVIDEND OF TWO AND one-half per cent., out of the earnings of the past three months, will be paid at the office of Messrs. Morgan, Sons, & Co., No. 39 William st., New-York, on the 10th day of February.

The transfer-books will be closed from the 1st to the 10th, both inclusive. F. B. NOYES, Secretary.

EXCHANGE FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY.
Office No. 172 Broadway, corner Maiden lane.

The Board of Directors have declared a SEMI-ANNUAL DIVIDEND of FIVE (5) PER CENT., and an EXTRA DIVIDEND of FIVE (5) PER CENT., payable Feb. 1. TRANSFER BOOKS will be closed from Jan. 20 to Feb. 1. G. W. MONTGOMERY, Secretary.
NEW-YORK, Jan. 11, 1877.

THE UNION TRUST COMPANY, OF NEW-YORK, Trustee, will pay TWENTY DOLLARS IN GOLD upon the coupons maturing Feb. 1, 1877, of the consolidated first mortgage land grant bonds of the MISSOURI, KANSAS AND TEXAS RAILWAY COMPANY which have been stamped, subject to the agreement of March 1, 1876. Coupons cut from registered bonds must be accompanied by an order from the registered holder, and all coupons must be left over night for examination. EDWARD KING, President.

CAPITAL $200,000.
ST. NICHOLAS INSURANCE COMPANY,
No. 166 BROADWAY,
NEW-YORK, Jan. 26, 1877.

THE USUAL SEMI-ANNUAL DIVIDEND of Five per Cent. has been declared, payable on and after the 1st day of February, 1877.
JACOB DU BOIS, Secretary.

MISSOURI PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY,
OFFICE No. 6 BOWLING GREEN,
NEW-YORK, Jan. 25, 1877.

THE COUPONS DUE FEB. 1, 1877, ON the first mortgage bonds of the Pacific Railroad Company (of Missouri) will be paid on and after that date, at the office of this company.
C. K. GARRISON, President.

BOSTON AND NEW-YORK AIR-LINE RAILROAD COMPANY,
TREASURER'S OFFICE, No. 12 WALL ST.,
NEW-YORK, Jan. 25, 1877.

THE INTEREST DUE FEB. 1, 1877, ON the First Mortgage Bonds of the Boston and New-York Air-Line Railroad Company will be paid at the office of Hatch & Foote, No. 12 Wall st.
D. B. HATCH, Treasurer.

OFFICE OF THE LENOX FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY,
No. 158 BROADWAY, NEW YORK, Jan. 9, 1877.

FORTIETH DIVIDEND.

The Board of Directors have declared the usual semi-annual dividend of FIVE PER CENT., payable on demand.
A. H. WALTON, Secretary.

OFFICE OF CHASE & ATKINS,
BANKERS, NO. 18 BROAD ST.

THE INTEREST COUPONS of the DETROIT, MONROE AND TOLEDO RAILROAD COMPANY'S first mortgage bonds, due Feb. 1, will be paid at this office.

PACIFIC BANK, NEW-YORK, Jan. 12, 1877.

THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS HAVE THIS day declared a quarterly dividend of THREE PER CENT., payable on and after the 1st day of February.
R. BUCK, Cashier.

NEW-YORK, Jan. 22, 1877.

COUPONS.—THE COUPONS OF THE FIRST mortgage bonds of the Columbus and Toledo Railroad Company, due on the 1st day of February next, will be paid on and after that date at the 8th Nicholas National Bank. C. M. GREENE, President.

THE FEBRUARY COUPONS OF THE REAL Estate First Mortgage Bonds, guaranteed by the Mercantile Trust Company, will be paid at the office of the company, Equitable Building, No. 120 Broadway, on the 1st day of February next.
E. L. MONTGOMERY, Treasurer.

CORN EXCHANGE BANK, NEW-YORK, Jan. 24, 1877.

THE HOLDERS OF FOUR PER CENT. DIVIDEND CERTIFICATES HAVE BEEN declared a dividend of Five per Cent., payable Feb. 1, 1877. The transfer-books will be closed from the 24th inst. to 1st proximo. By order
WM. A. NASH, Cashier.

BANKRUPT NOTICES.

IN BANKRUPTCY.—IN THE DISTRICT COURT of the United States for the Southern District of New-York.—In the matter of JOHN M. ATWATER and HARRY E. ATWATER, bankrupts.—Notice is hereby given that a petition has been filed in said court by John M. Atwater and Harry E. Atw

LOCAL MISCELLANY.

A CHINESE TRAGEDY.

A CELESTIAL, NAMED AH LUNG, SERIOUSLY WOUNDED BY A FELLOW-COUNTRYMAN —THE INJURED MAN BELIEVED TO BE IN A DYING CONDITION—ARREST OF THE SUPPOSED ASSAILANT.

A Chinaman, named Ah Lung, was removed from the Eldridge Street Police Station to Bellevue Hospital early yesterday morning in an apparently dying condition from the effects of several ghastly wounds inflicted with an axe by a fellow-countryman, in a miserable room in the rear of No. 17 Forsyth street. The premises consist of five tenement-houses, occupied by a large number of families of mixed nationalities. The third floor of one of the houses is occupied by Ah Lung, Tung Ha, Mrs. Tung Ha, a white woman, and another Chinaman named Ah Ha. The three earned a precarious livlihood by making cigars and cigarettes, and each contributed his share of the rent. At night the sitting-room of the floor was transformed into a sleeping apartment for Tung Ha and his white wife, who are also known among the denizens of the rear buildings as Mr. and Mrs. Peter Johnson. Ah Lung slept in a dark closet, communicating with the sitting-room, and Ah Ha occupied a small hallroom. A few minutes after midnight yesterday Ah Lung left his room to purchase some opium, and having obtained the drug from another Chinaman living in the neighborhood, returned, and went to bed. At 4 A. M., Tung Ha, awakening, noticed that a kerosene lamp which he had left burning dimly in the sitting-room had been removed. At the same moment groans proceeding from the closet of Ah Lung reached his ears. Entering the little room and lighting a match, he was startled by seeing Ah Lung lying on his mattress surrounded by a pool of blood which had flowed from wounds on the head, arms, and legs. The wounds had the appearance of having been inflicted with an axe or some other sharp-bladed instrument. Ah Lung, who was conscious but very weak, requested Tung Ha to inform the Police of his condition. He also intimated that Ah Ha had admitted a man to his [Ah Lung's] room, and that "they" had attempted to kill him. Tung Ha immediately entered Ah Ha's room, and discovered that its occupant was not there. He then informed the Police, and the wounded Chinaman was removed on his mattress to the Eldridge Street Police Station. He was subsequently removed in an ambulance to Bellevue Hospital. There he stated that Ah Ha admitted a strange man, who, being refused permission from Ah Lung to sleep there, drew an axe and proceeded to butcher him. Officers Kramer and O'Leary learned from Mrs. Tung Ha, or Mrs. Peter Johnson, that some time ago a Celestial named Ah Fung had charged Ah Lung with robbing him of $500, and she thought he might have attempted to kill Ah Lung in revenge. At No. 34 Mott street they succeeded in finding a Chinaman whom Mrs. Tung Ha identified as Ah Fung. This man was at once taken to Bellevue Hospital, and was recognized by the wounded Ah Lung as his assailant. Ah Fung denies that he was the culprit or that he had ever charged Ah Lung with having robbed or cheated him. The prisoner was taken to the Police-station and locked up.

Last evening a young white woman called at Bellevue Hospital and informed Dr. Stillwell that she was the wife of the wounded Chinaman, whose name she said was Ah Fango, not Ah Lung, as reported to the Police. She added that she had not lived with him since last Summer, but visited him on Saturday evening last, when she found him engaged in a game of cards with the man accused of assaulting him. She also stated that she left him at 9:30 the same evening, still playing with Ah Fung. The following ante-mortem statement, conscientiously recorded by Dr. MacWhinnie in the incoherent pigeon-English of Ah Lung, or Ah Fungo, was taken:

"Ah Fung hit me; he lived at No. 34 Mott street; I am Chinaman; he bit me with a hatchet; I was in bed when he licked me; he couldn't lick me if I was up; we drank whisky; we had a fight; he wanted to lick me, and I licked him; I don't know what he hit me for, but he watched me asleep and then he hit me; I did not hit him; I was not drunk; I was asleep; I owed him some money. (25 cents;) I don't know how long I owed him; when he had no money he asked me for any money; he sometimes slept in same room with me; when he hit me with his hatchet I licked him or he would kill me right away; I called, but nobody came; he and I had been playing cards last night for a penny a game, but we had no words; I went to sleep about o'clock A. M. this morning; cigarette maker; it was Ah Fung who hit me; I was not drunk; this occured at No. 17 Forsyth street, where I live."

It will be seen from the above that both the Police and the Celestials have succeeded admirably in mixing up the particulars of the affair. The surgeons at Bellevue Hospital are very much interested in the case of Ah Lung, or Ah Fungo, in consequence of the horrible nature of his wounds, one of which, on the head, is so large and deep that the throbs of the brain can be observed through it. His left arm is disfigured by 16 cuts, and his right leg by several severe gashes. The physicians regard his vitality as remarkable.

A SYSTEMATIC BURGLAR.

A THIEF CLEVERLY CAUGHT IN THE ACT OF ENTERING A HOUSE ON RUTHERFORD PLACE—HIS PLANS FOR OTHER ROBBERIES FRUSTRATED.

Patrolman Jacob Brunner, of the Eighteenth Precinct, while on duty at 2:30 A. M. yesterday in East Seventeenth street, observed a man in the act of scaling the wall separating Seventeenth street from the yard adjoining the residence of Mr. Lucius H. Biglow, No. 1 Rutherford place. Suspecting that the fellow was about to rob the house, the officer secreted himself in the shade of an adjacent stoop, and watched the movements of the man. The thief succeeded in scaling the wall and entering the yard of Mr. Biglow's residence. He then climbed with the agility of a cat to the roof of the rear piazza, which is on a level with the windows of the second floor. After resting for a moment and cautiously reconnoitering, the would-be robber drew from an inside pocket of his coat a medium-sized auger, and with the aid of that implement and a chisel-shaped piece of iron, endeavored to raise one of the windows. While thus employed he was startled by a shrill whistle, instantly he ceased his operations and prostrated himself on the roof of the piazza, in which position he remained motionless. Officer Brunner, who had carefully noted every movement of the man, recognized the whistle as the signal of Roundsman Reid. Stealthily emerging from his secluded point of observation, he answered the summons of his superior, and acquainted him with what he had seen. Both officers went to the corner of Rutherford place and Seventeenth street, and Brunner, pointing his revolver at the reclining burglar, called to him to descend and surrender. The fellow, finding that he was trapped, gave himself up, and was taken to the Eighteenth Precinct Station, where, on searching his person, the officers found, among other things, a business card of a printing firm, on the back of which was penciled in a scrawling hand the following:

"15th street, from 4th avenue to Lexington avenue and 3d avenue.

16th street, from 4th avenue to Lexington avenue and Stuyvesant place.

17th street, only from 4th to 3d avenue.

1—Corner Stuyvesant place and 17th street.

2—Corner Lexington avenue and 17th street.

3—Corner 18th street and Lexington avenue."

The prisoner had evidently planned in a systematic manner to rob houses situated on the above-named streets; but the apparent fact that he mistook Irving place for Lexington avenue tends to establish the belief that he was not intimately acquainted with the district in which he intended to operate. It is also probable that the point mentioned opposite "1" in his catagory was intended for Rutherford place and Seventeenth street, where he was captured in the attempt to rob the residence of Mr. Biglow. In answer to the usual questions of the Sergeant on duty at the station, the burglar said his name was Charles Lang, aged 24, a native of Germany, and a bar-tender by occupation. He was arraigned yesterday morning at the Yorkville Police Court, and committed in default of $2,500 bail, to await trial on the charge of attempted burglary.

A MOTHER DEFRAUDED BY HER SON.

Detective Devoy, of Brooklyn, went to Newark on Saturday, armed with a requisition, and, aided by Detective Fusch, arrested Charles Seidel, a milk dealer, living at No. 20 South Orange avenue, on a charge of conspiracy. It seems that some time ago Seidel's father died, leaving a valuable estate, and it is said that in the settlement of the estate Seidel conspired with others, and succeeded in defrauding his mother and sister out of $15,000. He soon afterward sailed for Europe, and after an absence of eight months returned to Newark. His mother and sister, having learned of his return, entered a charge against him in one of the Brooklyn Police Courts, and a warrant having been issued and a requisition procured, he was taken into custody. He was sent to Brooklyn to answer.

RAID ON A GAMBLING DEN.

Capt. McCollough, of the Seventeenth Precinct, aided by Sergt. Rooney and a posse of patrolmen, made a descent early yesterday morning on a gambling den at No. 101 East Thirteenth street. Charles D. Sheridan and John C. Wallace, the supposed proprietors, and five others were arrested, and all the gambling implements in the place were seized. The five men arrested in addition to Sheridan and Wallace gave the following names and occupations: John R. James, clerk; Edward Curran, liquor dealer; William Gulden, conductor; Frank Barber, clerk, and Edward Rufurt, actor.

PROPOSED NEW MISSION CHAPEL.

At the annual meeting of the Church of the Pilgrims, in Brooklyn, held on Monday evening last, it was decided to present to the society the subject of building a new chapel for the accommodation of the Warren Street Mission, organized under the auspices of that church, which has been very successful under the superintendency of Deacon George A. Bell, formerly of the Plymouth Bethel, in Hicks street. Rev. Dr. Storrs yesterday announced the following committee to lay the matter before the society: R. P. Buck, Rufus Hatch, Dwight Johnson, Jeremiah P. Robinson, Sidney Wallace, Joseph Brown, George A. Bell, and Rev. Dr. Storrs. It is proposed to purchase ground and erect a building, to cost $35,000. The location of the chapel has not yet been determined.

DEATH AND THE RESURRECTION.

FIRST OF A SERIES OF LECTURES BY REV. CHAUNCEY GILES EXPLANATORY OF THE WRITINGS OF SWEDENBORG.

A large congregation assembled yesterday afternoon in the Church of the New Jerusalem, (Swedenborgian,) in East Thirty-fifth street, between Lexington and Park avenues, to listen to the first of a series of four lectures by Dr. Chauncey Giles, explaining the disclosures contained in the writings of Swedenborg relative to death and the resurrection. The lecture was entitled "The Death of the Body," and consisted of a number of forcible arguments, cited to prove the truth of the theory held by Swedenborgians, that the death of the material body is simply a provision of the Divine love and wisdom for the increase and perfection of human happiness.

Death and the resurrection, said Dr. Giles, in opening the lecture, are questions which cannot fail to interest every thoughtful mind, as they have a personal relation with every one. Whatever may be the cause and purpose in the Divine economy, we know it to be a fact that we must die. If death is the curse of God sent upon man to punish him for disobedience, we ought to know it, and we ought also, on the other hand, to know if it is a provision of his infinite love and wisdom for the attainment of man's highest good. The New Church, he continued, believes that it has received new light on this dark, and to most persons terrible, question—a light which changes all former opinions concerning its origin, nature, and purpose in the Divine economy, and which shows us death rather as a friend than an enemy, rather as a blessing than a curse, and which demonstrates that it is not caused by sin, but that it is a link in the chain of providential arrangements for the highest good of every human being. The first intimation of death that the Lord gave to man, continued the speaker, is found in Genesis, in these words: "But of the tree of knowledge of good and evil thou shalt not eat, for on the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." It has been almost universally believed that these words refer to the death of the material body, the general opinion being that if man had not sinned he would have remained immortal in this world, and that death was a punishment for his sin. That death is the punishment of sin, believers in the Bible cannot doubt. But there are two kinds of death, entirely distinct from each other and due to different causes—the death of the body and the death of the soul. The kind of death referred to in the various passages of the Word can be ascertained by keeping these distinctions clearly in the mind. There is no intimation in the Bible that death is caused by sin. In the passage under consideration there is a clearly-defined time when a punishment was to take effect, but man did not die a natural death in that day, and the record shows that both Adam and Eve lived many years after they had eaten of the forbidden fruit. Nor was the sentence which the Lord pronounced upon man after his disobedience one of death. His punishment was that he should eat bread by the sweat of his brow until he returned unto the dust. Paul also avows repeatedly that the death referred to in Genesis was not the death of the material body. A careful examination of the Apostle's argument for the resurrection shows that he referred to the death and resurrection of the soul, not the body. In the passage where he declares, "For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, so in Christ shall all be made alive," which is the principal one upon which the theory that the death of the material body was caused by sin is based, it is evident that the death of the soul alone is meant, and not the death of the body. Men seem to have taken it for granted that the death of the body is the real death, and that when the term is applied to the soul it is in a figurative sense merely. A careful examination of the Word in its whole connection, however, will show that this is not the case. There are many passages in the Bible in which death is mentioned, where it is evident that the dissolution of the material body is not meant. All the Lord's promises and threatenings, all His rewards and punishments, relate primarily to the spirit, which is the real man. The Lord Himself declared that He came into the world that men might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly. He called those dead who were naturally alive, and commanded them to repent that they might live. He came to raise the dead, He said, but the material bodies of the very dead referred to were alive and active. The Lord does not give a hint in His Word that man should live forever in this world. The death of the body is alluded to always as a type and illustration of real death, but never as the effects of it. But the Lord testifies upon this subject in still another way—not by speech only, but by the essential qualities of His nature. As a being of infinite love and wisdom, the final end of all His activities must be to secure the greatest good to the greatest number of human beings. His wisdom must provide the best possible means of attaining the ends of His love. Supposing it to have been according to the Lord's original intention that man should live immortal in the world. In such a case there must soon have been a limit to the number of human beings He could create. While man remained upon the earth he must be fed with its products. A material body requires material substances to support its wastes, and even in a perfect order of society, the limit of the earth's capacity to sustain human life must soon time be reached, and when reached, the creation of human souls must cease. Conceive the earth, said the speaker, to be crowded with a population, the supplying of whose physical wants strained its capacity to its full extent; conceive that no being could ever be added to or taken from this population, but that they must dwell together forever, with no infancy to open new fountains of love in their hearts, no old age to call forth their tenderness and reverence, with nothing to awaken sympathy, nothing to excite new hopes—would not such a state of society be more like the dead level of a stagnant pool than the flowing stream of an ever-fresh and increasing life? It would require, in such an event, more than angelic loveliness to preserve harmony, more than angelic wisdom to preserve any freshness and zest in life, and the most important elements of human life would be wanting. But even supposing that, in this condition of things, every human being was perfect, and enjoyed as much happiness as the highest of angels, the supposition of man's immortality upon the earth becomes still more unreasonable.

Our life in the world, continued the speaker, is not the completed work of the Lord. It was never intended to be. It is only the beginning, the planting of the germs. The material body, even in its greatest perfection, is only the rough model of man in clay, containing only a few suggestions, which the infinite Artist is to work out into ineffable beauty and grandeur. If it was the Lord's intention that man should live forever in this world, are we not forced to the conclusion that man has obtained a greater good by disobedience to the divine laws, than he could have gained by obedience? He has escaped from a world of material limitation and physical imperfection, to one where the conditions of his life are perfect, and where he can associate with angelic beings and enjoy a fullness of happiness never to be gained upon earth. But how absurd the idea, how contrary to every principle of wisdom and justice, and every true conception of love and mercy! The Lord himself, in His Word, stands squarely opposed to the common opinion, thus given, that the death of the material body is caused by sin. The testimony of his intention as recorded in the creation, indicates that the decay and death of the material body is but an orderly process in man's development, by which he attains the highest state by distinct and successive steps. The testimony of the Lord, as declared by prophet and apostle, by written and created law, then is that the death of the material body is but a provision of love, and not a penalty inflicted by divine vengeance, and that it is absolutely necessary to the attainment of his purpose in His creation. Man, said the speaker in conclusion, begins his life in a material body because a material basis is essential to the first steps in his life; it is the ground on which he is planted, the mould in which his spiritual body is organized and gains a substantial existence. When that object is accomplished, and the continuance of his existence is secured, he casts the mold aside and enters a spiritual world, in which all the substances and forms are perfectly adapted to the condition of his spiritual body; a world superior to this in light and order, beauty, and means of ministering to our spiritual development and happiness. Instead, therefore, of death being a curse, it is a blessing; instead of a punishment, a reward; instead of a token of divine displeasure, a provision of divine love.

The next lecture, to be delivered on the evening of Sunday, Feb. 4, will be devoted to the consideration of the subject: "The Death of the Soul."

AMATEUR THEATRICALS.

A number of ladies and gentlemen from some of the leading amateur dramatic societies of New-York and Brooklyn have volunteered to play "The School for Scandal" at the Lyceum Theatre, on Feb. 3, for the benefit of the Rosendale Mission, of Ulster County, N. Y. Tickets are for sale at the Fifth Avenue, New-York, Metropolitan, Windsor, and Grisey Hotels, and at the Lyceum Theatre on the day of the performance, after 9 A. M. The list of managers is as follows: Mrs. Pierre Lorillard, Mrs. John Sherwood, Mrs. Frederick Sonnichardt, Mrs. Robert Stuyvesant, Mrs. Henry Meyer, Mrs. Herman Le Roy, Mrs. P. Rossek, Mrs. T. K. Globe, Mrs. A. G. Soutter, Mrs. R. K. Delafield, Mrs. M. G. Young, Mrs. Denning Duer, Jr., Mrs. S. Van R. Cruger, Mrs. J. L. Melcher, Mrs. F. Hubbard, Mrs. Robert G. Remsen, Mrs. Eugene Schieffin, Mrs. Valentine G. Hall, Mrs. Waldron Peil, and Mrs. Lewis L. Delafield.

AN OLD ROMANCE REVIVED.

THE TRUE STORY OF LIBERTY HALL.

HOW LORD BOLINGBROKE CAME TO PURCHASE THE PROPERTY—HIS ROMANTIC MARRIAGE WITH A GERMAN BARONESS —PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS OF THE FAMILY—THE CHARACTER OF LADY BOLINGBROKE VINDICATED.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Having noticed in the New-York World of the 18th December, 1875, sent to me a few days since by a friend, an article headed, "A House with a History—Liberty Hall and its many Romantic Associations—The Episode of Lord Bolingbroke and His Beautiful Young Mistress," I request the publication in your valuable and most respectable paper of the following sketch of some of the incidents related, which may be relied on as the truth, though in contradiction of many circumstances related in the World.

All that relates to Gov. Livingstone and his family, with the exception of some trifling errors, I believe to be correct—the building of the house, the incidents told of the Revolution, the marriage of his daughters, Mrs. Jay and Mrs. Ridley, &c.—but it was the Governor's daughter Judith who married Mr. Walkins some years after, who was the guardian of the valuable papers, and concealed them. There is a misstatement also regarding a "grand-daughter of Gov. Livingstone," as stated in the World, having married Hon. John Kean, and subsequently having purchased Liberty Hall. The lady referred to was a daughter of Mr. Peter Van Burgh Livingstone, a brother of Gov. William Livingstone. Mr. John Kean, of Ursino; Mrs. Hamilton Fish, the wife of the present Secretary of State, and Mrs. William Preston Griffin, of New-York, are her grand-children. Mrs. Kean, previous to the purchase of Liberty Hall, married the Count Julian Ursin Niemcewicz, "a conspicuous Polish patriot," the friend of Prince Czartowiski and Kosciusko, accompanying the latter to America, after the battle of "Macieowice" and his release from prison. They came to Elizabethtown, N. J. Count Niemcewicz's fame, not only as a patriot but a literary man, is well known in Northern Europe, where he has been called "the Shakespeare of Poland." He was imprisoned by Catherine II. of Russia for a pasquinade written on her, and only released by the Emperor Paul at the death of the Empress. While residing in Elizabethtown Count Niemcewicz became acquainted with Mrs. Kean and married her, continuing to reside for many years in that place. George Richard St. John, third Viscount Bolingbroke, was only known in this country as Mr. Bellasis. He purchased Liberty Hall, as stated in the World, "through his agent," a few years after the death of Gov. Livingstone and his wife. This agent was "Gov. Crawford," well known in England, which country he left in consequence of a tender attachment to one of the royal Princesses. Mr. Crawford was appointed Governor of the Bahamas, with "a request" that he would not return to England. Soon wearying of his position, he came to New-York, and there married a widow Livingstone. Lord Bolingbroke, when a youth, was placed with a private tutor, who aided his daughter, a woman much older than the young man, in her design to marry him. They succeeded in their plan, but he soon became disgusted with his wife, and on the death of his father, being his own master, and unrestrained by any principle, religious or moral, he left her with her father, and went on the Continent, where he became acquainted with Count Niemcewicz and many other celebrities. Lord Bolingbroke traveled under the name of Mr. Bellasis, and passed an unusual college. Becoming as a student at Heidelberg, he became intimate with the young Barons Charles and Ferdinand von Hompesch, who, during the vacation, invited the young and clever Englishmen to accompany them to their father's castle, near Dusseldorf. He went, was hospitably received, and remained after the departure of the young men at college. Having fallen desperately in love with the young Baroness Isabella, a girl of 17, at home for her vacation from the convent where she had been brought up, having lost her mother in infancy. The old Baron, occupied with the care of his estate and the pleasures of the chase, had little thought of the danger to which he left his daughter exposed in the daily intercourse with the young and fascinating Englishman, while the poor child, with no knowledge of the world, innocent, accomplished, sweet-tempered, and confiding—a woman of whom she soon learned to love her daily companion, so handsome, refined, and winning, an agent in every art to win the affections of so young a girl. I grieve to write what follows, but it is due to the memory of my dear old friend to refute the calumnies against her, and say I know she was innocent of all save her entire trust in the truth and honor of the man she loved. He persuaded her there was no impropriety in a private marriage, as her proud father would never consent to her marrying a Protestant and simple English squire. After much hesitation and devoted prayers to Our Lady of Succor, whose image she daily worshiped in the chapel on the estate, built by one of the Dukes d'Albrech, her deceased husband, consented to meet Mr. Bellasis, who had left the castle a few days previous, at the nearest village church, where, in the disguise of a peasant girl, she married him according to the rites of the Roman Catholic Church. He induced her to fly with him to England from the church door; but, not to relate, to avoid pursuit he threw the bonnet and shawl she usually wore, into the mill-stream on the estate, where they were found, and shewn to the Baron, as proofs that his daughter was drowned. Lord Bolingbroke, having taken the precaution to detain the letter she left for her father, waiting for the packet, and that up to the present moment the outside world is in absolute ignorance of the specific forms and ceremonies, the signs and pass-words, connected with this wondrous fraternity: its general principles, which it makes known itself, are all that non-members know of it. This is in itself enough to attract candidates for admission, prompted as they probably are in very many cases by no higher feeling than that of curiosity. If, as some will have it, there are no secret signs and words by which Masons can recognize one another, the curiosity is none the less to ascertain for a fact what is now believed to exist, and it would be equally as astounding a fact that the secret of there being no secret has been kept, as that the real secrets should have remained inviolable. "It was curiosity which led Hon. Mrs. Aldworth to secrete herself in a Masonic lodge and discover the secrets of the craft; the story of the "lady in the clock-case" being by no means apocryphal, as even the generality of Masons themselves are inclined to treat it. It is simply an historical fact that the lady just mentioned did so secrete herself, and further, that when discovered she was at once "made a Mason." She continued to take an active interest in the order throughout her life; she founded the Duolin Benevolent Institution for Orphan Daughters of Masons, and her portrait still hangs in a principal lodge-room in Cork, and under it in a glass case the Masonic apron and jewels she used to wear. Whether curiosity will ever incite another lady to attempt to elude the vigilance of the "tiler" remains to be seen; but it may be taken for granted that men, who, perhaps, are really as much creatures of curiosity as those to whom they specially attribute this weakness, will continue to be influenced by it to join the mystic fraternity.

The Masonic Festival now in progress among us for a long time to come may be taken as assured, for in addition to the attractions, mystical, sentimental, and social, already mentioned, and apart from the less worthy motives which gain it adherents, it presents a special field for charity which many persons of "cosmopolitan" views are most ready to embrace, and the substantial good it is known to do is a great attraction in itself. It is a rule of Masonry that its members should never "tout" for converts or adherents by proclaiming its virtues. Still its good deeds cannot remain under a bushel. They become, as it were, public property, and an advertisement is in themselves. The more Masonry there is in the world the better. Though some few suspicious monarchs have discountenanced and even persecuted it, and though a jealous Church has excommunicated it, the wiser among mankind have recognized in it a powerful instrument for the advancement of peace and goodwill among men.

A SCHOONER ABANDONED AT SEA.

The steam-ship Celtic, of the White Star Line, which arrived at this port last night, had on board the crew of the schooner Island Belle, of Rockland, Me., abandoned on Jan. 24 in latitude 45° 40', longitude 45° 30'. Capt. Woodman, of the abandoned schooner, says he sailed from St. Johns, N. F., for Boston, with a cargo of salmon and sundries. On Dec. 7, when nine miles south of Halifax, a gale began to blow which lasted until Jan. 24. The schooner lost all her sails and spars, and had a leaky and heavy. On all the provisions were lost. On Jan. 9, Eldridge Doan, of Rockland, the mate, died from exposure; on the 14th, J. E. Dodge, of Santa Cruz, cook, Manuel Koze and John G. Kelley, seamen, also died from frost and exposure. A passenger named J. Allen was the only person left able to assist in saving the vessel, and he had his ribs broken. On Jan. 5, the steam-ship California hove in sight. She sent a boat alongside and took off Mrs. Woodman, the Captain's wife, and her child. On the 24th, the Celtic was sighted and she took off the four persons remaining on the ill-fated schooner. The Island Belle was built at Rockland, in 1867, was of 180 tons burden, and owned by Wright and others of Rockland.

A COSTLY ICICLE.

MANCHESTER, Jan. 28.—In the Supreme Court, yesterday, Lucy Garland obtained a verdict against Nancy Towne for $4,708 damages, for injuries received from an icicle falling upon her head from defendant's building. The suit has been pending since 1873.

CITY AND SUBURBAN NEWS.

NEW-YORK.

The annual reunion of the New-York Wesleyan University Club will take place at No. 260 Madison avenue, to-day at 5:30 P. M.

The great white whale, which has been on exhibition during the past four months, at the New-York Aquarium, died on Saturday evening last.

The one hundred and fortieth anniversary of the birth of Thomas Paine will be commemorated this evening at Science Hall, No. 141 Eighth street.

John Doyle, aged one year, died yesterday from the effects of scalds accidentally received on the 24th inst., at the residence of his parents, No. 188 East Thirteenth street.

A dog, supposed to have been mad, attacked and bit two boys and a man yesterday in the Bowery. The animal was subsequently shot while following a Second avenue car.

Officer Fulmer, of the east side Steam-boat Squad, detected, on Saturday evening, an unknown man in the act of running away in a small boat with a quantity of sail cloth from the ship Gingyle, lying at Pier No. 46 East River. The officer pursued the thief, who abandoned his boat and succeeded in escaping. The boat and its freight were taken in charge by the officer.

Miss Emma Root, a charming vocalist and a benevolent lady, announces that the second in a series of ballad concerts, for the benefit of the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor, will take place at Association Hall, next Friday evening. Miss Root will be assisted by Mme. Bischhi, T. W. Jameson, Otto Soldan, Henry Gait the humorist; Signor Carlo Godey, and Charles A. Caule. The programme of the entertainment is complete with musical gems, and those who attended her first concert, given on Jan. 3, will no doubt patronize the enterprise a second time.

A musical and literary entertainment will be given, under the auspices of the New-York Press Club, at Steinway Hall, on Tuesday, Feb. 6. Among the artists who have volunteered their services on that occasion are Madame Pappenheim; Messrs. William Castle and George Werrenrath, tenors; Mr. Boscovitz, pianist; the New-York Glee and Madrigal Club, and the Mozart and Apollo Clubs. Mark Twain, and the elocutionists, Charles A. Burbank and Charles P. Roberts, will also render some of their specialities, and every assurance is given that the entertainment will be a satisfactory one.

BROOKLYN.

The hat store of John Dickson, of No. 196 Fulton street, was broken into by burglars on Thursday night, and $315 worth of furs were stolen.

Bryan O'Connor of No. 117 Congress street, and Thomas McMahon, of No. 12 Willow place, were arrested yesterday on complaint of their wives on the charge of abandonment.

Mrs. John Rohme, aged 45 years, residing in Canarsie, near Lohman's Hotel, dropped dead on a Broadway car on Saturday afternoon while going from Williamsburg to East New-York. The cause of death was heart-disease.

Detective Price arrested Mary Seery on Thursday last on a charge of stealing $96 from Mary Riley, of No. 230 Navy street. Sixty dollars of the stolen money were found in the prisoner's possession. The complainant refused to prosecute the accused, and she was released by Justice Riley.

NEW-JERSEY.

A sneak-thief stole $150 worth of law books from the office of A. G. Sayres, on Bond street, Newark, on Saturday.

The Essex County Teachers' Association will hold their regular annual meeting in High School Hall, in Orange, on Saturday, Feb. 10.

The Newark bakers have organized to resist the payment of a $10 license fee imposed by an ordinance recently passed by the City Council.

Patrick McGrath, of Newark, recently induced Col. E. L. Livingston to discount a note for $45, purporting to have been signed by Patrick Gilroy. When the note became due Gilroy pronounced it a forgery. McGrath was arrested on Saturday and held for examination.

When William Jewett, a wealthy artist, of Jersey City Heights, committed suicide, it was discovered that he had cut his family off from an inheritance, and had left his estate to Alfred Cox, in whose house he lived. The will had been drawn by William Brinkerhoff, a friend of the family. Jewett was so much under the influence of liquor as to be irresponsible for his act, and Mr. Brinkerhoff drew it in order that the family might have evidence of the circumstances under which it had been drawn. After Jewett's death his wife and daughters contested the will, and the Orphan's Court, Judge Huffman presiding, has just set it aside. The property will now go to the wife and two daughters.

THE BALL SEASON.

Among the numerous social events which are announced to occur during the next few weeks the following are the most prominent:

The Charity Ball will take place at the Academy of Music next Thursday evening. This ball is under the management of the same prominent class of people that has patronized the event in former years, and will undoubtedly prove equally successful.

A charity ball for the benefit of the poor of the Nineteenth Ward will be given to-morrow evening at Terrace Garden. Grafulla's band will provide the music, and a good, substantial supper will be served.

The annual masquerade ball of the German Liederkranz will take place at the Academy of Music on Thursday, Feb. 8.

The Albion Society will give a ball and dinner at Beethoven Hall this evening.

The Merry Centennial Social Club will give a ball at Terrace Garden this evening.

The fifth annual ball of the Empire Coterie will take place at the Germania Assembly Rooms on Monday, Feb. 5.

The Argus Social Club will give a calico ball at Mars' Academy on Monday evening, Feb. 5.

The Old Sixteenth Ward Volunteer Association will hold a reception at the Germania Assembly Rooms on Tuesday evening, Feb. 13.

The annual reception of the Bacuelor's Club will take place at Ferrero's Assembly Rooms, East Fourteenth street, this evening.

The Enterprise Club will give a ball at Pythagoras Hall on Tuesday evening, Feb. 13.

A ball will be given by the George Mitchell Association, at Irving Hall, on Wednesday evening, Feb. 21.

The Americus Coterie will hold a reception at Golden Rule Hall on Monday evening, March 5.

The eleventh annual ball of the "Societe Culinaire Philanthropique de New-York" will be held at Irving Hall on Tuesday evening, Feb. 6.

The seventh annual reception of the M. Cregan Association will take place at Irving Hall on Friday evening, Feb. 9.

The Twenty-second Regiment will hold a reception at its armory in West Fourteenth street next Wednesday evening. Previous to the dancing, a review and dress-parade of the regiment will take place.

The annual ball of the George Linden Association will take place at Walhalla Hall on Friday evening, Feb. 9.

The Martha Washington reception and garden party, in aid of the poor of the City, will be given under the auspices of St. John's Guild at the Academy of Music and Nilsson Hall, on Thursday evening, Feb. 22.

THE STEAMER CROMWELL.

A letter from St. John's, N. F., dated Jan. 19, and addressed to the Toronto Globe, says: "The steamer Cromwell, of the Cromwell Line, plying between New-York and this port, left Halifax for St. John's Jan. 3, and has not since been heard of. Grave apprehensions are felt regarding her safety, as she is now nearly a fortnight overdue. It is said there were 38 steerage passengers on board. These boats made excellent running during the Summer, and did their work remarkably well; but they are not the class of steamers fitted to encounter the storms of Winter on this wild coast. After leaving Halifax the Cromwell encountered some heavy weather, and it is feared her machinery may have broken down. She was but poorly provided with canvas, and it is possible she may have been blown away to the eastward, and is lying somewhere in a disabled condition. She had a full cargo and a large American and Canadian mail on board. It is ominous that no tidings whatever have been heard of her since she sailed from Halifax. Not long since a sailing vessel called the Prude of the West, on her passage from Demerara to St. John's, was blown away by strong westerly winds, and after being given up as lost, brought up at Fayal in the Azores. It is to be hoped the Cromwell may yet be heard of, either from the other side of the Atlantic, or by some other vessel."

OF REGULAR HABITS.

The Cuba Patriot has this story of a remarkably regular Erie Railway man: "Probably there is no class of men more regular in their habits than employes on our railroads. Running their trains as they do, by time, they form habits of the utmost regularity in all that they do. Such habits cannot be too highly commended. But there is one baggage man on the Erie, who, we think, carries that regular habits too far. This man has invariably made it a practice to take his lunch, which he always carries with him, just after his train pulls out of a certain depot. Day in and day out, in Summer and Winter, at this point out comes the lunch basket, and its contents are discussed. No matter how far behind the train may be, our friend will not eat until he reaches his 'eating-point' on the road. His train was some 10 hours late the other day, and he was remonstrated with on this habit; but he telescoped all arguments brought to bear against him by saying 'If one wants to retain good health he wants to be mighty regular in his diet.'"

PERILS OF COASTING.

DANGEROUS SPORT AS PRACTISED IN CONNECTICUT—A SERIOUS ACCIDENT ON FRIDAY NIGHT.

From the New-Haven Palladium, Jan. 22.

The serious and sometimes fatal accidents which have resulted from the use of "double rippers" for sliding down hill in several places in this State, notably Meridian and this city, have not served to warn lovers of this exciting winter sport, and another very serious accident occurred in Preston, near Norwich, last Friday night. Both Norwich and New-London have many young men who are proficient in the management of "double rippers" and within a short time a good-natured rivalry has sprung up between the sliders of the two cities as to the merits of their respective sleds. Week before last a party went down to New-London from Norwich and showed what sort of a sled they had on one of the hills near that sleepy city. Friday afternoon a dozen young gentlemen from New-London went to Norwich to face their rivals on their own ground, Fox's Hill in Preston. They took with them three sleds and two "double rippers." The "double-ripper" is a vehicle made of two heavy sleds headed in the same direction, some distance apart and connected by a plank. One will carry from six to twelve men. At Fox's Hill were gathered from 600 to 900 people, coasters and spectators. The New-London men tried the hill two or three times in the afternoon, to "get the hang of it." It is three-quarters of a mile long, and the sled passes over a succession of hills. At about 7:30 New-London's best "double-ripper," one of great speed, reached the top and began its first downward trip. It was 14 feet long and carried 10 men; F. L. Allen, James Adams, George Edgar, Andrew Wagner, John Coy, Frank Dow, Charles Stiles, Frederic Newcomb, of New-London, and Charles Almy and another gentleman from Norwich. They had gone a quarter of the distance down the hill, and were going faster than a railroad train, when they were overtaken by another sled, the occupants of which pushed them from the track in order to get room to pass. By this action both sleds were pushed from their course in opposite directions. The Norwich sled shortly after capsized, but none of its occupants were injured. Mr. Allen was steering the New London sled. It was going directly for a lamp-post, and Mr. Allen realizing the fatal consequences of such a collision, turned the front sled so as to strike the post sideways. The middle of the sled struck the post with terrific force. The occupants were all thrown off with great violence. Four physicians were at once procured from Norwich. It was found that Mr. Dow had both bones of his right leg broken below the knee. Mr. Coy, clerk of the Crocker house, was seriously injured in the groin, and will be confined to his bed for a week or more. James Adams' right leg was broken and his left hip dislocated. He also received severe internal injuries, and it was feared that he would die. Saturday he was said to be out of danger. He will never, it is believed, entirely recover from his injuries. Charles Stiles had an ankle sprained. Mr. Newcomb had a severe blow on the face. Andrew Wagner and George Edgar had their legs bruised. The others of the party were unhurt. Four of those on the sled, including Mr. Coy, had taken out accident policies Friday before going to Norwich. Nothing about the sled was hurt except the headlights. The accident suspended the sport only temporarily.

Mrs. Farley, a resident at Bloomingdale, while looking at the coasters on Post Hill, in New-London, Friday evening, was struck by a passing sled and thrown to the ground head first. While on the ground she was struck by two or three more sleds. Her head was quite badly cut, and one of her shoulders dislocated. She was carried to a house and taken home on a sled. She did not recover her senses until Saturday morning.

A young daughter of John Sears, of North Grove street, in Waterbury, fractured her right thigh midway between the hip and knee while coasting Thursday afternoon.

Walter Lewis received a very severe wound while sliding on Blackhall street in New-London Friday evening. He was on a low board sled, lying on his stomach, with his feet hooked in the runners of a large sleigh sled in the rear. While turning the corner of Truman street he ran into a sled which neighboring boys were dragging in the opposite direction, striking him in the nose, splitting that organ and badly cutting his face. He was picked up unconscious and taken to his home, where his wound was sewed up.

Julius Palmer, while sliding on the Preston hill, near Norwich, Friday night, ran into a lamp-post and was so hurt that it was necessary to carry him home.

A young man sliding on the jail hill in Norwich Thursday night ran into a hydrant, and was so badly injured that it is feared he cannot live. His name is Donahoe, and he lives at the Falls.

A "double-ripper" with a single sled ran at the foot of Courtland street hill in Bridgeport Friday night. The boy on the small sled was thrown up in the air, and he fell on the "double-ripper" and was carried along with the rest upon it, escaping unhurt.

ICE AT THE BOTTOM OF THE SEA.

Prof. Hind, of St. John, N. B., in a recent paper addressed to his Government gives a description of the remarkable effects of "anchor ice" on the coast of Labrador and Newfoundland. It is thus summarized by a correspondent of the Toronto Globe: "Anchor ice is a form of ice which occurs both in fresh and sea water, and is known to the Germans under the name of 'Grundeis,' to the French Canadians under that of 'Frazoo,' and to the old sedentary seal hun

The New-York Times.

VOL. XXVI.....NO. 7919. NEW-YORK, TUESDAY, JANUARY 30, 1877. PRICE FOUR CENTS.

WASHINGTON.

COMPOSITION OF THE TRIBUNAL.

THE OPPOSITION TO CONKLING IN THE REPUBLICAN CAUCUS—EDMUNDS' EFFORTS TO CONTROL THE NOMINATIONS—EDMUNDS, MORTON, AND FRELINGHUYSEN AGREED ON—THE DEMOCRATIC MEMBERS SENATORS THURMAN AND BAYARD AND REPRESENTATIVES PAYNE, HUNTON AND ABBOTT.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—The Senatorial representation upon the Electoral Commission, as made up in the caucuses to-day, will be Senators Edmunds, Frelinghuysen, Morton, Thurman, and Bayard—a very able delegation. The Democrats seem to have chosen their two men without controversy, any objection before suggested to placing Mr. Bayard on the commission having been withdrawn or suppressed. The Republican caucus had some difficulty which it was agreed should not be mentioned, but which, nevertheless, has become public information, or, at least, it will become so to-morrow.

The Republican Senators met at 10 o'clock this morning, and Senator Sherman immediately moved that (Senators Edmunds, Morton, and McMillan be chosen by the caucus to be the Republican members of the Electoral Commission. The motion was carried, with only a few dissenting votes. The reason for placing Mr. McMillan on the list was, probably, that Mr. Howe had declined to be a member. He had been, in a manner, agreed upon as a member, and his declination, it was declared, should not be allowed to lose the Far West a representative. Senator McMillan is a good men for the place, except that the appointment, no doubt, belonged to an older Senator. The motion was earnestly opposed by Senator Edmunds, who claimed the commission should be made up of three members of the committee that framed the bill. There was considerable discussion of this point, but it did not prevent the passage of the resolution as above noted.

Mr. Edmunds further opposed this choice of the Senators, and positively declined, it is understood, to serve upon the commission unless three members of the committee reporting the bill were selected. It is also said that he spoke of the desirability of securing the services of the distinguished Senator from New-York upon that commission. A motion was then made to reconsider the vote by which the three members were chosen, and it was voted down. There was then a further discussion, and finally the motion to reconsider was renewed, and it was carried. This action was followed by referring the whole subject to a committee of five, composed as follows: Messrs. Cameron of Pennsylvania, Allison, Jones of Nevada, Dorsey, and Boutwell. The committee was to report at an adjourned meeting of the caucus.

The committee sat during the session of the Senate, and it was agreed in the first place, by a vote of 4 to 1, to recommend the caucus to name for the commission Edmunds, Conkling, and Morton. This was reported on the floor of the Senate, and there was privately so much opposition discovered that the committee reconsidered its action and decided to report the first three names on the Senate Committee that reported the bill. This had the effect of substituting Mr. Frelinghuysen for Mr. Conkling.

It is stated that Mr. Conkling positively declined to serve on the commission, and if he did so it simplified the ultimate action of the committee very much, for the continuation of a contest to place him on the commission would have led to further difficulty. The caucus, when it met at 3 o'clock, received the committee's report and soon adopted it.

It cannot be denied that considerable feeling exists and was displayed, but many greatly exaggerated reports are afloat. The struggle was rather quiet than demonstrative, and yet it was none the less determined. It is agreed that the Republicans have obtained in both houses an able and generally satisfactory delegation for the commission. There is no doubt cast upon the Republicanism of any member of it, and no one of those selected would deem it honorable to accept the appointment if he did not seriously believe in the legality and rightfulness of Mr. Hayes' election.

The House Democratic Caucus called for the purpose of selecting three Democrats to serve on the Electoral Commission, was, as usual, not a very harmonious gathering. It met first just after the adjournment of the House this evening, but the attendance was so small that it adjourned to meet to-night at 7:30 o'clock. About 8 o'clock it was called to order again by Mr. Lamar, with 147 Democratic members present. A proposition was made by Mr. Whitthorne to proceed at once to select by ballot three Democratic members to serve on the commission to count the Electoral vote. Mr. Hereford, of West Virginia, here offered a proposition that the caucus not only elect three Democratic members, but also determine whom the Democracy would support as the two Republican members, and that it was the sense of the caucus that Mr. Garfield should not constitute one of the commission on the part of the House. Mr. Hereford supported his proposition with quite a vigorous speech, in which he was very severe on Mr. Garfield, charging him with being the instigator of an intrigue in the Republican caucus to beat Mr. Hoar and elect himself and Mr. Hale. It was even charged that he voted for Hale and against Mr. Hoar. This attempt to assume to dictate to the Republicans of the House whom they must select as their representatives on the commission caused quite a commotion, during which it became very evident that a large number present were very hostile to Mr. Garfield and were ready to resort to almost any measures to defeat him. The tenor of the remarks upon this question were all favorable to the selection of Mr. McCrary, of Iowa, instead of Mr. Garfield, but a motion was made before a vote was reached upon Mr. Hereford's proposition that the caucus first select the three Democratic Representatives before it decide what to do about the Republican representation on the commission, and this motion was carried. It was then proposed that nominations for members of the commission be made, but this was not well received, and a proposition was adopted that each member vote independently for the three candidates of his choice. Out of the 147 votes cast, Payne of Ohio received 69, Hunton of Virginia received 51, Lamar, 31, Tucker, Wood and Cox 23 each, and Proctor Knott 13. The second ballot was much the same as the first, except that there were fewer candidates voted for, and Abbott received a larger number of votes than before, as did Wood, and Payne and Hunton were elected. On the third ballot it became apparent that the contest for the third place was between Wood and Abbott, and Mr. Cox's friends having gone to Wood, the latter received, on this ballot, 52, and Abbott 37. On the fourth, the vote stood—Abbott, 53; Wood, 46; the remainder scattering. On the fifth ballot, Abbott received 75 and Wood 47, and 74 being the number required for a choice, Abbott was declared elected, so that the Democratic representation on the commission stands, Payne of Ohio, Hunton of Virginia, and Abbott of Massachusetts. Wood took his defeat very much to heart, as did his friends, and there was considerable quiet dissatisfaction expressed by several members. During the balloting the proposition of Hereford to take some definite action in relation to Mr. Garfield was quietly talked about among the members, and it was thought that it would not be good policy to take direct party caucus action, but that members might vote against him in open House and thus defeat him, after the election of the Democratic representation on the commission. Mr. Blackburn suggested that, when the roll-call upon the election of the House representation should be had, members who desired to rebuke Mr. Garfield could refuse to vote at all, leaving the House without a quorum voting, and thereby reach the same result as to make a caucus decision against Mr. Garfield. This seemed to be tacitly agreed to, but Mr. Holman made a proposition, which was agreed to, that in the vote in open House for its representation upon the commission, the question as to whether there was or was not a quorum voting should not be raised. This of course defeats Blackburn's honest purposes.

After this question had been disposed of Mr. Randall offered a resolution that if there should be no outside counsel employed to present the Democratic case, a board of managers on the part of the House Democracy be designated to present the case; not only to present the case before the commission, but to direct Democratic action before the joint convention of the two houses. It was suggested that perhaps the commission, being made up of lawyers charged with a specific duty, might not care to have an array of counsel to consume their time, and it was decided to have the board of managers, and, if possible, get them before the High Commission to present the case, and if they refused to hear counsel to have some concerted action before the joint convention of the two houses when the vote was announced, to be matured and and directed by this board of managers It was, however, apparent that most of those present were anxious for the employment of outside counsel at once to look after their case. At 10:30 the caucus adjourned to meet at the call of the Chairman.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

The caucuses of the two houses having selected their candidates to be voted for to-morrow the Electoral Commissioners will consist of the following members: Senators, Messrs. Edmunds, Morton, and Frelinghuysen, Republicans, and Messrs. Thurman and Bayard, Democrats; Representatives, Messrs. Payne, Hunton, and Abbott, Democrats, and Garfield and Hoar, Republicans; Supreme Court Associate Justices Clifford, Strong, Miller, and Field; the fifth member to be elected from among Associate Justices Swayne, Davis, Bradley, and Hunt.

Comments have recently been made respecting Associate Justice Swayne, in connection with the judicial branch of the Electoral Vote Commission, arising out of alleged business relations with Gov. Tilden. There is authority for saying that this gentleman never was engaged in any speculation with Gov. Tilden, nor did they ever own joint or separate interests in stock of the same corporation, or in the same property of any kind, real, personal, or mixed. They were associated with others as counsel in a single railroad case, but that case was closed, and Judge Swayne's connection with it terminated before he went upon the bench in 1862; since that event occurred he has been engaged in no speculation whatever.

Associate Justice Davis, as soon as the Electoral Vote Commission bill had passed both Houses, privately informed some of his friends, who desired to have him placed on the commission as the fifth judicial member, that under no circumstances would he accept that position should it be tendered to him by his associates. He considers it indelicate, after being elected Senator, to take a position which might subject him to criticism, and refuses absolutely to reconsider his determination.

THE PRESIDENT'S OPINION.

HE GIVES HIS REASONS FOR SIGNING THE ELECTORAL VOTE COMMISSION BILL—AN ORDERLY METHOD SECURED—MORE LEGISLATION REQUIRED.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—The following is the President's Message concerning the Electoral bill:

To the Senate of the United States:

I follow the example, heretofore occasionally presented, of communicating in this mode my approval of the act to provide for and regulate the counting of the vote for President and Vice President, and the decision of questions arising thereon, because of my appreciation of the imminent peril to the institutions of the country, from which, in my judgment, the act affords a wise and constitutional means of escape.

For the first time in the history of our country under the Constitution as it now is, a dispute exists with regard to the result of the election of the chief magistrate of the nation. It is understood that upon the disposition of disputes touching the Electoral votes cast at the late election by one or more of the States depends the question whether one or the other of the candidates for the Presidency is the lawful chief magistrate. The importance of having clearly ascertained by a procedure regulated by law which of the two citizens has been elected, and of having the right of this high office recognized and cheerfully agreed to by all the people of the Republic, cannot be overestimated, and leads me to express to Congress and to the nation my great satisfaction at the adoption of a measure that affords an orderly means of decision of a gravely exciting question. While the history of our country in its earlier period shows that the President of the Senate has counted the votes and declared their standing, our whole history shows that in no instance of doubt or dispute has he exercised the power of deciding, and that the two houses of Congress have disposed of all such doubts and disputes, although in no instance hitherto have they been such that their decision could essentially have affected the result. For the first time, then, the Government of the United States is now brought to meet the question as one vital to the result, and this under conditions not the best calculated to produce an agreement or to induce calm feeling in the several branches of the Government or among the people of the country. In a case where, as now, the result is involved, it is the highest duty of the law-making power to provide in advance a constitutional, orderly, and just method of executing the Constitution in this most interesting and critical of its provisions. The doing so, far from being a compromise of rights, is an enforcement of right and an execution of powers conferred by the Constitution on Congress. I think that this orderly method has been secured by the bill, which, appealing to the Constitution and the law as the guide in ascertaining rights, provides a means of deciding questions of single returns, through the direct action of Congress, and in respect to double returns by a tribunal of inquiry whose decisions shall stand unless both houses of Congress shall concur in determining otherwise, thus securing a definite disposition of all questions of dispute in whatever aspect they may arise. With or without this law, as all of the States have voted, and as a tie vote is impossible, it must be that one of the two candidates has been elected, and it would be deplorable to witness an irregular controversy as to which of the two should receive, or which should continue to hold, the office.

In all periods of history, controversies have arisen as to the succession or choice of the chiefs of States, and no party or citizen loving their country and its free institutions can sacrifice too much of mere feeling in preserving, through the upright course of law, their country from the smallest danger to its peace on such an occasion, and it cannot be impressed too firmly on the hearts of all the people that true liberty and real progress can exist only through a cheerful adherence to constitutional law. The bill purports to provide only for the settlement of questions arising from the recent election. The fact that such questions can arise demonstrates the necessity, which I cannot doubt will before long be supplied, of permanent general legislation to meet cases which have not been contemplated in the Constitution or laws of the country. The bill may not be perfect, and its provisions may not be such as would be best applicable to all future occasions, but it is calculated to meet the present condition of the questions and of the country. The country is agitated; it needs aid; it desires peace and quiet and harmony between all parties and all sections. Its industries are arrested, labor unemployed, capital idle, and enterprise paralyzed, by reason of the doubt and anxiety attending the uncertainty of a double claim to the chief magistracy of the nation. It wants to be assured that the result of the election will be accepted without resistance from the supporters of the disappointed candidate, and that its highest officer shall not hold his place with a questioned title of right.

Believing that the bill will secure these ends, I give it my signature. U. S. GRANT.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, Jan. 29, 1877.

SENATOR CONKLING'S COMPROMISE.

THE PUBLIC MAY NOW BREATHE FREE AGAIN—FOR THE SENATOR'S SPEECH WILL BE PRINTED IN TO-DAY'S RECORD—AND IT WILL APPEAR ON THE FIRST PAGE—A RESULT WHICH WAS BROUGHT ABOUT NOT WITHOUT APPEAL TO DEMOCRATIC PATRIOTISM.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—There has been a great deal of inquiry for Senator Conkling's speech on the Compromise bill, but it has not yet appeared in the Record. He, of course, held it back to revise it. It is now divulged that the printing of the speech has been a subject of negotiation and compromise, and with the arrangements of it several great men have been connected. In fact, the affair is nearly as distinguished as the Compromise bill itself. Mr. Conkling, it seems, at last became quite ready to have his speech given to the public in to-morrow's Record, and he desired to wait no longer, and, above all things, he must have it begun on the first page. He learned to his sorrow that a great man of the House, even Gov. Walker of Virginia, had been promised the first page for to-morrow, and another great man, William Springer, from Illinois, had been promised the first page for the next day. Then Senator Withers was made a negotiating agent, and secured, it is understood, a compromise which will be satisfactory to the country. It is said to contain the following provisions: That Mr. Conkling's speech is to appear on the first page of the Congressional Record to-morrow, Gov. Walker's on Wednesday, and Mr. Springer's on Thursday.

A PLOT TO DEFRAUD BONDHOLDERS.

THE INTEREST DUE ON REGISTERED BONDS SOMETIMES NEGLECTED—WHICH FACT HAS BEEN DISCOVERED BY CERTAIN SHARPERS—A SYSTEMATIC EFFORT TO SECURE POSSESSION OF OTHER PEOPLE'S MONEY—A CONSPIRACY BY NO MEANS CREDITABLE TO ALL PARTIES IMPLICATED.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—Some discoveries have just been made by Treasury officials in connection with the collection of interest on United States registered bonds, which promise to lead to developments that may seriously compromise some Treasury officials and certain professional attorneys who have been collecting interest upon powers of attorney. Bonds are registered with the department in order to secure the holders against loss, the interest on such bonds being payable only to the parties whose names are on the face of the bonds, or their lawful attorneys. When registered bonds are sold by the holders they are transferred to the purchasers on the books of the department, somewhat in the same manner that stock is transferred on the books of a corporation. Coupon bonds may be converted into registered bonds at the option of the holder. These transactions are guarded with the same care that marks the conduct of business between a bank and its customers, so as to preclude the possibility of dishonest persons obtaining information which might enable them to make claim for accrued interest. The character and extent of the business done by the Government in issuing bonds makes it impossible for the department to indentify every holder of registered bonds, and therefore the protection of the Government, as well as the owners of bonds, makes it necessary that particular care should be observed in guarding all information concerning the names of owners of registered bonds, and all matters relating to the bonds themselves. It frequently happens, from a variety of causes, such as the death of the holders, protracted absence from the country, or ignorance of the fact, that interest is nearly accrued at the time of effecting a sale and transfer of registered bonds. That interest due is not claimed, and this unclaimed interest has accumulated until it now aggregates between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000.

It can readily be understood how so large a sum lying unclaimed in the vaults of the Treasury would tempt the cupidity and tax the ingenuity of the numerous sharpers who are constantly hanging about the executive departments, and who are only kept from making a raid upon it by their inability to obtain the names of those to whose credit unclaimed interest appears in the books of the department, and such other information touching the number and amount of the bonds as would be necessary to enable them to present a reasonable claim for payment. It has just been ascertained, however, that this information, which was thought to be secure within the walls of the Treasury Department, has been known to certain New-York parties, who have been operating upon it for some time. How they obtained this information has not yet been ascertained. It could hardly have been obtained without collusion with officials here, or those at the Sub-Treasury in New-York, at which point the bulk of the interest on Government loans is disbursed. When interest accrues on registered bonds schedules containing the names of bondholders and the amounts to be paid are made out at the department and forwarded to the several points where payment is to be made. At the expiration of six months the Sub-Treasurers make a report to the department, forwarding at the same time schedules of interest unclaimed, payment of which is then only made from Washington to the claimants, or their legal representatives, upon properly executed power of attorney.

Within a few weeks Henry M. Williams, who is under bonds for alleged complicity in the Lawrence smuggling cases at New-York, presented a power of attorney to the United States Treasurer from various parties to collect unclaimed interest, and was paid in the regular way. After payment had been made it seems some of the parties for whom Williams claimed to act, and whose interest he succeeded in collecting, presented claims for the interest due them, which revealed the fact that Williams had acted without their authority. Williams was at once notified of this demand for payment by the rightful owners, and on Saturday last he returned to Treasurer Wyman $1,100 of the amount thus collected by him, that being the amount claimed by the parties who denied all knowledge of Williams, and repudiates his authority to act for them. It will be seen from the manner of transacting this business that Williams could only have obtained the information necessary to enable him to collect this money from the records of the department, aided by the officials charged with the custody of the records. Being supplied with the necessary information, it is supposed those who have been engaged in this business would hunt up a man bearing the same name as that which appears on the face of the bond, or induce some one to represent himself as the rightful owner, obtain power of attorney describing the bonds upon which interest was due, and the amount of interest due, and, thus equipped, present themselves at the Treasury Department and obtain payment. How far this business has extended cannot now be ascertained, but it is feared that it has been practiced by several parties for some time past, although the amount obtained is believed to be comparatively small. Williams claims that he has been the victim; that the parties who furnished him power of attorney represented they were the rightful owners of the bonds, and that having made the amount good to the Government immediately upon learning of the facts, he is the loser to that extent. This, however, seems incredible, because it is not probable that those for whom he claims to have acted would be able to obtain such details with reference to the bonds, and the amount of interest accrued and unpaid thereon, as would enable them to present properly drawn vouchers for payment.

The attention of Secretary Morrill has been directed to the matter, and an investigation is now being made which, it is hoped, will expose those who have been engaged in this fraudulent business. So far as is now known, the Treasury has sustained no losses from these transactions.

EXPULSION OF THE LOBBYISTS.

THE TEXAS-PACIFIC CREW AND SOME MINOR VULTURES COMPELLED TO LEAVE THE FLOOR OF THE HOUSE.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—The members of a great lobby were ingloriously driven from the floor of the House to-day for the first time in many months. The area behind the members' seats was for a time filled to overflowing, and the aisles and seats themselves were invaded, chiefly by the Texas-Pacific lobby, but also by members of two or three other smaller lobbies. The Texas Pacific people expected the motion would be made to-day to take their bill from the bottom of the calendar of the Committee of the Whole, and assign for it a day for consideration This motion was ultimately kept out of the House by the rule which gave to-day to the Committee on the District of Columbia. Mr. Durham, of Kentucky, demanded the reading of the rule regulating admissions to the floor, and said one could not stir 20 feet from the Speaker's desk in any part of the House without running against a half-dozen lobbyists. The order was given to clear the floor of all persons not authorized to be upon it, and the sleek solicitors of Congressmen's votes were incontinently turned out. Some of them had to be earnestly reminded of the order, and all made violent protests.

THE FLORIDA ELECTION.

REPORT OF THE SENATE SUB-COMMITTEE—THE MAJORITY FOR HAYES AND WHEELER 45, ADMITTING ALL DEMOCRATIC FRAUDS—CORRECTED RETURNS SHOW 930 MAJORITY FOR HAYES AND WHEELER—DEMOCRATIC FRAUD AND INTIMIDATION.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—Senator Sargent today submitted to the Senate the report of the special committee of that body appointed to investigate the election matters in Florida. It covers 100 foolscap pages, and is very comprehensive in regard both to the law and the facts. After reciting the resolutions under which the committee acted, and, setting out the Election law of Florida, it proceeds to state and discuss the action of the State Canvassing Board, showing that it made a preliminary canvass of the returns on their face, giving to the Hayes Electors 45 majority. The board then commenced to hear contests, holding its sessions in public. The committee say that the course subsequently pursued by the board in this matter was exactly in accordance with its practice in 1874, when by the written advice of the Democratic Attorney General and the Democratic lawyers, it went behind the returns for the benefit of the Democratic Party. The result of this canvass was 930 majority for the Hayes Electors. The committee argue at length that this count was legal and constitutional, and that the board had a right to seek the true vote behind the returns under the statute which created it. They say "a statute enacted pro bono publico to prevent election frauds should be beneficially construed." The report then goes on to argue that the finding of the board is conclusive and cannot be revised by a recanvass or reached by a writ of quo warranto, (because the Electors are functus officio,) or reversed by Congress, because the Constitution lodges the whole power in the State. A great many authorities are cited to sustain these positions. A distinction is drawn, however, in the case of the Ministerial certificate of a Governor, who is not a member of the board and has no power to decide anything. It is argued that Congress may look behind his certificate to ascertain facts, as a court may go behind the mere ministerial certificate of a clerk purporting to verify a judgment, to see what the judgment really is; but if Congress can revise the action of the board, it must go to the bottom of the poll and ascertain the true vote in all the contested counties. It would have to go as far as a court in a quo warranto proceeding. Such an attempt would not be made, for there is not time, and anything less would be unjust; for going to the bottom of the poll the committee say, would show, according to the evidence taken by them, that the Hayes Electors had more than 950 majority. The report then proceeds to discuss the testimony in detail.

In Alachua County the committee examined the individual voters at both the Archer (Nos. 1 and 2) Precincts, and the report asserts that instead of a Republican fraud, there was a Democratic fraud of over 100 votes in those precincts. The committee quote largely from the testimony and present a considerable amount of argument in support of this assertion. They also present evidence to show that a railroad train of passengers voted the Tilden ticket in Waldo Precinct, although citizens of other States. In regard to Baker and Duval Counties the committee say it is shown that the State Board decided that the only legal return before them from Baker County was that of the County Judge and his associates; that they so decided the first day, and simply adhered to that decision in the recanvass made under the order of the Supreme Court. They, however, previous to that order, went to the precinct returns for the true vote, but when the court made its order they recurred to the return which they had first adjudged to be the only legal one. The committee claim to show that the County Clerk's paper was in no sense a return, and had not at any time been treated as such, and that it could not be so treated because the persons necessary to make a legal canvass were not present, as they were in Duval County, which the Democrats insist is a parallel case. The committee, however, claim to make it very apparent that there is a vital difference between the two cases, and say: "If the face of the returns is to rule, it should rule in Baker County where, at most there was misguided zeal, as well as in Jackson, where there was premeditated rascality. Counting all returns on their face, and taking even the pretended return made by the County Clerk of Baker, will still leave Hayes a small majority."

The committee say they carefully examined into the election in Duval County, and found it honest, but in Jackson County they found evidence of 250 fraudulent Democratic votes, which they proceed to set forth very fully. They state that they found many indications of fraud and much intimidation of voters at Precinct No. 3, Key West, in Monroe County. In Manitee County they say the election was a Democratic farce. In Hamilton County the returns of the Electoral vote were interlined into the returns of one precinct several days after they were signed and delivered to the County Clerk, and unauthorized persons made the canvass in another precinct, the officers signing the returns having no personal knowledge of their correctness. In Jefferson and Columbia Counties there was violent intimidation of colored voters, and social and business proscription in many counties. A system of marked tickets was employed to compel colored men to vote the Democratic ticket in various counties, the details of which are fully set out. Other counties and topics are also discussed in detail.

The report was adopted by all the Republican members of the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

Mr. Cooper gave notice that he will hereafter submit a dissenting report in behalf of the Democratic minority.

LOOKING UP THE EVIDENCE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—The Committee on the Powers, Privileges, and Duties of the House in counting the Electoral vote to-day examined William Holliday, one of the Democratic Electors at Large of the State of Virginia. He had the appointment of Centennial Commissioner, but, although he did not consider that to be a public office in the sense of the Constitution, he did not attend the College of Electors. His place was filled in the college by the election of H. C. Allen. He could not say what number of persons voted for him with a knowledge of his being a Centennial Commissioner, and did not believe any voter thought he was disqualified as an Elector in consequence of his being a Centennial Commissioner.

Gen. D. M. Frost of Missouri testified that he had been an officer in the Army, but resigned in 1853 as a First Lieutenant; he was appointed a Democratic Elector and received a certificate of the same; he did not take his seat in the Electoral College, his place having been filled by the selection of Lógrand Atwood, in accordance with the law of Missouri; he was engaged in the rebellion and received a pardon from President Johnson; while in the Army he never took an oath to support the Constitution, but while a cadet at West Point he took the customary oath to serve the United States for a certain period of time; the question was never raised, so far as he was aware, that any voter thought or knew that he was disqualified as an Elector; he fully complied with all the conditions of the pardon.

The committee recalled Louis M. Cenner, of the Louisiana Returning Board. Mr. Lawrence objected to his further examination on the ground that they had no right to produce a witness in the custody of the Sergeant at Arms for contempt without the consent of the House.

Mr. Lawrence's objection was overruled, four against three. Mr. Kenner was then interrogated as to the return from Vernon Parish. He had no doubt of the originality of the paper presented to him, on which he had written the word "compile." Since Saturday he had not thought of why 178 votes had been transferred from the Tilden to the Hayes side. He knew of nothing done in relation to those returns in the board in his presence.

The Louisiana Committee sent for the papers upon which Mr. Kenner's examination was based, in order to examine the witness who had brought them from New-Orleans, and who promises to explain the charges. The committee adjourned for an hour to hear the evidence of the witness alluded to before the Louisiana Committee.

Mr. Littlefield, one of the Clerks of the Louisiana Returning Board, was examined to-day by Mr. Morrison's Committee, and was asked, among others, the following questions:

Did the board, or any member thereof, give directions to the clerks other than by written memoranda, concerning the returns?

Did any member of the board ask you to perform any duty in relation to the returns from any parish?

Do you know of your own knowledge or information of any instruction from a member or members of the board concerning the alteration of the records as they originally came to the Returning Board?

Did you tabulate or perform any duty in connection with the returns from Vernon Parish?

Did not somebody direct you to change the vote of Vernon Parish?

The witness refused to answer all the above questions, and he also refused to answer the question whether the paper shown to him was the original of the returns from Vernon Parish.

Q.—Did you not abstract this paper from the files of the Returning Board at New-Orleans? A.—I did not.

Q.—Do you know how this paper came here? A.—I do not. The witness refused to answer the questions whether a change was directed by any member of the Returning Board, transferring the Democratic vote to the Republican side, and whether the change was not made before the paper passed out of the hands of the Returning Board.

York A. Wood ward, one of the Clerks of the Returning Board, testified that he did not know of any instructions to the clerks in relation to addition, tabulation, and compilation other than the instructions written on the returns themselves, although suggestions might have been made by the members of the board; he did not know by conversation or otherwise of a purpose on the part of any members of the board or other leading officials connected with the vote of having it come out in a particular way. He could give no explanation as to the change of the record of the votes in Vernon Parish.

J. H. Murphy, of Davenport, Iowa, testified that, having received a telegram in December, he went, in pursuance of the request contained therein, to St. Louis, and there met Messrs. Stearns and Littlefield. Mr. Littlefield showed him a return from Vernon Parish for inspection, which the witness handed back to him. Subsequently, Mr. Stearns handed the same paper to the witness. No money consideration was paid by the latter for the paper. Mr. Littlefield made a statement to the witness about this return, and the witness repaired to Springfield to consult with Gov. Palmer on the subject. Mr. Littlefield's statement was that while the Returning Board was in secret session Gov. Wells came into the clerk's room, Littlefield being at his own desk with the returns from Vernon Parish before him. Gov. Wells requested Littlefield to transpose the vote of the Second and Ninth Precincts to the other side, and the reason assigned by him was that such transposition would elect the Republican candidates for District Judge and District Attorney of that district. Littlefield told witness that such transposition was accordingly made by him. After Mr. Morrison's committee had called Gov. Wells to testify, Wells said to Littlefield that there being some annoyance about the Parish of Vernon, there would have to be some change, and asked Mr. Littlefield whether he could not figure up and see whether he could not make 178 votes for those candidates. Mr. Littlefield said he could do it by altering three other precincts, one, seven, and ten.

"Very well," said Gov. Wells, "make up the record and we will have the affidavits prepared." Wells told him to make a copy, and certain tally-sheets were then destroyed by Gov. Wells. The witness went to New-Orleans to verify the statement which was repeated by the witness to Gov. Palmer. The witness said he was present in the committee-room during the time that Littlefield was here. Littlefield testified that he never received any instructions from Gov. Wells, but he informed the witness to the contrary, saying that Wells did so instruct him.

The Committee on Powers, Privileges, and Duties of the House in counting the Electoral vote were in session to-day, but did not reach any decision. They will meet to-morrow.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—The United States Treasurer will send to the different Sub-Treasurers throughout the country photographic copies of the counterfeit $1,000 note recently discovered, and also a photographic copy of the genuine note. The counterfeit note in possession of the department has the appearance of having been oiled. Between the genuine and the counterfeit notes themselves there is not a very great difference in general appearance; one prominent point of difference is in the terminal flourish of the signature.

Taylor G. Ewing and Hans Hanson were to-day each appointed Revenue Storekeeper and Gauger for the Fifth District of Tennessee, and William H. Wadsworth, Jr., Gauger for the Ninth District of Kentucky. The receipts from internal revenue to-day were $649,035 76, and from Customs $344,345 75.

The following were the balances in the United States Treasury at the closing hour to-day: Currency, $8,777,477; special deposit of legal tenders for the redemption of certificates of deposit, $32,620,000; coin, including $53,534,800 in coin certificates, $87,442,187; outstanding legal tenders, $366,055,084.

The Senate in executive session confirmed the following nominations to-day: Ellis Spear to be Commissioner of Patents, Harris P. Hurst to be Collector at Pearl River, Miss.; James Mitward, of New-York, to be United States Consul at Ghent; William T. Hughes to be Indian Agent at Grand River Agency, Dakota. Postmasters—John A. Shipman at Springfield, Ohio; B. Neall at Eaton, Ohio; J. E. Johnson at Warsaw, Ill.; B. Swaze at Pekin, Ill.; C. W. Ladu, Clifton Springs, N. Y.; D. Wiggans, Greenport, N. Y., and E. A. Willard, Bristol, Tenn.

The extradition treaty between the United States and Spain was sent to the Senate by the President for ratification four days ago. As heretofore stated, it is like all other extradition treaties, containing no new principles, but embraces numerous specified offenses for which persons accused of crime may be surrendered to the respective countries on the required proofs.

There is not a particle of truth in the statement recently made that the Spanish Government is in negotiation with the Cuban insurgents with a view to grant them autonomy or self-government. On the contrary, Spain occupies the same position as heretofore with regard to the affairs of Cuba, with no probability whatever of changing it.

A false rumor gained currency at the Capitol today that Representative Alexander H. Stephens was dead. He is quite ill, it is true, from a laryngeal cough and neuralgia in the side, producing difficult and painful expectoration, but he was in no immediate danger to-night at 10 o'clock, as his physicians, Drs. Walsh, Hall, and Garrett, have assured both him and his friends.

The House special committee, of which Mr Wood, of New-York, is Chairman, which was appointed to report whether the President has employed troops in Virginia, South Carolina, Florida, and Louisiana since the first day of last August without constitutional warrant, held their first meeting to-day. Nothing was done except to authorize the Chairman to appoint four sub-committees of three members each to examine the documents transmitted by the President in regard to these States respectively, and report to the full committee when it is again called.

Mr. Gatchell, the new Superintendent of Police, reported to the Police Board to-day that he had found 17 suspected gambling-houses, 71 houses of ill-fame, 176 places where liquor is sold without a license, and 25 assignation-houses. He has expressed his determination to rid the city of these places, and will commence movements in this direction immediately. William J. Murtagh has resigned the position of Police Commissioner, and Ira G. Kimball has received an appointment in his stead.

At midnight Mr. Stephens was reported in a comparatively comfortable condition, with no immediate danger of a fatal result.

A rumor prevailed to-night that Messrs. Shellabarger and Wilson, attorneys for the members of the Returning Board of Louisiana now in contempt of the House of Representatives, had made application for a writ of habeas corpus, the return for which was fixed for to-morrow. There seems to be no doubt that the application was made to one of the Judges of the Supreme Court of this district, but up to a very late hour the Clerk of the court had not issued a writ. Chief Justice Carter, it is believed, was applied to and refused to grant the writ.

SOUTH CAROLINA GOVERNORSHIP.

DECISION OF JUDGE CARPENTER, OF THE CIRCUIT COURT—CHAMBERLAIN NOT YET LEGALLY INSTALLED BUT LAWFULLY HOLDING TILL HIS SUCCESSOR IS INSTALLED—WADE HAMPTON NOT LEGALLY INSTALLED.

COLUMBIA, Jan. 29.—Circuit Judge Carpenter rendered the following decision on his return from Washington to-day:

First—I find, therefore, as conclusions of law, that D. H. Chamberlain was not, on the 7th of December last, legally installed as Governor of South Carolina.

Second—Wade Hampton was not, on the 14th day of December, 1876, legally installed into the office of Governor of said State.

Third—The attempted installation of D. H. Chamberlain being illegal and void, it did not operate in law as a resignation of the office as Governor which he held at that time, as by the Constitution the Governor holds his office for two years, and until his successor is chosen and qualified, and as there has been no legal qualification of his successor, D. H. Chamberlain is lawfully in the possession of the executive office, and entitled to discharge the functions of the same until such qualification takes place.

A case similar to one that induced the above is now pending in the Supreme Court.

EFFECTS OF DEMOCRATIC VIOLENCE.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

NORFOLK, Jan. 29.—John T. Dezendorf, who is the Appraiser of Merchandise in this district, was taken suddenly ill last night while on a visit to a friend. It will be remembered that he suffered almost fatal injuries by being mobbed after a Republican meeting in Portsmouth in November last by a party of Portsmouth Democrats. Mr. Dezendorf has not been in health since the outrage.

THE COLLECTOR OF NORFOLK, VA.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

NORFOLK, Jan. 29.—The appointment of Major John A. Braxton as Collector of this port has caused objection on the part of some Republicans who think that a gentleman from this district should be nominated. A large number of the Republicans in the county have signed a petition in behalf of Major Braxton, who is strongly indorsed by John S. Mosby, Judge W. Hughes, and many staunch Republicans of the State, who approve of native representation and open ranks to all comers. Major John S. Braxton is from Richmond County, is a great grandson of Carter Braxton, a signer of the Declaration of Independence. During the war he served as Major of the Fifteenth Virgina Cavalry, and when the war was over used all his influence to secure the reconstruction of the State. He is an earnest Republican, and accepted the issues of the war in good faith.

Mr. Braxton was confirmed as Collector of Norfolk and Portsmouth to-day by the Senate.

RAILROAD AFFAIRS.

MIDDLETOWN, Jan. 29.—The difficulty between Granger Stevens, of the New-York and Midland Railroad, and the town of Wawarsing, Ulster County, about taxes, has been settled. The citizens of Ellenville, at a public meeting, subscribed $1,000 of the $1,400 of taxes. The running of trains will be resumed to-morrow.

A VAST SCHEME OF FRAUD.

IMPORTERS AND CONSULS GUILTY.

A CONSPIRACY FOR ROBBING THE GOVERNMENT OF DUTIES—A SPECIAL AGENT VISITS EUROPE AND PROCURES IMPORTANT EVIDENCE—PROMINENT MERCHANTS IN MANY CITIES TO BE PROSECUTED AND AMERICAN CONSULS TO BE DISMISSED IN DISGRACE.

Many fraudulent schemes by which the Customs Revenue of the United States has been deprived of immense sums of money have been discovered during the past three years, and the participants in them punished; but, within a short time, one of greater magnitude than all the others, conceived with more skill, and pursued with more boldness, has been unveiled, and steps are now being taken to punish the merchants concerned in it, and their various accomplices. Custom-house officers have for several years been convinced that a vast system of fraud by false invoices was being carried on by importers doing business in this City, and in other trade centres of the country. Certain firms in this City, Boston, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Chicago, and St. Louis have been set down as fraudulent importers; yet nothing of the nature of legal proof of these things could be obtained. Careful and repeated investigation, however, proved to the satisfaction of the authorities that an association existed, and indicated, also, that this association had members in most of the principal cities of Europe, and agents even among the revenue officials. When the great frauds committed by Lawrence and his accomplices were exposed, it was definitely ascertained that certain of our Consuls were leagued with dishonest merchants, and that with their aid goods exported to this country were undervalued, and invoices falsified so adroitly that detection was almost impossible. The Treasury Department was informed last Spring of the facts which had been gathered, but from various causes no steps could be taken at the time to probe the matter to the bottom.

When Secretary Morrill entered upon his duties he soon settled upon a plan of action. Having arranged all the facts in his possession pointing toward dishonesty on the part of American Consuls in Europe, he communicated them to the State Department, and asked that an agent be sent abroad to look into the affairs of the various Consulates. Secretary Fish selected Mr. Arthur B. Wood, Chief of the Consulate Bureau of the State Department, to go to Europe secretly and make a rigid inquiry into the affairs of our Consulates in the principal seaports of Great Britain, France, and Germany. Mr. Wood left New-York in August last, and upon arriving began his investigations without delay. As soon as he appeared at some of the Consulates he discovered evidences of alarm on the part of the State Department agents in charge of them, while at others he was met blandly and recognized before he announced his business. From this latter circumstance

LAW REPORTS.

THE LIABILITY OF STOCKHOLDERS.

THEY ARE NOT TO BE HELD RESPONSIBLE FOR THE DEBTS OF A CORPORATION UNTIL THE REMEDIES AGAINST THE CORPORATION ARE EXHAUSTED.

Judge Van Hoesen, in the General Term of the Court of Common Pleas, yesterday rendered a decision in the case of Joseph Agate against Samuel Edgar. The suit was brought against the defendant as a stockholder of the Manhattan Sewing Machine Company, to recover $1,000 for rent due by the company. The capital stock of the company was not paid in. The defendant owns $1,000 of such capital stock. Two judgments were recovered by the plaintiff against the company in the Marine Court, and executions on these judgments were issued to a City Marshal. The judgments have never been docketed in the County Clerk's office, and no execution has ever been issued to the Sheriff. The question as to the defendant's liability depended on whether the latter's defense was good, namely, that the execution was issued only to a City Marshal, who has not the power to levy upon real estate, so that it cannot be said that the remedy against the corporation has been exhausted. Judge Van Hoesen in his opinion says: "It is doubtful if any execution at all could be issued against a corporation in order to charge a stockholder who, when the action is brought against him for the purpose of fixing his liability, holds the stock which he owned at the time the obligation which is sued upon was incurred by the corporation. A stockholder who has not parted with his shares may stand in a different position from one who has ceased to be a stockholder. I am inclined, however, to adopt in this case the construction which Judge Daniels placed upon section 24, chapter 40 of the laws of 1848, * * * and to hold that an execution must be issued against the corporation, and be returned unsatisfied, before an action against a stockholder will lie. If an execution be at all necessary, it seems to me to be proper to require that it should run against real as well as against personal property. The object of the statute is to compel creditors to exhaust the property of the corporation before they harass the stockholders by bringing their individual effects. A mining company may have acres of valuable lands and plenty of machinery so connected with the soil as to be part of the realty, but yet be without portable property subject to seizure by a Constable with a common execution. Such a corporation is not insolvent. Its stockholders are not cheating its creditors by withholding from it moneys which they ought to turn into its treasury for the shares they hold. The trouble is not of their creation. It arises simply from the perverseness of the creditor, who will not docket his judgment, but will insist on putting an unofficial process into the hands of an official whom the law prohibits from levying upon real estate. A case such as I suggest may easily occur, and I think the true rule is to require that an execution be issued to the Sheriff before an action against a stockholder shall be maintained. I think the complaint should be dismissed."

SUING A RAILROAD COMPANY.

The suit of John S. Buckley against the Western Railroad Company was made the subject of a decision by Judge Joseph F. Daly, in the Special Term of the Court of Common Pleas, yesterday. The action was brought to recover the amount of a draft for $1,983 55, made to one H. H. Given for his services on the defendants' road, and which was assigned by Given to the plaintiff. The draft was accepted by the company's Secretary in this City, but the payment of the amount was afterward refused. In answer, the company alleged that the plaintiff, if he ever became the owner of the draft became such owner long after it was due and with full knowledge that there was a defense to the same and that the company had refused to pay it. H. H. Given, the defendants said, had been the Superintendent of the eastern division of their road in the United States of Colombia for six months and upward prior to the giving of the draft, and during that time had the control of the disbursement of their funds. At the time of making the draft, they alleged, they believed the amount of it was due to Given for his services. They discovered subsequently that Given was largely indebted to them, and had obtained the draft upon false representations. They asked to be allowed to offset their claim against Given against the amount of the draft. The plaintiff made a motion to strike out the defense, claiming that it was put in merely for delay, and that the defendants had failed to furnish a bill of particulars of their counter-claim. The defendants, however, set up, in reply to this, that the items of the bill of particulars would have to be sent from the United States of Colombia. This latter country has been the scene of revolutions, and communication had been interrupted. It appeared, however, from the statement of a clerk in the Post Office, that this was not the case. Judge Daly granted the motion to strike out the defense, unless the defendants serve the bill of particulars within 20 days.

ORDERED TO SURRENDER KEYS.

John Campbell made complaint to Judge Spear, in the Special Term of the Superior Court, yesterday, against Andrew Billings and William E. Wheelock. The plaintiff says the defendants are piano makers in West 13th Street, and that he is a varnisher and polisher of pianos. On May 1, 1876, he rented from the defendants the third and fourth floors of a building in the rear of their factory, including the right to use a passage-way from the street, and to use a hoist or elevator on the premises. He paid his rent, including the installment due for the present month. The defendants, however, on the 3d inst., took away from him the key to the door of the passage-way. He remonstrated with them, but to no avail. He then brought a locksmith to the place, who fitted a key to the door, but the defendants took away the key from the locksmith and threatened to have the latter arrested. When customers sent materials to the plaintiff, the defendants threw them into the street. They also refused to allow the plaintiff to use the hoist. The plaintiff seeks $5,000 damages and an injunction. In consequence, Judge Spear yesterday directed the defendants to furnish to the plaintiff the key to the front outside door opening from the street, also the key to a side door leading to the passage-way, and the key to the hoist, or elevator, and to permit the plaintiff to use the same. The plaintiff and materials for him are also to be permitted to have free ingress and egress.

A TOBACCO TRANSACTION.

Judge Van Hoesen, in the Court of Common Pleas, yesterday heard argument on a motion to vacate an order of arrest against the defendants in the case of Felipe Fuentes against J. M. Mayorga & Co. The plaintiff sues to recover $1,221 83 for tobacco consigned by him from Cuba to the defendants in this City in February, 1875. The tobacco was sold, but plaintiff says he never received the proceeds of sale. The defendants, in their answer, assert that the plaintiff has been paid the amount due to him. The shipment of tobacco, they say, was through the defendant, José Huertamendia, who is a brother-in-law of the plaintiff, and is also one of the firm of J. M. Mayorga & Co. Huertamendia resides in Havana, Cuba, and came to this City, the other defendants say, in January, 1876, and then rendered his statement of accounts to them in writing. In this statement he credited himself with having paid the plaintiff's claim, and charged, in turn, his partners should pay him back the amount. They have refused to do until there should be an accounting. He then brought a suit, and by means of an injunction, tied up their business, and, as claimed by his co-defendants, caused Fuentes to bring this action, which is really brought for Huertamendia's interest. The defendants were arrested in the action, and judgment was obtained against them. They now move to set aside the order of arrest. Judge Van Hoesen reserved his decision.

THE DISMISSAL OF AN APPEAL.

The case of John Wanner against Auguste Menard was recently appealed from a District Court to the General Term of the Court of Common Pleas, where after argument a judgment in favor of the plaintiff was affirmed. Shortly afterward W. H. Devlin, who, it is claimed, was the plaintiff's attorney, but who pretended to be acting in his behalf, went before the General Term and caused the judgment of affirmance to be opened on payment of $10 costs. The judgment was then reversed. The attorney for the plaintiff made these allegations in an affidavit to Judge Joseph F. Daly, in the Court of Common Pleas, and asked the plaintiff's cause restored to the calendar and the judgment of reversal set aside. This Judge Daly denied yesterday, saying that Devlin, he thought, had authority to represent the plaintiff on the appeal, but if he the latter has his remedy in an action against Devlin. If Devlin had no authority to act, Judge Daly says he trusts the matter will be brought to the attention of the Supreme Court.

COURT OF APPEALS.

ALBANY, Jan. 29.—In the Court of Appeals to-day the following business was transacted: No. 86—Stone vs. Browning; argued by George F. Comstock for appellant and William M. Evarts for respondent. No. 183—Harrison vs. Tinker; passed. No. 185—Bloomer vs. Morse; argued by W. J. Groot for appellant and T. F. Bush for respondent.

The following is the Court of Appeals day calendar for Tuesday, Jan. 30: Nos. 186, 187, 183, 107, 171, 146, 164, and 191.

SEIZING A GAMBLING STAKE.

Henry Opp, of No. 264 Greenwich street, formerly a wealthy butcher in Washington Market, was arraigned at the Tombs Police Court, yesterday, on a charge of stealing a gold watch, chain and locket, and a diamond pin from the exchange office of George Shipsey, No. 52½ Bowery, alleged to be the property of John Matthews, of the "Gotham" saloon, No. 236 Bowery. Opp said that he had lost the property while playing faro at a game run by Matthews at the "Gotham," having put it up as the equivalent for $200. He now the watch and jewelry yesterday in the window of Shipsey, who, he said, is a partner of Matthews, and, going into the office, he asked to look at the articles, when he immediately seized them and asked to be arrested. Opp's counsel claimed that the property never legally belonged to Matthews, as he had never given any other consideration for it than gambling "chips" or "counters," which had been lost by Opp at the faro-bank of Matthews. Justice Kilbreth allowed Opp to go on his own recognizance until this afternoon, and sent the watch and jewelry to the Property Clerk at Police Head-quarters to await the issue of the case.

COURT NOTES.

Mary Jane Collins, the woman who was arrested with Kelly, Defrees, and Crawford, on a charge of robbing the United States mail, was discharged yesterday by Commissioner Shields.

James Murray, who said he kept a saloon at No. 130 Suffolk street, was arraigned at the Tombs Police Court yesterday morning on a charge of burglary, and held in default of $2,000 bail.

In the suit of Hutton against the Gilbert Elevated Railroad Company, in the Equity Branch of the United States Court, an allowance of three months' time was granted yesterday to give an opportunity for taking testimony.

Judge Donohue, in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday appointed Robert F. Wilkinson as Referee in the suit of Charles Fitz against Thomas H. Avery, Charles Rogers, and the Fishkill National Bank, heretofore reported in THE TIMES. The suit is to restrain the defendants from taking any proceedings in regard to notes for $10,000 made by the plaintiff.

Walter James and Samuel Watson, two youths, who, on the night of the 20th inst., broke into the clothing store of Solomon Sheyer, at No. 88 Bowery, and stole property valued at $48, were convicted by Assistant District Attorney Bell in Part I. of the Court of General Sessions yesterday. Judge Gildersleeve sentenced the thieves to five years each in the State Prison.

Judge Joseph F. Daly, in the Special Term of the Court of Common Pleas yesterday denied a motion to reduce the bail in default of which the defendant in the suit of Devin against Bullard is now held in custody. Bullard is charged with breach of promise of marriage and seduction. He now charges the plaintiff with improprieties with other men. A counter-affidavit to this was, however, filed.

The case in which Nathan L. Lenheim, Cashier of the banking firm of L. S. Lenheim & Son, of Montrose, Penn., was to have been examined at the Tombs Police Court yesterday morning, on the charge of presenting a forged promissory note at the Importers' and Traders' Bank, was put over to Monday next this morning, Mr. Stephen Kistler, whose indorsement was forged on the note, not having arrived from Pennsylvania.

On the 18th inst. Edward Mason, known as "Tammany," a thief who gave his address as No. 418 East Forty-fifth street, stole a watch and chain from James Stuart, of No. 304 East Twentieth street. In Part I. of the Court of General Sessions yesterday, Assistant District Attorney Rollins accepted a plea of guilty, and Judge Gildersleeve sentenced him to two years and six months in the State Prison.

In Part I. of the Court of General Sessions, yesterday, George S. Hamlin, a Bowery character, charged with stabbing a rival named Robert McMasters, inflicting several severe wounds on the head and back, was convicted by Assistant District Attorney Bell, who showed that the prisoner had sallied out with the deliberate intention of meeting and wounding McMasters. On motion of counsel for the defense, Judge Gildersleeve remanded the prisoner for sentence.

On the 19th inst. Officer Brown, of the Thirty-second Precinct, detected Charles Seymour, a respectable looking man, aged 51, in the act of carrying off jewelry valued at $320, which he had stolen from the apartments of Isidore Goldstein, No. 436 West Fifty-first street. Assistant District Attorney Bollton, in Part I. of the Court of General Sessions, yesterday informed Judge Gildersleeve that this was Seymour's first offense, and in view of that fact his Honor sentenced him to the mitigated penalty of one year and six months in the State Prison.

Teresa Smith has begun suit in the Supreme Court against Patrick Sweeny for seduction under promise of marriage, claiming $20,000. She made his acquaintance, she says, in 1872, and according to the well-worn phrase "loved not wisely but too well." On Aug. 23, 1876, she was delivered of a child, whose paternity she seeks to cast on Sweeny. The case came before Judge Donohue, in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday, on a motion for the appointment of a guardian for the plaintiff, she being under 21 years of age. Judge Donohue appointed her sister, Emma Smith, as such guardian.

THE POWERS OF NOTARIES PUBLIC.

A motion was argued before Judge McAdam, in the Marine Court, Chambers, yesterday, in the case of Frost against McVeany, to dismiss the action for want of prosecution. The plaintiff's counsel objected on the ground that the affidavit on which the motion was founded was sworn to in the City of New-York before a Kings County notary; that the notary had failed to indicate after his signature that he had filed a certificate of his appointment with the County Clerk of New-York, as required by the laws of 1872 and 1873, and that the affidavit was not, therefore, legal proof of the facts contained in it. Judge McAdam overruled the objection, holding that it was unnecessary to add such a notice for the reason that the fact of filing the required certificate would be presumed. It is one of the first principles of justice, said the court, not to presume that a person has acted illegally until the contrary be proved, but that it is always to be assumed, until the contrary appeared, that an officer duly commissioned has taken the regular oath and has filed the proper certificates.

A BIGAMIST SENTENCED.

James Abbott, a truck driver, of No. 159 West Twenty-seventh-street, was called up in Part I. of the Court of General Sessions yesterday, by Assistant District Attorney Rollins, to answer a charge of bigamy. It appears that on Sept. 3 last, Abbott was married to Miss Hannah Roche, of No. 239 East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth street, at the residence of Rev. Luther G. Barrett, No. 80 Morton street, and lived with her three weeks. It was then discovered that he had a wife living at No. 159 West Twenty-seventh street, to whom he had been married on Jan. 22, 1873, by Rev. John J. Brouner. Abbott was therefore arrested for bigamy, both wives appearing against him. In court yesterday, the prisoner admitted his guilt, but said he did not know what he was doing when he married Miss Roche. Judge Gildersleeve said that marriage was rather too serious a matter to engage in unconsciously, and sentenced the bigamist truck driver to two years in the State Prison.

HOW THE LIQUOR LAW IS ENFORCED.

Mary Tuomey, of No. 161 Hudson street, went to Augustus Kesner's lager beer saloon, at No. 157 Hudson street, on Sunday, and purchased a quart of beer. She had some words with Kesner, who, she alleged, insulted her, and she immediately took the quart of beer to the Fifth Precinct Stationhouse and caused Kesner's arrest for violating the Sunday Liquor Law. Kesner was arraigned before Justice Kilbreth, at the Tombs Police Court yesterday morning, and was required to give $100 bail to appear for trial at General Sessions. Mary was about to depart in high spirits, when her joy was changed to tears by her commitment to the House of Detention as a witness against Kesner, who gave the bail required of him, and had the satisfaction of seeing Mary locked up, while he went back to sell more beer.

BOY BURGLARS.

William Kelly, aged 10 years, of No. 51 Beach street; Thomas Mahoney, aged 12, of Greenwich and Vestry streets; Frank McGuire, aged 12, and John McGuire, aged 10, of No. 360 Washington street, were arraigned at the Tombs Police Court yesterday morning on a charge of burglariously entering the storage ware-house of Louis Hatfield, No. 349 Washington street, on Sunday evening, through the scuttle, and stealing two boxes of prunes, two boxes of raisins, a can of preserved beef, and a box of figs, of the value of $25. The boys were found in the store by private watchman Edward Byrne, of No. 362 Washington street, who caused their arrest. They admitted their guilt, and were held for the General Sessions.

"HOIST BY HIS OWN PETARD."

A motion was made before Judge Joseph F. Daly, in the Special Term of the Court of Common Pleas, recently, to compel the attorney of the defendant in the suit of Joseph Brooks against Francis Mateson to receive the complaint, he having refused to do so. Judge Daly grants the motion, but does not give costs to the defendant's attorney, who seems to have been right originally in his refusal to accept the pleading. Judge Daly explains his action by saying that he gives no costs to the defendant's attorney because, though the latter has turned the complaint because the folios were not numbered, he submits affidavits in this motion which are liable to the same objection.

AN OWNER WANTED FOR PROPHETY.

Judge Donohue reserved his decision yesterday on a motion by Henry Dudley, the committee for a lunatic named Nicholas W. Stuyvesant, now deceased, to have his accounts audited, and to have it settled as to whom some property bequeathed to the deceased should go. It appears that Joseph R. Stuyvesant, the father of Nicholas, died some time ago, leaving a will; by which he gave Nicholas the bulk of his estate, amounting to about $200,000. A codicil to the will provided that in case of the insanity of Nicholas, or his death without his leaving children, the greater portion of the property should go to Mrs. Woodhouse and the remainder to her children. Mrs. Woodhouse being a daughter of Robert W. Stuyvesant. In case of her death without children the property was to go to the children of her brother Prosper. Prosper Stuyvesant died soon after his father, and Nicholas was declared a lunatic, and died without leaving children.

UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—Benton Hanchett, of Saginaw, Mich., and A. T. Cavis, of Washington, D. C., were admitted to practice as attorneys and counselors of the United States Supreme Court. So were Henry O. McDaid, of Chicago, Ill.; William H. Winkler, of New-York City; F. T. Hughes, of Lancaster, Mo.; R. M. Wedney, of Los Angeles, Cal.; John C. Douglass, of Leavenworth, Kan.; Charles H. Hempstead, of Salt Lake City.

No. 704.—Elisha Buckman, plaintiff in error, vs. William R. Bergholz.—The motion to dismiss this cause was submitted on printed arguments by Mr. Portland Parker in support of the same, and by Mr. Francis Kernan in opposition thereto.

No. 180.—George Jerome and F. C. Beaman, Assignees, &c., appellants, vs. Thomas N. McCarter, Trustee.—The argument of this cause was continued by Mr. J. W. E. York in behalf of himself, and by Mr. George F. Edmunds for the appellees, and concluded by Mr. M. H. Carpenter for the appellants.

The following decisions were rendered in the Supreme Court to-day:

No. 406.—Badger et al. vs. the United States in the relation of Bolles et al.—This is a writ of error to the Northern Circuit of Illinois from a judgment granting the relators a mandamus against the plaintiffs here as officers of the town of Aubrey in Illinois, compelling them to audit a certain judgment. The officers had resigned their positions, and their resignations had been accepted, but their successors had not been appointed and qualified as provided by the law of the State, and it is therefore held that they had not ceased to be such officers and that the mandamus was properly issued. The judgment is affirmed. Mr. Justice Hunt delivered the opinion.

No. 114.—Cammeyer et al. vs. Newton et al.—This is an appeal from the Circuit Court for the Southern District of New-York, wherein it is held that the appellants' patent for an improvement in a portable and adjustable dam for the purpose of producing still water in which to operate for the blasting and removal of obstructions in rivers and other water courses, is not infringed by the apparatus of the respondents used under a contract for the removal of obstructions from the harbor of the Port of New-York. Affirmed. Mr. Justice Clifford delivered the opinion.

No. 904.—City of Omaha vs. Hammond.—This is a case from the Nebraska Circuit, in which the court affirms a judgment there rendered in favor of Hammond, upon a contract for sinking two wells for the city, holding that the work was done under the supervision of the City Engineer, and afterward accepted, and that those facts estopped the City from afterward claiming that the work was not done according to contract. Mr. Justice Miller delivered the opinion.

No. 152.—The United States vs. Bostwick, Administrator of Prescott, and Bostwick vs. The United States.—These were an appeal and cross-appeal from the Court of Claims concerning the use and occupation by the Government, for a small-pox hospital, of the petitioner's property. The court reverse the judgment, and direct its modification so as to charge the Government for rent from July 1 to Aug. 23, 1862, and for damages to the property other than by fire, &c. The Chief Justice delivered the opinion.

The court adjourned until Monday, the 19th February next, at noon.

A QUESTION OF ALIMONY.

The case of Clara Wenneis against Matthew Wenneis, was brought before Judge Donohue in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday. The plaintiff brings the action to obtain a limited divorce from her husband on account of his cruelty. She obtained recently from the court an order compelling the defendant to pay her $25 per week as alimony. Mr. Wenneis made a motion before Judge Donohue to set aside the order. In support of the motion he averred that when the order for the payment of alimony was made, he was earning $15 per week, whereas he is now earning only $7 per week. He also alleged that the plaintiff is a milliner and keeps a boarding-house. The plaintiff, however, put in answering affidavits in which she asserted that the defendant is the owner of a coal-yard and is living with another woman. Judge Donohue denied the defendant's motion.

DECISIONS.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS.

By Judge Donohue.

Orders Granted.—Schell vs. Labor; Same vs. Same.

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

By Judge Speir.

Waddell vs. Lee.—Motion to dismiss complaint denied, with $10 costs, and cause set down for trial for 15th February.

Westerman vs. Remington.—Motion denied.

Tutte vs. Rach et al.—Judgment signed.

Starr et al. vs. Southern Express Company.—Commission ordered.

Mears vs. Kearney.—Findings of fact and conclusions of law signed.

Mears vs. Kearney.—Judgment of foreclosure and sale, John Pyne, Esq., appointed Referee to sell, &c.

Campbell vs. Billings et al.—Judgment order granted.

By Judge Sanford.

Mortimer vs. Roberts.—Findings of fact and conclusions of law signed.

COMMON PLEAS—SPECIAL TERM.

By Judge J. F. Daly.

Clarkson et al. vs. Shuman.—Motion will be granted conditionally.

Motions Granted.—Brooks vs. Mateson; Buckley vs. Western Railroad Company.

Jon ss. F. C.—Report confirmed.

In the matter of the assignment of Washington S. Hadley.—See memorandum.

Warner vs. Mosier.—Motion denied.

In the mat er of buildings south-west corner of Fulton and Nassau streets.—See opinion.

By Judge Van Hoesen.

Wait vs. Kane.—Order appointing Receiver. See memorandum.

Hunt vs. Revoy.—Motion denied. See memorandum.

Applet vs. Edgar.—Same.

King vs. King.—See memorandum.

MARINE COURT—CHAMBERS.

By Judge McAdam.

Opinions Filed.—Frost vs. McVeany; McGuiness vs. O'Shea; Connolly vs. McKerran; Allen vs. Farrellon; Erwin vs. Zychlinsky; Hellman vs. Browning; Moufort vs. Relyea; Herrman vs. Moore.

Judgment on Report.—Chevalier vs. Kobnstamur; Kurkske vs. Mais; Shaw vs. Farling.

Converse vs. Freeman.—Motion for leave to serve reply granted on payment of $10 costs within three days.

La Count vs. Dyett.—Motion granted for Feb. 16, 1877. No costs.

Kolle vs. Grube.—Motion to dismiss denied without costs, but under the prayer for further relief the cause will be ordered on the day calendar for Feb. 8, 1877.

Marotski vs. Papadorius.—Motion granted for Feb. 23, 1877.

Hyatt vs. King.—Default opened on payment within three days of $10 costs, on payment of which the cause will be restored to calendar for Feb. 9.

Motions Granted.—Waldheim vs. Deitz; La Coar vs. Dyett; Gautert vs. Hoover; Moses vs. Graf; Turner vs. Smith; Canhape vs. Cooper; Vanderbogert vs. Beckerman; Ulsen vs. Bang.

Defaults.—Jeffers vs. Buckmaster; Harrison vs. Conen.

Complaints Dismissed.—Greer vs. Ames; Heinbotham vs. Gray.

Grogen vs. McAvoy.—Motion denied.

Leuser vs. Martin.—Arrest vacated.

Wright vs. Simpson.—Judgment vacated, but summons amended.

Hudson vs. Buckton.—Motion to punish for contempt denied with leave to renew.

Landers vs. Layman.—O. Miller, Esq., appointed Referee.

Peters vs. Dunn.—Motion to dismiss granted unless within 10 days the plaintiff files note of issue and pays $10 costs.

COURT CALENDARS—THIS DAY.

SUPREME CCURT—CHAMBERS.

Nos.		Nos.
13—	Morrissey vs. Fergo.	200—	Gilroy vs. Neuberg.
61—	Horsey vs. Wyeth.	201—	Leach vs. The Equitable Life Ins. Co.
67—	Simon vs. Harris.	292—	Rasin vs. Amuldown.
101—	Stickney vs. Whitman.	293—	Cain vs. Murphy.
135—	Farrell vs. Phelps.	296—	Mechanical Sav. Bnk. Chicago vs. Carman.
240—	Mickenfelder vs. Daley.	298—	Hooker vs. Martin.
268—	Richard, &c., vs. Co-blentz.	300—	Matter of Benson.
274—	Hunteon vs. Clapp.	304—	Lattuey vs. Campbell.
278—	Miller vs. Miller.	305—	DeCamp v. Dempsey.
286—	Hoffman vs. Burke.	306—	Schrady vs. Schuyler.

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

Held by Speir, J.

No day calendar.

SUPERIOR COURT—TRIAL TERM—PART I.

Held by Sedgwick, J.

Case on—No. 652—Knapp vs. Roche, &c.
No day calendar.

MARINE COURT—TRIAL TERM—PART II.

Held by Goepp, J.

Nos.		Nos.
3857—	Clark vs. Atlas Steam-ship Co.	5852—	Hertz vs. Schaschtel.
1410—	Romien vs. Blossom et al.	5855—	Clark vs. Clark.
7272—	Ringler et al. versus Schultes.	5856—	Krogegaard vs. Kutruff et al.
5401—	Fimm vs. Barnett.	5857—	Moore vs. Overacker.
5840—	Schroeder vs. Eb ling.	860—	Wunderlich versus Ernst.
5843—	Corey vs. Brown.	5862—	Kaemeyer et al. vs. Dreske.
5847—	Berge vs. Hart.
5851—	Fitzpatrick versus Lockwood et al.

MARINE COURT—TRIAL TERM—PART III.

Held by Sheridan, J.

No.—7325—Dunn vs. Wells.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS—PART I.

Held by Gildersleeve, J.

Mary Stuart, perjury.	Fritz Marquard, grand larceny.
Thomas Kelly, felonious assault and battery.	Lawrence Freeman, grand larceny.
Patrick Fogarty, felonious assault and battery.	John Hays, grand larceny.
James Reed and James Ryan, burglary.	August Wilhans, grand larceny.
Gus Miller, James Woods, and Sarah Mills, burglary.	Elijah W. Houghton, grand larceny.
Henry Downs, grand larceny.	Alfred B. Martin, false pretences.
Solomon Jacobs, 7 cases, grand larceny and receiving stolen goods.	Christopher Fox, obscene literature.
Michael Slattery, grand larceny.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS—PART II.

Held by Sutherland, J.

Mortimer Shea, robbery.	Medard Picard, felonious assault and battery.
William Kone and Patrick McGowen, robbery.	Michael M. Calos, burglary.
Andrew Hesburger, felonious assault and battery.	George Erskine, grand larceny.
James Nugent, felonious assault and battery.	Elizabeth Mack, grand larceny.

FINANCIAL AFFAIRS.

SALES AT THE STOCK EXCHANGE—JAN. 29.

SALES BEFORE THE CALL—10 A. M.

$10,000	St. P. c. s. f..	79¼	11	N. Y. C. & H....	102⅝
200	U. S. Ex.....	52⅜	100	do.....	102⅝
300	do.....	51	7	do.....	102⅝
100	do.....	52	100	Del. & Hud....	c 65⅝
100	Pac. Mail.....	24⅞	100	do.....s10.	65
700	West. Union.....	75⅞	200	Rock Island....	101⅜
200	do.....	75⅜	100	do.....	101⅜
200	do.....	75⅝	100	do.....	102⅛
1510	do.....	75½	300	Cen. of N. J....	30
200	do.....	75⅝	600	do.....	29¾
1000	do.....	75⅝	100	do.....	29¾
300	do.....s3.	75⅝	100	do.....	29¾
1100	do.....s3.	75⅝	100	do.....	29¾
700	do.....	75½	600	Chi., M. & St. P.	47⅛
600	do.....	76½	200	do.....b.c.	47⅛
200	do.....	76⅝	300	do.....	47
700	do.....	76	100	do.....s3.	46⅞
1000	do.....c.	76	200	do.....s3.	46⅞
200	do.....	75⅞	100	do.....	46⅝
2500	Lake Shore.....	55	250	do.....	46⅝
500	do.....	54⅞	200	do.....	46⅝
100	do.....	54½	200	do.....	46⅝
100	do.....b3.	55	100	do.....	46¾
1500	do.....	55	100	do.....	46½
100	do.....	54⅞	200	do.....	46½
700	do.....	55	200	do.....	46⅝
900	do.....s3.	54⅞	150	do.....	46⅝
500	do.....	54⅞	200	do.....s3.	46⅝
1100	do.....	55	300	do.....	46½
600	do.....s3.	54⅞	550	do.....	47
1400	do.....s3.	54⅝	800	do.....	47
1000	do.....	54¾	400	do.....	47⅛
400	do.....	54⅞	800	do.....	47⅛
2100	do.....	55	400	do.....s3.	47⅛
300	do.....	55⅛	200	do.....	47⅛
200	do.....s3.	55	200	do.....s3.	47⅛
2300	do.....	55⅛	400	do.....	47⅛
1300	do.....s3.	54⅞	200	do.....s3.	47⅛
100	do.....s3.	54¾	100	do.....	47⅛
700	do.....	54¾	400	do.....	47⅛
500	do.....s3.	54⅝	800	do.....	47⅛
100	C. & N. W. b.c.	81	400	do.....s3.	47⅛
300	do.....	54⅞	18	Mor. & Es....	b.c. 92
300	do.....	54¾	100	Ohio & Miss..	b.c. 7
100	do.....	54⅝	100	C., C., & I. C.	b.c. 3
15	Alb. & Sus.....	155

GOVERNMENT STOCKS—10:15 AND 11:30 A. M.

$10,000	U. S. 5-20 C., '65.....	$10,000	U. S. 5-20 C., '67.....
5,000	do.....	12.108⅛	do.....
1,000	U. S. 5-20 C., '65 N....	b.c. 109⅜	do.....
500	do.....small.	110⅜	do.....
10,000	U. S. 5-20 R., '67.....	113⅞	do.....
10,000	U. S. 5s, 10-40 C.....	12.114⅜	do.....
10,000	do.....	b.c. 114⅜	do.....

$10,000	U. S. 5-20 C., '67.....	12.113⅞
20,000	do.....	12.113⅞
10,000	U. S. 5-20 C., '68.....	116⅞
50,000	U. S. 5s, 10-40 R.....	b.c. 114
10,000	U. S. 5s, '81, C.....	12.112⅜
10,000	do.....	111⅞

FIRST BOARD—10:30 A. M.

$1,000	D. of C. 3 65s.	73⅛	57	C. & P. G'd.....	93
2,000	Mo. 6s, long...	104⅞	200	do.....	b.c. 92⅞
7,000	Chi., B. & Q. con. 7s.....	110¼	200	C. & N. W. P'f...	b.c. 56½
5,000	Chi., B. & Q. 8s.	112	100	do.....	56¼
5,000	C. & N. W. 6s..	104	100	C. of N. J.....	b.c. 29¼
5,000	N. W. C. 7s G..	92	100	do.....	29⅞
1,000	do.....	91⅞	400	do.....	29⅝
4,000	do.....	92	600	do.....s3.	29⅝
1,000	M. & St. P. 7s, '71.	102¼	300	do.....	29⅝
10,000	do.....c.	102	200	do.....	29⅛
3,000	C., C. & I. ind. 1st.....	110	200	do.....	28
1,000	M. & St. P. b.c.	98½	700	do.....	27⅞
2,000	No. Mo. 1st b.c.	98¼	1100	do.....	27⅝
1,000	do.....	b.c. 18⅜	600	do.....	27⅜
10,000	Pac. of M. 1st.	100	550	do.....	27⅜
1,000	C., C. & I. C. 1st.	98	300	do.....	27⅜
2,000	do.....	97	400	do.....	27⅜
2,000	Un. Pac. 1st..	103⅞	400	do.....	27¼
2,000	A. & T. H. inc.	70	600	do.....	27
5,000	W. 1st..	105½	100	do.....s3.	26⅞
5,000	Gt. W. 1st.	88.100	610	do.....	27
20,000	do.....	105¼	400	do.....	27¼
1,000	Mil. & St. P. c. & f....	b.c. 79¼	300	do.....	27⅛
1,000	W. & F.	19.00	15	do.....	27⅜
2,000	Cen. P. g'ld.	b.c. 108¼	500	do.....	c 27
5	German Am. Bk..	99	500	do.....	s30. 26
100	Del. & H.....	s30. 65	100	do.....	s3. 26⅝
100	do.....	b.c. 65⅜	100	do.....	s3. 27⅛
100	do.....	s30. 65	500	do.....	26⅝
36	do.....	65	100	do.....	26½
70	do.....s3.	65¼	100	do.....	26⅝
15	Adams Ex.....	105	500	Chi. & R. I....	b.c. 101⅜
80	do.....	b.c. 104¼	300	do.....	101⅝
200	Amer. Ex.....	57	200	do.....	101¾
25	do.....	b.c. 57	1000	do.....	101¾
150	U. S. Ex.....	b.c. 52	100	do.....	101¾
700	West. Un.....	b.c. 75⅜	255	do.....	36
600	do.....	75⅝	10	Pitts., Ft. W. & C.	97
400	do.....	75½			gd. b.c. 100⅞
300	do.....	75⅝	30	do.....	101
500	do.....b3.	75⅜	200	C., M. & St. P....	b.c. 17⅜
800	do.....s3.	75¾	200	do.....	17¼
800	do.....	75⅜	200	do.....	17⅜
700	do.....	75½	500	Chi., M. & St. P.	47⅛
300	do.....	75⅝		Pf.....	b.c. 47⅛
200	do.....c.	75⅝	300	do.....	47
630	do.....s3.	75⅝	100	do.....	46⅞
300	do.....s3.	75⅝	500	do.....	47
1000	do.....s3.	75⅝	300	do.....b3.	47
500	do.....s3.	75⅝	300	do.....	46⅞
100	Pacific Mail.....	b.c. 24⅞	100	do.....	46¾
100	Erie Rail.....	b.c. 9⅞	400	do.....	46⅝
100	do.....	s3. 9¾	100	do.....	46⅝
100	Mich. Cen.....	b.c. 47⅞	100	do.....	46⅝
100	do.....	48	200	do.....	46⅝
2500	Lake Shore.....	55	200	do.....	46⅝
100	do.....s5.	47⅝	10	do.....	47
100	do.....	47½	200	do.....	47⅛
300	do.....	47¾	100	do.....	c 47⅛
700	do.....	48	1000	do.....	s30. 47⅛
1500	do.....	55	300	do.....	s30. 47⅛
100	do.....	54⅞	200	do.....

NEW-YORK'S WATER FRONT.

STONE BULKHEADS CONDEMNED.

IMPORTANT REPORT ON THE DOCK SYSTEM—THE MANAGEMENT OF THE DOCK DEPARTMENT SEVERELY CRITICISED—A BULKHEAD OF FIRST-CLASS CRIB WORK RECOMMENDED—A CHANGE IN THE LAW SUGGESTED SO AS TO SECURE ECONOMY.

An adjourned conference of representatives of the Chamber of Commerce, the Cheap Transportation Association, the Cotton Exchange, the Produce Exchange, the Ship-owners' Association, and the Council of Political Reform was held yesterday afternoon in the Chamber of Commerce. The last meeting was held on Dec. 7, when five sub-committees were appointed, who were instructed to investigate (1) the cost and practicability of stone bulkheads or bulkheads of other material; (2) the proper width of streets on the water front; (3) the City's title to dock property; (4) the propriety of selling the City dock property, and (5) the changes that should be made in the existing laws creating the Dock Commission. There were present Mr. George Opdyke, Mr. David Dows, Mr. H. N. Beers, Mr. John F. Henry, Mr. Gustav Schwab, Mr. Theodore Roosevelt, Mr. William H. Webb, Capt. Ambrose Snow, Mr. A. B. Miller, and others. Capt. Snow called the meeting to order, and Mr. H. N. Beers read the minutes of the last conference. Mr. Gustav Schwab, of Committee No. 1, then read the report of that committee, giving the result of their investigation of the subject, "The first cost and practicability of stone bulkheads and piers on the present or any plan, and also bulkheads and piers of other materials and on what plan." The committee, while reflecting severely on the past and present management of the Department of Docks, state that they do not blame the present Commissioners, who have inherited and are obliged to follow a vicious system, but endeavor to show that there is necessity for a complete change of system and plans. The examinations of the committee were almost exclusively confined to bulkheads, as, with the exception of Pier No. 1 North River, the department has built nothing but wooden piers. The exception cost, in their opinion, more than $1,000,000, and it stands unfinished, of doubtful stability, a monument of extravagance and folly. In endeavoring to ascertain the cost of the stone bulkhead, so far as built, between Canal and West Eleventh streets, the committee found that the Dock Department do not classify their expenditures under the heads of work performed. In the reports of 1874 and 1875, under the head of "Construction," were charged $694,906 18 for lumber and piles, and $517,926 61 for field corps of Engineer in chief, without any specification as to the particular class of work to which these items apply. The committee were compelled to classify the items of expenditures, and state the proportion of each as they apply to the classes of work executed. The examination started from the basis of two calculations, one made by the Council of Political Reform, according to which the stone bulkhead built from October, 1873, to April, 1875, cost $1,250 per lineal foot, while the other statement, furnished by the Commissioners of Docks in reply to the assertions of the Council of Political Reform, showed that the cost of the work was but $405 43 per lineal foot. The first calculation deducts from the expenses for masonry work the amount expended in 1874 and 1875 on Pier No. 1—$100,000—for machinery and floating inventory purchased during that period, but omits the depreciation of the inventory acquired before 1874, as being applicable to the bulkhead built in 1874 and 1875. The result of this calculation is a cost of $1,226 91 per lineal foot for 1,115 feet finished and a piece equal to 80 feet finished, making 1,195 feet of finished wall. The same calculation deducts the expenditures made for other than masonry work, the value of inventory, and the cost of work on Pier No. 1 North River, as estimated in the other calculation, and a cash balance of $1,000 on hand April 30, 1875. The result thus obtained is $1,264 06 per lineal foot of stone bulkhead built in the years 1874 and 1875, which slightly exceeds the estimate reached by the preceding calculation, and thus seems to confirm its result.

A supplementary calculation makes it appear that the equivalent of 162 feet of bulkhead finished in the year ending April, 1876, has cost $1,712 96 per lineal foot, thus showing a considerable increase of the cost of that work over that of the previous years.

The calculations of the Commissioners of Docks contain prominent discrepancies, and according to the report of the committee the conclusion appears inevitable that the cost of the stone bulkheads has been understated by the Commissioners.

A report that the Dock Commissioners had under consideration a plan to reduce the cost of the stone bulkhead $225 a lineal foot proved to be but a fair promise, nor do the committee believe that any stone bulkhead can be built on these muddy shores at anything but an extravagant cost. The committee can see no real advantage to the commerce of the City to be gained by preferring stone bulkheads to crib bulkheads, except that a permanent stone wall would forever fix the encroachments of the land upon the river. The experience that has already been gained does not remove the doubts of the durability of the stone bulkheads, as portions of the wall already built have bulged so that they had to be secured by cables anchored in crib-work; and and a more alarming accident has occurred at the King street section, where 300 feet of wall, constructed on a cheaper plan, by the use of mass concrete on piles, and a filling of broken stone, had to be protected on the inside by a bulkhead protecting the wall from inside pressure, and has proved but a costly experiment.

The committee have, in conference with experienced dock builders, prepared specifications for a higher class of crib bulkheads, which, when sunk in a properly dredged bed, will be absolutely indestructible under water, permanent and durable, and will cost less for current repairs than the sort of bulkheads hitherto commonly built. The ordinary crib bulkhead has cost about $70 per lineal foot. The actual cost of the improved bulkhead would be about $110, or between 1-11th and 1-12th of the cost of the stone bulkhead. The saving to the City on the crib over the stone bulkhead for the 1,377 feet of completed stone wall would thus have been $876,600; for the distance between Sixty-first Eleventh street and the Battery, 9.963 feet, the saving will be $11,350,000; for the distance between Sixty-first street, North River, to the Battery, 23,163 feet, it will amount to $26,400,000, and for the distance of 59,657 feet, between West Sixty-first and East Fifty-first streets, being the line taken by the adopted plan of the Dock Commissioners, the saving to the City would amount to $68,000,000. Appalling as these figures may appear, they represent, the committee say, nothing more than the actual ratio of expenses which the City has been squandering on a work which the Dock Department is authorized to carry forward on the frightful consequences indicated. A continuance of this expenditure will, they say, instead of securing commercial pre-eminence in the future, help in bringing the tax-ridden City to a condition when costly bulkheads and piers will go begging for occupants. The durability of the improved crib bulkheads is maintained at some length, the causes of the displacement and dilapidated condition of the crib bulkheads of this City being attributable to the poor quality and small quantity of materials used, the cheapness and small amount of labor used in their construction, and the want of skill and thoroughness in sinking and placing them. It is also considered advantageous because it can be built with greater rapidity, and with less disturbance, inconvenience, and loss to commerce and the City.

The committee conclude their report with the following summary:

1. That the plan of building stone piers and surrounding the City with a stone bulkhead should be condemned and abandoned as useless, vastly too expensive, and affording no security for the durability of the structures erected upon them.

2. That the stone bulkhead now in course of construction between West Eleventh and Canal streets, should be finished only on that portion of the line on which the cement or beton block foundation has already, in whole or in part, been laid, and that on the remainder of that line all preparation for, and procedure of, masonry work should at once be stopped, and that such bulkhead should, as speedily as possible, be completed, by sinking and building first-class crib-work.

3. That, if any general plan is required for continuing the present extension of the water front of the City into the river, the bulkhead should be built of first-class crib-work, which would secure all advantages of a permanent, durable, and moderately expensive structure, well adapted to the wants of commerce.

4. That the law governing the Department of Docks should at once be so altered as to secure economy and proper accountability, and the rendering of accounts, so as to show to the tax-payer the actual cost of every kind of improvement.

The report was signed by William H. Webb, Gustav Schwab, William H. Guion, E. J. Donnell, and H. N. Beers.

Mr. George Opdyke thought the report was too important to be acted on without further consideration. On his motion consideration of the report was postponed to an adjourned meeting, to be held on Thursday at 3 o'clock.

Mr. Seth Low reported progress on the part of Committee No. 3, and offered a resolution calling upon the Common Council to pass an ordinance permitting the use of the Belt Railroad to extend terminal facilities, which was laid over for consideration on Thursday.

Mr. George Opdyke reported progress for Committee No. 4. He said that they had held protracted meetings, but that there was an irreconcilable difference of views about the propriety of selling the City dock property, although he hoped soon to be able to present a majority report.

Mr. Theodore Roosevelt said that the committee appointed to investigate the City's title to dock property had a merely legal duty to perform, and the lawyers on the committee could not give their time to the subject. The President of the Dock Department expressed his desire to the committee to have the question cleared up, and trusted that a fund would be provided by the corporation for that purpose. Committee No. 5 were not ready to report.

BOARD OF POLICE JUSTICES.

A regular session of the Board of Police Justices was held last evening at the Washington Place Court, Justice Wandell presiding. George W. Cregier was appointed Secretary of the Board for the ensuing year. The resignation of Andrew Willman, Interpreter at the Court of Special Sessions, was received and accepted. A communication from the Board of Apportionment, which was read, notified the Justices that $150,600 had been appropriated for the salaries of the Police Justices and court attaches. That sum not being regarded as sufficient, the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That a committee of two be appointed to draft and send to the Controller and the Board of Apportionment a communication in relation to the deficiency of $60,000 on sums appropriated for the Police Courts, and that the Controller be instructed to notify the Board of Police Justices of the reason of the reduction.

Justices Smith and Flammer were appointed the committee. A resolution by Justice Otterbourg to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Interpreter Willman was lost.

SINGULAR ADVENTURE OF A LAD.

Several little school girls called at Police Head-quarters yesterday morning and excitedly informed Capt. Copeland that a little boy named Johnny Kane, whose father, a butcher, resides at No. 86 Centre street, had been kidnapped by an old man in Leonard street. A few minutes after the entrance of the little girls, the father of the missing boy entered the Superintendent's office, and requested that a general alarm be sent out. It was subsequently ascertained that little Johnny had not been kidnapped, but he told his parents, on his return, a rather strange story. He said that while going through Leonard street an old man with a gray mustache accosted him and promised him 25 cents for holding a horse. The old man then invited him into a saloon, where he threatened to kill him if Johnny refused to surrender his overcoat. Not satisfied with this, the old man, pointing to a second-hand clothing store on the other side of the street, handed the boy a cane, and told him to use it in stealing a coat from one of the hooks on the outside of the store. Johnny attempted to commit the theft, but did not succeed, and on returning to the hallway found that his aged tempter had disappeared.

AN IMPERILED FREIGHT-BOAT.

A policeman patrolling along the river front in the vicinity of One Hundredth street, at 7 o'clock last evening noticed that a freight propeller, which had evidently come down from the Sound, had stopped her engine at Hell Gate, and was being rapidly borne by the tide in the direction of the rocks. He immediately notified Capt. Robbins, who ordered out the reserve force, and telegraphed for the assistance of the Police boat Seneca. The officer on reserve manned a few small boats, and, in attempting to reach the steam-boat, which by that time had cast anchor in close proximity to Mill Rock, experienced considerable difficulty from the floating ice. They finally got within hailing distance, however, and then learned that the freight-boat's boilers had become overheated, and it was deemed necessary to stop the engine, and drop anchor. About half an hour later she was enabled to proceed on her way to the City, accompanied by the Seneca.

THE JOHN STREET REVIVAL.

The John Street Methodist Church was crowded yesterday, both the main floor and the basement being filled. Mrs. Van Cott arrived at 3:30 o'clock, but singing and praying were carried on until her arrival, when she took charge of the meeting. She is a large woman, with a powerful voice and positive manner, and is a peculiar way almost compelled everybody in the audience to acknowledge her influence. When she had exhorted, prayed, and led the singing up stairs for half an hour, she descended to the basement, and again spoke and prayed. In the lower room crowds of people came to the altar rail, and occupied an "anxious seat" that was set apart for them, the first applicants for the prayers of the congregation being two weeping young girls. The halls and doorways were blocked up during the entire meeting, and people made their way in and out with great difficulty. The meetings will be continued daily.

AN ABSCONDING CLERK.

Yesterday morning James T. Holden, a clerk in the employ of G. Sidenberg & Co., manufacturers of ladies' collars and cuffs, at No. 49 Mercer street, was sent to the Pacific Bank to obtain cash for a check for $3,000. He drew the money and placed the packages of notes on the desk in the private office of the firm. He then said that he had left his gloves at the bank, and went out to get them. As he failed to return, his employers examined the money on the desk and found that there was but $2,500 there, a package containing $500 being missing. The facts were made known to the Police, and Superintendent Walling sent out a general alarm directing Police to keep a sharp lookout for the missing clerk, who is supposed to have walked off with the money. Detective Von Gerichten, of the Central Office, was detailed to search for the fugitive. Holden had been in the employ of the firm for several years, and fully enjoyed their confidence. He is supposed to be en route to Chicago, where he has friends.

ANOTHER STEWART CLAIMANT.

On Monday night a well-dressed young man named Milton Church, who recently arrived in this City from Europe, called at the residence of Mrs. A. T. Stewart, in Thirty-fourth street, near Fifth avenue, and told the servant who waited upon him that he was Mrs. Stewart's son, and had come to visit her, as he had not seen her since he was kidnapped about 28 years ago. The servant informed him that he must be mistaken, but he still persisted, and finally became so troublesome that he was handed over to a policeman. The prisoner was arraigned before Justice Otterbourg yesterday, at the Second District Police Court, where it was apparent to the Justice that the unfortunate man was insane. The prisoner was committed to the care of the Commissioners of Charities and Correction.

THE POLICE BOARD.

At the meeting of the Board of Police yesterday 26 of the patrolmen of the abolished Sixth Precinct were assigned to the Fourth Presinct, and 23 others to the Fourteenth. Commissioner Erhardt was authorized to appear to-day before the Committee on Cities of the Legislature, and to present to that body the views of the board in relation to the bills affecting the Police Department. A written claim from Sergt. Miller for back pay was placed on file. Charles Flood was appointed to the position of doorman in the office of Inspector Speight, of the Fourth Inspection District.

ARRIVALS AT THE HOTELS.

William Piper, of Bordeaux, is at the Hotel Brunswick.

Rev. Dr. W. R. G. Mellen, of Toronto, is at the Sturtevant House.

Gen. Robert Lenox Banks, of Albany, is at the Clarendon Hotel.

Archdeacon Gray, of Brighton, England, is at the Glenham Hotel.

Lieut. James R. Selfridge, United States Navy, is at the St. James Hotel.

Naval Constructor Isaiah Hanscom, United States Navy, is at the Grand Hotel.

Royal M. Pulsifer and E. B. Haskell, of Boston, are at the Westminster Hotel.

Inspector General R. B. Marcey, United States Army, and George Bignold, the actor, are at the New-York Hotel.

George M. Pullman, of Chicago, and Chief Engineer Charles H. Loring, United States Navy, are at the Windsor Hotel.

Gen. George A. Forsyth, and Major J. P. Sanger, United States Army, and Lieut. Col. Gordon, of the British Army, are at the Fifth Avenue Hotel.

THE ENGLISH UNIVERSITY BOAT-RACE.

A letter from Cambridge, dated Tuesday, Jan. 16, says: "Preparations for the forthcoming boat-race began at Cambridge to-day. Although the Cambridge term began on Saturday, the majority of members of the University will not recommence residence until the end of the month; therefore, strictly speaking, Mr. Lewis, the Light Blue President, has commenced operations somewhat earlier than usual, although, with the limited time at his disposal, owing to the date of the race falling about three weeks earlier than last year, he has not acted unwisely in being thus early in the field. The work of to-day was of a very limited nature, and consisted merely of what is known as the 'weeding' process. Six of last year's crew will again row in the coming race, so that only two new men, or three at the most, will be required, and the competition for these places may be expected to be very keen. The crew to-day comprised a 'four' only, manned as follows: J. C. Fenn, 1st Trinity, (bow;) 2, E. Hoskyns, Jesus; 3, T. Allen, Lady Margaret; E. Prest, Jesus, (stroke;) G. L. Davis, Clare, (coxswain.) This crew left Searle's shortly after 3 o'clock, under the supervision of Mr. Lewis, the University President, and having rowed by easy stages as far as the Long Reach turned back, and arrived at the boat-house about 4:30. In addition to the gentlemen forming the crew of to-day, several others who are to be tried are in residence, and will probably be seen on the river in the course of the next few days. Those of last year's crew who are certain to row again this term are Hoskyns (Jesus,) Gurdon (Jesus,) Lewis, (Caius,) Pike, Shafto, (Caius,) (Jesus,) who will again fill the post of stroke, and possibly last year's President, W. B. Close, (1st Trinity)."

INSURANCE AFFAIRS.

THE CONTINENTAL LIFE.

REPORT OF THE RECEIVER TO THE SUPREME COURT—REVIEW OF THE FINANCIAL CONDITION OF THE COMPANY—A DISCOURAGING OUTLOOK FOR ALL CONCERNED—A DEFICIENCY OF $1,687,000.

Mr. John J. Anderson, who was appointed Receiver of the Continental Life Insurance Company of this City, on the 25th of October last, at the suit of John O. Hoyt, one of the stockholders in the company, made his report to the Supreme Court, in Brooklyn, yesterday, showing that at any time during the past six years a rigid examination would have developed the fact that the concern was insolvent, and that at the time of his appointment there was a deficit existing of about $500,000. The report, which is very exhaustive, shows that considerable trouble was experienced in getting the accounts of the different agents of the company throughout the West. It states also that the London agent has failed to send in his account or to remit the balance in his hands, which, according to his last report, amounted to about £4,000. There is a suit pending against the company in the courts of London for £4,000, which suit is brought by W. C. Prescott, a former agent who held a contract at a salary of 2,000 guineas per annum, which contract was made by the former President of the company, Mr. Lawrence. After being removed from the position, he brought the suit above mentioned. The Receiver adds that so far as is shown by his investigation he can only say that large sums of money have, from time to time, been remitted from the home office to sustain the London office, by which the company has suffered a loss of over $100,000. Since the appointment of the Receiver, the office has been closed. He has not been able to ascertain the condition of the company at any former period of its history, but he is satisfied that for at least six years it has not had on hand the reserve required by law to be held by it against its outstanding risks. The assets of the company have, he says, included in them $1,203,067 86 of loans made to policy-holders in the company, and are a good asset against the policies upon which they are made. The real estate belonging to the company consists chiefly of the marble building at the corner of Nassau and Cedar streets, a part of which is occupied by the company, and which cost $676,087 09. This building, the Receiver states, is insured for $175,000, but he is unable to estimate its cash value. In the present depressed condition of real estate it would not perhaps bring more than $400,000. The company hold 218 bonds and mortgages on property upon which they have loaned $1,631,227 50. In regard to this he says: "It has been impossible for me to learn the value of said property so mortgaged. I am of the opinion, however, that the average loans are as good as the generality of loans made by other institutions of a similar character." If these loans should be called in, however, he thinks that, in order to protect the policy-holders, he would be obliged to purchase at least one-third of the property covered by the mortgages. With prudent management he has no doubt that the amount loaned on bond and mortgage will be realized in a very little loss. The deposit of $22,175 79 in the Market Savings Bank is worthless. The deposit of $11,182 76 in the Atlantic National Bank may be collected in the end. The affairs of the bank are in the hands of a Receiver, and much depends upon what may be collected from the stockholders. He also reports that by the examination of the affairs of the company he ascertained that within 15 days next preceding his appointment the said company had effected a reinsurance in the New-Jersey Mutual Life Insurance Company on a large number of its policies, and as consideration thereof, had transferred to said last company securities of the amount of $3,000,000. After the submission of these facts, with all papers connected therewith, to counsel, and upon their advice he brought an action in the Supreme Court against the New-Jersey Mutual Life Insurance Company, to recover the securities so transferred, which action is still pending. One hundred and two thousand dollars of these securities have, however, been deposited with him by the New-Jersey Mutual Insurance Company, with due transfer of the same to him as Receiver, their absolute delivery being conditioned upon a reduction of the contract of reinsurance, in which event he is required to take at about $100,000 of the policies of the policy claims against this company that have been taken up by the New-Jersey Mutual Life Insurance Company under the contract is stipulated for.

Regarding the other assets, the decision says: For the deposit of $44,610 35 in the Loaners' Bank, the company hold collateral security to the amount of $201,000, yet a question whether the avails of the collaterals and the dividend from the Receiver of the bank will pay the debt. The temporary loans existing at the date of my appointment amounted to the sum of $110,448 24. Of this amount the sum of $47,332 75 was received by collaterals of value equal to, if not exceeding, the amount of the loans, the balance of the temporary loans, viz.: $63,164 50 was upon, and secured by, 635 shares of the capital stock of the Continental Life Insurance Company, which amount of loans are of a very doubtful value. I find the further items of $254,000 upon the books of the company assets, standing against the Empire Mutual Life Insurance Company, which company was some years since insured in the Continental. The Empire Company retired from business, and, I am informed, is possessed of no assets to meet this claim. I am at a loss, from an examination of the books, how to explain this account, and consider the item of claim herein as I deem worthless. The item of $1,000,940, balance due by agents, I found on the books of the company; I have failed to discover any satisfactory explanation of these accounts. They consist of claims against a large number of persons who have, from time to time, been employed as agents of this company, some of whom were agents when I was appointed. Whether the parties really owe the company the amount charged against them or not, I have as yet been unable to ascertain; I fear this item will, on further investigation, turn out to be nearly worthless.

In concluding, the Receiver says that many policy-holders have since his appointment insisted upon paying their premiums, and these have been held by him as a special trust to be paid to the company or returned to the policy-holders, should the court order the company's affairs to be wound up.

Annexed to the report are statements of the balance sheet of this company, according to which there is a deficit of $471,089 38. The Receiver, however, states that in his opinion the impairment to the company is $1,687,000. Below are given the statements of the assets and liabilities of the company on the date of the Receiver's appointment. From that time until Jan. 1, 1876, there had been paid to $103,022 56. his expenditures during the same period being $16,505 81, leaving a balance of $85,516 75.

ASSETS.

Real estate, cost		$699,348 43
Bonds and mortages, first liens		1,031,227 50
Premium loans, on policies in force		1,203,087 86
Accrued interest		32 000 00
Premiums deferred and uncollected		239,292 94
Furniture and fixtures at cost, (worth about $7,000)		33,077 54
Rents due from T. C. Durant (doubtful) for which the company holds as collateral security $10,000 1st Mtge bond of the Adirondack Company	$19,562 50
Rents of other parties past due	1,450 00
Rents past due, good	750 00
		21,762 50
Temporary loans		110,448 24
United States bonds in department at Albany, (including Empire Mutual and American Tontine and Life Company)	161,500 00
On hand	75,000 00
In Virginia State department	10,000 00
	246,500 00
Premium on same	32,004 00—	278,504 00
Yonkers, (N. Y.) City Water Bonds, (good)		10,000 00
Bills receivable, (doubtful)		40,825 01
Agents' open accounts		1,000,940 15
Empire Mutual Life Insurance Company		234,854 34
Cash on deposit Fourth National Bank	36,033 00
Cash on deposit United States Trust Company	1,832 48
Checks, (good)	1,461 89
Bills, stamps, coin, &c.	747 82—	40,074 69
Market Savings Bank, bank failed, (worthless)		22,175 79
Atlantic National Bank, failed and in hands of Receiver		11,182 76
Loaners' Bank, failed and in hands of Receiver		44,610 35
The following collaterals held by the company to secure this deposit:
1,500 shares Central Railway and Trust Company, nominal value	$150,000 00
Two Second Mortgage Income Bonds St. Louis, Alton and Terre Haute Railroad Company, $1,000 each	2,000 00
200 shares Citizens' Gaslight Company of Long Island	4,000 00
400 shares of Citizens' Street Railway Company of Indianapolis Ind., nominal value	40,000 00—	201,000 00
(I doubt very much if all these collaterals are worth $25,000.)
Cash deposits in Bank of Munroe, Rochester, N. Y., good		1,726 01
Checks or various parties, not good		1,349 75
Securities paid to the New-Jersey Mutual Life Insurance Company on the 10th October, 1876, for reinsurance		314,900 00
(I have caused suit to be instituted against said company for the recovery of said securities, of which $102,900 have been deposited, as before stated, and suit is still pending.)
Cash premiums paid, but not entered		220 47
Total		$5,392,108 43

LIABILITIES.

Reserve on policies in force, 19,754 policies

Insurance of same, $38,894,313, American table 4½ per cent | $5,865,614 00
Endowment policies, matured and maturing within the next 90 days | 50,350 00
Claims by death:
Approved by committee and past due | $50,199 90
Approved by committee and not due | 37,016 89
Filed (proofs furnished) but not acted upon by committee although unquestioned | 23,828 82
Notices of death received, policies in force, proofs not yet received, presumably valid claims, (gross) | 35,098 00
Claims disputed, proofs of death having been furnished, gross | 222,308 00
Notices of death received on which no proofs of death have been furnished, policies having lapsed, (gross) | 68,484 00— 436,935 61
(It is safe to say of the above amount, $150,000 is upon lapsed policies, or are improper claims.)
Unsettled accounts, bills presented | 2,298 20
Taxes unpaid | 8,000 00
Total | $6,363,197 81

Mr. William Allen Butler, the Referee appointed by Judge Pratt to examine into the affairs of the Continental, made a special report to the court yesterday, recommending that the Receiver be required to furnish an additional bond, with sureties wholly unconnected with the former management of the company, exception having been taken to Luther W. Frost and R. C. Frost, two of his bondsmen. Upon reading this report, Justice Gilbert made an order requiring the Receiver to give an additional bond in $200,000.

THE NEW-JERSEY MUTUAL.

IT GOES OUT OF EXISTENCE AND TRANSFERS ITS ASSETS AND RISKS TO THE NATIONAL CAPITOL COMPANY OF WASHINGTON.

The announcement that the National Capitol Life Insurance Company of Washington, D. C., one of the companies chartered by Congress, had agreed to reinsure the 13,000 policies of the New-Jersey Mutual Life Insurance Company, caused no little stir in insurance circles yesterday, and was the occasion of much comment. It also had the effect of awakening into temporary activity at least the New-Jersey department, and there now promises to be a legal conflict as to the powers of the National Capitol Company in the State of New-Jersey. The arrangement between the companies, it is understood, was made some time ago, but the contract was not executed until Friday night last, when a formal transfer of the New-Jersey Mutual Company's business and assets was made by its President, J. B. Stedwell, to Benjamin Noyes, President of the National Capitol, the latter agreeing to reinsure the outstanding risks of the former on an exhibit of its affairs presented by Mr. Stedwell. The last annual statement of the company made to the Insurance Department of this State on Jan. 1, 1876, showed its total admitted assets to be $1,808,881 99, while the liabilities on policy-holders' account were given as $1,443,158, showing a surplus of $365,723 99. The company has not been regarded favorably in this State for some time, and in Massachusetts the Insurance Department a week ago revoked its license to do business in that State.

The investigation which has been in progress at Newark for some weeks, under the supervision of Secretary of State Kelsey into the affairs of the company, has resulted in the discovery that the concern was one of the rottenest insurance frauds in the State. When Mr. Faskier, the actuary whom Mr. Kelsey engaged to make the investigation, went to work, the officers of the company threw every obstacle in his way, and by factious opposition to every step he took, endeavored to disgust him with the work he had in hand in the evident hope of compelling him to give it up. Mr. Kelsey directed him, however, to go on with his labors and pursue them to the end. During the examination he discovered that the accounts had been so badly mixed, for the poorly conceived purpose of befogging inquiry, that it was almost impossible to distinguish the assets from the liabilities. Frequent interviews were arranged by the officers of the company for the purpose of explaining the muddled books, but in every instance the officers failed to come to time, offering incifferent excuses for postponing the conferences. At length Mr. Kelsey directed the Actuary to make his report. The report was made to Commissioner Henry C. Kelsey on the 10th inst., in which the Examiner estimated that the liabilities of the company exceeded their assets by $420,000. How long the deficit existed is not known, but it seems somewhat strange that the concern should have been allowed to continue business under these circumstances. A statement has been credited to Mr. Noyes, of the National Capitol, to the effect that the assets of the New-Jersey Mutual Company amount to $1,700,000, but it is believed they will fall far short of that figure. Mr. Kelsey was seen in Newark yesterday by a reporter of THE TIMES, to whom he stated that he had a short time before notified the company to make good its deficiency. Mr. Forse, the Vice President, said it would be impossible for them to do so, and Mr. Kelsey thereupon took steps, in accordance with the laws of the State, to make application for the dissolution of the company and the appointment of a Receiver. Attorney General Vanatta will to-day make the application to Chancellor Runyon, and this it is expected will give rise to some nice legal questions, for the State authorities of New-Jersey declare that the National Capitol Life has no recognition in New-Jersey, and that, so far as they are informed, it has neither capital nor assets, and further that they will not recognize the transfer to it of the risks and assets of the New-Jersey Mutual Life Insurance Company.

From what could be learned in Newark yesterday, it would appear that the officers of the concern had anticipated this movement on the part of the authorities, and had removed to this City the bonds and mortgages and other movable assets, as they claim, out of the reach of the New-Jersey Department.

They have, however, in the hands of the State Controller $100,000 of good bond security, worth all they were given to secure. They also claim to own $150,000 in the hands of the New-York State Insurance Department, deposited there by the Continental Life Insurance Company, a number of the policies of which were absorbed by the New-Jersey Mutual, but the New-York State authorities do not, it is stated, recognize the right of the Mutual Company to the property. It is understood that Messrs. Stedwell and Noyes, the Presidents respectively of the New-Jersey Mutual and the National Capitol Companies, will to-day issue circulars explanatory of their transactions.

THE METROPOLITAN FIRE COMPANY.

Mr. Charles E. Appleby, the Receiver of the Metropolitan Fire Insurance Company, yesterday stated that he had entered into a contract with the Continental Insurance Company of this City whereby the President of the latter, Mr. George T. Hope, agreed to issue their policies at pro rata rates in place of those of the suspended company as rapidly as they were presented by the holders. It is understood that the Continental Company agreed to reinsure the outstanding risks of the Metropolitan for $30,000, which was one of the best offers received. This will be a saving to the stockholders of about $6,000, the reinsurance reserve being $36,000. The Receiver's report will be prepared as soon as possible.

THE LIFE OF QUEEN VICTORIA IN DANGER.

A London correspondent of the Liverpool Post writes: "A remarkable tale has got abroad which I believe will be vouched for in due time by a journal which affects to move in court and fashionable circles. You will remember that some years ago a crack-brained boy named O'Connor presented a harmless old pistol at her Majesty as she was leaving Buckingham Palace. On conviction the lad was sentenced to a short term of imprisonment—a matter of a few months, if I remember right—and on the expiration of his punishment the authorities sent him out to one of the colonies and found him employment. There he remained until a short time ago, behaving himself, I am told, in a most exemplary manner. Ultimately he announced his determination to return to England, and his actual departure was quietly telegraphed to Scotland-yard, in order that the incarceration of the young man might not be missed. In due course, O'Connor landed in England, and from that moment two detectives were appointed to watch his movements night and day. For some time they never for a moment lost sight of him; but one morning, to their great chagrin and astonishment, they found that their bird had flown—whither they knew not. The sagacity of their chief, however, suggested that the old delusion had broken out, and that in all probability the poor mad thing was making tracks once more for Buckingham Palace. The palace was visited, and sure enough there was O'Connor within the gates. How he got in is a mystery, as it was on the first occasion. The young man is now safely lodged in Colney Hatch. In this connection I may just mention that Oxford, who attempted to assassinate the Queen years ago, is still alive—an inmate of Bedlam."

FORTY-FOURTH CONGRESS.

SECOND SESSION....Jan. 29.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

In the Senate, Mr. Bailey, of Tennessee, took the seat occupied by Mr. Key since the death of Andrew Johnson, having been elected to fill the vacancy. The signing of the Electoral bill by the President was announced, and soon afterward the Message of the President, giving his reasons for signing the bill, was received, read, and laid on the table. The proceedings of the Commission on Reform and Reorganization of the Army were submitted. The majority report of the sub-committee of the Elections Committee on the Florida Election was submitted. The Pacific Railroad Sinking Fund bill was taken up, and Mr. Mitchell, of Oregon, spoke against it.

In the House the bill authorising payment of $500,000 to Mr. Eads, constructor of the Mississippi jetties, came up, and an amendment directing the payment to be made in United States bonds was rejected. The remainder of the session was devoted to business reported from the District of Columbia.

SENATE.

Joseph E. Bailey, recently elected United States Senator from Tennessee to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Andrew Johnson, took the oath of office. Mr. Key has filled the vacancy by appointment of the Governor, since the death of Mr. Johnson.

THE COUNTING BILL.

Mr. WRIGHT, of Iowa, presented a protest of citizens of Des Moines, Iowa, against the passage of the Edmunds bill in regard to counting the Electoral vote. Laid on the table. In presenting the petition he said the protest was signed by about 100 persons, and among the names he noticed those of some of the best people in the State, many of them being State officers of prominence and citizens of the highest respectability. Many of them were his immediate neighbors and friends, personal and political. If the bill which was recently passed, and against which they protested, had, as they assumed, ignored the decision of the Electors, and enabled one Judge of the Supreme Court to elect a President, he would not have voted for it. He thought his good friends had entirely misapprehended the provisions of the bill, and he had no doubt when they understood it better they would support the measure. He voted for the bill, believing the result to be reached under it would be entirely satisfactory to the whole nation, and he entertained no doubt as to its constitutionality. He had no doubt his vote would be approved in the end.

Mr. DAVIS, of West Virginia, presented a document signed by the leading merchants and business men of West Virginia, irrespective of party, approving of the Electoral Count bill recently passed. Laid on the table.

Mr. CONOVER, of Florida, Chairman of the Committee on Enrolled Bills, said that he was authorized to say that the President of the United States had signed the bill in regard to the Electoral count, and he would announce that fact to the Senate by a special Message to-day.

PETITION TO BE ABSOLVED FROM ALLEGIANCE.

Mr. HOWE presented the petition of Frederick Hinkel, of Wisconsin, praying for the passage of an act to absolve him from his allegiance to the Government of the United States. Referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

THE GOVERNMENT OF SOUTH CAROLINA.

Mr. ROBERTSON, of South Carolina, called up the resolution recently submitted by Mr. Gordon, declaring that the State Government now existing in South Carolina represented by Wade Hampton is the legal Government of the State. He desired to submit some remarks in regard thereto, but in consequence of nervous indisposition requested the Chief Clerk to read his remarks. He reviewed briefly the recent campaign in South Carolina, and said the extension of the Edgefield and Laurens County Representatives from the Legislature by the military was illegal. He denied that there was intimidation on the part of the whites toward the blacks during the campaign. At the beginning of the campaign there may have been some violence in portions of the State, but it was discountenanced and stopped by Gen. Hampton. Truth compelled him to state that in Charleston and Beaufort during the canvass colored Republicans were violent toward Democrats of their own color. No doubt there were some fraudulent votes cast, but no more by the Democrats than by the Republicans.

MESSAGE OF THE PRESIDENT ON THE ELECTORAL BILL.

The CHAIR laid before the Senate a Message from the President of the United States, giving his reasons for approving the Electoral Count bill. The Message was read.

Mr. CONKLING, of New-York, said: "I move this important and wise Message be printed and lie on the table." Agreed to.

ARMY REORGANIZATION.

The CHAIR also laid before the Senate a Message from the President transmitting the proceedings of the commission appointed to examine the whole subject of reform and reorganization in the Army of the United States. Ordered to be printed and lie on the table.

THE FLORIDA REPORT.

Mr. SARGENT, of California, from the Committee on Privileges and Elections, submitted a report of the majority of the sub-committee which investigated the investigation in regard to the late election in Florida. Ordered to be printed and lie on the table. He also gave notice that Mr. Cooper would present a report on behalf of the minority of the committee.

THE PACIFIC RAILROAD SINKING FUND BILL.

The Senate then resumed the consideration of the unfinished business, being the bill reported by the Judiciary Committee to amend the Pacific Railroad acts so as to provide a sinking fund for the liquidation of the indebtedness due the Government by said roads.

Mr. MITCHELL, of Oregon, argued that the passage of the bill would be transcending the limit of constitutional power. With his views as to the nature of the contract between the Government and the railroad companies by virtue of the acts of July 1, 1862, and May 2, 1864, and in view of the total absence of all constitutional power in Congress to alter existing law as to affect the obligations of a contract or destroy vested rights, he felt constrained to dissent from the bill. He would neither defend nor condemn the action of the corporations whose interests were involved in reference to the management of their roads, nor would he discuss whether they had or not amassed princely fortunes in the construction and management of their roads, but would confine himself to the legal question of the constitutional power of Congress to pass the bill. He then referred to the privileges conferred upon the railroad companies, and said that by the acts, taken together, it was provided among other things: First, that after said railroads were completed and until the bonds issued in aid of their construction, together with the interest on the same, was paid, at least 5 per cent. of the net earnings should be annually applied to their payment. Second, that one-half of the compensation for services rendered the Government by such companies should be retained by the Government, and applied to the payment of the bonds issued by the Government in aid of the construction of said road, these bonds running 30 years, and the interest thereon is, according to the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, not required to be refunded by the companies until the maturity of the principal of the bonds. Here, then, we have the plain terms of the contract, full, explicit, and, since the decision of the Supreme Court as to the time when the interest matures as to the companies, free, as it seems to me, from all ambiguity. The Government, whether wisely or otherwise, made its grant of lands, issued its bonds, stipulated for the payment of the annual interest, and conferred upon these companies franchises and powers which, when accepted and acted upon by the companies respectively, became in them vested rights which no legislation can disturb. Upon the faith of these grants and in pursuance of these contracts, stock was subscribed, private capital invested, debts with third parties contracted, mortgages executed, and obligations were thus created which cannot be rightfully impaired by any act of legislation under any reserved power to alter, amend, or repeal. More liberal provision in the interest of the Government might have been provided for when these contracts were authorized, but in the wisdom of the Congress that enacted these laws this was deemed sufficient. No sinking fund was provided beyond this, while the lien of

The New York Times

NEW-YORK, TUESDAY, JAN. 30, 1877.

AMUSEMENTS THIS EVENING.

PARK THEATRE.—OUR BOARDING HOUSE—Mr. Stuart Robson, Mr. W. H. Crane, Mrs. A. F. Baker, Miss Maude Harrison.

EAGLE THEATRE.—LA JOLIE PARFUMEUSE, (Opera Bouffe)—Mlle. Marie Aimie.

WALLACK'S THEATRE.—ALL FOR LOVE—Mr. Lester Wallack, Mr. S. Mackaye, Miss Ada Dyas.

FIFTH AVENUE THEATRE.—LEMONS; OR, WEDLOCK FOR SEVEN—Mr. C. F. Coghlan, Miss F. Davenport.

UNION SQUARE THEATRE.—Miss MULTON—Miss Clara Morris, Mr. James O'Neil, Mr. J. H. Stoddart.

NIBLO'S GARDEN.—AROUND THE WORLD IN EIGHTY DAYS (Spectacular)—Kiralfy Brothers.

OLYMPIC THEATRE—THE BIG BONANZA.

BROADWAY THEATRE.—UNCLE TOM'S CABIN—Mrs. G. C. Howard and Georgia Jubilee Singers.

NEW-YORK AQUARIUM.—RARE AND CURIOUS FISH AND MAMMALIA, STATUARY, &c.—Day and evening.

HELLER'S WONDER THEATRE.—PRESTIDIGITATION, MUSIC, AND HUMOR—Mr. Robert Heller, Miss Heller.

SAN FRANCISCO MINSTRELS.—MINSTRELSY, FARCES and NEGRO COMICALITIES

GILMORE'S GARDEN.—EQUESTRIAN GAMES AND FIELD SPORTS.

GRAND OPERA-HOUSE.—MAN AND WIFE.

NATIONAL ACADEMY OF DESIGN.—EXHIBITION OF WATER COLORS. Day and evening.

STEINWAY HALL.—PIANO CONCERT by Mr. Frederic Boscovitz.

THIRTEENTH STREET PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.—CONCERT by the Hampton Singers.

THE NEW-YORK TIMES.

THE NEW-YORK TIMES is the best family paper published; it contains the latest news and correspondence. It is free from all objectionable advertisements and reports, and may be safely admitted to every domestic circle. The disgraceful announcements of quacks and medical pretenders, which pollute so many newspapers of the day, are not admitted into the columns of THE TIMES on any terms.

Terms, cash in advance.

TERMS TO MAIL SUBSCRIBERS.

Postage will be prepaid by the Publishers on all Editions of THE TIMES sent to Subscribers in the United States.

The DAILY TIMES, per annum, including the Sunday Edition.....$12 00
The DAILY TIMES, per annum, exclusive of the Sunday Edition.....10 00
The Sunday Edition, per annum.....2 00
The SEMI-WEEKLY TIMES, per annum.....3 60
The WEEKLY TIMES, per annum.....1 20

These prices are invariable. We have no travelling agents. Remit in drafts on New-York or Post Office Money Orders, if possible, and where neither of these can be procured send the money in a registered letter.

Address THE NEW-YORK TIMES,
New-York City

☞ Advertisements for THE WEEKLY TIMES must be handed in before 6 o'clock this evening.

NOTICE.

We cannot notice anonymous communications. In all cases we require the writer's name and address, not for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

We cannot, under any circumstances, return rejected communications, nor can we undertake to preserve manuscripts.

The Republican Senators having made their caucus nominations for the Electoral Commission, the party will be represented in that body as follows: Justices MILLER and STRONG, Senators EDMUNDS, FRELINGHUYSEN and MORTON, and Representatives GARFIELD and HOAR. As Judge DAVIS positively declines to serve on the Commission, and as the fifth Judge must be a Republican, his name falls to be added to the above list. In the Senatorial caucus Mr. EDMUNDS appears to have caused some rather unnecessary trouble by insisting that three Republicans who participated in the preparation of the counting bill should be chosen as the representatives on the Commission. A good deal of feeling is said to have been excited by the attempt to place Mr CONKLING on the commission, and his name was withdrawn in deference to certain emphatic objections made to such a choice. It is also reported, however, that Mr. CONKLING did not desire the position, and would, in fact, have declined it had it been tendered him. Assuming that to be true, it is one of the few features of Mr. CONKLING'S recent course which is likely to elicit the approval of the party with which he is nominally connected.

The President has signed the Counting bill, and gives his reasons for so doing in a Message which reveals his good intentions rather more clearly than his sense of constitutional obligations. The President admits "that the history of our country in its earlier period shows that the President of the Senate has counted the votes and declared their standing"—that he has in fact exercised the judicial powers which the framers of the Constitution conferred on him. But he maintains—in defiance of the teachings of our later as well as "earlier" history—that all doubts and disputes about the reception of votes have been settled by the two houses of Congress. The President does not attempt to show where Congress got its right to delegate to a tribunal equally outside of the Constitution and of historical precedent, the power to settle for it the doubts and disputes which have been raised around the Electoral vote of 1876. By a somewhat curious process of reasoning, however, he reaches the conclusion that to give away power which, if Congress ever had, it was bound to exercise, is not a compromise, but "an enforcement of right." The President has signed the bill believing that it will revive industry, make employment for labor, furnish profitable use for capital, and relieve enterprise from the paralysis under which it suffers. We trust that he will not be disappointed, though he might wisely have pitched his expectations somewhat lower.

The majority report of the Senate Committee on the Florida Election was presented yesterday. The report fully sustains the action of the State Canvassers on the score both of legality and fairness. It points out, moreover, how impossible it will be for Congress, and, therefore, for any commission exercising the delegated authority of Congress, to go behind the action of the board. The Constitution lodges the whole power of canvassing votes in the State, and the board kept strictly within the powers prescribed by State law. It is further urged, that "if Congress can revise the action of the board, it must go to the bottom of the polls and ascertain the true vote in all the contested counties." This tedious inquiry would merely result in showing that the Hayes Electors had a larger majority than that declared by the Board of Canvassers, but it is the only method of investigation which can be adopted, if the official returns are not to be accepted as final. The case of Florida will be the first of the disputed elections which will come before the Counting Commission. The principles which rule in this case must also be accepted in the case of Louisiana, and the decision of the Commission in regard to Florida will settle whether HAYES will be inaugurated on March 5, or whether the Commission will resolve itself into a committee of inquiry requiring a perfectly indefinite period in which to make its report.

A new and dangerous type of swindling has come to light in Washington. By collusion with certain Treasury officials, either in Washington or New-York, some sharpers in this City appear to have obtained the numbers, amounts, and owners' names of registered bonds on which interest had accrued without being claimed by those to whom it was payable. Powers of attorney, which are alleged to have been forged, have already been discovered covering an amount of about eleven hundred dollars. It is to be hoped that the conviction expressed in our dispatches as to the limited character of these transactions will turn out to be well founded. Two or three millions of interest on registered bonds, lying unclaimed in the Treasury vaults, form an exceedingly tempting bait for the ingenious rascality of the period, and it is obvious that some better means than now exist for identifying claimants for such interest will have to be devised. The fact that some of the employes of the Treasury must have furnished the data required for this very bold swindle is a very unpleasant revelation of the weakness of our civil service in what has been considered one of its strongest subdivisions.

A curious suggestion as to the appointment of Col. GORDON to be Governor of one of the Christian provinces of Turkey comes to us by the cable. It is reported that the Sublime Porte will appoint five Christians as Governors of the provinces. Col. GORDON, who is in the service of the Khédive, has just returned from one of his highly successful explorations in the interior of Africa. He is sent for in haste, and the London Times, with much solemnity and circumlocution, nominates him for Governor of Bulgaria. Such an appointment, it must be acknowledged, would be an astonishing event in the history of Turkey. There have been stories of adventurous Irishmen being transformed into beys and bashaws, but the spectacle of a prominent and well-known English officer at the head of a great province is yet to be produced in Turkey. Col. GORDON'S talents, however, are of a very high order. His sagacity, executive ability, and thorough acquaintance with Oriental character and history, amply qualify him for a place like that for which he has been so suddenly recommended.

SPECIE PAYMENTS.

It is reported from Washington that the President is about to recommend to Congress specific action with reference to the resumption of specie payments, which he is confident can be brought about at a very early date. The statement that the President has said that we can resume by the 1st of March this year we presume is a mistake. There is no reason to suppose that anything which the Government can do would force the legal tenders permanently to par within that time, or make it safe for the Treasury to redeem them in gold on presentation after that date. On the contrary, such a promise would be in the last degree venturesome and unwise, and its effect would be more likely to hinder than to promote resumption. We already have on the statute book a day fixed for resumption, which is quite as early as any day determined by law needs to be. It does not prevent us from reaching resumption in fact before that time if we wish to and can, while, on the other hand, it leaves us free to perfect such measures as are needed to make resumption safe and lasting.

The circumstances which favor early resumption will yield us all these advantages, if we take proper steps toward resumption, without committing ourselves to any particular date. What these circumstances are President GRANT seems, in a general way, to understand clearly. The demand of Europe for our exports is, of course, an important element, because it enables the Government, by a regular and ordinary method, to obtain such a reserve of gold as may be necessary to begin and to continue resumption. It has already resulted in getting over $40,000,000 in gold into the hands of the associated banks of New-York City, and, of course, a proportionate sum in the hands of the other banks of the country. Whether the Government shall take the benefit of this accumulation or not, is for it to say. The mere presence of the gold in this country will not bring about resumption. If the Treasury does not take this opportunity to strengthen itself, it may easily lose it altogether within a twelvemonth, or sooner. It already possesses, under the provisions of the law of 1875, all the powers required. The only question is whether it will use them.

The present ease in the money markets not only of this country but of other countries, is also an important advantage. It frees a large amount of our legal tender currency from active employment in commerce, and makes it possible to get it out of the way without hampering business, or even seeming to do so. With money on call in the street at from 4 per cent. to 5 per cent., and good mercantile paper at 4½ per cent. to 6 per cent.; with gold quoted at 105⅝, and with the best securities yielding only from 4½ to 5 per cent. in currency, it is obvious that we have a great deal more currency than we actually need. It is equally plain that if a part of this currency can be permanently removed, the revival of any demand for money would instantly bring our paper to par, and would restore us to normal relations with the rest of the commercial world. We should then be able to draw what money we needed from the general stock of the financial centres, and would no longer be subject to the annoying and costly fluctuations from which we have heretofore suffered. To accomplish this, it is not necessary to resort to any arbitrary or doubtful measures. It is not necessary, nor would it be advisable, for instance, to direct the retirement of a fixed sum each month. There is a much easier and more effective method, and one which will adapt itself not only to the present situation, but to any changes which may take place. All that the Government needs to do is to restore the right of funding to the holders of the legal tender notes, a right which they possessed when the notes were first authorized, and of which they never ought to have been deprived. If the holders of these notes were offered a 4 per cent. thirty-year bond, payable, interest and principal, in gold, there is every reason to believe that a considerable proportion of outstanding notes would be funded. Precisely how much, it is impossible, of course, to say; but it is also unnecessary to inquire. It is enough to know that the amount would be that one, whatever it might come to, which cannot find safe and easy employment at current rates. No money would be taken which could be profitably employed in trade; none would be left which could not be so employed. The surplus currency, no more and no less, would find its way to the Treasury, and, being destroyed, would never again plague the country with its changeable value.

A bill is already before the House providing for the issue of such bonds as we have described. It was introduced early in the present month by Mr. CHITTENDEN, of the Third District, in this State. We should say that it would afford a good basis for all necessary legislation. Congress will do much to redeem the injury which its general course has inflicted upon the country, if it will turn its attention seriously to this matter, and a special recommendation from Gen. GRANT on the subject would complete a record in regard to the finances which has had many creditable features.

LIFE INSURANCE FRAUDS.

We are not yet at the end of the rottenness and fraud which have brought disaster and disgrace upon the business of life insurance. The New-Jersey Mutual is now added to the list of insolvent companies. The announcement was not unexpected. The audacity with which its managers have tried, with the help of certain newspapers, to "puff" the company into the confidence of the public, could deceive no one as to its condition or the fate that awaited it. The obvious trickery of its plan for acquiring policies from the insolvent Continental, and the artifices it employed, first to evade examination under the laws of this State, and then to stifle the investigation which had been commenced in New-Jersey, revealed plainly enough the desperate strait to which it had been reduced. The expulsion of its agencies from Massachusetts, a few days ago, was a result of its admitted inability to comply with the requirements of that State. In New-York it has gone on, despite the conviction that it was insolvent, unhindered by the law; and now, with a proved deficiency of four hundred thousand dollars, it suddenly and secretly transfers its assets and policies to a Washington concern more rotten than itself, and tainted at every stage of its recent history with evidence of fraud.

The necessity for stringent legislation to control the amalgamation of life insurance companies could not be more clearly exemplified than in the history of the New-Jersey Mutual or of the National Capitol, to which the former desires to transfer its business. It absorbed under suspicious circumstances the Hope Mutual, which again had swallowed the Craftsmen's Company. It had reinsured the policies of the Hercules and the Commonwealth, and had picked up over a thousand policies of the Continental. A large proportion of the policies of the New-Jersey Mutual, then, was made up of the policies of various companies which had actually collapsed, or which traded their liabilities to avert an exposure of bankruptcy. Business acquired under these conditions is bad business. The companies having failed to accumulate the requisite "reserve," cannot transfer with the policies the money needed to render them safe; and the company accepting the policies, and assuming responsibility on account of them without being at the same time fully reimbursed, must either submit to a loss which entails danger upon its own policy-holders, or by sharp practice give to the transferred policyholders an insurance inferior to that they bargained for. The printed "points" of Mr. BARNES, in the Court of Appeals, bring out the fact that the whole machinery of the Continental Company has been used to transfer its policies to the New-Jersey Mutual "in exchange for almost valueless twenty-year-term policies." Such a transaction is obviously a fraud upon the holders of the policies. One cannot wonder that a company thus indifferent to the dictates of common honesty now closes its own career by a wholesale transfer of its victims to a bogus company without capital, without a semblance of character, and exempt from the operation of the laws of States in which the victims reside. The manner of the death of the New-Jersey Mutual is in perfect keeping with its career.

The National Capitol Life Insurance Company, to whose tender mercies the hapless policy-holders of the New-Jersey Mutual are transferred, is little more than a mythical corporation. It came into existence originally under a charter unwisely granted by Congress, with a capital that was never more than nominal. The few dupes it contrived to obtain were in due time handed over to a Pennsylvania Company, and the charter became the property of the chief officer of a bankrupt Connecticut company—the American National Life of New-Haven. Some light is shed upon the story of Mr. NOYES by a petition we elsewhere publish, addressed to the Legislature of this State by policy-holders of the defunct National Company of this City. The managers of the National made terms with Mr. NOYES, of the American National, who has ever since been trying to get the hundred thousand dollars which the National had deposited at Albany; and when Mr. NOYES' New-Haven Company was ruled out by the Insurance Commissioner and Courts of Connecticut, Mr. Noyes quietly absorbed all that remained of the two companies into the National Capitol, which now comes to the surface as the recipient of the assets and risks of the New-Jersey Mutual. "The National Capitol," says one of the published announcements upon the subject, "does not intend to take any new business, and as it acts under a special charter from Congress, it will not be required to make any statement of its condition." There's a consoling bit of impudence! The National Capitol Company chuckles over the fact that privileges conferred by Congress exempt it from the unpleasant supervision of a competent Commissioner; and being well aware of its own worthlessness, its managers propose to confine their energies to the thirteen thousand dupes whom the New-Jersey Mutual transfers, and the dupes acquired from the American National of New-Haven and the National of New-York. To complete the record of a transaction which every well-wisher of honest life insurance must desire to see frustrated, it is only necessary to remember that the National Capitol, having no resources of its own, assumes from the New-Jersey Mutual risks which require for their protection four hundred thousand dollars more than the latter company is able to pay. There must be fraud somewhere in an operation like this.

We can but hope that New-Jersey law will be found equal to the emergency. It is monstrous to suppose that a few individuals, representing the owners of a hundred thousand dollars of stock, are to do as they please with the million and three-quarters which are left of the funds contributed by the policy-holders. The managers of the New-Jersey Mutual are either incapable or unworthy, as the fate of their company proves. The managers of the National Capitol are certainly not any more entitled to public confidence. The question for the moment is, Are the policy-holders of the New-Jersey Mutual obliged to stand quietly by and see their property still further jeopardized? The State which gave the New-Jersey Mutual its being must answer the question.

For New-York the affair has a moral which deserves immediate attention at Albany. The process of amalgamation as now carried on is a prolific source of fraud. The law imposes no check upon it. It inflicts incalculable wrong upon policy-holders, and makes their misfortunes a means of enriching cunning officials. The only remedy lies in prohibiting amalgamation unless the solvency of the companies be established to the satisfaction of the Insurance Department.

Faith in the department, however, will not be strengthened by the report of Mr. ANDERSON, the Receiver appointed for the Continental Company by the Supreme Court. His statement shows a deficit of half a million, and he declares that a critical examination of the company's affairs at any time during the last six years would have disclosed the fact of its insolvency. During these six years has the department been negligent or inefficient? It must have been one or the other, if Mr. ANDERSON speaks the truth.

A REPUBLIC IN CHAOS.

On the part of some of our people, there is an expressed apprehension that the condition of Mexico will eventually embarrass our own Republic. To be sure, it is unpleasant that we should have a political volcano on our southern and south-western border. But, though the eruptions and commotions may indirectly affect us, our anxiety ought to be roused in behalf of our Mexican friends rather than for ourselves. It is true that a State which sends forth its leading statesmen as refugees and fugitives, once in every few months, is not a comfortable neighbor. But our first solicitude, as friends of popular government, ought to be for the imperiled Republic of Mexico. Certainly, there has never been a time during these twenty-five years past when the condition of the Mexican Republic was so hopeless as now. When a monarchical conspiracy of European origin had placed one of the Hapsburgs on an imperial throne in Mexico, we were in the midst of a civil war of our own. We simply said: "Wait until this affair is off our hands, and we will end all that." And when the American Republic was in a position to say it, the needful word was said, and the Empire of the hapless MAXIMILIAN tumbled.

Now, however, the case is very different. While the fraudulent Empire threatened the Republic of Mexico, all Mexicans were united against a common foe. A few such renegades and adventurers as ALMONTE, it is true, conspired to bring the Archduke to Mexico; but during the dark days, when the rightful Government of the Republic was fugitive in the Provinces of the North, the Empire had no real foundation in popular esteem or affection. The bulk of the people secretly adhered to JUAREZ, and hoped for his return. Now, though there is no way of arriving at the popular judgment, the Mexican leaders are themselves divided into hopelessly contending factions, and there are at least two pretenders to the Presidency, while LERDO, the constitutional chief magistrate, is a defeated fugitive. It will be impossible for this internecine conflict to endure very long without affecting our own relations; but, since we desire to see our sister Republic flourishing and prosperous, our anxiety should be for constitutional government in Mexico.

There is no shadow of right in the pretensions of IGLESIAS, who has lately arrived in San Francisco, having found no foothold anywhere in the Mexican States. He claims, however, that LERDO'S re-election in 1876 was unconstitutional. He pretends that the Mexican Constitution limits the Presidential incumbent to one term. This is a positive falsehood. Nowhere in that instrument can any such limitation be found, and the assertion of IGLESIAS, made to a San Francisco reporter, is a pure invention. But IGLESIAS, more than two months before LERDO'S first term expired, assumed the rôle of a conspirator; and, though in the event of LERDO'S ineligibility, he (IGLESIAS) would have legitimately been in the line of the succession, he outlawed himself by fleeing from the capital and issuing a pronunciamiento against the regular Government. As for DIAZ, he is a military bandit who has been a disturber of the public peace ever since the death of JUAREZ. DIAZ, as long ago as March, 1876, made his pronunciamiento, in which he declared himself a leader of the people in a vague and general way. But precisely what he proposed to gain for the people, and why any revolt was needed, he has never made clear to outside observers. He does not, as we understand it, even pretend to have been elected President, though he has ordered a popular vote, which will undoubtedly result in his return, unless some stronger man comes up in the meantime and captures the Government. Moreover, while IGLESIAS was ineffectually appealing to the House of Representatives, which is the sole judge of election returns, and to the Supreme Court, of which he was Chief Justice, he was in correspondence with DIAZ, who, as a professional revolutionist, is said to have agreed to stand by him in his open conflict with President LERDO. It was only when DIAZ, as a military hero, found himself master of the situation, that he shook off IGLESIAS and resolved to secure the Presidency for himself.

The situation, then, is briefly this: LERDO, the legally-elected President, is a fugitive. IGLESIAS, who pretended to be acting President on account of the so-called disability of LERDO, has no following, and is obliged to flee from the country. DIAZ, a rude soldier, who professes to be a sort of Mexican BRUTUS, is in possession, and has issued orders for an election, which must inevitably result in his choice, just as NAPOLEON'S mock plébiscite in 1852 fixed him upon the imperial throne. From the interior of Mexico we hear of nothing but an aggravation of the usual chronic state of disorder. It cannot be denied that the administration of LERDO was liberal, wise, and sagacious. Under it the long prostrated industries of the Republic were slowly reviving, and continued peace was sure to restore prosperity, to which Mexico has long been a stranger. Dismemberment, confusion, and anarchy are supreme; and the political harmony and material progress which we ardently desire for ourselves and our neighbors are indefinitely postponed. There is a fight for the Presidency, and neither of the factions will relinquish the struggle as long as either has a man or a dollar. Already the usurping IGLESIAS, who is plotting on American soil, proposes to invade Mexico by way of New-Orleans and Texas. LERDO has gone South, and proposes to strengthen his fortunes in Central America before he returns to raise his standard again. Meanwhile, semi-independent chieftains and political bandits are robbing merchants, and those who do not invoke the specious forms of law in cities, for the replenishment of their purses, openly take the highway. There is no Government in Mexico which the United States can recognize. DIAZ, whether Dictator, Provisional President, or military conqueror, is supreme for the time. Questions relating to the payments of indemnity due us, and to the policing of the Rio Grande boundary, must speedily arise. It will puzzle the State Department to decide whether Mexico has any Government whatever.

THE STATE SURVEY.

The last Legislature authorized the creation of a Board of Commissioners for the purpose of instituting and organizing "an accurate trigonometric and topographical survey of the State." It appropriated $20,000 for the first year's work. The Commission was organized, with Mr. WILLIAM A. WHEELER at the head. The work was begun, but State Controller ROBINSON, now Governor, refused to pay over the money which had been appropriated. The Commissioners were not discouraged. They advanced funds from their own pockets; the director of the survey, and his subordinates continued their services without pay. They looked to the next Legislature to lift them out of their difficulties, and to place the survey on a more permanent footing; but the opposition of the Governor continues, and some of the original supporters of the project have turned their backs upon it, but for no very creditable reasons. Gov. ROBINSON, in his Message, recommends that the law authorizing the undertaking be promptly repealed. He bases his objection to it on the fact that the survey was entered upon "without any application by the people," and that it "would remedy no appreciable evil." It may fairly be replied that the Government Coast Survey was instituted without being applied for by the people, in the political sense of the term; yet no one denies its great usefulness and value; and there can be no doubt that an accurate survey of this State on the same plan would pay dollar for dollar for the money expended upon it.

The inaccuracy of all our State maps, the confusion of local boundaries, and the uncertainty of local surveys from this cause, are very palpable and costly evils. They have been found sufficiently costly in some other States, as in Pennsylvania and New-Jersey, to cause the State authorities to authorize such complete surveys to be made as is proposed for this State. The most serious objection to the survey was the large expense it would entail. If carried out on the original plans, the cost would run up into the millions; and the survey of the whole State would not be completed in much less than twenty-five years. The original plans, however, contemplated the actual measurement of every square foot of the whole area of the State; but the modified plans differ from these as an accurate outline drawing differs from the same drawing when all the shading has been filled in. The Commissioners propose to run long lines over the State, and to fix in each county and township two or three monuments, whose position with reference to these lines has been determined with absolute accuracy. The effect of this would be to give surveyors absolutely correct starting-points from which to run their lines for local surveys; the boundaries of counties, townships, villages, and farms could be fixed with exactness; and the confusion which now everywhere obtains from the want of correct starting points would be entirely obviated.

The cost of running the lines referred to and establishing the monuments would be a mere fraction of the cost of surveying the State as originally planned. Of the appropriation of $20,000 made for the State survey, enough still remains to complete the work of measuring some ten or twelve counties. The Surveyors started their work from the County of Albany. A base line was furnished to them near that city by the Coast Survey, which had made three sets of lines, each more than 200 miles long, meet at a common base line run on the hills at the back of the city. From this line the State surveyors carried their lines through the counties adjacent, and if they are not interrupted in their work, the next Summer will see the survey carried through all the middle of the State. If the Legislature should see fit to stop the work, there will be nothing lost of what has been done. Every portion of the survey is complete in itself. If nothing further should be done than has been, the simple result would be that some seven or eight counties would have the advantage of being furnished with correct data for local surveys and the others would not. It is important that this fact should be clearly understood. The work pays for itself as it goes on. The State is not required to wait until the whole survey is completed before any part becomes of use. Each monument as it is established may be the starting-point for another, or it may be made the last. In either case its value is the same. Another appropriation of the same amount as the last will be sufficient to enable the Survey Commission to go on for a year or more. The continuance of the survey or its stoppage rests with the Legislature. The Commissioners court the fullest inquiry into the extent and character of the work so far done; and it is to be hoped that any decision the law-making powers arrive at in the premises will not be reached without a careful consideration of all the arguments for and against the continuance of the survey.

MUSIC AND BLUE GLASS.

The discovery that all sorts of physical and moral qualities can be developed by the use of colored light, was certainly very surprising, but a still more surprising discovery has since been made. An English scientific person has ascertained, to his own satisfaction at least, that music stimulates the growth of plants. If plant life is susceptible to the influence of music, so also must be animal life. We have here a discovery of far greater importance than that of the tonic qualities of blue glass, since music is both cheaper and better adapted for general use than is glass. There is no doubt—if we accept Gen. PLEASONTON'S evidence—that pigs will thrive to an astounding extent in a blue glass pen; but few farmers would care to incur the expense of putting together a glass pen, through which excitable dogs would constantly jump. On the other hand, the farmer's daughter, by simply spending an hour each day in playing her accordeon to the delighted pigs, can fatten them to the explosive point without the outlay of a single dollar. Blue glass may be cheaper in the long run than swill, but music is far cheaper than either, and hence the discovery of its nourishing and strengthening qualities is one the importance of which can hardly be overestimated.

The discovery, like many others was made by accident. The English scientific person had planted a garden of roses which steadfastly refused to grow, although he encouraged them with guano and all the delicacies dear to the floral root. One day, being in a state of abject despair, he took his harmonium into the garden and sat down to play. Doubtless he aimed to reduce his neighbors to his own level of misery, and that he succeeded may be assumed, inasmuch as he repeated his musical garden concert daily, for several consecutive days. At the end of that time he was astonished to find that his sick and stunted flowers had not only recovered their health but were growing with a rapidity quite unprecedented in horticultural annals. It was plain that music had succeeded where guano had failed, and the delighted scientific person at once wrote an elaborate essay on the tonic properties of music and published it in one of those scientific periodicals which are devoted to the propagation of facts and figures, and which scorn the weakness of men who believe in anything that cannot be weighed and submitted to chemical analysis.

Although this discovery is yet in its infancy, and we are still ignorant of the laws which regulate the action of music upon living organisms, it is safe to assume that one kind of music and one kind of musical instrument are not of universal efficacy. It has been shown that in the case of roses of stunted growth the harmonium is indicated, but we have not yet been told what sort of music must be played upon that instrument in order to stimulate roses in the best and safest way. In all probability, each plant and each animal has its own appropriate music, under the influence of which it will best thrive, and there are undoubtedly certain instruments which are beneficial in some cases and injurious in others. Until we have mastered the entire materia medica of remedial music, it will be a hazardous affair to play indiscriminate music upon miscellaneous instruments in the presence of all sorts of flowers and animals. We might cure the sick pig with OFFENBACH'S melodies, and heal the ailing potato with "Kathleen Mavourneen," but we should be just as likely to wilt the modest violet with the notes of "Un Mari Sage," and to drive the maddened potato into the society of depraved Colorado beetles by playing "God Save the Queen." We must, first of all, know the effects of every kind of music and of every variety of instrument before we recklessly prescribe them. The lives of roses and pigs cannot be fooled away as if they were human patients and the horticulturist and pig-fancier were reckless and irresponsible chemists, with the usual professional unwillingness to discriminate between Epsom salts and oxalic acid.

As has been suggested, it seems highly probable that OFFENBACH'S music is the remedy best adapted to stimulate pigs to rapid growth. Still, it is quite possible that a Wagner-fed pig would prove more healthy, though possibly less fat, than one nourished exclusively upon opera-bouffe music. The blackberry bushes would doubtless thrive under the influence of Ethiopian melodies, and the cabbage would be cheered and strengthened by German folk-songs. Pure Italian melodies might be advantageously used in promoting the growth of the majority of hot-house flowers, while classic symphonies would very possibly stimulate our vines to unheard-of exertion in fruit bearing. These, however, are mere speculations, and their truth can only be ascertained by careful experiment.

In regard to the proper selection of instruments, we know that the harmonium has been successfully used in rose-culture. We also know that the common tin horn and the toy drum have a wonderful effect upon the human small boy. If one of these instruments is presented to a small boy he never dies, although the entire neighborhood is willing and anxious to present him with a coffin. Moreover, he rarely falls ill, and, as a rule, is able to perform upon his instruments at all hours and with preternatural vigor. The flute is also extremely conducive to longevity among young and unmarried men who reside in boarding-houses. Such men, when addicted to the habitual use of the flute, have lived on while generations of their fellow-boarders have gone mad and perished miserably. On the other hand, the cornet is decidedly dangerous to human life, and there are many cases on record which tell us of unfortunate men who, after a month's or six weeks' use of the cornet, have either suddenly died, or have developed a violent and dangerous tendency of club to the head, which has necessitated the immediate abandonment of those noxious instruments.

The precise effect of different instruments will, of course, be learned in time. We shall then adopt music as the sole agent of agriculture, horticulture, and stock-raising. Our corn will rise at the tap of the drum, our cattle will fatten on wind instruments, and our flowers will bloom and nod to the music of the piano. Unless, indeed, experience shows that the constant and simultaneous playing of different airs upon thousands of different instruments results in the production of an atrocious noise, under the influence of which noxious weeds and Spitz dogs grow in such numbers and to such an extent as to force all reputable plants and animals out of existence.

THE PEOPLE OF NEW-JERSEY.

AS REPRESENTED BY THE MEMBERS OF THE STATE LEGISLATURE — UNIMPORTANT BUSINESS TRANSACTED YESTERDAY IN BOTH HOUSES.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

TRENTON, Jan. 29.—The Jersey City Commissions bill has been made the special order in the House for to-morrow. Mr. Cooper, of Morris, in order to cut off Democratic buncombe, offered a resolution this evening declaring that all resolutions hereafter offered in relation to national affairs shall go to the proper committee without debate; but on motion of Mr. Egan it was laid on the table. In the Senate a bill was offered by Mr. Hobart creating a State Board of Health of seven members to be appointed by the Governor, the Secretary of State, and Attorney General to be ex officio members. Their duty is to gather all statistics showing the health of the State and the relative health of portions of it. The hard times have led to the introduction of several bills evolving to the relief of property owners groaning beneath the weight of accumulated taxes. A bill introduced by Mr. Hobart authorizes cities to compromise with tax-payers in all matters of disputed arrearages. A bill presented to the house by Mr. Griggs authorizes cities to accept in payment of past due taxes the bond of property owners, carrying interest at 7 per cent., and payable within 10 years. Mr. DeWitt introduced a bill making the mother of an illegitimate child dying without issue the rightful heir to his real estate. A law to the same purport regulating the personal estates of such persons is already in existence. The rest of the bills introduced, also the eight or ten bills which passed the House, are of no public interest.

CURIOUS SALE AT PHILADELPHIA

AN ECCENTRIC GENTLEMAN'S COLLECTION—RARE OLD CLOCKS AND OTHER ARTICLES SOLD AT AUCTION—VALUABLE EFFECTS WHICH BROUGHT EXTREMELY LOW PRICES.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PHILDELPHIA, Monday, Jan. 29, 1877.

A sale took place here to-day, comprising the effects of the late Sylvester Bonaffon, a dry goods importer, who was well known in his life-time to a large number of New-York dealers, and whose mills for the manufacture of Jacquard linens were located in New-York State. Mr. Bonaffon was of very eccentric disposition, and occupied quarters at the corner of Eighth and Sansom streets, in a building used principally for offices and manufacturing purposes. On the second floor he had rooms fitted up in elegant style, and filled with articles of vertu, bric-a-brac, and odds and ends of every description. He had been 15 years collecting these things, which embraced every article from a tobacco box to an orchestrion and a base drum. Mr. Bonaffon died in December last, and left an estate valued at half a million dollars. The sale to-day attracted a large attendance of our best citizens, who embraced this opportunity to add to their collections of rarities. The whole cost nearly $50,000, and had been brought from every quarter of the globe; but the price realized, $4,833, was rather discouraging. There was an insurance on the property of $25,000. The most noted fancy of the deceased was in clocks, of which he had an almost endless quantity, composed of Anchor clocks, Seth Thomas clocks, 30-day clocks, 24-hour clocks, and indeed time-pieces of every variety. At one time they were all in running order, and were regulated by a watch which he carried. To add further to his eccentric ideas, he had a speaking trumpet which led from his apartments to his livery-stable, nearly a block distant, and through this he summoned his teams whenever he felt so disposed. It was his invariable custom to visit New-York every Monday, where he made purchases for his Philadelphia customers. He had erected in his room a telegraphic key-board, and had direct communication with his place of business, Continental Hotel, and Omaha, and was arranging for talking with California by means of the electric current at the time of his death. Among the articles sold to-day was a French China flower-pot with artificial flowers, and a mechanical singing bird which would chirp for an hour at a time. This cost him $500, and was sold for $90. A black marble and bevel-edge French-plate clock, which will run 400 days with one winding, sold for $115. His oil paintings and rare engravings sold for a mere song, not realizing more than $10 a piece for the best in the lot. A couple of elegant Swiss-carved cuckoo clocks brought $17 and $22. Two orchestrions, one playing 18 tunes, and the other 31, netted $825 and $1,200 respectively. The first-named cost $4,500, and the latter nearly $8,000, and were made by Blessing, of Geneva, and imported at Mr. Bonaffon's order. A convex mirror, valued at $150, was sold for $40, while walnut and rosewood centre-tables, with Scaggalio marble-tops, fetched the insignificant sum of $20, $18, and $10.

Mr. Bonaffon never attended an auction sale, but always purchased the articles which he died possessed of from first hands. He was a heavy stockholder in all the theatres, and attended them in rotation each night in the week. He was a brother of Mr. A. L. Bonaffon, of post-tradership fame, and was well known throughout the entire country.

THE ASHTABULA DISASTER.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 29.—A special to the Leader from Ashtabula says: The Coroner's inquest was resumed, and Alfred H. Howland sworn. He testified that he resides in Boston, is a civil engineer, and has been engaged in examining the wrecked bridge for a fortnight; that he found the abutments in good condition, and the weight of the bridge to be 32,000 pounds per lineal foot; he considers the system of lateral and sway, bracing employed as insufficient, and the form of beams used for compression members a very objectionable feature of the bridge; he found a lack of section in the following members: The whole of the top chord, many of the main braces in the lateral and vertical sway bracing, and in floor beams; in some of these members the material would have been sufficient had it been in different shape; he found that one of the main braces was three inches out of position on the top angle-block when last painted, and others to a less degree.

ALBANY.

BOTH HOUSES IN SESSION.

LIVELY EVENING'S WORK — SEVERAL BILLS INTRODUCED — THE DISTRICT COURT CLERKS—THE PRUNING-KNIFE TO BE APPLIED—ASSESSMENTS FOR LOCAL IMPROVEMENTS—THE SALARY OF THE SUPERINTENDENT OF STATE PRISONS.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 29.—The House this evening went to the third reading of the few bills on the calendar which were ready for final passage. Usually there is scarcely any debate on this order of business, but to-night was an exception. Mr. Ruggles had a long but successful struggle to get through his Narrow Guage Railroad bill, because several gentlemen have imagined they detected an enormous "mouse in that meal bag," and interposed objections at every stage of the progress of the measure. As soon as this matter was disposed of, the bill for the relief of the District Court Clerks came up, and Mr. Purdy swooped down upon it with eager delight, and made a rambling, vehement speech over half an hour long. Mr. Strahan replied, and the House was thoroughly warmed up on the matter. In the end the bill was recommitted, on motion of Mr. Strahan, to the Judiciary Committee, and the House adjourned. If this bill should fail it would be another instance of innocent parties suffering for the misdoings of others. The most telling point Mr. Purdy made against the bill, and which had a marked effect on the House, was his reading out the long list of clerks and attendants which each of these little courts boasts, and the grossly extravagant salaries they all receive. It evidently did, as he said it would, astonish some of the country members. For three years past efforts have been made in the Legislature to reorganize these courts, and on each occasion the Judges, Republican and Democrat alike, have come in hot haste to Albany, with their retinue of retainers, and defeated every attempt. This has been done too often. These courts will be made this session to undergo the pruning they so badly need.

Mr. Alvord this evening introduced an important bill relating to the bonded indebtedness of villages, cities, towns, and counties. It provides that the existing indebtedness may, with the consent of the holders of the bonds, be paid up or retired by the issuance of bonds bearing a lower rate of interest. To induce the holders of bonds to exchange them for those of a lower rate, the latter may be made to run for long terms. They may be made payable in gold, and may be sold at auction to the lowest bidder. The money received from such sales must be applied to the payment of bonds becoming due.

Mr. Alvord proposes to abolish the office of Canal Auditor, and to transfer all the powers of that official to the State Controller. He introduced a bill to that effect this evening. Mr. J. G. Dimond has brought in a bill to allow all assessments for local improvements in New-York which may be confirmed prior to the 1st day of January next, to be paid to the City in five equal installments, running five years from the date mentioned, interest on each assessment to be at the rate of 7 per cent. If this bill goes through it will be because the gentleman introducing it has more power than any one suspects him of now.

Mr. Post has given notice that he will at an early day call up his resolution relative to the national Electoral question.

Mr. Herrick has introduced a bill which provides that it shall be lawful for any person, firm, or corporation to use coal of any description in manufacturing establishments of any kind, and no manufacturer using coal in his business shall be enjoined or restrained from prosecuting such business on account of the use of coal or coals, or by reason of the effects of any gases or smoke arising therefrom, provided that nothing herein shall exempt any person, firm, or corporation from liability in any action at law for any damages alleged to have been sustained from their acts.

Mr. Fish introduced a resolution calling upon the Attorney General to report within 20 days the amount paid in the litigation of suits in favor of the State during the two years ending Dec. 31, 1873, which was adopted.

Mr. Suydam has introduced a bill providing that the act of May 22, 1872, relative to the practice or pharmacy in the City of New-York, shall also apply to the City of Brooklyn.

Mr. Ecclesine has introduced a bill for the improvement of the Croton Aqueduct, which provides that the Department of Public Works of the City of New-York be authorized to remove from Tenth avenue, the gate-houses between One Hundred and Eighteenth and One Hundred and Nineteenth streets and between One Hundred and Thirty-fourth and One Hundred and Thirty-fifth streets, and the waste-weir at the junction of Tenth avenue and One Hundred and Forty-second street, and to replace them by the construction of new gate-houses and a waste weir outside the boundaries of said avenue, and to acquire the necessary lands for that purpose; the Commonalty of the City of New-York to raise such moneys as the Commissioner of Public Works shall certify to be necessary to defray the expense of the proposed work by the issuing of stock to be called Additional New Croton Aqueduct Stock of the City of New-York, the stock to bear 7 per cent. interest, and to run for 30 years.

The Senate discussed at some length the bill fixing the salary of the Superintendent of State Prisons, provided for by the amended Constitution. Great difference of opinion has arisen as to what would be a proper compensation for the new official. Some Senators favor $10,000, and others $5,000. Final action was not taken on the bill.

STATE CANAL COMMISSIONER.

THE EASTERN DIVISION OF THE STATE CANALS—COMMISSIONER THAYER'S REPORT TO BE PRESENTED TO-DAY—THE MAIN POINTS TO BE SUBMITTED.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 29.—Commissioner Andrew Thayer, of the Eastern Division of the State Canals, will send in his report to-morrow. It will be of unusual interest, because Mr. Thayer is one of the men earnestly urged for the position of Superintendent of Public Works, and his views on canal management ought to be an indication of his probable method in the new office, if he should obtain it. The report begins by showing that the season has been one of unequaled good navigation, no detentions or delays occurring, while the expense of maintenance and repairs has been less than in any previous year, notwithstanding the fact that several expensive pieces of work had to be done. So effective has been this economical administration, that the Commissioner is confident that a revival of business, such as now seems to be apparent, will be all that is necessary to render the canals a source of actual profit to the State, and not even railroad competition like that of last season can prevent Erie from yielding a fine surplus next year. The expenditures, last year, for ordinary repairs were $1,007,359 95, a reduction upon the year before of $157,889 66, while for extraordinary repairs the expenditure was $250,831 18, a reduction upon the previous year of $508,626 12. An actual saving, not shown in the table, is that of the $400,000 appropriated last year to deepen the prism 7 feet, a survey having shown that the prism is already that depth, and the money will consequently be returned to the Treasury. An actual essential to success, however, is a clearly-defined policy regarding the canals, to be closely adhered to, as conflicting legislation is one of the great disadvantages against which the canals have been obliged to contend. Steam transit is so far a failure, no invention having proved of any practical benefit, but a continued encouragement by the State to inventors is recommended.

In regard to tolls, the Commissioner believes that a revival of business will permit of a further reduction of tolls, which he would recommend upon the boats themselves, as the distressed class, the boatmen, are more directly relieved by such a reduction than in any other way.

REDEMPTION OF BOUNTY DEBT BONDS.

ALBANY, Jan. 29.—Controller Olcott will anticipate the payment of $2,000,000 of the bounty debt, commencing on Tuesday, the 30th instant. Bonds, either coupon or registered, to this amount will be redeemed at par and interest to April 7, 1877, the date of maturity, by the Manhattan Company of New-York, in the order of their presentation.

STATE CANAL LITIGATION.

ALBANY, Jan. 29.—Messrs. Emott, Tappan, and Lawson, the Referees appointed to hear and determine the issues in the suit of The People against Henry D. Dennison, James J. Belden, and others, reconvened this afternoon in the Common Council Chamber at 3 o'clock. Messrs. Samuel Hand D. Magone, Jr., and the Deputy Attorney General appeared for the plaintiff, and Hon. Henry Smith, W. C. Ruger, and Frank Hiscock for the defendants. When the case was called Mr. Hiscock made a statement to the effect that since the adjournment the Engineer's Department had refused to allow the defense to inspect their books with reference to this contract, being willing only to answer such questions as the defendants might desire to ask. Owing to this the defense worked under a disadvantage in conducting the cross-examination. Messrs. Dodge and Wilder and State Engineer Van Buren were recalled and examined with reference to the survey of the work. The monthly estimates of the Division Engineer were offered in evidence, but objected to by Mr. Smith. The court then adjourned until to-morrow.

TILDEN AT LARGE.

HE VISITS THE ASTOR HOUSE, CONSULTS WITH CHARLES O'CONOR, AND IS RECOGNIZED BY JOHN C. FREMONT.

The loungers in the lobbies of the Astor House yesterday were somewhat surprised by the sudden appearance and mysterious conduct of a number of prominent Democrats, including among them none other than Samuel J. Tilden and Charles O'Conor. Nobody knew what their business was, or why they had selected the Astor House as their place of gathering, when so many more secluded spots could have been found. The prevalent opinion, however, that "something was up," was greatly strengthened by the air of secrecy and importance assumed by the principal actors.

The first of the party to arrive was Mr. O'Conor, who called at the hotel at about 11 A. M., and was immediately shown to a double-room on the second floor, fronting on Broadway and Vesey street. Mr. Tilden soon afterward appeared, accompanied by Col. William T. Pelton, and the three were at once closeted in consultation. Several other visitors appeared and were ushered into the presence; but the motive of the proceedings within remained as much a mystery as ever. At 1:15 o'clock Mr. Tilden, Mr. O'Conor, Judges Shea and Alker, of the Marine Court, Mr. Richard Schell, better known to the public as "Uncle Dick," ex-Surrogate Tucker, and several lawyers and politicians were hob-nobbing over their wine in the Astor House dining-room, congratulating Mr. Tilden the while on what they deemed his probable elevation to the Presidency. Mr. Tilden received the congratulations of his friends in his usual clammy manner, but the crowd continuing to increase as his presence was noised throughout the house, he appeared to think the thing to be getting a little too public, and accordingly took the first opportunity to slip out of the room, in going out he passed Col. John C. Fremont, who bowed politely, and even pityingly, at the sight of the great disappointed. All sorts of rumors were current yesterday concerning the object of the meeting. It was reported that the subject of discussion was the "case" of the Democratic claimant which is soon to be presented to the Electoral Commission. Another rumor was that Messrs. Tilden and O'Conor met merely as arbitrators in some legal business. Most of the gentlemen present at the levee and the dining-room, and who were interviewed last night, disavow all knowledge of the subject, and say that the meeting on their part was merely a chance one.

A SHIP'S CREW RESCUED.

THE CREW OF A PORTUGUESE BARK PICKED UP AT SEA—THEIR ARRIVAL AT BALTIMORE.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 29.—The British steam-ship Nankin, Capt. Brace, from Cardiff, brought to Baltimore the Captain, officers, and sailors, 14 men in all, of the Portuguese bark Amizade, (from St. Michaels, one of the Western Islands, with a cargo of oils, wine, fruit, &c.,) for New-York, which the Nankin met in a sinking condition, with masts gone, &c. The officers of the bark signed a paper on reaching Baltimore as follows:

We, the undersigned, hereby certify that Capt. M. Brace, of the steamship Nankin, took us off the Portuguese bark Amizade, on a voyage from St. Michaels to New-York, Jan. 17, in a sinking condition, in latitude 36° 39' 36" north, longitude 38° 9' 24" west, and conveyed us to Baltimore.

Signed by Capt. Francisco Jose de Millo. Supercargo Manuel Periecla Michado; mate Leandro El Alemeida, on behalf of themselves and crew of 11 others.

The Amizade also had on board Capt. Orlando J. Tripp, Mate J. R. Rogers, and Supercargo F. W. Bradley, of a New-Bedford whaler, with 300 barrels of oil, which had been condemned at St. Michaels, and her officers took passage for New-York on the Amizade.

OTHER MARINE DISASTERS.

FORTRESS MONROE, Jan. 29.—The revenue cutter Hamilton, which arrived here to-day from Delaware Breakwater, reports that the schooner George L. Treadwell, of Portsmouth, N. H., went ashore at 5 o'clock Saturday morning on Chincoteague Shoals and bilged. She was boarded by the cutter at 2 P. M., and wreckers were then stripping the vessel and taking out the cargo.

LONDON, Jan. 29.—The American schooner E. B. Darling, Capt. Hodgkinson, last reported at Santa Cruz, Grand Canaria, from New-York, has been wrecked on the Grand Canary. The crew and cargo were saved. Advices from Gibraltar report that the German bark Blitz, Capt. Bohn, from New-York, Dec. 27, for Gibraltar, had arrived at the latter port with the loss of bulwarks and her deck-house. She had to throw overboard part of her cargo.

ROCKLAND, Me., Jan. 29.—The schooner Lottie Ames, of and from this port, for Port Royal, S. C., laden with granite, ran upon Bantam Ledge, six miles east of Seguin Light, in a snow-storm last night. She will be a total loss. The crew was saved.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—The Signal Service observer at Cape Henry reports to the Chief Signal Officer as follows: "The Italian bark Caspiona, which has been ashore near Life-saving Station No. 3, has been got afloat to-day, but is leaking badly. She will be towed to Norfolk for repairs."

LOSSES BY FIRE.

A fire occurred at 7:30 o'clock yesterday morning in the dry goods store of M. Templeton, No. 901 Eighth avenue, caused by some goods taking fire from a gas-light. Damage to stock, $1,000; insured for $7,000 in the Royal Insurance Company.

The drying-house of D. Powers & Sons, oil-cloth manufacturers at Lansingburg, caught fire at 1 P. M. yesterday, and was destroyed. The loss on the building is $800, and on the stock $7,000; no insurance.

A fire in the building corner of Main and Church streets, Waltham, Mass., on Saturday night damaged the building and property of several occupants to the amount of $4,500; insured.

The Stratford House, at Stratford Hollow, N. H.; the store of E. B. Merriam, connected with it, and a barn have been destroyed by fire. The loss is $11,500; partial insurance.

The Albion House and Brooks' store, at Lennoxville, Province of Quebec, were destroyed by fire yesterday morning. The loss is from $10,000 to $15,000.

The Methodist Church, Fairhaven, Vt., was burned Sunday. The fire was caused by a defective furnace. The loss is $6,000, and the insurance $3,000.

Tibbott's Hotel and an adjoining store at Lennoxville, Quebec, occupied by Brown Brothers, were destroyed by fire yesterday. Loss, $35,000.

The grain mill of S. A. Fowle, at Arlington, Mass., was burned Sunday night. The loss is from $10,000 to $15,000; no insurance.

THE WEATHER.

INDICATIONS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30—1 A. M.—In the Middle and Eastern States rising followed by falling barometer, variable winds, stationary or rising temperature, and partly cloudy weather, succeeded in the former by southerly to easterly winds, and possibly at night rain areas.

AN INVASION OF MEXICO.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 29.—Referring to the statement of a New-York paper's Washington correspondent, that a number of American officers had concluded to offer their services to Iglesias and raise a force in the South-west to invade Mexico and establish his claims, Iglesias yesterday stated that the information in the telegram was correct. "There are," he said, "many good reasons why this movement by my friends in this country can be of no assistance to me in my efforts to bring about a change of government in Mexico, and I shall advise my friends of the conclusion I have arrived at. For this purpose I intend to proceed East as soon as possible."

IGLESIAS DECLARED PRESIDENT.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 29.—Reports from Sonora, Mexico, via San Diego, says that Gen. Mariscal, the Military Governor, has issued a proclamation declaring Iglesias the legal President, and avowing his purpose to support him. Pesquiera, with his troops, is reported committing numerous outrages on the inhabitants, but avoiding battle with Mariscal.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL CONGRESS.

CHICAGO, Jan. 29.—The first annual meeting of the Sunday-school Congress of the United States began its sessions here to-day. There was a large attendance, including Presiding Elders, Pastors, and Sunday-school teachers from various parts of the country. Rev. Dr. Vincent, of New-York, presided.

LATEST NEWS BY CABLE.

THE EASTERN COMPLICATIONS.

THE SERVIAN NEGOTIATIONS WITH THE PORTE—POSITION OF RUSSIA AS AFFECTED BY THE NEW PHASE IN DIPLOMACY—THE GOVERNORSHIP OF THE PROVINCES.

LONDON, Jan. 29.—A dispatch from Constantinople says: "A dispatch from the Servian Government requests the Porte to instruct the Ottoman Ambassador at Vienna to enter into negotiations with the Servian diplomatic agent there, Servia having no representative at Constantinople. The Prince of Montenegro has not yet replied to the dispatch inviting him to treat for peace directly with the Porte."

The Vienna Montags Revue (semi-official) says it has reason to believe that the expected Russian circular will open an entirely new phase of the Eastern question. The note will reduce the present situation to one of the following alternatives: Will the powers attribute a mere platonic character to the views they expressed at the conference? or will they bring more rigorous pressure upon the Porte? The former would probably result in procrastination, the latter in further independent action by Russia. In any case the Porte must hasten its movements if it intends by carrying out its Constitution, and by the conclusion of peace with Servia and Montenegro, to deprive Russia of all grounds for intervention. The Montags Revue concludes its article as follows: "Although danger of war is not immediately threatening, it can only be banished from the political horizon by great exertions."

A telegram from Constantinople pronounces unfounded the report that Midhat Pasha had issued an edict for the disarming of the population. The same dispatch says it is stated that the Porte intends to appoint five Christians to be Governors of provinces.

The Times editorially reviews Col. Gordon's Chinese and African experiences, and the proofs he has given of high administrative capacity and military genius. It says: "Can it be that Midhat Pasha, in his search for a Governor for Bulgaria, has made no overtures to Col. Gordon? We should be surprised to hear that he has overlooked the very man in all Europe who would satisfy the personal conditions implied in the demands of the conference. The choice, if made at all, must be made soon. Turkey has no time to lose, now that a great army is massed on her frontiers. Perhaps her last chance of peacefully tiding over the next few critical years lies in the selection of a born ruler of men to govern Bulgaria."

LONDON, Jan. 30.—The Standard's dispatch from Vienna says negotiations between the Ottoman Ambassador and the diplomatic agent there have already commenced.

Gen. Ignatieff has arrived at Athens.

The Berlin correspondent of the Standard says a sensational report is in circulation that Russia has refused to receive Count Chaudordy as Ambassador of France.

The Times correspondent at Semlin telegraphs that the situation is so complicated that it is impossible to form any opinion as to the probable result of the crisis in Servia. A Turkish envoy will shortly arrive in Belgrade to open peace negotiations there. The Cabinet is in session daily under the Presidency of Prince Milan. The committee of 17 members of the last Skupochtijna demand the immediate convocation of the Chamber to decide finally for peace or war. The Prince favors the meeting of the Chamber, but is understood to be opposed to making a separate treaty of peace with the Porte, either on account of secret advice of Russia or from fear that Montenegro will refuse the proposals of Turkey, and thus become the future leader of the Slave. The ministry oppose the convocation of the Skupochtijna, because they fear they will be called to strict account for their administration. It is reported that a special envoy will be dispatched immediately to St. Petersburg to obtain a definite statement of Russia's desires, and to obtain positively what support, if any, can be relied on if the Turkish proposals are finally rejected. The peace party are now very apprehension that foreign influence will prevent the conclusion of peace. It is improbable that Servia will take any decisive course until definite replies are received from St. Petersburg. Servia is also bound by treaty to consult Montenegro relative to any peace negotiations; but it is not certain that she will observe this agreement, as considerable jealousy exists between the two principalities.

The Paris correspondent of the Times states that the terms of the Russian Memorandum to the Powers were settled shortly before the conclusion of the Conference, but when the result was foreseen since the conference closed, however, hesitation seems to have arisen, which explains Russia's silence.

A special from Vienna to the Daily News reports that in consequence of the refusal of France to send instructors for the proposed gendarmerie to Turkey the Porte has now made overtures to Austria.

The Daily Telegraph's special from Pera says Turkey wishes to have Mr. Cave as financial administrator. England's intentions are unknown, but it is understood she will not nominate a financier for Turkey until peace is definitely established.

A Vienna telegram to the same paper states that England, as well as Russia, has advised Prince Milan to conclude peace if he can do so on proper terms. The conditions offered by Turkey are the preservation by the status quo ante bellum, coupled with certain guarantees, to be settled during the negotiations, against the recommencement of hostilities by Servia.

The Paris correspondent of the Telegraph announces positively that Gortschakoff has resolved to retire, and his resignation is merely a question of a few days. Councilor Waloniefl, formerly Minister of the Interior, a progressive liberal, is his probable successor. It is to be noted that this report has already been mentioned and discredited in the St. Petersburg correspondence of some London journals.

The Telegraph's correspondent at Paris declares that the Russian Army of the South is about to be withdrawn. Only 80,000 men will remain as a corps of observation.

CURRENT TOPICS ABROAD.

THE NEW FRENCH MINISTER TO WASHINGTON—HEALTH OF THE POPE—THE FAMINE IN PONDICHERRY—THE CATTLE DISEASE IN EUROPE—AUSTRIA AND THE PARIS EXHIBITION OF 1878—THE POWERS AND THE NEXT PAPAL ELECTION.

PARIS, Jan. 29.—M. Max Outrey, the newly-appointed French Minister to the United States, will sail for New-York in the General Transatlantic Company's steamer Canada, from Havre, Feb. 2.

The Government has dismissed several Mayors for attending masses in memory of Napoleon III., and has decided to treat severely all officials participating in Bonapartist demonstrations.

VERSAILLES, Jan. 29.—The Chamber of Deputies to-day voted the grant of $20,000 for expenses incurred by the Colonial Government in consequence of the famine in Pondicherry.

LONDON, Jan. 29.—A dispatch from Rome dated Sunday says the Pope gave an audience on Sunday, and has almost entirely recovered from his last attack.

Silver was quoted at 4:30 P. M. to-day at 57¾d. per ounce.

The British Council has issued further stringent orders against the importation into Great Britain from Germany and Belgium of cattle, hay, hides, horns, fat, hoofs, and fresh meat.

BRUSSELS, Jan. 29.—A royal decree has been issued prohibiting the importation into Belgium of horned cattle and sheep from Germany, England, Russia, Austria, and Turkey.

VIENNA, Jan. 29.—The Budget Committee, by a vote of 15 to 11, has rejected, chiefly on economical grounds, the grant of 600,000 florins to defray the expense of the participation of Austria in the Paris Exhibition of 1878. The minority of the committee, however, propose to appeal to the Reichsrath against the decision.

LIVERPOOL, Jan. 29.—A special dispatch to the Post from London says: "Col. Gordon, the explorer, who has returned from his expedition into the interior of Africa under the auspices of the Khedive, and who arrived in England a few days ago, has already received an urgent summons from the Khedive to return to Egypt. He has presented the Royal Geographical Society with valuable original maps which he brought back from Equatorial Africa, and has promised to contribute a paper of great interest.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—The Standard's Berlin correspondent says it is reported in semi-official quarters that the powers have recently exchanged communications respecting the eventuality of a vacancy in the throne of St. Peter. It is said that the Catholic powers have engaged to make the strictest use of their ancient prerogatives to insure regularity in the election of a successor to Pope Pius IX.

THE BRITISH CORN TRADE.

LONDON, Jan. 29.—The Mark Lane Express, in its weekly review of the British corn trade, says farmers are taking advantage of the drier weather to resume agricultural operations, but the long continuance of rain has delayed field-work, and probably planting will be late this Spring. In the high lands the condition of the wheat plant is favorable, but it is feared the floods have damaged the plant in the low districts. With the continuance of the present weather the damage is perhaps remediable, but with prolonged rain the results would be disastrous. Late-sown wheat has suffered most from floods, which in some localities swept the plant and seed from the ground; in others they rotted the grain so that it will be necessary to redrill or plant with barley. Reports from Scotland and Ireland are more favorable. The inferiority of condition and the diminished quantity of home-grown grain is still noticeable in Mark lane and country markets. If anything, sales have been more difficult than during the previous week. The present value of English wheat is 7 to 8 shillings per quarter higher than at this time last year. This increase is due, firstly, to the disappointing results of the yield; secondly to the effect of politics on trade, and, thirdly, to the unusual weather; but now, possibly, we may see some decline in values. Respecting foreign wheat, the diminished imports of the past five months, resulting in the diminution of stocks throughout Great Britain, confirm the opinion that the present state of trade and range of prices are sound and capable of being maintained. Inactivity has characterized business in wheat during the past week, but this was caused by buyers, who are tolerably well stocked, ceasing operations temporarily to scrutinize previous transactions. Fine red wheat is held firmly. Upon this variety alone is change noted. Russian descriptions have improved 6 pence to 1 shilling per quarter on the week. Trade for Spring corn has shared the general dullness, and prices are unaltered. Floating cargoes off the coast have been held firmly, but, with an inactive demand, values have slightly declined.

THE AMERICAN SPIRITUALIST.

THE CONVICTION OF "DR." SLADE QUASHED ON A LEGAL TECHNICALITY.

LONDON, Jan. 29.—The appeal of Slade, the American Spiritualist, who was prosecuted under the Vagrant act and sentenced by Mr. Homers to three months' confinement at hard labor in the House of Correction, came up for argument to-day in the Middlesex Sessions, and his conviction was quashed on a purely legal technicality. Sergt. Ballantine led for Slade, and Mr. Alexander Stavely Hill, Q. C., for the Government. The court was crowded with well-known Spiritualists and sympathizers. Mr. P. H. Edlin, Q. C., Assistant Judge, presided. Sergt. Ballantine objected that the offense for which Slade was convicted was not within the Vagrant act, because it did not declare or charge that a fraud was accomplished "by palmistry or otherwise," these four words being omitted from the charge.

Mr. Hill said these words were advisedly omitted, the offense having been more specifically described by saying that Slade used subtle craft, means, or devices.

Judge Edlin said that summary convictions must show upon their faces the words of the statute giving magistrates jurisdiction. The conviction, therefore, was bad on its face, and as counsel for the Crown stood by it and declined to ask the court to amend it, they must quash the conviction.

Mr. Hill asked for a case to the Supreme Court to decide whether those words were necessary to a conviction. The court refused, and the appellant was discharged.

THE RUSSIAN NAVAL OFFICERS.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

NORFOLK, Jan. 29.—The Grand Duke and a party of his friends left this morning for Currituck Sound to shoot water fowl, and will be the guests of the Crow Island Club during his stay in that region.

CUTTING AFFRAY IN MEMPHIS.

MEMPHIS, Jan. 29.—At 1 o'clock this morning, at the corner of Main and Adams streets, in this city, Pat Connell, a fireman, was cut in the throat and probably fatally injured, by a young man named John C. Jones, who had been ejected from a saloon a few minutes previous, and Connell, who was present, made the remark, "served him right." Jones waited outside until Connell made his appearance, when he assaulted him. Jones was promptly arrested and lodged in jail. He had tried to shoot a saloon-keeper the night before.

SERIOUS GAS EXPLOSION.

PROVIDENCE, Jan. 29.—The laboratory of the Silver Spring Bleachery—a small brick building detached from the main works—was demolished this afternoon by an explosion of gas evolved during some chemical experiments on a new preparation for finishing the surface of cloth. Four men in the building were badly burned, but probably none of them received fatal injuries.

THE KANSAS SENATORSHIP.

TOPEKA, Jan. 29.—On the tenth ballot for the United States Senatorship, to-day, Osborn received 44 votes; Plumb, 52; Simmons, 25; Harvey, 23; Sears, 23; Martin, 3; Stillings, 3; Shannon, 2; Elder and Fenton, each 1. On the eleventh ballot Sears gained two, and Martin and Stillings each lost one. On the twelfth ballot Stillings gained one and Elder received none.

A NOTORIOUS BURGLAR SHOT.

CHICAGO, Jan. 29.—David Raggio, a notorious burglar and criminal, who has just served out a term in the Wisconsin State Prison for a burglary committed in Milwaukee, was shot on Saturday night and died to-day from the effects of his wound. The Police have kept the affair quiet, hoping to secure the woman whom he alleged shot him.

TWO MEN DROWNED IN THE OHIO RIVER.

LOUISVILLE, Jan. 29.—By the capsizing of a skiff this afternoon four young men were washed over the falls, and two of their number, Thomas Peterson, and Patrick Brophy, were drowned.

A JEWELRY STORE ROBBED.

PROVIDENCE, Jan. 29.—A safe in the jewelry manufactory of Hunt, Owen & Co. was broken open yesterday morning, apparently by professionals, and robbed of several thousand dollars' worth of stock.

A BANK ROBBER RECAPTURED.

HARRISBURG, Jan. 29.—Ralph L. Rolland, the bank robber, who effected his escape from Chambersburg jail, arrived here on Saturday, having been captured in Chicago.

NEW-HAMPSHIRE PROHIBITIONISTS.

MANCHESTER, Jan. 29.—The Prohibitionists will hold a convention here on Wednesday to nominate a candidate for the Governorship.

SCENE-SHIFTERS ON STRIKE.

A few minutes previous to the ringing up of the curtain at Niblo's Garden last night the scene-shifters struck against a reduction of wages, and made an attempt to interrupt the performance of the spectacle, "Around the World in Eighty Days," by inciting the mechanics and other stage hands to join them. The managers, with the aid of the Police, promptly ejected the malcontents and organized a new corps of scene-shifters.

MR. CARLYLE ON THE GOSPEL OF DIRT.

The Ardrossan and Saltcoats (England) Herald publishes the following extract of a letter written to a friend by Mr. Carlyle: "A good sort of man is this Darwin, and well-meaning, but with very little intellect. Ah, it's a sad, a terrible thing to see nigh a whole generation of men and women, professing to be cultivated, looking around in a purblind fashion, and finding no God in this universe. I suppose it is a reaction from the reign of cant and hollow pretense, professing to believe what, in fact, they do not believe. And this is what we have got to. All things from frog spawn; the gospel of dirt the order of the day. The older I grow—and now I stand upon the brink of eternity—the more comes back to me the sentence in the catechism which I learned when a child, and the fuller and deeper its meaning becomes. 'What is the chief end of man? To glorify God, and enjoy Him forever.' No gospel of dirt, teaching that men have descended from frogs through monkeys, can ever set that aside."

AMUSEMENTS.

MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC.

PARK THEATRE.

A new play, in four acts, called "Our Boarding-house," was made known at the Park Theatre last evening. It is from the pen of Mr. Leonard Grover, and it deals exclusively with types of character likely to be encountered in metropolitan caravansaries of a rather inferior order. Mr. Grover's claim to having constructed a purely American piece is hardly likely to be conceded. His personages are drawn with exceeding clearness and cleverly contrasted, but, within the limits of the domain of farce, they might be encountered in any part of the globe. A discussion as to the existence of purely American types might, however, lead to the discovery that few, if any exist, and, hence, Mr. Grover can hardly be blamed for the lack of distinctiveness observable in his dramatis personæ. He has written—what is more to the point—a remarkably amusing work. Few of the scenes drag, for the sentimental business of the evening, even, is transacted with commendable briskness, and the comic passages are numerous and conceived with a keen eye to effect. The serious story of "Our Boarding House" is its least interesting element. But it is a necessary one, and supplies a raison d'être without which the play could not well have its being. The heroine, Beatrice Manheim, has been married to an Italian, who, for some reason unknown, has had a mock-marriage performed by his brother. This brother, one Fioretti, now appears as the persecutor of the deceived and injured woman. He wishes her to assist him in a flirtation with Mrs. Eligible, one of the boarders. Beatrice refuses, and Fioretti promptly denounces her and causes her to be expelled from the common abode. The victim of the Italian, has, happily, won the sympathy of Mrs. Dalrymple, whose son desires to wed her, and, at the last minute, she is vindicated by the arrival of a detective who acquaints her with the fact that her first marriage, under the laws of the State of New-York, was legal, and that she is to inherit the property of the deceased rascal. That a narrative of this kind is scarcely fitted to rivet public attention need not be suggested. But "Our Boarding House" does not depend upon its plot for success. The characters and episodes, to use a French term, seem likely to secure this. The most marked impression produced was wrought by Mr. W. H. Crane, whose "Professor Gregorius Gillypod, inventor of the great flying-machine," is unquestionably as original and droll a representation as we have had for many years. Mr. Stuart Robson's performance of "Colonel M. T. Elevator, a corn exchange operator," while by no means as novel an effort as Mr. Crane's, was almost as mirth-provoking. Mr. J. W. Carroll, in a semi-sentimental, semi-comic rôle—that of Matthew Eligible—carried on with uncommon spirit and drollery one of the most laughable incidents of the comedy, in which a ring intended for the heroine of a flirtation, passes into the hands of the donor's wife. A broadly-farcical scene between Professor Gillypod and Colonel Elevator, at the close of the second act, and a burlesque love scene, in which the Professor, in act the third, provokes considerable merriment by jumbling up the titles of several songs lying on the piano, may be cited as the points at which "Our Boarding House" elicited most merriment. Among the artists who transact the melodramatic business of Mr. Grover's play, Mr. W. E. Sheridan, who personates Fioretti, alone calls for notice. The ladies are compara tively feeble, with the exception of Miss Roberta Norwood, who, however, is not concerned in the sombre events rehearsed. Miss Norwood portrays Betty, "our maid of all work." "Our Boarding House" is handsomely placed upon the stage at the Park Theatre, and the indications are that it will be given with profit for many nights.

THE EAGLE THEATRE.

A multitude of people filled the Eagle Theatre last night in every part, and hundreds were turned away from its doors as well. The audience, too, was brilliantly fashionable and the scene in the bright and pleasant auditorium was one which is apt to be long and cheerfully remembered. The occasion which brought together this notable assemblage was the reappearance of Mlle. Aimée and her opera bouffe troupe, after a somewhat prolonged absence from the local stage. After what has just been recorded about the numbers and character of the gathering summoned to welcome the fair songstress, it will at once be understood that the evening's entertainment was an exceedingly successful one. "La Jolie Parfumeuse," was the opera in which Mlle. Aimée effected her rentrée, and she effected it in a manner which brought great pleasure to her mirth-loving admirers. Her reception was most cordial, and the applause, as the performance progressed, was both frequent and hearty, extending in more than one instance to a double encore. The lady was in excellent voice, and she both sang and acted with even more than her usual task and spirit. The cast of "La Jolie Parfumeuse" is almost the same as that noticed when the opera was last represented here. Mlle. Duparc is as lively as of old, and MM. Brannerd and Berrar still fill respectively the roles of Poirot and La Cocardiere. The tenor, it is perhaps as well to say, is as boisterous as ever, and, if anything, his voice has fallen a trifle. We may further note that the setting of the piece is quite tasteful, the band sufficiently large and well in hand, and the chorus, as usual, a sight to behold. "La Jolie Parfumeuse" will be given again this evening and at the Saturday matinée. On Wednesday, "La Vie Parisienne" may be witnessed.

BRIEF MENTION.

Mr. George Rignold arrived here on Sunday night, aboard the Celtic.

Miss Neilson is in town. She proceeds to Philadelphia to morrow, and appears at the Walnut Street Theatre on Monday next.

The Olympic Theatre will be opened to the public this evening, when "The Big Bonanza" will be acted there, by one of Mr. Daly's numerous traveling companies.

"Martha" was sung at the Academy of Music, last evening, by Miss Kellogg and her company. "The Star of the North" will be represented there to-morrow.

A GROWL OVER THE BROOKLYN BRIDGE.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In regard to the influence of the Brooklyn Bridge on the East River commerce, we have now got our one example to judge from; we have our taste that will tell us how the pudding will digest, and we have our hint from which "he who runs may read." The ship David Crockett, going down the river, had her truck carried away by the bridge wires; there's our example. The ship Strathearn, that has been discharging in the vicinity of Pier No. 45 East River for some years, goes this trip to Eleventh street, North River, on account of the bridge; there's our taste. The ship Young America, that has landed her cargo for some years at Coe Warehouse, Pier No. 55 East River, now goes to Pier No. 23 East River, below the bridge, for the same cause; there's our hint for the wise.

How our City is to be benefited by the bridge, and by this shutting off of so large a strip of our limited water-fronts from the larger vessels, is a conundrum that a good many wise heads have long since given up. The money expended by our City would have gone a long way toward paying for a rapid transit to our new wards, that would have brought a revenue to our already contracted purse; whereas, now, the bridge not only assists in depleting said purse, but aids in inducing tax-payers to leave our City and pay their taxes elsewhere. Mysteries are to the ways of our City Fathers and Albany agents.

As the dry-docks above Pike street depend largely on the larger vessels for their revenue, they will have to move—where to? Is there any opening for them on the North River? They will have to leave the City for accommodations, and then the whole army of calkers, ship-carpenters, &c., will either have to follow them, or else be thrown idle on our hands to swell the hangers-on of soup-kitchens and drinking shops, through necessity. And it seems another puzzle what is the use of Government opening out and deepening Hell Gate at a great expense for the passage of larger vessels, when those same vessels are to be shut out at the one end by the East River Bridge at Seventy-seventh street, and at the other by the Brooklyn Bridge at Roosevelt street.

A SUFFERER.

THE FISHKILL NATIONAL BANK.

POUGHKEEPSIE, Jan. 29.—A special dispatch from Washington to the Eagle says the report to the Controller of the Currency shows the Fishkill National Bank defalcation to be larger than was at first stated, and that one of the Directors of the bank overdrew over $40,000. Henry Bostwick has been appointed Receiver of the bank, with bonds fixed at $85,000.

THE NATIONAL CAPITOL LIFE.

REFLECTIONS ON THE CHARACTER OF THE COMPANY.

The following petition, which reflects somewhat on the character of the National Capitol Life Insurance Company of Washington, which has assumed the risks of the New-Jersey Mutual, will be presented to the Legislature of this State in a few days:

To the Honorable the Assembly of the State of New-York:

Your petitioners most respectfully beg that you would take into consideration the great injustice and hardship to which they have been subjected in consequence of the unwarrantable reinsurance of the National Life Insurance Company of New-York, by the American National Life and Trust Company, of New-Haven, Conn., a weak corporation of bad character, afterward amalgamated, in the most surreptitious manner, by the National Capitol Life Insurance Company of Washington, D. C., a company which had long been extinct, and of which the charter alone is now really extant; and that you would grant such relief to the policy-holders in the said National Life Insurance Company, of New-York, as you may deem fit, expedient, and just.

They would further most respectfully and earnestly call your attention to the following facts, which clearly show the wickedness of the conspiracy and the iniquity of the practices from which they are suffering. The National Life Insurance Company of New-York, although impaired in capital, was, when insured by the American National Life and Trust Company of New-Haven, really stronger and in a better condition than the latter company

COMMERCIAL AFFAIRS.

New-York, Monday, Jan. 29, 1877.

The receipts of the principal kinds of Produce since our last have been as follows:

Ashes, pks	10	Lead, lb.	456,000
Brandy, gallons	96	Wheat (H.O.) bbls.	125
Beeswax, pks	50	Oil, bbls.	200
B. E. Peas, bags	53	Sugrts Turp., bbls.	42
Beans, bbls	306	Tar, bbls	679
Cotton, bales	5,604	Resin, bbls	770
C. S. Cake, lbs	1,100	Cheese, pks	1,141
C. S. Oil, bbls	50	Pork, pks	370
Copper, bbls	58	Beef, pks	50
Dried Fruit, pks	6	Cut-meats, pks	5,400
Eggs, pks	421	Grease, pks	92
Flour, bbls	3,655	Lard, pks	2,769
Wheat, bushels	2,450	Lard, kegs	160
Corn, bushels	78,857	Butter, pks	2,725
Oats, bushels	39,136	Cheese, pks	848
Rye, bushels	1,600	Tallow, pks	192
Malt, bushels	12,650	Lard-oil, bbls	55
Barley, bushels	73,194	Dressed Hogs, No	1,672
Peas, bushels	1,190	Pea-nuts, bags	1,761
Grass-seed, bags	1,324	Rice, pks	69
Flax-seed, bags	30	Syrup, bbls	20
Corn-meal, bbls	303	Starch, pks	2,225
Corn-meal, bags	700	Hops, bales	18
Ryew Flour, pks	690	Sumac, bags	140
Oat-meal, bbls	224	Tea, half-chests	90
Hops, bales	32	Tobacco, hhds	160
Hides, No	1,200	Tobacco, bales & pks	1,141
Hides, bales	221	Whisky, bbls	881
Horns, No	11,800	Wool, bales	127
Leather, sides	40,522	Wine, (Cal.,) galls	5,845
Lead, pigs	635

COFFEE.—Rio has been more active, but at a further reduction of ¼c. ₱ lb. on other than prime. Sales reported of 3,000 bags by the Nautilus, 4,500 bags by the Mosart, 1,998 bags by the Hipparchus, and 1,206 bags by the Commodore Dupont on private terms; also 4,134 bags by the Anna, deemed from stock. Other kinds quiet and unsettled.—We quote invoices thus: Rio, ordinary, 17¼c.@17¾c.; fair, 19¼c. @19¾c.; good, 19¾c.@20c.; prime, 20¾c.@20¾c.; good, ₱ lb., 60 lots, 17c.@18c.; Rio, in job lots, 17c.@ 23¾c. gold; Santos, fair to good invoices, 18¾c.@ 19¾c., and in job lots, ordinary to very choice, 18¾c. @23c.....Java, invoices, 22c.@24c.; Maracaibo, 18¾c. @20c.; Laguayra, 19¾c.@20c.; Mocha, 25c.@26c., and San Domingo, 17c.@17¾c., gold, ₱ lb.

COTTON—Has been more active for early delivery, partly for shipment, but at a reduction of 3-16c. ₱ lb., under more liberal offerings. Sales reported here to-day at 11 7-16c.@11 9-16c.; Low Middling, 12¾c.@ 12¾c.; Middling, 13¼c.@13¾c. ₱ lb.....Sales were officially reported, for prompt delivery, or 890 bales, (of which 156 bales were sold on Saturday evening,) including 500 bales to shippers, 298 bales to spinners, and 92 bales to speculators.....And for forward delivery a livelier movement was reported but at lower rates.....Sales have been reported since our last of 36,100 bales, of which 6,500 bales were on Saturday evening, and 29,600 bales to-day, with 5,800 bales on the cails, on the basis of Middling, with January options, closing as at 13 1-16c. February, 13 1-16c.@13 3-32c. March, 13¼c.@ 13 9-32c.; April, 13 5-32c.; May, 13 21-32c.; June, 13 13-16c.@13 27-32c.; July, 13 29-32c.@ 13 15-16c.; August, 14c.; September, 13 19-32c.@ 13 21-32c.; October, 13¼c.@13 9-16c.; November, 13 1-16c.@13¼c.; December, 13 1-32c.@13-32c. ₱ lb., showing a decline of 3-32c.@3-16c. ₱ lb., closing steady —Our receipts at the ports for the week were 36,644 bales, and at the shipping ports, 27,864 bales, against 33,011 bales same day last week, and thus far this week 52,551 bales, against 40,111 bales same time last week. The receipts at the shipping ports since Sept. 1, 1876, have been 3,350,921 bales, against 2,979,191 bales for the corresponding time in the preceding Cotton year.....Consolidated exports (one day) for Great Britain, from all the shipping ports, 10,810 bales; to the Continent, 9,026 bales.....Stock in New-York to-day, 252,356 bales; consolidated stock at the ports, 891,-998 bales.

Closing Prices of Cotton in New-York.

	Uplands.	Alabama.	N. O.	Texas.
Ordinary	11 7-16	11 7-16	11 9-16	11 9-16
Strict Ordinary	11 13-16	11 13-16	11 15-16	11 15-16
Good Ordinary	12 3-16	12 3-16	12 5-16	12 5-16
Strict Good Ord	12 7-16	12 7-16	12 9-16	12 9-16
Low Middling	12¾	12¾	12¾	12¾
Strict Low Mid	12⅞	12⅞	13	13
Middling	13⅛	13⅛	13¼	13¼
Good Middling	13⅜	13⅜	13½	13½
Strict Good Mid	13⅝	13⅝	13¾	13¾
Middling Fair	14	14	14⅛	14⅛
Fair	14¾	14¾	14⅞	14⅞

Stained.

Good Ordinary	11	1-16	Low Middling
Strict Good Ord	11	11-16	Middling

FLOUR AND MEAL—Breadstuff interests were quite generally reported as much depressed to-day, influenced largely by the lower advices from Europe and Western advices especially in the latter connection, of the reports from Chicago as to the course of the Spring Wheat market there. Export dealings were on a limited scale in nearly all instances. Home trade purchases were also comparatively light....State and Western sold to a very small aggregate, the demand from all sources having been unusually taxed. The offerings of Spring Wheat product were unusually liberal and urgent, and, in instances, at a reduction of 15c.@25c. ₱ bbl., without stimulating business. Desirable Winter Wheat extras were fully plenty, and were held with comparative firmness....Sales have been reported since our last of 6,900 bbls. of all grades, including unsound Flour at $3 50@$6 75; Sour Flour, at $4 50@ $6 50; very poor to choice No. 2 at $4 25@$5 25, (of which odd lots of common to very good at $4 50@$5;) poor to choice Superfine Western, $4 65@$5 90, mainly at $5 75@$5 85; very poor to good Extra State, $5 85@$6 10; good to choice do. at $6 10@$6 35; City Mills Extra shipping grades, $5 75@$7, mainly for the West Indies, on the basis of $6 85@$6 90 for choice, (2,000 bbls. reported sold on private terms,) and quoted at $5@$5 35 for common to fair extra Western, $5 40@$5 70 for fancy do. and $5 75 to bid, and up to $6 asked for brands suited to the English trade; inferior to good shipping Extra Western, $5 85@$6 10; good to very choice do., $6 10@$6 35; poor to very choice Western Trade and Family Extras. Spring Wheat stock, $6 30@$8 50; inferior to very choice do. do. Red and Amber Winter Wheat stock, at $6 25@$8 50; part for shipment at $6 85@$7 50, (of which 4,400 bbls. sold;) ordinary to very choice White Wheat do. do., at $6 35@$9 25; poor to very fancy St. Louis Extras, $6 30@$9 75; Extra Genesee at $6 35@$7 50; poor to very choice Minnesota clear and straight Extras at $6 25@$9 25, chiefly at $6 60@$7 25 for ordinary to good, and up to $8@$8 25 for choice to very choice, with up to $8 50 asked for fancy; and Minnesota Patent Extras, ordinary to very choice, at $7 85@$10 50, mainly at $8 75@$9 50, with up to $10 75@$11 yet asked for very fancy.....Included in the sales have been 2,500 bbls. shipping Extras, 1,000 bbls. City Mills; 950 bbls. City and Minnesota clear and straight Extras, (of which 450 bbls. clear at $7;) 450 bbls. do. Patent do.; 400 bbls. Winter Wheat Extras, for shipment, these mostly at $6 65@$7 50; and 425 bbls. Superfine and 275 bbls. No. 2 at the quoted rates.....Southern Flour has been lightly dealt in at rather easier prices.....Sales have been reported here of 750 bbls., in lots, at $5 70 @$6 for poor to choice Superfine; $6 25@$7 50 for poor to very choice shipping extras; $7 50@$9 50 for fair to fancy Trade and Family. The dealings were mostly in Extras at from $7 10@$8 25.....Rye Flour has been very quiet and somewhat weaker in price. ...We quote at from $4 50@$5 20 for poor Western to very choice State Superfine, and $3@$4 for poor to choice fine.....Sales reported of 210 bbls., in lots, chiefly at $4 75@$5 for good to choice Superfine State, $5 10@$5 20 for choice to very choice, $4 70@$5 for Pennsylvania, the latter for choice, and $4 50@$5 for about fair to very choice Western.....Corn-meal has been moderately sought after at essentially unchanged rates. We quote at $2 90@$3 15 for inferior to choice Yellow Western; $2 75@$3 10 for Yellow Jersey; $3 50 for Yellow Baltimore, and $3 60 for Brandywine.....Sales have been reported of 550 bbls., including 325 bbls. Yellow Western, in lots, chiefly at $3; and Brandywine in small lots at $3 60.

.....Corn-meal in bags within the range of $1 07@ $1 45 for poor to very choice ₱ 100 lb. Most of the sales have been in coarse lots, at $1 12 for City Mills, quoted at $1 08@$1 10 for Western, and $1 07 for Baltimore, from dock.....Oat-meal has been inactive within the range $6 25 @$7 for fair to choice City and Western; very choice to fancy held higher; Canada, $7@$7 50.....Buckwheat Flour has been offered more freely, and quoted lower, on a restricted business; quoted within the range of $4 25@$4 75 for fair ordinary to very choice State, Jersey, and Pennsylvania, and fancy lots, insde Rye, 709,736 bushels Barley, 462,965 bushels Malt, 956,578 bushels Oats, and 1,078 bushels Peas.....The aggregate of Grain in store on the 13,373,315 bushels, as against 14,694,899 bushels last Monday.

HEMP—Further sales of 900 bales Jute Butts, to arrive by the Furness Abbey, reported at 3¾c., currency.

Market otherwise dull.

HIDES—Have been moderately sought after at about previous figures, with sales reported of 1,600 Buenos Ayres at 22½c., 4 months; 1,000 Central American at 19½c., 60 days; 2,000 Dry Matamoros and 145 Puerto Plata on private terms.

MILK—The contract prices paid to farmers for a supply of Milk for the month of January are 4.90c. ₱ 5c. ₱ quart.

MOLASSES—New Orleans has been selling less freely at from 47c.@57c. for good to fancy. Sales 175 bbls. Other kinds in light request.....Job lots of Porto Rico have been marketed within the previous range; quoted at from 40c.@60c. for old and new crops; Demerara, 40c.@45c.....Syrups have been lightly dealt in; we quote fair refining Cuba at 29¾c.@29¾c.; good do., 30c.@30¾c.; prime do., 32c.; fair to very choice Grocery, 33c.@35¾c.; Clayed at 30c.; Centrifugal at stock at 30c.@30¾c.; Manila bags, 33¾c.@29¾c.; Molasses Sugar, 3c.@29¼c.; Melado, 5c.@7½c.....Refined Sugars have been more active at much firmer prices, with Granulated quoted at 7¼c.; Powdered, 11¾c.@11¾c.; Crushed at 11¾c.; Cut Loaf at 12c.; Soft White at 10¼c.@11¼c.; Soft Yellow at 9¾c.@10¼c. ₱ lb.

WHISKY—Has been in moderate demand, with sales, early, of 100 bbls. at $1 08½, but closing with $1 09 (reported) bid.

FREIGHTS—A more active movement was reported in the way of berth freights, chiefly in the line of contracts for grain, but at a further reduction in rates. And in the engaging line business was quite moderate at easier and irregular figures.....For Liverpool the engagements reported, since our last, have been, by sail, 32,000 bushels Grain, including 16,000 bushels at 5d. and 16,000 bushels on private terms; 350 tons Oil-cake at 20s. ₱ ton; and, by steam, 700 bales Cotton, on the basis of ¼d. for compressed. ₱ lb.; 34,000 bushels Corn at 5d. ₱ 60 lb.; 350 bales Hops on private terms; 2,100 bbls. Bacon, part through freight, reported on the basis of 35s.; 2,500 bxs. Cheese, on private terms, quoted nominally at 40s. ₱ ton; 200 bbls. Apples as per bill; and 16,000 bushels Clover-seed at 7s. per ton. And, by steam, from Philadelphia, 600 bales Cotton, (part of through freight,) reported at 5-16d. per lb.; 32,000 bushels Grain at 7d. ₱ bushel.....For London, by steam, 83,000 bushels Grain (chiefly Corn) including 19,000 bushels at 5½d., and 64,000 bushels at 6d. ₱ 60 lb., (or which latter 48,000 bushels from store at the quoted rate;) also a Steamer, 3,247 tons, placed on private terms, berth, hence, for general cargo.....For Glasgow, by steam, 50 pks. Tobacco on private terms; 6.0 pks. Provisions, part reported at 35s. ₱ ton.....For the United Kingdom, direct, a British bark, 925 tons, hence, with equal to about 6,000 bbls. Readnum and Refined Petroleum at 4s. ₱ bbl.....For Cork and orders, a Norwegian bark, 480 tons, hence, with about 3,000 bbls. Refined Petroleum, at 4s. 3d. @4s. 6d.; a bark, with about 6,000 bbls. Refined or Crude Petroleum, from Philadelphia, reported at 4s. 6d. ₱ bbl.; and a Norwegian bark, with about 3,500 bushels grain, from Baltimore, (chartered terms,) at 6s. ₱ quarter. Tonnage for Grain for sea France's co loading was in very moderate request and quoted at 40s.@42s. 6d.....For the Continent, a bark, with grain, from New-Orleans, (chartered there,) at 7s. ₱ quarter.....For Havre, Antwerp, or Bremen, a British bark, 649 tons, with about 4,300 bbls. Crude Petroleum, from Philadelphia, at 4s. 7½d. ₱ bbl.....For Constantinople, a British steam-ship, 970 tons, hence, with ammunition, &c., reported (as chartered a few days since) at £3,000.....For Bristol, by steam, 1,000 bxs. Cheese at 40s. ₱ ton.....For Key West, an American brig, 323 tons, hence, with coal, at $2 25 ₱ ton, and from Pensacola, with Lumber, for Santos, at $20.....Coastwise trade interests generally dull to-day.

THE COTTON MARKETS.

NEW-ORLEANS, Jan. 29.—Cotton weak; Middling, 12¾c.; Low Middling, 11⅞c.; Good Ordinary, 11¼c.; net receipts, 13,240 bales; gross, 15,299 bales; exports, to Great Britain, 7,351 bales; to France, 2,823 bales; to the Continent, 1,200 bales; coastwise, 1,428 bales.; sales, 3,000 bales; stock, 283,096 bales.

GALVESTON, Jan. 29.—Cotton quiet; Middling, 12⅝c.; Low Middling, 11⅞c.; Good Ordinary, 11¾c.; net receipts, 2,460 bales; gross, 2,473 bales; exports, to Great Britain, 1,700 bales, to the Continent, 1,363 bales; coastwise, 716 bales; sales, 1,555 bales; stock, 105,987 bales.

SAVANNAH, Jan. 29.—Cotton dull; Middling 12⅝c.; Low Middling, 12¾c.; Good Ordinary, 11¾c.; net receipts, 2,730 bales; exports to Great Britain, 2,730 bales; coastwise, 1,414 bales; sales, 130 bales; stock, 76,783 bales.

MOBILE, Jan. 29.—Cotton weak and irregular; Middling 12¼c.; Low Middling, 12c.; Good Ordinary, 11¾c.; net receipts, 4,451 bales; exports, coastwise, 5,500 bales; sales, 500 bales; stock, 73,338 bales.

CHARLESTON, Jan. 29.—Cotton dull and depressed; Middling, 12¾c.; Low Middling, 12¾c.; Good Ordinary, 12c.; net receipts, 1,921 bales; exports, coastwise, 1,200 bales; sales, 200 bales; stock, 53,486 bales.

NAVAL STORES MARKET.

WILMINGTON, N. C., Jan. 29.—Spirits of Turpentine dull and nominal. Resin dull at $1 90 for Strained, and $1 95 for Good Strained. Crude Turpentine dull at $2@2 05 for hard, $3@3 05 for Yellow Dip, $3@3 05 for Virgin. Tar steady at $1 80.

THE REAL ESTATE MARKET.

The following business was transacted at the Exchange yesterday, (Monday,) Jan. 29:

By R. V. Harnett, by order of the Supreme Court in foreclosure, R. H. Cudlipp, Esq., Referee, sold a five-story brick tenement-house, with lot, 23.6 by 95, on Madison st., south side, 192.11 feet east of Scammel st., for $10,600, to Frederick Wilson. The same auctioneer, under a similar court order, Frank Judd, Esq., Referee, disposed of two five-story brick tenement-houses, with lots, each 18.9 by 100.5, on East 66th st., south side, 156.3 feet east of 2d av., for $9,000, to T. O. Le Roy, Executor and plaintiff in the legal action. The same auctioneer, under a similar court decree, Randolph B. Martine, Esq., Referee, disposed of four lots, each 20 by 90.11, on West 143th st., north side, 550 feet east of 10th av., for $1,200 each, to Henry A. Bradhurst, plaintiff in the legal action.

Scott & Myers, by order of the Supreme Court, in foreclosure, C. W. Dayton, Esq., Referee, sold a three-story and basement brick house, with lot 20.4 by 61.4, on West 28th st., south side, 76.6 feet west of 7th av., for $6,500, to Isaac Solomon for the First National Building and Mutual Loan Association, plaintiff.

William Kennelly, under a Supreme Court foreclosure order, R. F. Farrell, Esq., Referee, sold the three-story and basement brown-stone-front house, with lot 20 by 102.2, No. 129 East 71st st., north side, 224 feet east of 4th av., for $13,500, to Charles Goldzier, plaintiff in the legal proceedings.

A. H. Muller & Son, also under a Supreme Court foreclosure sale, Thomas Boese, Esq., Referee, sold two lots, each 25 by 125, on 10th av., north-west corner of 160th st., for $1,000, to James A. Deering, plaintiff in the legal action. The same firm, as an Executor's sale, sold one lot, 20 by 100, on 7th av., south-west corner of 8th st., Brooklyn, for $1,025 to J. C. Atwater.

The following legal auctions were adjourned: Sale by James M. Miller of one lot on 10th av., south of 149th st., to Feb. 6; sale by J. L. Wells of one lot on 10th av., south of 149th st., to same date; sale by H. V. Harnett of a plot of land on 106th st., west of 4th av., to Feb. 12; sale by same auctioneer of a house, with lot, on West 23d st., west of 7th av., to same date; sale by James M. Miller of buildings, with lot, on West 38th st., east of Broadway, to same date; and sale by Louis Mester of a plot of land on 3d av., south-west corner of 97th st., to Feb. 19.

TO-DAY'S AUCTIONS.

To-day's sales, all at the Exchange, are as follows:

By A. J. Bleecker & Son, Supreme Court foreclosure sale, A. C. Richard, Esq., Referee, of a house, with lot 26.6 by 98.9 on East 26th st., south side, 250.4 feet west of 1st av.

By H. W. Coates, Supreme Court foreclosure sale, George N. Titus, Esq., Referee, of a house, with lot 25 by 100.5, on West 70th st., north side, 250 feet west of 8th av.

By R. H. Ludlow & Co., Supreme Court foreclosure sale, W. H. Hascall, Esq., Referee, of two houses, with lots each 20 by 102.2, Nos. 311 and 313 East 74th st., north side, 160 feet east of 2d av.; also, number six, N. Jarvis, Jr., Esq., Referee, of the two buildings, with lot 25 by 67.6, No. 49 North Moore st., south side, 75 feet east of Hudson st.

By R. P. Fairchild, Supreme Court foreclosure sale, F. W. Loew, Esq., Referee, of one lot, 25 by 102.3, on East 81st st., south side, 350 feet east of 2d av.

By R. P. Fairchild, Supreme Court foreclosure sale, F. W. Loew, Esq., Referee, four lots of land, 100.11 by 125, on 9th av., north-west corner 105th st.

By James M. Miller, Supreme Court foreclosure sale, Charles Price, Esq., Referee, of a house with lot 21.9 by 102.2 on East 82d st., south side, 301 feet east of 4th av.

By Edward Camp, Supreme Court foreclosure sale, W. P. Dixon, Esq., Referee, of the block of land 201.5 by 650, bounded by 9th and 10th avs., 95th and 96th sts.

By Scott & Myers, Supreme Court foreclosure sale, W. A. Boyd, Esq., Referee, of —lots, each 17 by 89.11, on West 126th st., north side, 75 feet east of 8th av.

By E. V. Harnett, on the premises, Supreme Court foreclosure sale, A. R. McMahon, Esq., Referee, of two lots on Flushing av., between Well place and Hallet st., Astoria, Long Island City.

EXCHANGE SALES—MONDAY, JAN. 29.

NEW-YORK.

By R. V. Harnett.

1 five-story brick tenement-house, with lot, Madison st., s. s., 192.11 ft. e. of Scammel st., lot 23.6x95	$10,600
2 four-story brick tenement-houses, with lots, East 66th st., n. s., 156.3 ft. e. of 2d av., each lot 18.9x100.5	9,000
4 lots, West 143th st., n. s., 550 ft. e. of 10th av., each 25x99.11	4,800

By Scott & Myers.

1 three-story brick tenement-house, with lot, West 28th st., n. s., 76.6 ft. w. of 7th av., lot 20.4x61.4	$6,500

By William Kennelly.

1 three-story and basement brown-stone-front house, with lot, No. 129 e. 71st st., 224 ft. e. of 4th av., lot 20x102.2	$13,500

By A. H. Muller & Son.

2 lots, 10th av., n. w. corner of 160th st., each 25 by 125	$1,000
1 lot, 7th av., s. w. corner of 8th st., Brooklyn, 20x100	1,025

RECORDED REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

NEW-YORK.

Saturday, Jan. 27.

44th st., s. s., 220 ft. w. of 9th av., 20x100.4; Mary A. Ahearne to Margaret M. A. Gerard	nom.
83d st., n. s., 125.6 ft. e. of 4th av., 25x102.2; Solomon J. Levy to Jeremiah Pangburn	$6,000
57th st., n. s., 248.4 ft. e. of 10th av., 16.8x 100.5; Frederic R. Coudert to Daniel Cahn	13,500
Mott st., w. s., 41.10 ft. n. of Worth st., 22.8x 51.1; John T. Wnsley and wife to John A. Deady	nom.
Mott st., No. 3, w. s., 41.10 ft. n. of Worth st., 22.8x51.1; Rachel Whaley, Executrix, to Eutgers Fire Insurance Company	nom.
1st av., 75 ft. n. of 86th st., 25x100; Solomon Schwarg and wife to Adelaide Lion	16,000
John st., No. 90, 20.3x112.1; Jennie D. De Witt to Wm. Wirth & Company	nom.
9th st., n. s., 18 ft. w. of Avenue D, 25x92.3; Margaret Murphy to Michael Mulligan	14,500
84th st., n. s., 345.8 ft. w. of 2d av., 20.4x 102.2; Sigmund Gage and wife to Simon Pinner	10,250
55th st., n. s., 75 ft. w. of Lexington av., 17x 100.5; Dunnelle Van Schaick and wife to Lucinda Van Schaick	21,000
10th st., corner of King's Bridge Road, irregular; Thomas Bailey and wife to Ann Wills	35,200
61st st., s. s., 96 ft. w. of 4th av., 19x100.5; Theodore S. Lane and wife to Thomas Glover	30,500
Jefferson st., irregular, 23d Ward; Bernard M. Chave and wife to Louise T. Millman	1,500
Same property; Louise T. Millman to Elisa Chave	1,500
32d st., s. s., 150 ft. e. of 10th av., 25x98.9; Philip Borchert to Mary Mamlok	nom.
57th st., s. s., 260 ft. w. of 7th av., 26x114.3; H. A. Mott, Referee, to Amos R. Eno	6,550
Broadway, e. s., 102.6 ft. s. of 57th st., 23.8x 102.6; same to same	12,050
Broadway, e. s., 89.9 ft., s. of 57th st., 23.8x 75; same to same	11,400
Broadway, e. s., 113.8 f. s. of 57th st., 26.10x76.6; same to same	10,750
Mott st., w. s., 41.10 ft. n. of Worth st., 22.8x 51.1; J. O. Brown, Referee	11,100
81st st., s. s., 370 ft. e. of 2d av., 25x102.2; L. W. Emerson, Referee, to William A. Cauldwell	7,000

CITY REAL ESTATE.

OFFICE OF JOSIAH JEX, NO. 1,235 BROADWAY.

Real Estate in all its branches, including loans on bond and mortgage, and the collection of rents will be assumed and judiciously attended to. All parties wishing to sell, purchase, or hire will have their business promptly attended to by a thoroughly responsible and experienced agent, and if both purchasers and sellers will call at the office they can be JEX fect confidence and interests in his hands will not be misplaced. Houses and lots, flats and stores, of all sizes and locations, which are for sale or to let, will be received at this office.

FOR SALE—LOW—A VERY HANDSOME FOUR-story brown-stone dwelling and lot, located in convenient to park and Elevated Railroad; also, several three-story houses at reduced prices.
ROBERT AULD, No. 932 8th av.

TO OWNERS OF LAND NEAR THIS CITY.—The services of an unequaled dealer in suburban lots can be secured by addressing, with description, Box No. 2,216 New-York Post Office.

COUNTRY REAL ESTATE.

ORANGE, N. J.—COUNTRY HOUSES, LANDS, and village lots for sale; a great variety. Also, furnished and unfurnished houses to let for season or year, by WALTER K. SMITH, formerly Blackwell & Smith, Orange, corner of Main and Cones sts.

REAL ESTATE AT AUCTION.

ASSIGNEE'S SALE IN BANKRUPTCY.—IN THE MATTER OF M. ATWATER and HARRY E. ATWATER, comprising the firm of ATWATER & BRO., bankrupts.—Notice is hereby given that I will sell at public auction, at the Township of Crawford, County and State of New-York, on the premises hereinafter described, on the 28th day of February, A. D. 1877, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon, in such lots or parcels and upon such terms as shall then be determined on, all the right, title and interest of the said bankrupts, Harry E. Atwater in the following-described real property, situate in the village and county aforesaid, and more particularly described as follows: All those certain lots, pieces or parcels of lands situate, lying and being in said township of Crawford, county of Union, and State of New-Jersey, described and set forth on a certain map or plan sites of Cranford, N. J., drawn by J. W. Soper & Co., civil engineers, 1869, and filed in the office of the Clerk of County of Union on the 26th day of March, 1874, said lots being numbered on the said map as lots 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, and 9, in block 1; lots 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 and 9 in block 3; lots 1, 2, 3, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, and 17 in block 4; lots 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, and 20, in block 5; also a certain plot containing about one-half an acre, known and distinguished on said map as plot "A," and containing about one and three-quarters acres. The locality and situation of the signers to such guaranty to be certified to by the Postmaster or United States Attorney where the bidder resides; and in such contract the contractor and his sureties shall covenant and agree that in case the said contractor shall fail to do or perform all or any of the covenants, stipulations, and agreements of said contract on the part of the said contractor to be performed, as therein set forth, then the said contractor and his sureties shall forfeit and pay to the United States of America the sum of two hundred thousand dollars, for which said forfeiture the said contractor and his sureties shall be jointly and severally liable, as liquidated damages to be sued for in the name of the United States.

If the bidder to whom the first award may be made shall fail to enter into a contract, as herein provided, then the award may be annulled, and the contract let to the next lowest responsible bidder, if not deemed too high by the Postmaster General, and so on until the required contract is executed; and such next lowest bidder shall be required to fulfil every stipulation embraced herein as if he were the original party to whom the contract was awarded.

The contract will also provide that if at any time during the continuance the sureties shall die or become irresponsible, the Postmaster General shall have the right to require additional and sufficient sureties, which the contractor shall furnish to the acceptance of the Postmaster General within 10 days after notice; and in default thereof, the contract may be annulled.

RESERVATIONS.

The Postmaster General reserves the right to reject any and all bids if, in his opinion, the prices are not the Government requires it; also the right to annul the contract if, in his opinion, there shall be a failure at any time to perform faithfully any of its stipulations, or in case of a wilful attempt to impose upon the department stamps inferior to those required by the contract.

PAYMENTS.

Payments for stamps actually issued and delivered will be made quarterly, after proper examination and adjustment of accounts.

CONTRACT NOT ASSIGNABLE.

The contract cannot, in any case, be lawfully transferred or assigned.

EXTENSION.

Should the interest of the Government require, the contract may be extended beyond the time named, not exceeding three months, by order of the Postmaster General, and the contract prices and all conditions herein set forth shall govern in such extended contract.

ADDRESS.

All proposals must be made on the blank forms furnished by the department, securely enveloped and sealed, indorsed on the back "Proposals for Postage Stamps," and addressed to the Third Assistant Postmaster General, Washington, D. C.

JAMES N. TYNER, Postmaster General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

Sealed proposals will be received by the Board of School Trustees of the Twelfth Ward, at the Hall of the Board of Education, corner of Grand and Elm sts., until TUESDAY, the 6th day of February, 1877, and until 4 o'clock P. M. on said day, for altering and fitting up the premises on the north-east corner of Avenue A and 116th st. for school purposes.

Plans and specifications may be seen at the office of the Superintendent of School Buildings, No. 146 Grand st., third floor.

Two responsible and approved sureties, residents of this City, will be required from the successful bidder.

The party submitting a proposal, and the parties proposing to become sureties must each write his name and place of residence on said proposal.

The Trustees reserve the right to reject any or all of the proposals submitted.

ROSWELL G. ROLSTON,
DAVID H. KRAPY,
CHARLES CRAIG,
JOHN L. T. NEELE,
GERMAIN HAUSCHILT,
Board of School Trustees, Twelfth Ward.

Dated New-York, Jan. 23, 1877.

PROPOSALS.

PROPOSALS FOR ADHESIVE POSTAGE STAMPS.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
Jan. 25, 1877.

Sealed proposals are invited from steel-plate engravers and bank note companies, and will be received at this department until 12 o'clock M., on Wednesday, the 28th day of February, 1877, for furnishing all the postage stamps which this department may require for public and official use during a period of four years, commencing on the 1st day of May, 1877, viz:

1. Stamps for the use of the public.
2. Official stamps for the use of the executive department.
3. Newspaper and periodical stamps.

QUALITY OF STAMPS.

The stamps must be furnished, subject to the approval of the department, from steel plates, engraved in the highest style of the art of steel engraving, and printed in such colors as may from time to time be selected by the department, in the best and most approved manner, upon paper of the best quality, suitable for the purposes and entirely satisfactory to the department, thoroughly gummed with the best quality of adhesive gum, perforated in such manner that each separate stamp can be readily detached and used, the sheets to be well pressed, and packed so as to prevent their cross adhering in the mails, and no paper to be furnished with all reasonable dispatch in such quantities as may in each case be ordered by the department daily to fill requisitions from Postmasters and from the Postmaster General. The stamps must be printed on hand-roller presses.

DIES, ROLLS, AND PLATES.

The dies, rolls, and plates from which postage stamps are now printed, being the property of the United States, and in the custody of the department, and on the expiration of the contract aforesaid, the contractor on or before the first day of May, 1877, the same to be held subject to the order and control of the department, as hereinafter provided; and the contractor will be required, when and as often as dies, rolls, and plates, and from such rolls and plates as may be necessary to be reproduced from the original dies, to have on hand, ready for issue on the day the contract for new stamps takes effect, a stock of stamps of the several denominations and kinds required, to fill the current daily requisitions from the department, without hindrance or delay.

The contractor will be further required to keep in repair all dies, rolls, and plates from which stamps may be printed, and to renew the same whenever required; and should new designs be required at any time to take the place of the present series of stamps for the use of the public, or any of them, or for denominations of stamps not now in use, the same shall be furnished and engraved, subject to the approval of the Postmaster General, upon his request, within a reasonable time; all which shall be done and executed in the best style of steel engraving by the contractor, and at his own expense. No change will be made in the present designs of official postage stamps, or of newspaper and periodical stamps, by the contractor will be required to keep in repair, and renew when required, the dies, rolls, and plates for these stamps, the same as for the stamps for the use of the public. All dies, rolls, and plates used by the contractor in filling the contract shall immediately become the absolute property of the United States, and shall be delivered, in good working order, to the Postmaster General or his authorized agent whenever demanded.

BUILDING, PLACE OF MANUFACTURE, &c.

The stamps will be required to be manufactured in a fire-proof building, and in separate apartments, distinct from those in which any other work is done by the contractor—the location of which is subject to the approval of the department—and when finished must be placed in a fire and burglar-proof safe or vault, to be specially provided for that purpose, and constructed to the satisfaction of the department. The contractor, his employés, and agents will conform to such regulations as the department may from time to time adopt for the security of the Government.

AGENT—OFFICE-ROOMS—INSPECTION.

A resident agent of the department will have supervision of the manufacture, storage, and issue of the stamps, who shall at all times have full and free access to the apartments, safes, and vaults where the stamps are manufactured and stored, for the purpose of inspecting the same; and the contractor shall furnish him and his clerks suitable office and desk room, for the transaction of the business of his agency, without cost to the Government. The Postmaster General shall also have the right at any time to cause an inspection to be made, by any agent or agents whom he may specially designate for the purpose, of the paper, dies, rolls, and plates used for the manufacture and storage of stamps, and of the stamps in course of manufacture or in stock.

STOCK ON HAND.

The contractor shall at all times keep on hand a stock of stamps of the several denominations and kinds of stamps, subject to the control of the Post Office Department, its regularly authorized agent, or such other agents as may be specially authorized by the Postmaster General, in all stages of manufacture, sufficient to meet all orders of the department, and to provide against any and all contingencies that may be likely to occur during the existence of the contract, so that each and every order may be promptly filled, and the department shall have the right to require the contractor at any time during the existence of the contract to furnish an extra quantity of stamps not exceeding a supply for three months.

PACKING.

Stamps to be transmitted by sea routes must be securely packed in hermetically sealed tin cases, wrapped in strong manila paper; all others must either be packed in strong binders'-board boxes, bound on the edges and corners with manila, and in wrappers of two thicknesses of strong manila paper, or inclosed in strong manila envelopes, as the quantity to be transmitted may require; all packages to be so inclosed as to enable the agent of the department to officially seal them.

DELIVERY.

The stamps may be required to be delivered by the contractor at such post office in the city as may be provided for, at the Post Office in the place where the same are manufactured, or at such other Post Office in the immediate vicinity of the place of manufacture as the Postmaster General may direct, in such quantities at the Post Office Department, Washington, D. C. (each denomination and kind being kept separate,) as the Postmaster General may direct.

BLANKS.

The contractor will be required to furnish for finish labels, and direct the same, for each package, in accordance with the daily lists furnished by the agent of the department, together with all other blanks required to be inclosed with the stamps; also, all blanks for daily, weekly, monthly, and quarterly returns relating to the number and denominations of stamps furnished.

REPORTS.

The contractor will be required to report weekly, under oath, the number, denomination, and kind of stamps manufactured, (finished, unfinished, and spoiled,) the number issued during the week, and the number on hand at the factory; all spoiled sheets to be destroyed by the agent of the department in the presence of the contractor or his representative, or otherwise disposed of, as the Postmaster General may direct.

AWARD.

The contract will be awarded on the basis of the number of the several kinds of stamps issued during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878, as follows:

1. Number of stamps for use of the public	698,799,090
2. Number of official stamps for use of the executive departments	17,682,865
3. Number of newspaper and periodical stamps	1,290,347
Total	717,772,102

Bids must be made for each kind of stamps separately, the bidders stating in their proposals the price per thousand stamps, including everything required to be done and furnished by the contractor in the advertisement; and the contract will be awarded as a whole to the lowest responsible bidder in the aggregate, the amount of a bid to be ascertained by excluding the above items at the prices bid respectively, and then aggregating the amounts of the three several items. It must be understood, however, that proposals made under this advertisement shall include all the stamps needed by the department during the contract term, without reference to the number of issues. Should the use of any of the above kinds of stamps be discontinued during the contract term, the contractor will not be entitled to damages on account of such discontinuance.

PROPOSALS—AGREEMENT—BOND.

Each proposal must be signed by the individual or partnership

SHIPPING.

WHITE STAR LINE.
FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL. CARRYING UNITED STATES MAIL.

The steamers of this line take the Lane Routes recommended by Lieut. Maury, U. S. N., going south of the Banks on the passage to Queenstown all the year round.

CELTIC.....SATURDAY, Feb. 3, 8:30 A. M.
ADRIATIC.....SATURDAY, Feb. 10, at 3 P. M.
BRITANNIC.....SATURDAY, Feb. 24, 9 P. M.
CELTIC.....SATURDAY, March 10, at 2 P. M.

From pier 45 North River. Pier No. 52 North River.
These steamers are uniform in size and unsurpassed in appointments. The saloon, staterooms, smoking and bath rooms are amidships, where the noise and motion are least felt, affording a degree of comfort hitherto unattainable at sea.

Rates—Saloon $80 and $100, gold; return tickets on favorable terms. Steerage, $28.

For insertion of plans and other information apply at the Company's offices, No. 37 Broadway, New-York.
B. J. COZZENS, Agent.

CUNARD LINE B. & N. A. R. M. S. P. CO.
NOTICE.

With the view of diminishing the chances of collision the steamers of this line take a specified course for all seasons of the year.

On the outward passage from Queenstown to New-York or Boston, crossing the meridian of 50 at 43 latitude, or nothing to the north of 43.

On the homeward passage, crossing the meridian of 47 at 42, or nothing to the north of 42.

FROM NEW-YORK FOR LIVERPOOL AND QUEENSTOWN.
ABYSSINIA...WED., Jan. 31 PARTHIA...WED., Feb. 14
ALGERIA....WED., Feb. 7 CHINA.....WED., Feb. 21

Steamers marked ◇ do not carry steerage passengers.

Cabin passage, $80, $100, and $130, gold, according to accommodation. Return tickets on favorable terms.

Steerage tickets to and from all parts of Europe at very low rates. Freight and passage office, No. 4 Bowling Green.
CHAS. G. FRANCKLYN, Agent.

PASSENGERS PER STEAM-SHIP ABYSSINIA embark from the Cunard Wharf, foot of Grand street, Jersey City, at 4 P. M., on WEDNESDAY, Jan. 31, 1877.
CHAS. G. FRANCKLYN,
No. 4 Bowling Green, New-York.

LIVERPOOL AND GREAT WESTERN STEAM COMPANY. (LIMITED)
LIVERPOOL, (Via Queenstown,)
CARRYING THE UNITED STATES MAIL.

TUESDAY.

Leaving Pier No. 46 North River as follows:
WISCONSIN.....Jan. 30, at 3 P. M.
WYOMING.....Feb. 6, at noon
DAKOTA.....Feb. 13, at 3 P. M.
NEVADA.....Feb. 20, at 10 A. M.
IDAHO.....Feb. 27, at 3 P. M.
MONTANA.....March 6, at 10 A. M.

RATES OF PASSENGERS REDUCED.

Steerage, $26: intermediate, $40; cabin, $85 to $80, according to state-room. Offices, No. 29 Broadway.
WILLIAMS & GUION.

ATLAS MAIL LINE.

BI-MONTHLY SERVICE TO JAMAICA, HAYTI, COLOMBIA, and ASPINWALL, and to PANAMA and SOUTH PACIFIC PORTS (via Aspinwall.) First-class full-powered iron screw steamers, from Pier No. 51 North River.

For KINGSTON (Jam.) and AUX CAYES.
ATLAS.....Feb. 8
For HAYTI, COLOMBIA, ISTHMUS OF PANAMA, and SOUTH PACIFIC PORTS (via Aspinwall.)
ANDES.....Feb. 14
ALPS.....Feb. 28

Superior first-class passenger accommodations. PIM, FORWOOD & CO., Agents, No. 56 Wall st.

GREAT SOUTHERN FREIGHT AND PASSENGER LINE.
SAILING FROM PIER NO. 26 NORTH RIVER.
WEDNESDAYS and SATURDAYS at 3 P. M.,
FOR CHARLESTON, N. C., FLORIDA, THE SOUTH, AND SOUTH-WEST.

STEAMER CLYDE.....WEDNESDAY.....Jan. 31
CHAMPION.....SATURDAY.....Feb. 3

SUPERIOR PASSENGER ACCOMMODATIONS.

Insurance to destination one-half of one per cent. Goods forwarded free of commission. Passenger tickets and bills of lading issued and stamped at the office of
JAMES W. QUINTARD & CO., Agents,
No. 177 West st., corner Warren.

Or W. P. CLYDE & CO., No. 5 Bowling Green.
Or BENTLEY & HASELL, General Agents
Great Southern Freight Line, 317 Broadway.

ANCHOR LINE U. S. MAIL STEAMERS.
NEW-YORK AND GLASGOW
Victoria....Feb. 3, 9 A. M. | Alsatia....Feb. 17, 8 A. M.
Bolivia....Feb. 10, 2 P. M. | Anchoria....Feb. 24, 2 P. M.

TO GLASGOW, LIVERPOOL, OR DERRY,
Nine $65 to $80, according to accommodations; Intermediate, $35; Steerage $28.

NEW-YORK AND LONDON DIRECT.
Alsatia....Jan. 31, 3 P. M. | Italia....Feb. 10, 2 P. M.

Cabins, $55 to $70 Steerage, $28. Cabin excursion tickets at reduced rates. Drafts issued for any amount at current rates. Company's Pier, foot of 20 and 21 North River, N. R.
HENDERSON BROTHERS,
Agents, No. 7 Bowling Green.

NORTH GERMAN LLOYD.
STEAM-SHIP LINE BETWEEN NEW-YORK SOUTHAMPTON, AND BREMEN.

Company's Pier, foot of 24st., Hoboken.
WESER.....Sat., Feb. 3 | ODER.....Sat., Feb. 17
RHEIN.....Sat. Feb. 10 | HERMANN.....Sat., Feb. 24

RATES OF PASSAGE FROM NEW-YORK TO SOUTHAMPTON, HAVRE, OR BREMEN.

First cabin.....$100 gold
Second cabin.....60 gold
Steerage.....30 currency

Return tickets at reduced rates. Prepaid steerage certificates, $32 currency. For freight or passage apply to OELRICHS & CO., No. 2 Bowling Green.

INDIAN LINE.—MAIL STEAMERS.
FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.
CITY OF CHESTER, Saturday, Feb. 17, at 7:30 A. M.
CITY OF RICHMOND, Saturday, March 3, at 8 A. M.
CITY OF BRUSSELS, Saturday, March 17, 6:30 A. M.

From Pier 45 North River.

CABIN, $80 and $100, Gold. Return tickets on favorable terms. STEERAGE, $24, Currency. Drafts at lowest rates.
Saloons, state-rooms, smoking, and bath-rooms, midships.
JOHN G. DALE, Agent,
Nos. 15 and 33 Broadway, N. Y.

ONLY DIRECT LINE TO FRANCE.
THE GENERAL TRANSATLANTIC COMPANY'S MAIL STEAMERS BETWEEN NEW-YORK AND HAVRE,
Calling at PLYMOUTH (G. B.) for the landing of Passengers.

Will sail from Pier No. 42 North River, foot of Morton st., every alternate Saturday, beginning with:
LABRADOR, Saturday.....Saturday, Feb. 10, 3 P. M

For particulars address
LOUIS DE BEBIAN, Agent, No. 55 Broadway.

NATIONAL LINE—Piers 44 and 51 North River.
FOR LONDON.
HOLLAND.....THURSDAY, Feb. 1, 8 A. M.
FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.
ERIN.....Feb. 3, at 9 A. M. | Helvetia...Feb. 10, 2 P. M.

Cabin and steerage passage, and drafts from £1 upward, issued at very low rates. Company's offices No. 69 Broadway.
F. W. J. HURST, Manager.

FOR SAVANNAH GA.,
THE FLORIDA PORTS
AND THE SOUTH AND SOUTH-WEST.

GREAT SOUTHERN FREIGHT AND PASSENGER LINE, CENTRAL RAILROAD OF GEORGIA, AND ATLANTIC AND GULF RAILROAD.

WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY.

R. LIVINGSTON, Capt. MALLORY, WEDNESDAY, Jan. 31, Pier No. 43 North River. 3 P. M. GEO. YONGE, Agent, No. 409 Broadway.

SAN SALVADOR, Capt. NICKERSON, SATURDAY, Feb. 3, Pier 43 North River, 3 P. M. GEO. YONGE, Agt., 409 Broadway.

GENERAL BARNES, Capt. CHESEMAN, WEDNESDAY, Feb. 7, Pier 16 East River, 3 P. M. MURRAY, FERRIS & CO., Agts., 62 South st.

SAN JACINTO, Capt. HAZARD, SATURDAY, Feb. 10, Pier 43 North River, 3 P. M. GEO. YONGE, Agt., 409 Broadway.

Insurance ONE-HALF PER CENT. Superior accommodations for passengers. Through rates and bills of lading in connection with Central R. R. of Georgia, Atlantic and Gulf Railroad, and Florida steamers City Point and Dictator also, with the steamer J. R. MILLER, which has been placed on the inside route from Savannah to Florida, and offers unsurpassed accommodations.

Ticket Offices, Nos. 526 and 944 Broadway, No. 1 Astor House, and foot of Desbrosses and Cortlandt sts.; No. 4 Court st., Brooklyn; Nos. 114, 116, and 118 Hudson st., Hoboken; Depot, Jersey City. Emigrant Ticket Office, No. 8 Battery place.
C. D. OWENS, Agent, Pier 43 N. R.
GEORGE YONGE, Agent, No. 409 Broadway.

FLORIDA.

Caution to travelers! Great reduction in fare via the lowest route to all Florida ports. Only $2 to Jacksonville. Meals and state-rooms extra. The elegant steamer J. B. SCHUYLER makes close connection with all Savannah steamers, thus forming the quickest and most reliable route as well as the lowest in fare. Accommodations for passengers unsurpassed. Travelers are cautioned against purchasing through tickets via any other route.

PACIFIC MAIL AND PANAMA TRANSIT STEAM-SHIP LINES.

FOR CALIFORNIA, JAPAN, CHINA, AUSTRALIA, NEW-ZEALAND, BRITISH COLUMBIA, OREGON, &c.

Sailing from Pier No. 42 North River.

For SAN FRANCISCO, via ISTHMUS OF PANAMA.
Steam-ship ACAPULCO.....Wednesday, Jan. 31
connecting for Central America and South Pacific ports.

From SAN FRANCISCO to JAPAN and CHINA.
Steam-ship ALASKA.....Thursday, Feb. 1
From San Francisco to Sandwich Islands, Australia, and New-Zealand.
Steam-ship ZEALANDIA.....Wednesday, Jan. 31

For freight or passage apply to
WM. P. CLYDE & CO., or H. J. BULLAY, Superintendent, No. 6 Bowling Green, Pier No. 42 N. R., foot Canal st.

NEW-YORK, HAVANA, AND MEXICAN MAIL S. S. LINE.
Steamers leave Pier No. 3 North street at 3 P. M.
FOR HAVANA DIRECT.
CITY OF VERA CRUZ.....Wednesday, Jan. 31
CITY OF NEW-YORK.....Wednesday, Feb. 7
CITY OF HAVANA.....Saturday, Feb. 17
FOR VERA CRUZ AND NEW-ORLEANS,
Via Havana, Progreso, Campeachy Tuxpan, and Tampico.
CITY OF HAVANA.....Saturday, Feb. 17

Steamers will leave New-Orleans Feb. 2 and Feb. 23 for Vera Cruz and all the above ports.

Passage to Havana, passage and state-room, $25.
ALEXANDER & SONS, Nos. 31 and 33 Broadway.

NEW-YORK AND HAVANA DIRECT MAIL LINE.

These first-class steamships sail regularly at 3 P. M., from Pier No. 13 North River as follows:
CLYDE.....SATURDAY, Feb. 3
CUBA.....SATURDAY.....Feb. 10

Accommodations unsurpassed. For freight or passage apply to WM. P. CLYDE & CO., No. 5 Bowling Green. MCKELLER, LULING & CO., Agents in Havana.

HAMBURG American Packet Company's Line.
For PLYMOUTH, CHERBOURG and HAMBURG.
WIELAND.....Feb. 1 | GELLERT.....Feb. 15
FRISIA.....Feb. 8 | POMMERANIA.....Feb. 22

Rates of passage to Plymouth, London, $70; to Cherbourg and all points in Europe, First Cabin, $100 gold; Second Cabin, $60 gold. Steerage, $30, currency.
KUNHARDT & CO., G. B. RICHARD & SONS,
General Agents, 61 Broadway, N. Y. | General Passenger Agents, 61 Broadway, N. Y.

SHIPPING.

STATE LINE.

NEW-YORK TO GLASGOW. LIVERPOOL. DUBLIN, BELFAST, AND LONDONDERRY.

These first-class full-powered steamers will sail from Pier No. 42 North River, foot of Canal st.

STATE OF INDIANA.....Thursday, Feb. 1
STATE OF PENNSYLVANIA.....Thursday, Feb. 8
STATE OF VIRGINIA.....Thursday, Feb. 22
STATE OF NEVADA.....Thursday, March 1

First cabin, $60, $65, and $70, according to accommodations; return tickets, $110, $135. Second cabin, $45; return tickets, $80. Steerage at lowest rates. Apply to
AUSTIN BALDWIN & CO., Agents,
No. 72 Broadway, New-York.

STEERAGE tickets at No. 45 Broadway, and at the company's pier, foot of Canalst., North River.

AMERICAN STEAM-SHIP LINE
Between Philad'a & Liverpool, calling at Queenstown, Thursdays from Philad'a, Wednesdays from Liverpool.

Steamers to sail from Philadelphia as follows:
*Lord Clive.....Jan. 18 | *City of New-York...Feb. 8
Ohio.....Jan. 25 | Indiana.....Feb. 15
Pennsylvania.....Feb. 1 | Illinois.....Feb. 22

Price of passage in currency:
Cabin, $75 to $100; intermediate, $40. Steerage, $28.
PETER WRIGHT & SONS, Gen. Agents, Philad'a.
No. 52 Broadway, New-York.
JOHN McDONALD No. 8 Battery place, New-York.

RAILROADS.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.
GREAT TRUNK LINE
AND UNITED STATES MAIL ROUTE.

Trains leave New-York, via Desbrosses and Cortlandt Streets Ferries, as follows:

Express for Harrisburg, Pittsburg, the West and South, with Pullman Palace Cars attached, 8:30 A. M., 6 and 8:30 P. M. daily.

For Williamsport, Lock Haven, Corry, and Erie, at 8:30 P. M., connecting at Corry for Titusville, Petroleum Centre, and the Oil Regions. For Williamsport and Lock Haven, 8:30 A. M.

For Baltimore, Washington, and the South, "Limited Washington Express" of Pullman Parlor Cars daily, except Sunday, 9:30 A. M.; arrive Washington 4:40 P. M. Express at 8:40 A. M., 1, 6, and 9 P. M. Sunday, 6 and 9 P. M.

Express for Philadelphia, 7: 30, 8:30, 8:40, (9:30 Limited,) 10:30 A. M., 1, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8:30, 9 P. M., and 12 night. Sunday, 8:30 A. M., 5, 6, 7, 8:30, and 9 P. M. Emigrant and second-class, 7 P. M.

Accommodation for Trenton, 7 A. M., 2 and 4:10 P. M.

For trains to Newark, Elizabeth, Rahway, Princeton, Trenton, Perth Amboy, Flemington, Belvidere, and other points, see local schedules at all Ticket Offices.

Trains arrive: From Pittsburg, 6:20 and 10:30 A. M., and 10:20 P. M. daily; 10:10 A. M. and 8:50 P. M. daily, except Monday. From Washington and Baltimore, 6:30, 9:50 A. M., 4:10, 5:10, and 10:20 P. M. Sunday 6:30, 9:50 A. M. From Philadelphia, 5:05, 6:20, 6:30, 9:50, 10:10, 11:50 A. M., 2:10, 4:10, 5:10, 6:50, 9:40, 1:10, and 10:20 P. M. Sunday 5:05, 6:20, 6:30, 9:50, 11:50, A. M., 6:50, 10:10, and 10:20 P. M.

Ticket Offices, Nos. 526 and 944 Broadway, No. 1 Astor House, and foot of Desbrosses and Cortlandt streets; No. 4 Court street, Brooklyn; Nos. 114, 116, and 118 Hudson street, Hoboken; Depot, Jersey City. Emigrant Ticket Office, No. 8 Battery place.
FRANK THOMSON. D. M. BOYD, Jr.,
General Manager. General Passenger Agent.

TO PHILADELPHIA
via
PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.
THE OLD-ESTABLISHED ROUTE AND SHORT LINE between
NEW-YORK AND PHILADELPHIA.

14 Through Trains each way daily; 3 Depots in Philadelphia, 2 in New-York.

4 Tracks, the most Improved Equipment, and the Fastest Time consistent with absolute safety.

Express Trains leave New-York, via Desbrosses and Cortlandt streets Ferries, as follows:
7:30, 8:30, 9:40, (8:30 Limited,) 10:30 A. M., 1, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8:30, 9 P. M., and 12 Midnight. Sunday, 8:30 A. M., 5, 6, 7, 8:30, and 9 P. M.

Returning, trains leave Philadelphia 3:20, 3:30, 7, 7:30, 8:30, and 11 A. M., (Limited Express, 10:35, P. M.) 1:40, 4, 5:30, 7, and 7:35 P. M., and 12 Midnight. On Sunday, 3:20, 3:30, 7, 8:30 A. M., 4, 7, 7:35 P. M., and 12 Midnight.

Ticket Offices, Nos. 526 and 944 Broadway, No. 1 Astor House, and foot of Desbrosses and Cortlandt sts.; No. 4 Court st., Brooklyn; Nos. 114, 116, and 118 Hudson st., Hoboken; Depot, Jersey City. Emigrant Ticket Office, No. 8 Battery place.
FRANK THOMSON. D. M. BOYD, Jr.,
General Manager. General Passenger Agent.

NEW-YORK CENTRAL AND HUDSON RIVER RAILROAD.—Commencing Dec. 26, 1876, through trains will leave Grand Central Depot:

7:15 A. M., Western and Northern Express, with drawing-room cars to Canandaigua.

8:30 A. M., special Chicago and St. Louis Express, with drawing-room cars to Rochester and Buffalo. Also, Saturdays only, to Rochester.

11:00 A. M., North-ern and Western Express.

3:30 P. M., especially for Troy and Western Express arrives at Buffalo 7:10 A. M.

6:00 P. M., Express with Sleeping cars, for Watertown and Canandaigua. Also for Montreal via Plattsburg.

8:30 P. M., Pacific Express, daily, with sleeping cars, for Rochester, Niagara Falls, Buffalo, Cleveland, Indianapolis, and Louisville. Also for Chicago, via both L. S. and M. C. Railroads, and to Montreal via St. Albans.

11:00 P. M., Express, with sleeping cars, for Albany and Troy. Way trains as per local Time Tables.

Tickets for sale at Nos. 252, 261, and 413 Broadway, and at Westcott's Express Company's offices, Nos. 7 Park place, 785 and 942 Broadway New-York, and 333 Washington st., Brooklyn.
C. B. MEEKER, General Passenger Agent.

ERIE RAILWAY.

Winter Arrangement of through trains. From Chambers Street Depot. (For 23d st. see note below.)

9:00 A. M., daily, except Sundays, Cincinnati and Chicago Day Express. Drawing-room coaches to Buffalo.

10:45 A. M., daily, except Sundays, Express Mail for Buffalo and the West. Sleeping coach to Buffalo.

7:00 P. M., daily, Pacific Express to the West. Sleeping coaches through to Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Cincinnati, and Chicago without change. Hotel dining-coaches to Chicago.

7:00 P. M., except Sundays, Western Emigrant train. Above trains leave Twenty-third Street Ferry at 8:45 and 10:15 A. M. and 6:45 P. M.

For local trains see time-tables and cards in hotels and depots.

JNO. N. ABBOTT, General Passenger Agent.

NEW-YORK, NEW-HAVEN, AND HARTFORD RAILROAD.

After Dec. 10, 1876, trains leave Grand Central Depot (42d st.) for New-Canaan Railroad at 8:05 A. M., 1:4:40 P. M.; Danbury and Norwalk Railroad at 8:05 A. M., 1, and 4:40 P. M.; Naugatuck Railroad at 8:05 A. M., and 3 P. M.; Housatonic Railroad at 8:05 A. M., and 3 P. M.; New-Haven and Northampton Railroad at 8:05 A. M., and 3 P. M.; for Newport at 8:05 A. M. and 1 P. M.; Boston and Albany Railroad at 8:05 and 11 A. M., 3 and 9 P. M., (9 P. M. on Sunday;) Boston, (via Shore Line,) at 1 and 10 P. M., (10 P. M. on Sundays.) Boston and New-York Air Line, 8 A. M., 1 and 11:30 P. M.

Way trains as per local time-tables.

LEHIGH VALLEY RAILROAD.
ARRANGEMENT. PASSENGER TRAINS. JAN. 1, 1877.

Leave depots foot of Cortlandt and Debrosses sts., at 6:30 P. M.—Night Express, daily, for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Wilkesbarre, Pittston, Sayre, Elmira, Ithaca, Auburn, Rochester, Buffalo, Niagara Falls, and the West. Pullman's sleeping coaches attached.

General Eastern office corner Church and Cortlandt sts., CHARLES H. CUMMINGS, Agent.
ROBERT H. SAYER, Superintendent and Engineer.

WICKFORD RAILROAD ROUTE TO NEWPORT, R. I.—Passengers for this line take 8:05 A. M. and 1 P. M. express trains from Grand Central Depot, arriving at 4:18 and 8 P. M. at Newport.
THEODORE WARREN, Superintendent.

STEAMBOATS.

STONINGTON LINE
FOR BOSTON AND ALL POINTS EAST.
REDUCED FARE.

Elegant steamers leave Pier No. 33 North River, foot of Jay st., at 4:30 P. M.

Tickets for sale at all principal ticket offices. State-rooms secured at offices of Westcott Express Company and at No. 363 Broadway.
PRIV'TEER LINE.

Freight only, steamers leave Pier No. 27 North River, foot of Park place, at 4 P. M. Freights via either line taken at lowest rates.
D. S. BABCOCK, Pres. L. W. FILKINS, G. P. Agent.

FALL RIVER LINE
FOR
BOSTON AND THE EAST.
FARES REDUCED.

Leave New-York daily, (Sunday excepted,) from Pier No. 28 North River, foot of Murray st., 4:30 P. M.
BORDEN & LOVELL, Agents.
GEO. L. CONNOR, General Passenger Agent.

NEW-HAVEN, HARTFORD AND THE NORTH.—Steamers leave Peck slip for New-Haven at 3 P.M., (except Sundays,) connecting with road.

FOR BRIDGEPORT AND ALL POINTS ON Housatonic and Naugatuck Railroad.—Para 81. Steamers leave Catharine slip at 11:30 A. M.

INSTRUCTION.

CHARLIER INSTITUTE,
CENTRAL PARK, NEW-YORK.
Boarding and Day School for boys from seven to twenty years old.

DEAN COLLEGE AND CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC for young ladies, Binghamton, N. Y.; $200 per year; harp extra. Rev. R. A. PATERSON, A. M., President.

FORT WASHINGTON FRENCH AND ENGLISH Institute, 171st st. and King's Bridge Road, N. Y. City.—22d year, 2d session, opens Feb. 1. Pupils prepared for college or business. V. Prevost, Principal.

ANTHON GRAMMAR SCHOOL, No. 252 Madison av.; college and business; the rates of tuition have been reduced.

MRS. PARKS' BOARDING AND DAY School for young ladies, opens its next session Feb. 5. Circulars sent if desired. Terms moderate.

MISS WOODWARD WILL GIVE INSTRUCTION in painting to a limited class at her Studio, No. 1,155 Broadway.

TEACHERS.

MRS. MITCHELL (DIPLOMEE) SUPPLIES schools and families with reliable gentlemen, lady teachers, governesses, or tutors; gives information of good schools; families going to Europe and country will find competent teachers to accompany them. Mrs. MITCHELL can refer to the best families and schools in New-York. Teachers' Bureau, No. 67 West 38th st. Hours, 12 till 4.

MRS. LOUISA S. CULVER, TEACHER of painting, landscape, flowers, &c.; Studio No. 3 Association Building; references, Mr. D. Huntington, Mr. William Hart, Mr. James M. Hart.

FINANCIAL.

VERMILYE & CO.
BANKERS
16 and 18 Nassau st., New-York.

DEALERS IN ALL ISSUES OF GOVERNMENT SECURITIES.
NEW-YORK CITY
AND BROOKLYN BONDS.
BUY AND SELL ON COMMISSION
RAILWAY STOCKS, BONDS, AND GOLD.

INTEREST ON DEPOSITS.

JAS. A. TROWBRIDGE, DONALD MACKAY
LATHAM A. FISH

OFFICE OF THE ATLANTIC MUTUAL INSURANCE COMPANY, NEW-YORK, Dec. 24, 1877.

THE TRUSTEES, IN CONFORMITY TO the charter of the company submits the following statement of its affairs on the 31st December, 1876:

Premiums received on marine risks from 1st January, 1876, to 31st December, 1876.....$4,929,197 66
Premiums on Policies not marked off 1st January, 1876.....2,172,260 07

Total amount of marine premiums...$7,101,457 73

No policies have been issued upon life risks; nor upon fire disconnected with marine risks.

Premiums marked off from 1st January, 1876, to 31st December, 1876.....$5,061,095 12
Losses paid during the same period.....1,865,193 49
Returns of premiums and expenses...1,038,410 35

The company has the following assets, viz:

United States and State of New-York stock, City, bank, and other stocks...$11,069,700 00
Loans secured by stocks and otherwise.....1,779,300 00
Real estate and bonds and mortgages..267,000 00
Interest, and sundry notes and claims due the company, estimated at.....402,350 19
Premium notes and bills receivable...1,812,504 38
Cash in bank.....365,012 74

Total amount of assets.....$15,694,867 31

Six per cent. interest on the outstanding certificates of profits will be paid to the holders thereof, or their legal representatives, on and after Tuesday, the 6th of February next.

The outstanding certificates of the issue of 1873, will be redeemed and paid to the holders thereof, or their legal representatives, on and after Tuesday, the 6th of February next, upon which date all interest thereon will cease. The certificates to be produced at the time of payment, and canceled. Upon certificates which were issued for gold premiums, the payment of interest and redemption will be in gold.

A dividend of Forty per Cent. is declared on the net earned premiums of the company for the year ending 31st December, 1876, for which certificates will be issued on and after Tuesday, the 3d of April next.

By order of the Board,
J. H. CHAPMAN, Secretary.

TRUSTEES.

J. D. JONES,	ROYAL PHELPS,
CHARLES DENNIS,	THOMAS F. YOUNGS,
W. H. H. MOORE,	C. A. HAND,
LEWIS CURTIS,	JOHN D. HEWLETT,
CHARLES H. RUSSELL,	WILLIAM H. WEBB,
JAMES LOW,	CHARLES P. BURDETT,
DAVID LANE,	FRANCIS SKIDDY,
GORDON W. BURNHAM,	ALEXANDER V. BLAKE,
DANIEL S. MILLER,	ADOLPHE LEVENTRITT,
WM. STURGIS,	BOST. B. MINTURN,
JOSIAH O. LOW,	CHARLES A. MARSHALL,
WILLIAM E. DODGE,	GEORGE W. LANE,
ROBT. L. STUART,	HORACE GRAY,
JAMES G. DE FOREST,	EDMUND W. CORLIES,
FREDERICK CHAUNCEY,	JOHN ELLIOTT,
CHAS. D. LEVERICH,	WILLIAM BEYCE,
ADAM T. SACKETT,	WILLIAM H. FOGG

PETER V. KING.
J. D. JONES, President.
CHARLES DENNIS, Vice President.
W. H. H. MOORE, Second Vice President.
A. A. RAVEN, Third Vice President.

Choice and Safe Investments.

7, 8, AND 10 PER CENT.
CITY AND COUNTY MUNICIPAL BONDS.
FIRST MORTGAGE RAILROAD BONDS.
CITY RAILROAD STOCKS AND BONDS.
INSURANCE AND BANK STOCKS.
GAS-LIGHT STOCKS AND BONDS.
STRICTLY FIRST-CLASS SECURITIES.
PAYING 10 TO 12 PER CENT.
INTEREST ALWAYS PROMPTLY PAID.
For sale at desirable prices by

Albert H. Nicolay & Co.,
NO. 43 PINE ST., NEW-YORK.

N. B.—INVESTMENT SECURITIES OUR SPECIALTY 26 YEARS.

WABASH RAILWAY COMPANY.
NOTICE TO BONDHOLDERS.

The holders of the following First Mortgage Divisional Bonds of the Wabash Railway, viz:
Toledo and Illinois Railroad Company.
Lake Erie, Wabash and St. Louis Railroad Company.
Great Western Railroad Company.
Illinois and Southern Iowa Railroad Company.

On presentation, on Feb. 1, of the past due and current coupons to the Metropolitan National Bank, will receive therefor cash for the coupons due Feb. 1, 1877, and a certificate of deposit bearing interest for those past due.

For further information and particulars in regard to all classes of bonds, inquiry may be made of JAMES A. ROOSEVELT, President Wabash Railway Company, No. 32 Pine st., or of the Purchasing Committee, No. 52 William st., New-York.
NEW-YORK, Jan. 26. 1877.

OFFICE OF THE FARMERS' LOAN AND TRUST COMPANY, No. 26 EXCHANGE PLACE, CORNER WILLIAM ST., NEW-YORK, Jan. 8, 1877.

THE FARMERS' LOAN AND TRUST COMPANY of the City of New-York, Trustee of the sinking fund of the construction and equipment bonds of the Cleveland and Pittsburg Railroad Company, hereby give notice that in accordance with the provisions of the said sinking fund they have drawn by lot the following numbers of sixteen of said bonds, viz: Nos. 56, 449, 584, 676, 709, 711, 739, 867, 883, 888, 926, 945, 959, 960, 1,100, 1,342, and that on presentation and delivery to them of said sixteen bonds, or any part of the same, they will be redeemed at par value thereof, and that interest on all of the said sixteen bonds not presented for redemption on or before the 1st day of July next will cease from and after that date.
R. G. ROLSTON, President.

CITY COUNCIL CHAMBERS, RACINE, Wis., Jan. 6, 1877.

NOTICE—TO HOLDERS OF BONDS OF THE City of Racine, issued under authority of an act of the Wisconsin Legislature, approved Feb. 7, 1871:

The City of Racine will entertain proposals from holders of its bonds issued in conformity with the above-named act, to surrender them for cancelation on payment of the same from the sinking fund, in a sum not to exceed twenty thousand ($20,000) dollars.

Proposals should give numbers, rate of interest, and time of maturity of bonds offered, to be sealed and sent to the office of the City Clerk (marked "Proposals to surrender Racine City Bonds,") on or before Feb. 5, 1877.

The City reserves the right to reject any or all bids.
J. G. MEACHAM, Mayor.
M. CLANCY, Jr., Controller.

THE BANK OF MONTREAL
IS PREPARED TO ISSUE
CIRCULAR NOTES
AND
LETTERS OF CREDIT TO TRAVELERS,
available in all parts of the world.
CHARLES F. SMITHERS, } Agents
WALTER WATSON,
NOS. 59 AND 61 WALL ST.

THE GOLD MORTGAGE BONDHOLDERS' Committee are now prepared to purchase all or any portion of the outstanding thirty-two Gold Mortgage Bonds of the Toledo, Wabash and Western Railway Company, for the sum of $636 50 per bond, which is the amount of the dividend in cash arising from the sale under the foreclosure proceedings. Or if the holders of any of these bonds wish to join the other bondholders and share in the sale made to the new parties, they may do so, provided they notify us by the 15th of February. Apply to W. A. V. POST, Secretary of the Foreclosure Committee, at the office of Perkins, Livingston, Fuller & Stanton, 23 Nassau st.
New-York, Jan. 27, 1877.

WINSLOW, LANIER & CO., BANKERS.
NEW-YORK, Jan. 9, 1877.

CINCINNATI, HAMILTON AND DAYTON Consolidated Railroad Bonds for sale at 95 per cent. and interest.

The Eight per Cent. Bonds due June, 1877, will be received in payment at par and interest, or they will be paid in cash on presentation.
WINSLOW, LANIER & CO., No. 27 Pine st.

CINCINNATI 7 3/10 PER CENT
MUNICIPAL BONDS, DUE 1906. A LIMITED AMOUNT FOR SALE BY
KUHN, LOEB & CO., NO. 31 NASSAU ST.

WANTED,
North Carolina Bonds issued to North Carolina Railroad Company.
South Carolina Consols,
Louisiana Consols,
New-Orleans and Jackson first mortgage bonds,
Mississippi Central first and second mortgage bonds,
Greenville and Columbia guaranteed bonds,
Arkansas Levee bonds,
Mobile and Ohio sterling bonds,
Mobile and Ohio interest bonds,
by ARENTS & YOUNG,
No. 9 New st.

OFFICE METROPOLITAN INSURANCE COMPANY, No. 108 BROADWAY, NEW YORK Jan. 25, 1877.

THE UNDERSIGNED HAS MADE AN arrangement with the Continental Insurance Company, No. 102 Broadway, assets over $3,000,000, whereby that company will substitute its policies in place of those insured by the Metropolitan Insurance Company, to take effect in each case upon the surrender of the policies of the latter company.

Policy-holders are invited to send in their policies for such substitution at once.
CHARLES B. APPLEBY,
Receiver.

UNITED STATES EXPRESS COMPANY, TREASURER'S OFFICE, No. 32 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK, Jan. 27, 1877.

THE TRANSFER-BOOKS OF THIS COM- pany will be closed Feb. 8, at 2 P. M., and reopened Feb. 16.
THEO. F. WOOD, Treasurer.

CANNELTON COAL COMPANY OF WEST VIRGINIA.—The annual meeting of the Cannelton Coal Company will be held at the office of William Remsen, No. 5 Wall st., on TUESDAY, Feb. 6, 1877, at 2 o'clock P. M.
HENRY REMSEN, Secretary.

FINANCIAL.

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF THE SECOND NATIONAL BANK at New-York, in the State of New-York, at the close of business on the 20th day of January, 1877:

RESOURCES:

Loans and discounts	$1,422,151 97
Overdrafts	290 49
United States bonds to secure circulation	300,000 00
United States bonds to secure deposits	50,000 00
Other stocks, bonds, and mortgages	21,760 00
Due from other national banks	59,472 66
Current expenses and taxes paid	128 16
Premiums paid	38,500 00
Checks and other cash items, including stamps	21,844 48
Exchanges for Clearing-house	67,316 74
Bills of other banks	63,650 00
Fractional currency, (including nickels)	160 00
Specie—silver coin.....$ 3,000
Legal-tender notes.....412,000
gold treasury certificates.....415,000	417,000 00
Legal-tender notes	70,758 00
United States certificates of deposit for legal-tender notes	5,000 00
Redemption fund with United States Treasurer, 5 per cent. on circulation	7,300 00
Total	$2,546,228 50

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in	$300,000 00
Surplus fund	60,000 00
Undivided profits	9,439 09
Circulating notes outstanding	124,400 00
Individual deposits subject to check	1,954,518 22
Demand certificates of deposit	10,382 58
Certified checks	33,539 60
Cashier's checks outstanding	9,768 01
United States deposits	42,484 28
Due to other national banks	1,696 72
Total	$2,546,228 50

State of New-York, County of New-York, ss.—I, O. D. ROSEBRS, Cashier of the Second National Bank of the City of New-York, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my judgment and belief.
O. D. ROBERTS, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me, this 27th day of January, 1877.
JESSE WEST, Jr.,
Notary Public, City and County New-York.

Correct—Attest: AMOS H. TROWBRIDGE, } Directors.
I. N. PHELPS,
JAMES A. TROWBRIDGE,

BROWN BROTHERS & CO.,
NO. 59 WALL ST.
ISSUE COMMERCIAL and TRAVELERS' CREDITS AVAILABLE in all PARTS of the WORLD.

WANTED—$7,500, AMPLY SECURED, FOR THREE years; 12 per cent., payable monthly in the interim, satisfactory business. Address SECURITY, Box No. 111 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, 1,257 BROADWAY.

DIVIDENDS.

DIVIDEND.
OFFICE OF THE
Brewers' and Maltsters' Insurance Co.
No. 139 Broadway, New-York, Jan. 24, 1877.

The Board of Directors have this day declared a semi-annual dividend of

FIVE (5) PER CENT.,

payable Feb. 1. WM. B. ODDEN, Secretary.

THE LAKE SHORE AND MICHIGAN SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY, TREASURER'S OFFICE, NEW-YORK, Dec. 29, 1876.

THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF THIS Company have this day declared a dividend of one and a quarter (1¼) per cent. upon the capital stock thereof, out of the earnings for the six months which will end with the present month, payable on the 1st day of February next at the office of Messrs. CHASE & ATKINS, NO. 18 BROAD ST., NEW-YORK.

The transfer books will be closed at 3 o'clock P. M. on SATURDAY the 6th day of January next, and will reopen on the morning of FRIDAY the 2d day of February next.
R. D. WORCESTER, Treasurer.

OFFICE OF THE NEW-YORK, PR

LOCAL MISCELLANY.

"DIAMOND CUT DIAMOND."

MR. C. V. HAND'S STORY OF THE ALLEGED DIAMOND ROBBERY—HOW HE OBTAINED POSSESSION OF THE JEWELRY—HE SELLS IT TO A WIDOW FOR 25 CENTS—HIS PARTNERSHIP AGREEMENT WITH F. C. M'CARTHY—A CURIOUS STATE OF AFFAIRS.

William F. C. McCarthy, the young man charged with obtaining $10,000 worth of diamond, sapphire, and pearl jewelry from Charles V. Hand, the mustang driver, on Saturday last, by falsely representing that he would obtain a loan upon it, was arraigned for examination yesterday afternoon, at the Tombs Police Court, before Justice Kilbreth. The complainant, Hand, who was to be examined on his complaint by ex-Judge George M. Curtis, was represented by Mr. John O. Mott, as counsel. Dr. Henry T. Helmbold sat by the defendant, and said that he had known him in England and France, and that he had an excellent reputation so far as he knew. Following is the substance of Hand's testimony, in response to questions by Judge Curtis:

I reside at No. 330 West Thirtieth street, and my head-quarters are in the office of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, No. 315 Broadway, where I use the desk of Mr. Bates, the New-York Passenger Agent of the company; my regular business is that of theatrical manager and show business generally, but since last October I have been doing a little brokerage business and selling diamonds on commission; I have dealt in California mustangs; I first saw McCarthy about two months ago, at the Baltimore and Ohio office, where I was introduced to him by Mr. Bates, whom I have known for four years, and in whom I have every confidence; I saw McCarthy in the office several times afterward, but did not speak to him about any mutual business transaction until about two weeks ago; I had advertised for a loan of $20,000 for an exhibition speculation; it was to be in the nature of a series of grand mustang races; I expected to bring the mustangs from California, and I wanted to get the necessary means; McCarthy spoke to me about the advertisement, and asked me what collateral I could give, and when I told him diamonds he said he thought he could get me a loan on them; the next morning he came to the office, and shortly afterward introduced me to a gentleman whom he said was a Mr. Halstead, a son or nephew of Chancellor Halstead, of New-Jersey, and that he or a friend of his could get me the loan; Halstead said nothing about getting the loan, and he and McCarthy went away; the next day I saw the man represented to be Halstead, and McCarthy in the office, and showed them some diamond jewelry, but no arrangement was made about a loan; I never saw Halstead again, and did not see McCarthy again until last Thursday, when he told me that the arrangement with Halstead had fallen through, but that he had another party, and I agreed to meet him at the office next day, and we were to go and see this person; I met McCarthy at the office on Friday, and we went to an office on Broadway, near the Astor House, and, on getting there, McCarthy told me that the gentleman he expected to see had gone to the New-York Hotel to meet him there; I went with McCarthy to the New-York Hotel, and we saw a Mr. Whitney there, who was introduced to me by McCarthy as Elwood Thompson; we all got into a coupé and were driven to the Metropolitan Hotel; McCarthy and I got out, and Thompson went away; McCarthy and I had a drink in the barroom, and then went to the St. Nicholas, where McCarthy wrote a paper giving him the power from me to negotiate for a loan on the diamonds; he said he wanted this paper to show that he had power to get the loan, but it was understood that I was to be present when the loan was made; the paper was to the effect that the diamonds were mine, and that McCarthy was to effect a loan on them; at the time I signed the paper it did not empower him to raise a loan on a copartnership basis between him and myself; I did not read the paper; he read it to me; the writing was very unsettled; he had no money at this time, and my original stock of mustangs had fallen away; I had heard that McCarthy had about 50,000 acres of land in Texas; I agreed that if we raised the money we should go into the mustang business, and he was to have a one-third share; I also signed articles of copartnership with McCarthy; I don't know whether McCarthy drew them up, nor where they were drawn up; the articles of copartnership were large, giving us power to do almost any kind of business; the paper signed in the St. Nicholas Hotel was verified before a notary public, who asked me whether I signed it of my own free will; the copartnership articles were signed in the Baltimore and Ohio office and were witnessed by Mr. Bates, Mr. G. L. Huntington, and a Mr. Brooks; when I signed the paper I thought I was going into an honest transaction with an honest man; it was necessary to furnish capital, and I was to furnish the collateral on which the capital was to be raised; Mrs. Whitney, the owner of the diamonds, resides in Thirty-seventh street; she is a widow; I have known her for three or four years; I do not think she is very wealthy; she has a fine house, but I did not give it to her; I have a wife; I saw the diamonds before Mrs. Whitney gave them to me; I sold them to her a day or two before this transaction; I got a portion of them from a Mrs. Lynch, who has a store under the New-York Hotel, and the rest from Mrs. Lynch's son George; I made a bona fide sale of the diamonds to Mrs. Whitney for a nominal sum; the diamonds were worth from $10,000 to $12,000; I decline to say how much I sold them for; I delivered them to her a few times I made the sale; I gave her no regular bill of sale, simply a memorandum.

Judge Curtis—How much did Mrs. Whitney give you for those diamonds?

Witness—Am I obliged to answer this question?

Judge Kilbreth—Yes; I think it is about time we knew.

Witness—Twenty-five cents. [Laughter.]

Witness resumed: I gave her a list of the jewelry, and she gave me the money—a silver quarter of a dollar; no witness was present at this transaction; I did not tell Mrs. Lynch that I wanted to beat a sucker"; I never was a resident of Texas; McCarthy wanted an affidavit from some one, so that he could tell the person he wanted to negotiate with for the loan that the diamonds came from a person who owned them, and Mrs. Whitney made such an affidavit; Mrs. Lynch got no money or note from me for the diamonds; but I was to pay her $500 at some time. Witness then repeated the story already published about how he lost the diamonds.

Judge Curtis said that it was quite clear to his mind that this was a case of "diamond cut diamond," and that the complainant, instead of the defendant, was the guilty man. The complainant had tried, through the defendant, to raise money on diamonds which it was not clear were owned by anybody in particular, and which, when lost, were said by the complainant in his affidavit, to belong to a person who did not own them. It was a singular case, and, when the facts were disclosed, it would not be to the advantage of the complainant. Sufficient had been shown to warrant the discharge of McCarthy on light bail, and he asked that this should be done.

McCarthy appealed to the court, saying he was suffering from inflammatory rheumatism, and did not want to stay in the Tombs any longer, but Justice Kilbreth said he would go on with the case this morning at 10 o'clock, and the question of bail was waived.

DEATH OF AN OLD POLICE SERGEANT.

Police Sergt. James M. Flandreau, of the Thirty-second Precinct, died at an early hour yesterday morning at his residence, No. 100 West One Hundred and Fiftieth street, after a long illness. He was 50 years of age, and had been connected with the Police for upward of 20 years. He was a Lieutenant of Police under Capt. [now Inspector] Speight, in the Twenty-first Ward, in 1854. When the late Sidney H. Stuart was elected City Judge, Flandreau was elected a Police Justice to serve the balance of Stuart's term, and presided at the Jefferson Market Police Court during 1857 and 1858. In 1860 he was reappointed a policeman, and detailed at the East Twenty-third Street Ferry. He was subsequently promoted to be Sergeant, and was transferred to Yonkers, which at the time was included in the Metropolitan Police District. He was acting Captain there for several years. When Westchester County was exempted from the provisions of the Metropolitan act, Sergt. Flandreau returned to the Thirty-second Precinct, and remained there to the time of his death.

THE THIRD DISTRICT COURT-HOUSE.

The Aldermanic Committee on the Third District Court-house yesterday reanmed their investigation of the charges made by Mr. Cushing against the architects of the building. Mr. Wheeler H. Peckham appeared for the defense. Mr. P. K. Horgan testified that Mr. Cushing paid Mr. Oswell $10 for a bill of quantities or materials for certain work to be done on the building. Mr. Carl Pfeiffer, an architect, deposed that it was customary in England for successful contractors to pay a commission of three-quarters of 1 per cent. on the amount of their contracts for a bill of quantities; there was a good deal of labor involved in making out such a bill. The amount of materials necessary, according to the plans for a building, had to be carefully computed, and the custom of charging a commission was being introduced into this country. The witness then referred to several instances in which such commissions were paid; and added that if bills of quantities were prepared by persons employed by architects of a building during their own time, he would not if he were one of the architects object to their receiving payment for their labor. Mr. Arthur Oswell, who received $10 for a bill of quantities, was then recalled, and deposed that it was optional with contractors to take such bills; it took him three weeks to make them out. Mr. C. S. Maurice, a member of the firm who had the iron contract for the building, testified that he approved a bill of quantities from Mr. Radford, who had prepared it, and paid him 1 per cent. commission on the amount. Commissioner Porter, the President of the board, who had charge of the erection of the building, deposed that he believed the architects were good men, and that the charges made against them were without foundation. This closed the proceedings, so far as hearing testimony is concerned. The committee will probably make their report to the Board of Aldermen next Thursday.

THE BOARD OF APPORTIONMENT.

OPPOSITION TO THE REDUCTION OF SCHOOL TEACHERS' SALARIES—APPROPRIATIONS FROM THE UNEXPENDED BALANCES—DONATIONS FROM THE EXCISE FUND.

The Board of Apportionment held a comparatively long session yesterday in the Mayor's office. President Wood and other members of the Board of Education were present for the purpose of calling attention to the alleged insufficient appropriations made to his department for the present year, and to ask for a transfer of some of the old school fund balances to make up for the deficiency. After some routine business had been transacted, Mr. Wood, in referring to the subject, said he desired to make some remarks in regard to the salaries of the teachers for 1877. The Board of Apportionment, he continued, had cut down the estimate for salaries to too low a figure. They were obliged to provide accommodation for all children who wished to attend the public schools, and they had the power, under the Compulsory Education law, to have children arrested who did not attend school. They were therefore placed in a delicate position. The schools were too crowded, and the bad ventilation of some of the buildings had been the subject of newspaper criticism. But the board were not in a position to remedy these evils under the estimates for the present year, and they would be compelled to give up purchasing sites on which to erect new buildings. He thought it was bad policy to reduce the salaries of teachers. They had studied hard for years to enable them to obtain their positions, and the average salaries paid to them was only $843 a year. That amount included the day, the evening, and the normal schools. The sum of $500 was the lowest salary paid. Mr. Wood then referred to the remuneration of male and female principals, who had reached their places after many years of labor. The former might reach $3,000, and the latter $2,000. If a man obtained the position of a principal he was probably incapacitated for embarking in any other business. Mr. Wood then referred to the work done by the teachers, and expressed the hope that if reductions were to be made they would not consist in cutting down the salaries of the teachers. If the board so desired, they could close some of the schools, and by that means reduce the expenses.

School Commissioner Dowd said he coincided with Mr. Wood in his views.

Commissioner Beardsley, of the Board of Education, said that the unexpended balances of the appropriations made for the schools in 1874, 1875, and 1876, amounted to about $141,000, and that amount might be transferred to the sum set apart for this year. If they had a portion of that money they could carry on the work of their department efficiently. The estimates of the Board of Education for 1877 had been carefully made up in regard to salaries; the estimate for supplies had also been prepared with a view to economy. Last year the sum of $100,000 had been transferred to their building account for the purpose of rebuilding a schoolhouse that had been destroyed by fire, and a transfer of money could now be made to enable their Board to carry on their work in an efficient manner. Controller Kelly said he was in doubt as to the power of the Board of Apportionment to make a transfer of the balances referred to, unless the amounts set apart for specific objects had been exhausted.

Mayor Ely inquired if the Corporation Counsel had given any opinion as to the power to make the transfers.

President Wood replied that the Corporation Counsel had not yet given his opinion on the subject. He then remarked that a reduction of the salaries of teachers would be very unjustifiable, and that some of them—particularly those of the Primary Departments—did not receive sufficient compensation.

After some further remarks the matter was laid over.

The following appropriations were made out of the unexpended balances of appropriations to charities:

Institution for the Deaf and Dumb, $2,393 83; Institution for Improved Instruction of Deaf Mutes, $200 26; New-York Juvenile Asylum, $8,818 46; New-York State Homeopathic Asylum for Insane, $61 77; New-York Catholic Protectory, $6,736 81; Nursery and Child's Hospital, $7,130 95; Union Home and School, $4,537 24; Children's Fold, $413 43.

The Board made the following donations from the Excise Fund:

Twelfth Ward West-side Relief Society, $1,000; Dorp-verein Hebrew Benevolent Society, $1,000; Training School for Nurses, $1,000; Fourth Ward Society for the relief of poor children, $980; Linda Gilbert Prisoners' Aid Fund, $500; Foundling Asylum, $17,708 72.

Resolutions were adopted appropriating $8,000 to repair McComos' Dam Bridge, and $14,000 for the improvement of the annexed district; the latter amount being from the Maintenance Fund of the Park Department.

The Controller was authorized to issue revenue bonds to the amount of $6,208 74 to pay old claims against the Board of Education, for work done in 1869 and other years.

THE WOMAN'S HOSPITAL.

The Twenty-third annual report of the Woman's Hospital of New-York, which has just been published, contains some interesting statistics of the work accomplished during the past year. The building fund, which on the previous year had been in so low a condition as to render it impracticable to complete the work on the Baldwin pavilion, having been increased to nearly $70,000 by the generous donations from Mr. J. J. Aster, Mr. William B. Aster, and others, the Board of Governors were enabled to resume and complete the work. It is now in operation, and unincumbered with debt.

The board earnestly ask that the generously disposed public will endow beds and wards in the pavilion, in order that the humble patients can obtain the same skilled treatment as wealthier sufferers. The report of the Lady Supervisors, which follows that of the Board of Governors, states that three free beds were endowed during the year by Mrs. Ellen Gifford, of New-Haven, Mrs. John Taylor Johnston, and one in memory of Mrs. Cornelia Ray by her husband, daughter, and grandchildren. By the opening of the new pavilion, the report further states the hospital has been enabled to offer increased accommodations for the treatment of wealthier patients who find it difficult to obtain proper treatment and nursing in hotels. The Medical Board reports that since the presentation of its last report, 289 patients have been admitted to the hospital; 162 operations have been performed, 15 deaths have occurred, and 237 patients have been discharged, leaving 51 still in the ward on Oct. 1, last. In the out-door service 3,500 consultations have been held by the corps of assistant surgeons, and skilled treatment furnished to a very large circle of poor patients. The report of the Treasurer of the Board of Governors shows the expenses of the hospital during the year ending November last to have been $118,744 05, and the receipts during the same period from donations, interest on investments, and other sources, $127,901 20, leaving a balance of $9,157 15. The report of the Treasurer of the Board of Supervisors for the 11 months ending October last gives the expenditures for salaries, provisions, repairs, &c., as $24,440 80, and the receipts during the same period as $24,506 76, leaving, with the balance of $603 55 of the previous 11 months, a balance on hand of $669 51. During the year the donations of private individuals amounted to $67,357 33, the subscriptions of the "Woman's Century"—a society of ladies organized for the purpose of preventing an accumulation of debt on the hospital—amounting to $1,855.

THE WESLEYAN UNIVERSITY CLUB.

The annual reunion of the New-York Club of the Wesleyan University of Middletown, Conn., was held last evening at the residence of Mr. A. V. Stout, No. 260 Madison avenue, and proved a very gratifying success. Nearly every class from that of 1834 to the present year was represented by alumni, among those present being Mr. George Kellogg, father of Miss Clara Louise Kellogg; Dr. Curry; Judge Reynolds, of Brooklyn; Orange Judd, Gen. Clinton B. Fisk, Prof. Harvey B. Lane, Col. Thorpe, Dr. Hunt, of the Drew Theological University, and George Lansing Taylor. In the early part of the evening a fine collation was served to the guests, at the conclusion of which a speech of welcome was made by the host. The Wesleyan University song was next sung by the company, and at its conclusion the annual election was held, resulting in the choice of the following officers for the ensuing year: President, Dr. Albert S. Hunt; Vice President, D. G. Harriman; Secretary, Cicero M. Hicks; Committee of Arrangements, Messrs. H. C. Ingraham, S. H. Olin, and A. J. Palmer. Rev. Dr. Warren, in retiring from the position of President, made a brief speech, in which he suggested the propriety of social gatherings three or four times a year. Professors of the university and other gentlemen who would address the alumni on education and other interesting themes, being invited to attend. The plan, he said, had been adopted by many of the leading colleges of the country, and he felt sure, judging from the beneficial results that had followed, that its adoption by Wesleyan would tend to bring the alumni into closer sympathy with the progress and welfare of the institution. At the conclusion of the address the plan was adopted by a unanimous vote, and a committee of five was appointed to make arrangements for carrying it into practical operation. Mr. S. H. Olin, in assuming the position of toast-master of the evening, made a witty speech, and concluded by introducing Dr. Cyrus D. Foss, the President of the university, who responded briefly to the toast, "Our Alma Mater." Other toasts followed, and after singing several stirring college songs, the company finally dispersed for the evening.

THE BROOKLYN ALDERMEN.

A NEW PHASE OF THE DEAD-LOCK—MR. DONOVAN VOTES FOR THE REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE FOR PRESIDENT, BUT A REPUBLICAN MEMBER BOLTS—THE SITUATION NOT MATERIALLY CHANGED.

The Brooklyn Board of Aldermen, after transacting some routine business, made their weekly attempt to break the dead-lock, which has existed since the first meeting of the board this year, by effecting a permanent organization. The crowd in attendance was greater than at any of the previous meetings, owing to the prevalence of a rumor that Alderman Donovan would cease voting for himself and decide the contest by voting with the Republicans. When the board had been in session for an hour, a recess of 25 minutes was taken, after which, on motion of Alderman Acker, Republican, a viva voce vote for permanent President was taken. On the first call Alderman Donovan, Democrat, did not vote. Rising to explain his vote, on the call for absentees, Mr. Donovan said that he had laid his claims for consideration before his party in an honest, straightforward manner. Although he was the Alderman longest in the board his claims were not considered. The speaker concluded by saying that he would vote for the Republican candidate, William H. Ray. The announcement was received with applause in the lobby. If all the Republican members of the board had remained firm in support of their party candidate, Mr. Ray's election would have been assured by Alderman Donovan's vote. The further calling of the roll, however, supplied in a few seconds a new surprise that will furnish food for political gossip during the coming week. Alderman Herman Cottrell, Republican, from the Seventeenth Ward, when his name was called, instead of voting for Mr. Ray, named as his candidate Francis B. Flaherty, thus preventing the Republican candidate from receiving the necessary majority. Fearing that Cottrell had sold out to the Democrats, and that his vote for Fisher, who is an earnest supporter of Ray, was only intended to create a break which would result in Black's (Democrat) election, Donovan at once changed his vote for Ray, and put himself in position by voting for himself. The roll was called six times in succession, but a majority of the Aldermen, having apparently made up their minds that it would not be best to organize the board without further consultation, "played for safety" by voting for five or six different candidates. After the sixth vote a resolution was offered authorizing the Chairman pro tem. to appoint a sufficient number of committees temporarily, to enable the board to transact business until a permanent organization could be effected. Alderman Shannon said he hoped the motion would not prevail, as he intended to organize the board next week. He said he was the only Independent Democrat in the board, and there were a great many men expecting places from him which he could not give them while Alderman Donovan prevented the organization of the board. The speaker said he would give Alderman Donovan another chance, and if he did not, then say what it was that he wanted, he [Mr. Shannon] would organize the board at the next meeting. Shannon complained that Donovan would not tell anybody what he wanted. He was willing to see Donovan elected President of the board if the Alderman from the Twelfth Ward could secure a sufficient number of votes. As the board stands 12 Republicans to 13 Democrats, including Shannon and Donovan, Alderman Shannon can only organize the board next week by voting for the Republican candidate. The motion to adjourn informally consequently was declared out of order and a vote taken for President, which resulted the same as the others. The Board then adjourned until Monday next. After the adjournment an informal meeting of the Aldermen was called for the purpose of taking some steps toward the great reform in the chamber. Several members had become sick from the foul air. The matter was discussed for some time, but no definite action was taken.

NAVY-YARD NOTES.

The steam sloops Brooklyn, Alaska, and several others are laid up in ordinary.

The frigate Franklin is lying in Winter quarters, and will proceed in early Spring to Norfolk, where she will relieve the sloop-of-war Worcester as receiving ship, it being the intention of the Navy Department to keep sea-going vessels in commission as receiving ships.

A dock trial of the machinery of the Trenton is now being conducted at the Brooklyn Navy-yard, and Capt. John Lee Davis has already reported to her commander. The officers are ordered to report for duty on the 6th of February, and it is hoped by the Secretary of the Navy to have the vessel in complete readiness to join the European Squadron by the 1st of March.

The Swatara, attached to the North Atlantic Squadron, has been at the Navy-yard since August last, receiving thorough repairs. Her continuous and arduous duties in the Transit of Venus Expedition rendered it necessary to give her a complete overhauling. She is now ready for sea, and will proceed South in about a month. The training ship Minnesota is also lying at the Navy-yard in Winter quarters. Capt. Johnson, who commands her, and his landing officers continue daily instruction of the apprentice boys on board of her. The torpedo boats Alarm and Intrepid are also in commission, and lying in Winter quarters, with a reduced crew on each barely sufficient to keep them in good order.

THE JURISDICTION OF A COURT.

Judge Van Hoesen, in the Special Term of the Court of Common Pleas, yesterday rendered a decision in the case of Lewis B. Hunt against Alexander H. Reavey. The latter is an attorney and counselor at law, and was charged by Hunt with collecting $90 for him and refusing to pay over the money. Hunt asked for an order requiring Reavey to pay over the amount. Judge Van Hoesen says: "Although the papers are entitled as if an action were pending in this Court between Lewis B. Hunt as plaintiff and Alexander H. Reavey as defendant, I find in the affidavits filed by Mr. Hunt no allegation that the moneys which Reavy is said wrongfully to withhold were collected by him as an attorney in any action brought, or prosecution in the Court of Common Pleas. For that reason I cannot sign the order which is presented. The Court of Common Pleas will compel attorneys to do their duty in actions in this court, but it will not undertake to regulate the transactions of attorneys in actions pending in other tribunals. If the moneys in question were collected by Mr. Reavey, not in an action, but in the course of business confided to him on account of his being an attorney, Mr. Hunt should apply to the Supreme Court for redress. Motion denied, without costs and without prejudice to a renewal before the proper tribunal."

THE HASTIE-TRACY BOOK SALE.

There was a good attendance at the Hastie-Tracy Library sale at Clinton Hall yesterday, when the remaining portion of the works treating of art and the sciences were disposed of, and the "miscellaneous" division entered upon. In the latter were a few good lots of Americana, some valuable books on angling, and a great quantity of literature of a peculiarly savory or unsavory nature. Some good illustrations of "Rob Roy's Expedition" brought fair prices. The famous "Baskerville" edition, (1764) which Dodsley translated, brought $4 62, another copy $3, and the edition published at London, in 1818, which Tenniel illustrated, and Rev. T. James translated, $7. Among the Americana a few books brought fair prices, but in this department of literature the library was, comparatively speaking, singularly deficient. In the evening the most valuable lot of books sold comprised many volumes of Defoe's works. The various editions of "Robinson Crusoe" sold remarkably well, and the same may be said of the Dictionaries. To-day at 1 o'clock the most singular part of this great library, classified as "Facetiæ," will commence.

ST. JOHN'S GUILD.

The following contributions were received by St. John's Guild yesterday, and will furnish only one-third of one day's supply to the poor:

James Cummings	$50	Joseph L. Morris	$25
J. Goldmark	25	E. Chamberlain	25
W. T. S.	1	Francis Baker	25
Cash	5	M. G. Hepworth	5
Anonymous	20	Passengers of steamship Abyssinia through J. W. Oughtelree and W. Cowell	50
Mrs. S. K.	10
B. R. Smith & Co.	2
Wm. Turnbull & Co.	5
F. M.
B. T.
Total			$321

Yesterday the Guild was compelled to reduce the supplies to one-half their former quantity, and unless contributions amounting to $1,000 are received, this condition of affairs must continue.

COUNTERFEIT TEN-CENT PIECES.

Last Saturday evening Mr. Earnst Wilken, a clerk for the firm of Conkling & Co., No. 763 Broadway, noticed a man and a boy acting in a rather suspicious manner on Third avenue, near Sixty-fifth street. The man would send the boy into a store and on his return the lad would give him whatever he had purchased, together with the change. Among other places visited was the cigar store of D. Rohmer, No. 1,112 Third avenue. When the boy emerged from this place Mr. Wilken went in and asked the proprietor if he had any counterfeit money. He was shown three 10 cent pieces, which Mr. Rohmer said a boy had given him a few moments before. Wilken went out, called an officer, and had both the man and boy arrested. On searching the man, who gave his name as John Call and his residence as Mott Haven, a quantity of cigars and clay pipes, $8 in good money, and several counterfeit ten-cent pieces were found on his person. The boy gave his name as Walter Welsh. Both were taken before Commissioner Shields yesterday, and held to await the action of the Grand Jury.

THE FORREST HOUSE;

OR,

EVERARD'S REPENTANCE.

BY MRS. MARY J. HOLMES.

CHAPTER I.

TWO LETTERS.

The first, a small half-sheet, inclosed in a large, thick envelope, and addressed in a childish, unformed hand to Mr. James Everard Forrest, Junior, Ellicottville, Berkshire County, Massachusetts, with a request in the lower left-hand corner for the Postmaster to forward immediately; the second, a dainty little perfumed missive, with a fanciful monogram, directed in a plain, round hand to J. Everard Forrest, Esq., Ellicottville, Mass., with the words "In haste" written in the corner. Both letters were in a hurry, and both found their way together to their owner, a brown-haired, brown-eyed, brown-faced young man, who sat under the shadow of the big maple-tree on the Common in Ellicottville, lazily puffing his cigar and fanning himself with his Panama hat, for the thermometer was ninety in the shade, and the hour 10 A. M. of a sultry July day. At first it was almost too much exertion even to break the seals, and for a moment J. Everard Forrest, Jr., toyed with the smaller envelope of the two, the one whose delicate perfumery he knew so well, and which quickened his pulse a little and brought a deeper glow to his cheek.

"I may as well see what Josey wants of me in haste," he said at last, and breaking the seal, he read:

HOLBURTON, July 15.

MY DEAR NED: You must not wait till Wednesday, but come to-morrow on the 4 o'clock train. I want you particularly. Everything has gone at sixes and sevens, for just at the very last Mrs. Murdock, who has been dying for 20 years or more, must really die, and, of course, the Murdock boys can't act, so you must take the character of the bridegroom in the play where I am bride. You will have very little to say. You can learn it all in 15 minutes, but you must come to-morrow so as to rehearse with us once at least. Now, don't you dare fail. I shall meet you at the station.

Yours lovingly, JOSEPHINE FLEMING.

P. S.—Do you remember I wrote you in my last of a stranger, a Dr. Matthewson, who has been in town a few days stopping at the hotel? He has consented to be the priest on condition that you are the bridegroom. I do not know why he insists upon that point, but he does; so do not fail me.

Again, with love, JOE.

"And so this is my lady's great haste," the young man said, as he finished reading the letter. "She wants me for her bridegroom. I rather think I know that before, and I don't know but I'm willing, so I guess I'll have to go; and now for Rosie's interesting document, which must be read at once immediately.' I only wish it may prove to have money in it from the governor, for I am getting rather low."

So saying he took the other letter and studied it carefully, while a smile broke over his face as he continued:

"Upon my word, Rosie did not mean this to go astray, and has written everything out in full, even to Massachusetts and Junior. Good for her. Wonder why she didn't take a larger envelope; but then, she needed all this space, and has filled it, too; and how crooked; why, that Junior stands at an angle of several degrees above the M. Rosie ought to do better. She must be nearly 13; but then she's a nice little girl, and I'll see what she says."

What she said was as follows:

FORREST HOUSE, July 14.

Mr. Everard Forrest:

DEAR SIR: Nobody knows I am writing this to you, but your mother has been worse for a few days, and keeps talking about you even in her sleep. She did not say send for you, but I thought if you knew how bad she was you would, perhaps, come home for a part of your vacation. It will do her so much good to see you. She is very well, and your father, too. So, no more at present.

Yours respectfully,

ROSAMOND HASTINGS.

P. S.—Miss Beatrice Belknap has come home from New-York, and had the typhoid fever, and lost every speck of her beautiful hair. You don't know how funny she looks. She offered me $50 for mine to make her a wig, because it is wavy naturally, and is just her color; but I would not sell it for the world; would you? Inclosed find $10 of my very own money, which I send you to come home with, thinking you might need it. Do not fail to come, will you?

ROSAMOND.

Everard read this letter twice, and smoothed out the crisp ten dollar bill, which was carefully wrapped in a separate bit of paper. It was not the first time he had received money in his sore need from the girl, for in a blank-book which he always carried in his pocket were several entries, as follows: "Jan. 2, from Rosamond Hastings, $5; March 4, $2; June 8, $1." Then on and on until the whole amount was more than $20, but never before had she sent him so large a sum as now, and there was a moisture in his eyes and his breath came heavily as he put it away in his purse, and said:

"There never was so unselfish a creature as Rosie Hastings. She is always thinking of somebody else. And I, what am I, a contemptible dog to take her money as I do; but then, I honestly intend to pay her back tenfold when I have something of my own."

Thus reassuring himself, he put his purse in his pocket, and glancing again at Rosie's letter his eye fell upon Miss Belknap's name, and he laughed aloud as he said:

"Poor bald Bee Belknap. She must look comical. I can image how it hurts her pride. Buy Rosie's hair, indeed! I should think not, when her hair is her only beauty, if I except her eyes, which at present are too large for her thin face; but that will fill and round out in time, and Rosie may be a beauty yet, though not like Josey; no—never like Josey."

And that brought the young man back to Miss Fleming's letter and its imperative request. Could he comply with it now? Ought he not go at once to the sick mother, who was missing him so sadly, and who had made all the happiness he had ever known in life? Duty said yes, but the invitation drew him to Holburton and the fair Josephine, with whom he believed himself to be, and with whom he was, perhaps, as much in love as any young man of twenty well can be. Perhaps Rosie had been unduly alarmed; at all events, if his mother was so very sick she was wanting him badly, his father would write, of course, and on the whole he believed he should go to Holburton by the afternoon train, and then, perhaps, go home.

And so the die was cast, the young man little dreaming as he walked to the telegraph office and sent across the wires to Miss Josephine Fleming the three words, "will come," how that decision was to influence his whole future life, and involve him in a net-work of difficulties which it would take many years to overcome.

CHAPTER II.

DR. MATTHEWSON.

The train from Ellicottville was late that afternoon, in fact far behind time, to be late, but on this particular day it was more than usually behind time, and the one stage which Holburton boasted had waited more than half an hour at the little station of the out-of-the-way town which lies nestled among the Berkshire hills, just on the boundary line between the Empire State and Massachusetts. The day was hot, even for Midsummer, and the two fat, motherly matrons who sat in the depot had severely inveighed against the heat and wiped their glowing faces, while they watched and discussed the young lady who, on the platform outside, was walking up and down, seeming wholly unconscious of their espionage. But it was only seeming, for she knew perfectly well that she was the object of curiosity and criticism, and more than once she paused in her walk and turning squarely round faced the two old ladies, in order to give them a better view and let them see just how many tucks and ruffles and puffs there were in her new dress, worn that day for the first time, and made by sister Agnes with a patience and weariness which only the most patient of all old maid sisters could endure. And a very pretty picture Josephine Fleming made standing there in the sunshine, looking so artless and innocent, as if no thought of herself had ever entered her mind. She was a pink-and-white blonde, with masses of golden hair rippling back from her forehead, and those dreamy blue eyes of which poets sing, and which have in them a marvelous power to sway the sterner sex just by that pleading, confiding expression which moves a man so soon and makes him very tender toward the helpless creature appealing so innocently to him for his protection.

Josephine is not my heroine, though without her the story would be nothing, and so I will say to my reader just here that I do not like her. You will not like her, and the two old ladies did not like her, though they admitted that she was very beautiful and stylish in her blue muslin and white chip hat, with the long feather drooping low behind—too pretty by far and too much of the fine lady about her, they said, for a daughter of the widow Roxie Fleming, who lived in the low brown house on the common, and sewed for a living when she had no boarders from the city.

Then they talked of the expected entertainment at the Village Hall the following night, tableaux, charades, and a play, the proceeds of which were to go toward buying a fire-engine, which the people greatly needed. And Josephine had pushed and managed to tell that she was to figure in most everything, and they presumed she was now waiting for the train to come on the train.

And for once they were right in their conjecture. She was waiting for Everard Forrest, and when the tardy train came in forty-five minutes behind its time, he stepped upon the platform looking so fresh, and cool, and handsome in his white linen suit that the ladies almost forgave Josephine for the gushing manner with which she greeted him, and carried him off toward home. She was so glad to see him, and her eyes looked at him so softly and tenderly, and she had so much to tell him, and was so excited with it all, and the brown house overgrown with hop-vines was so cool and pleasant, and Agnes had such a tempting little supper laid out for him in the back piazza that Everard felt supremely happy and content, and once, when nobody was looking on, kissed the blue-eyed fairy flitting so joyously around him and shaking his nearly blind.

"I say, Josey," he said, when the tea things had been removed, and he was lounging in his usual lazy attitude upon the door-stone and smoking his cigar. "it's a heap nicer here than down in that hot, close hall. Let's not go to the rehearsal. I'd rather stay home."

"But you can't do it. You must go," Josephine replied. "You must rehearse and learn your part, though for to-night it doesn't matter. You can go through the marriage ceremony well enough, can't you?"

"O course I can, and can say, 'I, Everard, take thee, Josey, to be my lawful wife,' and, by Jove, I wouldn't care if it was genuine. Suppose we get a priest and make a genuine thing of it. I'm willing, if you are."

There was a very pretty blush on Josey's cheek as she replied, "What nonsense you are talking, and you not yet through college," but her manner was still more excited as she hurried him off to the hall, where the rehearsal was to take place.

Here an unforeseen difficulty presented itself. Dr. Matthewson was not forthcoming in his character as priest. He had gone out of town, and had not yet returned; so another took his place in the marriage-scene, where Everard was the bridegroom and Josephine the bride. The play was called "The Mock Marriage," where two young people, without the knowledge of all, were secretly tied for life. It would be very effective with the full glamour of lights, and dress, and people on the ensuing night; and Josephine, who seemed to be head and front of it all, declared herself satisfied with the rehearsal, and sanguine of success, especially as Dr. Matthewson appeared at the last moment, apologizing for his absence, and assuring her of his intention to be present the next evening.

He was a tall, powerfully-built man of thirty or thereabouts, and many would call him handsome, though to a close observer of the human face and its index to character there was a cruel, crafty look in his eyes, and in the smile which habitually played about his mouth. Still he was very gentlemanly and courteous in his manner, and fascinating in his conversation, for he had traveled much, and seen everything, and spoke both German and French as readily as his mother tongue. With Miss Fleming he seemed to be on the most intimate terms, though this intimacy only dated from the time when she pleaded with him so prettily and successfully to take the place of the priest in "The Mock Marriage," where John Murdock was to have officiated. At first the doctor had objected, saying gallantly that he preferred to be the bridegroom, and asking to find some individual else to be. "Mr. Forrest—Mr. Everard Forrest, from Rothsay, Southern Ohio," Josephine replied, with a conscious blush which told much to the experienced man of the world.

"Forrest! Everard Forrest!" the doctor repeated thoughtfully, and the smile about his mouth was more perceptible. "Seems to me I have heard that name before. Where did you say he lived, and where is he now?"

Josephine replied again that Mr. Forrest's home was in Rothsay, Ohio, at a grand old place called Forrest House; that he was a student at Amherst, and was spending his Summer vacation with a friend in Ellicottville, and—

"Yes, I understand, and comes frequently to Holburton to see the Lady Fleming," the doctor rejoined, adding after a moment's pause, "I'll be the priest, but suppose I had the power to marry you in earnest, what then?"

"Oh, you wouldn't. You must not. Everard is not yet through college, and it would be so very dreadful—and romantic, too," the girl said, as she looked searchingly into the dark eyes confronting hers so steadily, as if to read her inmost thoughts. When Everard came and was introduced to Dr. Matthewson after the rehearsal, there was a singular expression in the eyes which seemed to the young man so curiously like the doctor's manners were perfect, and never had Everard been treated with more deference and respect than by this handsome stranger, who called upon him at Mrs. Fleming's early in the morning, in the course of an hour established himself on the terms of intimacy with the young man that he learned more of his family history than Josephine herself knew after an acquaintance of more than a year. Everard never could explain to himself how he was led on naturally and easily, to tell of his home in Rothsay, the grand old place of which he would be heir, as he was the only child. He did not know how much his father was worth, he said, as his fortune was estimated at various sums, but probably half a million, though it didn't do him much good, for the governor was close, and insisted upon knowing how every penny was spent. Consequently Everard, who was undeniably fast and expensive in his habits, was, as he expressed it, always hard up, and if his mother, whom he seemed to idolize, did not occasionally send him something unknown to his father, he would be in desperate straits, for a fellow in college with the reputation of being rich must have money.

Here Everard thought of Rosamond and the sums she had sent him, but he could not speak of that to this stranger, who sat smiling so sweetly upon him, and leading him on step by step until at last Rosie's name did come from his lips, and was quickly caught up by Dr. Matthewson.

"Rosie!" he repeated, in his low, purring tone, for I can liken the doctor's voice to nothing better than the soft purring of a cat. "Rosie! Who is she? Have you a sister?"

"Oh, no. I told you I was an only child. Rosie is Rosamond Hastings, a little girl whose mother was my mother's most intimate friend. They were school-girls together in Boston, where mother was born, and pledged themselves to stand by each other should either ever come to grief, as Mrs. Hastings did."

"Married unhappily, perhaps?" the Doctor suggested, and Everard replied:

"Yes; married a man much older than herself who abused her so shamefully that she left him at last, and sought refuge with my mother. Fortunately, this Hastings died soon after, so she was freed from him; but she had another terror in the shape of his son, the child of a former marriage, who annoyed her dreadfully."

"How could he?" the doctor asked, and Everard replied:

"I hardly know how, only that he did. I believe, though, it was about some house or piece of land of which Mrs. Hastings held the deed for Rosie, and the boy chose to be unjust to her, but at least, and

The New-York Times.

VOL. XXVI.....NO. 7920. NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 31, 1877. PRICE FOUR CENTS

WASHINGTON.

THE ORGANIZATION OF THE ELECTORAL TRIBUNAL.

MESSRS. PAYNE, HUNTON, ABBOTT, GARFIELD, AND HOAR, CHOSEN TO REPRESENT THE HOUSE—MR. GARFIELD COMPLIMENTED BY RECEIVING THE SMALLEST NUMBER OF DEMOCRATIC VOTES—THE SENATE'S CHOICE—THE NAME OF THE FIFTH JUDGE NOT YET ANNOUNCED.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—At 1 o'clock today the House proceeded formally to choose five of their number to serve on the Electoral Commission created by the act passed last week. Mr. Lamar nominated Messrs. Payne, Hunton, Abbott, Garfield, and Hoar, and in order to save time, moved that as each member's name was called he should vote for the five candidates named. This was opposed by those Democrats who desired to cut Mr. Garfield, and who wanted to have a separate vote for each candidate. Mr. Lamar's motion was carried on a division, the vote standing 210 to 20. Mr. Abbott's name is the first on the roll, and when called he voted for all the candidates except himself. Until Mr. Blackburn's name was called all voted for the five candidates named, but that gentleman led the break which gave Garfield the distinction of receiving 24 Democratic votes less than were given for Mr. Hoar. The following named Democrats dropped Garfield, voting only for four candidates: Blackburn, of Kentucky; Cate, of Wisconsin; Cochrane, of Pennsylvania; Ross, of New-Jersey; Davis, of North Carolina: Ellis, of Louisiana, and Hurd, Poppleton, Rice, Southard, Vance and Walling, of Ohio. Buckner, of Missouri; Candler, of Arkansas, and Smith, of Georgia, substituted McCrary for Garfield. Cooke and Hartridge, of Georgia; Hereford, of West Virginia; Roberts, of Maryland, and Hopkins, of Pennsylvania, substituted Foster. Henkle, of Maryland, and John Reilly, of Pennsylvania, substituted Willard. Terry, of Virginia, dropped Garfield for Townsend, of New-York, and Townsend returned the compliment by dropping Payne and naming Terry. On the Republican side Hoge created laughter by voting for Mills, Singleton, and Blackburn, all of whom opposed the Electoral bill. Magoon dropped Payne for Lynde, and Wells, of Mississippi, named Wood for Hunton. Mr. Hoar received the highest vote, 264; Payne, Hunton, and Abbott each received 263; Garfield, 240; Foster, 5; McCrary, 3; Willard, 2, and Wood and Townsend of New-York, Terry, Lynde, Mills, Singleton, and Blackburn, each, 1. After the first 50 names had been called little interest was manifested in the election, which occupied one and a half hours. The galleries were crowded during the proceedings. The number of Democrats who declined to vote for Garfield or substituted some other name was six, greater than the number of Democrats who voted against the bill in the House, and the six who voted against him were among those who voted against the bill. The spirit of the opposition in the caucus was carried into the House by a set of men and in a manner that made it extremely ridiculous, and a high compliment to Mr. Garfield.

The Senate elected its members of the Electoral Committee at 3:30 o'clock without any incident whatever. Senators Edmunds, Frelinghuysen, Morton, Thurman, and Bayard were unanimously elected, and all by the same vote. No one could have perceived in the voting, or by action of any Senator, that there had been the least disturbance of the serenity of Senators in the caucuses yesterday that made the choice of those voted for to-day.

The four Justices of the Supreme Court named in the Electoral bill—Justices Clifford, Miller, Field, and Strong—met to-day, as required by law, to select a fifth Justice to complete the full number required upon the commission. Strange to say, it is not positively known whom they selected, but the almost unanimous understanding and belief is that the choice fell upon Justice Bradley. There are certain persons who ought to know what the Justices did, if there has been any revelation from inside the consultation room, but they all say they have no positive information; but they all believe that the fifth Justice is Mr. Bradley. The reason that the fact is not positively revealed is, that by an understanding or agreement of the committee the Justices were not to let their action be known till both houses had selected their members of the commission. This was a wise precaution to prevent the choice of a Justice from influencing the voting in either house. A determination of secrecy means something in the Supreme Court; therefore, when the fifth Justice was chosen, a written and sealed communication was prepared, conveying the information to each house, and they will be delivered and made public to-morrow. There are various rumors afloat, among others, one to the effect that the four Justices could not agree, and made no choice, and are to meet again to-morrow morning. The election of Justice Bradly is, however, the best authenticated, and no doubt the true report.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

Associate Justices Clifford, Strong, Miller, and Field, designated by the Electoral bill as the four members of the judicial branch of the commission, were in secret conference for two or three hours to-day, but adjourned without arriving at a determination of the question as to which one of their associates shall be selected by them to be the fifth member. It may be considered certain, however, that to-morrow morning, very soon after they reassemble, they will select Justice Bradley as the fifth member, and promptly communicate the fact to both houses of Congress. There is sufficient reason to believe he would have been selected today, had it been authoritatively ascertained, prior to the adjournment of the conference, that Justice Davis would positively decline the position if offered to him. It is conjectured that the embarrassment of the consultation to-day arose mainly, if not entirely, from the conflicting accounts as to the willingness of Justice Davis to serve upon the commission, which were not set at rest until after the conference had formally ended for the day. It is currently believed, although of course the statement cannot be made upon authority, that one or more ballots were cast to-day for Justice Davis under the belief, entertained by a portion of those present, that, although he had expressed a disinclination to serve upon the commission, he would nevertheless accept the position if chosen by his colleagues. As the law peremptorily required the Senate and the House to elect their representation of the tripartite commission during to-day's session, it has been generally supposed that the judicial branch had also to be completed to-day, but this is an incorrect impression, for the law on this point reads as follows:

"On the Tuesday next preceding the first Thursday in February, Anno Domini, 1877, or as soon thereafter as may be, the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States, now assigned to the first, third, eighth, and ninth circuits shall select in such manner as a majority of them shall deem fit another of the Associate Justices of said court, which five persons shall be members of said commission."

THE WORK OF THE TRIBUNAL.

THE PREPARATIONS FOR COUNTING THE VOTES COMPLETE—STATES THAT WILL BE CONTESTED—THE QUESTION OF GOING BEHIND THE RETURNS THE ALL IMPORTANT ONE TO BE DECIDED.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The two houses having formally elected their members of the Electoral Commission and provided for appointing tellers, and the four Justices having chosen a fifth, the entire commission is now formed and the preparations for beginning the counting of the votes on the day after to-morrow are complete, so far as preparations are required by law. The two Houses will meet together at 1 o'clock on Thursday, and the President of the Senate will immediately begin the opening of the certificates. The first State from which returns will be presented, under the law requiring the States to be taken alphabetically, is Alabama. It is probable that an objection will be made to the counting of the vote from that State on the ground of the existence of fraud, violence, and intimidation in the canvass sufficient to prevent a free and fair expression of the popular will. This objection, signed by a member of the House and a Senator, will compel an immediate separation of the two houses. Of course, the House will vote to overrule the objection, and what the Senate will decide is uncertain and unimportant so far as the result is concerned, because both houses under the law have to concur to sustain an objection to counting a a vote, and therefore Alabama will be counted for Tilden by the action of the House alone. Colorado is the fourth State on the list, but it is not now probable that any objection will be raised against its vote by the Democrats. because it is not known that any Senator would unite with a member of the House in objecting that Colorado is not a State. There are some members of the House willing to object, but it would be useless. The vote will then, on Thursday, be counted down through the list—Alabama, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Connecticut, and Delaware. The next State is Florida, and from this State there are two returns, and they will be sent at once to the commission, and the two houses will resume their usual course of business till the commission is ready to advise how Florida shall be counted. At this point there will undoubtedly be a delay till next week; at least a decision this week would be unexpected, and could only be reached by cutting short the hearing of counsel and the consideration of any evidence except such as the certificates show on their faces. The only returns which can come before the Commission are from the States of Florida, Louisiana, Oregon, and South Carolina, as these are the only States from which there are double returns in the hands of the President of the Senate. Alabama and Mississippi were expected to send returns of the Republican Electors, but it appears that none have been received. The next State to be referred after Florida is Louisiana.

The great question which the commission have first to decide, a question far greater and of vastly more importance than how Florida and Louisiana have cast their votes in the present election, is whether they will go behind the returns and enter upon an examination of the number of votes cast in the States for the Presidential Electors. This question should never have been submitted to any tribunal except the Supreme Court as a court. Indeed, it should never have been raised before any court. It suggests more peril to the Republic than any power ever claimed under the Constitution, save alone the claim of the right of a State to withdraw from the Union. If the commission should decide to count the votes in Florida and Louisiana, no election of an Elector could ever be pronounced conclusive till it had been counted by order of Congress. Elections of President hereafter would be practically and would soon drift actually under the control of Congress. The possibility of such a decision by the commission is not conceded by Republicans. In fact, there is reason to expect that the commission will be positive on this point and against any such power existing in the Constitution. In case of a determination to go behind the returns, which the Democracy will strive desperately to secure, then there can hardly be any choice of President before the 4th, for it is quite impossible for any tribunal to go anew into Louisiana, for instance, and make an investigation, and render a decision upon evidence which would be entitled to any weight, in less than 60 days. This great question, greater than all others, will be first met when Florida is presented to them, and when it is decided the decision will carry with it the choice of President, for if the commission follows the Constitution and the law, nothing is more certain than the election of Hayes.

THE UNITED STATES NAVY.

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION PRESENTED BY THE SECRETARY—THE MATERIAL OF THE NAVAL SERVICE—SEVERAL VESSELS THOROUGHLY REPAIRED—THE IRON-CLADS—39 SHIPS AND 422 GUNS IMMEDIATELY AVAILABLE FOR WAR.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The addenda to the report of the Secretary of the Navy, recently submitted to the President, is intended to show the actual condition of the material of the naval service at the present time. Referring to the fact that many of the vessels after years of constant repair finally drop out of the service from utter worthlessness, the Secretary attributes this cause to the fact that the Navy in 1869 consisted largely of ships hurriedly built of perishable material, and says its present state of efficiency reflects great credit upon the knowledge and ability of the officers of the Navy. The Niagara, one of the first-rate class of vessels, measuring 5,440 tons displacement, was furnished with steam power as an auxiliary. In 1870 repairs were begun upon her with a view to make her an efficient war vessel. It was ascertained that it would cost over $1,000,000, and that a new vessel could be built for less money, which would be in all respects superior to her when completed. The repairs were suspended, and she is now laid up in ordinary at Boston. The Susquehanna, now lying in ordinary at Brooklyn, was also put under repairs with a view to change her from a side-wheel to a screw ship. The repairs were abandoned for the same reasons as were those of the Niagara.

Surveys have been held on the following vessels—Delaware, Congress, and Lancaster—but the report shows that the estimated cost of repairs was above the cost of a new vessel, and the vessels will consequently be sold or broken up. Those which have been surveyed and found to be very rotten, unfit for repairs, and of no further use to the Government, are the steam-sloops Severn, Worcester, and Kansas, and the sailing-vessels New-Orleans, Vermont, Ohio, Independence, Potomac, Cyane, Saratoga, St. Louis, and Pawnee. The Connecticut, Java, and Pennsylvania are white-oak vessels, but were never launched. At present they are somewhat rotten, but could be made serviceable for a year's cruise in six months, although at great cost. The New-York is on the stocks at the Brooklyn Navy-yard. Her frame is of live oak, of good design, and in good preservation. The Iowa, a white oak vessel, and the Florida, built of live oak, have both been tested and found to be very fast. The former is quite rotten, and both vessels would have to be repaired before going to sea. The Franklin, Minnesota, Wabash, Pensacola, Hartford, Richmond, Alaska, Plymouth, Lackawanna, Monongahela, Ossipee, Kearsarge, Tuscarora, Wyoming, Ashuelot, Menocacy, Shawmut, Frolic, Gettysburg, Tallapoosa, and Palos have been thoroughly repaired, and the repairs upon some of them have been very costly. These vessels are now on duty or are ready for service. The Colorado, at present in commission as receiving-ship at Brooklyn, requires repairs, but is in good condition for one year's service.

Since 1869 there have been added to the Navy the Trenton, (second rate,) Adams, Enterprise, Alliance, Alert, Essex, Huron, and Ranger, (third rates,) and the torpedo-boats Alarm and Intrepid. Of these the first five are built of live oak, and the others of iron, all furnished with full steam power. The Despatch and Rio Bravo are purchased vessels; the former for quick dispatch service, and the latter for special service on the Rio Bravo River. There are 13 sailing vessels included in the list of vessels of the United States Navy, but these are considered of no value of importance as fighting vessels. Of these five are only available as practice ships.

There are 24 monitors, or iron-clad vessels, carrying 70 guns—each carrying two or four guns, excepting the Colossus, which is to carry 10 guns, but is still on the stocks at the New-York Navy-yard. The Massachusetts and Oregon are also on the stocks at other yards. Twelve are on duty in the North Atlantic squadron; five are under repairs; three are laid up at League Island, and the Roanoke is in ordinary at New-York. Aside from the sailing-vessels, which are not considered available for war purposes, the monitors, the two torpedo-boats, and the tug-boats in use at the navy-yards and naval stations, there are 71 steam war-vessels on the Navy list, divided into first, second, and third rates, of an aggregate capacity of 90,592 tons, and carrying 854 guns. Of these there are only 39 vessels that are considered immediately available for war purposes, having a capacity of 41,446 tons, and carrying 422 guns. These vessels are divided into the three different classes as follows: three of the first rate, 11 of the second rate, and 25 of the third rate.

The 39 vessels quoted above are only nine in excess of the number required under the provisions of the bill introduced by Mr. Willis in the House of Representatives Dec. 21, which provides "that the fleet of the Navy in peace, and until the public safety demands an increase, shall consist of 30 sea-going vessels of war, to be distributed among the respective squadrons and divisions." "The question" says the report "of what should compose a sound, economical, but efficient naval force has presented during the past two years many different aspects; and the question constantly recurs whether it would be better to enter upon the expensive construction of armor-plated gun-bearing vessels, or continue the building of fast, wooden-built cruisers." Commodore Ammen, Chief of the Bureau of Navigation and Office of Detail of the Navy Department, is acknowledged to possess the best developed ideas of the wants of the naval service, and his proposition to add to the force a marine ram, constructed upon scientific principles, is accepted by experts in the naval service and also in other circles, to be a new element which will make the force complete in itself, and a weapon of most destructive warfare. It is conceded that the officers of the Navy, as a class, know best the practical needs of the service; and it is beginning to be the custom, where difficult and responsible duties connected with the wants of the naval service, either in the construction of the vessels or improvements in other departments, are required, to call in their assistance.

RESUMPTION OF SPECIE PAYMENTS.

THE MESSAGE OF THE PRESIDENT TO BE SENT TO CONGRESS TO-DAY—INDIFFERENCE OF MEMBERS ON THE SUBJECT.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The President is expected to send to Congress, to-morrow, his Message concerning an immediate resumption of specie payments. He contemplated two or three days ago issuing an order to the Secretary of the Treasury to begin the redemption of legal-tender notes immediately, but an examination revealed legal difficulties which seemed insurmountable. Any effort to take advantage of the favorable condition of affairs for resumption must have the hearty support of Congress, and its immediate consideration. The proposition meets with little encouragement in Congress. It is not regarded with anything more nearly approaching approval than almost entire indifference by more than a dozen men. A few realize the importance of the opportunity; but, till the count of the Electoral votes is completed, the subject cannot secure a hearing. When it does come up, the old difficulty of getting those who have the same end in view to agree upon any one method of securing it will stand in the way. Any action by this Congress to aid in hastening specie payments cannot be hoped for, and the President is deprived of the support which ought to be earnestly given him by the law-making power, and must be content with making an official record of his views and opinions. He has most earnestly desired to see specie payments resumed during his administration, and it is a great misfortune that he will not be able by reason of the inefficacy of law to bring that end to pass.

THE POWERS OF THE PRESIDENT.

A JOINT RESOLUTION PROMPTLY VETOED—HIS REASONS THEREFOR RELATED BY THE PRESIDENT—CORRESPONDENCE WITH FOREIGN COUNTRIES—THE "REPUBLIC OF PRETORIA."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The President sent to the House to-day a Message vetoing two joint resolutions of Congress, one directing the Secretary of State to communicate to the Republic of Pretoria the high appreciation by the Congress of the United States of the complimentary terms in which said Republic has referred to the first centennial of our national independence in their resolutions to Congress in May last, and the other of a similar import in relation to congratulations of the Argentine Republic. In his Message the President says to allow correspondence on interchange between States to be considered by or with more than one such agency would necessarily lead to confusion, and possibly to contradictory presentation of views and to internal complications. The Constitution of the United States, following the established usage of nations has indicated the President as the agent to represent the national sovereignty in its intercourse with foreign powers, and to receive all official communications from them. It gives him the power, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to make treaties and appoint Ambassadors, and other public ministers. It intrusts to him solely the reception of Ambassadors and other public ministers, thus vesting in him the origination of negotiations, and the reception and conduct of all correspondence with foreign States; making him, in the language of one of the most eminent writers on constitutional law, "the constitutional organ of communication with foreign States." No copy of the addresses which it is proposed to acknowledge is furnished. I have no knowledge of their tone, language, or purport. From the tenor of the two joint resolutions it is to be inferred that those communications are probably purely congratulatory. Friendly and kindly intended as they may be, the presentation by a foreign State of any communication to a branch of the Government not contemplated by the Constitution for the reception of communications from foreign States, might, if allowed to pass without notice, become a precedent for the address by foreign States of communications of a difficult nature and with wicked designs. If Congress can direct the correspondence of the Secretary of State with foreign Governments, a case very different from that under consideration might arise when that officer might be directed to present to some foreign Government entirely different and antagonistic views or statements.

By the act of Congress, establishing what is now the Department of State, then known as the Department of Foreign Affairs, the Secretary is to "perform and execute such duties as shall from time to time be enjoined or intrusted to him by the President of the United States, agreeable to the Constitution, relative to correspondence, commissions or instructions to, or with, public Ministers or Consuls from the United States, or to negotiations with public ministers from foreign States or princes, or to memorials or other applications from foreign public ministers or other foreigners, or to such other matters respecting foreign affairs as the President of the United States shall assign to such department, and furthermore, that the said principal officer, the Secretary of State, shall conduct the business of said department in such a manner as the President of the United States shall from time to time order or instruct." This law, which remains substantially unchanged, confirms the view that the whole correspondence of the Government with and from foreign States is intrusted to the President; that the Secretary of State conducts such correspondence exclusively under the orders and instructions of the President; and that no communication or correspondence from a foreign State can properly be addressed to any branch or department of the Government except that to which such correspondence has been committed by the Constitution and law. I therefore feel it my duty to return the two joint resolutions without my approval to the House of Representatives, in which they originated.

In addition to the reasons already stated for withholding my constitutional approval from these resolutions is the fact that no information is furnished as to the terms or purport of the communication to which acknowledgements are desired; no copy of the communications accompany the resolutions, nor is the name even of an officer or of a body to whom an acknowledgment could be addressed given. It is not known whether the congratulatory addresses proceed from the head of State or from legislative bodies, and as regards the resolution relating to the "Republic of Pretoria," I cannot learn that any State or Government of that name exists.

(Signed,) U. S. GRANT.

THE ELECTORAL INVESTIGATIONS.

THE SENATE COMMITTEE AND THE OREGON CASE—THE DISQUALIFIED MICHIGAN ELECTOR.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The Oregon Electoral case was the subject of a long discussion in the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections. The committee were unable to decide upon a report, as there are a large number of telegrams relative to this case which have not yet been offered in evidence, but which will be so offered to-day or to-morrow.

The committee continued the investigation of the Oregon Electoral case this evening.

William H. Hollister, Cashier of the banking-house of Kountze Brothers, of No. 12 Wall street, New-York, testified that he has known J. H. N. Patrick, of Omaha, Nebraska, for several years; he knows Erwin Davis; understands that he is a man of wealth and leisure; on the 1st of December last $8,000 was deposited with Kountze Brothers by a stranger, who represented the deposit to be made by E. Davis; the $8,000 was in large bills, and was placed to the credit of J. H. N. Patrick. Witness was asked if he knew E. Davis, and replied: "I know Erwin Davis;" this sum of $8,000 was not deposited for Erwin Davis; on the 16th of December $1,039, in gold, was deposited in Kountze Brothers' bank by Charles Lamont, of New-York, subject to the order of J. H. N. Patrick, and it is still there; the bank of Kountze Brothers paid a draft of $8,000 on the 15th or 16th of December, in favor of Wells, Fargo & Co.; the witness did not know whether the money was paid to Wells, Fargo & Co. over the counter of Kountze Brothers' Bank or by draft through the Clearing-house; the draft on which Wells, Fargo & Co. were paid the sum of $8,000 was dated San Francisco, Dec. 5, and was given by J. H. N. Patrick.

M. T. Patrick, of Omaha, Neb., was the next witness. He is a brother to J. H. N. Patrick.

Senator Mitchell asked the witness if the signature to a certain cipher dispatch directed to W. T. Pelton, of New-York, was in the handwriting of his brother, J. H. N. Patrick.

Witness could not swear that it was or was not his brother's signature.

Major C. H. Hempstead, an acquaintance of J. H. N. Patrick was called, and asked to identify Mr. Patrick's handwriting, but he was unable to do so from the papers handed to him.

Senator Kelly was next called. He testified that he became acquainted with J. H. N. Patrick at Portland, Oregon, on the 27th of December last. A cipher dispatch directed to W. T. Pelton, New-York, signed by J. H. N. Patrick and indorsed by Senator Kelly, was produced by Senator Mitchell and handed to the witness, who stated that he could not translate the dispatch, but he could give the substance of it, which was that he [Mr. Kelly] indorsed a dispatch asking the Democratic National Committee to send $10,000 to Oregon to pay any legal expenses which might arise in connection with the Watts case, and it was also mentioned in the dispatch that any money not needed would be returned to the committee. An answer in cipher came to this dispatch, the substance of which was that there was "no money." Several telegrams passed between parties in Oregon and New-York in relation to paying any legal expenses in connection with the Watts case, and finally word was sent from New-York to Oregon that $8,000 could be had. The cipher dispatches which passed between Senator Kelly and Patrick were in relation to transferring the $8,000 from New-York to Oregon; how it should be done, and through what bankers. The dispatches had no other meaning. The Senator further testified that this $8,000 was the only money used in connection with this case in Oregon to his knowledge; that the $3,200 which he drew on a check from the bank of Ladd & Bush was used for paying lawyers' fees and for sending a messenger to Mr. Caswell, who lives in the eastern part of the eState. He never heard the unlawful use of money in connection with this case mentioned, and he never had an idea that any money would be used improperly in connection with it.

Senator Mitchell offered the following telegram, which he asked to have inserted in connection with the testimony of Mr. Hollister:

NEW-YORK, Nov. 27, 1876.

J. H. N. Patrick, Salem, Oregon:

Secure your polls at all hazards. Communicate with me immediately, giving prospects. DAVIS.

At this point the committee adjourned until to-morrow evening.

The Committee on the Powers, Privileges, and Duties of the House in Counting the Electoral Vote to-day examined Benton Hanchett, of Michigan, who testified that at the late election he was a candidate for Presidential Elector on the Republican ticket in that State, and was elected; he did not vote in the Electoral College, and was not present. He explained his reasons for not voting by saying that in 1863 he was appointed a Commissioner of the United States in the prosecution of a case of violation of law, of which he had made complaint; his attention having been recently called to an objection to an Elector in New-Jersey on similar grounds, he determined he would not act as an Elector; he had not performed duty as a United States Commissioner since that time, having refused to do so, but had not resigned the office. D. L. Cossman, who was elected by the college to fill the vacancy caused by the absence of Hanchett, testified as to that fact.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The House Committee on Appropriations in the Legislative and Executive Appropriation bill only provide $25,000 for the salary of the President, and accompany it with a provision repealing the section of the revised statutes which increased the salary to $50,000. It will be remembered that the Senate, at this session, failed to pass over the veto of President Grant the bill restoring the salary to the old figure, and although it passed both houses by a majority, it is likely that the provision as it now stands in the Appropriation bill will be agreed to, and the next President will have to be content with $25,000 per annum.

Jeremiah M. Wilson, of counsel for the Louisiana Returning Board, denies the truth of the statement that he and Mr. Shellabarger had applied to the courts for a writ of habeas corpus in their behalf.

The Treasury to-day destroyed $1,070,272 in legal tender notes, that amount being 80 per cent. of the national bank circulation issued during the month.

Mr. Stephens became much worse during the evening, and at midnight was very low. Although his death is not apprehended immediately, it is feared he cannot recover.

Orders have been received at the arsenal directing four batteries of artillery, whose proper station is at Fortress Monroe, to return to that point by boat; but as the river is not entirely open, it is thought they will not embark before Monday next. The troops who will leave on Monday are those who arrived here on Sunday evening, Nov. 19, last, under the command of Col. Loder. The companies are Battery I, Fourth Artillery, Col. Loder commanding; Battery G, First Artillery, Col. Elder commanding; Battery C, Fifth, Major Randolph, and Battery A; Third, Col. Lorraine. They had been stationed at Fortress Monroe previous to the Presidential election, but were ordered to South Carolina to preserve the peace. The band of the Artillery School, which arrived here about Nov. 25, will return at the same time. It is thought that the other troops will leave for posts North and West shortly.

Mr. A. T. Britton has been appointed Metropolitan Police Commissioner in the place of Mr. Kimball, who was appointed to succeed Mr. Murtagh but declined to serve.

The Senate in executive session to-day confirmed the following nominations: G. A. Wetter, to be Register at Yankton, Dakota; Thomas Settle, to be Judge of the United States District Court for the Northern District of Florida; James H. Burdick, to be United States Marshal for Dakota Territory; Medical Director William Green, to be Chief of the Bureau of Surgery, Navy Department.

The information has been received at the Department of State from the Vice Consul of the United States at Manila, respecting the port of Iolo, in the Sooloo Archipelago, which has been declared by the Spanish Government to be absolutely free from duties on foreign commerce from November 16, 1876, with the exception of arms, munitions of war, or such traffic as might prove injurious to morality or the public health. Vessels visiting the above port are required to present a full manifest of their cargo, stores, &c., within 48 hours after arrival.

Referring to the notice to mariners of Jan. 20, 1877, relative to the temporary discontinuance of the light on the shoal off Thomas' Point on the west side of the Chesapeake Bay, the Light-house Board gives notice that on and after this date the light will be again exhibited. It will be of the fourth order, showing a red flash every thirty seconds.

Commander George H. Perkins is ordered to command the Ashuelot, on the Asiatic station, relieving Commander E. O. Matthews, who is ordered home. Master James M. Wright is ordered to the Colorado. Civil Engineer D. G. Wise is ordered to temporary duty in the Bureau of Yards and Docks. Ensign W. C. Cowles is detached from the receiving ship Colorado, and placed on waiting orders.

Treasurer Wyman stated this afternoon that the Government has not lost any money through collections that have been made by parties claiming to represent others who have unclaimed interest due them on the books of the Treasurer's office where such claims are not correct. In all instances of this character the moneys so collected have been refunded. The department is solicitous that bondholders should not be made to pay too heavy fees to agents collecting interest for parties to whom it belongs.

The President sent the following nominations to the Senate to-day: A. T. Wickoff, to be Pension Agent at Columbus, Ohio; Joseph Grierson, to be Consul at Coquimbo; James D. Brady, to be Collector of Internal Revenue for the Second District of Virginia.

TESTING OF IRON AND STEEL.

MESSAGE OF THE PRESIDENT RECOMMENDING FURTHER APPROPRIATION TO CONTINUE THE OPERATIONS OF THE TESTING COMMISSION.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The President sent the following Message to Congress to-day:

I desire to call the attention of Congress to the importance of providing for the continuance of the board for testing iron, steel, and other metals, which, by the Sundry Appropriation act of last year, was ordered to be discontinued at the end of the present fiscal year. This board, consisting of engineers and other scientific experts from the Army, the Navy, and from civil life—all of whom, except the Secretary, give their time and labors to this object without compensation—was organized by authority of Congress in the Spring of 1873, and immediately drafted a comprehensive plan for its investigations, and contracted for a testing-machine of 400 tons capacity, which would enable it to properly conduct the experiments. Meanwhile the sub-committee of the board have devoted their time to such experiments as could be made with smaller testing-machines already available. This large machine is just now completed and ready for erection at the Watertown Arsenal, and the valuable labors of the board are therefore just about to be commenced. If the board is to be discontinued at the end of the present fiscal year the money already appropriated and the services of the gentlemen who have given so much time to the subject will be unproductive of any results.

The importance of these experiments can hardly be overestimated when we consider the almost endless variety of purposes for which iron and steel are employed in this country, and the many thousands of lives which daily depend on the soundness of iron structures. I need hardly refer to the recent disaster at the Ashtabula bridge, in Ohio, and the conflicting theories of experts as to the cause of it, as an instance of what might have been averted by a more thorough knowledge of the properties of iron and the best modes of construction. These experiments cannot properly be conducted by private parties, not only on account of the expense, but because the results must rest upon the authority of disinterested persons. They must therefore be undertaken under the sanction of the Government. Compared with their great value to the industrial interests of the country, the expense is very slight. The board recommend an appropriation of $40,000 for the next fiscal year, and I earnestly commend their request to the favorable consideration of Congress. I also recommend that the board be required to conduct their investigations under the direction of the Secretary of War, and to make full report of their progress to that officer in time to be incorporated in his annual report. U. S. GRANT.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, Jan. 30, 1877.

THE POLICE BOARD INVESTIGATION.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The Special Committee of the House to inquire into the official acts of the late Board of Police Commissioners of the District of Columbia continued their investigation today. Secretary of the Navy Robeson was sworn and testified that he had read the report of the investigation of Mr. Murtagh as it was published in the newspapers. The Chairman read Mr. Murtagh's testimony regarding his interview with the witness in relation to Mr. Whitthorne. Witness did not remember that interview. He saw Murtagh frequently during the Whitthorne investigation, but had no conversation with him about Whitthorne. Murtagh did nothing about the Whitthorne affair at witness' request or with his knowledge. Witness talked about the Whitthorne business with various persons, as to Mr. Whitthorne's personal habits, but had nothing to do with the Police force; had understood that Whitthorne's habits were bad, and so may have smiled when Murtagh asked witness about him; thought that Whitthorne was opening himself to exposure, and, thinking some subordinate would take advantage of the opportunity, communicated with a member of Congress, who would use his influence in warning Mr. Whitthorne to be careful if there was any necessity; did this not for any feeling toward Mr. Whitthorne, but out of respect for himself; witness had a knowledge that Dana was being shadowed by policemen while in Washington, and had no conversation with Mr. Murtagh about it at the time, as he scarcely knew him then; heard after Dana's arrest that he had been watched; it was rumored in the Navy Department that Whitthorne would be exposed, or that he was being watched, or something of the kind; it was among the possibilities that he [Whitthorne] had such a conversation with Murtagh as was given in his testimony, about not exposing Whitthorne while he was in office, but witness could recollect nothing of it.

SUICIDE OF AN ENGINEER OFFICER.

THE RASH ACT OF A LIEUTENANT IN THE REGULAR ARMY—NO CAUSE GIVEN FOR THE DEED.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 30.—Lieut. John H. Weeden, of the United States Engineer Corps, was found near midnight last night lying dead on a sofa in his room at No. 726 Bush street. Near the body were two empty bottles, which had evidently contained chloral hydrate. No one has been admitted except Gen. Barton S. Alexander, of the Engineers, physicians, a few friends of the deceased, and the Coroner. The cause of the act is as yet unknown, all parties being very reticent. Lieut. Weeden left a letter for a young lady, which contains but a few lines, and merely intimating that it was the last time he would address her.

[The military history of Lieut. Weeden is brief and uneventful. He was born in Rhode Island, from which State he was appointed to the Military Academy at West Point in 1862. He graduated number five in a class of 41, June 18, 1866, and the same day was promoted in the Army to be Second Lieutenant in the Corps of Engineers. He served for a while with the Engineer Battalion at Willet's Point, near this City. In March, 1867, he received his second promotion, and at the time of his death held the rank of First Lieutenant of Engineers.]

CRONIN AT HOME IN OREGON.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

PORTLAND, Jan. 30.—E. A. Cronin, the self-constituted Presidential Elector from Oregon, arrived home to-day from the East. His return fails to inspire the Democracy with the least enthusiasm. Cronin's ephemeral greatness is fast fading from the public view, and he is rapidly dritting into a well-merited obscurity from which no future political event can drag him forth to the gaze of an admiring world.

A NEW PRESIDENT FOR DARTMOUTH.

CONCORD, Jan. 30.—The Trustees of Dartmouth College met to-day in this city to decide who should be Dr. Smith's successor in the Presidency of the institution. They easily fixed upon Rev. Prof. Samuel C. Bartlett, D. D., of Chicago, who, it is understood, will accept the responsible position. Dr. Bartlett is a graduate of Dartmouth, of the class of 1836, and was tutor in the college for a time. For several years he was Professor of Intellectual Philosophy and Rhetoric in Western Reserve College, Ohio, and then became Professor of Sacred Theology in the Chicago Theological Seminary, which position he has acceptably filled for the past 18 years. His advent to the Presidency of Dartmouth will be accepted as a guarantee of the continued prosperity of the institution, and will be satisfactory to the graduates generally. Resolutions were passed by the Trustees complimentary to retiring President Smith, whose 14 years of service have been full of progress to the college.

THE ASHTABULA DISASTER.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 30.—The Leader has the following special from Ashtabula: "The Coroner's inquest was resumed to-day, and Job Abbot, civil engineer, of Canton, was sworn and testified: Is President of the Canton Bridge Company; has known of several bridges being built of wrought and cast iron on the Howe truss plan; he finds that the tension members had ample section, and, in fact, were considerably heavier than necessary for safety, and that the compression members were deficient in section; is of the opinion that the bridge had become gradually weakened by use, the form of construction being such that many of the compression members were strained over their safe working capacity. Copies of the testimony of Amasa Stone and the late Charles Collins were introduced, and will be used as evidence."

MARINE DISASTERS.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—The American schooner W. L. Burroughs, Capt. Smith, which arrived at Liverpool Jan. 26 from New-York, was obliged to jettison 400 barrels of petroleum on the passage.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The Signal Service observer at Cape Henry reports to the Chief Signal Officer as follows: Wrecking tugs with the Italian bark Caspione in tow passed Cape Henry at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon, bound for Norfolk.

QUEENSTOWN, Jan. 30.—The steamer Somerset, from Bristol, which put in here Friday last with main steam-pipe broken, has repaired, and sailed for New-York to-day.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—The bark John E. Chase, for Savannah Jan. 2, has been towed into Liverpool. She lost her mainmast, and is otherwise damaged.

OPERATING IN STOCKS.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 30.—Financial men here scout the story that $20,000,000, or any large sum, has been transferred from here to New-York to operate in Western Union or any other stock. The Cashier of the Bank of California says D. O. Mills is in New-York on business of the bank, and states positively he has no connection with any such pool, nor has any other person connected with the bank. Henry Keene denies that his brother, James Keene, has any connection with the movement, or has had $6,000,000, or a tenth of that amount transferred to New-York, and characterizes the story, so far as he is concerned, as sheer nonsense.

DEMOCRATIC IMPUDENCE.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 30.—Congressman Piper, of this district, has written a letter to Horace Davis, Congressman elect, stating his intention of contesting the election on the ground that Mr. Davis received over 9,000 fraudulent votes, the votes having been cast on certificates of enrollment, and the names of the voters not having been entered on the great register. He also alleges that Mr. Davis received 4,000 votes which were cast by parties who were non-residents.

OBSTRUCTIONS ON THE ERIE RAILWAY.

WAVERLY, Jan. 30.—The Erie Railway authorities promptly set to work to ascertain by whom the obstructions were placed on the track near Waverly, N. Y., on Sunday night, and after diligent investigation decided upon the arrest of two men, one of whom, named Samuel T. Bailey, of Rome, Penn., 18 years of age, confessed to having done the whole work alone, and claims to have had no object in view. He is in jail at Waverly. Fortunately the obstructions were discovered in time to prevent any accident.

MANSLAUGHTER IN PHILADELPHIA.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 30.—This evening, as John Pye and John Keegan were returning from work, they encountered Samuel Ewing and James Keenan at the corner of Eighteenth and Wharton streets, both drunk. A dispute arose which ended in Pye drawing a chisel from his pocket, and stabbing Ewing with it above the eye, producing a wound which resulted in instant death. Keenan was also cut with the chisel, but his injuries were not dangerous. Pye and Keegan were arrested.

CONVICTS SENT TO AUBURN.

AUBURN, Jan. 30.—A transfer of fifty convicts from Sing Sing arrived safely at Auburn Prison this morning. Among the gang were the four Astoria masked burglars, Eugene Christ, of New-York, Quimbo Appo, the Chinese murderer, and a number of other notorious criminals.

THE WORK OF TRAIN ROBBERS.

BOSTON, Jan. 30.—Albert H. Prince and Joseph L. Palmer were detected yesterday in an attempt to commit a theft on a train of the Boston and Albany Railroad. They jumped off the moving train, and Palmer was fatally injured. Prince had an arm broken.

A GUILTY BANK CASHIER.

POTTSVILLE, Jan. 30.—The jury in the case of Joseph F. Dengler, ex

Democrat, and a man of fair standing in the community; witness never heard a word against his character; Wells and Anderson, of the board, were against electing Dr. Kennedy to fill the vacancy, but he did not know the reasons for their doing so; for himself, he was not opposed to the Doctor; witness knew Hayes was elected by throwing out votes; these votes were thrown out because there was evidence of intimidation—hanging, men driven from the polls and from their crops, and therefore the board thought they were justifiable in doing so.

By Mr. Field—Do you know of anybody who was forced to vote against his deliberate judgment? A.—I do not remember; I rather think not; we had some testimony that persons voted the Democratic ticket through fear.

Q.—Were there half a dozen such? A.—I cannot say.

Mr. Field called the attention of the witness to the fact that the returns of 66 precincts in Louisiana were thrown out, thus excluding 10,280 Tilden votes; and in reply to sundry questions, the witness said he thought there were 10 instances in which affidavits (which, &c., came in with returns. In response to further interrogatories he said that some of the other affidavits came from persons who were afraid to make them in their respective localities owing to threats and intimidation; witness could not say how many affidavits were before the board when they commenced counting the returns, nor could he say how many were made in New-Orleans.

Q.—In general, was not the election in Louisiana quiet and peaceable? A.—Yes, everything was quiet in New-Orleans; I know nothing about the country, where there were one or two instances of a little disturbance; I believe there were some affidavits concerning such disturbances.

Mr. Field asked witness whether corrupt influences were charged, other than intimidation. Witness answered that there were charges of bribery, such as giving voters a suit of clothes, or shoes, but he could not tell how many.

Mr. Lawrence, recalled, the witness, who said that a great many persons had been driven away from their homes in the country and took refuge in New-Orleans in consequence of threats and violence.

Mr. Field having asked whether he knew this to be true, witness replied that men told him they had been driven from their homes.

Witness, in response to Mr. Lawrence, said he had no knowledge of any part of an original return having been altered, nor had he knowledge that the board had any consultation on that subject, or that there was any fraud by the board or any member thereof, or under its direction or knowledge.

In response to Mr. Burchard, the witness said there was no concealment from the Democratic Committee of any papers before the board, and that accounts of the proceedings were published in the newspapers.

Ex-Gov. Kellogg was briefly examined concerning the Election of Louisiana. He had no personal knowledge of Levisee being a United States Commissioner and Brewster Surveyor General at the time they were voted for, but he knew that they absented themselves from the College and that other Electors filled the vacancies.

Messrs. Kenner and Chaunave, both of the Returning Board, were before the committee this afternoon. The examination of the former resulted in his being compelled to produce private memoranda, taken by himself in the board during the addition, compilation, and statement of returns. The memoranda showed numerous precincts thrown out on alleged grounds of intimidation, violence, &c. There was nothing in the memoranda about Vernon Parish, the witness saying that he made his notes of the proceedings only in the matters before the board.

Mr. J. F. Littlefield was recalled. His testimony was in all substantial points similar to that given before Mr. Morrison's committee as reported below. He said that yesterday when he appeared before the committee he had taken no legal advice, but since that time he had a conference with an attorney, who informed him that he could tell them the whole truth if he did so under protest; otherwise he would have to bear the burden of suspicion in abstracting the original return of Vernon parish.

Mr. Field asked witness to look at the paper marked "S," and he answered, after a slight inspection, that it was the original paper which was before the Returning Board.

The witness, in reply to certain questions, said that he was requested by Gov. Wells to transpose the returns of two polls, taking the votes from the Democrats and giving them to the Republicans, polls Nos. 2 and 5; the number of votes thus transferred was 178; the original figures were erased; and those required written in their places.

Mr. Field—What motive did Gov. Wells assign for requiring you to make the change? A.—To elect Hunter, Judge; Andrews, District Attorney, and Kelso, State Senator; the parishes being in the judicial district in which Wells resided.

Q.—Was one of the persons named James Andrews who refused to accept the office on the ground that he was not fairly elected? A.—I presume so from the fact that he was a candidate for District Attorney.

Mr. Field exhibited the certificates of the election of the two friends of Wells—Hunter and Kelso—which the witness believed to be genuine.

Mr. Field—When the change of figures was accomplished in the way you mention, what became of the original papers from Vernon Parish? A.—I was instructed by Gov. Wells to bring him the two statements accompanying the consolidated statement; I gave them to him after the making of the official promulgation; he was about to put them into his pocket when I asked him whether it was not indiscreet to do so, and he said I was right in thus reminding him; whether he or I destroyed them I cannot say, but I saw them burned as to the original statement of the poll of Vernon Parish with the alterations now before him. Gov. Wells told me to destroy or make away with it; I felt I had done a little too much already, and took the paper home for the purpose of destroying it, but did not; I communicated these facts to Mr. Spearing, my uncle, and gave him the paper, to be used by him and in whom confidence could be placed, to be used in behalf of the Nicholls Government, which Mr. Spearing supported and thought that Nicholls was elected Governor; I requested of him that my name should never be known in this transaction, and that I should not be subpœnaed to testify; I gave him the paper in New-Orleans; the last time I saw it was in his paper in the office of Gov. Palmer at Springfield, it having been conveyed thither by Mr. Spearing; from that time to this I never saw the paper until it was produced yesterday before the committee.

Q.—Describe the occasion and circumstances of Gov. Wells asking you to alter the returns. A.—On Sunday, the 3d of December, the board and three or four of the clerks took dinner together; they sat at dinner three or four hours; from there we went to the rooms of the Returning Board; after being there a few minutes, I saw Gov. Wells looking over some papers and figuring; we were all feeling happy; I know I was; in a few moments Gov. Wells engaged with me in a whispered conversation, and told me to alter the votes; he asked me to have it done that night, but I did not do it that night; subsequently Gov. Wells said it was well done. Witness here showed how alterations were made. Witness continuing, said: "Gov. Wells asked me the same night to make a change in the Electoral vote; Gov. Wells was examined by the committee which went to New-Orleans; he afterward told me he was asked by the committee how the returns from Vernon Parish were received, and in consequence he felt very uneasy. He first said to me, "Can't you make a copy of the original? Find out what will make an aggregate, and we'll reject them." He then said, "We will have the affidavits prepared," meaning affidavits showing why three polls of Vernon Parish were rejected. The affidavits were sworn to before United States Commissioner Jewell; each affidavit was sworn to by three persons; I recollect the names of three persons who swore to them, namely: Jim Hewlett, Samuel Smith, and Mark Carter; they made their marks; I do not know whether there were such persons or not; the affidavits were dated, I believe, Nov. 14, 1876, and came into the office of the board on the 15th of December.

Mr. Field—Did Gov. Wells speak about forging the name of Thomas Franklin? A.—He asked me to practice so I could make the signature to the returns, but I did not do it.

Q.—Since you came to Washington have you had interviews with any parties with regard to your testimony? A.—I have conversed with various parties, including Gov. Kellogg and Marshal Pitkin; Gov. Kellogg did not question me particularly, but seemed anxious to do so; Marshal Pitkin spoke about the former intercourse and personal relations which had, he said, been pleasant, and he wanted me to consider well before testifying, and as to what course I should take; I told him I did not intend to testify if I could help it; he also made the inference that I should remember my friends; he thought it wise for me to stick to my own party; this conversation took place either Saturday or Sunday night.

Q.—Was anything said about furnishing counsel, or about protecting you? A.—He said if I desired he would engage counsel.

Mr. Lawrence then examined the witness, who was reminded that he had said, when he was examined yesterday, that he was not aware of his rights. The witness remarked that since yesterday he had conversed with Mr. Murphy, of Davenport, Iowa. Mr. Murphy did not advise him, but said that he could give testimony under protest, which would clear him of contempt.

Q.—Is there anything you know now that you did not know yesterday? A.—I am only giving my testimony under protest. I was in contempt when I saw Mr. Murphy.

In reply to other questions the witness said no return was altered but the one from Vernon, so far as I know; I saw considerable scratching on it.

In further response to questions, the witness said: I went to the office of the Returning Board after the dinner already alluded to, to complete the returns; the members of the board were in their private office; I began to make alterations in the returns from Vernon Parish fifteen minutes after Gov. Wells had suggested it; Judge Davis, one of the clerks, showed me how to alter the figures, and furnished a rubber; Woodward, another clerk, assisted on Monday morning; other clerks must have seen it done; Gov. Wells came in repeatedly while the work was progressing; I worked on it that night until 1 o'clock on Monday; I invited Woodward to assist; Woodward erased some of the totals; I handed the original returns to Gov. Wells; Abell came in just as they were being burned; Abell said such destruction was usually done outside of the place of meeting of the board; Gov. Wells told me either to destroy or make away with the altered statement of the returns from Vernon Parish now in the possession of this committee; Gov. Wells asked me if I had made way with it; I said, "Yes, it is not in the office." I took the paper to my house, and it was from my pocket that of Mr. Spearing; Gov. Wells not only made the request to alter the returns from Vernon Parish, but asked me to write down what he desired; Spearing is my uncle; he frequently conversed with me, and asked me to tell him some things that would help the Nicholls Government; my uncle was not much of a politician; he voted for Nicholls and for Hayes. The witness testified that both he and his uncle were formerly Republicans at New-Orleans, but were removed. Mr. Seelye said to witness: When you were asked yesterday whether Gov. Wells requested you to make the alteration did you not say he did not? A.—I evaded an answer; I am satisfied I did not say Gov. Wells did not make such request.

Q.—The reporter's notes say you thus testified. A.—Then they are wrong.

Q.—Did it seem to you perfectly right to make the alterations? A.—I thought there was nothing wrong in obeying instructions.

Q.—Did you think Gov. Wells a rascal for making such a proposition? A.—I will say I have the appearance of being a rascal for what I have done.

Q.—But you committed a forgery? A.—I do not know the alteration of figures to be a forgery.

In reply to Mr. Burchard the witness said he knew of no alteration having been made in the returns of any other of the parishes.

By Mr. Lawrence—Were not charges made against you of excessive charges while you occupied the office of hay inspector? A.—Not to my knowledge.

The witness said that he borrowed $3,000 of Mr. Spearing to pay his expenses. The indebtedness was settled; there was an old account between them; Mr. Spearing gave him $40 while they were in New-York together. Mr. Spearing telling him he had an advance from the Sergeant at Arms.

By Mr. Field—How much scratching was done? A.—I do not know.

During the further examination of the witness, he said the promulgation of the falsified return was signed by all the members of the Returning Board.

The committee adjourned until to-morrow forenoon.

TESTIMONY BEFORE THE MORRISON COMMITTEE.

Mr. Littlefield, clerk of the Louisiana Returning Board, was examined by the Morrison House Committee to-day. He testified that on the 3d of December he altered the original returns from two of the poll in Vernon Parish so as to transfer 178 Democratic votes over to the Republican candidates; he further testified that he did this by the express direction of Gov. Wells, and that after making copies of the altered originals and substituting them for the originals, the latter were burned either by himself or Gov. Wells, he did not remember which, but at all events with Gov. Wells' knowledge.

Gen. Burbut, of Illinois, conducted the cross-examination of the witness, and reading certain answers from the stenographer's notes of yesterday, which witness is recorded as having then made, he asked him how it was that his answers of yesterday and to-day did not agree. the witness stated that he did not make the answers yesterday, but that he refused to answer all questions; and he stated here, as he did at the beginning of his direct examination, that he made no such answers on his examination yesterday as were reported.

SEIZURE OF SMUGGLED BOOKS.

A new form of smuggling was recently discovered by Special Agent Brackett, of the Treasury Department, and that official brought one of its abettors to grief on Monday last. Capt. Brackett learned several weeks ago that numerous copies of valuable books were regularly imported from Europe, and sent from the steamers to their purchasers without passing through the Custom-house. Upon inquiring into the matter he learned that technical works and books, sumptuously bound and illustrated, were brought hither on almost every steam-ship, either by the Captains or Pursers of the vessels, and by them smuggled ashore. The duty on such books is 25 per cent. A few days ago the Special Agent heard that a wealthy gentleman of Elizabeth, N. J., lately received from England a number of valuable books upon which no duty had been paid. On Monday he went to Elizabeth, and having procured a search warrant, looked through the valuable library of Mr. John Winkle. The result of his search was that he seized 50 or more handsomely-bound volumes. Upon interrogation, Mr. Winkle admitted to Capt. Brackett that the books were smuggled into the country, and that he had paid the smuggler, a Purser, £5 in addition to the price of the books. The books are worth, it is estimated, over $300. They comprise full files of Punch. After seizing the books Capt. Brackett took them to Newark, and surrendered them to Collector Baldwin. Mr. Winkle will probably be heavily fined.

SALE OF AMERICAN PAINTINGS.

The Winter collection of American paintings which has been on exhibition for some time past at the Art Rooms, No. 817 Broadway, were partly disposed of at auction last night by Messrs. Leavitt, the sale being well attended. Following are some of the prices obtained: "Summer in the Adirondacks," by Tait, $75; "An Autumn Day," Harry Young, $80; "The English Channel," Alexander Wust, $235; "A Winter Scene," J. C. Wiggins, $77 50; "Pet Lamb," J. C. Thom, $32 50; "Stormy Sea," William DeHaas, $133; "Moonlight on the Hudson," William Hart, $130; "Sunrise after the Storm," George Innes, $155; "Woodland Bath," Eastman Johnson, $305; "Summer Landscape," Arthur Parton, $100; "A Gray Day Near Creedmoor," C. H. Miller, $115; "The Lookout," George H. Story, $250; "Black and Tan," J. H. Beard, $100; "Valley of the Tiber," George Innes, $530; "Little Sunshine," J. G. Brown, $255; "Mountain Lake," Wyant, $205; "Thatchene Island," M. F. H. DeHaas, $180; "Autumn Landscape," William Hart, $175, and "Indian Summer on Lake George," A. T. Bricher, $47 50. The sale will be concluded at the same place this evening. The remaining paintings will be on exhibition until 3 o'clock this afternoon.

THE HASTIE-TRACY LIBRARY SALE.

If there has been little demand at the Hastie-Tracy library sale for theology, Shakespeareana, Americana, or valuable editions of great classical works, the same cannot be said of that curious collection of books which have been classified as "Facetiæ," which was disposed of yesterday, although none of the more rare books brought high prices, and several notable works were sold at prices far below their value. The bidding was spirited and, comparatively speaking, remunerative. Among the books sold were the famous 1762 editions of La Fontaine, containing, in fine condition, all the charming engravings by Elsen, in two volumes, which brought $90. This work has repeatedly brought $200 in gold. The Amsterdam 1685 edition, in two volumes, $17; another finer copy, $32. The Paris 1808 two-volume edition, $12. Tom Moore's translation, in two volumes, $10; purchased by Mr. Jeffries, of Bristol, England. The sale will be concluded to-day.

J. B. FORD & CO.'S AFFAIRS.

The second bankruptcy of J. B. Ford & Co., which was announced a few days ago, is simply a legal form for completing the settlements of the first, by giving direct notice to a creditor who had refused to acknowledge the former settlement on the ground that he had not been "notified." This course is taken by recommendation of the principal creditors, and meets the ready acceptance of all, with the one exception named. The "30 cents" offered is not upon the composition amount, but upon the unpaid proportional balance of the original debt—in short, it is the carrying out of the original composition, which has already been reduced from $110,000 to $45,000. The $50,000 contingent claim is not against the firm, but against two individual members of it, who, with seven other parties, are sued as former Trustees of the Christian Union Publishing Company for a printing-press made in England, and rejected as not according to contract. The creditors have passed resolutions to the effect that the business shall continue without interruption.

A DISHONEST DOMESTIC.

Mr. Cornelius D. Earle, of No. 91 West Eleventh street, called on Inspector Thorne, at the Central Office, last evening, and reported that a few days ago he engaged as a domestic Caroline Smith, a German woman, 63 years of age. Last evening the woman disappeared, and shortly after her departure it was ascertained that she had taken with her a tin box containing the following property: Two certificates of stock in the Corn Exchange Bank, valued at $1,000 each, in the name of Mary D. Earle; two bank-books of the Seaman's Savings Bank, also in the name of Mary D. Earle; a bank-book of the Greenwich Savings Bank, in the name of Alida Earle; two of the Second mortgage bonds of the International Railroad of Texas, valued at $2,000; national bank currency to the amount of $200, and jewelry valued at $800. Mr. Earle gave the Police an accurate description of the thief, and a general alarm was sent to all the Police stations ordering her arrest.

STRIKE IN BROOKLYN.

About 100 men, who have been working as grain-heavers at the stores of Hazleton Brothers, at foot of Pacific street, have struck. The firm, which has heretofore been paying 25 cents an hour to the men, reduced the rate to 20 cents an hour on Monday. A German, named John Walder, who went from No. 36 Greenwich street, in this City, with other men to fill the places of the strikers, was struck on the head with a lump of ice and seriously injured, yesterday, while eating his dinner in a shed. Walden was removed to the Long Island College Hospital. The lump of ice was thrown over the fence, but by whom is not known. A strong force of Police from the Third Precinct is detailed to prevent the strikers from offering violence to those who may wish to work at the reduced rates.

A BLACK-MAILER FOILED.

John Bradenback, who, at the Essex Market Court yesterday gave his occupation as clerk in a woolen manufactory, on Monday evening visited the saloon of Annie Hahn, No. 70 Forsyth street, and with an official flourish presented the proprietress with a document purporting to be an order from the Mayor to "pull" the place. Bradenback intimated to the woman that the Sheriff and a small army of deputies were waiting outside, but added that the painful duty of "pulling" the house would be postponed in consideration of a small sum of money, which he would accept and judiciously distribute among the necessary Sheriff and his minions. Mrs. Hahn, suspecting the fellow to be a fraud, refused to be duped, and ordered his arrest. He is now awaiting trial on the charge of attempted black-mail.

GENERAL MISCELLANY.

THE BULGARIAN ATROCITIES.

A LARGE MEETING IN ASSOCIATION HALL TO EXPRESS SYMPATHY WITH THE CHRISTIANS IN TURKEY—HOW CHRISTIANS ARE MALTREATED—RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED.

A public meeting was held last evening at Association Hall to express sympathy for the Christian sufferers by the Turkish atrocities in Bulgaria. Hon. William E. Dodge presided, and introduced Rev. Dr. Anderson, who opened the meeting with prayer. At the conclusion of the prayer Dr. William H. Thompson delivered an interesting lecture describing the condition of the Ottoman Empire and the Christians who lived under its Government. The atrocities practiced in Bulgaria were due, he said, to causes which, so long as they continued to exist, would entail a constant repetition of similar occurrences. One of the most potent of these causes was the religious differences of the Christians and Mohammedans. Not only, he said, were there a multiplicity of races in Turkey, but there was among these a separation and isolation from each other, and an inherent hatred of each other that could not but attract the attention of the visitor. In every city one would find one part assigned to the use of the True Believers, another part to the Christians, another to the Jews, until it was finally divided and subdivided among the different sects of inhabitants, bitterly opposed to each other. Individuals were never referred to as mere men and women, but were always alluded to as Jews, Christians, or followers of the various other creeds of religion. The effect of this was that religion, and religion alone, determined man's status in society. In fixing the status of the Christians, the law, he said, was especially strict, even going so far as to prescribe the kind of dress to be worn by them, the manner they should be saluted on the street, the manner that letters should be addressed to them, and placing restriction on all such petty matters, merely for the purpose of injuring the feelings of the Christian inhabitants. So rigidly were these cruel restrictions enforced, that a Christian never dared to venture into the streets without being attired in black, that color being prescribed by law, to indicate that at the judgment day the Christian would be doomed to wear the robes of darkness. The speaker, on one occasion, had even seen a lady spit upon and struck in the face by Mohammedans for venturing to appear in the street with a green veil over her face. Insults of this character might be cited without number, and were due to the fact that the Mohammedan teachers always instilled into the minds of their pupils the notion that they were bound to persecute Christians, and to regard with disfavor any indications of wealth in their Christian neighbors. The Mohammedan law further enjoined that no Christian should ever stand or walk at the right side of a Mohammedan, and that no Christian should ever build a house or two stories if the house occupied by his Mohammedan neighbor was only one story. In the courts, too, the same unjust and absurd restrictions were made. There no testimony given by a Christian could be for a moment considered if it was given against that of a Mohammedan. A Christian therefore could never obtain justice unless he could bribe a Mohammedan witness to swear to his version of the case. As this result was generally quite easily accomplished, however, the Christians were, on most occasions, enabled to right their wrongs in spite of the disadvantages under which they labored under the law.

In referring to previous massacres by the Turks, the speaker said that once, in Syria, a priest having been so unwise as to ride to church on horseback, the Mohammedans of the city in which he dwelt arose suddenly in a mass and murdered 1,800 Christians for no other cause than the slight and unintentional affront given to the priest. The still more cruel massacre at Damascus, where 8,000 Christians were butchered in cold blood, had not even a fancied affront like this for its origin, the Turks having committed the murders without any provocation whatever. The Speaker said that the reason why the massacre was ascertained by Americans in relation to this atrocity was, that all accounts were filtered through the British press, which, with the English Government, considered it policy at the time to sustain the Turkish Government.

He did not believe that much would have been learned of the recent atrocities in Bulgaria had it not been for the American consul who was on the spot, and had revealed the true extent and barbarity of the crimes committed by Turkish armies. The speaker next demonstrated that the slight consulate protection that had been accorded to Christians in Turkey during the past 30 years gave them a little more security and immunity from violence and massacre. The Government, he said, had indeed promised to institute "reform," but how little joy could such a promise convey to the Christians, knowing, as they did, that such promises had been often made, and as often broken in the past, and that absolutely no other body of people on the globe knew so well "how not to do a thing" as the Turks. The relative social position of the Mohammedans and Christians was another cause of trouble. While the former were gradually retrograding and dying out, the latter were constantly advancing and absorbing the wealth of the land; a condition of affairs that increased the animosity of the Mohammedans, and constantly stirred into action their murderous hatred of the Christians. The repetition of such cruelties as those practiced in Bulgaria could only be rendered impossible, the speaker said, in conclusion, by the subjugation of the Turks and their removal from Turkey into Asia, where they could be kept from doing further damage.

At the conclusion of the address Rev. Dr. Washburn offered for adoption the following resolutions:

Resolved, That while we have no direct connection with the religious and political questions involved in the Bulgarian atrocities, we share deeply in the feeling which fills the Christian mind in England and on the Continent, of sympathy with the sufferers from the inhuman wrongs perpetrated by Turkish armies and unpunished by the Turkish Government; and,

Resolved, That whatever may be the resentment of the strife between the Porte and its outraged provinces, our earnest hope is that the European powers will secure such liberties for the sufferers as to prevent forever the repetition of these crimes against the code of the whole Christian and civilized world.

After brief addresses by Drs. Washburn and Bellows, the resolutions were unanimously adopted, and the audience were dismissed with the benediction.

THE ASHTABULA BRIDGE.

A LETTER FROM MR. AMASA STONE CONCERNING IT.

The Albany Journal copies from a letter from Mr. Amasa Stone, of Cleveland, Ohio, late President of the Lake Shore Railroad Company, in which he gives his theory of the cause of the destruction of the bridge and the train. He writes:

"As to the Ashtabula bridge, it was the last bridge that I designed, and of the 10 to 15 miles of railway bridges that I had designed and erected, a great number of which are now in use, and built 25 to 30 years ago, this one had the heaviest proportions, and was designed as the strongest in all of its parts. Its material was of the best quality, and the work was done in the company's shops by the best workmen; and from the day it was built until it went down it did not show a sign of weakness in any of its parts. Such is the testimony of good bridge men who have been in charge. My theory is, that from some unknown cause the second engine left the track as it struck the bridge, went through its deck, and carried the train with it. No wood or iron bridge is prepared to carry a locomotive across it safely when off the track."

RELIEVING THE POOR.

Mrs. E. Benjamin, Mrs. C. S. Webb, and Mrs. Skaats sent to the Avenue C Industrial School of the Children's Aid Society, yesterday, one barrel of flour, 100 pounds of sugar, 30 pounds of coffee, 30 pounds of tea, two bushels of white beans, and 60 loaves of bread. The provisions were tied up in parcels, and distributed by the ladies themselves to the representatives of 60 poor families who have been without employment for a long time. The eager look of expectation and the gratitude expressed upon the faces of those to whom provisions were given were very touching. The widespread suffering among the poor at the present time appeals very strongly to all who are able to render them assistance.

CAPTURE OF A SNEAK THIEF.

In the South Ferry-house yesterday morning Mr. Charles Ives, of No. 84 State street, Brooklyn, recognized on the person of a young man several articles of wearing apparel which had been stolen from a Mr. Haynes, who is a fellow-boarder of Mr. Ives. When the man was arrested he was recognized as having boarded for a day at No. 84 State street, and then suddenly disappeared with Mr. Haynes' overcoat, and several other smaller articles of wearing apparel. He admitted he had stolen the coats he had on when arrested. In his pocket was found a list of houses in Philadelphia and Brooklyn, some of which he had already visited and checked off. The prisoner gave his name as James A. Jay. The Brooklyn Police believe they can connect him with several robberies in that city.

DEATH OF THE SENIOR ALUMNUS OF BROWN.

The Providence Journal of Monday says: "Benjamin Hobart, the oldest citizen of South Abington, Mass., died in that town on Thursday last, Jan. 25. His age was 95 years, three months, and one day. He graduated at Brown University in 1804, and since 1874 he has been the only survivor of his class, and the oldest graduate of the university. His countenance and appearance are familiar to a large number of the graduates, for he has long been in the habit of attending Commencement, and has once or twice been invited to speak at the Commencement dinner, where he was always received with marked respect. He was reputed, we believe, at the last Commencement, and though nearly 95 years of age, was more erect in his carriage and younger in his appearance than many a graduate of 60. Mr. Hobart was a lawyer in early life, and represented his native town of Abington in the Legislature of Massachusetts in 1832. Nearly 50 years ago he established there a factory for the manufacture of sacks, and has since been engaged in that business. He was the author of a history of Abington, published in 1866. His religious faith was that of the 'Church of the New Jerusalem,' and he often employed his pen in explaining and defending its doctrines and usages, to which he was warmly attached."

THE TEMPERANCE CAUSE.

SECOND CONFERENCE OF THE NATIONAL TEMPERANCE SOCIETY—ADDRESSES BY REV. WILLIAM T. SABINE, REV. DR. PATTEN, REV. DR. PRIME, AND OTHERS.

The National Temperance Society held the second of a series of conferences in the lecture-room of the Young Men's Christian Association building, yesterday afternoon. William E. Dodge, Jr., presided, and Rev. Dr. Newell opened the meeting with prayer. Rev. William T. Sabine, Pastor of the Reformed Episcopal Church, read a paper on "The Drinking Usages of Society as opposed to the Work and Progress of the Christian Church." He declares that social drinking usages offer serious impediments to the work of the Church and cripple the resources of the Church and render it less competent to wage the warfare to which it is called. It appeared from statistics that out of 10,361 inmates of prisons in England, Scotland, and Wales, not fewer than 6,572 had previously received instruction in Sunday-schools, and it was almost uniformly found that the use of intoxicating liquors was the cause, directly or indirectly, of so many Sabbath scholars becoming criminals. The speaker was informed, by a friend who had watched and made the count, that on one Sunday, from 10 A. M. to 3 P. M., in this City, 547 persons entered a groggery on one corner of the street, and 507 entered another liquor saloon on the opposite side of the street, making a total of 1,054. Of these, 450 were men, 445 women, 82 boys, and 68 girls. Whatever was set forth as the advantages of what is called the temperate use of stimulants, it was doubtful whether it ever occurred to anybody to claim for such use the position of a means of grace, or to assume that wine and beer drinking dispose men to hear the Gospel and lend a willing ear to its appeals. On the contrary, while it was possible that in some cases such moderate indulgence might not operate as a bar to the impressions of the divine message, or blunt the perceptions of the soul, a competent investigation would prove, beyond doubt, that in nearly all instances its natural result is to produce a greater or less indisposition to religious exercises. These social indulgences, the speaker declared, bring discredit upon the Gospel and retard its influence in heathen lands. For one really converted to Christianity as the fruit of missionary labor, the drinking practices of the English had made a thousand drunkards. A Persian missionary related that when a Mohammedan is seen drunk it is a common remark that he has become a Christian. The Christian Church, in seeking the salvation of men's souls, indirectly seeks the redemption of their bodies and their homes. The habitual result of a temperance life was the elevation, purification, and ennobling of the whole man. Christianity lifts man in the scale of being, morally, socially, and physically; drinking habits antagonize the efforts of the Church. At every point at which Christianity would elevate and bless mankind it is confronted by this ruthless and determined adversary to the purity, the peace, the health, the comfort and the eternal happiness of men.

Rev. Dr. Patten, of New-Haven, gave an interesting sketch of his early efforts to stay the spread of intemperance. Fifty-seven years ago he commenced in this City his warfare on alcohol, and he had not yet ceased his labors in the good fight. At the conclusion of his remarks he moved a vote of thanks to Dr. Sabine for the able paper he had read. The motion was unanimously adopted.

Rev. Dr. Newell said that all those who love religion should see the folly of striving to reclaim society by advising people to be moderate in the use of alcoholic stimulants. Total abstinence was the only safeguard against intemperance.

Rev. Dr. S. Irenæus Prime stated that of all the evils with which the world is cursed, there is none so great as that which springs from the use of intoxicating liquors. What could be done to arrest it? What could be done to put down this habit by the strong hand of public sentiment aided and abetted by the civil law? The Legislature should prohibit the sale of malt and spirituous liquors as a traffic dangerous to the public peace and morals.

Previous to adjournment the Chair announced that the next conference would be held in the same place on Feb. 7.

IMPURITIES IN SUGAR.

THE UNTRUE STATEMENTS REGARDING DELETERIOUS SUBSTANCES IN SUGAR—THE PROCESS OF REFINING—SUGAR THAT IS PURE—FRAUDS EASILY DETECTED.

A prominent gentleman of this City has recently received several letters from Canada and the interior of this State regarding alleged impurities and deleterious substances in the sugars in common use. A rural paper a short time ago, also published an article containing the most astonishing "revelations," and this was sent to the gentleman referred to with a request to investigate the subject. In response to his inquiries, one of the most experienced and most scientific sugar manufacturers of this City sent him the following letter, which effectually disposes of the truth of the published "revelations":

MY DEAR SIR: Though I hope to see you personally within a day or two, I shall answer your last note on the sugar question in writing now. The printed article you inclosed shows such absolute ignorance and prejudice on the subject that it would take a year to provide the writer with sufficient elementary knowledge to understand and appreciate any theoretical treatise I might be inclined to write in vindication of myself and co-sugar refiners, of whom I believe the majority, if not all, employ the same or similar means in refining sugars that I do. Please accept the following points as facts or truisms:

Calling dissolvent admixtures of other matters in sugar impurities, and simply suspended matter dirt, you may say: First—All raw sugars, including most Louisiana sugars, are both impure and dirty. Second—Refined sugars ought never to be dirty; but all, except those sold as pure sugars, viz., cut-loaf, cube, crushed, powdered, granulated and "A" coffee sugars, contain in the strict sense of the term impurities. The next question is, upon the amount of which the value of the sugars depends, inasmuch as these sugars mainly sell by their color, which is generally a good indication of their degree of purity. Now, as the market value of these yellow or impure sugars is from 10 to 50 per cent. below that of hard white, nobody buying them does so with the expectation of receiving the same amount of saccharine matter. Third—These impurities are never added during the process of refining, but are the residue of these originally contained in the raw sugar used and not eliminated during the refining process. Fourth—The addition of matters like white earth, &c., can only be practiced in small groceries, and can easily be detected by dissolving a spoonful of sugar in a glass of water, when all such matters, being insoluble, will deposit. Fifth—Pure sugar being less soluble than moist and impure, it is apparently less sweet to the tongue, as a like degree of taste in this menstruum dependent upon the amount the saliva is able to supply to it or spread over the nerves of taste in dissolved form; hence very low Louisiana sugars, containing scarcely 80 per cent. pure sugar, taste the sweetest, and pure crystallized cube or cut loaf are the least sweet on the tongue. Yet every confectioner uses pure sugar by the pound always buys the latter. Sixth—The process of refining is still carried on on the same principles as formerly, the improvements consisting mainly in a greater use of the main purifying agent—bone dust—and in substitution of a simple mechanical filtration of the dirty raw-sugar solution through cloth, in place of the less possible agent, blood, as formerly used. I may add that blood was used on account of the albumen it contained, which, when heated in a solution of sugar, coagulated and carried with it into the rising scum the suspended dirt, without having any but a deleterious influence upon the sugar and those impurities which were in solution. Seventh—Soft or coffee sugars will sometimes turn sour when kept any great length of time, on account of the water they contain, (dry sugars, as loaf or granulated, ought never to do so,) simply because a solution of sugar in water is well known to be liable to fermentation, which may, according to various circumstances, temperature, &c., be lactic, alcoholic, or acid. Hence the rummy flavor of some raw sugars, and the acid smell of some sour refined. Acid, as such, is never added in any of the American refineries of whose workings I have any knowledge.

Lastly, let me say that on account of similar ignorant articles appearing from time to time in newspapers, Prof. Chandler, President of the Board of Health of this City, has repeatedly analyzed the products of our New-York refineries, and found nothing deleterious in them. As far as our own house is concerned, we guarantee all our products to contain no foreign matter, and all impurities left in the lower class of goods are under all circumstances the natural residue of the raw sugar operated upon. If you want pure sugar you can at all times get it, if paid for. No hard sugars, like cube, crushed, loaf, powdered, or granulated, are or can ever be produced impure, gross frauds, easily detected, like mixing white sand and the like with it, being excepted. Hoping this will set the mind of your correspondent at rest, I remain, yours very truly.

NEW YORK, Jan. 26, 1877.

CAN STAND IT NO LONGER.

A telegram from Galion, Ohio, to the Cincinnati Gazette says: "The Galion Review, a good weekly Democratic paper, published by Row & Coonrod for the past six years, has withdrawn from the Democratic Party, and declared its intention to hereafter direct its unreserved efforts in the support of the Republican cause."

FORTY-FOURTH CONGRESS.

SECOND SESSION....Jan. 30.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

In the Senate, the credentials of Mr. George F. Hoar, of Massachusetts, and Mr. Eli Saulsbury, of Delaware, were presented. A resolution was adopted directing the Committee on Rules to inquire what rule should be adopted for the admission of persons to the Capitol during the counting of the Presidential vote. The committee reported, after conferring with the House Committee, a proposition authorizing the Sergeants at Arms to employ 50 men to act as special Police on that occasion, which was agreed to. A resolution to print the proceedings before the Electoral Commission from day to day in the Record, was presented and laid over. A resolution to appoint two tellers under the Electoral Vote act was adopted. The consideration of the Pacific Railroad Sinking Fund bill was resumed. Mr. Mitchell, of Oregon, concluded his argument against the bill, begun yesterday, and Mr. Thurman spoke in support of the power of the Government to amend the Pacific Railroad acts. Mr. Sherman offered an amendment, providing for the payment of 25 per cent. of the whole net earnings, not to exceed $1,500,000 in any year, in lieu of the 5 per cent. of net earnings and half the mail transportation. At 3:30 the Senate proceeded to vote for five Senators to serve on the commission to count the Electoral vote, and Messrs. Edmunds, Morton, Frelinghuysen, Thurman, and Bayard were unanimously elected.

In the House, the bill to appropriate $500,000 for the Mississippi jetties was passed. The bill to abolish the District Board of Police was passed over the President's veto. A message was received from the President vetoing the joint resolution returning thanks to the Argentine Republic and the Republic of Pretoria, South Africa, for their congratulations on our Centennial, the President holding that Congress cannot dictate to the Secretary of State what correspondence he shall hold with foreign States. Messrs. Payne, Hunton, Abbott, Garfield, and Hoar were elected members of the commission under the Electoral Vote Act. A resolution was offered directing the Judiciary Committee to inquire as to the propriety of amending the Constitution so as to provide a mode of deciding questions as to the regularity of Electoral votes and a mode of counting them. The resolution declaring Colorado a State in the Union came up, but was not acted upon.

SENATE.

The CHAIR laid before the Senate the credentials of George F. Hoar, elected United States Senator from the State of Massachusetts for a term of six years from March 4, 1877, to succeed Hon. George S. Boutwell.

Placed on file.

Mr. BAYARD, of Delaware, presented the credentials of Hon. Eli Saulsbury, elected United States Senator from the State of Delaware for six years from March 4, 1877.

Placed on file.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

A large number of petitions were presented by various Senators, signed by male and female residents of the different States, asking the adoption of a sixteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States prohibiting the States from disfranchising persons on account of sex, all of which were referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

Mr. CHRISTIANCY, of Michigan, in presenting a petition of this character from the citizens of Michigan, said he was informed that there was not a single drunkard, gambler, or person of vicious life among the petitioners, and he believed the statement. His observation in the State of Michigan, where over 40,000 votes were given for female suffrage, satisfied him that the people advocating this amendment were among the most thoughtful and intelligent people of the country.

HAVING DIES FOR COUNTERFEITING.

Mr. SHERMAN, of Ohio, from the Committee on Finance, reported, without amendment, the Senate bill for the punishment of persons making, or having in their possession, dies, molds, &c., for manufacturing counterfeit coin. Placed on the calendar.

THE MEXICAN WAR BADGE.

Mr. BURNSIDE, of Rhode Island, from the same committee, reported favorably on the House bill granting permission to officers and enlisted men of the Army and Navy to wear the badge adopted by the National Association of the Survivors of the Mexican War on occasions of ceremony. Placed on the calendar.

THE COUNTING OF THE ELECTORAL VOTE.

Mr. HAMLIN, of Maine, at the request of several Senators, submitted a resolution directing the Committee on Rules to inquire what, if any, rule should be adopted for the admission of persons to the Capitol during the canvassing of the votes for President and Vice President of the United States, and that the committee be instructed to confer with the Committee on Rules of the House of Representatives. Agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON, of Iowa, submitted a resolution providing that the proceedings before the commission authorized by the bill to provide for and regulate the counting of votes for President and Vice President and the decision of questions arising thereon, for the term commencing March 4, A. D. 1877, shall be published in the Congressional Record from day to day. Laid over at the request of Mr. Davis.

Mr. WRIGHT, of Iowa, submitted a resolution that the Senate changed the tenor of his former bequest, and the contest will be to set aside this second will and have the first one admitted to probate. The first will was made in this country.

COURT NOTES.

Judge Donohue, in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday, granted a motion allowing the Receiver of Moses, Murphy & Co. $750 for counsel fees for investigating the condition of the firm's affairs.

Ernestina Buckwitz, a German woman, was arrested yesterday for passing counterfeit half-dollar pieces on Frederick Schults, a grocer, of Division street. Commissioner Shields held her in default of $500 bail.

George L. Hamlin, a Bowery character, who was convicted in Part I. of the Court of General Sessions, yesterday, of stabbing a rival named Robert McMaster, of No. 152 Elizabeth street, in a fit of jealousy, was called up for sentence yesterday. Judge Gildersleeve sent him to the Penitentiary for three years.

The will of Mark Davis, a wealthy Southerner, who died in this City a short time ago, was admitted to probate in the Surrogate's Court yesterday. The estate, which is valued at $1,000,000, and consists of real estate situated in Petersburg, Va., and New-Orleans, is left exclusively to his relatives.

Assistant District Attorney Rollins, in Part I. of the Court of General Sessions, yesterday accepted a plea of guilty from Thomas Malone, of No. 42 Chrystie st., who shot and wounded Charles Hochstetter in a quarrel on the 16th inst. Judge Gildersleeve imposed a penalty of one year in the Penitentiary.

The jury in Part I. of the Superior Court yesterday rendered a verdict of $37,424 61 for the plaintiff in the suit of Sheppard Knapp, as Receiver of the Bowling Green Savings Bank, against Walter Roche. This was the second trial of the action. At the first trial the jury found a verdict for the plaintiff for $97,000, but this verdict was set aside by the Court of Appeals.

Joseph Connors, of No. 241 Avenue B, was arrested at an early hour yesterday morning by Patrolman William Kelly, of the Seventeenth Precinct, who detected Connors in the act of forcing an entrance into the provision store of Frederick Kastens, No. 436 East Fourteenth street. He was arraigned in the Essex Market Court and held by Justice Wandell in default of $1,500 bail.

Judge Joseph F. Daly, in the Court of Common Pleas, yesterday dismissed the case of William S. Erwood against Sarah Ann Erwood because of failure on the part of the plaintiff to prosecute. The suit was brought in July, 1875, for an absolute divorce on the ground of the defendant's alleged adultery. In answer the defendant made counter-charges of a similar kind against the plaintiff.

The case of Johann Ludwig Fuchs against Amelia Fuchs was brought before Judge Donohue in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday. The action is brought to declare void a marriage between the parties, the plaintiff alleging that the defendant has a former husband living. It also appears that the defendant is now insane. Judge Donohue granted a motion to have a guardian appointed for her.

Judge Donohue, in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday, granted an order for a return before Judge Gildersleeve to-day, of the proceedings in the case of Charles H. Boylan, who was committed for disorderly conduct by Police Justice Smith recently. Boylan is a married man, and wrote love letters to the daughter of one Isall, and, it is alleged, tried to induce Mrs. Isall's son to leave his home.

Andrew Herberger, a young German lad employed in a brewery on Fifty-fourth street, was charged in Part II. of the Court of General Sessions yesterday with stabbing and seriously wounding another lad, named Adam Fuchs, on June 17. Assistant District Attorney Herring convicted the youth, and on the merciful recommendation of the jury Judge Sutherland sent him to the State Prison for 14 months.

Two youths, named James Reed, of No. 516 West Forty-sixth street, and James Ryan, of No. 424 West Fifty-sixth street, who were detected in the commission of a burglary on the premises of Henry Werner, No. 320 West Fifty-fifth street, on the night of the 22d inst., were convicted by Assistant District Attorney Herring yesterday in Part II. of the Court of General Sessions. Judge Sutherland sent the burglars to the State Prison for five years each.

Nathan L. Lenheim, the Cashier of the banking firm of L. S. Lenheim & Son, of Montrose, Penn., who was charged with presenting a forged promissory note for discount at the Importers' and Traders' Bank, was held for trial in default of $5,000 bail at the Tombs Police Court yesterday. Mr. R. T. Stephens, whose name was signed to the note, and Mr. Stephen Kistler, whose name was indorsed on it, having testified that the signatures were forgeries.

In Part I. of the Court of General Sessions yesterday, Assistant District Attorney Rollins announced that the case of Solomon Jacobs, of Baxter street, against whom eight indictments for larceny and receiving stolen goods had been found, was on the calendar for peremptory trial. He had just received important information in relation to the case, however, and asked for a postponement. The case was accordingly postponed, and Jacobs was released on $2,000 bail.

The complaint in the case of Frank Clark against Marvin R. Clark was dismissed by Judge Joseph F. Daly in the Court of Common Pleas yesterday, on account of the plaintiff's failure to prosecute the action. The suit was brought to recover damages for an alleged assault and battery committed on the plaintiff by the defendant. The latter was a City Marshal, and was at the time of the alleged assault engaged in the service of process in a replevin suit. He claims he was resisted in the performance of his duty by the plaintiff, with force and violence.

Judge Donohue, in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday set aside the judgment by default against the defendant in the suit of John S. Conklin against Herman Cordes. The action is brought to recover $5,000 damages for alleged false imprisonment. Conklin alleges he has been in the mortgage business for the past 15 years, and that the defendant, on false representations, procured his arrest. Cordes charged him with having paid laborers in bogus checks. Conklin was discharged after an examination into his case, and then brought the present suit. He failed to appear on the 19th inst. when the case was called for trial in the Supreme Court.

Henry Lawrence, a young man of good address, was arraigned before Justice Flammer at the Washington Place Police Court, yesterday, charged with having attempted to blackmail Laura Barmore, alias "Big Laura," by the proprietress of a house of ill-fame in Greene street. It was asserted by the complainant that Lawrence entered her house on Monday and demanded $10 from her. She refused to comply with this request, and he then said that he was connected with the Chicago Sporting Gazette, and that he would expose her in that paper and injure her business unless she gave him the money. Mrs. Barmore thereupon called in a policeman and caused the arrest of this enterprising young man. The accused denied the charge and was committed for trial in default of $1,000 bail.

A HUSBAND'S CRUELTY.

A slender, delicate woman, whose head was almost completely enveloped in blood-smeared bandages, appeared at the Essex Market Police Court yesterday, where she preferred a charge of brutal assault against her husband, Edward Foley, of No. 127 Cherry street. While reciting the circumstances of the wrongs to Justice Wandell, the poor creature said that on the previous night Foley, a fellow of Herculean frame, struck her repeatedly with his fists and kicked her on the head with his heavy cow-hide boots. Officer Fitzgerald, of the Seventh Precinct, who arrested the brute, testified that Foley had served a term of imprisonment for depositing his 7 year old child on a hot stove. The fellow was committed to the workhouse for six months, in default of $1,000 bail for his good behavior.

THE CUSTODY OF TWO CHILDREN.

Thomas Healy died in this City recently leaving two children. By his will he appointed Peter Lynch and John Hennessy as guardians for the children. It appears that Mr. Healy's wife had been sent to the lunatic asylum, but after her husband's death she was discharged. She brought a petition through her brother, Hugh F. Dolan, to Judge Donohue, in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday, seeking to have the children restored to her care and custody. The guardians simply set up the facts and asked for a decision from the court. Judge Donohue directed the children to be given over to Mrs. Healy, subject, however, to the right on the part of the testamentary guardians to move for a transfer of the children's custody in case the mother's guardianship proves not to be for the benefit of the children.

TWO CLAIMANTS FOR A LITTLE GIRL.

William Sinclair, the Referee, has finished the taking of testimony in the matter of Ada Teresa McNamara. Ada is a bright-looking child, about 12 years of age. Her aunt and godmother, Margaret O'Brien, seeks to obtain the custody of the little girl. Miss O'Brien claims her authority to the possession of the child through a power of attorney from the latter's father, Thomas McNamara, who is now in San Francisco. The child is kept by Mrs. Sarah V. Kelly, who claims her from authority given by both the mother and father of the girl. According to Mrs. Kelly's testimony, she made the child's acquaintance in 1868. Mrs. Kelly was at the time the Secretary of the aid society connected with St. James' Roman Catholic Church, in Brooklyn. While in the basement of the church attending to her duties she was called on by Mrs. McNamara, the mother of the girl. She called herself Mrs. Wells, and carried the child with her. Mrs. McNamara was then almost starved, and was also intoxicated. The child was suffering from hunger. Mrs. McNamara wanted aid, but Mrs. Kelly, seeing her condition, seated her in one corner of the room and told her she should become sober. The child's wants were attended to. Mrs. McNamara told sadness where she was drifting, and stumbered for five hours. When she awoke it was night and the snow was falling, and she begged permission to stay in the place all night. The day after Mrs. McNamara came to Mrs. Kelly's house and remained there up to the time of her death, which occurred about two years ago. Mrs. McNamara asked Mrs. Kelly to adopt the child, and this request was acceded to. Mrs. Kelly says she brought up the little girl as one of her own children, and sends her to school. In March, 1871, the father sent Mrs. McNamara a power of attorney, entitling her to the child's custody. The father has also sent remittances, to the amount of about $300 in all, to aid Mrs. Kelly in taking care of the little girl, to whom Mrs. Kelly has become greatly attached. The testimony in the case will be heard by Judge Donohue, in Supreme Court, Chambers, to-day.

FOUR BURGLARS ARRESTED.

At the Essex Market Police Court yesterday, Justice Wandell presiding, William Lawson, James Barry, Charles Sloane, and John Davney, four young men of decidedly forbidding aspect, were arraigned on the charge of committing a burglary on the premises of Julius Lowenstein, No. 436 East Houston street, on Monday morning. The affidavit of the complainant alleged that about 1 A. M. he was awakened by a noise in his sleeping-room, and, on looking up, he saw a man industriously ransacking a bureau. The burglar, seeing that he was detected, jumped out of a rear window, and escaped with a gold watch and chain valued at $100; clothing valued at $60, and some money. The Police of the Eleventh Precinct, having been informed of the burglary, investigated the circumstances, and succeeded in finding some of the stolen property on the persons of the men who were arrested, three of whom were found in the room of Barry in the same house in which the burglary was committed. The man Sloane was identified by Mr. and Mrs. Lowenstein as the burglar who disturbed their slumbers. The prisoners were held in default of $3,000 bail each to answer at the General Sessions.

THE LIGHTBODY ESTATE.

The complaint in the case of George M. Lightbody against David W. Bruce and others was filed in the County Clerk's office yesterday. The action is in form for the partition of the estate of John F. Lightbody, deceased, which comprises a large amount of real estate. The plaintiff, however, seeks to set aside the conveyance of the property at No. 24 Beekman street, and three lots on the south side of Thirty-third street, near Eleventh avenue, and also to set aside the will of John F. Lightbody. The conveyance of the property was made by the latter to Mr. Bruce, and by Bruce conveyed to the wife of John F. Lightbody, and conveyed by her to Mrs. Louisa Leith. All these transfers were made on March 10, 1875. The plaintiff charges that the deceased was weakened in intellect at the time of making his will and when he made the transfers.

DECISIONS.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS.

By Judge Donohue.

Graf vs. Field.—Memorandum.

Bell vs. McCann.—Denied without costs.

Ferris vs. Comerford.—Proof of service insufficient.

Murphy vs. Moses.—I think the counsel should have $750.

Conklin vs. Cordes.—Default opened on payment of $25, costs of the inquest to be costs in the cause.

Granted.—Fuchs vs. Fuchs; Hart vs. Levi; The Mutual Life Insurance Company vs. The Third Avenue Savings Bank; Langham vs. Myers; Matter of the Beekman Fire Insurance Company, and Matter of the United States Ticket Printing Company.

Morth vs. Marsh.—Motion to confirm the report of Referee granted; while the defendant can support a family other than his own he cannot complain of the amount awarded to his own wife and family.

Matter of Weinberg.—In this matter it seems to me the facts to sustain the grant are not out. It is hardly worth while to take time up in going over what is fraud, but this is the result. As to the commencement of the suit, the defendant has appeared in the action; that question is not before me. Defendant committed.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

By Judge Van Vorst.

Geery et al. vs. Webster.—Judgment for plaintiff on the demurrer, with leave to defendant to answer on terms. Opinion.

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

By Judge Speir.

Schreyer vs. Dittinger.—Order overruling demurrer.

Brennan, &c., vs. Ashe et al.—Order for judgment.

Sullivan vs. Sullivan.—Order to refer back to Referee for further Com. &c.

Quigley vs. Hull.—Order discontinuing action granted.

Masterson vs. Brady.—Ordered on short calendar for the third Friday of February.

By Judge Sanford.

Clark vs. Bisanger.—Petition granted. Memorandum.

Evans vs. Evans.—Order discontinuing action granted.

McBride vs. The Second Avenue Railroad Company.—Order discontinuing action granted.

MARINE COURT—CHAMBERS.

By Judge McAdam.

Kohler vs. Cumisky.—Defendant will be committed unless within five days he pays $10 costs and submits to an examination under the original order on the 7th day of February, 1877, at 10 A. M., as per opinion filed.

Kruger vs. Sunnicon.—Judgment for defendant. Opinion.

Motions Granted.—Bank of the Metropolis vs. Cohen; Hirsch vs. Howard; Levy vs. Stumne; Claflin vs. Weckler; Claflin vs. Goldsmith; Claflin vs. Pyke; Rising vs. Chase; Cruzins vs. Gausch; Gavin vs. Soomes.

Clark vs. Atlas Steam-ship Company.—Referred to F. H. Ward, Esq.

Flaacki vs. Coffey.—James McNulty, Esq., appointed Receiver.

Lewis vs. Ehrlich.—Attachment allowed bailable in $200.

Radde vs. Schwab.—Motion denied.

Hermance vs. Beatty.—Commission ordered.

Rogers vs. Cuzzins.—Attachment vacated.

Hoffman vs. Robbins.—Referred to J. J. Dean, Esq.

Croker vs. Goetzel.—Defaults.

Kilgour vs. Algie.—The proceedings herein must be substituted before the motion can be decided.

Godschalk vs. Lowenstein.—Complaint dismissed.

Widocki vs. Metropolitan Insurance Company.—Substitution of attorneys will be ordered herein.

By Justice Sinnott.

Solomon vs. Perry.—Judgment for the plaintiff on the demurrer, with liberty to answer in 10 days on payments of costs.

Canada vs. Carr.—Let there be judgment for the amount actually due the plaintiff upon the demand to secure which he sues if the same be delivered, with costs.

Lee vs Hogan.—Judgment for the plaintiff on the demurrer, with costs.

Orders Signed.—Ryan vs. Safeguard Insurance Company; Ryan vs. Manhattan Insurance Company.

COURT CALENDARS—THIS DAY.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS.

Held by Donohue, J.

Nos.	Nos.
69—Matter of Whittlesey.	289—Morris vs. The Fleetwood Association.
78—Bainbridge vs. Berul	290—Gilroy vs. Neuberg.
92—The Soc. for the Ref. of Juv. Delinquents vs. Meier.	291—Leet vs. The Equitable Life Ins. Co.
224—Shayce vs. Colles.	293—Cain vs. Murphy.
245—Zeis vs. The German Press Society.	297—Pratt, &c. vs. Ross; two motions.
251—Brown vs. Raymond.	300—Matter of Benson.
263—The Artic Fire Ins. Co. vs. Seley.	306—Schrady vs. Schuyler.
278—Miller vs. Miller.	308—The First Nat. Bank of Cooperstown vs. Beals.
279—Monheimer vs. The Mayor, &c.

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

Held by Speir, J.

No day calendar.

SUPREME COURT—CIRCUIT—PART III.

Held by Barrett, J.

Case on.—No. 1030—Prouty vs. The Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway Co. No day calendar.

MARINE COURT—TRIAL TERM—PART II.

Held by Goepp, J.

Nos.	Nos.
1410—Cromien vs. Blossom et al.	5877—Lampert vs. Malloy et al.
7272—Ringler et al. versus	5878—Browning versus Weniger.
9018—Richardsen et al. vs. Dissy.	5886—Kernochen et al. vs. Hokown.
5864—Wheeler, Jr., versus	5883—Fisher vs. Flex.
5866—Bayland vs. Cohen.	5884—Schoeney vs. Freund
5867—Simonson et al. vs. Kotertact.	5885—Mills vs. Blont.
5874—Daly vs. Ancil.	5886—Sieficker vs. Kets.
	5887—Michel vs. Buehl.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS—PART I.

Held by Gildersleeve, J.

Johanna White, two cases, abortion.	John Ryan, grand larceny
John W. Ford, felonious assault and battery.	Lizzie Hennessey, grand larceny.
Charles Lang, burglary.	Edward Sullivan, grand larceny.
William Parker, burglary.	Frank Smith and Henry Thompson, grand larceny.
Eugene Short and Joseph Dovle, burglary.	Henry Downs, grand larceny.
Henry Mitchell, grand larceny.	William McAdami, grand larceny.
Fritz Marquard, grand larceny.	Mary Feeney, receiving stolen goods.
George Andrews, grand larceny.	Andrew Wallen.
Michael Slattery, grand larceny.	Grannon, and James Kearney, petit larceny.
Henry Johnson, grand larceny.	Barney Curtis, disorderly house.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS—PART II.

Held by Sutherland, J.

William Kone and Patrick McGowen, robbery.	George Erskine, grand larceny.
James Boylan, felonious assault and battery.	Mary Cook and Julia Fletcher, grand larceny.
Mallard Picard, felonious assault and battery.	Christopher Fox, obscene literature.
Michael McCabe, burglary.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH.

At the meeting of the Board of Health yesterday, the Trustees of the Shiloh Presbyterian Church were granted permission to remove the bodies interred in the vaults beneath the old church at the corner of Marion and Prince streets for reinterment at the Maple Grove Cemetery. Fifteen physicians were reported for having violated the Sanitary Code, in failing to report cases of contagious diseases attended by them before death. The Attorney was directed to inform these physicians that unless satisfactory excuses are given suits will be commenced against them to recover the legal penalty.

The following is a synopsis of the weekly report of Dr. John T Nagle, Deputy Register of Records: 441 deaths were reported to have occurred in this City during the week ending Saturday, Jan. 27, which was an increase of 25 as compared with the number reported the preceding week, and 90 less than were reported during the corresponding week of 1876. The actual mortality for the week ending Jan. 20 was 410, which is 148.2 less than the number that occurred during the corresponding weeks of the past five years, and represents an annual death-rate of 19.26 per 1,000 persons living, the population estimated at 1,070,276.

FINANCIAL AFFAIRS.

TUESDAY, Jan. 30—P. M.

The depression in the coal shares again to-day formed the prominent feature in the dealings on the Stock Exchange and the prices of those securities recorded a still further and heavy decline, while the remainder of the list exhibited firmness. The reiterated adverse rumors in regard to the financial condition of some of the coal companies, though merely gossip and traceable to no reliable source, still unquestionably exercise an injurious influence, and combined with the large sales on the part of holders, account for the continued weakness of these stocks.

The total transactions reached 153,355 shares, which embraced 39,960 Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, 29,000 Western Union, 27,200 Lake Shore, 21,675 New-Jersey Central, 14,100 Milwaukee and St. Paul, 4,550 Illinois Central, 4,500 Michigan Central, and 2,725 Delaware and Hudson Canal.

Among the coal stocks Delaware and Hudson Canal declined from 65 to 61 regular, and to 60, seller 30, with final sales at 61⅛ regular. Delaware, Lackawanna and Western fell off from 72⅜ to 69⅜, and New-Jersey Central from 27 to 24⅜. The former subsequently recovered to 70⅛, and the latter to 25⅝, and closed at 70 and 25¼ respectively. Illinois Central dropped 3 ₱ cent. and closed at 52, the lowest point of the day. The St. Paul shares were firmer than of late, and advanced from 17⅛ to 18⅛ for the common, and from 46¼ to 47⅞ for the preferred. The fluctuations in the remainder of the list were confined within a radius of ¼@¾ ₱ cent. Western Union ranged between 75⅜ and 76⅜, and closed at 76. New-York Central was steady on small transactions at 102@102¼. Lake Shore fell off from 55⅜ to 55, rose to 55⅜, and closed at 55⅛. Michigan Central declined from 48 to 47¾, rose to 48¼, fell off to 47⅝, and closed at 48. Union Pacific advanced from 64½ to 65⅛, fell off to 64⅜, and rallied to 64⅝. Rock Island ranged between 101⅜ and 102 and North-western preferred between 53¾ and 56⅛. Express shares were steady, except for United States, which continued weak, declining from 51 to 50. American sold at 57.

There was no change of importance in money to-day. The market is well supplied with loanable funds, while the demand continues comparatively limited, both for trade and speculative purposes. The ruling rates were 3 to 5 ₱ cent. on Government bonds and ordinary Stock Exchange collaterals. Prime mercantile paper sold at 4½ to 5½ ₱ cent. The new national bank circulation issued during the month was $1,337,000, for which the retirement of $1,070,000 legal tenders has been ordered. The national bank notes received at Washington for redemption to-day amounted to $540,000. The following were the rates of exchange on New-York at the under-mentioned cities: Savannah, buying, ⅛ off, selling, ⅛, premium; Charleston, easier, ¼ to par; St. Louis, 50 to 75 premium; Cincinnati steady, buying par, selling 1-10 premium; New-Orleans, commercial 1-16 discount, bank par; Chicago, 60 premium.

The foreign advices reported no important change in values. At London, British Consols for both money and the account closed at 95 15-16, being a decline of 1-16 ₱ cent. from yesterday's final quotation. United States 1865s closed at 105⅜@105½, 1867s at 109⅜ @ 110, 10-40s at 110½, and new 5s at 107⅜. Erie common closed at 9⅜ and the preferred at 21. This was ticket day, and to-morrow will be fortnightly settling day in London. French Rentes advanced from 107f. 87½c. to 108f. At Frankfort, United States new 5s were quoted at 103⅜. The Bank of England lost £120,000 on balance to-day. Bar silver sold in the London market at 57¾d. ₱ ounce.

The sterling exchange market was firm, with sales at $4 83¾ @$4 84 for bankers' sixty day bills, and at $4 85@$4 85½ for sight. The demand was fairly active and the supply of bills small.

The gold speculation was weak, with the sales alternately at 105⅜ and 105½. The former was the opening and closing quotation. On gold loans the rates for carrying were 4½, 4, 5, and 3½ ₱ cent.

Government bonds were weak in the early dealings, and prices generally declined ⅛@¼ per cent., the latter in 1868s and currency 6s. In the afternoon there was an improved demand, under which the market recovered and closed firm. Coupon 1867s advanced from 113⅛ to 113¼, and were in good request, at the higher price, at the close. Railroad bonds were higher, as a rule, New-Jersey Centrals having been the only marked exception, recording a decline of 1@1⅛ per cent. Firsts sold down to 107½, First Consolidated to 75½, and Convertibles to 72. The two last named closed at 75¾ to 79, and 72¾ to 75, respectively. Lehigh and Wilkesbarre Consolidated were quoted at 55 bid and 60 asked. Milwaukee and St. Paul, La Crosse Division, advanced from 96 to 97, and do. Consolidated Sinking Funds from 79⅜ to 79¾. Toledo and Wabash Firsts and Seconds were each ½ ₱ cent. lower, the former selling down to 105 and the latter to 75; do. Consolidated Convertibles rose from 55 to 56. New-York Central coupon Firsts sold at 117¾, and Fort Wayne Firsts at 119, the latter being an advance of 1 ₱ cent. Chicago and North-western issues were firmer, Sinking Funds selling at 111, Consolidated at 104¼, and do. gold coupons at 92¼. Hanover and St. Joseph Convertibles advanced to 86. C. C. and I. C. Firsts sold at 35@35½. State bonds were quiet and firm. Missouris sold at 104¾ for Long 6s, and 105½ for Funded of 1894-5. Georgia 7s, new, brought 105½. Louisiana Consols advanced to 60. Tennessee old sold at 43¼. District of Columbia 3.65s advanced to 74.

The exports of produce from the port of New-York for the week ending this date were $5,535,160, against $5,098,396 for the corresponding week in 1875, and $5,679,073 in 1874. The total exports of produce since Jan. 1, this year, were $29,348,662, against $24,940,937 for the corresponding period in 1875, and $22,423,475 in 1874.

UNITED STATES TREASURY, } NEW-YORK, Jan. 30, 1877. }

Gold receipts	$665,633 19
Gold payments	161,465 62
Gold balance	68,674,312 15
Currency receipts	945,486 00
Currency payments	514,289 84
Currency balance	43,479,690 90
Customs	562,000 00

CLOSING QUOTATIONS—JAN. 30.

	Monday.	Tuesday.
American gold	105⅝	105⅝
United States 5s. 1881. coup	111¾	111¾
United States 5-20s. 1867. coup	113½	113⅝
Bills on London	$4 83¾@4 84	$4 83¾@4 84
New-York Central	102	102½
Rock Island	101⅞	102
Pacific Mail	24¾	24⅞
Milwaukee and St. Paul	17⅜	18½
Milwaukee and St. Paul Pref	46½	47⅜
Lake Shore	55¼	55⅜
Chicago and North-western	35	35
Chicago and North-western Pref	56¼	56⅛
Cash items	75¾	76
Union Pacific	64	64⅝
Delaware, Lack. and Western	72⅝	73
New-Jersey Central	27¼	25¼
Delaware and Hudson Canal	63⅜	61½
Erie	9⅛	9⅜
Ohio and Mississippi	6¾	7
Harlem	140¾	140
Hannibal and St. Joseph	13	13
Hannibal and St. Joseph Pref	26½	26½
Michigan Central	47¾	48
Illinois Central	55¼	52

The extreme range of prices in stocks and the number of shares sold are as follows:

	Highest.	Lowest.	No. of shares.
New-York Central	102¼	102	1,330
Erie	9⅜	9¼	400
Lake Shore	55⅝	55	27,200
Wabash	6¾	6½	500
North-western Preferred	56⅛	55¾	900
Rock Island	102	101⅜	1,800
Mil. & St. Paul	18½	17⅛	1,100
Mil. & St. Paul Pref	47⅞	46¼	3,000
Del., Lack. & Western	73⅜	69⅜	39,960
New-Jersey Central	27	24⅜	21,675
Delaware & Hudson Canal	65	61	2,725
Morris & Essex	91⅝	91⅝	255
Michigan Central	48¼	47⅝	4,500
Illinois Central	53½	51¾	4,550
Union Pacific	65⅛	64⅜	500
C., C., C. & I.	34	34	100
Ohio & Mississippi	7	7	950
Western Union	76⅜	75⅜	29,000
Pacific Mail	24⅞	24⅞	600
Amer. Merc Union Express	57	57	200
United States Express	51	50	750
Total sales			153,355

The following table shows the half-hourly fluctuations in the Gold market to-day:

10:00 A. M.	105⅝	1:00 P. M.	105½
10:30 A. M.	105⅝	1:30 P. M.	105⅝
11:00 A. M.	105½	2:00 P. M.	105½
11:30 A. M.	105½	2:30 P. M.	105⅝
12:00 M.	105½	3:00 P. M.	105⅝
12:30 P. M.	105⅝

The following were the closing quotations of Government bonds:

	Bid.	Asked.
United States currency 6s	123	123½
United States 6s, 1881, registered	113⅜	113⅝
United States 6s, 1881, coupons	113⅜	114
United States 5-20s. 1865, registered	108¼	108½
United States 5-20s. 1865, coupons	108¼	108½
United States 5-20s. 1865, new, reg	110¼	110½
United States 5-20s. 1865, new, coup	110¼	110½
United States 5-20s. 1867, registered	113⅜	113⅝
United States 5-20s. 1867, coupons	113¼	113½
United States 5-20s. 1868, registered	116½	117
United States 5-20s. 1868, coupons	116⅞	116⅞
United States 10-40s, registered	113⅝	113⅞
United States 10-40s, coupons	113⅞	114⅛
United States 5s, 1881, registered	110⅜	110⅝
United States 5s, 1881, coupons	111⅜	111⅞
United States 4½s, 1891, registered	107½	107⅝

The Sub-Treasurer disbursed in gold coin $108,000 for interest, $211,000 for called bonds, and $8,600 silver coin in exchange for fractional currency.

The following were the gold clearings by the National Bank of the State of New-York to-day:

Gold cleared	$40,459,000
Gold balances	2,282,965
Currency balances	2,468,655

The following is the Clearing-house statement:

Currency exchanges	$74,161,146
Currency balances	3,085,432
Gold exchanges	6,317,494
Gold balances	1,053,446

The following were the bids for the various State securities:

Alabama 5s, '86	33	N. Y. Reg. B. L	101¼
Alabama 8s, '86	33	N. C. 6s, Con. of J. '81	101¼
Alabama 8s, '92	17	N. Y. 6s, G. L'n, '91	122
Alabama 8s, '93	17	N. Y. 6s, G. L'n, '93	122
Ark. 6s, funded	29	N. C. 6s, old, J. & J	20
Ark. 7s, L. R. & F. S. 1s	10	N. C. 6s, A. & O	20
Ark. 7s, Mem. & L. R.	10	N. C. 6s, N. C. R. J. & F	66
Ark. 7s, L. R. & F. N. O.	10	N. C. 6s, N. C. R. A. & O.	65
Ark. 7s, M. O. & Mem.	10	N. C. 6s, do. do. con'd	45½
Ark. 7s, Ark. Cen. R.	10	N. C. 6s, do. do. off A. & O.	46
Connecticut 6s	110	N. C. 6s, Fd'g Act '66	14½
Georgia 6s	98½	N. C. 6s, Fd'g Act '68	13¾
Ga. 7s, new bonds	105½	N. C. new bds. J. & J	10¼
Georgia 7s, gold bds	105½	N. C. new bds., A. & O	10
Illinois coup. 6s, '79	102½	N. C. S. T. class 1	2½
Illinois War Loan	102½	N. C. S. T. class 2	2
Kentucky 6s	103	N. C. S. T. class 3	2
Louisiana 6s	39	Ohio 6s, '81	104
Louisiana 6s, n. b	39	Ohio 6s, '86	111
La. 6s, new Fl. Deb	39	Ohio 6s, Ref. Loan 6s	110
La. 6s, Penitentiary	39	S. C. 6s	36
La. 6s, Levee bonds	39	S. C. 6s, J. & J	36
La. 6s, Levee bonds	39	S. C. 6s, A. & O	36
La. 6s, L. Bs. of '75	39	S. C. 6s, Fg Act, '66	36
La. 7s, Consolidated	50	S. C. 6s, Con. F. bs	22
Michigan 6s, '78-'79	108	Tennessee 6s, old	43¼
Michigan 6s, '83	104½	Tenn. 6s, n. b	42½
Michigan 7s, '90	112	Virginia 6s, n. bds. '66	30
Mo. 6s, due in '77	100⅜	Virginia 6s, n. bds. '67	30
Mo. 6s, due in '78	100½	Va. 6s, Con. Bonds	78¾
Long 6s, '82 to '90	104⅝	Virginia 6s, ex matu'o	66⅝
Fund. due '81-'91	105¼	Virginia 6s, def. bds	7½
Asylum Unl., due '92	104½	Virginia 6s, def. bds	7½
H. & St. Jo., due '86	105	Dis. of C. 3.65s, 1924	73¼
H. & St. J., due '87	105	Dis. of C. Reg	73

And the following for railway mortgages:

Alb. & Sus. 1st bds	109¾	M. S. & N. I. S. F. 7 ₱ ct	109¾
B. H. & Erie G'd. 1	14	Clev. & Tol. new bs	106½
B., C. R. & M. 1st 7s, g.	39	Clev., P. & A., old bs	104¼
Chic. & Al. Sink. F	100	Clev., P. & A., new bs	107½
Chic. & Alton 1st	114	Buf. & Erie new bds	107
Chic. & Alt. Income	104½	B. & S. L. 7s	104
La. Mo. 1st, gtd	85	Chic. & Mich. L. 7s	106½
St. L. & J. C. Chic. 1st	105½	D. & M. 1st 7s	106
C., B. & Q., 8 ₱ ct., 1st	111½	L. S. Div. bds	106½
C., B. & Q. Con. 7s	110	L. S. Cons. C. 1st	106
C. R. I. & P. 1st 7s	103	L. S. Cons. R. 1st	106
C. R. I. & P. S. F. 1.6s, '95	101	Mich. C. Con. 7s, 1902	103¼
C. R. of N. J. 1st, n. bds	107	Mich. C. 1st 8s, '82	108
C. R. of N. J. Con. 7s	75¾	Mich. C. 1st 8s, '83	108
C. R. of N. J. 1st Conv.	72½	N. Y. Cen. 6s, '87	105
L. & W. B. Con. G'd.	55	N. Y. Cen. 6s, R. E.	102
M. & S. P. 2d, 7-10 Pd.	99	N. Y. Cen. 6s, Sub.	102
M. & S. P. 1st, Tr. G. Rd.	94	N. Y. C. & Hud. 1st, C.	117¼
M. & S. P. 1st, La C. D.	95¾	Harlem 1st 7s, C.	120
M. & S. P. 1st, La C. Bds	85	Harlem 1st 7s, R.	119½
M. & St. P. 1st C. & M.	95	N. Missouri 1st	93½
M. & St. P. Con. S. F.	78⅝	Ohio & M. Con. S. F.	85½
M. & S. P. 2d	90	Ohio & Miss. Cons	85¾
Chic. & N. W. S. F.	110½	Ohio & M. 2d, Cons	50
C. & N. W. Int. bds	104	Cen. Pac. Gold bds	108
C. & N. W. Con. bds	103½	Cen. P., San J. B'ch 9½
C. & N. W. Ext. bds	100	C. P. State Aid bds	101
C. & N. W. C. G. bds	92	Cen. Pac. L. G. bs	92½
C. & N. W. R. G. bds	92	West. Pacific bs	101
Galena & Chic. Ext	109¼	Union Pac. 1st	103⅜
Penin. 1st Con	104	Union Pac. S. F	96½
Chicago & Mil. 1st	105	Pac. R. of Mo. 1st	100¼
Winona & St. P. 1st	102	Pac. R. of Mo. 2d	89½
C. C. C. & I. 1st 7s	S. F. 1903	P., Ft. W. & Chic. 1st	118
Del., L. & W. 2d	108	P., Ft. W. & C. 3d	105
Del., L. & W. 7s, C.	100½	Clev. & P. Con. S. F.	110½
Mor. & Essex 1st	116	Clev. & P. 4th. S. F.	104½
Mor. & Essex 2d	109¼	Col., Chic. & Ind. 1st	35
M. & E. 7s, of 1871	101¾	Col., Chic. & Ind. 2d	7½
M. & E. 1st, C. G	119	Ft. L. & Wa. 1st	103¼
Erie 1st Extended	109⅞	Alton & T. H. 1st	105
Erie 3d. 7s. '83	104½	Alt. & T. H. 2d Inc.	69½
Erie 4th 7s, '

The New York Times.

NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, JAN. 31, 1877.

AMUSEMENTS THIS EVENING.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—The Star of the North. (English Opera)—Miss C. L. Kellogg, Mrs. Rosewald, Mr. Maas, Mr. Conly.

PARK THEATRE.—Our Boarding House—Mr. Stuart Robson, Mr. W. H. Crane, Mrs. A. F. Baker, Miss Maude Harrison.

WALLACK'S THEATRE.—All for Her—Mr. Lester Wallack, Mr. S. Mackaye, Miss Ada Dyas.

FIFTH AVENUE THEATRE.—Lemons; or, Wedlock for Seven—Mr. C. F. Coghlan, Miss F. Davenport.

UNION SQUARE THEATRE.—Miss Multon—Miss Clara Morris, Mr. James O'Neil, Mr. J. H. Stoddart.

EAGLE THEATRE.—La Vie Parisienne, (Opera Bouffe)—Mlle. Marie Aimée.

NIBLO'S GARDEN.—Around the World in Eighty Days (spectacular)—Kiralfy Brothers.

OLYMPIC THEATRE—The Big Bonanza.

BROADWAY THEATRE.—Uncle Tom's Cabin—Mrs. G. C. Howard and Georgia Jubilee Singers.

NEW-YORK AQUARIUM.—Rare and Curious Fish and Mammalia, Statuary, &c.—Day and evening.

HELLER'S WONDER THEATRE.—Prestidigitation, Music and Humor.—Mr. Robert Heller, Miss Heller.

SAN FRANCISCO MINSTRELS.—Minstrelsy, Farces and Negro Comicalities.

GILMORE'S GARDEN.—Equestrian Games and Field Sports.

GRAND OPERA-HOUSE.—Man and Wife.

NATIONAL ACADEMY OF DESIGN.—Exhibition of Water Colors. Day and evening.

CHICKERING HALL.—Music Recital by Mr. and Mrs. C. Feininger.

STEINWAY HALL.—Concert by the Mozart Club.

FOURTEENTH STREET ARMORY.—Promenade Concert and Reception by the Twenty-second Regiment.

THE NEW-YORK TIMES.

The New-York Times is the best family paper published; it contains the latest news and correspondence. It is free from all objectionable advertisements and reports, and may be safely admitted to every domestic circle. The disgraceful announcements of quacks and medical pretenders, which pollute so many newspapers of the day, are not admitted into the columns of The Times on any terms.

Terms, cash in advance.

TERMS TO MAIL SUBSCRIBERS.

Postage will be prepaid by the Publishers on all Editions of The Times sent to Subscribers in the United States.

The Daily Times, per annum, including the Sunday Edition	$12 00
The Daily Times, per annum, exclusive of the Sunday Edition	10 00
The Sunday Edition, per annum	2 00
The Semi-Weekly Times, per annum	3 00
The Weekly Times, per annum	1 20

These prices are invariable. We have no traveling agents. Remit in drafts on New-York or Post Office Money Orders, if possible, and where neither of these can be procured send the money in a registered letter.

Address THE NEW-YORK TIMES, New-York City

NOTICE.

We cannot notice anonymous communications. In all cases we require the writer's name and address, not for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

We cannot, under any circumstances, return rejected communications, nor can we undertake to preserve manuscripts.

The Electoral Commission appears to be complete, though the name of the fifth Judge selected has not yet been officially announced. The two houses will meet in joint convention at 1 o'clock to-morrow, and the President of the Senate will proceed to open and hand to tellers appointed on the part of the Senate and the House "all the certificates and papers purporting to be certificates of Electoral votes." The first objection made will be to the vote of Alabama, but as there is but one set of returns from that State, and as the concurrent vote of both houses is needed to sustain any objection, no time will be lost in reaching a decision on that question. The first lengthened interruption to the proceedings of the two houses will take place when the competing returns from Florida are presented. Under the law, "no votes or papers from any other State shall be acted upon until the objections previously made to the votes or papers from any State shall have been finally disposed of." An adjournment must, therefore, take place till the Counting Commission has arrived at a decision in regard to the Florida returns, and has, thereby, practically determined the principles by which it will be guided in dealing with the returns from South Carolina and Louisiana.

It is obvious that on the decision of the question whether or not the Commission shall go behind the returns presented by duly-constituted State Boards depends the issue of the Presidential controversy. The vital importance of that point has been frequently pointed out in these columns, and it will become sufficiently apparent as soon as the Commission settles down to its work. Of course, questions will be raised as to the constitutional right of State Canvassers to act in any but a purely ministerial capacity in dealing with the votes for Presidential Electors, but from the anxiety of the Democrats to be ready to submit to the Commission evidence touching questions of fact in regard to the election in Louisiana and elsewhere, it does not appear that any great hopes are entertained of the success of legal objections to the jurisdiction of State officers. If the decisions of these boards must be accepted as conclusive of the validity of returns from the disputed States, the inauguration of Hayes must follow as a matter of course. If the Commission decide that it must go behind the returns, the scope of inquiry becomes so far widened that a decision by the 3d of March becomes impossible. In that case, we shall be confronted with the necessity of a new election.

We trust that the rumor that the Grand Jury is about to take definite action in regard to the officers of the Security Life Insurance Company may turn out to be true. Recent revelations in regard to the management of that and other bankrupt companies have convinced the public that there can be no hope of improved management of such public trusts until some of those responsible for abusing them are sent to State Prison. It is in the interest of all sound insurance business, no less than in that of public morality, that a well defined liability to punishment should be brought home in the case of men who willfully falsify accounts and sustain by perjury and forgery statements intended to deceive. Unless the law can be vindicated in dealing with the scandalous frauds which have lately come to light, public confidence in the efficacy of American life assurance as a provision for widows and orphans will receive a blow from which it can hardly recover in this generation.

The report of Mr. Fackler, the actuary employed by the New-Jersey Commissioner to investigate the affairs of the New-Jersey Mutual, is conclusive both as to the insolvency of that company and the scandalous manner in which its business has been managed. The statement, bad as it is, on one or two points appears to be strained in favor of the company. The apparent deficit is set down at $421,500; the real deficit, we are confident, will be much larger. The course pursued by the officers of the company in regard to the assets—their failure to prove the ownership of coupon bonds produced, or to submit for examination the mortgages which the company is supposed to hold—cannot be interpreted otherwise than as a confession of trickery. Not less discreditable seems to have been the conduct of the same officers when required to produce books and documents. Their transfer to New-York, and the fact that by this manœuvre the inquiry under New-Jersey law was to some extent balked, form a queer commentary upon the crude nature of our inter-State relations in the matter of life insurance. The company inherited some of its features, as well as some of its officers, from the Continental, and the result is seen in forms of policies that are irregular and unsatisfactory. Loose management is still further seen in the reinsurance of Continental policy-holders without medical examination, and in the issue to Directors of policies under circumstances which are, to say the least, suspicious. The report, although incomplete, reveals enough to place the New-Jersey Mutual in the worst rank of life insurance frauds.

The Council of Political Reform has a more practical idea of the demands of the tax-payers than some of its coadjutors in the field of municipal progress. It evidently devotes its attention and its energies to the furtherance of measures which promise some substantial relief to the Treasury, and which tend, however gradually, to lift the City out of the rut of jobbery and extravagance into which it has been fixed by long years of corruption and neglect. The mode of action indicated at last night's meeting of the Council is an eminently sound and sensible one, and a steadfast perseverance in such a course cannot fail to be of great benefit to the interests of the City.

The legislative session develops the usual crop of bills for the "relief" of property-owners who have failed to pay their assessments within the period prescribed by law. The obvious objection to all such schemes is that it is impossible to relieve one part of the community of their legal liabilities unless at the expense of the other part. Certain property-owners have made considerable sacrifices in order to pay their dues to the City; certain others have either not made the attempt or have found it beyond their powers to meet their liabilities. Why should the people who have not paid be placed in a more advantageous position than those who have? The simple meaning of all such bills is that the City should carry speculative purchases for needy property-owners till a turn of the market enables them to realize. Property sold for unpaid assessments can be redeemed within a certain period by the payment of the legal penalties to the purchaser, and however equitable may appear to be the proposal to charge delinquent property-owners with the legal rate of interest on arrears of assessments, it is merely an attempt to shift on the general body of tax-payers burdens which belong to private individuals.

THE PLAN IN OPERATION.

The abstract idea of the Electoral Commission, propounded by its friends, looks very pretty. We are asked to applaud it as the product of influences and qualities so far removed from the vulgar realities of partisan strife as to be worthy of profound admiration. Patriotic devotion to duty, an unworldly sacrifice of selfish ambition on the shrine of a nation's love, emancipation from the bonds of party in order that the Republic may be saved from perils that threaten its existence—these, we are told, are the prime operating causes of the plan, as well as the guarantees of its complete success. It is a "wise and constitutional" plan, the President says; and the message which conveys the opinion is a "wise message," according to Mr. Conkling. If self-sufficiency on the part of the authors of the plan or, unstinted compliments on the part of its friends, could insure its popularity and success, we might even now rank it with the greatest efforts of statesmanship.

But the plan is not a mere piece of legislative workmanship. It has been constructed to meet an emergency, or what the advocates of certain views choose so to consider. As its practical value, therefore, remains to be tested, the better course will be to withhold eulogies until we know that they are deserved. The time to applaud the commission will come when it has finished its work satisfactorily to both of the political parties, and to the non-partisan public, and not before. It will not be enough to be assured by the constructors of the scheme that it has worked like a charm; it must reconcile the defeated party to defeat, or it will be, to a certain extent, a failure. The objection to the method prescribed by the Constitution was, that while it would satisfy one party it would disgust the other. The essential virtue claimed for the plan which will begin its work to-morrow is that it will so inspire everybody with a sense of its absolute equity and wisdom as to avert discontent, whatever the result may be. Unless this fullness of faith be developed before the work begins, and be maintained throughout its various stages, the measure will come short of its purpose.

At present we see only the preliminaries. The machine is not yet in motion. Congress, however, is busy getting it ready, and the spirit in which the politicians concerned are bustling about and preparing for labor deserves looking at as an indication of what is to come. The first impression thus derived is not a reassuring one. It does not tell of the beginning of a political millennium. On the contrary, it reminds us of the commonest order of partisanship, and suggests the bringing together of irreconcilable elements. Take the proceedings in the Republican caucus of Senators as an illustration. One object of a caucus undoubtedly is to elicit a freer expression of party feeling and judgment than is obtainable in other circumstances. On this occasion, the desire of a majority of those present was to intrust two of three available commissionerships to Senators known to be resolute in their party loyalty, and to regard the working of the commission with distrust. Under this arrangement Mr. Morton would have had an associate as firm, as vigilant, as himself. Mr. Edmunds, however, objected. He called for a colleague who should share with him that airy indifference to party interests which attests the purity of the Republican sacrifice; and eventually, to prevent a threatened rupture, the caucus compromised by making Mr. Frelinghuysen the third Commissioner. These occurrences are, in themselves, unimportant. But at least they are significant. They seem to show that Mr. Edmunds' confidence in the plan is contingent upon personal affiliations which the majority of the Republican Senators do not regard with unmixed trust. The doings in the House exhibit an equally suggestive incident of another character. The understanding has been that each party should nominate its own members of the commission, and that the House should confirm the nominations as a matter of course. Mr. Garfield was the unanimous choice of the Republican caucus, Mr. Hoar being selected by a bare majority. But Mr. Garfield has been a conspicuous opponent of the compromise, and has positive and well-defined notions as to the limitations placed upon it by the Constitution. The Democrats in the House were divided on the question whether the bargain made should be adhered to, and it was only under the pressure of party discipline that an essential condition of the whole arrangement was not violated before a single practical difficulty had been encountered.

Putting together the Edmunds incident in the Senatorial caucus and the Garfield incident on the floor of the House, we obtain a general conception of the temper in which the work of the commission is approached by the majority of its Congressional members and by its zealous supporters in both houses. Talk as they may of its patriotic motives and of the impartiality by which the action of the commission is to be guided, it is plain that its leading advocates are not willing to tolerate an independent interpretation of its powers and duties. They rhapsodize about the results that are to follow, but they will have no interference with their predetermined plans. To believers in their infallibility this may be all very well; but Mr. Edmunds should know by this time that the Republican Party does not propose to make him its Pope. If by any accident the machine breaks down in the trials that are before it, or if, after all, the product it yields be not agreeable to the Democrats who helped to construct it, who imagines that the praises heaped upon it now will be continued? So far as the Democrats are concerned, their support has grown altogether out of the supposition that the scheme afforded them chances they could not otherwise obtain; and it is only necessary to refer to yesterday's proceedings in the House to discover the hollowness of the truce which has been paraded as proof that an era of political good feeling is at hand.

NEW-YORK AND THE EXPORT TRADE.

Those who have supposed that the "railroad wars" of 1875 and 1876 were mere struggles for mastery between rival corporations, in which only managers and shareholders of the corporations were greatly interested, have sadly misunderstood the matter. Though the railroad companies who were parties to these contests are not benevolent societies, and are, in the main, moved by their own hope of gain or fear of loss, mixed now and again with natural feelings of jealousy, resentment, and pride toward each other, yet the affairs of the companies are such that the interests of large numbers of people, and of large and important communities, are involved in their conduct. The wars of rates, though in name railroad wars, have been in reality contests between the great export centres of New-York on the one hand and Philadelphia and Baltimore on the other, the interest of the latter two cities being principally to get the trade from New-York, reserving any rivalry which may by and by spring up between themselves until they have disarmed the common enemy. This fact we have frequently pointed out, and though it has been ignored by those who allowed immediate and small interests to prevent them from taking a broad view of the subject, it has been generally recognized by the most careful observers, both here and elsewhere.

The larger relations of the "wars of rates," and the question of their probable renewal, are discussed at length in the last yearly report of the Massachusetts Railroad Commissioners, submitted to the Legislature on Monday. The Commissioners point out that within the last ten years the advantage given to New-York by the Erie Canal, and which was supposed to be great enough to give it lasting control over the export of the products of the West to Europe, have vanished. Though the expense of canal carriage has been brought as low as it can be brought, the railroads have taken the traffic. In 1873, when the rate on wheat by lake and canal from Chicago to New-York averaged 19.2 cents per bushel, 70.2 per cent. of the agricultural products moved to the sea-board came by water. In 1876 the rate was reduced to 9.5 cents per bushel; but meanwhile the proportion of canal freights to the total fell to 67 per cent. in 1874; to 59 per cent. in 1875, and finally to 47.4 per cent. up to Dec. 2 last year, or decidedly less than one-half, against two-thirds two years before. New-York, therefore, it is plain, must cease to rely on the canal for its control of exports, and has nothing but its through lines of rail to fall back on. Of these, the Erie, though not wholly insignificant, is feeble, and the main reliance is on the Central.

The Commissioners describe as follows the positions of the parties to the contest thus forced on the sea-board cities:

"The proscriptive enjoyment of an undisputed monopoly has produced in the case of New-York City the usual results, and both railroads and business community of that place, confidently relying on long possession and natural advantages, had allowed abuses to creep in, or failed to supply improved facilities, until the handling of produce for export there was made most unnecessarily expensive. Meanwhile, the Cities of Philadelphia and Baltimore, having great natural disadvantages to overcome, were naturally forced to husband every resource, and make the most of every circumstance in their favor. All this they did with a degree of sagacity, forethought, and success well deserving the careful study of other and more favorably located communities. * * * In the case of the two last-named communities, the fundamental principle of their through railroad development has been a complete and thorough concentration of force; the idea of local competition in through business received no favor. It seemed to be instinctively appreciated that the struggle was not between rival lines leading to Philadelphia or to Baltimore, but between single thoroughly developed lines, leading to those great cities, and other lines, leading to New-York. Accordingly the whole resources of the two communities were, under the direction of very able men, devoted to the complete development of these single lines."

The Commissioners, after alluding to the compromise by which the contest of 1875 was for a time closed, and the circumstances under which that of last year broke out, remark: "No sooner was the struggle fairly developed than the true issue was boldly avowed by the New-York Central, it being to restore the commercial supremacy of New-York, imperiled by the rapid development of southern rivals." That this issue has not been fought out, and that the combination of December last, by which the struggle for that year was closed, is not capable of practical application for a long period, are opinions in which the Commissioners are substantially correct. They recognize, however, that the purpose of the agreement finally brought about was to give to New-York all the advantages which had in the immediate past been wrested from her. "The new basis of agreement," says the report, "seems, in fact, designed to secure equality in foreign shipments to all the exporting points, while on local shipments a slight advantage is given to New-York in the northern part of the great district in which all the trunk lines compete, and a larger advantage is given to Baltimore, in the southern part of that district." If equality were, in fact, practically and permanently secured between the exporting points, New-York would have nothing to fear. Her advantages as a port of entry, furnishing return freight, and the facilities in point of grade and equipment of her principal through line, would, with anything like energetic management, serve to give her her fair share of the business of the country. But that equality will be maintained permanently on the present arrangement it would be rash to predict. As we have before pointed out, the struggle for the export trade will only be finally settled when it is determined whether the roads leading to New-York can carry freight at a profit—no matter how small—with rates which afford no profit to the roads leading to Baltimore and Philadelphia. The nearer this determination is reached the more stable will be any results arrived at. Meanwhile much will depend on the spirit which, on either side, marks the relations of the business community of New-York and its railway managers.

SILVER AS A STANDARD OF VALUE.

The Director of the Mint, in his valuable report for 1876, published a diagram showing the weekly fluctuations in the gold value of a silver dollar of 412½ grains and of a greenback dollar, for the first seven months of the year 1876. This diagram illustrates in the most striking manner the violent fluctuations which have taken place in the value of the coin which Senator Sherman proposes to resuscitate and force upon the country as an unlimited legal tender. At the beginning of the year the gold value of a silver dollar was a little more than 95 cents, and the gold value of a greenback dollar was 88½ cents. The lowest point reached by the greenback dollar during the seven months was 87¼ cents, on the 9th of March, and the highest 89¾ cents on the 13th of July, or an extreme range of variation during the period of only 2½ cents. The value of the silver dollar, on the other hand, underwent the most abrupt and extreme changes. It fell to 89¼ on the 2d of March, rose to 92 during the next fortnight, fell again to 89 during the succeeding week, and rose again to 91½ on the 20th of April. From this point its value steadily fell until, on the 13th of July, it reached the lowest point of depression—about 79½ cents. It rallied again almost immediately, and on the 27th of July it was worth nearly 87 cents, or 2½ cents less than paper. During the week ending May 25 the lines of valuation cross each other, showing that the value of the silver dollar, for the first time since the suspension of specie payments, had fallen below that of greenbacks. The extreme range of fluctuation was 15½ cents, or more than six times that of paper. This is a variation of 16⅓ per cent. when computed on the highest value, and of 19½ per cent. when computed on the lowest value of silver during the period mentioned. Had the silver dollar been in existence as an unlimited legal tender, and had a merchant sold a bill of goods on the 1st of January for $10,000 based on the value of silver at that time, and received payment on the 13th of July, the amount received would have been worth only $8,368 in the dollars contracted for. While it is not contended that the fluctuations of the purchasing power of the silver dollar, had it existed, would have been as sudden as were the changes in the market value of silver bullion, it is plain that a metal which has undergone such violent changes of value during so short a period is not fit to be chosen as the measure of the value of all other commodities. Compared with it, the value of the paper currency of the country for the last few years has been stability itself.

The fluctuations of silver during the last five months of the year are not shown in the diagram, but the quotations show that they were quite as extreme as during the first seven months. The gold value of the silver dollar rose from 84¾ cents on the 31st of July, to 99 1-5 cents on the 12th of December, the latter being the highest point reached for nearly two years. The fluctuation in the gold value of a silver dollar during the entire year was, therefore, nearly 19¾ cents. Reversing the illustration before given, if a person had contracted on the 13th of July to pay $10,000 in silver dollars at the expiration of six months, the amount paid would have been worth $12,480 in the dollars contracted for—an arbitrary and unjust addition to the obligation of nearly 25 per cent. Pages of argument could not more forcibly illustrate the injustice of the proposed measure than this simple fact.

It will be observed that on the 13th of December the value of the silver dollar had nearly reached par in gold. On this date the greenback dollar was worth only 93 cents in gold, or 6 1-5 cents less than the silver dollar. What would be the consequences should such a state of things occur with the silver dollar circulating side by side with the paper dollar as an unlimited legal tender in payment of all obligations not specifically payable in gold, as proposed by Senator Sherman's measure? So long as the value of silver is less than the value of the greenback circulating alone would be, the greenback would lift the silver dollar to a level with itself, both being equally a legal tender, and the greenback not being available for any purpose for which silver could not be used. But when the commercial value of silver should rise so that the gold value of the silver contained in the dollar piece would be greater than that which the greenback would sustain if silver were not in circulation, silver would begin to be worth a premium in greenbacks. The value of the silver dollar would be determined by the commercial value of an ounce of silver; that of the greenback dollar, like that of all paper, by the volume of the circulation. The silver dollar would, therefore, not raise the greenback dollar with it above its normal value, but, being more valuable than the paper, would be withdrawn from circulation. In accordance with the invariable rule, people would use the cheaper medium of payment and would hold on to the more valuable. Should this condition of things continue for a considerable period, the silver would be entirely withdrawn from circulation, and melted down and exported, since it would be more valuable as bullion than as coin. The near approach to par in gold which the silver dollar made during the month of December shows that this danger would not be entirely absent even after the resumption of specie payments. The effect of the facts which we have stated is to vindicate the wisdom of the Coinage act of 1873 in confining the use of silver strictly to the minor coinage, and in the adoption of gold as the sole standard for value. It certainly would be unsafe and impolitic to depart from this policy while the value of silver continues so unstable as it has been during the last year.

THE APPROACHING RUSSIAN CAMPAIGN.

Russia has evidently gained all from the conference she could have expected. She has now united Europe on her side so far as moral influence is concerned. She has gained several invaluable months for needful preparations. The mobilization of her armies has evidently been a grand fiasco. The Russian journals are not permitted to report the movements of troops, but enough leaks out to show that large bodies of men were kept for days at little stations waiting for transportation; that provisions and water failed, and the utmost confusion prevailed. Many regiments proved, too, mere skeletons, so that Russia seemed in some such condition as France before the last war. This, however, by the lapse of the necessary time, has been remedied, and the Empire is every day girding itself for the struggle. A certain change has, it is true, come over the popular spirit; but this is probably no more than the seriousness which always precedes a great war, and the discontent which official stupidity and maladministration produce in all countries.

We observe that certain military writers in Europe predict an easy "promenade" of the Russian armies from the Pruth to Constantinople. This is altogether improbable. Any one who reads Moltke's account of the campaign between Russia and Turkey in 1828-9, in which he served personally, or any other good history of the various wars between these two powers, will see that an advance from the Danube to Adrianople by the Muscovites is likely to be anything but an easy task. The physical peculiarities of the Danube are all in favor of the Turks. The high banks are on the Turkish side, while such islands as might form good supports for bridges are near the other bank, leaving a broad and difficult stream between. The left shores are low, wet, and marshy, the roads upon them often quagmires, and the whole country so malarious that the Russians have usually lost more in former campaigns from disease than in battle. The river can be crossed on the ice, or at least partly so, during such a Winter as this; but the Russians evidently have no liking for a Winter campaign in such a difficult country, and in a month from now the ice will begin to break up and the roads to be impassable.

At every suitable crossing, the Turks have heavy works, besides several strongly fortified places. In former years the Russians have crossed on the many narrow channels near the mouth of the Danube, but now the Turks command the Black Sea, and their gun-boats ought to control all the lower stream. The Russians, if they succeed in crossing, must do it quite far up, by marching through Servia. By this advance they might, to a certain degree, turn the posts on the Danube, and some in the Balkans. But the danger would be that they would leave the Austrian corps of observation directly in their rear in the Carpathians. Provided a full understanding were had with Austria, there would be no danger in this. Otherwise, it would be fatal to such an approach to Constantinople. It is doubtful if any Russian Army would venture a march on Adrianople, with Shumla unmasked. This place is a sort of fortified post at the foot of the Balkans, toward the river, capable of holding 150,000 men. Its siege and capture would be a very difficult matter. Varna, which lies near the sea, would be impregnable with the superiority of the Turkish fleet. And, indeed, this fact alone would compel the advance of the Russians to be by interior lines to Adrianople.

When it is remembered how tenaciously the Turks defend fortified places, how much better equipped they are than was the case in 1828-9, and even in some respects better provided than in the Crimean war, it will be seen what a task the Russians have taken on themselves in "driving the Turk from Europe." In former campaigns, disease and sanitary neglect have terribly thinned the Russian ranks, while the blunders of their commanders have cost them many defeats. In the last war the Turks, under British officers, were so obstinate in defense that the forces of the Czar scarcely crossed the river. In that, as in this, the Ottomans controlled the sea. Everything points to the march to Constantinople being, far from a "promenade," in fact, a long and bloody struggle. The Turk has counted on this in his obstinacy at the conference. He could not lose more there than he might by a campaign—the chances of war offer many escapes and opportunities. It is natural, too, that Russia desires all the time possible for such a severe contest.

JAMES HENRY.

The power to bear deserved punishment bravely, and to metaphorically kiss the rod, is one which belongs only to mature age. The small boy never has it. When, after the commission of some juvenile crime, he is summoned by the school-teacher to come and rest his weary form upon his beloved preceptor's lap, he goes to meet his fate with bitterness of heart; and when the echoes of the interview have died away he returns sullenly to his desk, and, as he warily seats himself on the extreme edge of his chair, he mentally "gol-darns" the teacher and determines to lay the crooked pin or the adhesive shoemaker's wax at the foundation of the tyrant, and to thus make him feel the misery which he inflicts on others. It is true that at times the spirit of the very small boy is so utterly crushed by punishment that he is temporarily incapable of schemes of vengeance; but sooner or later his anger burns, and he breathes out caricatures and chewed paper balls whenever the teacher is looking the other way. For a small boy of whatever age to forgive and love the teacher who faithfully permeates his system with geography or arithmetic by means of a cane is an unheard of phenomenon, or rather was unheard of until the advent of a recent and unique small boy in Indiana.

In one of the small villages of that Western Commonwealth there is a flourishing school, taught by a pretty school-mistress, who is nevertheless a stern and strict disciplinarian. Among her scholars is—or, at all events, was—a small boy of the age of fourteen. Though a small boy in years and moral character, he was by no means a small boy in point of size, since he was tall, heavy, and muscular. There had been what rural newspapers would have called an epidemic of joggling in that school, and the teacher determined to crush out the loathsome vice with the utmost rigor. She therefore announced, one morning, that, inasmuch as mild measures had failed to suppress the evil, she had determined to whip the very next boy who should be detected in joggling. Fear fell upon the small boys, and they sat in silence for fully half an hour, when suddenly a small hand was raised, and the teacher was informed that, "Please, mum, James Henry is a-joggling awful." In fact, the teacher had herself seen the culprit in the very act, and she had no choice except to summon him to the platform for punishment.

Now, James Henry was the preternaturally large small boy who has just been mentioned, and the school-mistress' heart sank within her probable bosom as she realized the fact that he was taller and vastly stronger than herself. On reaching the platform he firmly denied his guilt, and when he was severely requested not to lie about it, he proposed that, inasmuch as there seemed to be a difference of opinion as to the matter which might lead to a breach of the peace, he would be entirely satisfied to "leave it out" to five Judges of the Supreme Court, whose decision should be final. But the school-mistress had announced her policy in respect of joggling, and she could not now depart from it. So James Henry's compromise plan was rejected, and the teacher, armed with a heavy ruler, rose to enforce her authority.

It was so clearly impossible for her to—in fact, it was so totally out of the question, that she was compelled to commute the threatened punishment into a severe "rulering." The large small boy was, therefore, directed to hold out his right hand, at which the conscientious teacher aimed a dozen violent blows, most of which hit her own skirts, though a few fell upon good ground, where there was the usual juvenile abundance of soil. "Now the other hand," gasped the flurried and breathless teacher; but James Henry, with a sweet, sad smile, extended both arms, inclosed his instructress in a respectful, though tender, embrace, and, calmly kissing her, remarked that, if she wanted to "lick" him any more, she might go on for six months at the same price. Then the good and forgiving small boy went back to his seat and plunged into the multiplication table, while the pretty school-mistress first dropped the tear of sensibility, and then, defiantly calling up the first class in spelling, allowed them to spell six-syllable words by the light of nature, without once intimating that she noticed the indecent liberties which they took with the orthography of the English tongue.

What a lesson of practical forgiveness and true Christian benevolence is taught by this simple story. The heart of the natural small boy, had he been in James Henry's place, would have been full of hatred toward the school-mistress, and he would have openly reviled her, after school hours, as a hateful old maid, and would have made faces at her in church next Sunday behind her back. The heart of the good James Henry, on the contrary, harbored nothing but love and gratitude toward his teacher, and so far from fighting against punishment, he was willing to endure the ruler and to kiss the young woman who smote him. Juvenile literature possesses no youthful hero whose example is more thoroughly worthy of imitation, and were it imitated by all small boys, our schools would become so many dove-cotes wherein joggling and wickedness of every kind would be unknown. Of course, so good a small boy as James Henry will presently die of slow consumption, as all good boys do, but his memory will be a precious legacy and his example may turn thousands of thoughtless jugglers from the evil of their ways and bring kisses to scores of hungry and hopeless school-ma'ams

THE NEW-JERSEY DEMOCRATS.

DESPERATION OF THE PATRIOTS WHO WISH TO SERVE THE STATE—THREATS TO FORCE THEIR JOBS THROUGH THE LEGISLATURE OR STOP OTHER LEGISLATION—THE SCHEME TO SEIZE JERSEY CITY

From Our Own Correspondent.

TRENTON, Tuesday, Jan. 30, 1877.

The sessions of the houses to-day were short. Beyond the introduction of a couple of bills, nothing of interest was done, and both houses adjourned before 11 o'clock till to-morrow morning, out of respect to the memory of the late Gov. Haines, who was buried to-day. The bills introduced were one in the Senate, by Senator Ludlow, of Middlesex, appropriating $200,000 for the erection of a deaf and dumb asylum at New-Brunswick, and another presented to the House, regulating municipal matters in Paterson. The former bill is substantially the same as the one defeated by Gov. Bedle's veto last year, and the latter gives the Paterson Board of Education exclusive control of the funds appropriated for it. Now the Board of Education are obliged, every time they want to spend a dime, to make requisition on the Common Council.

Drohan's bill, making the Board of Finance in Jersey City the distributor of the city patronage, was called up in the House this morning, and Mr. Drohan arose in his seat and requested that no action be taken on the bill till next Monday evening. No effort was made to whip it through the House, and the postponement of consideration upon it is accepted as evidence of its final defeat. The fact is that much dissatisfaction exists among the Democratic members representing Jersey City concerning the bill. Except Mr. Drohan, whom it would make the leader in local politics, the members are all dissatisfied with it; and the evidences of dissatisfaction were very numerous at an informal caucus held by the members last evening. Nevertheless, they determined to let it go through, if it were possible, and, in order to facilitate its passage, the caucus decided to meet the four Republican Independents, so called, for consultation. Invitations to the conference, at 9 o'clock this morning, were sent to Messrs. Howell, Van Rensselaer, Vail, and Wightman; but when 9 o'clock this morning had come, they failed to put in an appearance. Mr. Howell rather intimated, this morning, that he will not vote for any bill which has not the assent of the Republican members from Hudson County; and it is likely that the three who acted with him in the organization of the House share the feeling with him. The prospect of any legislation which will disturb the local government of Jersey City is very slight, and the Democrats, who entered the House with high hopes of the good time coming, are "blue" and despondent now. The Democrats talk, however, of forcing the Republicans into concession by refusing to pass any acts upon which the Republicans may set their hearts till they shall have been brought to terms.

FREEDOM IN NORTH CAROLINA.

A THING OF THE PAST—HOW TILDEN'S PARTY ARE WORKING TO SECURE CONTROL OF THE OFFICES.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

RALEIGH, Jan. 30.—The Democrats have reported a bill to the State Senate upon the subject of the new County Government, which takes the election of Justices of the Peace from the people and authorizes the Governor to appoint them. These Justices are to elect five County Commissioners who are to have entire control of the county affairs as they have now. This will give the Democrats control of every county in the State, and enable them to control the entire machinery of elections in all the counties, whereas the Republicans now control 30 counties. The election of County Treasurer, five Commissioners, Sheriff, and Coroner is taken from the people by this bill. No bill has been reported upon the new judiciary system.

The colored people of this city hold a meeting at Metropolitan Hall to-morrow night to consider a plan of colonization. Several petitions have been presented to the Legislature by the colored members upon this subject. There is no doubt that every negro who is able will leave the State if Tilden is counted in, and there are a great many white Republicans who will prefer some other State, where they will be freemen in every respect, to remaining here and being hewers of wood and drawers of water for the Democrats, should Tilden be made President. The Republicans of this State indorse as one man the appointment of Thomas Settle as District Judge of Florida. If Gov. Hayes is declared President they hope to see him fill Judge Davis' place.

THE MEXICAN PRESIDENCY.

AN INTERVIEW WITH JUDGE IGLESIAS—THE GROUNDS UPON WHICH HE CLAIMS THE PRESIDENCY—HE WILL RETURN TO MEXICO—THE AID OF AMERICAN OFFICERS REFUSED.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 30.—Iglesias has been interviewed regarding the statement telegraphed from Washington Sunday night. He says it is entirely wrong, except upon one point, which is, that the Constitution of Mexico does not actually prohibit the re-election of a President. But even on that point there is reason for complaint against Lerdo, for he had agreed at his first election that he would not attempt to hold the position for a second term. He says the other statements in the dispatch referred to are not based on fact. "I am not an anarchist or breeder of revolution, nor do I assume infallibility of judgment. I declared in my first manifesto that the right was not vested in me, to proclaim the election of Lerdo void, but that it was vested in the people, and I called upon them to decide the question. I claimed then, and still claim, that his pretended election was unconstitutional and fraudulent, for in the first place it was not general, and in the second it was not an expression of popular sentiment. Several of the States—some six or eight—were occupied by Diaz, and there was consequently no vote cast in them, and in many others the military, by Lerdo's orders, took possession of the polls to the entire exclusion of the constitutional officers, the consequence being that in these States a meagre vote was cast, and that, of course, was solid for Lerdo. The latter's partisans declare the election was valid because it was declared by those members of Congress who owed their own places to it. They made this declaration on the 26th of October, and I issued my first proclamation two days later, although Lerdo's first term would not expire until the 1st of December. This arose from the necessities of the situation, for this decision of the unconstitutional Congress was a coup d'état, and by sanctioning it and by his action Lerdo lost his legal title to the Presidency as well in the present as in the future. Gen. Comonfort in 1857, two months after he had entered the Presidential chair, subverted the laws; and Juarez, the then Chief Justice, declared himself President and was supported by a vast majority of the people. I have but followed his example. At present, whatever may be the doubts of some people as to this point, as Lerdo is no longer in Mexico, and as he declares his intention of remaining away, I, as Chief Justice, am the only person constitutionally qualified to assume the executive of the Government. My absence is different, for I am here by accident only. I have not the slightest intention to go East, neither to New-Orleans or elsewhere, but will leave this place for Mexico direct, either in one of our men-of-war, or in an American steamer; and it is my intention to land upon and remain upon Mexican soil, even if it must be as a prisoner. As I have received several offers of military assistance from American officers, I reiterate the fact that it is utterly impossible for me to accept their aid. Ours is an internecine struggle in which foreigners should take no part, and I should rather feel that every hope is lost than to accept victory by such means."

Iglesias further remarked that he was informed as to the person from whom the Washington statement emanated, and in his manner exhibited indications of strong indignation.

FAILURE OF A BUFFALO BUTCHER.

BUFFALO, Jan. 30.—John Devlin, a well known wholesale and retail butcher, has suspended. His liabilities are $37,600, and assets $15,000.

ALBANY.

THAT TRAIN STOPPED.

SENATOR WOODIN STRAIGHT ON THE RECORD—A MAJORITY OF THE REPUBLICAN SENATORS REFUSE TO INDORSE SENATOR CONKLING'S COURSE—PASSAGE OF THE WOODIN RESOLUTIONS.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ALBANY, Tuesday, Jan. 30, 1877.

At the close of the regular order of business in the Senate to-day Mr. Woodin called from the table his resolutions introduced a week ago relative to the Presidential muddle. He said he had no desire to continue the discussion on them; they were introduced originally with no idea of influencing Congress in any plan it might see fit to adopt for settling the controversy. In fact, they were drawn before any plan had been proposed, and were intended solely as an answer to the extraordinary language of the Governor's Message on this subject.

As soon as Mr. Woodin had completed his remarks the Democrats resumed their filibustering tactics with a view to staving off a vote. All sorts of amendments were moved and voted down, and finally Mr. Woodin stated that it was his determination to have a vote on his resolutions before the adjournment of the Senate, unless the endurance of the Democrats was greater than that of the Republicans. To the suggestion of Mr. Bradley that he [Woodin] was not present when the vote was taken on Harris' resolution last Friday, Mr. Woodin replied, explaining his sudden disappearance from the Senate on that occasion. He said that he was obliged to leave on the 1:05 P. M. train in order to reach home the same day; that he remained in the Senate till the last moment in hopes of reaching a vote on Harris' resolution; but so much time was occupied by Senators in explaining their votes that his name, which was the last on the list, was not reached before he had to leave. He did not leave his seat till 12:55, and only had 10 minutes to catch the train. If he "dodged" the vote, it was the first time he had ever dodged a vote in the seven years he had been a Senator. He had no wish to avoid expressing his opinion on this or any other subject, and to show that he was willing to face the music, he would agree, if the Democrats would allow a vote to be taken on his resolutions, to immediately move a reconsideration of Harris' resolution passed last Friday, so that there could be an expression of a full Senate upon it.

Notwithstanding this offer the Democrats continued to move amendments to the Woodin resolutions, all of which were voted down by the Republicans, who acted unanimously together in all the votes taken. At last, finding that the Republicans had made up their minds not to be further bull-dozed, the Democrats concluded to let a vote be taken, and Woodin's resolutions were adopted by a vote of 19 to 12, there being a full Senate, and every Republican voting for and every Democrat against them.

Mr. Woodin then, in accordance with his promise, moved a reconsideration of the Harris resolution indorsing the Congressional Compromise, which was carried. The question then recurring on their adoption, Mr. Woodin, when his name was reached in the roll-call, said that he did not wish it to be inferred that he indorsed the Congressional plan for determining who was President. He had no doubt that the motives of those who were engaged in devising the scheme were of the purest character. They undoubtedly thought that some such scheme was necessary to allay excitement, and bring about peace and harmony. But he could not surrender his convictions as to what was constitutional or unconstitutional. He had read the bill reported by the Congressional Committee with great care, and, while he appreciated the motives of the men who framed it, and should, as a good citizen, acquiesce in the result, yet he emphatically dissented from the propriety or constitutionality of the whole scheme. He could not refrain from calling attention to one fact which illustrated the partisan feeling which actuated the masses of the people in reference to this scheme, however non-partisan they have been the committee that devised it. While the bill was pending, and it was generally understood that Judge Davis would be the fifth Judge on the commission, Republicans were disheartened and down in the mouth; but as soon as Judge Davis was elected Senator and it was settled that he would not be the final umpire in the dispute, the Democrats, who were before elated, suddenly changed their tone and were as much dispirited as the Republicans were previously. This little incident showed that the masses of the people were expecting and hoping to gain some partisan advantage from this plan, just as much as if it had never been adopted. In conclusion he said he should vote against the passage of Harris' resolution. The declaration of the vote showed 21 in its favor to 11 against it. All the Democrats—13 in number—voted for the resolution together with 8 Republicans. The remainder of the Republicans—11 in number—voted against it. Following is the vote in detail (Republicans in italics, Democrats in roman:)

YEAS—Messrs. Baaden, Bixby, Bradley, Emerson, Gerard, Hammond, Harris, Jacobs, Kennaday, Lamont, Loomis, McCarthy, Morrissey, Prince, St. John, Schoonmaker, Sprague, Starbuck, Tobey, Vedder, Wagstaff—21.

NAYS—Messrs. Carpenter, Cole, Coleman, Doolittle, Moore, Robertson, Sayre, Selkreg, Wagner, Wellman, Woodin—11.

It will thus be seen that 21 out of the 32 Senators indorsed the Congressional scheme. But an analysis of the multitude of votes cast on the various amendments offered to Woodin's resolution would show some curious things. The very last amendment offered was presented by Senator Starbuck, who is probably the most rabid and unreasonable Democrat in the Senate, although he represents, by accident, a strong Republican district. His amendment was in the following words, to be inserted in one of Woodin's resolutions:

"And that every attempt to force upon the people of these States a man for President who not only has not received the votes of a majority of the lawfully-appointed Electors, but who has been rejected by more than 240,000 majority of the voters of the country, is not only thus incendiary in spirit and revolutionary in character, but it is a crime against popular government dangerous to the public peace."

The above amendment, as will be seen, denounces and repudiates in advance, the result of the Congressional plan unless it shall elect Tilden. If the decision should be in favor of Hayes, it declares, in so many words, that it would be "incendiary in spirit and revolutionary in character," and would be a "crime against popular Government dangerous to the public peace."

To the credit of a portion of the Democratic Senators, they refused to vote for such an amendment, on the ground that it would be an attempt to dictate the action of the commission and a threat to refuse acquiescence in its decision. And yet, notwithstanding their attention was called to the real significance of the amendment, 7 out of the 13 Democratic Senators voted for it. Their names are Lamont, Loomis, Hammond, Schoonmaker, Starbuck, Bixby, and Bradley. Deducting these seven votes from the number of those who voted for Harris' resolution, and we have but 14 out of the 32 Senators who indorse the Congressional plan, "unless it shall result in making Tilden President." The rest of the 21 Senators who voted to indorse the plan, deliberately put themselves on record that if the commission should declare Hayes to be elected it will be "a crime against popular government dangerous to the public peace." If that is the kind of indorsement of his labors that Roscoe Conkling was after, it is to be hoped that he is now satisfied.

BUSINESS IN THE ASSEMBLY.

THE JEFFERSON MARKET COURT-HOUSE—PAYMENT OF ASSESSMENTS—THE COUNTY COURT-HOUSE—NORMAL SCHOOLS.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ALBANY, Tuesday, Jan. 30, 1877.

The greater portion of to-day's sitting of the Assembly was devoted to general orders. There was a somewhat long discussion of the bill for the completion of the Jefferson Market Court-house, and in the end it was progressed by request of its friends. The provisions of this measure have already been explained in these dispatches. It orders the Commissioner of Public Works to take charge of the completion of the building; and this point, it appears, is the cause of the hitch. The Commissioners who had charge of the building, and whose terms have expired, desire, as is asserted, to be reappointed. It is replied that the building is so nearly completed that this is unnecessary; and besides that, these gentlemen are now undergoing investigation for certain alleged irregularities. Meantime the contractors are going on with the building, and there is no officer who has the legal right to superintend their work. The proper person to take charge is the Commissioner of Public Works, and hence the necessity for the speedy passage of the bill referred to. The motion to report progress was made by Dr. Hayes, who supports the bill, which would seem to indicate that there is some fear of trouble ahead. Spinola was the chief opponent, and hinted that there was as much fraud in the building of this structure as in that of the more celebrated structure in the City Hall Park.

In connection with this matter, the bill introduced by Mr. Fleck in relation to the County Court-house may be mentioned. It abolishes the existing Court-house Commission and vests all its power in the Commissioner of Public Works. The Commissioner may, with the consent of a majority of the Board of Apportionment, spend a sum not exceeding $250,000 in completing the building. Contracts legally made may be continued or renewed, in the discretion of the Commissioner. All property, books, moneys, &c., now in possession of the commission, must be turned over in five days from the passage of the act.

The bill introduced into the Senate by Mr. Bixby, for abolishing the Marine Court, and substituting for it a new City Court, was introduced in the Assembly this morning by Mr. Strahan, and referred to the Committee on Cities. There certainly will be a warm fight over this measure of reform.

Mr. Ecclesine has a bill authorizing the taking of the triangular piece of land at the junction of St. Nicholas with Ninth avenue for a public park. The area of the proposed park is about equal to two and a half City lots.

The matter of the assessments due the City seems to be one of those things which the Legislature will be called upon to consider pretty thoroughly. Another bill on the subject has been introduced. Mr. Langbein, who represents a district very deeply interested in this, presents it. The object of the bill is to afford a relief to persons in arrears for assessments by permitting them to pay in five years from date, but to pay interest on the amount due semi-annually at the rate of 7 per cent. Penalties for non-payment of interest are, for the first default, an addition of 1 per cent. to the interest; for the second, the interest is to be calculated at 12 per cent., dating from the day the interest first became due. Sales of real estate for unpaid assessments already confirmed are not to be made until the expiration of five years, unless the owner of the property fails to pay the interest. It is claimed by the friends of the bill that owners of real estate in the upper part of the City would under such a law as this have some chance to hold their property until the existing stagnation of business and depression of prices had passed and real estate again began to rise. They might then be able to get a reasonable price for property which, if sold now to pay the crushingly heavy assessments upon it, would be ruin to the vendors.

Mr. Ruggles this morning delivered a prepared speech on his resolution instructing the Ways and Means Committee to report on the advisability of withdrawing State aid from the normal schools. Mr. Ruggles is understood to speak the sentiments of Gov. Robinson on this subject. The Governor in his Message suggests that these schools and the academies are not deserving of State aid, and that such aid should be withdrawn. So far as can be judged at this time, the sentiment of the Legislature is favorable to curtailing the appropriations for these and kindred educational institutions, as recommended by the Governor, and placing them under more rigid restrictions than are now provided by existing laws; but it is hardly probable that State aid will be wholly withheld from them.

THE NEW-YORK POLICE BILL.

WERE CANAL LABORERS EMPLOYED FOR THE SAKE OF THEIR VOTES?—THE POLICE BILL—COMMISSIONER ERHARDT BEFORE THE COMMITTEE ON CITIES—THE STREET-CLEANING BILL.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 30.—It is alleged that during last year a large number of laborers were employed on the canals for the sake of their votes, colonies of them being sent into doubtful districts. To ascertain the truth of the matter, Assemblyman McKee will introduce to-morrow a resolution requiring the Canal Commissioners to report the number of laborers employed, the wages paid to them, the places where they were employed, and the work done by them, and to make a comparison with the report of the previous year on the same subject.

The Committee on Cities this afternoon gave a hearing to the Police Commissioners on the bill in relation to that department recently introduced. Commissioner Erhardt appeared for the bill and set forth the wants of the Commissioners. The two principal features of the bill seem to be those in relation to the detective force and the power requested for the Commissioners to dismiss members of the force without trial. On all other points he would not urge the committee one way or the other, leaving the whole matter to their discretion. Mr. Dorman B. Eaton spoke in opposition to granting some of the powers asked, especially that of summary dismissal. He was willing, and thought it right, that the Commissioners should have this power over the detective division, that being a peculiarly constituted and a separate body from the mass of the force; but he argued warmly against extending this power over the whole 2,000 patrolmen. On further argument it appeared that the bill was crudely drawn, in Mr. Eaton's opinion expressing many things which Mr. Erhardt distinctly disclaimed were asked for. This being the case, the committee referred the bill to Mr. Eaton and Commissioner Erhardt for correction and amendment, they to consult and report a completed bill to the committee as soon as possible.

The Street-cleaning bill was not touched this afternoon. Mr. Eaton spoke on his bill for the calling of an advisory committee on the state of the City Government, and there was some talk of amending it so as to create a commission which should take charge of the subject, and report to the next Legislature. The committee, however, took no decided action, and the proposition to put off the work of retrenchment will not be likely to find favor. The Judiciary Committee will report favorably to-morrow the State Board of Charities bill in relation to the care of tramps and vagrants.

CANAL MATTERS.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE CANAL BOARD—ORDERS TO PAY CERTAIN CONTRACTORS' CLAIMS.

ALBANY, Jan. 30.—The Canal Board met to-day, when the Special Committee on the case of W. H. Brown and C. W. Avery, Superintendents of the Champlain Canal, reported that they had no power in the matter referred to them. In the case of Dubree it was ordered that the investigation into the charges against him proceed at 11 o'clock on Wednesday.

The balances due on the contracts of H. B. Denison and J. McInroe, Jr., were ordered to be paid. The Attorney General's report favoring the paying of A. B. Van Deusen's claim for $7,207 was agreed to, and the claim ordered to be paid.

The First National Bank of Syracuse was made the depository for the Salt Springs deposits, in place of the Syracuse National Bank.

The Committee on Commerce reported that the expenditures for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, 1876, were $1,908,053 62, and the receipts $1,540,191 90. The committee favor the asking of legislative authority to reduce the tolls, leaving the question of whether they shall use this authority to be decided hereafter.

In the Dennison canal suit to-day Mr. Dodge, and other attaches of the Engineer's Department, were examined as to the surveys and measurements made in order to get at the quantity of work done. Nothing new was elicited. Adjourned.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

COST OF STONE BULKHEADS.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I find in this morning's TIMES the synopsis of the report of a sub-committee appointed by the Commercial Association to investigate the cost of the masonry bulkhead already constructed by the Department of Docks. The committee state that, according to a series of calculations made by the "Council of Political Reform," the stone bulkhead built from October, 1873, to April, 1875, has cost about $1,250 per lineal foot. It is not necessarily a part of my duty to defend what was done under my predecessors in office, but for the information of tax-payers, I will state that it is not true that the wall in question, or any bulkhead wall on our water-front, has cost anything like that sum. The committee admit in the report that, for want of detail in the Commissioners' reports, they were obliged "to apply an indirect mode of judging." Against this indirect mode I am able to present the sworn statement of the late Engineer in Chief, made to the Senate committee investigating the affairs of City departments in the Fall of 1875. He swears that the 410 feet of wall forming what is known as the boat-landing or grand plaza at the Battery cost $657 72 per lineal foot; that the 34 feet northward of Pier No. 1 cost $371 64 per foot; that he constructed 1,115 feet of bulkhead wall at Christopher street, on the béton block system, for about $399 per foot. Some additional work was done upon this wall, which increased its cost to $405 44, as stated by the Commissioners in April last. These figures were carefully made up by the Engineer in Chief, and are doubtless correct.

The "indirect mode" of book-keeping which the committee seems to have adopted in making up their schedules is grossly incorrect, if not the work of mere imagination. Take one example only. In the item of lumber and piles, the gross sum of $374,413 64 is put down to bulkhead-wall account. Now, the truth is that during the year 1874 the department contracted for $98,500 worth of pier piles, not one of which was used in bulkhead walls; and yet it appears by the "indirect mode" of the committee that a proportion of these piles, a large quantity of which are still on hand, are debited by the committee to the bulkhead wall. In Christopher street section, of about 1,100 feet, the piles and lumber used cost $78,469 60, instead of $374,413 64.

There are in the committee's report other miscalculations which I will not now point out.

It is no part of my purpose to impugn the motives of the committee. They are all honorable men, and their efforts are praiseworthy and, if intelligently conducted, would undoubtedly aid the commission in solving the somewhat difficult problem, how best to improve the water front of the City.

It is, I believe, always in the power of this department to supply accurate details of cost of construction, and the doors are always open to any one who has the right to come in and get information.

I may also state that, owing to the decreased cost of material and labor, the masonry wall now in progress is estimated to cost, on an average, $225 per lineal foot, or $75 more per foot than the wooden bulkhead suggested by the committee.

S. H. WALES,
President Department of Docks.

TUESDAY, Jan. 30., 1877.

A PRESS DISPATCH CORRECTED.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In your issue of the 27th we notice an article dated Middletown, in reference to the failure of Jacob Hermance, of this place, which appears to be a malicious misrepresentation. It is erroneous or grossly exaggerated in every particular. Mr. Hermance has earned an enviable reputation for honesty and uprightness during 25 years of successful business in this county, and none who know him will accuse him of dishonest transactions. He was obliged to make an assignment, mainly through large losses sustained by the failure of the glass works, and has assigned all his property for the benefit of his creditors. His assignees are preparing a statement to be made as soon as possible, and he himself is here assisting in getting it ready. His liabilities will be small outside of those growing out of his connection with the glass works, and his assets will make a fair show.

R. M. VAN SICKLER.
FELIX D. TERWILLIGER.

ELLENVILLE, N. Y., Monday, Jan. 29, 1877.

AMUSEMENTS.

THE OLYMPIC THEATRE.

The production of "The Big Bonanza," at the Olympic last evening afforded a renewed test of the fun-producing qualities of Mr. Daly's well-known adaptation. Several of the old Fifth Avenue Company participated in the performance, and even those of the cast who were new to the piece displayed a general familiarity with its scope and requirements. Mr. Owen Fawcett, as the Professor, treated the audience to a sketch of that amusing personage, which differed but little from the original one of Mr. Lewis, while Mr. Charles Leclercq personated successfully the money-making cousin, Jonathan. Mr. Barrymore, to whom the rôle of Bob Ruggles was allotted, evinced decided capabilities for the part—capabilities which were too often blighted by his constant dependence on the prompter. Mr. George Parkes, the original representative of the De Haas family, contributed his full share to the general amusement, and Mr. Charles Rockwood depicted the struggling young doctor of the play with becoming modesty. Of the ladies, Miss Ada Gilman as Eugenia, Mrs. Brutone as Mrs. Caroline Cawallader; Miss Elise Moore as her daughter Virgie, and Miss Boyd as Mlle. De Vincey, were commendably proficient in their several parts. The attendance was large, and was chiefly composed of a class superior to that usually attracted to the down-town theatres. Applause was frequent throughout the progress of the play. Among the recent additions to the building are two new exits in case of fire—one in the balcony and one in the gallery. Both consist of doors, the first a double one, six feet in width, leading from the balcony to the street, and the second, a single door, leading from the gallery to Broadway, via the roof. A door has also been cut in the middle passage leading to the gallery, by which a portion of the house can find egress into the broad staircase leading from the balcony.

BRIEF MENTION.

"The Star of the North" will be the attraction at the Academy of Music, this evening.

Mr. Daly's powerful drama called "Man and Wife" is the present attraction at the Grand Opera-house.

The Aimée opera bouffe troupe at the Eagle Theatre will appear to-nights in Offenbach's "La Vie Parisienne." Mlle. Aimée will personate Gabrielle.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Feininger will give a concert at Chickering Hall, this evening. Beethoven, Chopin, and Reinecke are represented on the programme.

Mr. Thomas' fourth symphony concert occurs on Saturday evening, and the public rehearsal preliminary thereto may be attended at Steinway Hall, to-morrow afternoon.

"The School for Scandal" will be acted by Mrs. Shook and a strong force of amateur performers, at the Lyceum Theatre, on Saturday evening, the representation being for the benefit of the Rosendale Mission.

THE WEATHER.

INDICATIONS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31—1 A. M.—In the Middle and Eastern States falling barometer, easterly to southerly winds veering to southerly and westerly, stationary to rising temperature, increasing cloudiness and possibly succeeded at night by rain areas north-west of the Alleghanies.

REGENTS OF THE UNIVERSITY.

ALBANY, Jan. 30.—The Democratic members of the Legislature this evening unanimously nominated William Purcell, of Rochester, and Parke Godwin, of Queens County, to fill vacancies in the Board of Regents. In the Republican caucus this evening, Charles E. Fitch, of Rochester, and Chauncey M. Depew, of New-York, were unanimously nominated.

THE NEW CAPITOL INVESTIGATION.

ALBANY, Jan. 30.—In the investigation of the charges against Superintendent Eaton, of the new Capitol building, this afternoon, a witness named Cox, one of the principal movers of the investigation, declined to answer the question whether he had been paid money to set up the investigation.

LATEST NEWS BY CABLE.

RUSSIA AND THE EASTERN QUESTION

BELIEF THAT PEACE WILL BE CONCLUDED WITH SERVIA—NICSIC TO BE PROVISIONED—THE STRUGGLE BETWEEN THE PEACE AND WAR PARTIES—40,000 VOLUNTEERS.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—A dispatch from Constantinople says it is believed that peace will be concluded with Servia, and there is a rumor that Montenegro has received Turkey's overtures for peace favorably.

A dispatch from Ragusa says: "The British, German, and Italian Consuls will proceed to Cettinje to-day, it is reported, in order to induce Prince Nicholas to make peace with the Porte, if the latter will cede to Montenegro the 12 districts demanded. Montenegro has consented to allow the Turks to send into Nicsic 12 tons of provisions during February."

A morning paper publishes the following in semi-official form: "If no unforeseen accident occurs to disturb the disposition which animates all the powers, we may hope that in the course of the next month assurances will be given which will ratify the strong expectations now entertained that the prospect of a European war is obviated."

A Vienna dispatch says: "Although circumstances have greatly changed since the Czar's Moscow speech, that enunciation cannot be altogether ignored. The only question is what step Russia should take, and the final decision of that question is still pending at St. Petersburg, and is dependent on the issue of the struggle between the Russian peace and war parties, which has lately increased in intensity. Since the affair before the Kasan Church and the revelations it is supposed to have led to, there have been no signs of that popular agitation which played so prominent a part last Summer. Such agitation, indeed, is regarded as a two-edged sword which ought not to be played with. But proportionately as public agitation ceased, private activity of the party which in court and official circles represents Russian national ideas has increased. It may be taken as the surest symptom of this that those reports about the imminent abdication of the Czar and his replacement by the Czarewitch are again coming to the front. There seems no doubt that the Czar's pacific disposition has been very much strengthened by a number of circumstances. Foremost among these are the numerous indications lately received of a close connection subsisting between the national and politico-social aspirations and opinions, not only among the people at large, but in the official class, and even the Army. Those committees which have taken up the Slav cause most warmly, have been found to be, or are under heavy suspicion of being the most zealous advocates of a thorough political and social reorganisation of Russia; that is, a subversion more or less of all that now exists, so that fostering the Slav idea was indirectly fostering these political and social aspirations. The fact that one of the Bulgarian committees actually introduced into its programme the future organization of Bulgaria as a Republic, was well calculated to dampen the ardor of the Czar for the Bulgarian cause. On the other side it is just this danger of advanced political and social ideas which is urged by the advocates of war as the strongest argument for war. By taking the Panslav cause in hand, Russia can maintain complete control over it, while the authority gained by the dynasty and Government as having settled the future of the whole Slav world would flatter the Russian national feeling, and divert it for a long time from all those political and social theories which the people are now brooding over. As yet the peace party has the upper hand, but the war party seems to rely a good deal on the return of Gen. Ignatieff to turn the scale in its favor.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of a morning paper, in a letter dated Jan. 22, says: "The Czar's Moscow speech certainly remains unqualified by any later declaration, but at the same time it is evident, judging by the tone of society at St. Petersburg and Moscow, as well as by that of public opinion in general, that this famous speech, although not officially retracted, is virtually withdrawn. The argument adduced by members of Russian society in justification of this course is that Europe having interfered and the conference having failed, Russia, notwithstanding what the Emperor said at Moscow, is relieved from all individual responsibility. With regard to the preparation of the Army in Bessarabia, mobilization has failed, and the Army is in anything but a satisfactory condition. Having lived in this country during the whole course of the present crisis, and having carefully watched both here and at Moscow, the varying drift of public opinion, I unhesitatingly declare my convictions that the Emperor desires to have an excuse for not going to war."

LONDON, Jan. 31.—A dispatch from Vienna says the Porte has dropped its claim for arrears of the Servian tribute. Forty thousand volunteers are being collected at Mosul, Asiatic Turkey, to be sent to Kars. A Paris correspondent gives emphatic denial to the report of the retirement of Prince Gortschakoff, and the assertion that Russia has given Servia permission to treat for peace.

The Vienna correspondent of a morning paper says, as the status quo ante bellum has been accepted by both Turkey and Servia as a basis, the way for an understanding has been found. Servia, however, desires to carry two points. On the first, concerning the remission of the arrears of tribute, there will probably be little difficulty, although the news that Turkey has already conceded it is possibly premature, as pourparlers only have been carried on as yet. The main negotiation will take place at Constantinople. The second point insisted on by Servia is that the river Drina shall form the frontier of Sérvia. This would imply the cession of Zwornik and the islands in the Drina, and would cause such indignation throughout Turkey that even Midhat Pasha's influence could not easily overcome it. The utmost that can be expected is the consent of Turkey to a mixed commission for the rectification of the frontier. Another difficulty is the Turkish demand for sureties. Before these guarantees are precisely specified the commencement of real negotiations is impossible. Servia has demanded a statement of the guarantees required, but has not yet received answer.

The Russian Telegraphic Agency says it is feared the guarantees may prove a stumbling block, and declares Russia has not and could not send any note to the powers before the delegates have reported to their respective cabinets. Servia and Montenegro are entertaining Turkish overtures by the advice of all the Great Powers.

The Grand Duke Nicholas is so much better that no further bulletins will be issued as to his condition.

A Belgrade dispatch reports that Prince Milan on Monday, received a telegram from Midhat Pasha proposing some modifications of the Turkish proposals to which Servia had objected, and suggesting that all future negotiations relative to the details of the arrangement be carried on in Constantinople. Russian influence appears to be perfectly quiescent at present. It is quite possible that Russia may make no opposition to Servia's concluding a peace with the intention of declaring, in the event of war, that Servia is virtually Turkish territory, and invading Servia through the Timok and Morava Valleys, and pushing on to Sophia. In such a case all Servians who are worth having could join the Russian ranks, without the Servian Government committing itself in favor of either belligerent.

MISCELLANEOUS FOREIGN NOTES.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—There was a severe gale in the south and south-west of England yesterday and last night, accompanied by rain and sleet, which caused considerable derangement of the telegraph lines. The gale extended to the west and north-west coasts. The weather is again boisterous this afternoon.

A morning paper in its second edition, has a dispatch from Rome, saying the Pope will protest against the Clerical Abuses act, recently passed by the Italian Chamber of Deputies, by means of an Encyclical which is now being prepared. It will probably be published at a Consistory which will be held during the first fortnight in March.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—Countess Howe yesterday threw herself from a window of her mother's residence in Berkeley square, and died from the injuries she received. The coroner's jury rendered a verdict that the act was committed while the lady was in an unsound state of mind, caused by grief at the death of Earl Howe, her husband.

Prof. Lankester took out new summonses to-day against Dr. Slade, the Spiritualist, and Simmons, his assistant, for conspiracy, and also against Slade under the vagrant act.

THE CUSTOMS CONSPIRACY FRAUDS.

HOW THE TIMES' EXPOSURE WAS RECEIVED IN CHICAGO—A STATEMENT BY THE COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS AT THAT PORT.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—Concerning the Custom-house conspiracy and frauds, as set forth in THE NEW-YORK TIMES of to-day, J. Russell Jones, Collector of customs at this port, says none of the Chicago importing houses are now under suspicion, or are concerned in the conspiracy, although a careful investigation might develop something rotten. A member of one of the largest firms of this city says that when in Paris recently he was informed by one of the heaviest of the houses there that there were but two importing houses in the United States that did not have separate and different invoices made out. One of these was for the Custom Officers, and the other for the home offices. One of these houses is in Chicago, and the other in Boston.

EXCITEMENT IN BUSINESS CIRCLES OVER THE EXPOSURES IN THE TIMES—FEDERAL OFFICIALS RETICENT ON THE SUBJECT.

The account published exclusively in THE TIMES yesterday, of a cleverly conceived scheme of smuggling, by which the United States Treasury has been defrauded of an immense amount of Customs dues, created a great deal of excitement among business men. Much wonder was expressed in the District Attorney's office, and the Custom-house, as to how the facts leaked out. Several prominent merchants who were applied to yesterday expressed satisfaction at learning that dishonest tradesmen and unworthy Consuls are in a fair way to be punished. They said that it has been believed in trade circles for years past that an association of smugglers, embracing numbers on both sides of the Atlantic, was operating to evade the payment of duties upon importations. On no other hypothesis could the cheapness of certain classes of goods in this market be explained. The low prices at which some firms of this and other cities have sold goods have prevented competition and attracted business away from the greater number of honest merchants. These things, with the almost unexampled dullness of trade, have driven a number of firms out of business. United States District Attorney Bliss declined to say anything about the scheme or the prosecution of the parties concerned in it. Collector Arthur also refused to give any information beyond the fact that he has not yet been officially notified by the Treasury Department to assist Gen. Woodford to procure evidence against the defaulters to the revenue who are to be prosecuted. In other quarters, however, the truth of THE TIMES' report was confirmed. One prominent Custom-house official remarked that the statements of THE TIMES did not give more than a tenth part of the truth, but declined to add to the array of facts already presented to the public. Another was more communicative. After stating in a very vague way the methods adopted by the smugglers, and the agents employed abroad of the dishonest merchants of this and other cities to undervalue invoices, he declared he could name most of the Consuls who will be disgraced by the exposures in the coming trials. Yet, upon being asked for the names, he declined to give them. At present, then, nothing in relation to the vast smuggling operations can be procured, further than a confirmation of the accounts already published in THE TIMES.

A SAD DOMESTIC STRIFE.

A UNITED STATES DEPUTY MARSHAL STRUCK AND SERIOUSLY INJURED BY HIS DEMENTED WIFE—THE WOUNDED MAN SUFFERING FROM ERYSIPELAS AND DELIRIOUS — FATAL RESULTS APPREHENDED.

While Superintendent Walling was in his office at the Central Department yesterday morning a carriage drove up to the building and there stepped out two men. One of them appeared to be laboring under intense excitement, and was evidently suffering from a very severe attack of erysipelas. His face was enormously swollen, and his head was bandaged and tied up with a handkerchief. The two visitors entered the Superintendent's office, where the man with the swollen face introduced himself as George H. Holmes, a United States Deputy Marshal, residing at No. 431 West Fifty-sixth street. His companion was a messenger employed in the Federal Courts. Holmes, in an excited manner, told the Superintendent that his wife and three men had conspired to murder him. He said that the men had captured him, kept him confined three days in a dark room, and beaten him nearly to death. He had succeeded in making his escape, but he was in fear of his life, as his enemies were still pursuing him, and he therefore invoked the aid of the Police to protect him. The Superintendent saw at once that the man was delirious and endeavored to soothe him, and advised his companion to take him to a hospital for treatment. After considerable argument, Holmes, who was assured by Mr. Walling that he would be protected, was induced to enter the carriage, and the couple departed. They drove to the residence of Dr. M. K. Hogan, No. 226 West Thirty-fourth street, and the doctor made a partial examination of the sick man. He found him in what is known as the second stage of erysipelas and laboring under acute mania. There was a slight abrasion on his forehead, which the Doctor thought had been occasioned by scratching. Dr. Hogan, who knew Holmes, deeming his condition very serious, and rest and restraint being absolutely necessary, advised his companion to take him to a hospital. Holmes refused to go unless the Doctor accompanied him, and Dr. Hogan thereupon drove with the patient to St. Vincent's Hospital, where the delirious man was admitted and properly cared for. Dr. Hogan instructed the attendants to watch the patient very closely, to prevent him from doing himself an injury. On inquiring last evening at the hospital it was learned that the symptoms had assumed a very grave aspect, and it required the utmost exertions of two men to restrain him. It was feared that the case would result fatally.

The following particulars in relation to the strange affair were ascertained at Mr. Holmes' residence last night: It appears that about 20 years ago Holmes, who was then a resident of Toronto, married a young woman who had been born in Ireland, but had been brought to America when a child. This woman had been an inmate of a lunatic asylum, but when the marriage took place she was believed to be entirely cured. The couple had nine children, three of whom, daughters, survive. Four years ago Holmes went into the liquor business in Thames street. The couple had frequent quarrels, owing to the fact that Mrs. Holmes is a Roman Catholic, and Holmes refused to join her church. For several months Mrs. Holmes has had frequent and violent attacks of insanity, during which she was entirely uncontrollable. She became imbued with the idea that her husband was unfaithful to her, and brooded over this suspicion, for which there appears to be no foundation. On the 18th inst. Holmes found that he would be compelled to remain out all night on official business. He went home early in the evening and told his wife, and then hurried back to his office. The next evening when he went home he found his wife sullen and morose, and in a condition which usually preceded an attack of insanity. He partially undressed himself with the intention of retiring, and then went into the kitchen where his wife was. As soon as he entered his wife commenced to abuse him. He endeavored to soothe her, but in vain. The woman, beside herself with rage, seized a smoothing-iron and struck him twice on the head with it, felling him senseless to the floor. In a moment her rage was over, and, seeing what she had done, she began to cry and scream for help. The neighbors rushed in and assisted the woman in stanching the blood which flowed profusely from the wounds in his head. Holmes remained unconscious until the next day. He was then fully aware of what had occurred, and told his sorrowing wife that he freely forgave her. He also called in two of the neighbors, and told them that if anything happened to him he would expect them to bear witness that he had pardoned his penitent wife, as he was convinced that she had struck him while she was insane. About a week ago the first symptoms of erysipelas set in. Holmes' face and head began to swell, and his wife, becoming alarmed, called in a physician who examined the patient and prescribed for him On leaving the house the Doctor demanded his fee, and Mrs. Holmes told him that he would be paid as soon as her husband could go down town to get some money. The Doctor left in angry mood, and did not again visit the patient. No other doctor was called in. Holmes' condition grew rapidly worse, and on Monday afternoon he left his home and went down down, and did not return. Yesterday morning he reported for duty at the United States Marshal's office, but he was so delirious that he was placed in a carriage in charge of a court messenger, with orders to take him home. On the way up town, Holmes insisted on seeing Superintendent Walling, and, to humor him, the messenger allowed him to call at Police Head-quarters, as stated above. No action has been taken by the authorities as yet. Holmes is so delirious that he is unable to make any statement that can be relied on, and were he in his proper senses it is not probable that he would make any complaint against his demented wife.

A SOLDIER'S SON STARVED TO DEATH.

AN INHUMAN TASKMASTER—HIS CRUEL TREATMENT OF AN ORPHAN LAD—THE CASE UNDER INVESTIGATION.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 30.—A further investigation was had here to-day before Coroner Goddard in the case of the death of William Harvey, the soldier's orphan, who died at the University Hospital from lockjaw caused by cruel treatment alleged to have been inflicted by H. P. Voneida, of Lambertville, N. J., to whom the boy had been indentured. The taskmaster compelled the boy to saw wood in his bare feet, in the snow, before breakfast, and if he did not perform a certain amount of work was deprived of his meals. He was really starved to death, and beaten in the most brutal manner. Before he died the boy related the facts of his treatment. An effort was made to secure Voneida, but he escaped. The evidence to-day did not reveal any new facts except to show that the boy was released from the Northern Home for Friendless Children in the regular manner, on the representations of Voneida that he would treat the boy as one of his own children. There is every prospect of securing the villain, the Grand Army of the Republic having taken the matter in charge and procured the best detective talent in the country. They have offered a reward of $500, which Coroner Goddard has supplemented by $50 more. It is believed that Voneida will be in custody by next Tuesday, to which time the inquest has been adjourned.

KNOEDLER'S WATER-COLOR COLLECTION

Messrs. M. Knoedler & Co., having decided to devote their attention in the future exclusively to the importation and sale of oil paintings, have made arrangements for disposing of their entire collection of water-color paintings. This collection is now on exhibition during the day and evening at Kurtz's Art Gallery, No. 6 East Twenty-third street, previous to its sale on the evening of Feb. 6. The collection consists mainly of the works of foreign artists, Walter Saterlee, W. Craig, (deceased,) and Victoria S. Lathrop being the only American artists represented. Of the prominent foreign artists there are represented Boughton, Bouvier, Catlin, Cortazzo, Compte-Calix, Detaille, Doré, Dibdin, Fortuny, Filoss, E. Frère, Gérome, Klimsch, Leloir, Rossi, Simonetti, Simoni, Alma-Tadema, Vluert, and Zamacois. There are several fine specimens of charcoal, crayon, pencil, and pen-and-ink drawings. Doré being represented by crayon "Portraits;" Régamey of Paris, by the crayon "The Trough;" Henri Regnault, of Paris, by the crayon "Studies of Italian Peasants;" Gérome by the crayon "Japanese Woman." Cotten, of Paris, contributes several fine specimens of charcoal drawing; Allongé, of Paris, the charcoal drawing "Swiss Landscape," and J. G. Vibert, of Paris, three pen-and-ink pictures entitled "The Mandoline Player," "The Unwelcome Visitor," and "The Surprise." Among the pencil specimens are L. Knaus' "After the Feast," the original of the engraving; Edouard Detaille's "The Promenaders," Alma-Tadema's "Children of Princes Clothilde," Eugene Klimsch's "The Shower" and "The Moonlight Ride," and J. Weever's "Cherries," the finer specimens of water-color are to be noted Fiosa's "Neapolitan Flower Girl," Lanjalley's "Florentine Concert," after Sorbi; Cortazzo's "After the Ball" and "The Interrupted Reading," Perlberg's "Flirtation," Frère's "New Earrings," Rossi's "Standard Bearer," "Sentimental Promenade," and "The Connoisseur;" Emile's "At the Fountain," Dibdin's "Street at Lesieux" and "Cathedral at Candebec," Simoni's "The Fan" and "Doice Far Niente," Ciprani's "Tambourine Players," and Fortuny's "Italian Peasants." The collection entire comprises 96 specimens, which, as previously stated, are all to be sold on the evening of Tuesday, Feb. 6, by Mr. Robert Somerville.

REVENUE FRAUD IN BOSTON.

BOSTON, Jan. 30.—The Journal says: "The Treasury agents here have worked up a case which will bring before the United States Courts one of the largest manufacturing companies of the State—the National Tube Works Company. It is char

LIVE STOCK MARKETS.

BUFFALO, Jan. 30.—Cattle—Receipts to-day, 1,324 head; total for the week thus far, 5,763 head; 3,842 head more than the same time last week, showing an increase in receipts for the week thus far of 1,113 head. Market dull, with a dragging attendance of Eastern buyers and light sales; 50 cars disposed of, mostly to supply the local trade demand; stock offering below medium in quality; prices on common and medium grades low off last week's rates; best lots about hold their own; sales of medium to good grades Native Steers at $4 85@5; common lots at $4@4 80; stockers and feeders at $3 65@3 90. Sheep and Lambs—Receipts to-day 1,100 head; total for the week thus far, 10,000 head; 9,700 head for the same time last week; market still very slow, with slight demand, mainly confined to fleshy Eastern demand light; prices hardly established, but quotably ¼c. off last week's average rates; sales of Michigan feeders at $5 37½@5 90. Western Sheep, averaging 90 to 101 lbs, at $4 90@5 75 per cwt., cars on sale. Hogs—Receipts to-day, 250 head; total for the week thus far, 2-700 head; 4,850 head for the same time last week; market quiet and low offering, with slight demand; sales at $5 85@6 10; Yorkers at $5 85; 1 car of fair heavy at $6 05; only 2 cars on sale.

CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—Cattle—Receipts, 4,100 head; shipments, 780 head; market dull; prices nominally 10c. to 15c. lower than last week's close; sales of butchers' at $3 30@3 50. Hogs—Receipts, 9,000 head; shipments, 880 head; market firm and 5c.@10c. higher; light, $5 65@5 80; medium to good heavy, $5 75@5 85; choice to extra prime heavy offering, $5 45@5 60; fair to good shipping, $5 15@5 40. Sheep—Receipts, 1,000 head; market nominal.

EAST LIBERTY, Penn., Jan. 30.—Cattle—Receipts to-day 476 head, or 8 cars of the rough and 20 cars of good stock. Best, $5 10@5 75; medium to good, $4 75@5; common to fair $4@4 50. Hogs—Receipts to-day 2,420 head. Yorkers $6@$6 40; Philadelphias $6 30@7 20. Sheep—Receipts to-day, 4,800 head, selling, $3 75@5 6.

THE STATE OF TRADE.

CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—Flour quiet, but firm. Wheat active, firm, and higher; No. 2 Chicago Spring, $1 25, cash; $1 25@1 25¼, seller March; $1 25¼@1 27¼, March; closed at $1 27⅞, March; No. 3 do., $1 14@$1 15; Rejected, 95c. Corn moderately active and higher; 42¾c. cash; 42¾c. February; 43¼c., March; 47¾c. May. Rye prices held firmer; 62c. bid, cash; Oats dull and higher; 35½c.@35¼c., cash; 35½c.@35¾c., February; 36c., March. Rye steady and unchanged. Barley dull and a shade lower at 59c.@62c. Pork unsettled, but generally higher; closed at $16 50, cash; $16 70@$16 72½, March; $16 95@$16 97½, April. Lard generally unchanged, but some sales rather higher; $10 80@$10 82½, cash; $10 95, March; $11 07½@$11 10, April. Bulk-meats steady and unchanged. Dressed Hogs easier and dull; holders anxious to sell; packing, $7@$7 15; shipping, $7@$7 25. Whisky steady and unchanged. Receipts—Flour, 5,000 bbls; Wheat, 14,000 bushels; Corn, 104,000 bushels; Oats, 27,000 bushels; Rye, 2,000 bushels; Barley, 4,000 bushels. Shipments—Flour, 13,000 bbls; Wheat, 11,000 bushels; Corn, 56,000 bushels; Oats, 14,000 bushels; Rye, 4,000 bushels; Barley, 7,500 bushels. At the afternoon call of the board Wheat irregular; $1 28⅞@$1 27, March; $1 25 @$1 25⅜, February. Corn easier; 43⅜c., March. Oats unsettled, lower and weak; 35⅜c., cash; 35⅝c., March; $19 35@$19 90, April. Lard, 4c.@5c. lower.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 30.—Flour unsettled, and sales can only be made at a decline of 15c.@25c. Wheat—Best grades are lower to sell; medium qualities firmer; No. 2 Red Fall, $1 41½ bid, cash; sales at $1 46, February; $1 48¾, March; $1 50¾, April. No. 3 do., $1 41½@$1 41⅝, March. Corn firmer; No. 2 mixed, 38¾c., cash; 38¾c., February; 41c., March. Oats firmer; No. 2, 34c. Rye, 68½c.@69c. Barley quiet and unchanged. Whisky steady at $1 06. Pork firm and unchanged. Lard firmer at 10⅝c., cash; 10⅝c., February. Bulk-meats nominally unchanged; only a small jobbing trade doing. Bacon quiet and unchanged. Live Hogs quiet; light snapping, $5 25@$5 60; packing, $5 75@$6; shipping grades, $6@$6 25. Cattle dull; $3 37½@$4 87½; light, $3 75@$4; fair to choice Cows and Heifers, $3 12½@$4. Receipts—2,800 bbls. Flour, 10,000 bushels Wheat, 39,000 bushels Corn, 4,000 bushels Oats, 2,000 bushels Rye, 4,000 bushels Barley, 3,300 head Hogs, 600 head Cattle.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 30.—Flour dull at $6 90@$7 10. Wheat dull: Red, $1 35@$1 45. Corn dull at 41c.@43c. Oats in fairdemand and firm at 36c.@40c. Rye dull at 63c.@62c. Barley dull and unchanged. Pork quiet at $17, spot; $17 77½@$18, seller May. Bulk-meats quiet but firm; shoulders, 6¼c.; Clear Ribs, 8 5c.; Clear Sides, 8¾c. Bacon steady; shoulders, 7½c.; Clear Ribs, 9¼c.; Clear Sides, 10c. Lard steady; steam rendered, $10 65@$10 70; Kettle do., $11 50@$12. Whisky steady with a fair demand at $1 05. Butter dull and lower for mixed lots at 15c.@18c.; rolls dull and lower; common, $5 25@ $5 75; fair to good, $6@$6 50; choice, $6 50@$6 75; packing, $6 15@$6 30; heavy, $5 45@$6 00; receipts, 3,874 head; shipments, 435 head.

BUFFALO, Jan. 30.—Receipts—Flour, 4,200 bbls.; Wheat, 12,200 bushels; Corn, 19,600 bushels; Oats, 13,300 bushels; Barley, 1,200 bushels; Rye, 4,500 bushels. Shipments—Flour, 3,400 bbls.; Wheat, 11,200 bushels; Corn, 18,400 bushels; Oats, 13,300 bushels; Barley, 1,200 bushels; Rye, 4,500 bushels. Market quiet. Sales—300 bbls. of Flour at unchanged prices; 19 cars No. 2 Spring Wheat at 83c.@83½c.; 6 cars do., to arrive, on private terms, 10 cars of sample do. at 81½c., 1 car No. 1 White Wheat at $1 00; 1 car extra White Winter at $1 02; 2 cars Ohio Oats, on the track, at 43c.; 3 cars State Barley at 68c.@73c. Other articles quiet and unchanged. Rail freights unchanged.

NEW-ORLEANS, Jan. 30.—Hay dull, weak, and lower; prime held at $15@$17. Pork dull, weak, and lower at $17 50@$17 75. Baltimore meats quiet and weak; shoulders, 5½c.; packed, 6½c.@6¾c.; Clear Ribs, 8½c.@8¾c.; Clear sides, 9½c.@9¾c. Bacon in good demand at full prices; held at 7¾c. for shoulders; 10¼c. for Clear Ribs, and 10½c. for Clear Sides. Sugar active, but not quotably higher. Molasses quiet and weak; Centrifugal, 20c.@20c.; common, 30c.@32½c.; fair, 35c.@37c.; prime to choice, 42c.@48c. Other articles unchanged. Exchange—New-York, sight, at par. Sterling, $5 13 for the Bank Gold, 109¾@110.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 30.—Wool firm; Ohio, Pennsylvania, and West Virginia—XX and above, 46c.@48c.; X, 44c.@46c.; medium, 43c.@45c.; coarse, 36c.@38c. New-York, Michigan, Indiana, and Western—Fine, 42c.@44c.; medium, 43c.@44c.; coarse, 36c.@38c. Delaine combing, washed, 52c.@56c.; do., unwashed, 37c. Canada—Combing, 52½c.; fine unwashed, 20c.@28c.; coarse unwashed, 28c.@31c.; tub-washed, 40c.@45c. Colorado—Unwashed, 20c.@22c.; tub-washed, 17c.@ 18½c.; extra and merino pulled, 33c.@35c. No. 1 and super pulled, 33c.@37c. Texas—Fine and medium, 20c.@25c.; coarse, 17c.@20c. California—Fine and medium, 20c.@30c.; coarse, 15c.@20c.

MILWAUKEE, Jan. 30.—Flour quiet and unchanged. Wheat steady, opened lower; closed firm. No. 1 Milwaukee, $1 30; No. 2 do., $1 28¾; seller March, $1 30; seller April, $1 31⅞; No. 3 do., $1 19. Corn dull; No. 2, nominally 39½c. Oats dull; No. 2, 33¾c. Rye firm; 59½c. Barley unsettled and weak; lower; No. 2 Spring, 72c.; No. 3 do., nominally 58c. Provisions unsettled and irregular. Mess Pork, nominally $16 70. Prime Steam Lard, 10¾c. Dressed Hogs steady at $7 75@$7. Receipts—Flour, 2,900 bbls.; Wheat, 18,000 bushels. Shipments—Flour, 1,200 bbls.; Wheat, 5,500 bushels.

TOLEDO, Jan. 30.—Flour quiet. Wheat dull; Amber nilchigan, February, $1 44½; March, $1 48½; April, $1 52; No. 2 Red Amber, February, $1 43; March, $1 46. Corn steady; high mixed, 45c.; February, 45¾c.; No. 2, spot and February, 44¾c.; May, 49¾c.; Yellow, 45¼c.; No. 2 White, 44¼c. Oats quiet; No. 2, 36½c.; rejected, 32c. Clover-seed, $6 25. Receipts—100 bbls. Flour, 9,000 bushels Wheat, 36,000 bushels Corn, 1,000 bushels Oats Shipments—300 bbls. Flour, 3,000 bushels Wheat, 19,000 bushels Oats.

DETROIT, Jan. 30.—Flour quiet and unchanged. Wheat dull and weak; extra White Michigan, $1 52; Milling, $1 45¾; No. 1 White Michigan, $1 46¼; Milling, $1 42; No. 2 White Michigan, $1 34½; No. 1 Amber do., $1 44. Corn dull; High Mixed, 49c. bid; No. 1 Mixed, 48¾c. Oats lower; No. 2 Mixed, 41c. Receipts—Flour, 400 bbls.; Wheat, 4,220 bushels; Corn, 17,045 bushels; Oats, 3,245 bushels. Shipments—Flour, 1,695 bbls.; Wheat, 3,896 bushels; Corn, 2,224 bushels; Oats, 5,441 bushels.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 92.—Flour steady with a fair demand; Fancy, $7 25@$7 75; Family, $6 75@$7; Low grades, $4@$6. Wheat in good demand; White, $1 40@$1 50; Amber, $1 40@$1 50; Rejected, $1 15 @$1 30. Corn dull and nominal. Provisions quiet, but firm; Smoked Hams, 12c.; Mixed Sides, 8½c.; packed. Mess Pork jobbing at $16 50. Hogs—Receipts, 1,500 head; quoted at 3@7@$5.

LOUISVILLE, Jan. 30.—Flour firm; all offerings taken at yesterday's prices. Wheat firmer, but not quotably higher. Corn firmer at 4dc. Oats nominally unchanged. Rye steady and firm at 82c.@86c. Pork strong at $13 62½. Lard steady and unchanged. Bulk-meats in good demand at 8c.@8½c. and 9c. for Shoulders, Clear Ribs, and Clear Sides. Bacon weak; Shoulders, 7½c.; Clear Rib, 9¾c.; Clear Sides, 10c. Whisky steady at $1 05.

OSWEGO, Jan. 30.—Flour steady and unchanged; sales, 1,200 bbls. Wheat higher and wanted; No. 2 Milwaukee Club, $1 50; No. 2 Red Wabash, $1 05; No. 1 White Michigan, $1 52; extra do. do., $1 58. Corn dull and unchanged. Barley quiet; No. 1 Canada held at $1 02@$1 03; No. 2 do., 92c.@93c. Corn-meal unchanged. Mill-feed unchanged. Railroad Shipments—Flour, 1,300 bbls.

WILMINGTON, N. C., Jan. 30.—Spirits of Turpentine quiet at 41c. Rosin quiet at $1 05 for Strained. Crude Turpentine quiet at $1 90 for hard; $2 90 for Yellow Dip; $2 90 for Virgin. Tar quiet at $1 80.

PROVIDENCE, Jan. 30.—Printing Cloths firm at 7c. for best 64x64 goods, with a light stock.

FOREIGN MARKETS.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—12:30 P. M.—Consols, 96 1-16 for both money and the account. United States bonds, 1865s, 105½; 1867s, 11½; new 5s, 107⅝. Erie Railway shares, 9⅝; preferred, 21.

1:30 P. M.—Consols, 9d for both money and the account.

3:30 P. M.—Consols, 95 15-16 for both money and the account. The amount of bullion withdrawn from the bank of England on balance to-day is £120,000.

4 P. M.—Paris advices quote 5 P cent. Rentes at 106f for the account.

PARIS, Jan. 30.—Exchange on London, 25f 13c. for short sight.

FRANKFORT, Jan. 30.—United States bonds, new 5s, 103¾.

LIVERPOOL, Jan. 30.—Pork—Eastern, firmer at 80s.; Western, dull at 69s. Bacon, dull; Cumberland Cut at 46s.; short Rib at 43s.; Long Clear at 42s. 6d.; Short Clear at 44s. Hams—Long Cut dull at 48s. Shoulders, dull at 34s. Beef dull; India Mess at 90s.; Extra Mess at 107s.; Prime Mess at 80s. Lard—Prime Western steady at 52s. Tallow—Prime City dull at 42s. 6d. Turpentine—Spirit dull at 32s. 6d. Resin—Common dull at 5s. 3d.; Fine dull at 10s. 6d. Cheese—American Choice steady at 71s. Lard-oil—None in the market. Flour—Extra State dull at 26s. Wheat dull; No. 1 Spring at 10s. 9d.; No. 2 spring at 10s. 6d. Winter Southern at 11s. 1d.; Winter Western at 10s. 8d. Corn—Mixed Sott dull at 26s. 6d. for old, and steady 25s. 9d. for new.

1:30 P. M.—Cotton—The market is dull and easier; Middling Uplands, 6 12-16d.; Middling Orleans, 7d.; sales, 6,000 bales, including 1,000 bales for speculation and export; receipts 41,000 bales of which 31,000 bales were American. Futures opened easier and cheaper, but have since recovered the decline. Uplands, Low Middling clause, now landing, 6¾d.; Uplands, Low Middling clause, February and March delivery, 6¾d.; Uplands, Low Middling clause, March and April delivery, 6¾d.; Uplands, Low Middling clause, April and May delivery, 6 15-16d.; Uplands, Low Middling clause, May and June delivery, 7 1-32d.; also, sales of the same at 7 1-16d.; Uplands, Low Middling clause, June and July delivery, 7 3-32d. Uplands, Low Middling clause, shipped December, sail 6 25-32d.; also sales of the same at 6 15-16d.; Uplands, Low Middling clause, shipped January and February sail, 6¾d.; Uplands, Low Middling clause, shipped February and March, sail, 6 31-32d.; Uplands, Low Middling clause, February delivery, 6 25-32d.; Uplands, Low Middling clause, February and March delivery, 6 29-32d.; Uplands, Low Middling clause, April and May delivery, 7d.; Uplands, Low Middling clause, June and July delivery, 7 3-16d. Low Middling at mid. Orleans, 7d. Sales of the week 73,000 bales, including 10,000 for speculation and export, and 4,000 for actual consumption; stock 578,000 bales, including 400,000 American; actual export 6,000 bales; forwarded 37,000 bales; total stock of Cotton afloat 1,000 bales; of which 1,000 bales are American.

4:30 P. M.—Cotton—Uplands, Low Middling clause, March and April delivery, 6 29-32d.; Uplands, Low Middling clause, April and May delivery, 6 31-32d.; Uplands, Low Middling clause, July and August delivery, 7 3-32d.

5 P. M.—Breadstuffs—The receipts of Wheat for the past three days were 9,000 quarters, of which 7,000 quarters were American.

4:30 P. M.—Cotton—Uplands, Low Middling clause, May and June delivery, 7 1-32d.; also sales of the same at 7 1-16d.; Uplands, Low Middling Clause, July and August delivery, 7 3-16d.

5 P. M.—Cotton—Futures closed weak; Uplands, Low Middling clause, March and April delivery, 6⅞d.

Sales of American Cotton to-day, 4,000 bales. Refined Petroleum, 17d. for American. Spirits of Petroleum, 11d.

MANCHESTER, Jan. 30.—The market for Goods and Yarns is dull, and tending downward.

LONDON, Jan. 30—3 P. M.—Produce—Refined Petroleum, 16¾d. ₰ gallon.

LONDON, Jan. 30—3 P. M.—Produce—Common Rosin, 6s.; Spirits Turpentine, 30s. 6d.@31s. ₰ cwt.

5 P. M.—Produce—Tallow, 42s. 9d.@43s. ₰ cwt.

ANTWERP, Jan. 30.—Petroleum, 51½f. for fine Pale American.

THE COTTON MARKETS.

GALVESTON, Jan. 30.—Cotton irregular, nominal; Middling, 12¾c.; Low Middling, 11¾c.; Good Ordinary, 11¼c.; net receipts, 2,147 bales; exports to Great Britain, 6,248 bales; coastwise, 1,682 bales; sales, 228 bales; stock, 100,204 bales.

NEW-ORLEANS, Jan. 30.—Cotton quiet and easy; Middling, 12¾c.; Low Middling, 11¾c.; Good Ordinary, 11¼c.; net receipts, 10,075 bales; gross, 10,629 bales; exports to France, 3,289 bales; sales, 3,000 bales; stock, 290,938 bales.

SAVANNAH, Jan. 30.—Cotton steady; Middling, 12¾c.; Low Middling, 12¼c.; Good Ordinary, 11¾c.; net receipts, 1,998 bales; exports to the Continent, 1,500 bales; sales, 700 bales; stock, 77,281 bales.

MOBILE, Jan. 30.—Cotton weak; Middling, 12¼d.; Low Middling, 11¾c.; Good Ordinary, 11¼c.; net receipts, 1,287 bales; exports, coastwise, 267 bales; sales, 1,000 bales; stock, 74,356 bales.

CHARLESTON, Jan. 30.—Cotton dull; Middling, 12¾c.; Low Middling, 12¾c.; Good Ordinary, 12c.; net receipts, 1,176 bales; exports, to Great Britain, 6,913 bales; sales, 500 bales; stock, 47,729 bales.

RUSSIA'S CHANCE TO REACH CONSTANTINOPLE.

The Constantinople correspondent of a London paper says: "As to the resistance the Turkish Army is likely to make to a Russian advance, I have talked to an English officer who has recently examined the defenses of Turkey, has studied thoroughly the Turkish Army and its powers of resistance, its organization, and the quality of its officers. He is strongly Turcophile, and if I could mention his name he would be recognized as an authority on the question. He says that if war were declared between Russia and Turkey, the Russian Army would be just nine weeks in reaching Constantinople from the time they crossed the Pruth! The Turkish Army, he says, will make but the slightest resistance, and will scarcely retard the march of the powerful, well-disciplined, well-commanded Army of the Russians. His estimate of the time required may be right, or it may be wrong, but the Russians are certainly in no very great hurry, and can take their time. I may say, however, that I do not believe in their undertaking anything before the month of April. There is not the slightest necessity of a Winter campaign, which is always more trying to an invading Army than to one on the defensive, and the Russians would be very foolish to undertake it. The reason, I may remark, that the Turks refuse the project of the conference is, to the best of my belief, the idea they have conceived in their own brain, that Russia is really anxious to withdraw from the advanced position she has taken. They say the mobilization is a failure and has disclosed many grave defects of organization. They have, besides, discovered that all the powder supplied the Army is nearly worthless, and the troops are dying off like flies of typhus, which has broken out in the Army. Every sign of conciliation, therefore, on the part of Russia, every new concession, is in their eyes a mark of weakness and a desire for peace, which they have only to encourage by showing themselves intractable and determined upon resistance. The armistice accorded by Ignatieff to other terms interpreted by them in the same sense, and this concession, more than anything else, has probably decided them to adopt their present arrogant and defiant attitude."

THE REAL ESTATE MARKET.

The following business was transacted at the Exchange yesterday, (Tuesday,) Jan. 30:

A. J. Bleecker & Son, by order of the Supreme Court, in foreclosure, C. C. Bigelow, Esq., Referee, sold a five-story brick tenement-house, with lot 24.8 by 98.9, on East 26th st., south side, 250.4 feet west of 1st av., for $11,000, to William Strasberg, plaintiff in the legal action.

E. H. Lndlow & Co., by order of the Supreme Court, in foreclosure, Nathaniel Jarvis, Jr., Esq., Referee, sold a three-story and attic brick house, with lot 35 by 87.6, No. 42 North Moore st., south side, 75 feet east of Hudson st., for $12,750, to Daniel Pike, a defendant in the legal proceedings. The same firm, under a similar court order, William H. Hascall, Esq., Referee, disposed of the two four-story and basement brown-stone-front houses, with lots each 20 by 102.2, Nos. 311 and 313 East 74th st., north side, 160 feet east of 2d av., for $15,400, to Germania Life Insurance Company, plaintiff in the legal action.

B. P. Fairchild, under a Supreme Court foreclosure order, F. W. Loew, Esq., Referee, sold a four-story brick tenement-house, with lot 25 by 102.2, on East 81st st., south side, 350 feet east of 2d av., for $7,315, to W. A. Candwell, plaintiff. The same auctioneer, under a similar court decree, same Referee, disposed of a plot of land, 100.11 by 125, on 9th av., north-west corner of 105th st., for $9,500, to buyer in behalf.

H. W. Coates, under a Supreme Court foreclosure decree, George N. Williams, Esq., Referee, sold one lot 25 by 100.5, on West 70th st., north side, 250 feet west of 8th av., for $3,000, to Charles G. Harcus, plaintiff.

James M. Miller, also under a Supreme Court foreclosure order, Charles Price, Esq., Referee, sold a two-story frame house, with lot 21.9 by 102.2, on East 83d st., south side, 301 feet east of 4th av., for $3,000, to Union Dime Savings Bank, plaintiff in the legal proceeding.

Hugh N. Camp, also under a Supreme Court foreclosure decree, A. P. Dixon, Esq., Referee, sold a plot of land, 52 lots, 201.5 by 650, bounded by 9th and 10th ave., 95th and 96th sts., for $85,500, to Philip Benjamin.

Scott & Myers, by order of the Supreme Court, W. A. Boyd, Esq., Referee, sold four lots, each 17 by 99.11, on West 126th st., north side, 75 feet east of 6th av., for $25,984, to John H. Biker, plaintiff in the legal action.

TO-DAY'S AUCTIONS.

To-day's sales, all at the Exchange, are as follows:

By Louis Mesier, foreclosure sale, by order of the Court of Common Pleas, George Waddington, Esq., Referee, at the building, with lot 20 by 113.1 by 19.4 by 113.6, on Broadway, east side, 62.4 feet north of 21st st.

By R. Walters' Son, Supreme Court partition sale, W. P. Melvin, Esq., Referee, of the buildings, with lease of two lots, together in size 50.2 by 75.8, on East Broadway, south-west corner of Catharine st.; lease dated May 19, 1858.

By H. W. Coates, Supreme Court foreclosure sale, H. E. Woodward, Esq., Referee, of a house, with lot 25 by 98.9, on East 30th st., north side, 175 feet west of 1st av.

By A. J. Bleecker & Son, foreclosure sale, by order of the Court of Common Pleas, F. W. Loew, Esq., Referee, of a house, with lot 25 by 99.11, on Columbia st., east side, 175 feet south of Ewington st.

By J. O. Fullerton, Supreme Court foreclosure sale, John H. V. Arnold, Esq., Referee, of a plot of land, 83.10 by 100, on 10th av., south-west corner 21st st.; also, a house, with lot 25 by 91, on West 20th st., north side, 100 feet west of 10th av.

By Scott & Myers, Supreme Court foreclosure sale, A. P. Fitch, Esq., Referee, of a house, with lot 20.10 by 80, on 2d av., north-east corner 115th st.

MISCELLANEOUS.

To Manufacturers of Fertilizers.

FOR SALE, AMMONIACAL MATTERS,

In fine mechanical condition, and containing from 13 to 14 per cent. ammonia, at $2 25 per unit of ammonia per ton of 2,000 pounds, free on board, at Baltimore, buyers furnishing cags. Address

AMOR SMITH & SONS,
Post Office Box No. 38, Baltimore, Md.

A MAN OF A THOUSAND.

Having discovered, in a manner which might be considered almost providential, a positive cure for consumption and all Lung Complaints, I feel it my duty to make it known in a practical manner by furnishing a sample bottle, free of charge, to all sufferers, my only hope of remuneration being that the medicine will perform all I claim for it. The ingredients are of the choicest herbal products and perfectly safe; will be sent FREE TO ALL. Address at once, DR. O. PHELPS BROWN, No. 21 Grand st., Jersey City, N. J.

PERFECTION: BOKER'S BITTERS.

No. 78 Joon st., New-York. Post Office Box No. 1,029.
L. FUNKE, Jr., SOLE AGENT.

CHINESE SAM XAM.—FOR INWARD PILES; immediate relief; permanent cure; is easily prepared and used, and had of any druggist or country grocer. Send 15 cents and get recipe of HOYT & BEATTY, 246 Grand st.

EPPS' COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in packets and tins, by grocers, labelled thus: JAMES EPPS & CO., Homœopathic Chemists, No. 48 Threadneedle st. and No. 170 Piccadilly, London, England. New-York Depot, SMITH & VANDERSEKEN, Park place.

HORSES AND CARRIAGES.

THE UP-TOWN OFFICE OF THE TIMES.

The up-town office of THE TIMES is located at No. 1,257 Broadway, bet. 31st and 32d sts. Open daily. Sundays included, from 4 A. M. to 9 P. M. Subscriptions received, and copies of THE TIMES for sale.

ADVERTISEMENTS RECEIVED UNTIL 9 P. M.

THE CLUB BOARDING-STABLE advertises to board private coach teams for $50 a month, with one vehicle, and furnishes the harness gratis.
C. GLASSEY, No. 119 West 54th st.

MUSICAL.

A GREAT OFFER!! These Hard Times dispose of 100 PIANOS & ORGANS, new and second-hand, of first-class makers, including WATERS', at lower prices for cash or installments or to let until paid for than ever before offered. WATERS' GRAND SQUARE and UPRIGHT PIANOS & ORGANS are the BEST MADE. AGENTS WANTED. Illustrated Catalogues mailed. A liberal discount to Teachers, Ministers, Churches, etc. Sheet music at half price. HORACE WATERS & SONS, Manufctrs. and Dealers, 40 East 14th st., Union square, N. Y.

PROPOSALS.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

Sealed proposals will be received by the Board of School Trustees of the Nineteenth Ward, at the hall of the Board of Education, corner of Grand and Elm sts., until TUESDAY, Feb. 13, 1877, and until 4 o'clock P. M., of said day, for furnishing sliding doors, &c., in Grammar School house No. 18, on East 51st st., near Lexington av.

Plans and specifications may be seen at the office of the Superintendent of School Buildings, No. 146 Grand st., third floor.

Two responsible and approved sureties, residents of this City, will be required from the successful bidder.

The party submitting a proposal and the parties proposing to become sureties, must each write his name and place of residence on said proposal.

The Trustees reserve the right to reject any or all of the proposals submitted.

J. O. ALSTON,
T. T. HOPKINS,
K. H. POMEROY,
M. THALMESSINGER,
JOHN C. DONNELLY,
Board of School Trustees, Nineteenth Ward.
Dated New-York, Jan. 31, 1877.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

Sealed proposals will be received by the Board of School Trustees of the Twelfth Ward, at the Hall of the Board of Education, corner of Grand and Elm sts., until TUESDAY, the 6th day of February, 1877, and until 4 o'clock P. M. on said day, for altering and fitting up the premises on the north-east corner of Avenue A and 118th st. for school purposes.

Plans and specifications may be seen at the office of the Superintendent of School Buildings, No. 146 Grand st., third floor.

Two responsible and approved sureties, residents of this City, will be required from the successful bidder.

The party submitting a proposal, and the parties proposing to become sureties must each write his name and place of residence on said proposal.

The Trustees reserve the right to reject any or all of the proposals submitted.

HOWELL G. ROLSTON,
DAVID H. KNAPP,
CHARLES CRAMP,
JOHN L. T. NEILS,
GERMAIN HASCHELL,
Board of School Trustees, Twelfth Ward.
Dated New-York, Jan. 23, 1877.

REAL ESTATE WANTED.

WANTED—A LARGE HOUSE, SUITABLE FOR A first-class boarding-house: must be below 20th st., and between 6th and 4th avs.; partly furnished preferred. Address, giving full particulars, W., No. 28 West 12th st.

WANTED—TO BUY OR HIRE ON THE HUDSON, forty to sixty miles from New-York, house and about ten acres of land, at moderate cost. Address E. H. VAN INGEN, No. 490 Broadway.

CITY REAL ESTATE.

A LARGE NUMBER OF HOUSES BELONGing to estates and institutions for sale or rent at low rates. KINGMON F. PAGE, No. 42 East 23d st.

LARGE AND SMALL HOUSES, AT SPECially reduced prices. V. K. STEVENSON, Jr., & Pine st., and 33 East 17th st.

COUNTRY REAL ESTATE.

ORANGE, N. J.—COUNTRY HOUSES, LANDS, and village lots for sale; a great variety also, furnished houses and lands to rent for season or year, by WALTER R. SMITH, formerly Blackwell & Smith, Orange, corner of Main and Pond sts.

DWELLINGS TO LET.

TO LEASE—$900.—FOUR-STORY BROWN-STONE, high-stoop houses, 22x55 feet, on lot 100 feet, situated on 3d st., Brooklyn, near 7th av., and on the park ground adjoining Prospect Park. This is the extra-wide street leading to the entrance to the Park. This is the highest and most healthful part of the whole city. The houses are first-class in every respect, in perfect order, and immediate possession can be given. Apply to J. B. RANDEL & SON, No. 117 Broadway, New-York, or to IRA A. KIMBALL, corner 5th av. and 9th st., Brooklyn.

TO LET OR FOR SALE—AT PLAINFIELD, N. J., desirable residence; four minutes from depot; large house, large garden, stable; plenty shade trees; 2 acres of different kinds. Inquire at No. 337 West 22d st.

HOUSES REGISTERED, AND PRINTED Lists free. V. K. STEVENSON, Jr., & Pine st., and Union square.

STORES, &C. TO LET.

TO LET—AN OFFICE IN THE TIMES BUILDING, second floor, 23 feet by 28 feet, in good condition, suitable for a lawyer's office. apply to
GEORGE JONES,
Times office.

DESIRABLE WELL-LIGHTED LOFTS IN the double building Nos. 39 and 41 East 13th st., near Broadway. Apply to owner, No. 46 West 26th st.

STEAM POWER AND FIRST FLOOR AND Cellar, 50x80 feet, Nos. 188 and 190 Houston st. Inquire in the corner.

TO LET—BUILDING NO. 118 WARREN ST. Apply to JOHN B. HILLYER, owner, No. 18 New st.

REAL ESTATE WANTED.

WANTED—A LARGE HOUSE, SUITABLE FOR A first-class boarding-house: must be below 20th st., and between 6th and 4th avs.; partly furnished preferred. Address, giving full particulars, W., No. 28 West 12th st.

WANTED—TO BUY OR HIRE ON THE HUDSON, forty to sixty miles from New-York, house and about ten acres of land, at moderate cost. Address E. H. VAN INGEN, No. 490 Broadway.

SITUATIONS WANTED.

FEMALES.

THE UP-TOWN OFFICE OF THE TIMES.

The up-town office of THE TIMES is located at No. 1,257 Broadway, bet. 31st and 32d sts. Open daily, Sundays included, from 4 A. M. to 9 P. M. Subscriptions received, and copies of THE TIMES for sale.

ADVERTISEMENTS RECEIVED UNTIL 9 P. M.

A LADY WHO WRITES A GOOD LEGIBLE hand would like some copying to do at her own home, or would accept a position as visiting governess; satisfactory references given. Address Box No. 5,438 Post Office.

CHAMBER-MAID AND WAITRESS.—BY A respectable young English girl as chamber-maid and waitress; no objection to help take care of children; is willing and obliging; best City reference. Call at No. 448 7th av., between 34th and 35th sts.; rear the bell twice.

CHAMBER-MAID AND SEAMSTRESS.—BY two young girls in a private family—one as chamber-maid and waitress, the other as seamstress; will do light chamber-work; three years' reference. Can be seen at present employer's. No. 44 West 28th st.

CHAMBER-MAID AND SEAMSTRESS.—BY a respectable young girl; can operate on Wheeler & Wilson sewing-machine; best City reference. Call or address No. 228 East 44th st.

CHAMBER-MAID.—BY A RESPECTABLE young girl; will assist with children; no objection to a boarding-house; reference. Call at No. 302 West 33d st.

CHAMBER-MAID AND WAITRESS.—BY A respectable girl, or nurse and plain sewing; no objections to the country; three years' City reference. Call at 244 West 39th st., near 8th av., present employer's.

CHAMBER-MAID AND WAITRESS.—BY A young woman; no objection to the country; three years' City reference. Address M. C., Box No. 271, TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, NO. 1,257 BROADWAY.

CHAMBER-MAID.—BY A YOUNG GIRL AS first-class chamber-maid; is thoroughly competent; willing and obliging; first-class City reference. Call at No. 320 East 26th st., Room No. 9.

CHAMBER-MAID AND LAUNDRESS.—BY a young woman in a situation as chamber-maid and laundress; best City reference. Call at No. 731 3d av., third bell.

CHAMBER-MAID AND WAITRESS.—BY A young colored girl; is first class; City or country; good City reference. Address M. E., Box No. 304 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, No. 1,257 BROADWAY.

CHAMBER-MAID.—BY A RESPECTABLE GIRL as chamber-maid or waitress; City reference. Call at No. 345 East 34th st.

CHAMBER-MAID AND SEAMSTRESS OR WAITRESS.—By a competent Protestant person; best City reference. Call at 222 East 29th st., top floor front.

CHAMBER-MAID.—BY A COLORED CHAMBERmaid; with reference; City or country. Apply at No. 102 West 32d st.

CHAMBER-MAID.—BY A YOUNG WOMAN, AS chamber-maid and seamstress, or would take care of grown children. Call at No. 322 West 40th st.

CHAMBER-MAID AND WAITRESS.—BY A young girl; willing and obliging; best City reference. Call at No. 219 East 21st st.

CHAMBER-MAID AND SEAMSTRESS, OR would take care of children; has good City reference. Apply at No. 95 1st av., two flights up.

CHAMBER-MAID.—BY A RESPECTABLE YOUNG girl as chamber-maid and laundress; best City reference from last place. Call at No. 147 East 32d st.

COOK, CHAMBER-MAID, AND WAITRESS.—By two sisters in one house; both good laundresses; will do work of small family, if required; City or country; best of City references. Call at No. 230 East 46th st.

COOK, WASHER, AND IRONER.—BY A respectable woman in a small private family; is a good cook and baker; no objection to a private boarding-house; best City reference. Can be seen for two days at No. 346 East 13th st.

COOK.—BY A FIRST-CLASS COOK, IN A PRIvate family; understands both French and American cooking; can take entire charge of kitchen; City or country, six years' reference. Call at No. 157 West 27th st.

COOK—WAITRESS.—BY TWO GIRLS, (ENGLish Protestants;) one as first-class cook; the other is an excellent waitress; City or country; best City reference. Call for two days at No. 145 East 26th st., near Lexington av.

COOK, WASHER, AND IRONER, OR GENeral House-work.—By a neat, industrious girl; is a capable cook, and respectful servant, with best references; City or country. Call at No. 167 Atlantic st., Brooklyn.

COOK, WASHER, AND IRONER.—By a respectable young girl as first-class cook, washer, and ironer; good reference; country preferred. Call at No. 411 East 17th st.

COOK, &c.—IN A PRIVATE FAMILY TO COOK, wash, and iron, or would do general house-work in a small family; good reference. Apply at No. 328 Lexington av.

COOK.—BY A RESPECTABLE WOMAN AS GOOD Cook; will assist with washing and ironing; good City reference. Address No. 210 East 28th st., second floor, back.

COOK.—BY A YOUNG WOMAN AS COOK; WILLing to assist in washing and ironing; no objection to the country; good reference. Call at No. 344 East 23d st., second floor, back room.

COOK.—BY A SCOTCH WOMAN; UNDERSTANDS French and English cooking, baking, and pastry; all kinds of sweets; twelve years' City reference; no cards answered. Call at No. 4 West 43d st.

COOK.—BY A COMPETENT WOMAN IN A PRIVATE family; understands family baking; is a good washer, and excellent shirt ironer; good City reference. Call at No. 211 West 29th st., first floor.

COOK.—BY A RESPECTABLE WOMAN (COLored) in private family or first-class boarding-house; good City reference. Call or address Mrs. J. T. B., No. 151 West 24th st., top floor.

COOK, WASHER, AND IRONER.—BY A respectable girl to cook, wash, and iron in a private family; City reference. Call at No. 123 West 24th st., Room No.

SHIPPING.

WHITE STAR LINE.
FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL. CARRYING UNITED STATES MAIL.

The steamers of this line take the Lane Routes recommended by Lieut. Maury, U.S.N., while south of the Banks on the passage to Queenstown all the year round.

CELTIC.....SATURDAY, Feb. 3, 8:30 A. M.
ADRIATIC.....SATURDAY, Feb. 10, at 3 P. M.
BRITANNIC.....SATURDAY, Feb. 24, 2 P. M.
CELTIC.....SATURDAY, March 10, at 2 P. M.

From White Star Dock, Pier No. 52 North River.

These steamers are unsurpassed in size and insurpassed in appointments. The saloon, stateroom, smoking and bath rooms are sumptuous, where the noise and motion are least felt, affording a degree of comfort hitherto unattainable at sea.

Rates—Saloon $80 and $100, gold; return tickets on favorable terms. Steerage, $30.

For inspection of plans and other information apply at the Company's office, No. 37 Broadway, New-York.

B. J. CORTIS, Agent.

CUNARD LINE B. & N. A. R. M. S. P. CO.
NOTICE.

With the view of diminishing the chances of collision the steamers of this line take a specified course for all seasons of the year.

On the outward passage from Queenstown to New-York or Boston, crossing meridian of 50 at 43 latitude, by nothing to the north of 43.

On the homeward passage, crossing the meridian of 47 at 42, or nothing to the north of 42.

FROM NEW-YORK FOR LIVERPOOL AND QUEENSTOWN.
ABYSSINIA...WED. Jan. 31 PARTHIA...WED. Feb. 14
ALGERIA...WED. Feb. 7 CHINA...WED. Feb. 21

Steamers marked * do not carry steerage passengers.

Cabin passage, $80, $100, and $130, gold, according to accommodation. Return tickets on favorable terms.

Steerage tickets to and from all parts of Europe at very low rates. Freight and passage office, No. 4 Bowling Green.

CHAS. G. FRANCKLYN, Agent.

PASSENGERS PER STEAM-SHIP ABYSSINIA embark from the Cunard Wharf, foot of Grand street, Jersey City, at 7 A. M., WEDNESDAY, Jan. 31, 1877.

CHAS. G. FRANCKLYN,
No. 4 Bowling Green, New-York.

ATLAS MAIL LINE.
BI-MONTHLY SERVICE TO JAMAICA, HAYTI, COLOMBIA, and ASPINWALL, and to PANAMA and SOUTH PACIFIC PORTS (via Aspinwall.) First-class full-powered iron screw steamers, from Pier No. 51 North River.

For KINGSTON (Jam.) and AUX CAYES.
ATLAS.....Feb. 8
For HAYTI, COLOMBIA, ISTHMUS OF PANAMA, and SOUTH PACIFIC PORTS (via Aspinwall.)
ANDES.....Feb. 14
ALPS.....Feb. 28

Superior first-class passenger accommodation.
PIM, FORWOOD & CO., Agents.
No. 56 Wall st.

LIVERPOOL AND GREAT WESTERN STEAM COMPANY. (LIMITED.)
LIVERPOOL (Via Queenstown.)
CARRYING THE UNITED STATES MAIL.

TUESDAY.

Leaving Pier No. 46 North River as follows:
WYOMING.....Feb. 6, at noon
DAKOTA.....Feb. 13, at 3 P. M.
NEVADA.....Feb. 20, at 10 A. M.
IDAHO.....Feb. 27, at 3 P. M.
MONTANA.....March 6, at 10 A. M.
WISCONSIN.....March 13, at 3 P. M.

RATES OF PASSENGERS REDUCED.

Steerage, $26; intermediate, $40; cabin, $65 to $80, according to state-room. Offices, No. 29 Broadway.

WILLIAMS & GUION.

GREAT SOUTHERN
FREIGHT AND PASSENGER LINE.
SAILING FROM PIER NO. 29 NORTH RIVER.
WEDNESDAYS and SATURDAYS at 3 P. M.,
FOR CHARLESTON, S.C., FLORIDA, THE SOUTH, AND SOUTH-WEST.

GEO. W. CLYDE.....WEDNESDAY....Jan. 31
CHAMPION.....SATURDAY....Feb. 3

SUPERIOR PASSENGER ACCOMMODATIONS.

Insurance to destination one-half 1 per cent.

Goods forwarded free of commission. Passenger tickets and bills of lading issued in connection at the office of

JAMES W. QUINTARD & CO., Agents,
No. 177 West st., corner Warren.

Or W. P. CLYDE & CO., No. 8 Bowling Green.

Or BENTLEY D. HASELL, General Agent
Great Southern Freight Line, 317 Broadway.

ANCHOR LINE U. S. MAIL STEAMERS.
NEW-YORK AND GLASGOW

Victoria....Feb. 3, 9 A. M. | Alsatia....Feb. 17, 8 A. M.
Bolivia....Feb. 10, 2 P. M. | Anchoria....Feb. 24, 2 P. M.

TO GLASGOW, LIVERPOOL, OR LONDERRY.

Cabins $65 to $80, according to accommodations; intermediate, $35; Steerage $28.

NEW-YORK AND LONDON.

Elysia....Jan. 31, 3 P. M. | Italia....Feb. 10, 2 P. M.

Cabins, $55 to $70. Steerage, $28. Cabin excursion tickets at reduced rates. Drafts issued for any amount at current rates. Company's Pier Nos. 20 and 21, North River, N. Y.

HENDERSON BROTHERS,
Agents, No. 7 Bowling Green.

NORTH GERMAN LLOYD.
STEAM-SHIP LINE BETWEEN NEW-YORK, SOUTHAMPTON, AND BREMEN.

Company's Pier, foot of 24th st., Hoboken.

WESER.....Sat., Feb. 3 | OHIO.....Sat., Feb. 17
RHEIN.....Sat. Feb. 10 | HERMANN.....Sat., Feb. 24

RATES OF PASSAGE FROM NEW-YORK TO SOUTHAMPTON, HAVRE, OR BREMEN.

First cabin.....$100 gold
Second cabin.....60 gold
Steerage.....30 currency
Return tickets at reduced rates. Prepaid steerage certificates, $32 currency. For freight or passage apply to OELRICHS & CO., No. 2 Bowling Green.

INDIAN LINE.—MAIL STEAMERS.
FOR CITY POINT, VIRGINIA.

CITY OF CHESTER, Saturday, Feb. 17, at 7:30 A. M.
CITY OF RICHMOND, Saturday, March 3, at 8 A. M.
CITY OF BRUSSELS, Saturday, March 17, 6:30 A. M.

From pier 45 North River.

CABIN, $80 and $100, gold. Return tickets on favorable terms. STEERAGE, $24, Currency. Drafts at lowest rates.

Saloons, State-rooms, Smoking- and Bath-rooms amidships. JOHN G. DALE, Agent,
Nos. 15 and 33 Broadway, N. Y.

ONLY DIRECT LINE TO FRANCE.
THE GENERAL TRANSATLANTIC COMPANY'S MAIL STEAMERS BETWEEN NEW-YORK AND HAVRE, Calling at PLYMOUTH (Eng. Ch.) for the landing of Passengers.

Will sail from Pier No. 42 North River, foot of Morton st., every alternate Saturday, beginning with:

LABRADOR, Sanglier.....Saturday, Feb. 10, 3 P. M

For particulars address
LOUIS DE BEBIAN, Agent, No. 55 Broadway.

NATIONAL LINE—Pier 44 and 51 North River.
FOR LONDON.

HOLLAND.....THURSDAY, Feb. 1, 8 A. M.

FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.

Egypt....Feb. 3, at 9 A. M. | Helvetia...Feb. 10. 2 P. M.

Cabin and steerage passage, and drafts from £1 upward, issued at very low rates. Company's offices No. 69 Broadway.

J. W. J. HURST, Manager.

FOR SAVANNAH GA.,
THE FLORIDA PORTS,
AND THE SOUTH AND SOUTH-WEST.

GREAT SOUTHERN FREIGHT AND PASSENGER LINE, CENTRAL RAILROAD OF GEORGIA, AND ATLANTIC AND GULF RAILROAD.

WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY.

E. LIVINGSTON, Capt. MALLORY, WEDNESDAY, Jan. 31, Pier No. 43 North River. 3 P. M. GEO. YONGE, Agent, No. 409 Broadway.

SAN SALVADOR, Capt. NICKERSON, SATURDAY, Feb. 3, Pier 43 North River, 3 P. M. GEO. YONGE, Agt., 409 Broadway.

GENERAL BARNES, Capt. CREESMAN, WEDNESDAY, Feb. 7, Pier 16 East River, 3 P. M. MURRAY, FERRIS & CO., Agts., 62 South st.

SAN JACINTO, Capt. HAZARD, SATURDAY, Feb. 10, Pier 43 North River, 3 P. M. GEO. YONGE, Agt., 409 Broadway.

Insurance ONE-HALF PER CENT. Superior accommodations for passengers. Through rates and bills of lading in connection with Central R. R. of Georgia, Atlantic and Gulf Railroad, and Florida steamers City Point and Dictator; also, with the steamer J. W. SCHUYLER, which has been placed on the inside route from Savannah to Florida, and offers unsurpassed accommodations.

C. D. OWENS, Agent, Pier 16 E. R.
GEORGE YONGE, Agent C. R. R. of Ga.,
No. 315 Broadway. No. 409 Broadway.

FLORIDA.
Caution to travelers! Great reduction in fare via the inland route, from Savannah to all Florida ports. Only $2 to Jacksonville. Meals and state-rooms extra. The elegant steamer J. B. SCHUYLER makes close connection with all Savannah steamers, thus forming the quickest and most reliable route, as well as the lowest in fare. Accommodations for passengers unsurpassed. Travelers are cautioned against purchasing through tickets via any other route.

PACIFIC MAIL AND PANAMA TRANSIT
STEAM-SHIP LINES.

FOR CALIFORNIA, JAPAN, CHINA, AUSTRALIA, NEW-ZEALAND, BRITISH COLUMBIA, OREGON, &c.

Sailing from Pier No. 42 North River.

For SAN FRANCISCO, via ISTHMUS OF PANAMA.
Steam-ship ACAPULCO.....Wednesday, Jan. 31

connecting for Central America and South Pacific ports.

From SAN FRANCISCO to JAPAN and CHINA.
Steam-ship ALASKA.....Thursday, Feb. 1

From San Francisco to Sandwich Islands, Australia, Japan, and New-Zealand.

Steam-ship ZEALANDIA.....Wednesday, Jan. 31

For freight or passage apply to
WM. F. CEVDE & CO., or H. J. BULLAY, Superintendent, No. 6 Bowling Green, Pier No. 42 N. R., foot Canal st.

NEW-YORK, HAVANA, AND MEXICAN MAIL S. S. LINE. Steamers leave Pier No. 3 North River, at 3 P. M.

FOR HAVANA DIRECT.
CITY OF VERA CRUZ.....Wednesday, Jan. 31
CITY OF NEW-YORK.....Wednesday, Feb. 7
CITY OF HAVANA.....Saturday, Feb. 17

FOR VERA CRUZ AND NEW-ORLEANS,
Via Havana, Progreso, Campeachy, Tuxpac, and Tampico.
CITY OF HAVANA.....Saturday, Feb. 17

Steamers will leave New-Orleans Feb. 2 and Feb. 23 for Vera Cruz and all the above ports.

Passage or freight apply to
ALEXANDER & SONS, Nos. 31 and 33 Broadway.

NEW-YORK AND HAVANA
DIRECT MAIL LINE.

These first-class steamships sail regularly at 3 P. M., from Pier No. 13 North River as follows:

CLYDE.....SATURDAY, Feb. 3
CUBA.....SATURDAY.....Feb. 10

Accommodations unsurpassed. For freight or passage apply to WM. P. CLYDE & CO., No. 6 Bowling Green. MCKELLER, LULING & CO., Agents to Havana.

HAMBURG American Packet Company's Line. For PLYMOUTH, CHERBOURG and HAMBURG.
WIRLAND.....Feb. 1 | GELLERT.....Feb. 15
FRISIA.....Feb. 8 | POMMERANIA.....Feb. 22

Rates of passage to Plymouth, London, Cherbourg, Hamburg, and all points in England, First Cabin, $100 gold; Second Cabin, $60 gold; Steerage, $30, currency.

KUNHARDT & CO., C.B. RICHARD & BOAS,
General Agents. General Passenger Agents.
61 Broadway, N. Y. 61 Broadway, N. Y.

SHIPPING.

STATE LINE.
NEW-YORK TO GLASGOW, LIVERPOOL, DUBLIN, BELFAST, AND LONDONDERRY.

These first-class full-powered steamers will sail from Pier No. 45 North River, foot of Canal st.

STATE OF INDIANA.....Thursday, Feb. 1
STATE OF PENNSYLVANIA.....Thursday, Feb. 8
STATE OF VIRGINIA.....Thursday, Feb. 22
STATE OF NEVADA.....Thursday, March 1

First cabin, $80, $65, and $70, according to accommodations; return tickets, $110, $125. Second cabin, $45; return tickets, $86. Steerage at lowest rates. Apply for cards, &c.

AUSTIN BALDWIN & CO., Agents,
No. 72 Broadway, New-York.

STEERAGE tickets at No. 45 Broadway, and at the company's pier, foot of Canal st., North River.

RED STAR STEAM-SHIP LINE.
Appointed to carry the Belgian and United States mails. The following steamers are appointed to sail

TO ANTWERP.
From Philadelphia. From New-York.
WADELAND.....Feb. 1 | KENILWORTH.....Feb. 8
NEDERLAND.....March 10 | SWITZERLAND.....Feb. 27

Intermediate passage in currency:

First Cabin, $90; Second Cabin, $60; Steerage, $26.
PETER WRIGHT & SONS, General Agents, Philadelphia.
No. 52 Broadway, New-York.
JOHN McDONALD, No. 8 Battery place, New-York

RAILROADS.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.
GREAT TRUNK LINE
AND UNITED STATES MAIL ROUTE.

Trains leave New-York, via Desbrosses and Cortlandt Streets Ferries, as follows:

Express for Harrisburg, Pittsburg, the West and South, with Pullman Palace Cars attached, 8:30 A. M., 6 and 8:30 P. M., daily.

For Williamsport, Lock Haven, Corry, and Erie, at 8:30 P. M., connecting at Corry for Titusville, Petroleum Centre, and the Oil Regions. For Williamsport and Lock Haven, 8:30 A. M.

For Baltimore, Washington, and the South, "Limited Washington Express" of Pullman Parlor Cars only, 9:30 A. M., arrive Washington at 4:10 P. M. Regular at 8:40 A. M., 1, 6, and 9 P. M. Sunday, 6 and 9 P. M.

Express for Philadelphia, 7:30, 8:30, 8:40, (9:30 Limited,) 10:30 A. M., 1, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8:30, 9 P. M., Sunday, 8:30 A. M., 4 P. M.

Emigrant and second-class, 7 P. M.

Accommodation for Trenton, 7 A. M., 2 and 4:10 P. M.

For trains to Newark, Elizabeth, Rahway, Princeton, Trenton, Perth Amboy, Flemington, Belvidere, and other points, see local schedules at all Ticket Offices.

Trains arrive from Pittsburg, 6:20 and 10:30 A. M., and 10:20 P. M. daily; 10:10 A. M. and 6:50 P. M. daily, except Monday. From Washington and Baltimore, 6:30, 9:50 A. M., 4:10, 5:10, and 10:20 P. M. Sunday, 9:30, 9:50 A. M. From Philadelphia, 5:05, 6:20, 6:30, 9:50, 10:10, 11:10, 11:50 A. M., 2:10, 4:10, 5:10, 6:50, 8:40, 10:10, and 10:20 P. M. Sunday 5:05, 6:20, 6:30, 9:50, 11:50, A. M., 6:50, 10:10, and 10:20 P. M.

Ticket Offices, Nos. 526 and 944 Broadway, No. 1 Astor House, and foot of Desbrosses and Cortlandt sts.; No. 4 Court st., Brooklyn; Nos. 114, 116, and 118 Hudson st., Hoboken; Depot, Jersey City. Emigrant Ticket Office, No. 8 Battery place.

FRANK THOMSON, D. M. BOYD, Jr.,
General Manager. General Passenger Agent.

TO PHILADELPHIA
via
PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.
THE OLD-ESTABLISHED ROUTE AND SHORT LINE between
NEW-YORK AND PHILADELPHIA.

14 Through Trains each way daily; 3 Depots in Philadelphia, 2 in New-York.

4 Tracks, the most improved Equipment, and the Fastest Time consistent with absolute safety.

Express Trains leave New-York, via Desbrosses and Cortlandt streets Ferries, as follows:

7:30, 8:30, 9:40, (9:30 Limited,) 10:30 A. M., 1, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8:30, 9 P. M., and 12 Midnight. Sunday, 8:30 A. M., 5, 6, 7, 8:30, and 9 P. M.

Returning, trains leave Philadelphia 3:20, 8:30, 7, 7:30, 8:30, and 11 A. M., (Limited Express, 1:55 P. M.,) 1:40, 4, 5:30, 7, and 7:35 P. M., and 12 Midnight. On Sunday, 3:20, 8:30, 7, 8:30 A. M., 4, 7, 7:35 P. M., and 12 Midnight.

Ticket Offices, Nos. 526 and 944 Broadway, No. 1 Astor House, and foot of Desbrosses and Cortlandt sts.; No. 4 Court st., Brooklyn; Nos. 114, 116, and 118 Hudson st., Hoboken; Depot, Jersey City. Emigrant Ticket Office, No. 8 Battery place.

FRANK THOMSON, D. M. BOYD, Jr.,
General Manager. General Passenger Agent.

NEW-YORK CENTRAL AND HUDSON RIVER RAILROAD.—Commencing Dec. 26, 1876, through trains will leave Grand Central Depot:

10:15 A. M. Western and Northern Express, with drawing-room cars to Canandaigua.

8:30 A. M., special Chicago and St. Louis Express, with through car to St. Louis.

11:00 A. M., Northern and Western Express.

3:30 P. M., special Albany, Troy and Western Express arrives at Buffalo 7:10 A. M.

6:00 P. M., Express, with sleeping cars, for Watertown and Canandaigua. Also for Montreal via Plattsburg.

8:30 P. M., Pacific Express, daily, with sleeping cars, for Rochester, Niagara Falls, Buffalo, Cleveland, Indianapolis, and Louisville. Also for Chicago, via both L. S. and M. C. Railroads, and to Montreal via St. Albans.

11:00 P. M., Express, with sleeping cars, for Albany and Troy. Way trains as per local Time Tables.

Tickets for sale at Nos. 252, 261, and 413 Broadway, and 4 Park place, the Company's offices. Nos. 7 Park place, 785 and 942 Broadway New-York, and 333 Washington st., Brooklyn.

C. B. MEEKER, General Passenger Agent.

ERIE RAILWAY.
Winter Arrangement of through trains. From Chambers Street Depot. (For 23d st. see note below.)

9:00 A. M., daily, except Sundays, Cincinnati and Chicago Limited, drawing-room coaches to Buffalo.

10:45 A. M., daily, except Sundays, Express Mail for Buffalo and the West. Sleeping coach to Dunkirk.

7:00 P. M., daily, Pacific Express to the West. Sleeping coaches through to Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Cincinnati, and Chicago without change. Hotel dining-coaches to Chicago.

7:00 P. M., except Sundays, Western Emigrant train.

Above trains leave Twenty-third Street Ferry at 8:45 and 10:15 A. M., and 6:45 P. M.

For local trains see time-tables and cards in hotels and depots.

JNO. N. ABBOTT, General Passenger Agent.

NEW-YORK, NEW-HAVEN, AND HARTFORD RAILROAD.
After Dec. 10, 1876, trains leave Grand Central Depot (42d st.) for New-Canaan Railroad at 8:05 A. M., 1:40 P. M.; Danbury and Norwalk Railroad at 8:05 A. M., 1:40 and 4:40 P. M.; Naugatuck Railroad at 8:05 A. M., and 3 P. M.; Housatonic Railroad at 8:05 A. M., and 3 P. M.; New-Haven and Northampton Railroad at 8:05 A. M., 12 M., and 3 P. M.; for Newport at 8:05 A. M. and 1 P. M.; Boston and Albany Railroad at 8:05 and 11 A. M., 3 and 9 P. M., (9 P. M. on Sunday;) Boston, (via Shore Line,) at 1 and 10 P. M., (10 P. M. on Sundays,) Boston and New-York Air Line, 8 A. M., 1 and 11:30 P. M.

Way trains as per local time-tables.

LEHIGH VALLEY RAILROAD.
ARRANGEMENT. PASSENGER TRAINS. JAN. 1. 1877.

Leave depots foot of Cortlandt and Debrosses sts., at 6:30 P. M.—Night Express, daily, for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Wilkesbarre, Pittston, Wayne, Elmira, Ithaca, Geneva, Auburn, Rochester, Buffalo, Niagara Falls, and the West. Pullman's sleeping coaches attached.

General Eastern office corner Church and Cortlandt sts. CHARLES H. CUMMINGS, Agent.

ROBERT H. SAYRE, Superintendent and Engineer.

WICKFORD RAILROAD ROUTE TO NEWPORT, R. I.
Passengers for this line take Pier No. 4, M. and 1 P. M. express trains from Grand Central Depot, arriving at 4:18 and 8 P. M. at Newport.

THEODORE WARREN, Superintendent.

STEAMBOATS.

STONINGTON LINE
FOR BOSTON AND ALL POINTS EAST.
REDUCED FARE.

Elegant steamers leave Pier No. 33 North River, foot of Jay st., at 4:30 P. M.

Tickets for sale at all principal ticket offices. State-rooms secured at offices of Westcott Express Company and at No. 363 Broadway.

CHAS. HEURICH, Agent.

FALL RIVER LINE
FOR
BOSTON AND THE EAST.
FARES REDUCED.

Leave New-York daily, (Sunday excepted,) from Pier No. 28 North River, foot of Murray st., 4:30 P. M.

BORDEN & LOVELL, Agents.
GEO. L. CONNOR, General Passenger Agent.

NEW-HAVEN, HARTFORD AND THE NORTH.—Steamers leave Peck slip for New-Haven at 3 P.M., (except Sundays,) connecting with road.

FOR BRIDGEPORT AND ALL POINTS ON Housatonic and Naugatuck Railroad.—Pare st. steamers leave Catharine slip at 11:30 A. M.

DRY GOODS.

R.H.MACY&CO.
BLACK DRESS SILKS

A SPECIALTY.

UNLIKE any other establishment in the country.

FOREIGN DRY GOODS, FANCY GOODS, and NOVELTIES by every EUROPEAN STEAMER.

ORDERS BY MAIL RECEIVE SPECIAL CARE.

CATALOGUES FREE.

14TH ST. AND 6TH AVENUE, N. Y.

RELIGIOUS NOTICES.

CHURCH OF THE HOLY TRINITY, MADISON av. and 42d st.—Open every evening, except Saturday. Rev. Joseph Odell, of Brooklyn, will preach this evening at 7:45 P. M. All are invited.

ICE-CREAM.

HORTON'S ICE-CREAM.
Made from PURE ORANGE COUNTY CREAM, appreciated for its purity, richness, and certainty of being delivered in good order.

Charlotte Russe and Jelly, delicious and cheap.

Nos. 9th Ave., 1,264 Broadway, and 75 Chatham st.

FINANCIAL.

VERMILYE & CO.
BANKERS
16 and 18 Nassau st., New-York.

DEALERS IN ALL ISSUES OF GOVERNMENT SECURITIES.
NEW-YORK CITY
AND BROOKLYN BONDS.
BUY AND SELL ON COMMISSION
RAILWAY STOCKS, BONDS, AND GOLD.

INTEREST ON DEPOSITS.

JAS. A. TROWBRIDGE, DONALD MACKAY
LATHAM A. FISH

CHASE & ATKINS,
BANKERS AND BROKERS,
NO. 18 BROAD STREET, NEW-YORK.

INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS SUBJECT TO DRAFT AT SIGHT.

GOLD, GOVERNMENT, STATE, MUNICIPAL, AND RAILROAD SECURITIES BOUGHT AND SOLD ON COMMISSION FOR CASH OR UPON MARGIN.

ELECTIONS.

MISSOURI PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY,
OFFICE, No. 5 BOWLING GREEN,
NEW-YORK, Jan. 26, 1877.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THE annual meeting of the stockholders of the Missouri Pacific Railway Company will be held at the office of the company, No. 5 Bowling Green, on TUESDAY, the 6th day of March, 1877, at 12 o'clock M., for the election of thirteen Directors for the ensuing year, and for the transaction of any other business that may come before the meeting.

The annual meeting of the Board of Directors will be held at the same office on WEDNESDAY, the 7th day of March, 1877, at 12 o'clock M.

The transfer-books will be closed on the afternoon of the 3d day of February, and will be reopened on the morning of the 8th day of March, 1877.

C. K. GARRISON, President.
C. L. WHITE, Secretary.

NEW-YORK, Jan. 30, 1877.

AT AN ELECTION OF "THE MECHANICS' and Traders' Exchange, held this day at their rooms, No. 24 Murray st., the following were elected officers of the Exchange for the ensuing year:

President, JOHN FARLEY. Vice Pres't, E. S. C. LAUGHAN. Treas., GILBERT I. BURNET. Sec., A. O. ROWE.

TRUSTEES.

JOHN NESBIT, ALEXANDER McGUIRE,
CHARLES S. SCHULTZ, B. F. BURROUGHS,
HENRY WILSON, JOHN McGLENSEY,
JAMES WEBB.

FOR INSPECTORS OF ELECTION.

John H. Rogers. Wm. Brennan, Nathan Peck.

DELAWARE, LACKAWANNA AND WESTERN RAILROAD COMPANY, No. 26 EXCHANGE PLACE,
NEW-YORK, Jan. 26, 1877.

THE ANNUAL ELECTION OF OFFICERS and managers of this company will be held at this office, on TUESDAY, the 20th day of February, prox., at 10 o'clock A. M.

Polls will be open between 10 and 11 o'clock.

Transfer-books will be closed from 31st January until 21st February.

A. J. ODELL, Secretary.

THE ANNUAL MEETING OF STOCKholders of the Harlem Coal Company for the election of a President and ten Directors, and for such other business as may come before the meeting, will be held at the company's office, No. 111 Broadway, Feb. 6, at 11 A. M. Polls open from 12 M. till 1 P. M.

S. T. ROSS, Secretary.

THE ANNUAL ELECTION FOR THIRTEEN Directors of the Atlantic Railroad Company will be held at the Depot, 6th st., corner of 43d st., on TUESDAY, Feb. 13, 1877, from 12 to 1 o'clock.

H. S. MOORE, Secretary.

CHASE & ATKINS,
BANKERS AND BROKERS,
NO. 18 BROAD STREET, NEW-YORK.

INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS SUBJECT TO DRAFT AT SIGHT.

GOLD, GOVERNMENT, STATE, MUNICIPAL, AND RAILROAD SECURITIES BOUGHT AND SOLD ON COMMISSION FOR CASH OR UPON MARGIN.

DIVIDENDS.

DIVIDEND.
OFFICE OF THE
Brewers' and Maltsters' Insurance Co.
No. 139 Broadway, New-York, Jan. 24, 1877.

The Board of Directors have this day declared a semi-annual dividend of

FIVE (5) PER CENT.,

payable Feb. 1. WM. B. OGDEN, Secretary.

Fiftieth Dividend.

CLINTON
FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY,
NO. 156 BROADWAY.
NEW-YORK, Jan. 4, 1877.

The usual semi-annual Dividend of TEN PER CENT. is payable on demand. G. T. PATTERSON, Jr., Secretary.

THE LAKE SHORE AND MICHIGAN SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY, TREASURER'S OFFICE,
NEW-YORK, Dec. 28, 1876.

THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF THIS Company have this day declared a dividend of one and one quarter (1¼) per cent. upon the capital stock thereof, out of the earnings for the six months which will end with the present month, payable on the 1st day of February next at the office of MESSRS. CHASE & ATKINS, No. 18 BROAD ST., NEW-YORK.

The transfer books will be closed at 3 o'clock P. M. on SATURDAY the 6th day of January next, and will reopen on the morning of FRIDAY the 2d day of February next. R. D. WORCESTER, Treasurer.

OFFICE OF THE NEW-YORK, PRO IDENCE AND BOSTON RAILROAD COMPANY, (STONINGTON RAILROAD,)
NEW-YORK, Jan. 25, 1877.

A QUARTERLY DIVIDEND OF TWO AND A ONE-HALF PER CENT., out of the earnings of the past three months, will be paid at the office of Messrs. M. Morgan's Sons, No. 39 William st., New-York, on the 10th day of February.

The transfer-books will be closed from the 1st to the 10th, both inclusive. F. B. SOYES, Secretary.

THE UNION TRUST COMPANY, OF NEW-YORK, Trustee, will pay TWENTY DOLLARS IN GOLD upon the coupons maturing Feb. 1, 1877, of the consolidated first mortgage land grant bonds of the MISSOURI, KANSAS AND TEXAS RAILWAY COMPANY which have been stamped, subject to the agreement of March 1, 1876. Coupons from registered bonds must be accompanied by an order from the registered holder, and all coupons must be left over night for examination. EDWARD KING, President.

EXCHANGE FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY,
Office No. 172 Broadway, corner Maiden lane.

The Board of Directors have declared a SEMI-ANNUAL DIVIDEND of FIVE (5) PER CENT., and an EXTRA DIVIDEND of FIVE (5) PER CENT., payable Feb. 1.

TRANSFER BOOKS will be closed from Jan. 20 to Feb. 1.

G. W. MONTGOMERY, Secretary.
New-York, Jan. 11, 1877.

THE ST NICHOLAS NATIONAL BANK OF NEW-YORK,
No. 7 Wall st., NEW-YORK, Jan. 30, 1877.

DIVIDEND.—A SEMI-ANNUAL DIVIDEND OF Four per Cent. has been declared by the Directors of this bank, payable on and after the 12th day of February next. The transfer books will be closed from the 1st to 13th proximo.

A. PARKHURST, Cashier.

CAPITAL $200,000.
ST. NICHOLAS INSURANCE COMPANY,
No. 166 BROADWAY,
NEW-YORK, Jan. 26, 1877.

THE USUAL SEMI-ANNUAL DIVIDEND of Five per Cent. has been declared, payable on and after the 1st day of February, 1877.

JACOB DU BOIS, Secretary.

MISSOURI PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY,
OFFICE No. 5 BOWLING GREEN,
NEW-YORK, Jan. 25, 1877.

THE COUPONS DUE ON FEB. 1, 1877, ON the first mortgage bonds of the Pacific Railroad Company (of Missouri) will be paid on and after that date, at the office of this company.

C. K. GARRISON, President.

BOSTON AND NEW-YORK AIR-LINE RAILROAD COMPANY,
TREASURER'S OFFICE, No. 13 WALL ST.,
NEW-YORK, Jan. 9, 1877.

THE INTEREST DUE FEB. 1, 1877, ON the First Mortgage Bonds of the Boston and New-York Air-Line Railroad Company will be paid at the office of Hatch & Foote, No. 12 Wall st.

D. B. HATCH, Treasurer.

OFFICE OF THE LENOX FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY,
No. 158 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK, Jan. 9, 1877.

FORTIETH DIVIDEND.

The Board of Directors have declared the usual semi-annual dividend of FIVE PER CENT., payable on demand.

A. H. WALTON, Secretary.

NEW-YORK, Jan. 30, 1877.

NOTICE.—THE COUPONS OF THE FIRST MORTgage bonds, and the interest on the guaranteed preferred stock of the Lexington and Missouri River Railroad Company, maturing Feb. 1, 1877, will be paid on and after that date at the office of Messrs M. K. JESUP, PATON & CO., No. 52 William st., New-York.

OFFICE OF CHASE & ATKINS,
BANKERS, NO. 18 BROAD ST.

THE INTEREST COUPONS of the DETROIT, MONROE AND TOLEDO RAILROAD COMPANY'S first mortgage bonds, due Feb. 1, will be paid at this office.

NEW-YORK, Jan. 22, 1877.

COUPONS.—THE COUPONS OF THE FIRST Mortgage bonds of the Columbus and Toledo Railroad Company, due on the 1st day of February next, will be paid on and after that date at the St. Nicholas National Bank. M. M. GREENE, President.

THE FEBRUARY COUPONS OF THE REAL Estate First Mortgage Bonds, guaranteed by the Mercantile Trust Company, will be paid at the office of the company, Equitable Building, No. 120 Broadway, on the 1st day of February next.

E. L. MONTGOMERY, Treasurer.

CORN EXCHANGE BANK, NEW-YORK, Jan. 24, 1877.

THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS HAVE DEclared a dividend of Five per Cent., payable Feb. 1, 1877. The transfer-books will be closed from the 24th inst. to 1st proximo. By order

WM. A. NASH, Cashier.

PACIFIC BANK, NEW-YORK, Jan. 12, 1877.

THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS HAVE THIS day declared a quarterly dividend of THREE PER CENT., payable on and after the 1st day of February.

E. BUCK, Cashier.

GALVESTON, HARRISBURG AND SAN ANTONIO RAILWAY CO.—The coupons of the bonds of the above road, due Feb. 1, 1877, will be paid on and after that date at the office of CHASE & STONE, No. 7 New st.

BOARDING AND LODGING.

THE UP-TOWN OFFICE OF THE TIMES.
The up-town office of THE TIMES is located at No. 1,257 Broadway, bet. 31st and 32d sts. Open daily, Sundays included, from 4 A. M. to 9 P. M. Subscriptions received, and copies of THE TIMES for sale.

ADVERTISEMENTS RECEIVED UNTIL 9 P. M.

NOS. 51 AND 53 WEST 25TH ST., NEAR MADISON SQUARE.—Handsomely furnished rooms on second floor; private table if required; bath, large closets, &c.; also pleasant room for gentlemen; table and house strictly first class.

NO. 434 5TH AV.,
A choice suite of apartments for a small family, or two or three gentlemen, with private table, bath, &c.

MRS. M. B. SUMNER,
NO. 2 WEST 39TH ST.

One rear parlor and connecting bedroom on first floor, and one front upper room.

SIXTEENTH ST., NEAR 6TH AV., NO. 121.—Pleasant, sunny front room, second floor; good board for two; also large hall room; terms low.

HANDSOME SECOND-FLOOR ROOMS TO let, together or singly, with board; terms moderate; references. No. 104 West 38th st.

NO. 33 WEST 27TH ST., NEAR BROADWAY.—Desirable front parlor and bed-room on second floor, with board.

FIFTH AV., NO. 81, FIRST DOOR BELOW 16TH ST.—Two handsome fourth-floor rooms, with board; moderate prices; references.

THIRTY-FOURTH ST., NO. 236, WEST.—Handsomely-furnished rooms for families or gentlemen, with board; references.

NO. 21 5TH AV.—PLEASANT THIRD-STORY front room and bedroom to let, with first-class board; also, large room on parlor floor; reference.

THIRTY-EIGHTH ST., NO. 207 WEST.—Rooms, with board; house and location unexceptionable; references.

NO. 7 GRAMERCY PARK.—TWO DESIRABLE rooms, furnished or unfurnished, and with or without board.

HANDSOMELY-FURNISHED ROOMS, WITH or without board, at No. 34 West 24th st.

NO. 5 WEST 42D ST.—DESIRABLE ROOMS, with superior board; references exchanged.

BOARD WANTED.

A YOUNG LADY ENGAGED IN SCHOOL wishes a warm room, with gas and board, in a refined private family, between 32d and 38th sts. and Madison and 5th avs.; moderate terms. Address M. F., No. 127 Hoyt st., Brooklyn.

FURNISHED ROOMS.

GENTEEL FURNISHED ROOMS TO RENT —At from $2 to $3 per week, in No. 63 Madison av.; references exchanged. Inquire of Mrs. McDERMOT, in the house.

A LARGE FRONT ROOM AND BEDROOM, good air and very quiet, on very low terms, furnished fit for man and wife. No. 76 36th st., corner of 5th av.

NO. 14 EAST 28TH ST.—BETWEEN 5TH AND Madison avs; handsomely furnished rooms, with all the conveniences, on moderate terms; also single room; references.

DESIRABLE FURNISHED ROOMS, WITHout board, at No. 18 West 25th st. Terms to suit the times.

TO GENTLEMEN, WITHOUT BOARD, A parlor bedroom, with hot and cold water, in private house. J. W. STEVENS, Broadway and 52d st.

NO. 34 EAST 20TH ST.—SECOND AND THIRD floor rooms for gentlemen, without board; references.

TO LET—A NICELY FURNISHED FRONT ROOM in a private family, at No. 204 East 17th st.

ROOMS WANTED.

DESK ROOM OR SMALL OFFICE WANTED in an iron warehouse, by a foreign steel agency. Address STEEL, Box No. 278 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, No. 1,257 BROADWAY.

WANTED—IN A PRIVATE HOUSE, FROM FIVE to seven rooms, with privilege of bath and laundry, by a small family; references. Address B, Box 302 TIMES UP-TOWN OFFICE, 1,257 BROADWAY.

ELECTIONS.

MISSOURI PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY,
OFFICE, No. 5 BOWLING GREEN,
NEW-YORK, Jan. 26, 1877.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THE annual meeting of the stockholders of the Missouri Pacific Railway Company will be held at the office of the company, No. 5 Bowling Green, on TUESDAY, the 6th day of March, 1877, at 12 o'clock M., for the election of thirteen Directors for the ensuing year, and for the transaction of any other business that may come before the meeting.

The annual meeting of the Board of Directors will be held at the same office on WEDNESDAY, the 7th day of March, 1877, at 12

DARK SPOTS OF INSURANCE

THE INSOLVENT SECURITY LIFE.

PROBABILITY OF SOME OF ITS OFFICERS BEING INDICTED FOR PERJURY—THE GRAND JURY SAID TO BE INVESTIGATING THE MATTER—A DECISION EXPECTED SOON.

It was rumored last evening that the Grand Jury have been investigating the questionable actions of some of the officers of the insolvent Security Life Insurance and Annuity Company, and had summoned before them several witnesses with a view to finding bills of indictment against the officers, which will probably be done at an early day. When the Security was declared insolvent, Mr. John A. McCall, the Deputy Superintendent of the Insurance Department of this State, made some damaging statements concerning the management, or rather mismanagement, of the concern, and it was then generally believed that the authorities would take some action in the matter. This belief was strengthened by the fact that the Deputy Superintendent, in his report of the condition of the company made to Acting Superintendent Smyth on the 15th inst., charged the officers with chicanery and fraud in the preparation of their annual statements. Instances are indeed rare where the officers of a corporation prepared such bold statements as those presented to the department by the Security and duly sworn to by its officials. The last annual statement was for the most part a repetition of falsehood all through, and involved not only a fraud on the public, but also deliberate perjury in swearing to it. These statements were submitted to an auditing committee of the Board of Directors, and these gentlemen have stated that the securities mentioned in them were submitted to them at the time, and it is the general belief that they were merely borrowed for the occasion. It is not known which of the officers the Grand Jury have had under surveillance. Neither has the nature of the offense with which they are charged been learned, but it is supposed to be perjury.

THE NEW-JERSEY MUTUAL.

A RULE TO SHOW CAUSE WHY A RECEIVER SHOULD NOT BE APPOINTED—DAMAGING REPORT OF THE ACTUARY.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

TRENTON, Jan. 30.—The first step toward throwing the New-Jersey Mutual Life Insurance Company of Newark into liquidation, was taken in the Court of Chancery this morning by Secretary of State Henry C. Kelsey. It came in the anticipated form of an application for a rule to show cause why a Receiver should not be appointed, and also for a temporary injunction restraining the officers of the company from spiriting away its assets. The application was made by Attorney General Vanatta to the Chancellor, and resisted in a measure by Thomas N. McCarter, of Newark, representing the interests of the officers of the company. The Attorney General, in pressing his argument, was very vigorous in his denunciation of the company as a gigantic fraud, and claimed that the company is in a state of insolvency; that the officers do not deny it, nor have denied it; but when the examination was first entered upon, admitted that a deficiency would be found, which they were then negotiating to make good; that after the examination had revealed a deficiency of $421,500, they were asked to make it good, but had last week informed Mr. Kelsey that they were unable to do it. Mr. Vanatta referred to the transfer to the National Capitol Life of Washington, and said that under the insurance laws of this State that company had no legal status in the State of New-Jersey. The Attorney General moved a rule to show cause why a Receiver should not be appointed, and asked that the officers and agents be restrained from transferring or otherwise disposing of their assets and property till such time as a final order of the court shall have been made in the premises.

Mr. McCarter did not resist the application for the rule to show cause why a Receiver should not be appointed, just at this time, though he probably will oppose the appointment of a Receiver when that question gets fully before the court. He was, however, against the application for an ad interim stay. It would be hurtful to the interests of the stockholders and policy-holders and of all concerned, and he did not think, besides, that the case called for such summary action.

Chancellor Runyon held that the appointment of a Receiver would be nugatory unless the ad interim stay were granten. Without such an order there might be nothing for the Receiver to receive. He accordingly made the rule to show cause why the Receiver should not be appointed returnable Tuesday of next week, and granted the temporary injunction asked for by Attorney General Vanatta.

Mr. McCarter did not in the course of his argument make reference to the alleged transfer of the New-Jersey Mutual Company to the National Capitol Washington. It was anticipated that he would resist the Attorney General's application on the ground that the Mutual had passed out of existence. The plea would have availed but little, since the order made in the case binds the officers of both companies. The New-Jersey Mutual had removed from this State most of their convertible assets. The order, as originally drawn by the Attorney General, required the officers to return such assets to the State. Mr. McCarter claimed that this was impossible, because part of the securities were on deposit in the insurance departments of other States, and part were in real property. The Chancellor struck out that part of the order.

THE ACTUARY'S REPORT.

The report of Mr. Fackler, the Actuary who investigated the accounts of the insurance company, has been placed on file in the office of the Secretary of State. It states that his examination was commenced on Dec. 18, and that with the aid of an expert accountant he soon discovered that the annual report of Dec. 31, 1875, was grossly incorrect, as it omitted from the liabilities $150,000 of indebtedness as shown by the books and the company's own private balance sheet. The items comprising this large sum were bills payable, $109,556 02; J. H. Stedwell, President, $17,694 34; Second National Bank, $5,000; personal accounts, $17,804 83—making a total of $150,055 19. Speaking of this misstatement the report says:

"It was at first difficult to believe that the company had made such a palpably false statement, but the proof was as perfect as could be, and the facts were reported to you on the 23d." The report then continues: "The examination of the ledgers and collateral books brought to my attention many strange entries, which the Secretary and Cashier (who nominally 'keeps' the books) said could only be explained by the President or by books at the New-York branch office. This answer was returned to nine-tenths of the requests for explanation, and the President was always away, or else was without the books and papers containing the explanation. The fact that the officers in charge of the books and business of the main office make entries in the books without understanding the matters involved gives ground for grave suspicions that they fear the transactions are wrong and prefer to be ignorant of the facts, or else that they are mere clerks to the President, and unworthy of the title of officers."

The book-keeping, Mr. Fackler states, is extremely complicated, particularly as regards the New-York branch office, but he does not think the complication was intended to baffle examination. Had that been the intent, however, they could not have been kept in a worse condition. At least one grave error was discovered, in a case where "furniture account" was credited with $36,000, and the ledger entries did not balance. On Dec. 21, the report states, an application was made by the Examiner for further books and papers, and for an exhibit of the assets of the company, and the President promised that they should be shown him on the following day. On that occasion Mr. Stedwell was absent, and the books and papers were not forthcoming. Other efforts failed to procure them, and he was finally compelled to make a formal written demand on the officers to produce them at the Newark office on the 24th. On that day there were submitted to him United States coupon bonds of the par value of $132,000, Virginia registered bonds, par value $41,800; Louisiana coupons, par value $10,000. The report continues:

"The company's ownership of the coupon bonds could not be proved by the cash-book, and would only be inferred from apparent possession. As the President admitted that nearly one-half of the United States bonds virtually belonged to the company's attorney, Mr. Noyes, to secure moneys advanced by him, it was impossible to be sure that the other bonds might not either be borrowed for the occasion or already hypothecated for loans of which your examiner could not learn. In view of these facts, the President was requested to keep the bonds within the State of New-Jersey until the examination was completed. This he declined to promise. (1) The company may legally keep its assets in New-York City, beyond the reach of New-Jersey laws, why may it not keep them in Albany? Then, why not in Alaska, or anywhere? The absurdity of the latter proposition would seem to demonstrate that the assets must be kept within New-Jersey, if not, indeed, in Newark. He was then requested to produce them on the following day for examination, which, however, he did not do. Finding that my repeated requests for mortgages had not been complied with, I transmitted to the President on Jan. 2 a written request that the mortgages on New-Jersey property should be exhibited by noon on the 3d. In response to this, mortgages covering only $70,000 of loans were submitted. These, with mortgages for $14,800, (hypothecated at the Second National Bank of Newark,) are all that have been shown to or discovered by me up to this time, though I have made many further verbal requests for them, and one written request, a formal written requisition for the mortgages on property outside of New-Jersey. Just here I may remark that a company can hardly be solvent if its assets are not in such a condition as to bear exhibition after three weeks' notice. As no proper official explanation or apology has been vouchsafed for the repeated failures to show other mortgages if they have any, I can only report what I have actually found, viz:

To this must be added, on deposit with Treasurer of New-Jersey	$84,500 100,000
The company claims to have on deposit in Albany: Mortgages assigned by the Hope Life Insurance Company	100,000
Mortgages assigned by the Commonwealth Life Insurance Company	89,000
Total	$373,500

To the assets assigned by the Commonwealth may be added $11,000 in New-York State bonds. These assigned assets belong primarily to those who are insured under Hope or Commonwealth policies and still stand in the New-York Department in the names of these corporations respectively.

On Jan. 9 the Secretary informed me that the premium loans, &c., charged against policies were about $300,000. I shall assume them at present as high as $350,000, and will take their accrued interest and net and deferred and unpaid premiums the same as reported Dec. 31, 1875, which seems fair, as the Secretary said that neither the assets nor the amount insured showed any material increase since then. The cash in bank was about $8,000, and no large addition was expected. To recapitulate, the only assets that I can report at this date are as follows:

Loans on mortgages, say	$373,500
United States bonds, market value, say	150,000
State bonds, market value, say	35,000
Cash in bank, say	10,000
Premium loans	350,000
Accrued interest and rents, say	50,000
Net unpaid and deferred premiums	240,000
Total	$1,208,500

LIABILITIES.

The reserves for the policies cannot be stated definitely as yet. Last year the valuation was $1,385,000, and for this year the Secretary, on Jan. 9, estimated it at $1,500,000. I think there may be good grounds for putting the estimate from $100,000 to $200,000 above this; first, because there are a large number of policies reported as having premiums very little above, and many indeed even much below, the net or theoretical rate for the insurance, all of which, as you know, should have specially large reserves; and second, because of the many thousand policies the officers of the company estimate the value at only about one-half of what other companies would have to reserve from the same premium receipts, and the policies guarantee the insured all the money that can be saved from the premiums paid. These policies are different from any ever issued before by any life company, unless, perhaps, the now insolvent Continental of New-York; not in some reserve, indeed, they are not life insurance contracts, for from one-half to three-quarters of the premiums paid on them are not required by any insurance or endowment feature of the contract, but are contributed to a "pool," to be divided after from five to 20 years. The proper valuation for these policies can only be determined on general principles, and from the spirit rather than from the letter of the insurance laws. Despite these grounds for a higher estimate on a large part of the company's policies, I must remark as to the other policies that the ordinary net valuation method which has been followed seems very severe for a young company, particularly as the future expenses for keeping up present business will not necessarily exceed 10 per cent., therefore, in the hope that the company's future management may be economical, I will estimate the reserve at only $1,500,000. From the company's books I find that the unpaid death claims appear to be:

(For December there were no deaths reported)	$63,000
There is due the Second National Bank	10,000
There is due the company's attorney, Mr. Noyes	47,000
There is due Mr. J. J. Anderson and others, estimated	10,000
Reserve as above	1,500,000
Total liabilities, exclusive of capital	$1,630,000
Total assets as far as known	1,208,500
Apparent deficit	$421,500

HOW THE BUSINESS WAS TRANSACTED.

The company's business seems to be loosely conducted. Many policies have been issued at premiums below the net rates, one of the most remarkable cases being that of N. N. Halstead, a Director, whose $10,000 policy pays a premium of $612 60. The regular table rates would be at least 50 per cent. more; that is, $919 90. At least one Director's policy was issued without his request, without a medical examination, and without any actual payment of premium. Many thousand policies have been issued on a time plan at the rates usually charged for whole life insurance. It is asserted that many have been induced to take these forms of contract on representations that they are whole life policies. Under the head of liabilities I have already referred to these policies, and I will endeavor to cover the subject entirely in a supplemental report. The company is insuring without any medical examination all the policy-holders of the defunct Continental Life that apply to it, though the taking of such risks must necessarily be left to the discretion of the officers. I must remark that their action seems very likely to endanger the security of the company."

In concluding his report Mr. Fackler speaks at length of the internal management of the concern, which he says appears to be very carelessly administered. The minute book of the Board of Directors has not been written up for two years, and consequently the present Directors and officers have not a clear title to the control of the company. Several of the former are no longer policy-holders, and are thus not entitled to act as Directors. Notwithstanding the fact that several of the Directors live at distances from Newark, Mr. Fackler states meetings have often been called by sending notices by mail only six hours previous to the appointed hour, and consequently these meetings were in the hands of those to whom the offices had privately given sufficient notice. The object of such action, he remarks, can scarcely be doubted. The President, the report goes on to say, who very rarely visits the main office, appears to have the undivided control of the company and his assets, and the other persons whose names are published as officers, it seems, merely carry out his directions without explanation or question; though the fact that the Secretary's signature is required to checks and policies indicates that it was intended he should be somewhat of a check on the President. The latter could, however, dispose of all the marketable assets of the concern without the knowledge of any one, as he alone is their custodian, according to the testimony of the Secretary, gives no bond for the faithful performance of his duty. A memorandum from R. M. Stratton, the accountant, which is attached to the report, states that the books show a frequent want of explicitness in entries, and besides this there are leaves cut out in different places. Aside from the irregularities mentioned above, the accountant states that no trial balance could be found for Dec. 31, 1874, the pages where it should have been made up being blank.

DEFENDING THE TRANSFER MADE TO THE WASHINGTON COMPANY.

Circulars were issued yesterday by Messrs. J. H. Stedwell, the President of the New-Jersey Mutual, and Benjamin Noyes, President of the National Capitol, in which these gentlemen seek to explain to the policy-holders of the former corporation the reasons for the transfer of its risks to the other company. Mr. Stedwell's circular is dated at Newark, and says:

"Owing to the great diversity of State laws which insurance companies are subjected to, and the fact that a great conflict is going on, as is evinced by legislation and litigation, growing out of the fact that life insurance companies are subject to as many kinds of laws and standards of solvency as States in which they do business, the only true course is protection under a charter granted by the General Government, especially at the present time, which is a period of great perplexity to insurance companies, making it uncertain that life insurance companies can stem the tidal wave, which has for its object the destruction of all."

In view of these facts Mr. Stedwell says that the transfer was made to protect the interests of the policy-holders. The circular closes with a recommendation to policy-holders that they avail themselves of the privilege of exchanging their policies for those of the National Capitol Life.

Mr. Noyes' circular is dated at Washington, and, although more exhaustive, is of the same general tone as that issued by Mr. Stedwell. Much space is used in an endeavor to show that the policy-holders' interests are jeopardized by State supervision, and that the different standards of solvency are, at best, arbitrary and mere assumptions, and have no reference to the actual premiums charged, or to any one table of mortality or expectation of life which has been sanctioned or adopted by the higher courts of this or any other country. Assurances are given that the policy-holders will be protected, and that the few remaining and the maturing loss claims will receive immediate attention.

THE PRESIDENT OF THE NATIONAL CAPITOL INDIGNANT.

Mr. Fackler, the Examiner of the New-Jersey Mutual, stated yesterday to a reporter of THE TIMES that subsequent investigation had developed the fact that the deficit stated in the report may be increased by $60,000 to $200,000, and that the total will amount at the lowest possible calculation to $480,000. In a conversation with Mr. Noyes, of the National Capitol Life, the writer asked that gentleman if he really believed that the assets of the New-Jersey Mutual amounted to $1,700,000. He replied that the amount had perhaps been a little overstated, but that the difference would not amount to more than $100,000. When reminded of the fact that the examiner had reported a deficiency of $420,000, Mr. Noyes said that this was not a fact and asked if his word was not as good as that of the examiner. Continuing, he said that it was not the business of the public to meddle in these matters, for the policy-holders were the only parties interested, and they alone had the right to question. The "wreckers" were not satisfied with having already done much toward ruining the company, but now "wanted to get the carcass exposed so that the vultures could peck at it."

THE CONTINENTAL LIFE.

THE APPEAL DISMISSED — THE OPINION OF CHIEF JUSTICE CHURCH—A DECISION CONCURRED IN BY ALL THE OTHER JUSTICES.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 30.—Chief Justice Church, in dismissing the appeal in the case of the Continental Insurance Company, says: "This is an appeal from an order affirming an order of reference made at the Special Term of the Supreme Court, in Albany, to take proof touching the application of the Attorney General for a dissolution of the Continental Life Insurance Company. The application was made under section 17 of chapter 463 of the laws of 1853, which expressly confers the power upon the court to order a reference to inquire into and report upon the facts stated in the petition. I do not understand that the inquiry under the order was intended to embrace anything else. The principal fact alleged, which, if true, confers upon the court jurisdiction, is the inability of the corporation to reinsure its outstanding risks. In opposition to the motion for the order, affidavits were presented stating that the corporation had already been dissolved by a judgment duly entered in the Supreme Court in Kings County, in an action brought by a stockholder under the provisions of the revised statutes relating to proceedings in equity against corporations. (2 R. S. 464, section 39,) in which a Receiver had been appointed, who had duly qualified possession of the assets of the company, and it is claimed that the proceedings and judgment in that action are a bar to the application, and that the court had no power to make the order appealed from on the part of the Attorney General. It is insisted that the court had no power, under the revised statutes, to decree a dissolution, and that the judgment is void, and if not void, that the judgment itself reserves in itself the right of the Attorney General to institute this proceeding. The questions involved under these respective claims are important and not free from difficulty, but we think that they are prematurely presented. The court below did not necessarily pass upon any of these questions. It merely made an order to inform itself of the facts upon which the application was heard in a formal and authentic manner. Beyond this it cannot be affirmed that any adjudication was made. The order is interlocutory and harmless so far as the rights of the Receiver already appointed or of any of the parties are concerned. Strictly, the court has not decided to entertain the application, except for the preliminary purpose of ascertaining the truth of the facts stated, and this did not necessarily involve a decision as to the effect of the judgment entered in Kings County. It is only actual determinations of the court below involved in certain orders that are reviewable. The order is not, therefore, appealable. It is not a final order under the third subdivision of section 11 of the code, nor does it affect a substantial right so as to bring it within the fourth subdivision. We cannot presume that there will be a conflict of jurisdiction between the two branches of the Supreme Court, and we are disinclined to consider questions in anticipation of such a result. 'Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof.' The Receiver appointed in action of the stockholders is not and cannot be interfered with by the order appealed from, nor are his powers abridged or in any manner affected by it. The appeal must be dismissed."

LIFE INSURANCE TO BE REGULATED

AN OVERHAULING OF THE WHOLE BUSINESS TO BE MADE—SENATOR BIXBY'S RESOLUTION TO BE AFFIRMED IN THE SENATE—THE EXPENDITURES OF INSURANCE COMPANIES.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 30.—Senator Bixby will soon offer for adoption by the Senate a resolution calling for the appointment of a special committee of three to report a bill embodying the following points: (1) Regulations under which life insurance companies may amalgamate so that abuses and frauds may be prevented, all such amalgamations to be under the supervision of the proper State officers; (2) regulations touching the investment of the capital, surplus, and assets of companies; (3) restricting, by suitable provisions, the expenditure of moneys belonging to the companies and controlling the same; (4) providing for more complete and detailed reports than companies are now required to make to the Superintendent of Insurance, and also for a more thorough and systematic examination of companies by the State officers.

There is little doubt that this session will see a very thorough overhauling of the whole business of life insurance in this State. Up to this year every attempt to do this has been defeated at the very outset. The invisible but potent barriers which formerly existed have at last been broken through. Senator Bixby has himself expressed some surprise at the ease with which his resolution of inquiry in relation to the expenditures of insurance companies went through the Senate the other day. Had he not anticipated opposition, the resolution would have been made broader and more searching.

AN ALLEGED BOGUS INSURANCE AGENT.

William H. Hall, a young man of respectable appearance, was arrested yesterday by Detective Ferris, of the Central Office, and arraigned before Justice Flammer at the Washington Place Police Court, charged with fraud. The accused, who resides in Plainfield, N. J., it is alleged has succeeded in swindling a number of business people in this City by representing himself as an agent for certain insurance companies in this and other cities, and issuing bogus policies. The complainant in the case is Mr. Charles K. Barry, of the firm of Lewis K. Barry & Co., 8 Ann street, who alleged that two years ago Hall effected an insurance for the firm of $3,000 in the German American Insurance Company of this City, and the St. Paul Fire and Marine Company of St. Paul, Minn., charging them $60 as premium. The next year the insurance was renewed, Hall receiving the premium again. Recently the firm desired some further insurance, and on making inquiries at the office of the German-American Company they learned to their great astonishment that they were not insured at all, and that the policies issued to them by Hall were valueless. Superintendent Walling was informed of the facts in the case, and Detective Ferris arrested Hall at the Fifth Avenue Hotel yesterday, and he was remanded until to-day. The detective who made the arrest says that he has been informed that the prisoner has been doing an extensive business in bogus policies, and that a large number of complaints will be made against him.

THE COUNCIL OF POLITICAL REFORM.

The stated meeting of the New-York Council of Political Reform was held on Monday evening at its rooms in Twenty-third street. The President, W. H. Webb, occupied the chair. Several new names were proposed for membership. The Committee on Legislation reported that the usual arrangements had been made to keep agents at Albany during the session of the Legislature, to promote the passage of bills introduced by the Council and others in the public business and charitable interests of the City, and to oppose the passage of such bills as are detrimental to these interests. The composition and organization of this Legislature, particularly of the Assembly, give promise of a much higher order of legislation this year than usual, and greatly facilitates the efforts of the Council in this department of its work. The Council sanctioned the action of the committee in the reintroduction in the present Legislature of the bills defeated in the last Legislature, for the repeal of the Parade Ground act; to diminish the expenses of the City Government by abolishing its large number of sinecure offices and reducing the salaries of all officers; limiting the yearly amount that the City can spend on public works; to reduce the debt of the City to a fixed percentage of its assessed value, and to hold it there by a constitutional law. The committee was receiving manuscript copies, from its agent, of all the bills introduced each day into either branch of the Legislature relating to this City, which gives it an opportunity to scrutinize these bills before they are reported to the Legislature. It is by this means principally that the Council has been enabled for the last five years to defeat many of the worst bills that have been presented to the Legislature before they left the committee to which they were referred. A special committee was appointed to suggest and press on the Common Council, the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund, and the Legislature, practical measures for carrying out the plan proposed by the Council in 1875, to diminish by one-third the yearly tax levy, and to reduce the debt of the City to 8 per cent. of the taxable value of the property of the City, and then fix it there by a constitutional amendment.

SMALL CUSTOM-HOUSE SEIZURES.

Among the passengers in the steerage of the steam-ship Egypt, which arrived yesterday at Castle Garden, was Patrick Murray. He came to the dock without molestation by the Custom-house officers, but one of them having suspicions of the robust appearance of Mr. Murray, he was searched, and five yards of cloth were found concealed on him. They were sent to the Seizure Room, and the stuff will now have to be paid for at a higher rate than it would have ordinarily brought if the duty had been paid. Murray had denied that there was anything dutiable about him. On the steam-ship Clyde 100 cigars were seized. It was also reported that several dogs had been seized on board one of the National steam-ships, and that they would today be delivered over to the care of Gov. Noble.

LOCAL MISCELLANY.

THE DIAMONDS NOT YET FOUND.

MR. C. V. HAND'S STATEMENT OF HOW THE ROBBERY WAS COMMITTED.

The examination of William F. C. McCarthy, on the charge of obtaining $10,000 worth of diamond jewelry from Charles V. Hand by falsely representing that he was endeavoring to procure a loan upon it, was resumed yesterday, in the Tombs Police Court, before Judge Kilbreth. The defendant said that the entering of his name in the complaint and other papers in the case as McCarthy was incorrect, as his name was McCarty. Ex-Judge Curtis, counsel for McCarty, continued the examination of Hand, the complainant, who testified as follows: The diamonds were in three boxes, wrapped up in one parcel of brown paper, when McCarty, Thompson, and I got to the Bennett Building, and I handed this package to McCarty, when he and Thompson got out of the coupé to go up stairs, as they said, to Judge Sutherland's office; the first time I thought that there might be something wrong about McCarty and Thompson was when another coupé driver put his nose into our coupé, as we were starting for the Bennett Building, and asked McCarty and Thompson whether they wanted him any longer; I first became acquainted with Thompson on last Friday; I had nothing to do with him directly, as he was represented to me by McCarty as the attorney for the person from whom he expected to get the loan; there was no act on his part that excited my suspicion before I saw him leave the Bennett Building with McCarty; when McCarty and Thompson had entered the Bennett Building to go, as they said, to Judge Sutherland's office, I got out of the coupé and almost immediately saw them come out of the doorway on Fulton street; they had not had time to go to Judge Sutherland's office; I never heard that Thompson told McCarty that the diamonds were paste; I don't know that their object in going to the Belmont Hotel was to take a drink, but I do know that they got into a coupé there and were driven to Broadway; when McCarty came out of the Belmont Hotel and jumped into the coupé, he had his overcoat off; the coupé got blocked on Broadway, and when caught by me drove back to the Belmont Hotel; three men jumped out as the coupé reached the hotel; Thompson ran away, and McCarty and the third man, who was the same one who had been introduced to me previously by McCarty as a Mr. Halstead, ran into the hotel, and McCarty ran up stairs and I followed him; I caught him in a small room, and said to him, "Mac, this is fine work you are engaged in," and he replied, "Catch Thompson, he has the diamonds;" McCarty then said that Thompson had the diamonds to show to a lady, and was going to Maiden lane to get them appraised; McCarty did not leave me for a moment after that, and waited at the hotel until Capt. Murray and Detective Carr arrived; I never told McCarty to go to Mrs. Lynch's to get the diamonds appraised; he went there, however, on last Friday; I had told Mrs. Lynch previously that some one was coming there to have the diamonds valued, and I intended to estimate them at as low a price as she could; the diamonds were in the possession of Mrs. Whitney only a few minutes; my conveyance of the diamonds to her took place in her drawing-room; I gave her a list of the diamonds so that she could swear to them at some future time, if necessary; I passed the diamonds into her physical possession until I went down stairs to the street and returned, and then I took them; I conversed them to her so that in negotiating a loan on them I could represent them to be the private property of a lady, instead of being part of the stock in a store, and this would enhance their value and enable me to get a larger loan; Mrs. Whitney resides at No. 121 East Thirty-seventh street; she gave me a paper stating that she owned the diamonds, and gave me full power to get a loan on them, and I gave that paper to McCarty; I never saw Thompson after the loss of the diamonds.

To Mott—The papers in these transactions were made out at the instance of McCarty; he was to raise $20,000 on the diamonds, and I was to let him have $1,000 of that money immediately, to be used for the support of his wife and family; if he did not effect the loan he was to return the jewelry; the man called Halstead and Thompson were both introduced to me by McCarty.

After recess Hand was further examined by Judge Curtis, and testified: I wanted to use from $5,000 to $6,000 of the money to be procured on the diamonds for the purpose of bringing mustangs from California; the whole amount to be obtained on the diamonds was not to be used as joint capital for McCarty and myself; it was to come to me, and our partnership was not to commence until the mustangs should arrive here from California.

By Judge Curtis (emphatically)—Where are those diamonds? A.—That's what I am trying to find out.

Judge Curtis—Will you swear that you don't know where those diamonds are? A.—I swear that I don't know.

After testimony by Capt. Murray, of the Fourth Precinct, and John Judd, a coupé driver, the further examination was adjourned to 10 o'clock this morning, and McCarty was remanded to the Tombs, without bail.

FORGING BONDS FOR A LIVING.

ARREST OF CYRUS G. CLARK ON A CHARGE OF ISSUING BOGUS CENTRAL PACIFIC RAILROAD BONDS—AN ADVANCE OBTAINED ON THEM FROM A BANK—WHAT CLARK SAYS ABOUT HIMSELF.

Cyrus G. Clark was brought up in the Tombs Police Court yesterday afternoon by Detectives C. B. Macdougall and George J. Radford, of the Central Office, on a charge of issuing counterfeit Central Pacific Railroad bonds to the East River National Bank, No. 682 Broadway, as collateral for a loan. The complaint contains the depositions of Mr. Charles Jenkins, President of the bank, to the effect that Clark brought to the bank, on Monday last, 21 counterfeit Central Pacific Railroad first mortgage bonds for $1,000 each, purporting to have been issued by the company on Jan 1, 1868, and wanted to negotiate a loan of $12,000 on them as collateral, and succeeded in obtaining $950; the deposition of Mr. William C. Emery, Bond Transfer Agent of the railroad company, that the bonds were brought to the Central Pacific office, No. 9 Nassau street, by Mr. Newell, the Cashier, on the same day, and the deposition of Mr. Newell that he showed the bonds to Mr. Emery, who pronounced them to be counterfeits. Mr. Jenkins said that Clark applied last week for a loan on the bonds, asking for $12,000 on the 21 bonds; that he told Clark he would put the matter before the Board of Directors, and hear what they had to say about it; that he had known Clark two or three years, and had had transactions with him; that the board decided to make the loan; that the bonds were delivered by Clark on Monday, when they were sent to the Central Pacific office; that Clark, in the meantime, obtained the of loan $950 to meet an alleged pressing need, and left another bond with the bank, as he said, for safe-keeping. The bonds, which are all of the series of "G," are all from an old counterfeit plate, but Mr. Emery says none of them have been detected on the market since 1874.

When the nature of the bonds was discovered, the name was put in the hands of Detectives Macdougall and Radford, who made an immediate search for Clark, and succeeded in finding him about 11 o'clock yesterday morning at the Grand Central Hotel, where he was stopping with his wife and two children. He expressed surprise at his arrest, saying that he had had an account with the bank for over two years, and was not aware that the bonds were not genuine. He was taken to Police Head-quarters, then to the Central Pacific office, and thence to the Tombs. Clark, who is a man of respectable appearance and fair address, and about 35 years of age, is said to have had an interest running at the bank at intervals during the past two years, and to have made such a favorable impression on its officers as to be a little in its debt at the present time on his account. He has recently been engaged in speculative business enterprises, one of which was the pushing on the market, under the name of "Miss J. M. Koole," of a female beautifier called "Rose Flush," which was advertised by rose-tinted circulars. Dr. H. T. Helmbold was present at the Tombs when Clark was brought in, and said that he was a guest at the Grand Central Hotel, and witnessed Clark's arrest. He also stated that Clark came originally from New-Haven, Conn., had been largely engaged in the advertising business, and at one time controlled the "patent inside" advertisements of many Western papers.

Clark, on being asked for a statement for publication, said that he hoped the newspapers would not be too severe upon him before he had time to explain his position, as he was satisfied that he could clear the whole matter up by and by. When asked whether he desired to say anything at present, he made the following statement: "I perhaps did a foolish thing in negotiating those bonds, but I had no good reason to believe them counterfeit, and wanted to realize all I could out of them. I found these bonds in a bundle about the 2d or 3d of this month, in the snow, on Ann street, near the railing of the Bennett Building, and close to the Ann street entrance. A day or two after I found them I went to the Central Pacific Railroad office and asked if there were any bonds of the Company that were not a good delivery, and was told that there were none unless they were mutilated. If I had wanted to make money out of the bank by fraud, I could just as well have gotten $10,000 as the amount I did get. I wanted some money immediately to pay debts I owed to friends who had advanced money to pay expenses consequent upon the recent illness and death of one of my children, and I paid part of the money to these creditors."

Mr. John O. Mott, counsel for Clark, said that his client wanted an immediate examination, and the case was set down for 10 o'clock on Friday morning, the question of bail being put over for the present.

TROUBLES OF NEW-JERSEY CENTRAL

REPORTS OF PROPOSED CHANGE IN ITS MANAGEMENT—RUMORS OF AN APPLICATION FOR A RECEIVER—RETICENCE OF THE OFFICERS OF THE COMPANY.

For a week or more there have been in circulation a variety of reports concerning the New-Jersey Central Railroad, none of which were favorable to the future prospects of that corporation, and the latest ones entirely discreditable to the President, Mr. Knight. The company is considered by men in Wall street who are familiar with its history to be in anything but a hopeful condition. The feeling of encouragement that was felt when the office of President was vacated by Mr. John Taylor Johnston has almost entirely died out, under the impression that the change of management has failed to restore that degree of prosperity or confidence in the recuperative power of the road that had been hoped for when the change of management took place. The cause of the company's difficulties—the breaking away from association with the Lehigh Valley, the purchase of coal lands, and the involving of the corporation in vast debts—are well known. It is also well known that when it was found to be impossible to meet current indebtedness the management was changed. It is now said that when Mr. Knight contemplated accepting the Presidency he purchased about 10,000 shares of stock, for which he paid about 34 or 35. Immediately there was a rise to about 37, and with a new prospect of prosperity, a momentary confidence was felt in the company that was indicated on the market. Many investors who believed that Mr. Knight had gone into the company for permanent investment, believing that the road would be put upon a sound financial footing, are now generally uneasy, having heard reports that diminish their trustfulness. It is said that Mr. Knight has within a fortnight disposed of his stock with the intention of giving up the Presidency, having become satisfied that it is impossible to re-establish the road without a readjustment of its affairs. In connection with these reports about Mr. Knight come other reports. The lands from which the New-Jersey Central Railroad Company derives the Lehigh and Wilkesbarre Coal Company are connected with the Central Railroad by the line of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company. Mr. Parrish has until recently been the President of the Lehigh and Wilkesbarre Coal Company, but has been set back and replaced by Mr. E. W. Clark, of the Philadelphia banking house of E. W. Clark & Co. Mr. Clark was President of the Lehigh Navigation Company, which has, it is said, of late unsuccessfully urged upon the New-Jersey Central, without success, demands for the payment of large sums due for carrying coal and other services. Mr. Clark, it is reported, has given up his banking business, expressing his intention of devoting himself exclusively and entirely to the work of managing the two railroad companies of which he is President. Upon this report follows one that Mr. Clark may become the President of the Central Railroad in a few days, and another that he will soon be appointed Receiver on the application of the stockholders of the Lehigh and Wilkesbarre and Lehigh Coal and Navigation Companies. It was even reported on Wall street yesterday that Chancellor Runyon had already appointed a Receiver, but the name of the reported appointee could not be ascertained.

A reporter of THE TIMES yesterday called upon Vice President Knox, of the Central Railroad, at the offices in this City, to obtain a statement in regard to some of the reports about Mr. Knight, but he said he had no time to attend to statements, and declined to say anything about the affairs of the company. A report, supposed to emanate from the company's office, was circulated during the afternoon, which denied all the unfavorable reports about the company's affairs, and said that there was no legitimate reason for the uncertainty of prices. The report that Mr. Knight has failed was denied as without a shadow of foundation. It was said that some persons in Philadelphia had sold a few shares, providing the basis of a telegram from Philadelphia that holders there were throwing their stock on the market. It was said that few applications had been made at the office for transfers of stock, and that the transfers of stock yesterday were merely gambling operations. Legitimate holders, it was said, were not affected by the operations in Wall street to the extent of sacrificing their property. The stock sold at from 24⅝ to 27 during the day.

LOST AND MISSING VESSELS.

THE HALIFAX STEAM-SHIPS GEORGE CROMWELL AND GEORGE WASHINGTON NOT HEARD FROM—THE COLOMBO STILL MISSING.

No tidings have been received by Messrs. Clark & Seaman of the whereabouts of the steam-ships George Cromwell and George Washington, both of the line between this port and Halifax and St. John's, Newfoundland, the first of which is 28 days out and the latter 12 days. The two vessels were both in good condition, according to the report of the agents. Both had insurances upon them, but not to their full value. The George Washington was commanded by Capt. James Whitehead, who has long been in the employment of the company. She carried no passengers from New-York to St. John's, but at Halifax took on board W. Archibald, cabin, and James Powers, steerage, passengers. Capt. Whitehead is from Brooklyn. The rest of the officers were J. Krupp, first officer, Brooklyn; Charles Dunn, second officer, New-York; Bernard Petersen, Quartermaster, New-York; Lew Jones, Quartermaster, New-York; Richard Hopper, Chief Engineer, New-York; George L. Denton, First assistant Engineer, Brooklyn; James Lammond, steward, Brooklyn; George Phelen, Thomas Nelson, Jr., Robert H. Barry, John Sheehan, Richard Halpin, James Rashburn, Jerry Riley, Joseph Welsh, Patrick Caulfield, William Estman, and Henry Whitman, crew, of New-York; J. H. Berryman, Jersey City; William O'Neill, Ausila McDonald, and Robert Smith, Brooklyn. The Washington carried a cargo of 3,500 barrels of flour and about 1,000 barrels of pork and other merchandise. She was instructed to keep a good lookout for the Cromwell, and it is considered possible that she may have fallen in with that vessel.

The Colombo is now 56 days out from Hull, and nothing has been heard of her by Messrs. C. L. Wright & Co. She is not given up, however, and it is considered probable that she may yet be heard of in the neighborhood of Fayal.

The schooner James K. Lawrence, which ran ashore at Far Rockaway last week, while on her way from Charleston to this City, and which was taken in charge by the Coast Wrecking Company, was relieved of her cargo, and it was thought she would be brought up to this City yesterday. The men were able to work only at short intervals, and notwithstanding all their efforts to remove her from the sands, she yesterday began to show signs of breaking up. Her stern-post started, and the keel sank down in the sand. During the morning she was condemned and abandoned, and will be stripped. She was consigned to the master, and carried 1,000 barrels of resin. The beachmen at Far Rockaway have been unusually bold in working at this wreck, having come to the scene with wagons in which they carried away between 30 and 40 barrels of resin.

The French steamer Amérique was moved but a short distance during the high tide of Monday night, and was again moved yesterday morning a distance of 15 feet—in all 33 feet. As the tide of yesterday was the highest that can be expected for a month, the prospect of getting the Amérique off is looked upon as by no means a flattering one. Capt. Pousolz has returned to France, where he will re-enter the French Navy, his leave of absence for three years terminating in July. It is not positively known that he will be called to account by the Transatlantic Company for the accident to the Amérique.

PROPOSED PILGRIMAGE TO ROME.

The fiftieth anniversary of the consecration of Pope Pius IX. will be celebrated on Monday, May 21, at Rome. The Roman Catholics throughout the world are making preparations to commemorate the occasion in a proper manner. Pilgrimages will be made by the faithful from many of the countries of the globe to the Holy See, but no organized movement has yet been made in this country. The Irish Catholics of Canada will make the pilgrimage, and have completed their preparations for the journey. The pilgrims will leave Montreal on or about April 17 for this City, and upon their arrival will be received by a committee consisting